EU Profiler/euandi Trend File (2009-2019)

European University Institute, Robert Schuman Centre of Advanced Studies

February 2020

Introduction

The EU Profiler/euandi Trend File (2009-2019) combines party position data from three pan-European voting advice applications (VAAs), developed for the European Parliament elections in 2009, 2014 and 2019. It includes the positions of over 400 parties¹ from the 28 EU member states on a wide range of salient political issues.

The project was first launched in 2009 under the name 'EU Profiler' by the European University Institute (EUI), in collaboration with Smartvote (Switzerland) and Kieskompas (2009). By positioning more than 270 political parties from 30 European countries² it was the first cross-national VAA of such magnitude. EU Profiler was succeeded by 'euandi' (EU and I) in 2014 and re-launched as 'euandi2019' five years later, in collaboration with the University of Luzern.³

To determine party positions on the political issues, all three editions of the VAA have used the same iterative method that combines party self-placement and expert judgement. All the parties were offered a chance to place themselves on the pre-selected issue-statements. The parties were also placed on the same list of issues by a group of experts from each EU member state. The results were then compared and, if necessary, calibrated in co-operation with the party representatives. If the party did not respond to the invitation to participate in the self-placement procedure, the positions were determined solely by the expert group.⁴ Over 100 highly trained experts across Europe worked for each of these VAAs to make such immense data collection endeavour possible.

The VAAs launched in 2009 and 2014 included a set of 30 political issue-statements, out of which 28 were identical for all the countries and 2 were country-specific. In 2019, the number of statements was reduced to 22 and all the items were identical across the countries. Some of the statements were changed over the years, but 15 of them remained the same since 2009. These items – pertaining to a wide range of salient topics such as social values, ecological/green policies, immigration, European ¹ The criteria for selecting parties was that they should have a certain level of relevance in the respective party system. The relevance was defined in rather lenient terms, so that parties that were credited with at least 1% of the popular vote in the polls preceding the EP election were considered for the VAA. Thus, the dataset also includes a number of rather minor parties.

² EU Profiler included all 27 countries that at the time belonged to the European Union, and in addition also Croatia, Switzerland and Turkey. As Switzerland and Turkey were not included in the 2014 and 2019 VAAs, they are excluded from the Trend File.

³ In 2014, the EUI collaborated with the Berkman Center for Internet and Society at Harvard University and with LUISS University in Rome; the 2019 was carried out in cooperation with the University of Lucerne in Switzerland.

⁴ In 2009, approximately 40% of the parties took part in the self-placement, in 2014 and 2019, the percentage was slightly above 50%.

integration and classic socioeconomic left-right issues – allow direct temporal comparisons and make this dataset especially valuable for longitudinal research.

General variables

COUNTRY = Alphabetic country identifier

COUNTRY_CODE = Numeric country identifier

YEAR = The year the party was placed (2009, 2014, 2019)

PUI = Party Unique Identifier

CHES = Chapel Hill Expert Survey code of the party

SELFPLACEMENT = A dummy variable indicating whether the party participated in the self-placement process (1 – yes; 0 – no).

EPVOTE = The vote share of the party in the respective European Parliament election.

EPVOTE_COALITION = Vote share of a party coalition that the respective party was part of (in case when the separate party vote share is not discernible).⁵

⁵ In some countries, parties formed electoral coalitions/alliances for the EP election and the vote shares of the separate parties were not discernible; yet, some of these parties were represented separately in the VAA. In these instances we have assigned the vote share of the whole coalition to the separate parties that were part of it and marked the main „EPVOTE“ variable as a missing value.

Party positions on each statement were coded according to the following answer categories:
