ARTICLE 14A (New): Freedom of research (in the arts and sciences) (Amendments 274 (Rodotta/Paciotti/Manzella), 279 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 280 (Meyer/Leinen/Martin), 282 (Friedrich), 287 (Melograni), 299 Duff) and 321 (Cisneros).

Article 15

"Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers."

Proposed amendments

- (1) Several amendments aim to add a paragraph on freedom of press and information with due regard for transparency and pluralism (Amendments 76 (Duff), 279 (Buitenweng/Voggenhuber), 280 (Meyer/Leinen/Martin), 281 (Berès), 282 (Friedrich), 284 (Braibant), 289 (Gnauck), 290 (Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella), 292 (Mombaur).
- (2) Some amendments aim to add to the Article the final sentence of Article 10(1) of the ECHR, which states that freedom of expression does not prevent States from subjecting broadcasting companies to a system of authorisation (Amendments 278 (Griffiths), 281 (Berès), 283 (Neisser), 291 (Tarschys).
- (3) Several amendments propose incorporating in the Article the permitted restrictions on freedom of expression, whether by reference to Article 10(2) of the ECHR (Amendments 275 (Berthu), 286 (Van Dam), 291 (Tarschys), 293 Korthals Altes) and 294 (Goldsmith)) or in the form of alternative wordings (Amendments 281 (Berès), 288 (Bereijo), 295 (Dehousse)).
- (4) One amendment proposes adding a paragraph ensuring the existence of public broadcasting services (Amendment 280 (Meyer/Leinen/Martin)).

Praesidium proposal

Add a paragraph 2:

"Freedom of press and information shall be guaranteed with due respect for transparency and pluralism."

Based on Amendments 279 (Voggenhuber/Buitenweg), 280 (Meyer/Leinen/Martin/Van den Burg), 281 (Berès), 282 (Friedrich), 284 (Braibant), 290 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella).

Article 16. Right to education

- 1. Everyone has the right to education and the right of access to vocational and continuing training. These rights include the right to receive free compulsory education.
- 2. The founding of educational establishments shall be free of constraint.
- 3. The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be respected.

Three amendments propose deletion of Article 16 (Amendments 296 (Van Dam), 297 (Tarschys), 298 (Berthu)).

Paragraph 1:

- (1) Three amendments propose adopting the wording of the first sentence of Article 2 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR ("No person shall be denied the right to education") (Amendments 300 (Friedrich), 302 (Griffiths) and 307 (Goldsmith)).
- (2) Three amendments propose deletion of the reference to "vocational and continuing training" (Amendments 300 (Friedrich), 305 (Loncle) and 312 (Bereijo)).
- (3) One amendment aims to assert the duty of neutrality of free and compulsory education (Amendment 313 (Braibant)); another proposes adding the principle of the secularism of education (Amendment 301 (Berès)).
Add "and training" to the title of the Article (Amendment 299 (Duff)).
- (4) One amendment proposes an alternative wording involving the need for the public authorities to ensure that schools exist in sufficient number (Amendment 310 (Dehousse)).

- (5) One amendment aims to define in a paragraph 1(a) – the aims of education (to diffuse knowledge and to foster understanding between different cultures) (Amendment 316 (Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella)), another adds the need for the progressive teaching of three languages (Amendment 310 (Dehousse)).

Paragraph 2

- (1) Three amendments propose deleting the principle of the free founding of educational establishments (Amendments 303 (Gnauck), 309 (Fayot), 319 (Olsen)); other amendments propose adding either public-authority approval (Amendment 311 (Beissel)) or respect for democratic principles and national laws (Amendments 317 (Bereijo) and 318 (Braibant)).

- (2) Alternative ideas are proposed:

respect for the independence of educational establishments (Amendment 299 (Duff)).

guarantee of equal access (Amendment 300 (Friedrich) or of freedom (Amendment 306 (Korthals Altes)) of access to education.

Paragraph 3

- (1) One amendment proposes deleting the term "education" (Amendment 99 (Duff)) and another amendment the term "instruction" (Amendment 309 (Fayot)).

- (2) Certain amendments make the exercise of parental rights subject to the personality of minors (Amendments 301 (Berès) and 322 (Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella)), the taking into account of children's views (Amendment 323 (Jannson/Brax/Nikula)), respect for the principles of tolerance and democracy (Amendment 310 (Dehousse)) or the laws of the country (Amendment 309 (Fayot)).

Praesidium proposal

Paragraph 2 should read as follows:

"The freedom to found educational establishments shall be guaranteed, with due respect for democratic principles, in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of this right."

Based on Amendments 312 (Bereijo), 318 (Braibant) and 320 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn).

Article 17 Freedom of assembly and of association

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association, including the right to form and join trade unions or political parties with others.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Most amendments aim to delete the reference to the right to form and join political parties, in order to avoid an overlap with Article 24 (Amendments 324 (Berthu), 326 (Solé Tura), 327 (Griffiths), 329 (Friedrich), 330 (Neisser) 334 (Bereijo), 335 (Gnauck), 337 (Cisnero), 338 (Rodotta/Paciotti)).
- (2) Two amendments aim to refer to NGOs and the social partners (Amendments 325 (Duff) and 339 (Van den Burg)).
- (3) Certain amendments qualify the right: right not to join (Amendment 333 (Cederschiöld)), right to form democratic parties only (Amendment 342 (Dehousse)) or peaceful associations (Amendment 335 (Gnauck)), need to respect the rights and freedoms guaranteed by the Charter (Amendment 335 (Gnauck)), requirement to pursue lawful aims or lawful means (Amendment 334 (Bereijo)).

- (4) Certain amendments aim to include in the Article restrictions on the exercise of the right, whether by reference to Article 11 of the ECHR (Amendments 332 (Van Dam) or 340 (Korthals Altes)) by opening up the possibility of restricting the right (Amendment 336 (Goldsmith)) or by mentioning categories which are professionally subject to restriction (Amendment 334 (Bereijo)).

Praesidium proposal:

New wording:

"Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, in particular in political, trade union and civic matters."

Article 18. Right of access to documents

"Every citizen of the Union or anyone residing in the Union has a right of access to the documents held by the European Parliament, the Council and the Commission".

Proposed amendments

- (1) Most amendments aim to extend the right of access for beneficiaries ("anyone" (Amendments 344 (Duff), 346 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 347 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 351 (Rodottà/Paciotti/Manzella), 353 (Korthals Altes) and 603 (Bonde)), the institutions in respect of which it is exercised – "EU institutions and subsidiary bodies" (Amendments 344 (Duff), 346 (Hirsch Balin/Patijn), 347 (Buitenweg/Voggenhubert), 351 (Rodatà/Paciotti/Manzella), 352 (Altmaier), 353 (Korthals Altes) and 603 (Bonde)); "Member States where implementing Community legislation" (Amendment 354 (Barros Moura/Azevedo)); type of document ("information") (Amendments 346 (Hirsch Balin/Patijn), 347 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 352 (Altmaier), 353 (Korthals Altes)); documents "held by" (Amendments 347 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 349 (Vitorino), 352 (Altmaier) and 603 (Bonde)).

- (2) Two amendments, on the other hand, are more restrictive. One proposes deletion of Article 18 (Amendment 343 (Friedrich)), while the other allows access to official documents only (Amendment 356 (Beissel)).
- (3) Certain amendments aim to include in the Article a reference to the possible restrictions on the exercise of this right (Amendments 345 (Olsen), 346 (Hirsch Balin/Patijn) and 353 (Korthals Altes)), in particular a reference to Article 255 TEC in the enacting terms (Amendment 348 (Bereijo)) or in the statement of reasons/Part B (Amendment 350 (Goldsmith)).
- (4) One amendment provides for a right of appeal to the Ombudsman in the event of refusal (Amendment 603 (Bonde)).
- (5) One amendment proposes including this Article in Article 27 (Relations with the administration; Amendment 355 (Dehousse)).

Article 19. Data protection

"Everyone has the right to determine for himself whether his personal data may be disclosed and how they may be used."

Proposed amendments

- (1) Some amendments aim to provide a more explicit definition of the scope of data protection:
 - inclusion of the principle of the legitimacy of (the) purposes (pursued) and of proportionality, right to be informed of collection, right to independent verification, right to rectification, authorisation to publish (Amendments 364 (Melograni), 366 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 373 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella), 374 (Dehaene), 378 (Dehousse)).
 - extension of the right to decide to include the collection of personal data (Amendments 364 (Melograni), 365 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 371 (Gnauck), 372 (Vitorino), 373 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella)).
- (2) Certain amendments, however, aim to make this right less absolute (Amendments 357 (Tarschys), 360 (Olsen)) by providing in the enacting terms for the possible collection and disclosure of personal data for legitimate purposes of public interest, as laid down by law (Amendments 362 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 363 (Griffiths), 369 (Neisser)), or in the statement of reasons/Part B (Amendment 377 (Goldsmith)).
- (3) Two amendments aim to merge this Article with Article 12 on respect for private life (Amendments 358 (Friedrich), 375 (Korthals Altes)).
- (4) Two amendments aim to restrict the right to natural persons only (Amendments 370 (Bereijo) and 377 (Goldsmith)) while another amendment suggests on the contrary that it should be made clear that it also extends to legal persons (Amendment 376 (Barros Moura/Azevedo)).

Praesidium proposal

The Article should read as follows:

"Everyone has the right to determine for himself whether personal data concerning him may be collected and disclosed and how they may be used."

Based on Amendments 359 (Duff), 365 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 367 (Berès), 369 (Neisser) and 372 (Vitorino).

NEW ARTICLE 19A: Principle of the primacy of private action (see Amendment 379 (Altmaier))

Article 20. Right to property

"Every person has the right to own, use and dispose of lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions, except in the public interest in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law and subject to the prior guarantee of fair compensation."

Proposed amendments

- (1) Several amendments aim to delete the requirement of a prior guarantee of the granting of fair compensation in the case of expropriation (Amendments 381 (Olsen), 382 (Solé Tura), 389 (Bereijo), 390 (Gnauck), 392 (Cisneros), 393 (Tarschys), 400 (Beissel)). On the other hand, three amendments propose a more toughly worded text whereby the fixing, indeed the payment, of compensation would occur prior to expropriation (Amendments 380 (Berthu), 395 (Dehaene) and 396 Meyers)).

- (2) Several amendments propose adding the social function of the right to property, more especially the requirement to use it in accordance with the general interest and possible consequent restrictions on the exercise of this right (Amendments 383 (Melograni), 386 (Berès), 389 (Bereijo), 390 (Gnauk), 394 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella), 397 (Van den Burg), 398 (Korthals Altes), 399 (Barros Moura/Azevedo)).
- (3) Three amendments propose that the Article stipulate the right to bequeath property in one's possession (Amendments 380 (Berthu), 387 (Friedrich), 390 (Gnauck)).
- (4) Some amendments suggest keeping the wording of all or part of Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR (Amendments 381 (Olsen), 384 (Griffiths), 385 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 391 (Goldsmith), 395 (Dehaene)).

Praesidium proposal

The Article should read as follows:

"Every person has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions, except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by the law, subject to fair compensation."

Based on Amendments 380 (Berthu), 381 (Olsen), 382 (Solé Tura), 387 (Friedrich), 389 (Bereijo), 393 (Tarschys), 400 (Beissel).

ARTICLE 20A new:

- (5) Prohibition on expulsion (Amendments 401 (Altmaier) and 417 (Friedrich)).
- (6) Rights of minorities (Amendments 295 (Dehousse), 401 (Altmaier), 418 (Friedrich), 435 (Griffiths), 470 (Einem/Holoubek), 496 (Barros Moura/Azevedo), 597 (Rack), 598 (Voggenhuber) and 604 (Bonde)).

Article 21. Right to asylum and expulsion

- 1. Nationals of third countries shall have the right to asylum in the European Union in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees.
- 2. Collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited.

Proposed amendments:Article 21(1):

- (1) Several amendments aim at opening up right of asylum to "everyone" in order to cover citizens of the Union, stateless persons, or both (Amendments 402 (Goldsmith), 404 (Olsen), 404a (Melograni), 406 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 407 (Meyer/Leinen/Van den Burg), 409 (Friedrich), 410 (Neisser), 411 (Jansson/Brax/Nikula), 412 (Gnauck), 413 (Kaufmann), 415 (Loncle), 416 (Dehaene), 423 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 427 (Loncle), 429 (Paciotti/Manzella)).

- (2) Several amendments note that asylum is not an individual right and it is the right to seek/apply for asylum which should be recognised (Amendments 402 (Goldsmith), 405 (Griffiths), 422 (O'Kennedy), 424 (Bereijo), 425 (Cisneros), 428 (Korthals Altes).
- (3) Other amendments pursue a similar aim, stating that "politically persecuted persons shall be protected in accordance with the rules of the 1951 Geneva Convention" (Amendments 409 (Friedrich), 412 (Gnauck), 415 (Loncle), 426 (Altmaier), 427 (Loncle)).
- (4) Some amendments try to clarify the reasons for granting refugee status by restricting it to those who are the object of political persecutions (Amendments 409 (Friedrich), 412 (Gnauck), 426 (Altmaier)). Others, on the other hand, aim to broaden the reasons to persecution and inhuman and degrading treatment (Amendments 403 (Duff), 406 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 407 (Meyer/Leinen/Van den Burg), 413 (Kaufmann), 419 (Dehousse)) or to make particular reference to reasons for asylum that are specific to women (Amendments 406 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 407 (Meyer/Leinen/Van den Burg), 413 (Kaufmann), 419 (Dehousse)).
- (5) Various additions are also suggested:
 - . defining the minimum procedural requirements for processing applications for asylum (Amendment 403 (Duff)) and the social cover asylum seekers should receive during that process (Amendment 406 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber)).
 - . stating that asylum is granted in each Member States and not in the Union as an area in itself (Amendment 404 (Melograni)).
 - . ensuring that the reference is not restricted to the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol thereto (Amendments 404 (Melograni), 108 Berès, 414 (Vitorino)).
 - . add the right to reunion with the family (Amendment 406 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber)).
 - . make provision for asylum seekers to be put under an obligation to adhere to the democratic values and fundamental laws of the Union (Amendment 419 (Dehousse)).

- (6) One amendment suggests that the entire article be deleted (Amendment 402 (Goldsmith)).

Article 21(2)

- (1) Two amendments suggest that the prohibition should not be restricted to aliens alone (Amendments 414 (Vitorino), 432 (Mombaur)).
- (2) One amendment suggests splitting asylum and the ban on expulsion into two separate articles (Amendment 414 (Vitorino)).
- (3) Three amendments propose the deletion of paragraph 2 (Amendments 402 (Goldsmith), 430 (Berthu) and 432 (Mombaur)).
- (4) One amendment envisages procedural assurances in the event of individual expulsion (Amendment 411 (Jansson/Brax/Nikula)).
- (5) One amendment sets out the ban in detail (Amendment 419 (Dehousse)).
- (6) Several amendments suggest including in the same article the ban on collective expulsions and the ban on individual expulsions/extraditions to a State which practices torture, the death penalty or any other inhuman treatment (Amendments 406 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 409 (Friedrich), 412 (Gnauck), 413 (Kaufmann), 433 (Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella)).
- (7) One amendment envisages the possibility, subject to the guarantees recognised by international law, of expelling illegal immigrants or offenders (Amendment 421 (Berthu)).

Praesidium proposal:

To read as follows:

The right of asylum shall be guaranteed, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community and with due respect for the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees and other relevant treaties.

Based on Amendments 404 (Olsen), 404a (Melograni), 410 (Neisser), 414 (Vitorino), 415 (Loncle), 416 (Dehaene), 428 (Korthals Altes), 429 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella).

Article 21a

New article taking over part of Article 4 and to read as follows

- 1. Collective expulsions are prohibited.*
- 2. No one may be expelled or extradited to a State where he could be subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman treatment.*

Based on Amendments 82 (Korthals Altes), 409 (Friedrich), 412 (Gnauck), 414 (Vitorino), 432 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 433 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella).

ARTICLE 22: Equality and non-discrimination (36 amendments)

Article 22. Equality and non-discrimination

- 1. Any discrimination based on sex, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, political opinion, association with a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
- 2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

- 3. The Union shall seek to eliminate inequalities and to promote equality between men and women. In particular equality between the sexes shall be ensured when setting pay and other working conditions.

Proposed amendments

- (1) One amendment seeks to limit this Article to equality between men and women (Amendment 436 (Fayot)).
- (2) One amendment proposes inserting this Article in to Article 1a (Amendment 443 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella)).

Article 22(1)

- (1) Several amendments favour presenting a list of forms of prohibited discrimination as examples (Amendments 439 (Jansson/Brax/Nikula), 442 (Cederschiöld), 446 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella), 449 (Cisneros), 453 (Melograni), 454 (Buitenweg), 455 (Voggenhuber/Buitenweg), 456 (Haenel)).
- (2) The following additions to the list are proposed:
 - Belonging to a regional or cultural minority (Amendment 434 (Duff))
 - Nationality (Amendments 435 (Griffiths), 450 (Kaufmann))
 - Genetic characteristics, health status (Amendments 437 (Berès 440 (Vitorino))
 - (Political opinion) or any other opinion (Amendment 440 (Vitorino))

- Belonging to an ethnic, religious or linguistic minority (Amendment 439 (Jansson/Brax/Nikula))
 - Civil status (Amendment 454 (Buitenweg))
- (3) Deletions have been proposed:
- Include only the forms of discrimination mentioned in Article 14 of the ECHR (Amendment 441 (Goldsmith))
 - Sexual orientation (Amendment 444 (Buttiglione))
- (4) One amendment seeks to limit the principle of non-discrimination to those rights enshrined in the Charter (Amendment 441 (Goldsmith)).

Article 22(2)

- (1) Three amendments seek to restrict the benefit of the prohibition of discrimination based on nationality to citizens of the European Union only (Amendment 439 (Jansson/Brax/Nikula), 441 (Goldsmith) and 451 (Bereijo)). Certain amendments propose on the contrary that nationality be added to the list of prohibited discriminations in Article 22(1) thereby extending the benefit to all people (Amendments 435 (Griffiths) and 450 (Kaufmann)). Two other amendments suggest using the exact wording of Article 12 TEC ("without prejudice to any special provisions contained in the Treaties") (Amendments 440 (Vitorino) and 447 (Olsen)).
- (2) One amendment proposes the deletion of paragraph 2 (Amendment 457 (Kaufmann)).

Article 22(3)

- (1) Certain amendments propose mentioning equal treatment of women and men (Amendment 445 (Maij-Weggen)) (Amendment 438 (Friedrich), 468 (Mombaur)).
- (2) Five amendments propose the deletion of paragraph 3 (Amendments 442 (Cederschiöld), 447 (Olsen), 461 (Tarschys), 465 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn) and 467). Others ask only for the deletion of the first sentence (Amendments 465 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn)) or the second sentence (Amendments 440 (Vitorino), 458 (Berthu), 460 (Bereijo) and 469 (Beissel)).
- (3) Alternative formulations of the principle of positive discrimination, expressed in the first sentence of paragraph 3, were proposed (Amendments 436 (Fayot), 446 (Kothals Altes), 464 (Solé Tura), 469 (Beissel), 470 (Einem/Holoubek)).
- (4) Alternative wordings were also proposed for the second sentence of paragraph 3 (Amendments 435 (Griffith), 445 (Maij-Weggen), 462 (Cisneros), 463 (Barros Moura/Azevedo), 464 (Solé Tura)).

Praesidium proposal

The Article is to read as follows:

1. Any discrimination based on aspects such as sex, race, colour, ethnic or social origin, genetic features, language, religion or belief, political or any other opinion, association with a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, and without prejudice to the special provisions of those treaties, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

3. The Union shall seek to eliminate inequalities and to promote equal status for men and women. In particular equality between the sexes shall be ensured when setting pay and other working conditions.

Based on Amendments 437 (Berès), 439 (Jansson/Brax/Nikula), 440 (Vitorino), 442 (Cederschiöld), 453 (Melograni), 454 (Buitenweg)

Article 23. Children's rights

Children must be treated as equal individuals; they must be allowed to influence matters pertaining to their person to a degree corresponding to their maturity

Proposed amendments

- (1) Several amendments seek to insert the concept of the "best interest of the child", enshrined in the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the right to protection and care (Amendments 474 (Vitorino), 475 (Olsen), 476 (Valetto/Melograni), 478 (O'Kennedy), 479 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 482 (Gnauck), 484 (Hermange), 485 (Cisneros), 486 (Tarschys), 488 (Maij-Weggen), 490 (Haenel), 493 (Korthals Altes)).
- (2) Two amendments seek the deletion of the Article (Amendments 471 (Goldsmith) and 472 (Berthu)).
- (3) There is a proposal for an explicit reference to protection from all threats to intellectual development and psychological and sexual integrity of the child (Amendment 487 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella), 491 (Dehaene)) and against all harmful and exploitative forms of child labour (Amendment 492 (Van den Burg)).

- (4) One amendment suggested placing this Article after Article 13 on family life (Amendment 494 (Dehousse)).
- Shorter alternative versions were also proposed (Amendments 473 (Duff), 477 (Griffith), 480 (Berès), 481 (Bereijo), 489 (Loncle)).

Praesidium proposal

This Article is to read as follows:

- 1. Children shall have the right to protection and to the care necessary for their well-being. They may express their opinions freely on matters which concern them and these opinions shall be taken into consideration in a manner appropriate to their age and maturity.*
- 2. In all decisions relating to children, whether taken by public or private welfare bodies, the first concern shall be the child's best interests.*

Based on Amendments 474 (Vitorino), 476 Valetto/Melograni), 478 (O'Kennedy), 479 Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 484 (Hermange), 485 (Cisneros), 486 (Tarschys), 487 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella), 489 (Loncle), 490 (Haenel), 491 (Dehaene) and 493 (Korthals Altes)

NEW ARTICLE 23A

- (1) Principle of democracy (Amendments 495 (Duff), 519 (Berthu), 520 (Berthu), 521 (Berthu), 522 (Berthu) and 523 (Berthu)).
- (2) National and regional identities (Amendments 496 (Barros Moura/Azevedo) and 518 (Berthu)).
- (3) Right to nationality (Amendment 497 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella)).

Article 24. Political parties

Every citizen has the right to form a political party at the level of the Union and everyone has the right to join such a party. These political parties must respect the rights and freedoms guaranteed by this Charter.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Several amendments propose that this Article be deleted (Amendments 498 (Korthals Altes), 499 (Tarschys), 500 (Cisneros), 501 (Goldsmith), 502 (Kaufmann), 503 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 504 (Van Dam), 505 (Berthu), 506 (Einem/Holoubek)).
- (2) One amendment argues for a requirement for political parties to have a democratic internal structure (Amendment 517 (Barros Moura/Azevedo)).
- (3) One amendment proposes dispensing with the requirement that political parties observe the rights and freedoms guaranteed by the Charter (Amendment 510 (Friedrich)).
- (4) One amendment seeks to extend the right to form a political party and to join a political party to everyone (Amendment 516 (Dehaene)); another restricts the right to join to aliens resident in the Union (Amendment 513 (Loncle)).
- (5) Several amendments propose that "Union" or "of the Union" be added to "citizens" (Amendments 509 (Melograni), 510 (Friedrich), 511 (Bereijo), 512 (Gnauck), 513 (Manzella), 514 (Loncle), and 515 (Mombaur)).

Praesidium proposal

After "Every citizen" add "of the Union".

Based on Amendments 510 (Friedrich), 511 (Bereijo), 514 (Loncle), and 515 (Mombaur).

Article 25. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate for the European Parliament

- 1. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage by free and secret ballot.
- 2. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Three amendments are designed to give the right to vote and to stand for election to third-country nationals legally resident for 5 years in the territory of the Member States (Amendments 525 (Meyer/Leinen/Martin/Berès/Van den Burg), 534 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 536 (Kaufmann)).
- (2) Two amendments propose adding that universal suffrage shall be equal (Amendments 528 (Friedrich) and 530 (Einem/Holoubek)) and one amendment that elections shall be held regularly (Amendment 529 (Melograni)).
- (3) One amendment suggests merging Articles 25 and 26 (Amendment 525 (Meyer/Berès/Leinen/Martin/Van den Burg)).

- (4) Three amendments propose that it be stated in this Article that exercise of this right is subject to conditions (Amendments 526 (Goldsmith) and 537 (Van Dam), or could be the subject of derogations (Amendment 533 (Fayot)).

Praesidium proposal

Reverse the order of paragraphs 1 and 2.

In paragraph 2 after "candidate" add "for the European Parliament".

Based on Amendment 532 (Friedrich).

Article 26. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate in municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Four amendments want it stated in the Article that exercise of this right is subject to conditions (Amendments 538 (Van Dam), 542 (Goldsmith) and 544 (Manzella)) or could even be subject to derogations (Amendment 539 (Fayot)).
- (2) One amendment suggests extending the right to persons resident in the Union (Amendment 541 (Kaufmann)).

(3) Repeat the wording of Article 19(1) TEC (Amendments 540 (Bereijo), 542 (Goldsmith)).

NEW ARTICLE 26A: Right to diplomatic protection (Amendments 545 (Duff) and 595 (Dehousse))

Praesidium proposal

Diplomatic and consular protection

Every citizen of the Union shall, in the territory of a third country in which the Member State of which he is a national is not represented, be entitled to protection by the diplomatic or consular authorities of any Member State, on the same conditions as the nationals of that Member State.

Based on Amendment 545 (Duff) and reproducing the first sentence of Article 20 TEC.

Article 27. Relations with the administration

- 1. Every person has the right to have his affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.
- 2. This right includes:
 - the right of every person to be heard before any individual measure which would affect him adversely is taken in relation to him;
 - the right of every person to have access to his file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy;
 - the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.
- 3. Every person may address the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of the Union and must have an answer in that language.

Proposed amendments

- (1) One amendment proposes merging Articles 27, 28 and 29 into one single article (Amendment 601 (Goldsmith)).
- (2) Two amendments aim to extend the scope of paragraph 1 to Member States where they are acting within the scope of Community law (Amendments 547 (Vitorino) and 548 (Altmaier)). One amendment on the other hand, aims to make clear that the obligation to give reasons for decisions lies solely with the institutions and bodies of the Union (Amendment 550 (van Dam)).
- (3) Two amendments aim to define rules of conduct for the institutions and bodies of the Union before a decision is taken (e.g. gathering of relevant facts, prohibition of the misuse of powers, proportionality) (Amendments 599 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn) and 600 (Korthals Altes/Patijn)).
- (4) Two amendments restrict the obligation to give reasons for individual decisions (Amendment 545a (Herzog)), or even to negative decisions only (Amendment 554 (Tarschys)).
- (5) One amendment proposes the deletion of paragraph 2 (Amendment 555 (Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella)).
- (6) One amendment proposes transforming the obligations of the administration into rights for everyone (Amendment 545b (Bereijo)); the same amendment adds to paragraph 2 a series of procedural guarantees where an administrative decision carries sanctions or has an adverse effect; it also adds a paragraph 3 on the civil liability of the administration.

- (7) One amendment suggests restricting the possibility (Amendment 558 (Rodotta/Paciotti/Manzella)) suggests presenting it as a right) for persons to address the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of the Union to citizens of the Union only (Amendment 557 (Mombaur)); one amendment proposes replacing the word "address" by the word "write" (Amendment 601 (Goldsmith)).

Praesidium proposal

Change the title to "Right to good administration"

- A. Paragraph 3 to begin as follows

"Every person has the right to address..."

Based on Amendment 555 (Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella) and on the amendment of Mr Dehaene

Article 28. Ombudsman

Every citizen and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration by the institutions and bodies of the Union, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Three amendments propose extending the right to apply to the Ombudsman to everyone (Amendments 562 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 564 (Buitenweg), 570 Korthals Altes)) or secondarily to nationals of third countries who are established outside the Union and maintain relations of governance with the Union (Amendment 571 (Dehousse)). One amendment proposes that the right should not be extended to legal persons (Amendment 567 (Cisneros)), another suggests a horizontal provision for legal persons (Amendment 565 (Gnauck)).
- (2) One amendment proposes that the cases referred should cover acts of agents of the Union (Amendment 561 (Duff)), a second suggests restricting these to acts of judicial bodies (Amendment 562 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn)), and a third proposes excluding acts of the European Parliament and of the Court of Auditors (Amendment 568 (Buttiglione)).
- (3) One amendment proposes also placing the Ombudsman under an obligation to draw up an annual report (Amendment 571 (Dehousse)).
- (4) Another amendment proposes that provision be made in Article 29 for supervision of the role of the Ombudsman by the European Parliament Committee on Petitions (Amendment 580 (Buttiglione)).

Praesidium proposal

Add "of the Union" after "citizen"

Based on Amendments 565(Gnauck) and 569(Dehaene).

Article 29. Right to petition

Every citizen and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Three amendments give every person the right to petition (Amendments 574 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 575 (Buitenweg) and 582 (Korthals Altes)). One amendment proposes however that legal persons be excluded (Amendment 579 (Cisneros)); two others suggest adding a horizontal provision relating to legal persons (Amendments 576 (Friedrich) and 577 (Gnauck)).
- (2) Three amendments propose limiting the right to petition to matters which come within the Union's fields of activity and which directly or individually affect the person intending to exercise that right. (Amendments 573 (Olsen), 576 (Friedrich), 577 (Gnauck)).
- (3) Two amendments propose instituting the right to petition any institution or body of the Union (Amendments 574 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn) and 582 (Korthals Altes)).
- (4) One amendment adds that this right shall be exercised under the conditions and limitations laid down in Article 194 of the Treaty (Amendment 573 (Olsen)).

Praesidium proposal

After "citizen" add "of the Union"

Based on Amendment 581 (Dehaene).

Article 30. Freedom of movement

Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Several amendments aim at extending freedom of movement to nationals of third countries either legally resident (Amendments 583 (Berès), 588 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 591 (Kaufmann)), resident for 5 years or for a long time (Amendments 584 (Einem/Holoubek), 589 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber)) or who have been granted refugee status (Amendment 589 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber)).
- (2) Some amendments aim at making provision in this article for the right to be exercised subject to the restrictions and conditions laid down in the Treaty establishing the European Community (Amendments 587 (Olsen) and 590 (Bereijo)) or to set this out in the statement of reasons/Part B (Amendments 593 (Goldsmith) and 594 (Tarschys)). One amendment makes provision for freedom of movement to be exercised subject to national controls designed to preserve liberty and security of persons (Amendment 585 (Berthu)).
- (3) One amendment proposes adding the freedom to leave and then return to the territory of the Member States in a second paragraph (Amendment 584 (Einem/Holoubek)).
- (4) Two amendments propose adding the freedom to settle to the right to move and reside freely (Amendments 589 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber) and 591 (Kaufmann)); another proposes spelling out the freedoms (live, work, seek work, study) (Amendment 586 (Duff)).

NEW HORIZONTAL ARTICLES:

- (1) Possibility of extending citizenship rights to any legal or natural person (Amendment 596 (Duff)).
 - (2) Interpretation and determination of the scope of rights and freedoms in the Charter which are similar to those laid down in the ECHR (Amendment 582 (Korthals Altes)).

Betr.: Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union

Prof. Dr. Wilhelm Brauner

Ersatz-Mitglied des Konvents zur Erarbeitung eines Entwurfs einer Grundrechte-Charta der Europäischen Union

Herrn
Roman Herzog
Vorsitzender des Konvents

Betrifft: Ergänzungsantrag zur Grundrechte-Charta

Sehr geehrter Herr Vorsitzender!

In meinem Namen sowie dem des Konvents-Mitglieds Abgeordneter zum Nationalrat Dr. Harald Ofner unterbreite ich den folgenden Antrag, den Charta-Entwurf um die hier festgelegten Minderheitenrechte zu ergänzen.

Hochachtungsvoll

(o. Univ.-Prof. Dr. W. Brauner)

Ergänzungsvorschlag Ofner / Brauner zum Vorschlag der Präsidentschaft zu einem EU-Grundrechtskatalog.

Artikel ... Identitätsrechte

(1) Jede Person hat das Recht auf Achtung ihrer Identität in ethnischer, sprachlicher, kultureller, religiöser und weltanschaulicher Hinsicht.

(2) Das Recht auf Identität gewährleistet insbesondere die unbeschränkte und ungeschmälerte Ausübung der individuellen und gemeinschaftsbezogenen Grundrechte auf nationaler Ebene sowie auf der Ebene der Union.

Erläuterungen allgemein: Bewußt wird davon abgesehen, die Identitätsrechte sowie die Sprachenrechte als Minderheiten-(= Volksgruppen-, Nationalitäten-) rechte zu definieren. Sie sollen jeder Gruppe unbeschadet ihrer Größe zukommen. Es soll dadurch auch dem Denken in Minderheiten und Mehrheiten entgegengewirkt werden. Die Aufnahme der vorgeschlagenen Bestimmungen erscheint deshalb geboten, weil erstens Minderheitenschutzbestimmungen zahlreiche Verfassungen, auch solche von EU-Mitgliedsstaaten aufweisen, wie weiters vor allem in Hinblick auf Beitrittswerber aus Osteuropa. Hingewiesen sei auf folgenden Satz in der EU-Broschüre „Das Europäische Parlament und die Verteidigung der Menschenrechte“ (S. 13): „Bei der Unterstützung der Stärkung der aufstrebenden Demokratien Ost- und Mitteleuropas hat das Parlament insbesondere der Lage von Minderheiten Rechnung getragen“.

Die vorgeschlagenen Artikel sind als subjektive öffentliche Rechte konzipiert. Zusätzliche Zielbestimmungen erscheinen angesichts internationaler Verpflichtungen etwa aufgrund des „Rahmenübereinkommens zum Schutz nationaler Minderheiten“ wie auch der „Europäischen Charta der Regional- oder Minderheitensprachen“ für nicht notwendig beziehungsweise wegen der Notwendigkeit einer starken Detaillierung für nicht angebracht.

Erläuterung zu Abs. 1: Die Textierung geht von der Überlegung und Tatsache aus, daß sich die angeführten Identitätsbezüge nicht decken müssen. Der Gebrauch beziehungsweise das Bekenntnis zu einer bestimmten Muttersprache muß nicht identisch mit dem zu einer bestimmten Ethnie, die Zugehörigkeit zu einer bestimmten Kultur kann sprachen- und ethnübergreifend sein.

Erläuterung zu Abs. 2: Die Verwirklichung der Identität besteht in der Regel in der Ausübung individueller Grundrechte wie etwa des Rechts auf freie Meinungsäußerung oder auch des sozialen Grundrechts auf Bildung wie ferner im Gebrauch gemeinschaftsbezogener Grundrechte wie etwa der freien Vereinsbildung.

Artikel ... Sprachenrechte

- (1) Jede Person hat das Recht auf den Gebrauch ihrer Sprache im privaten und geschäftlichen Verkehr, auch in der Öffentlichkeit, sowie auf das Erlernen dieser Sprache an privaten Bildungsanstalten.

- (2) Jede einer autochthonen ethnischen oder einer autochthonen sprachlichen Gruppe angehörende Person hat das Recht, bei ausreichendem Bedarf ihre Sprache an öffentlichen Bildungsanstalten jedenfalls im Gebiet dieser Gruppen zu erlernen. Sie hat ferner das Recht, diese Sprache im Verkehr mit Gerichten und Verwaltungsbehörden zu gebrauchen, ohne daß ihr dadurch ein zusätzlicher Kostenaufwand entsteht.

- (3) Die Sprachenrechte gelten sinngemäß auch im Bezug auf Gebärdensprachen.⁷

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 15 June 2000 (19.06)CHARTE 4371/00*CONVENT 38*PRAESIDIUM NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

- Contribution from the former President of the Federal Republic of Germany, Roman Herzog, relating to Articles 1 to 7

Please find attached a revised version of Articles 1 to 7 from the former President of the Federal Republic of Germany. In producing his draft, he has drawn to a very large extent on the texts and comments of the Praesidium.

As the German translation of "statement of reasons", he has chosen to use "Erläuterungen" ("comments") instead of "Begründung".

President Herzog has introduced the statements of reasons using Lord Goldsmith QC's wording where available. In addition, he has in each case included in the statement of reasons a paragraph on the extent to which fundamental rights may be limited.

Article 1. (previously Article 1(1)). Dignity of the human person

The dignity of the human person must be respected and protected.

Statement of reasons

The dignity of the human person is the real basis of fundamental rights. For that reason the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights enshrined this principle in its preamble as follows:

"Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world.."

Consequently, Article 1 produces the following effects, inter alia:

1. None of the rights laid down in this Charter may be used to harm the dignity of another person.
2. The dignity of the human person is part of the actual substance of the rights laid down in this Charter and, pursuant to the second sentence of Article 47, must therefore be respected, even where a right is restricted by legislation.

Article 2 (previously Article 1(2)). Equality before the law.

Everyone is equal before the law.

Statement of reasons

Article 2 corresponds to a right which has been included in all European constitutions since the 1789 Declaration of Human and Civil Rights and has also been recognised by the Court of Justice in a judgment as a basic principle of Community law (Judgment of 13 November 1984, Racke, Case 283/83 [1984] ECR 3791).

Article 2 therefore goes beyond Article 14 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which simply prohibits discrimination with regard to the enjoyment "of the rights and freedoms set forth in this Convention".

Article 3 (previously Article 2) Right to life

- 1. Everyone has the right to life.
- 2. No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed.

Statement of reasons

1. The content of paragraph 1 corresponds to the first sentence of Article 2(1) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:
"1. Everyone's right to life shall be protected by law..."
The second sentence of the provision, which referred to the death penalty, was superseded by Article 1 of Protocol 6 to the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:
"The death penalty shall be abolished. No-one shall be condemned to such penalty or executed."
Article 3(2) of the Charter is based on that provision.
2. Article 3 of the Charter may, pursuant to Article 47 thereof, be subject to limitations within certain limits. However, these limitations may "not exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms." Limitations are therefore only permissible in the context of the following provisions:
 - (a) Article 2(2) of the European Convention on Human Rights:
"Deprivation of life shall not be regarded as inflicted in contravention of this article when it results from the use of force which is no more than absolutely necessary:

- (a) in defence of any person from unlawful violence;
 - (b) in order to effect a lawful arrest or to prevent the escape of a person lawfully detained;
 - (c) in action lawfully taken for the purpose of quelling a riot or insurrection."
- (b) Article 2 of Protocol No 6 to the European Convention on Human Rights:
"A State may make provision in its law for the death penalty in respect of acts committed in time of war or of imminent threat of war; such penalty shall be applied only in the instances laid down in the law and in accordance with its provisions..."

Article 4 (previously Article 3)

Right to respect for the integrity of the human person

- 1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical, genetic and mental integrity.
- 2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - prohibition of eugenic practices, in particular those concerned with the selection and instrumentalisation of persons;
 - respect for the informed consent of the patient;
 - prohibition of making the human body and its products a source of financial gain;
 - prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Statement of reasons

The principles of this Article are already included in the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. The Charter does not set out to depart from these principles.

The list in paragraph 2 is not exhaustive, but includes only those rules which are absolutely indispensable. They therefore leave open the possibility of taking account of any progress in this area.

Article 5 (previously Article 4). Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment.

Statement of reasons

The right in Article 5 is the right guaranteed by Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which has the same wording.

No limitations are admissible pursuant to Article 47(4) of the Charter.

Article 6 (previously Article 5). Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

- 1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
- 2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.
"The term "forced or compulsory labour" shall not include services required by law of citizens for civic reasons in case of an emergency or disaster and military service or the work ordinarily required of persons imprisoned.
- 3. Trafficking in human beings is prohibited

Statement of reasons

The right in Article 6 is the right guaranteed by Article 4(1) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which has the same wording.

Pursuant to Article 47 of the Charter, limitations of this right may "not exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms."

Consequently:

1. Paragraph 1 may not be limited at all.
2. Paragraph 2 may be limited only to the extent that Article 4(3) of the European Convention on Human Rights defines the prohibition of forced or compulsory labour. That provision reads as follows::

"For the purpose of this article the term "forced or compulsory labour" shall not include:

- (a) any work required to be done in the ordinary course of detention imposed according to the provisions of Article 5 of this Convention or during conditional release from such detention;
- (b) any service of a military character or, in case of conscientious objectors in countries where they are recognised, service exacted instead of compulsory military service;
- (c) any service exacted in case of an emergency or calamity threatening the life or well-being of the community;
- (d) any work or service which forms part of normal civic obligations."

Paragraph 3 stems directly from the principle of human dignity and takes account of recent developments in crime.

Article 7 (previously Article 6)

Right to liberty and security

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in cases prescribed by law and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.

Statement of reasons

The rights in Article 7 are the rights guaranteed by Article 5 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Pursuant to Article 47 of the Charter, Article 7 may be restricted only within certain limits and under certain circumstances. However, such limitations may "not exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms " Therefore, the only limitations which are permissible are those in the context of Article 5 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads:

1. Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in the following cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law:
 - (a) the lawful detention of a person after conviction by a competent court;
 - (b) the lawful arrest or detention of a person for non-compliance with the lawful order of a court or in order to secure the fulfilment of any obligation prescribed by law;
 - (c) the lawful arrest or detention of a person effected for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority on reasonable suspicion of having committed an offence or when it is reasonably considered necessary to prevent his committing an offence or fleeing after having done so;
 - (d) the detention of a minor by lawful order for the purpose of educational supervision or his lawful detention for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority;

- (e) the lawful arrest or detention of a person to prevent his effecting an unauthorised entry into the country or of a person against whom action is being taken with a view to deportation or extradition.
2. Everyone who is arrested shall be informed promptly, in a language which he understands, of the reasons for his arrest and of any charge against him.
 3. Everyone arrested or detained in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1.c of this article shall be brought promptly before a judge or other officer authorised by law to exercise judicial power and shall be entitled to trial within a reasonable time or to release pending trial. Release may be conditioned by guarantees to appear for trial.
 4. Everyone who is deprived of his liberty by arrest or detention shall be entitled to take proceedings by which the lawfulness of his detention shall be decided speedily by a court and his release ordered if the detention is not lawful.
 5. Everyone who has been the victim of arrest or detention in contravention of the provisions of this article shall have an enforceable right to compensation."

Insofar as the Charter is applied in the Union context, the rights laid down in Article 7 must be particularly observed if, pursuant to Title VI of the Treaty on European Union, the Union adopts framework decisions to harmonise criminal law.

Article 31

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31

Submitted by: Jürgen Gnauck, Minister of Federal and European Affairs, Thuringia

Proposed text:

Deleted.

Reasons:

The proposal and the Statement of Reasons raise a number of questions and, accordingly, the introductory Article 31 should be deleted. For example, it leaves unresolved the question of what 'rights' and 'principles' are, the relationship with the horizontal provisions of Article 46 and to what extent a clear delineation can be made between the Charter and the 'political objectives' excluded by the Cologne mandate. In particular, it is not clear which of the social rights that are listed can be enforced at law, i.e. on an individual basis, and why in accordance with the Statement of Reasons only the legislative is to be bound by the fundamental rights. All of these issues will need to be discussed in depth.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31

Submitted by: Andrew Duff MEP

Proposed text:

Delete this article

Reasons:

The draft article duplicates other horizontal clauses, is not a fundamental right and therefore has no place here. Instead, the relevant Treaty provisions should be cited in the definitions, including Article 136.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31

Submitted by: Jo Leinen

Proposed text:

Delete article.

Reasons:

The article contains limitations which are in any case already covered by Article 46, and gives the impression that special limitations exist on social rights. This is contrary to the idea of the indivisibility and universality of the rights enshrined in the Charter.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31. Social Rights and principles

Submitted by: Lord Goldsmith QC

Proposed text:

Delete this article.

Reasons:

This article purports to impose far-reaching obligations on Member States to observe the economic and social rights listed and an obligation to implement the social principles set out in this Charter.

This is a wholly new approach when the Convention has, since its creation, been acting on the basis that the Charter is only to be addressed to EU Institutions and to Member States (at most) when acting to implement EC law and as a restriction on their powers. Further, there is no warrant in the Cologne mandate for imposing obligations or restrictions on the social partners who are not the addressees of the Charter.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONProposed amendment t0: Article 31

Submitted by: Ieke van den Burg

Proposed text:

Delete as a separate article

Reasons:

It is not necessary and contrary to the generally acknowledged indivisibility of fundamental rights to formulate separate horizontal clauses for the social and economic rights. Elements of the Proposed text may be included in art. 46.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31. Social rights and principles

Submitted by: Prof. Daniel Tarschys, Sweden

Proposed text:

Delete this article.

Reasons:

The social partners are independent organisations, not part of the EU institutions or bodies. Most of the substance is already covered in Article 46.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31

Submitted by: Charlotte Cederschiöld

Proposed text:

Delete

Reasons:

How to resolve the problems currently dealt with by social assistance must remain a national issue. The Charter must not prevent new models and modern structures emerging, and Article 31 therefore appears to be too far-reaching especially in the light of the statement of reasons to the article.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 31

Submitted by: Rodotà, Paciotti and Manzella

Proposed text: Delete article.

Reasons:

This article is recast in new Article 46a.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31

Submitted by: Ernest M.H. Hirsch Ballin, representing the First Chamber of the States-General of the Netherlands

Proposed text:

Deleted.

Reasons:

The scope needs to be apparent from a general clause for the Charter as a whole. Any legally binding effect is apparent from the text of the individual provisions. Moreover, the proposed text of Article 31 suggests, wrongly, that it is legally binding on the social partners.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Articles 31 and 46

Submitted by: José Barros Moura and Maria Eduarda Azevedo, Members of the Portuguese National Assembly

Proposed text:

Maria Eduarda Azevedo is in favour of merging Articles 31 and 46.

Reasons:

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31

Submitted by: Win Griffiths, MP

Proposed text:

The institutions and bodies of the Union and the Member States, exclusively with the scope of Community law, shall observe the rights set out in this Charter.

Reasons:

If such an article is needed, (given the proposed Article 46), it should refer to all rights and not just specify social rights.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31. Social rights and principles

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

The social rights and principles set out in this Charter shall be restricted to those areas covered by Community law and shall respect the right of each Member State to choose its own social model.

Reasons:

It is unnecessary to list all those who may be required to apply social rights and principles. It is vital, however, to mention that respect must be shown in all cases for the right of each Member State to choose its own social model, in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31

Submitted by: Dr Erling Olsen, Danish Government representative

General remark:

As regards the integration of the 'main text' with its accompanying 'justification', refer to my general remark (1) to Convent 28.

Proposed text:

This provision is of a horizontal nature and it is therefore proposed that it should be entered as Article 46a as follows:

‘Fundamental social rights shall be interpreted under the conditions laid down by rules established in national law or collective agreement, and by custom and practice, in accordance with applicable Community law’.

Reasons:

Fundamental social rights differ from civil and political rights to a certain extent in that they can only be construed in the light of the legislator’s definition of those rights. Account must therefore be taken of the national legislator’s power to give practical expression to those rights. The substance of those rights will therefore derive from the national provisions applying within the framework of Community law. The aim of the provision is, by supplementing Article 46(2), to ensure that the Charter does not extend the scope of current Community law or restrict the national definition of the rights in question

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31

Submitted by: Jens-Peter Bonde

Proposed text:

The institutions and bodies of the Union and the social partners at Community level, acting within the framework of their respective powers, shall observe the social rights and implement the social principles set out in this Charter, taking account of the differences in national practice, especially as regards agreements.

Reasons:

The charter is addressed to the Union Institutions and bodies and not the Member States.

The relationship between the citizen and the Member State is in any case governed by national legislation and the conventions to which the individual Member States have acceded.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31. Social rights and principles

Submitted by: Guy Braibant

Proposed text:

With due regard for the principle of subsidiarity, the institutions and bodies of the Union, the Member States, exclusively in the implementation of Community law, and the social partners at Community level shall observe and implement the social rights and principles set out in this Charter.

Reasons:

This amendment has three aims:

- To specify that the articles on social rights should only apply to Member States when they implement Community law (a similar amendment has been submitted in relation to Article 46); the expression ‘within the scope of Community law’ is too broad and vague since it covers areas of shared competence and the Union’s second and third pillars. Such an extension is not acceptable.
- To indicate that the Charter includes social rights and principles.
- To refer to the principle of subsidiarity, which is particularly important in this area.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article 31: Social rights and principles

Submitted by: Piero Melograni

Proposed text:

Replace 'Community law' with 'Union law', and 'Community level' with 'Union level'.

Reasons:

The scope of the Charter is not restricted to the Community sphere alone, but extends to all areas of Union responsibility. See also Article 46(1), which reads as follows: 'The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union within the framework of the powers conferred on them by the Treaties, and to the Member States exclusively within the scope of Union law'.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31

Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSER

Proposed text:

Article 31. Social rights and principles

The institutions and bodies of the Union and the Member States, exclusively within the scope of Community law, ~~and the social partners at Community level, acting within the framework of their respective powers~~, shall observe the social rights and implement the social principles set out in this Charter.

Reasons:

In view of the organisational structure of the European Community, it is not defensible to regard the social partners as Community bodies and hence to impose requirements on them under provisions relating to fundamental rights. The institutional involvement of the social partners is regulated in the context of the Economic and Social Committee; only that committee possesses the status of a consultative body. For this reason the social partners also cannot be regarded in this section as institutions with an obligation to respect fundamental rights. Moreover, it should be made clear whether the phrase ‘scope of Community law’ is synonymous with ‘application’ or ‘implementation of Community law’.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31. Social Rights

Submitted by: Gabriel Cisneros Laborda

Proposed text:

The Institutions and bodies of the Union and the Member States, exclusively within the scope of Community law, shall implement the rights set out in this Charter.

Reasons:

- The mandates given in Cologne and Tampere laid down that the Charter shall include social rights insofar as they do not merely establish principles for Community action. The Charter should therefore confine itself to subjective rights. In its statement of reasons for this article, the Praesidium explains that 'these are principles whose application will, in a certain number of cases, be subject to the adoption of implementing measures'. Nevertheless, that clarification is not sufficient to comply with the mandates given, and would not be sufficient even if it were included in the articles. Furthermore, it should be pointed out that no clear distinction is drawn between rights and principles either in Article 31 or in the following articles.
- According to the most generally accepted theory, fundamental rights pose an obligation on the state but not on individuals. It is consequently proposed that the reference to the social partners as passive subjects be deleted.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31

Submitted by: Dr Ingo Friedrich, MEP, and Dr Peter Mombaur, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 31. Social rights (two words deleted)

The institutions and bodies of the Union, the Member States, exclusively within the scope of Community law, and the social partners at Community level, acting within the framework of their respective powers, shall observe the social rights (five words deleted) set out in this Charter.

Reasons:

Without the statement of reasons, the article is likely to cause confusion rather than to have any other effect, particularly because of the differing concepts used, such as ‘rights’ on the one hand and ‘principles’ on the other.

The inclusion of mere State objectives and principles does not seem to be covered by the terms of reference adopted by the Cologne European Council on 3 and 4 June 1999. The European Council decision does indeed state that ‘in drawing up such a Charter account should (...) be taken of economic and social rights as contained in the European Social Charter and the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers (Article 136 TEC)’, but it very specifically limits the terms of reference by adding ‘insofar as they do not merely establish objectives for action by the Union’.

In view of this clear instruction, it does not seem to the purpose to incorporate ‘social rights’ in the draft Charter whose substance is confined to merely stating objectives for the European Union and the Member States within the scope of the Charter and which do not, as the Council clearly intended, confer on citizens enforceable rights which can be invoked at law.

It will not be possible to explain to the public what purpose is served by laying down extensive and detailed social rights which do not alter the legal status quo.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representing the Netherlands Government

Proposed positioning and title:

The institutions and bodies of the Union, the Member States, exclusively within the scope of Union law, and the social partners at Community level, each acting within the framework of their respective powers, shall observe the rights set out in this Charter and shall set themselves the goal of effectively realising the principles set out in the Charter.

Reasons:

The difference in terminology in respect of the rights included in the Charter ('observe') and the principles ('set themselves the goal') is intended to make explicit the difference in nature between rights and principles. The term 'observe' is taken from Article 6 of the Treaty on European Union, whereas the term 'set themselves the goal of effectively realising' is taken from the preamble to part I of the Revised European Social Charter.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31. Social rights and principles

Submitted by: Jean-Luc Dehaene, representative of the Belgian Government, Karel De Gucht and Roger L'Allemand, representatives of the Belgian Parliament

Proposed text:

Acting within the framework of their respective powers, the institutions and bodies of the Union, the Member States, within the scope of Union law, and the social partners at Community level shall observe and implement the social rights set out in this Charter.

Reasons:

The word ‘exclusively’ which preceded the phrase ‘within the scope of Community law’ has been deleted because the courts must be allowed to determine whether the Community is competent in respect of fundamental rights and not be restricted to applying the rights only within a previously determined area of competence.

In the same phrase, ‘Community law’ has been replaced with ‘Union law’. Violations of these social rights may occur as a result of action taken by the Union within its sphere of competence.

For the sake of greater clarity, the phrase ‘acting with the framework of their respective powers’ has been placed at the beginning of the sentence so that there is no doubt that it applies equally to the Union institutions and to the Member States. This applies, in particular, to the Dutch language version.

At the end of the article, the words ‘the social principles’ have been deleted from the phrase ‘shall observe the social rights and implement the social principles set out in this Charter’. There is no reason to refer to any principles other than the actual social rights.

Proposed amendment to: Article 31

Submitted by: Mr François Loncle

Proposed text:

The institutions and bodies of the Union, the Member States when they apply Community law and the relevant social partners shall be responsible for implementing the social rights and principles set out in this Charter.

Reasons:

This amendment concerns the wording of the article.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31 SOCIAL RIGHTS AND PRINCIPLES

Submitted by: JORDI SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

The institutions and the bodies of the Union, the Member States, exclusively within the scope of Community law, and the social partners shall implement the rights and shall observe and implement (where appropriate) the social principles at Community level, acting within the framework of their respective powers set out in this Charter.

Reasons:

It seems inconsistent that, in the existing text, rights should be observed and social principles be implemented. Rights shall not only be observed but shall also be implemented solely on the basis of the fact that they are proclaimed in the Charter and the social principles set out in the Charter shall be implemented, pursuant to what was laid down in the Cologne and Tampere resolutions, on the grounds that they are something more than mere general principles or once they become rights.

Proposal for a horizontal clause

In sofar as this Charter contains rights and principles corresponding to rights and principles laid down in the Revised European Social Charter, their meaning and scope shall be equivalent to the meaning and scope of the rights and principles in the Revised European Social Charter.

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representative of the Netherlands Government

Reasons:

The purpose of this provision is to ensure that the same meaning and scope are applied to the rights and principles laid down in the Charter as attach to the provisions in the Revised European Social Charter, even if their wording is different. It goes without saying that this shall apply only to the extent that the provisions of the Charter in fact correspond to those in the Revised European Social Charter. The article thus leaves intact the option of ensuring even greater protection by way of the Charter.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article 31 (new second paragraph)

Submitted by: Álvaro Rodríguez Bereijo, Personal Representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

The recognition of, respect for and protection of the rights set out in Articles ... shall inform positive law, judicial practice and the action of the public authorities. They may only be invoked before a judicial authority in accordance with the provisions of the laws that embody them in detail.

Reasons:

The explanatory statement appears to express the position that, by reason of their special nature, certain social rights, insofar as they determine the mandatory provision of state services, cannot be considered as individual rights that can be directly applied and invoked, but, rather, as principles which must govern the action of the public authorities and may, accordingly, be invoked before the courts only where they are embodied in detail in law and in accordance with the terms of the laws concerned.

I fully agree with this position. The category of social and economic rights includes, in view of its particular nature, rights having different implications and different types of effectiveness in law.

Certain rights concern freedom and equality (e.g. the right to form and to join trade unions, the right to strike, the right to collective bargaining, the freedom to choose an occupation or profession, the right not to be discriminated against at work on grounds of gender, etc). These are individual rights which can be directly exercised as such, within the limits constituted by respect for other rights, protected goods and values recognised in the Charter.

Other rights (e.g. welfare rights, the right to social assistance in old age, the right to health, the right to decent housing, the right to environmental protection, etc) are guiding principles which require the intermediary action of the legislator and generate a form of individual right which may be invoked before the courts only in the terms and to the extent permitted by the laws that embody such rights in detail. They are 'legal rules of principle' which orientate social and economic policy in a form binding on the public authorities and, as guiding principles of the social and economic order, will inform positive law, judicial practice and the action of the public authorities. As such, they have a negative force or effectiveness (marking limits on the freedom of action of the legislator), insofar as they prohibit any acts of the public authorities that would manifestly flout or contradict them by pursuing ends contrary to or incompatible with the values which those rights embody.

Finally, it seems important to point out that certain social and economic principles which embody clear objectives of social and economic policy (e.g. full employment, economic growth and stability, the fair distribution of national income, the improvement of the quality of life and the environment, etc) should, according to the agreement reached by the Cologne European Council, remain outside the contents of the Charter of Fundamental Rights. This text stated that the drafting of the Charter should also take account of economic and social rights, on the same basis as the European Social Charter and the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers (see Article 136 of the EC Treaty), insofar as they do not simply constitute bases for the objectives of the Union's action.

I believe that this important point should be explained clearly, by means of an article referring to 'rights of provision' of this type.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: positioning and title of Article 31

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representing the Netherlands Government

Proposed positioning and title:

Include Article 31 as a horizontal article with the title 'Obligations pursuant to the Charter'

Reasons:

The Charter should contain an article indicating the nature of the obligations derived from both the civil and political rights and rights of the citizen and from the social rights and principles that are included. Limiting the article to social rights and principles alone is inconsistent. This should be included with the horizontal articles.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 31

Submitted by: Prof. Dr Jürgen Meyer

Proposed text:

Article 31. Employment rights

- 1. Everyone has the right to work and the right to protection of his job. Every individual has the right to choose and engage in an occupation and trade and the right to free access to career assistance facilities.
- 2. Everyone has a right to protection against unjustified or abusive termination of employment.
- 3. Notwithstanding Article 22, the Member States shall take steps to promote the social and professional integration of particularly disadvantaged groups.

Reasons:

Employment rights are set out Article 31(1). Similar provisions can be found in the constitutions of the Member States, e.g. Belgium (Article 23), Denmark (Articles 74 and 75(1)), Finland (§ 15), the preamble to the 1946 French Constitution, Greece (Article 22), Italy (Articles 4 and 35), Luxembourg (Article 11), Netherlands (Article 19), Portugal (Articles 47, 53 and 58) and Spain (Articles 35 and 40).

Provisions specifically relating to this subject are also to be found in the constitutions of the German Länder (Bavaria, Brandenburg, Hessen, Mecklenburg-West Pomerania, Saxony, Saxony-Anhalt and Thuringia) and in the constitutions of the applicant countries.

At international level, the Member States have recognised employment rights in Article 23 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR), Article 6 of the (UN) International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (ICESCR), Article 1 of the European Social Charter (ESC) and paragraphs 2 and 4 of the Community Charter of Basic Social Rights for Workers (CCBSRW).

Article 31(2) sets out the right to occupational freedom, which has been upheld by a large number of decisions of the Court of Justice (e.g. Nold, Case 4/73, Reports 1974, p. 491) and in Article 32 of the Praesidium's proposal. Freedom of access to career assistance facilities is a basic right of individuals, which in future will fall within the EU's sphere of competence, following the decisions of the Lisbon European Council (conclusions of the Lisbon European Council, paragraph 29).

Under Article 137 of the EC Treaty, protection against dismissal is part of the EC's sphere of competence. Article 31(2) takes over the Praesidium's proposal (Article 38, Convent 34) to a large extent and thereby upholds a basic principle which is contained in the constitutions of many Member States and applicant countries and is also given universal recognition in international conventions (e.g. ILO Convention No 158). Given that protection of one's employment is a human right, the term 'worker' has been replaced in the proposal with 'everyone'. This is in line with the wording of existing international provisions, such as those contained in the UDHR (Article 23), the ICESCR (Article 6(1)) and the ESC (Article 1).

Article 31(3) reiterates a basic principle already contained in Article 22(3) of the Praesidium's proposal (Convent 28) with respect to women and in Article 43 (Convent 34) with respect to disabled persons, extending it, beyond these specific cases, to all disadvantaged persons.

Reasons:

Those amendments are intended to expand on my original working draft (submitted on 6 January; Contrib. 2) and to establish the second and third pillars of my three-pillar model which obtained general approval in the Convention (submitted on 4 May; Contrib. 144).

The aim of my amendments is to reach a compromise between the different positions within the Convention regarding economic and social rights. The proposed amendment is intended to make the articles more readable so that Union citizens can identify with the system of values set out in the Charter without reducing the text's legal clarity. At the same time, it should not make promises which the Union will not be able to keep. The proposal therefore mainly seeks to establish rights which will protect people against any measures taken by the Union which might threaten the fundamental social rights of the individual, and to uphold objective social standards, which can form the basis of a system of values on the European model. As a result of Articles 3 and 136 et seq. of the EC Treaty and the second and third pillar provisions, the European Union will in future have a wider sphere of competence which requires protection of fundamental rights as a matter of urgency to ensure that the high level of social protection - guaranteed by the Member States - is not undermined. This is why both 'neutral' and politically affiliated NGOs have called for recognition of fundamental social rights¹.

Given that the indivisibility and interdependence of fundamental rights and human rights have now gained universal recognition and that it has taken almost fifty years for this joint international position to be achieved, it is important that the social rights set out above be placed on an equal footing with the basic freedoms, EU citizens' rights and judicial rights established in Convent 28. Due account has therefore been taken of the proposal submitted by the UN Committee on Economic Social and Cultural Rights, by letter of 27 April 2000, to the chairman, Prof. Dr Herzog, including the suggestions and warnings contained therein.²

² 'The Committee ... would nevertheless like to point out that if economic and social rights were not to be integrated in the Draft Charter on an equal footing with civil and political rights, such negative regional signals would be highly detrimental to the full realisation of all human rights at both the international and domestic level, and would have to be regarded as a retrogressive step contravening the existing obligations of Member States of the European Union under the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.'

Submitted by: Johannes Voggenhuber

Proposed text:

Everyone who does not have sufficient own resources available has the right to a minimum income as a means of safeguarding his/her dignity and to enable him/her to take part fully in social, cultural and political life.

Article 31 bis

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed Article 31a (new)

Submitted by: Mr Vitorino, Commission representative in the Convention

Proposed text:

Article 31a. Equal treatment for men and women

Equal opportunities and equal treatment for men and women as regards employment and work, including equal pay for equal work or for work of equal value, must be guaranteed.

The principle of equal treatment shall not prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures providing for specific advantages in order to make it easier for the under-represented sex to pursue a vocational activity or to prevent or compensate for disadvantages in professional careers.

Reasons:

Paragraph 1 of this article is inspired by point 16 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers: 'Equal treatment for men and women must be assured. Equal opportunities for men and women must be developed. To this end, action should be intensified to ensure the implementation of the principle of equality between men and women as regards in particular access to employment, remuneration, working conditions, social protection, education, vocational training and career development ...'. The right to equal opportunities and equal treatment for men and women with regard to employment and work is also enshrined in Article 141 of the EC Treaty and Article 20 of the revised European Social Charter.

The possibility of positive measures to rectify existing situations of inequality between men and women (paragraph 2) is already recognised in Article 2(4) of Directive 76/207 and Article 141(4) of the EC Treaty, whose wording is used in the second paragraph of this amendment.

Proposed text:

The principle of equality between men and women shall be guaranteed in access to employment, working conditions and welfare provisions. There shall be no discrimination on grounds of gender. Male and female workers shall have the right to equal pay for equal work or work of equal value.

Reasons:

It is proposed to maintain, in the specific area of social rights, the principle of non-discrimination between men and women in the field of employment, to which the Treaty dedicates especial attention in view of its importance as an embodiment of the principle of equality, with provision being made additionally for positive discrimination measures as authorised by Article 141(4) of the EC Treaty.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment: New Article: Equality between men and women

Submitted by: Lord Goldsmith QC

Proposed text:

For Part A: Proclamation of Rights

Equality between men and women must be ensured with regard to pay, work and employment.

For Part B: Definition of Rights

The rights in this article are the rights provided for in Article 141 of the Treaty establishing the European Community and in the relevant secondary legislation adopted by the Community. They are subject to the limitations and derogations specified in those provisions and in any national measures adopted to give them effect.

Reasons:

These rights were previously included in Convent 18. It was my understanding of the Convention's discussion that these rights should be included in the draft Charter. My amendments to Convent 28 were made with the expectation that these rights would be included in Convent 34.

The specific existing rights in the Treaties concerning equality between men and women with regard to work and employment (including pay) deserve a separate article. I would therefore like to propose this article for inclusion.

Article 32

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 32. Freedom to choose an occupation

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

The freedom to choose one's occupation, to conclude contracts and to set up a business shall be respected by Community law.

Reasons:

The freedom to choose an occupation, as described in the Praesidium's proposal, is both too limited and too extensive. It is too limited in terms of the areas covered: mention must also be made of the freedom to conclude contracts and to set up businesses, which are both essential in a market economy. It is too extensive in terms of the conditions of application: it is wrong to say that everyone has the right to choose his or her occupation without restriction; the sentence should be rephrased to show that this freedom is to be respected by Community law.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 32 FREEDOM TO CHOOSE AN OCCUPATION

Submitted by: JORDI SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to work, to choose his or her occupation freely and to receive sufficient remuneration to meet his or her personal needs and those of his or her family. Under no circumstances can there be any discrimination on the grounds of sex.

Reasons:

It is not enough to say that everyone has the right to choose and to engage in an occupation. Such a right and the pursuit of an occupation must provide the individual and his or her family with adequate remuneration and under no circumstances is it acceptable in a free, competitive society for this right and this freedom of choice to be restricted on the grounds of sex.

In conformity with the (Revised) European Social Charter (art. 1) and the UN International Covenant on Economic Social and Cultural Rights (art 6) the title is drafted as "right to work", and the content is adapted to both articles referred to. In the Reasons, these references should be included, and as such then also refer to what measures may be expected from authorities to guarantee this right. For the function of this Charter focused on the EU and its institutions the respect of this right is more relevant, than instruction norms for labourmarket activities.

Proposed amendment to: Article 32

Submitted by: Jürgen Gnauck, Minister of Federal and European Affairs, Thuringia

Proposed text:

Article 32: Freedom to choose a profession

Union citizens shall have the right to choose and to engage in an occupation.

Reasons:

Restricting this fundamental right to Union citizens is regarded as absolutely essential.

In the version as proposed, third-country nationals legally resident in the territory of the Member States would have the right to choose and to engage in an occupation. The Union has no jurisdiction for such a far-reaching provision. Article 137(3) of the EC Treaty merely allows it to regulate the 'conditions of employment of third-country nationals legally residing in Community territory'.

With the text as proposed there is also the risk of secondary rights and rights of association of third-country nationals being called into question.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 32

Submitted by: Dr Ingo Friedrich, MEP, and Dr Peter Mombaur, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 32. Freedom to choose an occupation

Every citizen of the Union has the right to choose and to engage in an occupation.

Reasons:

The proposed text would also confer the right to choose and to engage in an occupation on third-country nationals residing lawfully within the territory of the Member States. The Union does not have the power to adopt such a far-reaching provision; Article 137(3) of the EC Treaty allows it only to regulate ‘conditions of employment for third-country nationals legally residing in Community territory’. There is also a danger that such a provision might call into question secondary provisions and the provisions of association agreements for third-country nationals from the point of view of fundamental rights.

Moreover, under the established case law of the CJEC, the right of free and equal access to an occupation also implies a right of residence for third-country nationals in other Member States of the Union for the purpose of seeking employment and applying for a job (cf. for example Article 39(2) of the EC Treaty in conjunction with Articles 1-6 of Regulation (EEC) 1612/68). At present Community law confers on third-country nationals who are lawfully resident in a Member State the right to reside in another Member State for only three months (cf. Article 62(3), EC Treaty).

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 32. Freedom to choose an occupation

Submitted by: Lord Goldsmith QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”:

Every citizen of a Member State of the EU has the freedom to work, seek work, set up in business or provide services in any other Member State.

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

The right in Article 32 is the right provided for in the provisions of Articles 39 to 55 of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the relevant secondary legislation adopted by the Community, and is subject to the limitations and derogations specified in those provisions and in any national measures adopted to give them effect.

Reasons:

First, the proposed article is not sufficiently clear. I assume it is intended to apply to free movement of workers and businesses and associated recognition of professional qualifications. However, the right of establishment (ie to set up in business) is a very important right, but is not included. The draft article therefore does not go far enough in describing one of the main benefits citizens have through EU membership.

Second, it is important that the right is clearly defined - my proposed amendment therefore makes a vital link between: the suggested Article; the main provisions of the Treaty (Articles 39 to 55); and the highly relevant secondary legislation covering free movement of workers and the recognition of qualifications (which facilitate free movement).

Third, the Article as drafted is in any event wrong in asserting that there is a “right” to employment. This would raise unrealistic expectations. Nor does the ECJ Nold case judgment support the argument that the right to choose and engage in an occupation is “recognised without any ambiguity in the case law of the Court”. What is important is the right to work and seek work in other Member States.

The right to work implies the right to have access to a free placement service

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 32

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representing the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

Citizens of the Union shall have the right to earn their living in an occupation freely entered upon, subject to any restrictions which may be laid down pursuant to Article G of the Revised European Social Charter and Article 39(4) of the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Reasons:

The Praesidium's proposal differs substantially, in terms of wording, from existing provisions guaranteeing the right in question. Accordingly, a wording is proposed which reflects more closely Article 1(2) of the Revised European Social Charter (ESC), which says:

'Article 1 - The right to work

With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right to work, the Parties undertake:

- 1. to protect effectively the right of the worker to earn his living in an occupation freely entered upon;'*

It needs to be made clear that this provision in the Charter should have no other meaning than the meaning already attached in practice to Article 1(2) of the Revised ESC. That is to say: the right must be interpreted as a guarantee against discriminatory restrictions on freedom to choose an occupation and restrictions which can be regarded as a form of forced labour. Interpreting this right as a directive to the (European or national) authorities to guarantee every citizen of the Union the work of his choice does not follow from Article 1(2) of the Revised ESC and it is therefore unacceptable as an interpretation of the present provisions.

Freedom of choice of occupation is also guaranteed in Article 6(1) of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and is recognised in Article 12(1) of the European Parliament's Declaration of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms (1989) and in point 4 of the Community Charter of Fundamental Social Rights of Workers (1989).

This is a right which is granted solely to persons to whom the rules on the free movement of workers are applicable (Article 39, EC Treaty) This is brought out in the amendment by restricting the granting of the right to citizens of the Union.

It would be preferable to indicate in the article itself the conditions under which the right can be restricted. The danger of a general restrictive clause is that the scope for restriction is too broad. This is why there is a reference to Article G of the Revised ESC. Because of the concise nature of the text there is simply a reference to that article, without including the provisions of the article verbatim.

In connection with the restrictions still existing within the European Union on the eligibility of subjects of other Member States for the public service, there is also a reference to Article 39(4), ECT, which states that the provisions on the freedom of movement of workers within the Community shall not apply to the public service.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 32

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice Dehousse, MEP and substitute Member of the Convention

Proposed text: Article 32 to read:

Everyone has the right to choose and to engage in an occupation in accordance with the European provisions governing access thereto.

Reasons:

The right to choose one's occupation does not relieve one of the obligation to comply with the legal provisions governing access thereto.

Proposed amendment to: Article 32. Freedom to choose and engage in an occupation

Submitted by: Prof. Daniel Tarschys, Sweden

Proposed text:

Article 32. Freedom to choose and engage in an occupation

Add: 'according to the regulations governing each occupation'.

Reasons:

This limitation, as spelled out in the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers, Article 4, should be included in order to give the correct information about the enjoyment of this right.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 32

Submitted by: Rodotà, Paciotti and Manzella

Proposed text: Article 32 to read:

Article 32. Right to employment and freedom to choose an occupation

1. Everyone has the right to fulfil their potential in an occupation freely chosen or accepted.
2. Everyone has the right freely to choose and engage in an occupation.
3. The Union shall promote continuing training and life-long learning aimed at enabling everyone to acquire new job-related knowledge and skills.

Reasons:

The first and third paragraphs are based on Article 1 of the Revised Social Charter. The second paragraph clarifies the freedom to choose an occupation.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article 32

Submitted by: Álvaro Rodríguez Bereijo, Personal Representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

- 1. Everyone has the right to choose and engage in an occupation or profession, under the terms laid down by Community and Member State law.
- 2. Every worker who is a national of a Member State of the European Union has the right to freedom of movement throughout the territory of the Union, under the terms laid down by the EC Treaty.
- 3. Freedom of enterprise is recognised in the framework of the market economy.

Reasons:

1. The right to choose and engage in an occupation ('profession' should be added - cf. the Community Charter of Social Rights, point 2) has been recognised by ECJ case-law, but on a basis subject to limitations, relating essentially to the objectives of Community integration (e.g. limits on imports and exports, security measures) and to the requirements of the administrative regulation of the professions; a reference to those limitations should be included, as a general provision is not sufficient, in particular because certain limitations arise from national law. In the 1974 ECR cited in the explanatory statement, it is stated that this freedom, far from being an absolute privilege, should be viewed in the context of the social function of the goods and activities protected, and that it has therefore to be exercised within the limits established in the public interest, including the objectives of general interest pursued by the Community. The same point is made in the ECR of 30 July 1996 and in many others.

2. It is proposed to include, as a separate right, the right of workers who are nationals of the EU Member States to freedom of movement as workers throughout the territory of the Union, under the conditions laid down in Article 39 of the Treaty. In a similar vein, point 1 of the Community Charter affirms the principle of the free movement of workers as the first of workers' social rights.

3. I believe it is important to include under economic and social rights the 'right of freedom of enterprise', as a logical correlative of the right to private property recognised in the Charter. This could be included in a separate article.

This right has been expressly recognised by the ECJ (see Decision of 27 September 1979, Case 230/78).

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 32 (Statement of reasons)

Submitted by: Ernest M.H. Hirsch Ballin, representing the First Chamber of the States-General of the Netherlands

Proposed text:

This right is recognised in the case law of the Court as a fundamental right (see judgement of principle in Case 4/73 Nolde [1974] ECR 491).

Reasons:

The words 'without any ambiguity' need to be deleted from the first sentence: the judgement in the Nolde case is more flexible. The second sentence needs to be deleted in its entirety, because it has nothing to do with the proposed text of Article 32.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 32

Submitted by: Prof. Dr Jürgen Meyer

Proposed text:

Article 32. Right to fair and reasonable working conditions

- 1. Everyone has the right to safe and healthy working conditions. For the purposes of protecting this right, everyone has the right, in particular, to limitation of daily and weekly working hours, to an annual period of paid leave and to fair and equal pay for equal work.
- 2. Young people, pregnant women and persons bringing up children have a right to special protection. This right includes the right to maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child with the aim of reconciling family and professional lives.

Reasons:

Article 32(1) summarises the provisions of Articles 35 and 36 (Convent 34), thereby tightening up the text of the Charter. The term 'workers' used in the Presidium's proposal has been replaced with 'everyone'. It should again be pointed out that the rights contained in Article 32 are, according to Article 23 of the UDHR and Article 7 of the ICESCR, applicable to everyone and therefore human rights and that a different wording would represent a regression in relation to the international standards. The constitutions of the Member States also consider this right to apply to everyone (e.g. Belgium (Article 23), Netherlands (Article 19(2)), Portugal (Article 59). Under the Cologne terms of reference, the Charter must also therefore adopt this wording.

The wording 'fair and equal pay for equal work' is based on Article 23(2 and 3) of the UDHR, Article 7 of the ICESCR, Articles 2 and 4 of the ESC and ILO Conventions 100 and 131, and is also contained in the constitutions of many of the Member States.

Article 32(2) combines Articles 37 and 39 of the Presidium's proposal (Convent 34).

Proposed amendment to Article: 32

Proposed text: Insert the following after Article 32:

Article 32a. Rights of workers who are EU citizens

Every EU citizen has the right to choose an occupation and to engage in economic and cultural activities in accordance with the provisions on freedom of movement and establishment within the territory of the Union set out in the Treaties.

Reasons:

While Article 32 covers all workers, whether they are EU citizens or not, the proposed article set out above is specifically intended to protect workers who are EU citizens.

Proposed Article 32a (new)

Submitted by: Ben Fayot (Chamber of Deputies, Luxembourg)

Proposed text:

Article 32a (new). Right to life-long training

Everyone must have access to life-long professional training.

Reasons:

This provision is contained in Document ‘Convent 18’ and is also to be found in all convention or charter documents. It is a fundamental principle nowadays aimed at guaranteeing each individual’s ongoing professional adjustment and personal development.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed Article 32b (new)

Submitted by: Ben Fayot (Chamber of Deputies, Luxembourg)

Proposed text:

Article 32b (new). Right to fair and equal pay

Workers have the right to a fair remuneration sufficient for a decent standard of living. The right to equal remuneration for work of equal value shall be guaranteed.

Reasons:

This provision is taken from Convent 18 and the European Social Charter (Revised) to combine the two ideas which are closely related to the right to work: equal remuneration for men and women and a fair remuneration.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed insertion of additional article on the right to a minimum wage after Article 32

Submitted by: Marie-Madeleine Dieulangard

Proposed text:

- ‘1. Employees in an identical situation shall be entitled to equal remuneration on the basis of objective criteria.
2. Every employee has a right to receive a fixed minimum remuneration which may not be lower than the minimum wage set by the Member State in which he is employed.’

Reasons:

The aim is to include an article reflecting the current state of affairs in the European Union, namely the introduction by all the Member States of a minimum wage in line with the principle of equal pay, in other words equal remuneration for employees whose employment situation is identical.

A further aim is to ensure equal treatment for all employees, and in particular equality of treatment for men and women.

Proposed amendment to: Article 33. Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 33. Working conditions

Employment contracts and working conditions must respect the dignity and health of employees and enable them to lead a harmonious family life alongside their work.

Reasons:

The wording proposed in the amendment seeks to replace Articles 33 (Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking), 35 (Right to rest periods and annual leave), 36 (Safe and healthy working conditions), 37 (Protection of young people), 38 (Right to protection in cases of termination of employment) and 40 (Right of migrant workers to equal treatment). These articles set out principles which are certainly worthy of protection but should be dealt with at national level or through a directive, and not in a Charter of fundamental rights.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 33

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representing the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

The Union shall take measures such that workers or their representatives are regularly informed, pursuant to Article 21 of the Revised European Social Charter, of the economic and financial state of the undertaking which employs them and are consulted in good time on decisions being considered by the employer which might have a serious effect on workers' interests.

Alternative text:

The Union shall take measures such that workers or their representatives :

- a. are regularly informed in a comprehensible way of the economic and financial state of the undertaking which employs them;
- b. are informed and consulted in good time on decisions being considered by the employer which might have a serious effect on their jobs, including decisions on collective redundancies, and on their working conditions.

Reasons:

The proposed amendment seeks to tie in more closely with Article 21 of the Revised European Social Charter (ESC). It also establishes greater clarity concerning the cases in which workers or their representatives have to be informed and/or consulted.

The specific reference in the alternative text to cases of collective redundancies is based on Article 29 of the Revised ESC and the reference to working conditions comes from Article 22 of the Revised ESC.

The wording 'The Union shall take measures...' is also a better reflection of the character (that of a directive) of this Article than the Praesidium's proposal which mistakenly refers to a 'right'.

Proposed text:

Workers and their representatives have the right to information and consultation within the undertaking which employs them.

Reasons:

The inclusion in the Article of the words “in good time” is beyond what is stated in Article 137.1.

The wording “in good time” is difficult to judge in the new economy. To make a right relative, as it would be with the inclusion of “in good time”, would be damaging to the conception of fundamental rights. European citizens should know what their rights are and there must not be any uncertainty.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 33

Submitted by: Andrew Duff MEP

Proposed text:

Article 33. Right to information and consultation at work

Workers (delete: 3 words) have the right to be informed and consulted within the undertaking that employs them.

Reasons:

The draft article goes beyond the existing EU consensus in this area. The reference to workers' representatives is implicit, being covered elsewhere in the Article on the recognition of trades unions. The phrase 'in good time' is a value judgement and therefore has no place as a fundamental right; it is also prejudicial to the current negotiations on the mergers and take-overs directive.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONProposed amendment to: Article 33*Submitted by: Ieke van den Burg*Proposed text:*Workers and their representatives have the right to effective information (and), consultation and participation in major decisions at all relevant national or international levels within the undertaking which employs them.*Reasons:

- the word "effective" is to be interpreted in line with articles 21 and 29 of the Revised European Social Charter, meaning: "regularly, at appropriate time and in a comprehensive way", thus it covers "in good time"
- "and participation" is added, following art 22 of the Revised European Social Charter, which speaks also about participation in decisionmaking processes in the undertaking.
- "in major decisions" refers to different situations which may have major impact for workers such as formulated in the relevant (R)ESC articles, without naming them in detail
- "at all relevant national or international levels" is added to stress the importance of crossborder information, consultation and participation, where major decisions in transnational companies are taken often at a higher crossborder level.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 33

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice Dehousse, MEP and substitute Member of the Convention

Proposed text: Article 33 to read:

Workers and their representatives have the right to be provided on a regular basis and in good time with comprehensive information about the economic and financial situation of the undertaking which employs them, without prejudice to the right not to divulge information which could be prejudicial to the undertaking, or to the possibility of requiring that certain information be kept confidential.

Workers and their representatives also have the right to be consulted in good time on decisions which could substantially affect the interests of workers, particularly by having an important impact on the employment situation in the undertaking.

Reasons:

- 1. The article is made clearer by the distinction made between information and consultation.*
- 2. Information is less useful when it is incomprehensible, fragmentary or late.*
- 3. The consultation system provided for in Article 21 of the Social Charter covers all the situations dealt with in the various proposals and has the additional advantage of referring clearly to threats to jobs. Article 29 of the Social Charter contains details regarding the implementation of the relevant rights.*

Proposed text:

Article 33. Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Workers and their representatives have the right to information and consultation in good time within the undertaking which employs them with regard to matters of fundamental relevance to them.

Reasons:

We support this proposal in principle, but this is not a classic fundamental right and can therefore be dealt with (or continue to be dealt with) elsewhere.

As labour-law entitlements are subject to regular change, and with the aim of incorporating in the European Charter of Fundamental Rights only rights which are genuinely fundamental, such entitlements should be governed by secondary law instead. If Article 46 is to be retained, the very wide scope of the article ought, at the minimum, to be restricted by means of the amendment. The German version of the headings to the articles ought to be rephrased so as to make it clear that the rights in question can be invoked at law and that the aim is not to secure third-party effect for fundamental rights.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 33

Submitted by: Jürgen Gnauck, Minister of Federal and European Affairs, Thuringia

Proposed text:

Article 33: Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Workers or their representatives have the right to information and consultation in good time within the undertaking which employs them on matters directly affecting them.

Reasons:

As far as the German wording is concerned, the term 'Recht' should always be used instead of the term 'Anspruch', and the title and the text should be brought in line. This also applies to some of the other articles.

Furthermore, the wording should be changed to 'Workers or their representatives...' in line with Article 21 of the Revised Social Charter.

Finally, it is necessary to specify the object of the information. Obviously it cannot mean that information has to be given on every aspect of the business policy and activities of the undertaking. This would go substantially beyond German law on co-determination - which is in any case very broad; nor is it the purpose, as the examples of collective redundancies and the transfer of undertakings quoted in the original version (Convent 18) show. It is therefore proposed that the phrase 'on matters directly affecting them' be added by way of clarification.

Article 33. Rights of collective bargaining and action

- 1. Everyone has the right to form trade unions and to take collective action to ensure that his economic and social interests are upheld and enforced.
- 2. The right of trade unions and employers' organisations to collective bargaining shall be respected.

Reasons:

Article 33(1) and (2) takes up the Presidium's proposals contained in Article 34 (Convent 34) and Article 17 (Convent 28) and is also based on similar provisions in the constitutions of the Member States (e.g. Germany Article 9(3), Finland § 10a, Italy Article 39, Portugal Article 55, Sweden Chapter II §17, Spain Article 37), the German Länder (Brandenburg Article 51, Saxony Article 25, Saxony-Anhalt Article 13(3) and Thuringia Article 37) and international treaties and conventions (UDHR Article 23(4), International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights/ICCPR Article 22, ICESCR Article 8, ESC Articles 6 and 7 and ILO Conventions Nos 87, 98 and 151).

The Presidium's restriction, i.e. 'under the conditions laid down by national legislation and practice' is not in line with the 'right to form a trade union', which is a human right, as defined in the UDHR Article 23(4), ICESCR Article 8(1) and ESC Article 5. The restriction would cause the text to fall short of existing international standards.

The article is not intended to confer new competences on the Union, but to ensure that the Union recognises this freedom, as guaranteed by the Member States and their international obligations.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 34. Rights of collective bargaining and action

Submitted by: Lord Goldsmith QC

Proposed text:

Delete all

Reasons:

Matters relating to the right of employers and workers to associate for the protection of their interests are covered by Article 11 ECHR and that Article is already reflected, and rightly so, in Article 17 of the draft Charter. To the extent that the text duplicates the effect of Article 17, and therefore of Article 11 of the ECHR, it is unnecessary. Moreover, to single out a particular aspect of Article 11 and deal with it separately at a different point in the Charter is undesirable because it undermines the integrity both of the ECHR Article and also of the Article of the Charter designed to reflect it.

However, my concern is not simply about duplication. The text goes further than Article 11 in imposing an obligation to negotiate and a right to take collective action that are to be found neither in the ECHR nor in Community law. In that connection the “statement of reasons” reads too much into the “Swedish Engine Drivers’ Union” case. Whilst in that case and others the Court has asserted that Article 11 implies a “right to be heard”, the case establishes that the existence of a right in national law to bargain collectively is no more than one of the ways in which it is possible to confer that “right to be heard”.

The text also implies that employers and workers have a cross-border right to defend their economic and social interests. That too goes beyond Article 11 and is not to be found in Community law.

The reference to conditions laid down by national legislation and practice is welcome. However, these words do not remove the effect of the preceding sentences in apparently conferring general rights to bargain collectively and take collective action and a cross-border right to defend interests.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 34

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representing the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

- 1. Employers or organisations of employers and organisations of workers have the right to negotiate and conclude, by virtue of the procedures established in the Member States pursuant to Article 6(2) of the Revised European Social Charter, collective agreements.
- 2. Workers and employers have the right to collective action, including the right to strike, in cases of conflicts of interest. This right may be restricted only subject to the conditions set out in Article G of the Revised European Social Charter.

Reasons:

The wording of the amendment is more in line with Article 6 of the Revised European Social Charter (ESC).

In the first paragraph the reference to procedures for free bargaining valid in the Member States is linked to Article 6(2) of the ESC in which the Member States are obliged to work towards the creation of such procedures.

For the reason given in the reasons for the amendment to Article 32, the second paragraph includes a reference to Article G of the Revised ESC.

Moreover, it may be taken as read that the rights included in this Article, together with the right to trade unions in Article 17, for example, may also be exercised at European level. Accordingly, there is no need to add a sentence to this effect to the Article. By way of illustration - and in connection with the right to form and join trade unions in Article 17 - reference may be made to Article 5 ESC which explicitly includes the right to set up international organisations of employers and workers. It raises the question, however, of whether an addition on these lines might be necessary for more articles.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 34

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice Dehousse, MEP and substitute Member of the Convention

Proposed text: Article 34 to read:

Employers or employers' organisations and workers or workers' organisations have the right, where appropriate under the conditions laid down by national legislation or European Union rules, to negotiate and conclude collective agreements, including at European Union level.

The right to take collective action shall apply in cases of conflicts of interest and shall include the right to strike where all other means fail. This right may be restricted by the right of requisition where the public interest so requires, but that restriction must be laid down by law.

Reasons:

- 1. The separation of the article into two subparagraphs makes the text clearer.*
 - 2. Recognition of the above rights does not give the Community any powers to harmonise provisions governing the exercise of the right of association and the right to strike. Article 137(6) of the EC Treaty specifically excludes Community harmonisation in this area. Nonetheless, the inclusion of such a right gives full force to Article 138 of the EC Treaty, which provides that the Community shall promote the consultation of management and labour at European level.*

Proposed amendment to Article: 34

Submitted by: Rodotà, Paciotti and Manzella

Proposed text: Article 34 to read:

- 2. In cases of conflicts of interest, workers and employers have the right to take collective action including the right to strike to defend their economic and social interests, including at European Union level.

Reasons:

In the interests of clarity, a distinction should be made between the right to negotiate collective agreements and the right to take collective action to defend one's economic and social interests.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 34. Rights of collective bargaining and action

Submitted by: Guy Braibant

Proposed text:

Employers and workers have the right, at all levels, to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and to take collective action, including strike action, in cases of conflicts of interest, to defend their economic and social interests under the conditions laid down by national and Community legislation and practice.

Reasons:

This amendment refers to the freedom to take strike action, which is recognised in the laws of all the Member States. The specific reference to 'national and Community legislation and practice' enables the Member States and the Community to set the limits for the exercise of this right.

Proposed amendment to: Article 34. Rights of collective bargaining and action

Submitted by: Jean-Luc Dehaene, representative of the Belgian Government, and Karel De Gucht and Roger L'Allemand, representatives of the Belgian Parliament

Proposed text:

Employers and workers have the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and to take collective action to defend their interests.

Reasons:

The phrase ‘in cases of conflicts of interest’ has been deleted. It should be possible to take collective action even if such a conflict does not exist.

The adjectives ‘economic and social’ qualifying ‘their interests’ must be deleted because they place an undue restriction on negotiations and action.

The rest of the sentence has been deleted. The reference to ‘European Union level’ is unnecessary and the reference to the conditions of implementation laid down by national legislation and practice does not belong here. Implementing provisions are already contained in the horizontal clauses.

Article 34. Rights of collective bargaining and action

Employers and workers have the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and to take collective action, in cases of primary conflicts of interest (delete 8 words) at European Union level (delete 10 words)

Reasons:

The inclusion of the qualification ‘primary’ is necessary to exclude secondary action. The exclusion of the two other phrases is intended to avoid the obvious and to suppress needless repetition, respectively, as well as to emphasise the intended focus on the EU.

Article 34. Right of collective bargaining and action

Employers and workers' organisations have the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements. Workers have the right to take collective action, including the right to strike, to defend and promote their material and moral interests.

Reasons:

Employers negotiate either individually or collectively, but always with workers' organisations. Due account should be taken of this in the structure of the text.

Workers take collective action not only to safeguard acquired rights, but also to promote their interests.

The structure of this article should highlight the fundamentally unbalanced relationship between employers and workers.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONProposed amendment to: Article 34*Submitted by: Ieke van den Burg*Proposed text:*Title: Right of association, collective bargaining and collective action

Employers and workers have the right of association in order to constitute employers' organisations and trade unions for the defence of their economic interests, including at European Union level. Employers or employers' organisations and workers' organisations have the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements, including at European Union level. Workers and their organisations have the right to take collective action, including the right to strike, in one or more EU Member States, including at EU level, in cases of conflicts of interest, and to support others in solidarity actions.

Reasons:

- It is necessary to start with the right of association in this article, since it is essential that organisations of employers and workers have the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements;
- The formula about the defence of their economic interests (stemming from art. 11 of the Community Charter) should be linked to the right of association and not to qualify the collective action;
- The right to take collective action is a workers' and a trade unions' right;
- This right should be respected and guaranteed across borders in all EU member states (be it in all or in only some of these states);
- The right should also include solidarity actions;
- The right to strike should explicitly be mentioned.

In the Reasons reference should be made not only to the ECHR, article 5 RESC and the Community Charter, but also to ILO Conventions 135 (not ratified by Belgium and Ireland) C 87 and C 98, ratified by all EU member states!!

The phrase 'including at European level' should also be deleted. The right to negotiate at EU level can be included in a separate paragraph 2 with the same wording as Article 139(1) of the EC Treaty: 'Should management and labour so desire, the dialogue between them at Community level may lead to contractual relations, including agreements.'

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 34

Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSER

Proposed text:

- Article 34. Rights of collective bargaining and action

Under the conditions laid down by national legislation and practice, employers and workers have the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and to take collective action, in cases of conflicts of interest, to defend their economic and social interests, including at European Union level, ~~under the conditions laid down by national legislation and practice.~~

Statement of reasons

The right to form and to join trade unions is recognised in Article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights. [...] The concept of collective action includes, amongst other things, the right to strike and the right to impose a lockout.

Reasons:

It should be made clear in Article 34 that the right to take collective action likewise exists only under the conditions laid down by national legislation and practice. It should also be made clear that the concept of ‘conflicts of interest’ relates only to labour disputes and not to general political conflicts .

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 34

Submitted by: Prof. Dr Jürgen Meyer

Proposed text:

Article 34. Right to health protection

Everyone has the right to protection of his health. To enable this right to be exercised, the Union shall ensure, above all, that everyone has access to medical care and shall take measures to guarantee consumer protection and protection of natural conditions of life.

Reasons:

Article 34 incorporates the substance of the Praesidium's proposals for Articles 42, 44 and 45. It is intended to ensure that the Union does not infringe these rights which are predominantly guaranteed by the Member States. It also sets out an objective norm, against which EU action may be measured and which is already contained in the Treaties (Articles 3, 152, 153 and 174 of the EC Treaty). The right to health protection, a healthy environment and consumer protection is also contained in a large number of international conventions recognised by the Member States (e.g. UDHR Article 25, ICESCR Article 12 and ESC Article 11), and in the national constitutions (e.g. Belgium Article 23, Finland § 15a, Italy 21(3) and Article 38, Luxembourg Article 11, Netherlands Article 22, Portugal Articles 64 and 66 and Spain Article 43).

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 34

Submitted by: Rodotà, Paciotti and Manzella

Proposed text: Insert the following after Article 34:

Article 34a. Right to a fair remuneration and to equal treatment

1. Every worker has the right to a fair remuneration for work carried out, such as to give him or her a decent standard of living.
2. Every worker has the right to a fair remuneration for work of equal value.
3. Equal treatment for men and women shall be ensured, inter alia by means of positive action, in respect of working conditions, work relations and the social protection system.
4. All non-EU nationals working lawfully in the territory of the Member States are entitled to treatment not less favourable than that of European Union workers.

Reasons:

Paragraph 1 of this new article is based on Article 4 of the Social Charter and Article 5 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers, paragraphs 2 and 3 are based on Article 141 of the Treaty, while paragraph 4, which takes over the substance of Article 40 of this Charter, with a view to ensuring comprehensive coverage of this area.

Alternative proposal (if the above is rejected)

Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to appropriate rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave.

Reasons:

We support this proposal in principle, but this is not a classic fundamental right and can therefore be dealt with (or continue to be dealt with) elsewhere.

With the aim of incorporating in the European Charter of Fundamental Rights only rights which are genuinely fundamental, labour-law entitlements should be governed by secondary law instead. If Article 46 is to be retained, and bearing in mind that entitlements are subject to regular change, the reference to ‘daily and weekly’ rest periods ought at the minimum to be deleted from the Charter.

This title covers the content of the article that not only refers to rest periods and annual leave, but also to reasonable daily and weekly working hours to be maximized.

Important: The Reasons should refer to article 2 of the Revised Social Charter. This refers a.o. to a minimum of four weeks' holiday, and to the Sunday rest.

Reasons:

The title should be made to reflect the nature of the article, which is a directive. Accordingly, the words 'Right to' need to be deleted from the title. Furthermore, and in accordance with the text of the next amendment, the words 'Reasonable hours of work' also need to be included in the title.

Reasons:

This wording is more in line with Article 2, introduction and paragraphs 1 and 5, of the Revised European Social Charter, while the substance of the Article is made more precise.

The wording ('The Union shall take measures...') also better expresses the nature of this article, which is concerned with principles, that the Praesidium's proposal which refers to a 'right'.

Proposed text: Article 34 to read:

Reasons:

1. To make the article clearer.
 2. Article 2 of the Revised Social Charter defines the term 'just conditions of work'.
 3. Sometimes major differences may exist between one Member State and another and even one sector and another in determining exactly what 'just conditions' may or should be.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 35. Right to rest periods and annual leave

Submitted by: Lord Goldsmith QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of rights”:

Every worker has the right to a weekly rest period and to an annual period of paid leave.

For Part B, “Definition of rights”:

The right in Article 35 extends so far as is required by the relevant secondary legislation adopted by the Community under Article 137(1) of the Treaty Establishing the European Community, subject to the limitations and derogations specified in that legislation and in any national measures adopted to give them effect.

Reasons:

I do not accept that a “general right to limitation of maximum working hours” currently exists and it is therefore inappropriate for this document. The article as drafted fails to take account of the provisions of the Working Time Directive whereby workers can choose to work in excess of 48 hours per week limit provided for in the Directive. This is subject to a review in 2003 but to include it here would pre-empt the outcome of that review. My wording more accurately reflects the current position under the Directive including the excluded areas.

As always, having a clear ‘Definition of Rights’ which ties the right to a precise legal source is an essential requirement for me to accept the short Part A statement.

Submitted by: Jürgen Gnauck, Minister of Federal and European Affairs, Thuringia

Proposed text:

Right to rest periods and annual leave

Every worker has the right to limitation of working hours, to appropriate rest periods and to an annual period of leave with no loss of pay.

Reasons:

Again, it would be better to replace the term 'entitled' with 'right' and to leave out the word 'maximum'. Moreover, the concept of 'daily and weekly rest periods' is too restrictive and detailed; the flexible phrase 'appropriate rest periods' is better.

The phrase 'annual period of paid leave' should be replaced with the phrase 'annual period of leave with no loss of pay.' This makes it possible to avoid any misunderstanding that holiday pay should be granted as a fundamental right.

Article 35. Right to education

- (2) The founding of educational establishments shall be free of constraint.
- (3) The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious, philosophical and educational convictions shall be respected.

Reasons:

Article 35 takes over much of the Presidium's proposed wording for Article 16 (Convent 28) and incorporates it in the social provisions for organisational reasons. Given that the right to education – linked to the duty to attend school – is recognised in all Member States and contained in the ECHR (Article 2 of the additional Protocol), there is no need to provide a specific justification for this right which has not given rise to any controversy in the Convention. Given that the EC has certain responsibilities in this area under Articles 149 and 150 of the EC Treaty, fundamental rights must be guaranteed. The additional 'right to lifelong learning' is a universally recognised principle and is necessary for all individuals as a result of technical innovation. The Lisbon European Council described lifelong learning as 'a basic component of the European social model'.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 36

Submitted by: Jürgen Gnauck, Minister of Federal and European Affairs, Thuringia

Proposed text:

Article 36. Right to safe and healthy working conditions

Every worker has the right to safe and healthy working conditions.

Reasons:

The new wording [which does not affect the English version] (changing the German 'Anspruch' to 'Recht') seeks to standardise the way in which social rights are formulated.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Articles 36, 37 and 39 (to be combined)

Submitted by: Jo Leinen

Proposed text:

1. Every worker has the right to healthy and safe working conditions.

2. Young people, pregnant women and those with children to bring up have the right to special protection. This right includes, in particular, the right to maternity leave and parental leave with the aim of reconciling family life and employment. It also includes the right of young people to working conditions appropriate to their age and stage of development.

(Also incorporate in the statement of reasons/Part B the following text from Article 37 of the Praesidium proposal:)
The minimum age of admission to employment must not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people, in particular those ensuring their preparation for work through vocational training and subject to certain derogations.

Reasons:

In order to streamline the Charter, Articles 36, 37 and 39 should likewise be combined, as they deal with closely related matters. The special protection of young people, pregnant women and those with children to bring up is taken, in this form, from Prof. Meyer's draft. The specific restriction for young people (former Article 37) is transferred to the statement of reasons, in line with the Praesidium's proposals for other articles.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 36

Submitted by: Prof. Dr Jürgen Meyer

Proposed text:

Article 36. Right to housing

The right of individuals to adequate housing shall be respected.

Reasons:

Article 36 gives the right to housing EU recognition. This means that the obligations on the Member States under international law regarding the right to housing (e.g. UDHR Article 25(1), ICESCR Article 11, UN Convention on the Rights of the Child Article 27(3) and EC Article 31 rev.) may not be jeopardised by the Union. The right to housing is also mentioned explicitly in the constitutions of many Member States (Belgium Article 23, Finland § 15a, Greece Article 21(4), Portugal Articles 22(2) and 65, Sweden Chapter 1 § 2 and Spain Article 47) and implicitly in others (Germany Articles 1, 13, 14 and 20). This right is also recognised in the constitutions of the German Länder (e.g. Bavaria Article 206(1), Brandenburg Article 47 and Saxony-Anhalt Article 47).

Reasons:

It must be explained, preferably in a part B of the Charter, who the addressee of this article is. Under Swedish legislation an employee cannot hold his/her employer responsible before a national court for violations of Swedish law in this field. Such initiatives are reserved for the competent authorities.

Delete

Reasons:

This question is very important. However, there already exists a directive in this matter (94/33/EG) and this is sufficient for the protection of youths in employment situations.

There is a need to distinguish between what should be put in a Charter, which will eventually become a constitution, and what can be regulated with directives and secondary law. Not every regulation can be raised to constitutional level.

Alternative proposal (if the above is rejected)

The Community shall seek to ensure that a minimum age of admission to employment is laid down which is not lower than the minimum school-leaving age

Reasons:

We support this proposal in principle, but this is not a classic fundamental right and can therefore be dealt with (or continue to be dealt with) elsewhere.

The provision is complex, particularly as regards the exceptions permitted, and is already too detailed. Moreover, it relates only to employment. Its proper place, therefore, is secondary law.

Proposed amendment to: title of Article 37

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representing the Netherlands Government

Proposed title:

Protection of children and young persons with regard to the labour process

Reasons:

This Article is concerned solely with the protection of children and young persons with regard to the labour process. A provision on the protection of children in general is already contained in Article 23. Furthermore, and by analogy with Article 7 of the Revised European Social Charter, the term 'children and young persons' is preferred to 'young people'. The amendment seeks to change the title of the article accordingly.

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice Dehousse, MEP and substitute Member of the Convention

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 37

Proposed text:

Free compulsory education shall be granted at least until the minimum age for entering the labour process. This age may not be less than fifteen, with the exception of certain forms of light work permitted by law for a maximum period of eight (?) hours per week.

Reasons:

Guarantees of the right to education are given priority. This stresses the guarantee nature of the article and cuts out the possibility of setting the two age limits at too low a level; the present text does not preclude this. The amendment also holds out the possibility of part-time compulsory education for young people in employment provided they are at least fifteen years old.

Article 37. Protection of young people

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions which suit their age.

Reasons:

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 37

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representing the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

1. The minimum age of admission to employment must not be lower than fifteen years, subject to exceptions for light work which shall be defined elsewhere and which is not harmful to the health, mental well-being or development of the child.
2. In accordance with Article 17 of the Revised European Social Charter, the Union shall work towards a situation where working conditions of persons under the age of 18 are in line with their development.

Reasons:

In the first place this amendment numbers the different parts of the article.

The wording of the first paragraph of the amendment has been brought more in line with Article 7(1) of the Revised European Social Charter (ESC). Accordingly, the phrase 'the minimum school-leaving age without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people, in particular those ensuring their preparation for work through vocational training' is replaced with 'fifteen years'. Preference has been given to a text closer to the Revised ESC than that of the Community Charter, because the Revised ESC is a legally binding instrument with an adequate supervisory mechanism which has already generated a respectable body of case law in respect of the 1961 ESC. It is advisable not to run counter to practice - the risk of which increases the more the wording departs from that of the Revised ESC.

Furthermore, the reference to 'the minimum school-leaving age' is not clear, because it can vary from one Member State to another. Stating the age of 15 ensures that a standard which is clear to everyone is laid down. The reference to rules on 'preparation for work through vocational training' is superfluous in the light of paragraph 2 of the amendment.

The purpose of the second paragraph of the Presidium's proposed text is to adapt labour legislation rules for working young persons to the requirements of their development and the needs of their vocational training. Here, too, a wording is proposed for the second paragraph which in terms of substance has the same effect as the Presidium's proposal but which is linked more clearly to the relevant provisions in the ESC. For the sake of brevity, the text of Article 7 of the Revised ESC is not included verbatim; instead, there is a reference to it.

The wording of the second paragraph ('...the Union shall work towards...') better puts across the nature of this Article, which is concerned with a principle, than the Presidium proposal.

2. Children and young people admitted to work have the right to working conditions which suit their age, protect their safety and health, and encourage the full development of their personality and of their physical and mental capacities.

Reasons:

The amendment also refers to children, and extends the protection in the second part with the essential notion of art. 17 of the RESC of a responsibility with respect to a healthy development of children and young persons..

This would be the appropriate place for a reference to the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, which has been ratified by all Member States; and ILO Conventions 182 and 138 dealing with the worst forms of Child Labour and Minimum Age.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 37. Protection of young people

Submitted by: Lord Goldsmith QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce the follow two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”:

The minimum age of employment must generally not be lower than the minimum age at which compulsory full-time schooling ends.

Young people under 18 years of age are entitled to working conditions which suit their age and to be protected against economic exploitation and any work likely to harm their safety, health or physical, mental, moral or social development or to jeopardise their education.

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

The right in Article 37 extends so far as is required by the relevant secondary legislation adopted by the Community under Article 137(1) of the Treaty establishing the European Community, subject to the limitations and derogations specified in that legislation and in any national measures adopted to give them effect.

Reasons:

I agree that it is important to protect the interests of young people in the workplace. It is very important to tie the Charter wording into the Young Workers Directive and I do not believe the Praesidium’s text goes far enough in this direction. It does not for example prevent the economic exploitation of young workers or the protection of their health and safety and needs to be strengthened. My amendment seeks to do this. The Praesidium text recognises the need for young people to be able to undertake work as part of vocational training and subject to limitations in the directive. This is covered through my part B text.

All workers have a right to protection against arbitrary termination of employment.

Reasons:

We support this proposal in principle, but this is not a classic fundamental right and can therefore be dealt with (or continue to be dealt with) elsewhere.

In view of the numerous interests which have to be weighed against one another in cases where employment is terminated, protection against termination of employment is not a matter which ought to be dealt with by instituting a fundamental right. In view of its complexity, it should be dealt with by secondary law instead.

As an alternative, it should be stressed that in order to ensure respect for human dignity, protection against arbitrary termination of employment is necessary.

The Article as drafted provides for a general and unqualified right which goes well beyond existing law. In principle, the UK accepts the need to protect workers against unjust terminations and has adopted legislation to implement protections including in the specific areas required by certain Directives, for example in the areas of acquired rights, health and safety at work, equal treatment, pregnancy and maternity and collective redundancies. But the text proposed goes well beyond the present legislation at EU level requiring protections in these specific instances and seeks to introduce a general right where none currently exists. If such legislation is to be introduced it should be done through the relevant part of the TEC (Article 137(3)) and discussed in that context.

Every worker has the right to information about the conditions applicable to his/her contract or employment relationship and to protection against unjustified, abusive, or discriminatory termination of employment. Pregnant workers and workers enjoying maternity and parental leave, as well as trade union and workers' representatives have the right to a temporary prohibition of termination or employment. Every worker has the right to protection of his/her claims in case of insolvency of his/her employer

The amendment broadens the article, by adding the right to information about the employment Contract, as contained in Directive 91/533 of October 1991, and in article 2,6 of the Revised Social Charter. This is necessary to be sure that the protection against unfair dismissal may function adequately.

In the original protection against unfair dismissal also "discriminatory" reasons for termination of employment have been added, as well as the prohibition of dismissal for certain categories of workers. For a more elaborate qualification of invalid vs. valid reasons of termination of employment, I propose to refer to ILO Convention 158.

Protection in case of insolvency has been added, and should be referred to RESC art 25, ILO convention 173, and EC Directive 80/987.

Article 38. Right of migrant workers to equal treatment

Third country nationals and their families working lawfully in the territory of the Member States are entitled to treatment not less favourable than that of European Union citizens in respect of working conditions and social security.

Reasons:

Article 38 takes over much of the wording of the Presidium's proposed Article 40 (Convent 34), with the additional phrases 'and their families' and 'and social security'. The protection of migrant workers' families is one of the key issues in this area. This is why families are explicitly referred to even in the title of the UN Convention relating to the protection of migrant workers¹. This convention also contains more extensive rights for migrant workers, such as the right to social security (Article 27 of the Convention on Migrant Workers). Failure to incorporate these two additions would mean that the European Union would fall behind international standards which have been achieved as a result of laborious negotiations.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: title of Article 39

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representing the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

Combining family and professional life

Reasons:

The title should be brought in line with the nature of the article which is a directive. Accordingly, the words 'right to' should be deleted from the title.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 39

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representing the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

The Union shall work towards a situation where all workers can combine their family and professional lives. To this end the Union shall take measures to ensure an entitlement to maternity which shall at least satisfy the requirements of Article 8 of the Revised European Social Charter and an entitlement to appropriate parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.

Reasons:

The wording of the two sentences ('The Union shall work towards a situation...' and '...the Union shall take measures...') better expresses the nature of this article, which is concerned with a principle, than the Praesidium text which refers to a 'right'.

Linking the duration of maternity leave to Article 8 of the Revised Social Charter guarantees a minimum period for such leave.

Proposed amendment to: Article 39. Right to reconcile family and professional life

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

1. All workers have the right to reconcile their family and professional lives (29 words deleted).
2. Work within the family looking after children or elderly persons shall be considered as an occupation engaged in for the benefit of society.

Reasons:

1. It is unnecessary to list the specific means (maternity leave, parental leave, etc.) of reconciling family and professional life. The statement of principle is sufficient.
2. This article should not, however, be viewed solely from the point of view of people engaging in an occupation. It should also take account of people working within a family.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 39. Right to reconcile family and professional life

Submitted by: Lord Goldsmith QC

Proposed text:

Delete “All workers have the right to reconcile their family and professional lives.” Amend to produce the following two-part text: Right to maternity and parental leave

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”:

Every woman has the right to maternity leave before and/or after childbirth and all workers have the right to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

The right in Article 39 is the right provided for in the provisions of Article 137 and of the relevant secondary legislation adopted by the Community, and is subject to the limitations and derogations specified in those provisions and in any national measures adopted to give them effect.

Reasons:

Protection in the fields of maternity and parental leave is important. However, the first sentence of this article is far too general and without foundation in existing EU legislation. There are currently no general rights recognising the right to reconcile family and professional life and their inclusion in this document is therefore unjustified and risks raising expectations which will not be met. My amendments seek to address these points.

The content of the right is again defined by the Part B text.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article 39: Right to reconcile family and professional life

Submitted by: Piero Melograni

Proposed text:

All workers have the right to reconcile their family and professional lives. This right includes in particular the right to protection of maternity before and after childbirth, with female workers being provided with working conditions appropriate to their condition, the right to maternity leave before and after childbirth and the right to parental leave inter alia in the event of adoption of a child.

Reasons:

The proposed wording includes in this article the right to protection of maternity, involving the provision of working conditions appropriate for workers who are pregnant, in accordance with Article 8 of the Revised European Social Charter. It also stipulates that maternity leave covers the period both prior to and after childbirth. Lastly, the replacement of the words 'following the birth or adoption of a child' with the words 'inter alia in the event of adoption of a child' breaks the direct temporal link between the granting of parental leave and the birth or adoption (under Directive 96/34, parents may take parental leave up until the child reaches eight years of age).

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 39

Submitted by: Einem/Holoubek

Proposed text:

All workers have the right to reconcile their family and professional lives. This right includes in particular the right to maternity leave before and (1 word deleted) after childbirth, the right to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child, and the right to carer's leave.

Reasons:

The word 'or', which leaves the question of whether the maternity leave should be granted before or after childbirth open, should be deleted. A suitable period before 'and' after the birth should be granted for the sake of the health of mother and child.

In addition to the rights contained in this article in the Presidency's version, a right to 'carer's leave' should also be specified. This right is one of the essential conditions for a family life based on partnership and for reconciling family and working life. From the point of view of the person needing care it is of fundamental importance that the care should be given by close family members. Carer's leave within the meaning of the proposed amendment covers care of close relatives in the case of acute illness that makes such care necessary. The necessity arises either from the seriousness of the illness or the particular needs of the family member, as in the case of a small child, for example.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 39

Submitted by: Prof. Dr Jürgen Meyer

Proposed text:

Article 39. Level of protection

- 1. No provision of this Charter may be interpreted as restricting the protection guaranteed by European and national law and international agreements and treaties, with particular regard to the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights.
- 2. For the purposes of interpreting the fundamental rights set out in this Charter, in particular economic and social rights, due account should be taken of those international agreements and treaties concluded by EU Member States.

Reasons:

Article 39(1) takes over the wording of the Presidium's proposal for Article H 4 (Convent 27), which is preferable to the present version (Article 49, Convent 34), in which the level of protection has been lowered by the introduction of the condition that all Member States must, for example, have ratified an international convention.

Article 39(2) takes due account of the criticism often made in the Convention that social rights should not be set out in too much detail and that the interpretation of the Charter should be given a dynamic character. On this basis, I am proposing a practical approach to the third pillar of my three-pillar model. Paragraph 2 goes further than the Presidium's proposal by putting forward provisions on the interpretation of the rights contained in the Charter. The international protection of fundamental and human rights must be seen as a global system which has become clearer and more binding in the last 50 years. The reference to internationally established standards makes it possible to choose concise and comprehensible expressions without losing in legal clarity. Moreover, the provisions on interpretation of the Charter take account of the restrictions which certain states have introduced in the form of reservations, provided these are not contrary to the Vienna Convention on the law of Treaties.

Clearly, Article 39 also applies to agreements and treaties which will be concluded in the future (future developments clause).

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 40. Rights of migrant workers to equal treatment

Submitted by: Lord Goldsmith QC

Proposed text:

Delete all.

Reasons:

The proposed draft right goes beyond existing rights. Whilst rights are enjoyed by the nationals of those countries which have entered into specifically negotiated association agreements with the European Union conferring those rights, there is no existing general right for third country nationals.

While the Community does have competence under Article 137(3) TEC to act in respect of "conditions of employment for third-country nationals legally residing in Community territory", this has not yet been exercised. The proposed Article 40 would therefore pre-empt the exercise of that power. If a general principle of equal treatment in employment is to be enshrined in Community law this should be done by means of a directive under Article 137(3) TEC.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 40: Right of migrant workers to equal treatment

Submitted by: Dr Ingo Friedrich, MEP, and Dr Peter Mombaur, MEP

Proposed text:

Delete.

Reasons:

In case of doubt, the concept ‘working conditions’ is likely to be interpreted broadly, and as a result might confer rights on third-country nationals equivalent to those enjoyed by EC workers pursuant to Article 39 of the EC Treaty. Under these circumstances, Article 40 might give rise both to rights of residence and to rights to equal social and fiscal privileges.

However, the EU does not have sufficient powers to confer such rights; at most, it can regulate certain ‘conditions of employment’ pursuant to Article 137(3) of the EC Treaty. Moreover, there is a danger that restrictions for third-country nationals under the Treaties and association agreements might be rendered ineffective.

From the systematic point of view, moreover, a fundamental right which is conferred only on third-country nationals has no place in a Charter of Fundamental Rights which assigns rights either to everyone or to citizens of the Union.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONProposed amendment to: Article 40. Right of migrant workers to equal treatment*Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP*Proposed text:*Delete this article.*Reasons:

The same reasons as for the amendment to Article 33. This article should come under national law or, at most, form part of a directive, but should certainly not be included in a Charter of fundamental rights.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 40

Submitted by: Jürgen Gnauck, Minister of Federal and European Affairs, Thuringia

Proposed text:

Deleted.

Reasons:

There are several arguments against the Presidium's proposal. In the first place this clause does not seem 'worthy' of a Charter: secondary legislative provisions suffice. Secondly, existing differences in rules should not be undermined by a clause on a fundamental right. The risk is that restrictions on third-country nationals may be undermined by treaties and association agreements.

Thirdly, the Charter should not include any rights granted only to third-country nationals. A fundamental right granted only to third-country nationals has no place in a charter of fundamental rights concerned with rights for all or with rights for Union citizens.

Moreover, the wording leaves open the question of what rights might be granted to stateless persons from third countries. If the aim is to prevent 'wage dumping', the Charter is not the appropriate tool.

Submitted by: Einem/Holoubek

Proposed text:

Discrimination in respect of working conditions (particularly as regards wages, the retirement pension, social security, accommodation and training) against third-country nationals working lawfully in the territory of the Member States as opposed to employees who are nationals of an EU Member State shall be forbidden.

Every employee shall be guaranteed the right to equal pay for equal work.

Reasons:

The 'non-discrimination in respect of working conditions', to use the words of the Presidency's statement of reasons, which this article is intended to provide should also be expressed in its wording. Like comparable prohibitions, this should also be worded as a prohibition of discrimination. It is further suggested that the scope of this prohibition of discrimination in respect of working conditions should be clarified by an explanation of the term 'working conditions'.

The proposed new second paragraph ensures that the central tenet of the right of migrant workers to equal treatment, namely the right to receive equal pay for equal work, is guaranteed. Since Article 22(3) of the Charter provides this right in the context of equal treatment for men and women, it must again be stated expressly in the context of the rights of migrant workers.

Reasons:

This amendment is essentially editorial in nature and is largely a question of translation. For example, the English term 'lawfully' should be translated by 'rechtmatig' and the English concept 'working conditions' by 'arbeidsvoorwaarden'.

Furthermore, the statement of reasons for this article should indicate that it ties in with article 19, introduction and fourth paragraph, of the Revised European Social Charter.

Reasons:

This Article is excessive in relation to our assignment, as it has relative dimensions (e.g., how do you guarantee “a decent existence” – and what is it?). To include such a right in the Charter risks making the fundamental and universal rights relative.

The means to achieve the political goal (to abolish dependence due to causes like maternity, old age, illness, and unemployment) should not become blocked through structures based on experiences only from the industrial society. This is not the place to solve these problems of poverty and the door for new alternatives must be kept open.

Proposed amendment to: Article 41: Social security and social assistance

Submitted by: Dr Ingo Friedrich, MEP, and Dr Peter Mombaur, MEP

Proposed text:

Delete.

Reasons:

We support this proposal in principle, but this is not a classic or an independent fundamental right and can therefore be dealt with (or continue to be dealt with) elsewhere.

Paragraph 1's objective of ensuring that Member States provide protection against the well-known social risks is unexceptionable. However, the EU does not possess full competence, its powers being limited to workers (Article 137(3), first indent). Moreover, there is a danger that this provision might impose excessive constraints on the scope for the adoption of social measures by legislatures in that it could be interpreted as an institutional guarantee of traditional social insurance systems. Article 46(2) of the EC Treaty, which is confined to 'coordination', does not allow this.

Paragraph 2 requires provision to be made for social assistance and housing benefit. Here too, there is no obvious legal basis enabling the EU to lay down provisions concerning such entitlements. The provision is also superfluous as an aid to interpretation and application for the EU and its institutions, since the requirement to provide minimum means of subsistence is already covered by the obligation to respect human dignity.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 41. Social security and social assistance

Submitted by: Lord Goldsmith QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce the following two-part text: Social security and social advantages

- For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”:

Workers who are nationals of a Member State who reside in another Member States, and members of their families, have the right to the same social security benefits, social advantages and access to health care as nationals of that State.

- For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

The rights in Article 41 are the rights provided for in the provisions of Article 42 of the Treaty establishing the European Community, and of the relevant secondary legislation adopted by the Community and is subject to the limitations and derogations specified in those provisions and in any national measure to give them effect.

Reasons:

Article 41 as drafted purports to impose new obligations on Member States. Further, it deals with matters which are essentially matters of national competence and therefore outside the intended scope of the Charter. The requirement to “guarantee a decent existence to anyone lacking sufficient resources” could entail new rights of uncertain meaning for Member States, with potentially significant financial implications for them.

My proposal, however, gives effect to important rights, deriving them from the Union for the nationals of Member States to enjoy social security benefits and advantages when in other Member States. It is convenient to deal at the same time with access to health care on the same basis.

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Provision shall be made in accordance with each Member State's rules for social benefits providing protection in the event of maternity, illness, dependence, disability or old age and in the event of unemployment or incapacity to resume work.

Reasons:

The Praesidium's proposal draws a distinction between social security and social assistance which would seem to be based essentially on the different types of funding (contributions or tax) but which may vary according to each Member State. It therefore seems preferable to reduce this article to a single general paragraph.

Proposed text:

Article 41. Social welfare

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 41

Submitted by: Gunnar Jansson, Tuija Brax and Paavo Nikula

Proposed text:

Article 41. The right to social security and to guaranteed means of subsistence

1. Everyone has the right to social security and guaranteed means of subsistence. Social security benefits shall be provided in accordance with each Member State's legislation. Everyone shall be guaranteed the right to basic means of subsistence in the event of unemployment, illness, incapacity for work or old age and on account of the birth of a child or loss of the breadwinner.

2. Everyone who cannot attain the security required for a decent existence has the right to the essential means of subsistence and maintenance.

Reasons:

The amendment is inspired by Articles 12 and 13 of the revised European Social Charter and by the European Code of Social Security. This principle should be applied in accordance with national legislation.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 41

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representing the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

- 1. The Union shall take steps to ensure that persons legally resident or working in the Union are entitled to appropriate social security benefits in the event of maternity, illness, death or old age, inability to work and unemployment, which shall satisfy the standards laid down in the Revised European Code of Social Security.
- 2. The Union shall take steps to ensure that persons legally resident in the Union and who, for reasons beyond their control, do not have the requisite resources for a decent existence receive appropriate social and medical assistance and/or housing benefit.

Reasons:

The proposed text creates greater clarity concerning the type of persons who can claim appropriate social security and social assistance. The reference to national legislation and practice has been deleted since the provisions of the Charter are directed essentially towards the Union. There is therefore no need for a reference to national practice. The requisite policy area in this respect is created by the addition of the word 'appropriate'.

In the first paragraph addition of the last clause clarifies the level of the social benefits, since they must at least satisfy the agreement in question which was concluded within the Council of Europe and which contains minimum standards.

The following remarks concern a list of the risks to be covered by social security. The English text uses the term 'dependence'. This is not easy to translate into Dutch. The Dutch term 'afhankelijkheid' is not correct. On the assumption that this is what is intended, the proposed text therefore uses the Dutch word 'overlijden'. The amendment also proposes replacing the term 'unemployment' with the term 'inability to work and unemployment' because the rules on these sorts of risk differ and it would therefore be better to bring them under one denominator.

The proposed text of the second paragraph reflects customary practice in the Member States and is in line with what the Annex to the Revised European Social Charter (ESC) has to say about the scope of most provisions of the Revised ESC, including the right to social and medical assistance in Article 13(1).

In addition to social assistance and housing benefit, this clause includes medical assistance, not least to tie in more closely with the abovementioned Article 13(1) of the Revised ESC.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article: 41(1)

Submitted by: Ernest M.H. Hirsch Ballin, representing the First Chamber of the States-General of the Netherlands

Proposed text:

Any person lawfully employed within the Union shall enjoy protection in the event of maternity, illness, dependence or old age and in the event of unemployment.

Reasons:

This article is not concerned with an exclusive competency of the Member States, as the existing text suggests. Furthermore, this right is granted to non-Union citizens, too.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 41

Submitted by: Jo Leinen

Proposed text:

Article 41: Social security

1. In accordance with each Member State's rules, everyone has the right to social security and access to social services which ensure a dignified existence, particularly in the event of maternity, illness, dependence or old age and in the event of unemployment.

Reasons:

The right to social benefits should consistently be formulated as an individual right. A few stylistic abridgements are proposed and clearer reference is made to the dignity of the human person as referred to in Article 1. The right to housing is included in a separate article in accordance with the general consensus within the Convention and by analogy with Prof. Meyer's proposal.

Proposed amendment to: Article 41. Social security and social assistance

Submitted by: Marie-Madeleine Dieulangard

Proposed text:

Translator’s note: the proposed amendment to the second paragraph does not affect the English text.

Reasons:

The aim is to ensure a higher level of protection than that implied by the existing wording of the text.

Proposed text:

1. Everyone is entitled, in accordance with each Member State's rules, to social security benefits providing adequate protection in the event of maternity, illness, dependence, or old age and in the event of unemployment.

Reasons:

This amendment seeks to restore an intermediate drafting proposal whose wording was more satisfactory and to include a minimum specification - ('adequate') - regarding the level of protection to be guaranteed in the five areas of social security

Proposed amendment to: Article 41. Social security and social assistance

(This article should be split up into three new articles)

Submitted by: Ben Fayot (Chamber of Deputies, Luxembourg)

Proposed text:

Article 41. Social security

Social security benefits shall be guaranteed in accordance with each Member State's rules in order to provide individual protection in the event of maternity, illness, dependence or old age and in the event of unemployment.

Reasons:

It is important to individualise social security rights, especially in the case of women whose rights sometimes only exist through their husband.

Proposed amendment to Article 41(1): Social security and social assistance

Submitted by: Piero Melograni

Proposed text:

Delete 'in accordance with each Member State's rules'.

Reasons:

The words deleted apply to almost all of the rights guaranteed by the Charter and their substance would be made implicit by means of the insertion in the general clauses of a reference to the subsidiarity principle (see the proposed amendment to Article 46).

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

First proposed amendment to: Article 41

Submitted by: Einem/Holoubek

Proposed text:

1. Provision shall be made in accordance with each Member State's rules for social security benefits providing protection in the event of maternity, illness, accident, dependence, disability or old age and in the event of unemployment or invalidity.

Reasons:

In Article 41, first paragraph, it is proposed that the group of cases in which the provision of social security benefits must be provided for is extended to cover accident, disability and invalidity. All three situations are part of the recognised standard provision in the Member States and should therefore be binding provisions particularly vis-à-vis the European Union. Accident and invalidity, furthermore, are also mentioned in Article 4 of Regulation 1408.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 41

Submitted by: Gabriel Cisneros Laborda

Proposed text:

It should have been made clear in these and other articles of similar content – which we shall not amend explicitly so as to avoid repetition – that they have the character of guiding principles or, better still, a separate chapter should have been reserved for them.

The following wording is proposed for paragraph 1: ‘Provision shall be made in accordance with each Member State’s rules for social security benefits providing protection in the event of maternity, illness, dependence, old age or disability and in the event of unemployment.’

Reasons:

See the reasons for the amendment to Article 31 (first paragraph).

The intention in amending paragraph 1 is to cover the situation of people with disabilities who do not meet the conditions for being classed as dependant but require benefits. This addition will not duplicate Article 43, since disability involves different aspects of social and vocational integration.

Submitted by: Prof. Daniel Tarschys, Sweden

Proposed text:

Retain para 1.

1. Rephrase para 2 to read: '... in accordance with each Member State's rules for... '

Reasons:

Whereas a reference is made in the first paragraph, it is left out in the second. For the sake of clarity and consequence, I suggest that the reference be made in both paragraphs.

Alternatively, paras 1 and 2 could be merged in order to ensure that Member States' rules apply in all situations.

I would also suggest that a reference be made to the revised European Social Charter, Articles 12 and 14 in the 'Statement of reasons'.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 41

Submitted by: Jürgen Gnauck, Minister of Federal and European Affairs, Thuringia

Proposed text:

Article 41. Social security and social assistance

- 1. Provision shall be made in accordance with each Member State's legal rules for social security benefits providing protection in the event of maternity, illness, dependence or old age and in the event of unemployment.
- 2. Provision shall be made in accordance with each Member State's legal rules for social assistance and housing benefit in order to guarantee a decent existence to anyone lacking sufficient resources.

Reasons:

The wording 'in accordance with each Member State's legal rules' makes clear - as the Presidium's Statement of Reasons says - that national legislation is meant, and not Community rules which merely take account of the peculiarities of individual Member States. This clarification is particularly necessary in paragraph 2.

There is no need to refer to 'housing benefit' since this is merely a sub-category of 'social assistance'.

Finally, it is important to leave untouched in the scope of paragraph 2 the principle of individual responsibility and to treat the social benefit referred to in it as a subsidiary benefit. It is also necessary to make clear that although individual Member States can certainly guarantee the legal framework for this to be effective, they cannot in every case guarantee the actual - in particular the economic - framework.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 41

Proposed text:

Article 41. Social security and social assistance

1. Provision shall be made in accordance with each Member State's rules for social security benefits providing protection in the event of maternity, illness, dependence or old age and in the event of unemployment.
2. Provision shall be made for social assistance ~~and housing benefit~~ in order to guarantee a decent existence to anyone lacking sufficient resources.

Reasons:

The concept of housing benefit should not be included in Paragraph 2 because it describes only one form of social assistance.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article 41: Social security and social assistance

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, representative of the Belgian Government, and Karel DE GUCHT and Roger LALLEMAND, representatives of the Belgian Parliament

Proposed text:

2. Provision shall be made for social assistance, housing benefit and assistance in obtaining adequate food in order to guarantee a decent existence to anyone lacking sufficient resources.

Reasons:

The right to adequate food is included in an international code drawn up following the World Food Summit held in Rome in 1996. This right is referred to in Article 11 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. Furthermore, Article 24 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child stipulates that States Parties must combat malnutrition in children. The international code is in the process of being ratified. The inclusion of this right, which forms an integral part of the right to an adequate standard of living, is intended to ensure that everyone may live in conditions respectful of their human dignity. It is inadmissible for anyone in today's single market to be suffering from hunger.

Adequate food means a healthy diet which meets the nutritional needs of the individual. This right plays a part in eradicating poverty and meeting fundamental needs.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONProposed amendment to: Article 41*Submitted by: Ieke van den Burg*Proposed text:*Title: Right to social protection:

Everyone has the right to social protection, including an adequate level of social security benefits, amongst others in the event of maternity, illness, dependence or old age and unemployment.

Any person who is without adequate resources, especially if he or she is unable to gain access to paid employment, has the right to a minimum income enabling him/her to live in dignity.

Everyone has the right of access to high-quality services and to protection against poverty and social exclusion.

Reasons:

Social protection is a broader concept, covering different elements of social security and social assistance. Under this title even the articles on healthcare and housing may be merged in the final text.

In the content of the article the right to a minimum income is introduced, being a more general and more advanced and modern formulation than social assistance and specific benefits. Access to high quality services, and protection against poverty and social exclusion is added.

Reference should not only be made to national legislation, but at least to articles 12, 13, 14 and 30 of the Revised Social Charter. It may be considered to also refer to relevant ILO conventions in this field.

2. Social security entitlements acquired in one Member State shall be maintained in all the other Member States.
3. Every individual lacking sufficient resources has the right to social assistance and housing benefit enabling him or her to lead a decent life.

Reasons:

The text has been recast so as to place the emphasis on the beneficiaries of the right, as is the case throughout the Charter. Furthermore, the 'maintenance principle', which is enshrined in Community law, has been included in paragraph 1.

Proposed amendment to: Article 41

Submitted by: Prof. Dr Jürgen Meyer

Proposed text:

Article 41. Limitation of guaranteed rights

- 1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority. The actual substance of those rights and freedoms must be respected. Subject to the principle of proportionality, any limitation must remain within the limits which are necessary for the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society and which are compatible with the nature of those rights.
- 2. Nothing in this Charter may be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms set forth herein or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for in this Charter.

Reasons:

Article 41(1) takes over much of the wording of the Presidium's proposal (Article 47, Convent 34) and paragraph 2 is identical to the proposal for Article 50 (Convent 34). In paragraph 1 the phrase 'which are compatible with the nature of those rights' has been added to the Presidium's proposal. This is intended to define the limitation more precisely and is taken from Article 4 of the ICESCR.

All employees and their entitled dependants shall be entitled to receive an old-age pension guaranteeing them an appropriate, independent standard of living.

Reasons:

In view of the special significance of elderly people in today's society, there should be a systematic link between the provisions on social security and social protection and a provision on the right of elderly people to self-determination and the social protection which will make it possible. Proposed text:

Delete all (but see amendment to Article 41 above)

Reasons:

There is no general right to health care in the ECHR or the Treaties. These are matters essentially for national competence and I am not persuaded that they have a place in a Charter principally addressed to the EU Institutions in the exercise of their competences.

However there are EC Regulations giving citizens of one Member State social security entitlements (including health care) while working in another Member State. These are important rights and covered by my amendments to Article 41.

Proposed text:

The public authorities shall, in terms to be specified by the law of each Member State, organise and supervise public health provision, including prevention and medical care.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 42 Health protection

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

The Union shall promote improvements in public health, the prevention of human illness and diseases and the obviating of sources of danger to human health by ensuring a high level of human health protection in the definition and implementation of all Union policies and activities.

Reasons:

The above version is derived from Article 152 of the EC Treaty, and seeks to avoid raising unrealistic expectations that the Union will act to promote facilities such as access to medical-care when it will in practice be unable to do so.

The foregoing is consistent with the more general wording used in Article 12 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.

Article 11 of the Revised European Social Charter also refers, not to access to medical care, but to the promotion of health and preventing ill-health, diseases and accidents.

1. The Union shall promote improvements in public health, prevention of human diseases and disorders and the elimination of hazards to human health;
2. The Union shall take measures to ensure that everyone who is lawfully resident within the Union has access to health care.

Reasons:

The proposed text is more comprehensive and less noncommittal than the text proposed by the Praesidium; access to care, in particular, should be more strongly guaranteed: untreated patients may constitute a public health hazard, including in other countries.

Proposed amendment to: Article 42 HEALTH PROTECTION

Submitted by: JORDI SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

Everyone shall have access to medical care and prophylactic measures (rest deleted).

Reasons:

There are two reasons for deleting the words ‘in accordance with each Member State’s rules’. The first one is that if everyone has the right to such access, it will be in one of the Member States and the medical care and prophylactic measures which the individual receives will therefore be those of that particular Member State. The second reason is that including the words ‘in accordance with each Member State’s rules’ would allow one or more Member States to have weaker rules than the others and not to be under any obligation under EU law to improve its (or their) standard of care.

Reasons:

Naturally, measures to promote the disabled's' possibilities should be developed further. This is an important national task.

However, the work in the Convent aims to create a Charter at the highest level in the Union's legal hierarchy. There is thus no possibility of including specific references to every secondary regulation.

Instead, a prohibition of discrimination on any ground, including that of disability, should be - and already is - included in the Charter in Articles 1 and, above all, 22 in Convent 28.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 43. The disabled

Proposed text:

Delete all

Reasons:

The United Kingdom has adopted advanced legislation (the Disability Discrimination Act 1995) designed to protect persons with disabilities from unjustified discrimination in the workplace and in other contexts, and to require employers to make reasonable adjustments to help accommodate disabled workers. I understand this goes beyond rights in some other Member States. However, there is no existing European law. Proposals are currently under discussion for a framework directive under Article 13 which will include combating discrimination on the grounds of disability in relation to employment, occupation and vocational training.

The issues in this area are important, complex, and require detailed consideration and sensitive handling. This Charter is intended to state the restrictions, deriving from existing rights, on the legislation and acts of EU Institutions acting within their competences. I do not think it is appropriate for the Charter to attempt to define rights which ought to be accorded through carefully formulated national legislation drafted to take account of any Community action under Article 13 TEC. The inadequacy of the proposed Article only goes to demonstrate this.

Reasons:

We support this proposal in principle, but this is not a classic fundamental right and can therefore be dealt with (or continue to be dealt with) elsewhere.

The proposed formulation suggests a competence which the Union does not possess.

We endorse the objective underlying the formulation, namely to create equivalent living conditions for the disabled. However, we have reservations about this specific clause in the context of a charter of fundamental rights. The proposal goes far beyond the ESC/EC Treaty, so that it might arouse expectations which cannot be fulfilled. Moreover, the relationship of this provision to Article 22 (1) and (3) is unclear. There it is laid down that the EU will seek to eliminate inequalities (Convention 28, Charte 4284). The same matters seem to be dealt with here.

In addition, if this clause were intended to confer individual rights, extremely far-reaching entitlements might be derived from it which could not be fulfilled on budgetary grounds.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 43

Submitted by: Jo Leinen

Proposed text:

Article 43: The right of disabled people to social and vocational integration

All disabled people, irrespective of the cause and nature of their disability, have the right to social and vocational integration. To this end, measures may be taken, in particular, to ensure that all disabled people have full access to the rights guaranteed in this Charter.

Reasons:

The Praesidium's draft concerning this right was inadequate, both in formulation and in substance. Organisations representing the disabled (the European Disability Forum at the hearing on 27 April 2000) pointed out that, at all events, the expression 'disabled people' was preferable. Moreover, the rights referred to here ought to be clearly formulated as individual rights. The second sentence is based on the proposals of the European Disability Forum but without incorporating the detailed list of fields in which special measures are possible and necessary. The third sentence reflects the fundamental problem that it may possibly be necessary to take special measures (for example with regard to the provision of information) to afford disabled people access to the rights covered by the Charter.

Proposed amendment to: Article 43. The disabled

Submitted by: Prof. Daniel Tarschys, Sweden

Proposed text:

Rephrase the title to read: 'Article 43. Persons with disabilities' and replace the current draft text by the following: 'Provision shall be made for the independence, social and vocational integration and participation in the life of the community of persons with disabilities.'

Reasons:

The term 'persons with disabilities' is the wording used in all international documents today, including the European Social Charter. My proposal is based on Article 15 of the revised Social Charter which in turn is inspired by the United Nations Standard Rules on the Equalisation of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities (adopted by the General Assembly in 1993). Article 13 of the EC Treaty authorises the adoption of positive measures to prevent discrimination on grounds of disability.

Reasons:

We support this proposal in principle, but this is not a classic fundamental right and can therefore be dealt with (or continue to be dealt with) elsewhere.

The substance of the Charter must be confined to rights which can be invoked at law. Accordingly, mere definitions of objectives and programmatic statements should not be included. Otherwise, the public will be disappointed in its expectations of the Charter. In the case of environmental protection, no precedent should be set, and the provisions of the EC Treaty are deemed adequate. Moreover, if objectives are set there is a danger that the CJEC might interpret them as individual rights, should the Charter become legally binding, and the legal and budgetary consequences of this are unpredictable.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 44 Environmental protection

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

The Union shall ensure the protection and preservation of a clean and healthy environment and shall promote the improvement of the quality of the environment, taking into account the principle of sustainable development.

Reasons:

The following can be stated with regard to the concluding part of the above sentence: 'Sustainable development' is one of the principal objectives of EU policy (Article 2 of the EU Treaty and Article 2 of the EC Treaty), It entails that the environment at human disposal must only be used so as to ensure that succeeding generations can continue to enjoy equivalent use of it. 'Prudent and rational utilisation of natural resources' (version proposed by the Praesidium) is an integral part thereof, but does not cover it completely. The principle of sustainable development has been enshrined in international law by way in particular of the 1993 UN Conference on the Environment and Development (UNCED) in Rio de Janeiro and consolidated into the case law of the International Court of Justice. It is precisely because that terminology has become common international property that preference should be given to using it here. The right of all present and future generations to live in a healthy and clean environment was further confirmed in 1998 in Article 1 of the ECE Convention on Access to Information, Public Participation in Decision-making and Access to Justice in Environmental Matters (Aarhus Convention).

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 44. Environmental Protection

Submitted by: Lord Goldsmith QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce the following two-part text:

- For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”:

Everyone has the right of access to environmental information, and to participate in environmental decision making.

- For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

The rights in Article 44 extend so far as is required by the relevant secondary legislation adopted by the Community under Article 175 of the Treaty Establishing the European Community, subject to the limitations and derogations specified in that legislation and in any national measures adopted to give them effect.

Reasons:

Rather than including statements of policy as the proposed Article does, I propose a reference to the important existing rights of individuals under EU legislation. The policy objective of the Union remains as stated under Article 174 of the Treaty and need not be restated.

The definition of these rights under Part B is, as always, essential.

Proposed text: Article 44 to read:

Article 44. Right to a healthy environmental

1. Every individual has the right to live in a healthy, clean environment, and a duty to safeguard the quality of the environment for present and future generations.
2. The Union shall ensure that the environment is protected and used in ways that do not conflict with the interests of society and that enable the quality of the environment to be protected and improved, health to be protected and natural resources to be used in a prudent and rational manner.

Reasons:

The first paragraph establishes the fact that every individual has a right and a duty in relation to the environment. The second recasts the article, laying down the action to be taken by the Union with a view to implementing the right to a healthy environment.

Everyone has the right to a clean and healthy environment. Union policies shall ensure environmental protection, which involves preserving, protecting and improving the quality of the environment, protecting human health and prudent and rational utilisation of natural resources.

Reasons:

We are drafting a Charter of Fundamental Rights. Wherever possible, its provisions should therefore be couched in terms of 'rights'.

The right which we propose is already recognised as such, inter alia, in the Spanish and Belgian constitutions. Article 1 of the Aarhus Convention, which has been signed by the Community and all 15 Member States, likewise recognises 'the right of every person of present and future generations to live in an environment adequate to his or her health and well-being'.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article 44: Environmental protection

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, representative of the Belgian Government, and Karel DE GUCHT and Roger LALLEMAND, representatives of the Belgian Parliament

Proposed text:

Every person of present and future generations has the right to live in an environment adequate to his or her health and well-being. To that end, the European Union shall ensure a high level of environmental protection, which involves preserving, protecting and improving the quality of the environment, protecting human health and prudent and rational utilisation of natural resources.

Reasons:

The first sentence is copied from Article 1 of the Aarhus Convention on access to information, public participation in decision-making and access to justice in environmental matters, which has been signed by the 15 Member States. Since the Stockholm Declaration of 1972 the right to a healthy environment has been included, inter alia, in the constitutions of a large number of States (including Belgium) and the Treaty establishing the European Community (Articles 6 and 174). In its report on the drafting of a European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights (A5-0064/2000, p. 8) and the resolutions it has adopted (report by Claudia Roth, 1997), Parliament clearly emphasised the importance of adopting such a right.

The reference to a high level of protection is justified by the wording of Article 95 (ex Article 100a) of the EC Treaty, which stipulates that 'The Commission, in its proposals (...) concerning (...) environmental protection (...) will take as a base a high level of protection'. It should therefore be included here.

Submitted by: Einem/Holoubek

Proposed text:

Union policies shall ensure a high level of environmental protection, which involves preserving, protecting and improving the quality of the environment, protecting human health and prudent and rational utilisation of natural resources.

Reasons:

Like Article 174(2) of the EC Treaty, the Charter must stress that the Community must provide a high level of environmental protection. There is no discernible reason to deviate from Article 174(2) of the EC Treaty.

Proposed text:

Article 44. Environmental protection

~~Union policies shall ensure environmental protection, which involves preserving, protecting and improving the quality of the environment, protecting human health and prudent and rational utilisation of natural resources.~~

Reasons:

It seems desirable to harmonise Articles 44 and 45 as regards the use of the phrase ‘high level of protection’, since individuals have a very strong interest in a high level of protection in the field of environmental protection as well.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 44 (CONVENTION 34)

Submitted by: Hans-Peter MARTIN

Proposed text:

Article 44. Environmental protection

Union policies shall ensure environmental protection, which involves in particular preserving, protecting and improving the quality of the environment, protecting human health and sparing, sustainable and rational utilisation of natural resources.

Reasons:

The preamble to the Treaty on European Union refers to the principle of sustainable development. There should be no regression from this. The mention of the principle of sustainability is also necessary in order not to undermine the Community's negotiating position and arguments in bilateral and multilateral trade relations and conflicts in which reference is made to international environmental agreements (for example under the aegis of the WTO). In this regard the European Union is also assured of wide support from European public opinion.

The other conceptual corrections are intended to indicate that the list of fields of environmental protection is not complete and to stress more clearly that natural resources should be used in an environmentally sound manner.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 44

2. Everyone shall be guaranteed the opportunity to influence decision-making concerning their environment.

Reasons:

The aim is to increase the element of responsibility and thereby stress the fact that protection of nature and of other aspects of the environment is based on the inherent value of nature and on the fact that a right is at stake here which is indivisibly vested in all human beings, including future generations. Broad cooperation is needed among various parties in order to safeguard this right. This also requires that everyone should have the right to participate in decision-making concerning their own environment.

Submitted by: Dr Erling Olsen, Danish Government representative

Proposed text:

I propose a new paragraph 2, as follows:

Everyone shall be guaranteed the right of access to information on the environment and public participation in environmental decision-making processes.

Reasons:

The right of free access to information on the environment is based on Directive 90/313/EEC on the freedom of access to information on the environment, and on the Convention on citizens' environmental rights, the Århus Convention on access to information, public participation in decision-making processes and access to justice in environmental matters, to which the Community acceded in June 1998. The objective of the Convention is to assist in safeguarding the right of every person in this and coming generations to live in an acceptable environment for his or her health and wellbeing by guaranteeing everyone the right to access to information on the environment and public participation in decision-making on environmental matters.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Submitted by: Hans-Peter MARTIN

Proposed text:

Article 45. Consumer protection

Consumers have the right to expect that Union policies will ensure a high level of protection as regards the health, safety and interests of consumers. Account shall be taken of the precautionary principle.

Reasons:

The mention of the precautionary principle is essential in order not to undermine the Community's negotiating position and arguments in bilateral and multilateral trade relations and conflicts (for example with the USA concerning hormone-treated beef or genetically modified organisms). The European Union has always invoked the precautionary principle in such conflicts, which has been politically and economically expensive for it but has been widely supported by European public opinion, and has also defined this principle in a communication of its own (COM(2000) 1). This non-discriminatory basic principle of the Community's consumer policy should therefore be laid down explicitly in the Charter for the sake of the credibility of its external economic policy. Otherwise there is a danger that the absence of a basis for it in the Charter may be used against the Community in legal proceedings connected with trade disputes.

By analogy with other articles, the introductory active formulation is intended to stress linguistically as well that it is consumers in whom an individual right is vested here.

Legal bases and other grounds for the precautionary principle can be found in Community law and case law, in political guidelines of the Community and in international law: e.g. in Art. 174(2) of the EC Treaty (environmental protection), Art. 95(3) of the EC Treaty (health, safety, environmental protection and consumer protection), the judgment given by the Court of Justice of the European Communities on 5 May 1998 concerning BSE (Cases C-157/96 and C-180/96, paras. 99 et seq.), a judgment given by the Court of First Instance on 16 July 1998 concerning consumer protection (Case T-199/96), the decision of the President of the Court of First Instance of 20 June 1999 (Case T-70/99), various communications from the European Commission and resolutions of the European Parliament, a Council Resolution of 13 April 1999 addressed to the Commission, the UNCED Rio Declaration of 1992 (15th principle), the preamble to the Biodiversity Convention of 1992 and Article 3 ('Principles') of the Convention on Climate Change of 1992.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 45. Consumer protection

Submitted by: Marie-Madeleine Dieulangard

Proposed text:

Reword the article to read as follows: 'Union policies, which shall embody the precautionary principle, shall ensure a high level of protection as regards the health, safety and interests of consumers'.

Reasons:

The introduction of measures to guarantee consumer protection is conditional on the prior application of this essential principle.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

First proposed amendment to: Article 45

Submitted by: Einem/Holoubek

Proposed text:

A high level of consumer protection, which includes in particular the protection of their health, safety and economic interests, shall be ensured by the Union's policies. In order to guarantee the rights of consumers to information and education, the Union shall promote the formation of associations to protect consumers' interests.

Reasons:

The wording of this article should not deviate from that of Article 153(1) of the EC Treaty or give the misleading impression that the obligations arising from Article 153(1) of the EC Treaty have been toned down. It is therefore proposed that the wording of Article 153(1) should be adhered to more closely, and particularly that the founding of organisations to protect consumer interests should be specifically mentioned.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 45

Submitted by: Rodotà, Paciotti and Manzella

Proposed text: Article 45 to read:

Article 45. Consumers

- 1. Every individual has the right to goods and services of a quality that will ensure a high level of protection for their health and safety, with due respect for the principle of sustainability and the interests of future generations.
- 2. Consumers have the right to comprehensive information on the quality of goods and services and to advertising that is not misleading and that meets the criteria of transparency and truthfulness.

Reasons:

The article has been recast in line with the principles that underpin European Union policy.

Submitted by: José Barros Moura and Maria Eduarda Azevedo, Members of the Portuguese National Assembly

Proposed text:

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 45

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice Dehousse, MEP and substitute Member of the Convention

Proposed text: Article 45 to read:

1. Everyone has the right to safe products and safe services.
2. Consumer safety entails inter alia the provision of comprehensive, accurate and comprehensible information on the nature of products sold and services provided to the public.
3. The Member States and, by default or where the law so provides, the Union, shall take the necessary steps to establish and enforce such safety standards.

Reasons:

Over recent years there have been so many lapses in the protection of consumer safety and those lapses and their repercussions have become so serious that the Charter must clearly and forcefully affirm a right which is now less unquestionable than it was in the past and which is likely to come under renewed threat in the future.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed Article 45(4) (new)

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice Dehousse, MEP and substitute Member of the Convention

Proposed text: Take over the proposed amendment by Mrs Berès, Mrs Paciotti and Mrs van den Burg on services of general interest, and add the following:

Everyone must have access to services of general interest such as water and energy distribution and postal and telephone services.

Reasons:

The provisions of Article 16 of the EC Treaty and the reference made therein to 'the place occupied by services of general economic interest in the shared values of the Union as well as their role in promoting social and territorial cohesion' and the fact that 'the Community and the Member States, each within their respective powers and within the scope of application of this Treaty, shall take care that such services operate on the basis of principles and conditions which enable them to fulfil their missions' fully justify the inclusion of this provision in the Charter.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 45

Submitted by: Jens-Peter Bonde

Proposed text:

Nothing in this treaty shall be interpreted as restricting or undermining human rights and fundamental freedoms recognised, in their respective fields of application, by the Member States' constitutions as interpreted by the Member States' courts, international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights.

Reasons:

It is important for there to be a reference to the case law of the European Court of Human Rights where rights are concerned which stem from the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights. This is the only way of ensuring that future interpretation of the Charter is consonant with the way rights are interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights.

We also need to ensure that the Charter does not limit the rights flowing from the international agreements individually acceded to by the Member States. There can be no question of their being only agreements to which all Member States are party, as this would encroach on the Member States' sovereign right individually to be party to international agreements.

Article 45a. Right of access to services of general interest

Everyone has the right to free and equal access to services of general interest.

Reasons:

This amendment is based on Article 16 of the EC Treaty, which specifically mentions the role of services of general interest in the shared values of the Union. The purpose of the amendment is to make it clear that, where services of general interest exist, people should have free and equal access to them, without prejudging whether they should be public or private or whether they should be free of charge

Proposed Article : Right to a universal service

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, representative of the Belgian Government, and Karel DE GUCHT and Roger LALLEMAND, representatives of the Belgian Parliament

Proposed text:

Everyone shall have a right to high-quality services of general interest in all areas that have a bearing on quality of life and sustainable development and, in general, on respect for fundamental rights. The provision of services of general interest shall be based on the principles of equality of access, universality, continuity, democratic control and transparency.

Reasons:

The Member States must ensure that citizens are able to enjoy the rights set out in the Charter, such as education, medical care and legal aid. The existence of structures enabling them to do so, namely services of general interest, must therefore be guaranteed.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 45

Every individual has the right to services of general interest that provide the facilities required to guarantee an appropriate quality of life and access to employment. The provision of services of general interest shall be based on the principles of equal access, universality, continuity and transparency.

Reasons:

The proposed amendment is intended to recognise the right to benefit from services of general interest, inter alia as part of the promotion of social and territorial cohesion within the Union provided for in Article 16 of the EC Treaty.

Title: Access to services of general interest

Everyone has the right to high-quality services of general interest in all areas that are essential to the quality of life, sustainable development and, more generally, the protection of fundamental rights. Services of general interest are to be based on principles of equal access, universality, continuity, democratic scrutiny and transparency.

Reasons:

Reference for this right in art. 16 of the Amsterdam Treaty.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Second proposed amendment to: Article 45

Submitted by: Einem/Holoubek

Proposed text:

The following new article to be inserted after Article 45:

Article XX: The right of access to public-interest services

Every person shall have the right to equal, affordable access to public-interest services which provide qualitative services in all areas that contribute to the quality of life, sustainable development and in general to the guaranteeing of fundamental rights. Public-interest services shall be based on the principles of equal access, universality, continuity, democratic accountability and transparency.

Reasons:

Because of their supreme importance for the unrestricted development of the human personality, it is important that the Charter should specifically guarantee equal, affordable access to public-interest services. The principle is already acknowledged in Article 16 of the EC Treaty.

This proposal follows in principle that of Mrs Berès, Mrs Paciotti and Mrs van den Burg in the Document Charte 4238/00-Contrib 111. The wording proposed by us only clarifies the point that what is meant here is the right of access, a practical entitlement to equal and affordable access.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed insertion of additional article after Article 45: Fundamental duties.

Submitted by: Hubert HAENEL

Proposed text:

Article 45a

Fundamental rights imply the fulfilment of those duties which are necessary, in a democratic society, for public safety, for the protection of public order, health or morality, for sustainable development or for the protection of rights and liberties.

Reasons:

It appears to be highly desirable to devote an article of the charter to the subject of duties, as there can be no freedom without duty, no democracy without public-spiritiveness, no citizenship without responsibility.

Some people might take the view that this reminder is superfluous, or that it could appear solely in the preamble, as fundamental duties are the corollary of rights, and so affirming the latter amounts to implicitly affirming the former. For example, affirming the right to dignity could be taken as affirming the right to respect the dignity of others.

This argument is not, however, wholly convincing.

Firstly, because certain fundamental duties cannot easily be linked to a particular right: for example, the duty to take part in the defence of the nation, or the duty to pay taxes.

Secondly, because it is only true to say that one person's rights are another person's duties only in the context of relations between individuals, i.e. social relations. The right to work undoubtedly implies the duty to respect other people's right to work. But that distracts attention from the fact that, at the level of the individual, a right can imply a duty: the right to work implies the duty to work when one can. Similarly, the right to vote certainly implies respecting other people's right to vote (which goes without saying), but also the duty to vote, which is a moral duty in certain States and a legal obligation in others. If this is not spelt out, will not the legal obligation to vote imposed by certain States be condemned, as it could be argued that the right to vote implies the right not to vote?

Finally, more generally, we should not forget that we are seeking to send a strong, cogent and clear message to the citizens of Europe, and that we shall not succeed in doing so if we do not spell out all the implications.

We should, therefore, devote an article to duties, as does the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The text proposed in this amendment is mainly inspired by the European Convention on Human Rights; it adds the notion of sustainable development, however.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 46

Submitted by: Dr Erling Olsen, Danish Government representative

Proposed text:

I propose that the reference to the Member States be deleted and that paragraph 1 should read:

1. The provisions of this Charter shall be respected by the institutions and bodies of the Union within the framework of the powers conferred on them by the Treaties.

Paragraph 2 to read:

2. This Charter does not establish any new competence, tasks or objectives for the Community.

Reasons:

The primary objective of the Charter is to establish the fundamental rights governing relations between citizens and the EU's institutions and bodies. This formulation is in line with Article 6(2) and Article 46(d) of the EU Treaty, which were incorporated through the Amsterdam Treaty. The question of the involvement of the Member States should be deferred until subsequent consideration of whether and, if so, how the Charter should be incorporated fully or partially into the Treaties and thereby be given a legally binding form, cf. the Cologne mandate.

As regards the addition to paragraph 2, it is logical to refer to both tasks and objectives, as both these concepts ensue from Article 2 of the EC Treaty.

Article 46

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 46. Scope

Submitted by: Lord Goldsmith QC

Proposed text:

. Amend paragraph 1 to read:

“The provisions of this Charter apply to the Institutions of the Union and bodies established by the Treaties or secondary legislation within the scope of application of the Treaties.”

Retain paragraph 2: “This Charter does not establish any competence or any new task for the Community or the Union or modify competences and tasks defined by the Treaties”.

Add paragraphs (3) and (4):

“3. Subject to paragraph (4), this Charter applies to the Member States when implementing Community law.

4. The provisions corresponding to rights in the ECHR or its Protocols apply to a Member State only to the extent to which it has consented to be bound in relation to the Convention or its Protocols and subject to any reservations and derogations in force for that Member State.”

Reasons:

As I have previously commented, “addressed to” is vague and may give wider scope than intended. I prefer “apply to”.

The Convention has noted the problems of definition and uncertainty about “bodies of the Union”. It would clearly be preferable to clarify what is meant. We should be as clear as possible about the application of the Charter and leave no room for doubt about the bodies to be covered.

“Framework of the powers” is an unusual expression and could imply that there is legality to be found which is greater than the sum of the specific individual powers. For the sake of clarity, I would prefer to refer simply to “the powers”, and to delete “on them”, but this is unnecessary if my amendments are accepted.

I am entirely content with paragraph 2 of Article 46.

I agree with the general sense of the last phrase of Article 46(1) - the words following the final comma in the English version - but I consider that more should be said to clarify the position. I think that can best be done by way of separate provisions.

I consider it important that specific horizontal provision is made to safeguard the position of the Member States regarding their existing ability to derogate from or enter reservations according to national circumstances. This ability is a vital feature of sovereignty and subsidiarity and should not be prejudiced by application of the Charter. I deal with limitations in the Part A/Part B approach I have recommended, and in my amendment to Article 48 below. My proposed new paragraph (4) addresses reservations and derogations. They avoid asserting that the Union should adopt the lowest common denominator in these matters. Under my proposal, the standard of protection across the EU need not automatically be lowered simply because one Member state entered a derogation in respect of a particular right. I think that is a constructive step forward in this sensitive and difficult area.

The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union within the framework of the powers conferred on them by the Treaties, and to the Member States exclusively in the transposition and implementation of Community law.

Reasons:

The proposed wording 'within the scope of Union law' risks making provisions too binding on Member States, in particular in instances where the Union has not yet exercised its right to take action.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 46: Scope

Submitted by: Dr Ingo Friedrich, MEP, and Dr Peter Mombaur, MEP

Proposed text:

- 1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union within the framework of the powers conferred on them by the Treaties, and to the Member States *insofar as they directly apply Union or Community law.
- 2. This Charter does not establish any competence or any new task for the Community or the Union or modify competences and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Reasons:

The version of the ‘scope’ clause proposed in CHARTE 4316/00 is different from the previous version (document 4235/00, Article H.1). As far as action by the Member States is concerned, the field covered by the Charter is now no longer the ‘application of Community law’ but ‘the scope of Union law’. This could be taken to mean that Member States were bound by the Charter not only for the purpose of the direct application of EU law but also in the domestic sphere in fields where the EU has powers or even to which the EU merely lays claim de facto.

The definition of ‘the scope of Union law’ therefore seems uncertain and open to misinterpretation. It could be clarified in the manner proposed above.

Proposed amendment to Article: 46(1)

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union within the framework of the powers conferred on them by Treaty or for the implementation thereof, as well as to the institutions or bodies active on the territory of the Union on the basis of a measure adopted by the Council, and to the Member States exclusively within the scope of Union law.

Reasons:

The proposed version makes it clear that the provisions of the Charter also apply to the second and third pillars of the EU Treaty, viz. common foreign and security policy, and police and judicial cooperation in criminal cases. The Charter should consequently also be directed to the institutions, special units and bodies, as laid down in rules and regulations in force in Union territory, such as the Schengen Agreement. The phrase as well as to the institutions or bodies active on the territory of the Union on the basis of a measure adopted by the Council is added to allow institutions or bodies such as Europol to be included under the protection afforded by the Charter. The provision moreover makes it clear that the Charter will also apply to any new powers that may be acquired by the Union in future.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 46

Submitted by: Ieke van den Burg

Proposed text:

- 1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union within the framework of the powers conferred on them by the Treaties, as well as to the Member States and to the social partners, acting in the scope of Union and Community law.
- 2. This Charter does not in itself establish any competence or any new task for the Community or the Union unless explicitly formulated. (rest delete)
- 3. Member States of the EU are bound to the content of this Charter by their own Constitutions, and by the international Conventions and Charters referred to in this Charter. Adoption of this Charter once more stresses their commitment to these broadly recognised fundamental rights and standards.

Reasons:

- 1. In the first part the reference to social partners, that was proposed by the Presidium in a separate article 31, is included. A separate horizontal article referring only to the social and economic rights is not necessary and contrary to the principle of indivisibility of rights. Further refinements and possibly distinct treatment with respect to the justiciability of different rights may be necessary, but should not be dealt with by making different sets of rights with different status, scope and meaning.
- 2. The addition of "in itself" and "unless explicitly formulated" is meant to keep open the possibility that in the final draft of and decision about this Charter some provision may be included that explicitly gives a new task or competence; for instance a provision giving the EU the task to make the Charter well known to the general public, to publish it, to evaluate it, or something similar.
- 3. The addition of this third part is formulating the relationship that Member States have with respect to this Charter. In fact this relation is simply built upon their already existing commitment to the national and international standards of fundamental rights which form the basis of the Charter.

The Union institutions and bodies and the Member States, when acting within the scope of Union law, and the social partners at Union level, acting within their respective powers, shall apply the social principles and respect the rights recognised by this Charter, and shall promote the conditions for their implementation in accordance with the principle of solidarity.

Reasons:

The proposed article is intended to clarify the scope and limits of fundamental social rights with respect to the powers of those involved in implementing Union law. This article is intended to serve as a 'general' clause and its substance is therefore deemed implicit in all the following articles which lay down social and economic rights, without the need to refer repeatedly to individual provisions.

Proposed text:

The rights and freedoms listed in the Charter shall also apply to legal entities and other associations with registered offices in the territory of the community provided that they are so applicable by their nature.

Reasons:

The bodies enjoying fundamental rights are, in the first instance, natural persons but also, to a certain extent, legal entities and other associations. The proposed horizontal provision is intended to clarify this. The key element is registered offices in the territory of the Community. However, this is determined less by the registered offices pursuant to the articles of association and more by the actual offices, the 'self-appointed centre of activity' of the association .

Proposed amendment to: Article 47. Limitation of guaranteed rights

Submitted by: Lord Goldsmith QC

Proposed text:

Reasons:

My proposals for drafting the substantive rights in the Charter include references to limitations and qualifications on a right by right basis. I disagree that it is possible to provide satisfactorily for that in a single horizontal clause. I deal with limitations in the two-part 'Proclamation'/'Definition' I have recommended and in my amendment to Article 48 below. I have a number of difficulties with the drafting of the Praesidium text in any event:

- ◆ “competent legislative authority” may exclude the common law
 - ◆ “actual substance ... must be respected” appears to exclude the possibility of lawful derogations and reservations by competent national authorities. Limitations could not lawfully be used wholly to negate a right, so the second sentence seems unnecessary.
 - ◆ “subject to the principle of proportionality ... democratic society” seems unnecessary given the definition of the rights, article by article.
 - ◆ “limitations” fails to capture “formalities”, “interferences”, “restrictions”, “penalties” etc as provided for expressly by the ECHR.
 - ◆ “permitted by the [ECHR]” excludes limitations permitted by the Treaties or elsewhere.

Proposed amendment to: Article 47. Limitation of guaranteed rights

Submitted by: Gabriel Cisneros Laborda

Proposed text:

It is proposed that this article be replaced by specific limitations for each right.

Reasons:

In keeping with the position which Spain has been upholding for reasons of legal certainty, it is proposed that the rules governing each right should include the corresponding limits. Enshrining the limits to rights in a general clause which, moreover, refers to the limits provided for under another international law or Treaty runs counter to all the techniques of law-making. Furthermore, I believe that the Charter should avoid any wording which might be understood as a cross-reference to the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

Submitted by: Álvaro Rodríguez Bereijo, Personal Representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

The fundamental rights guaranteed by this Charter are not absolute privileges, and their exercise may be restricted by limitations justified by law on the grounds of the objectives of general interest pursued by the Community, provided such limitations do not constitute, with regard to the aim pursued, disproportionate or unreasonable interference undermining the very substance of those rights. Limitations may in no circumstances exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

Reasons:

This article is explained in the explanatory statement as the result of a decision to include a single general limiting clause, applying to all of the rights, thus removing the need to specify limitations for each right in turn. This option does not, however, eliminate the disadvantages of not spelling out what the limitations are for each right. Should the limitations be expressly introduced by law (and how would this be transposed to the Community context?)?, and until the law concerned existed, would the rights concerned be unlimited? How can a quasi-constitutional legal text like the Charter be limited by an instrument of lesser rank (directive, regulation, even national law), should it obtain the status of primary law? Who would rule, and how, whether the limits introduced respected the essential nature of the rights concerned and were proportionate? Finally, what would become of the economic and social rights not taken up by the Rome Convention? As the representation of the Spanish Prime Minister has stressed on numerous occasions, the limitations on particular rights should be part and parcel of their definition: each right should include the specification of its own limits, which, in many cases, arise out of other fundamental rights. From such a perspective, this article cannot be considered acceptable.

Another question is whether this clause should merely complement, rather than exclude, the specification of the limits on the various rights in the individual articles. Should this be the case, the clause may be accepted in the sense that, while its further development is a matter for the law, it lays down certain criteria which must be respected.

In any case, what is proposed here is an alternative wording, aimed at improving the drafting from the technical viewpoint. This does not mean that it should be considered unnecessary or superfluous to set out the limitations on the exercise of certain rights, as proposed in our amendments to the Charter.

The text proposed brings together the principles concerning limitations on the exercise of fundamental rights which have been recognised by ECJ case-law. See the following cases: 5/88 Wachauf, decision of 13 July 1989, ECR 1989, p. 2609; Case C-44/94, The Queen vs. Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, Decision of 17 October 1995, ECR 1995 I, p. 3115. DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Submitted by: Mr François Loncle

Proposed text:

Amend the first two sentences as follows:

Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by law. The actual substance of those rights and freedoms may not be undermined.

Reasons:

The new wording of the first sentence concerning limitations on the exercise of rights and freedoms refers to the law because the concept of a legislative authority is unsuited to the European Union framework. It would seem preferable to use the term 'law', in the sense of a general and abstract norm. The change in the second sentence is an amendment to the wording.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 47

Submitted by: Win Griffiths, MP

Proposed text:

Any limitation on the exercise of the rights of freedom recognised by the Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority. Limitations may not exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedom.

Reasons:

This text is more concise. Detailed criteria, if needed, could be considered in Part B.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 47. Limitation of guaranteed rights

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority. (19 words deleted). It must remain proportionate to the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society. Limitations may not exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

Reasons:

- The deleted phrase ('the actual substance of those rights and freedoms must be respected') was unnecessary since the following sentence states that limitations must remain proportionate to the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society. It should be borne in mind that, even in a democratic society, certain rights may need to be suspended in the event of a crisis threatening the survival of a nation, e.g. in war time.

 - The amendment also rephrases the third sentence to make it more concise.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 47

Submitted by: Jürgen Gnauck, Minister of Federal and European Affairs, Thuringia

Proposed text:

Article 47. Limitation of guaranteed rights

The essential nature of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter is inviolable. These rights and freedoms may only be restricted by the competent legislative authority. Subject to the principle of proportionality, any limitation must remain within the limits necessary for the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society. The level of protection of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms must not be reduced by such limitations.

Reasons:

The guarantee of the essential nature of the fundamental rights should come at the beginning since no limitations are permissible here. Recasting the second and fourth sentences is intended to make clear their intention.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 47: Limitation of guaranteed rights

Submitted by: Dr Ingo Friedrich, MEP, and Dr Peter Mombaur, MEP

Proposed text:

Any limitation on (three words deleted) the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter may only be provided for by the competent legislative authority. The actual substance of those rights and freedoms must be respected. Subject to the principle of proportionality and with due regard for the European Convention on Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, any limitation must remain within the limits necessary for the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society. This shall be without prejudice to Article 48. The fundamental right which is limited must be named.

Reasons:

A general and rigid link with the limitations provided for by the ECHR, as proposed in Article 47, fourth sentence, of CHARTE 4316/00, is problematic – if for no other reason – because the substance of the rights conferred by the Charter does not fully correspond with the substance of the ECHR. Moreover, a de facto link to the case law of the European Court of Human Rights would call into question the independence of the Charter; from the outset, the Charter would not be a self-contained whole, capable of interpretation without reference to any other source, as seems highly desirable in the interests of intelligibility to the public and effectiveness. It would also hamper the development of an autonomous doctrine of fundamental rights under EU law, in which case the Charter could fail to achieve one of its essential objectives.

On the other hand it ought to be made clear that the values enshrined in the ECHR will also have to be taken into account in determining limitations (cf. Article 6(2) of the Treaty on European Union). It is therefore proposed that the third sentence be amended as shown above.

In order to clarify the relationship with Article 48, a new fourth sentence should be inserted.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 47. Limitation of guaranteed rights

Submitted by: Guy Braibant

Proposed text:

Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by law. Subject to the principle of proportionality, it must remain within the limits necessary for the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society. The actual substance of the rights and freedoms must be respected.

Limitations may not exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

Reasons:

This amendment replaces the phrase 'by the competent legislative authority' with 'by law', a term which is frequently used in the other articles of the Charter and is much less ambiguous, particularly in the light of the case law of the European Court of Human Rights concerning the concept of law

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 47

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority. The actual substance of those rights and freedoms must be respected.

Reasons:

In previous amendments it was proposed that powers for imposing restrictions should be specified article by article, and the conditions also laid down under which restrictions could be imposed on fundamental rights. Only by thus specifying article by article the powers for imposing restrictions and the conditions under which restrictions would be admissible could discrepancies between the EU Charter and the ECHR be prevented from arising. It consequently cannot be recommended that a general restrictions clause, such as that included in Article 31 of the European Social Charter, should be drawn up. Both traditional and social fundamental rights will be better served if the restriction clauses are worded as accurately as possible as they apply to each specific right. It should be possible for both kinds of rights to be restricted in the interests of other fundamental rights (e.g. by way of a clause on the protection of other rights). In that way, troublesome discrepancies between traditional and social fundamental rights can be prevented from arising.

The first sentence is retained to make it clear that restrictions can be applied only by the competent legislative authority. What precisely the competent legislative authority is in a particular case will depend on the relevant Treaty provisions. The second sentence consolidates European Court case law relating to human rights.

Alternatively, in the event that the amendments calling for restrictions to be specified separately by fundamental rights are rejected:

Alternative text:

Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter may not be more extensive than those that have been authorised under the European Convention on the Protection of Human Rights and the Revised European Social Charter. Such limitations may be applied only by the competent legislative authority. The actual substance of the rights and freedoms concerned must be respected. Any such limitation must, having regard to the principle of proportionality, remain within such limits as are necessary to upholding legitimate interests in a democratic society.

Reasons:

On account of its great importance, the article begins with a reference to the limitation provisions in the ECHR and the ESC. The limitation provisions in the revised ESC (see Article G thereof) are equivalent to those in the ECHR.

By way of adaptation to Union law, the words by the competent legislative authority are added. What precisely the competent legislative authority is in a particular case will depend on the relevant Treaty provisions. It will also be necessary to comply with the requirements that the ECHR (as interpreted by the Revised ESC) attaches to the words as is in accordance with the law. The term 'law' has at all events a wide meaning in the ECHR (it can also include unwritten law), provided that the requirements that the ECHR and the European Court of Human Rights apply to such limitations are complied with (the law in question must in particular meet the requirements of accessibility and predictability). The criteria specified as objectives in the ECHR should to some extent be attributed to the EU. Article 8(2) of the ECHR could then be worded as follows:

There shall be no interference by a public authority with the exercise of this right except such as is in accordance with the law and is necessary in a democratic society in the interests of the security of the Union, public safety or the economic well-being of the Union, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONProposed amendment to: Article 47*Submitted by: Ieke van den Burg*Proposed text:

Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority. The actual substance of those rights and freedoms may not be affected. Subject to the principle of proportionality, any limitation must remain within the limits necessary (...) in a democratic society for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others or for the protection of public interest. Limitations may not exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and the Revised European Social Charter. The restrictions permitted under this Charter to the rights and freedoms set forth herein shall not be applied for any purpose other than for which they have been prescribed.

Reasons:

- "may not be affected" is a clearer formulation in this context than "must be respected".
- Reformulation of the limits according to art. G 1 of the Revised European Social Charter (or art. 31 of the original Charter of 1961). This adds a reference to the possibility of conflicting rights.
- Addition of the reference to the Revised European Social Charter is essential, since in many articles references to this Charter are included.
- The last sentence is added as an extra element, and is based also on the general restrictions' article G (2nd part) of the RESC.

Article 51 (new).

Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority. The actual substance of those rights and freedoms must be respected. Subject to the principle of proportionality, any limitation must remain within the limits necessary for the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society. Proposed amendment to: Article 47. Limitation of guaranteed rights

Submitted by: Prof. Daniel Tarschys, Sweden

Proposed text:

Add, in fine: 'as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights'.

Reasons:

All limitations must be spelled out in the respective articles. In the light of the many different rights guaranteed, and the very different nature of those rights, it is simply not possible to deal with all limitations in one place. It may be that each article thereby becomes longer but any other drafting method will defeat the main purpose of the Charter, i.e. to present the rights in a manner in which they will be understood without far-reaching references to other texts.

Draft Art. 47 should supplement such limitations in the various articles of the Charter.

Reference should also be made to the case-law of the ECHR.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 47

Submitted by: Einem/Holoubek

Proposed text:

Any limitation on (3 words deleted) the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be expressly provided for by the competent legislative authority. (11 words deleted). Subject to the principle of proportionality, any limitation must remain within the limits necessary for the protection of public interests in a democratic society. Limitations may in any case not exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

Reasons:

Some of the fundamental rights guaranteed by the Charter should not be subject to limitation, or should be less subject to limitation than is provided for in the general limitation clause in Article 47. This should be expressly added to the articles in question (e.g. Articles 2, 4 and 5; see the proposals for amendments to these articles by Einem/Holoubek).

As to the wording of Article 47, our proposal contains the following changes to the text proposed by the Presidency:

The words 'the exercise of' after 'limitation on' in the first sentence have been deleted, since they are expendable and might in any case be open to misinterpretation.

Sentence 2 on the substance should be deleted entirely. Its protective effect is sufficiently well covered by the following sentence, which adheres to the generally acknowledged standard for legal limitations on fundamental rights. Any other generally applicable interpretations which might possibly be linked to the idea of 'substance' are extremely vague and more confusing than helpful.

Instead of 'legitimate' interests, the text should refer to 'public interests', in order to make it clear, in accordance with a generally accepted understanding of the concept, that the interests in question must be public interests. These of course include protection for the rights of third parties, as the ECHR's substantive provisos make clear.

Adding the words 'in any case' in the last sentence of Article 47 is intended to clarify specifically the fact that Article 47 does not make possible any limitations over and above the ECHR provisos, but that it is possible, conversely, for the Charter to allow limitations only to a more limited extent than the ECHR provisos.

Proposed amendment to: Article 47. LIMITATION OF GUARANTEED RIGHTS

Submitted by: Jordi Solé Tura

Proposed text:

Limits may be imposed on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter only if this has previously been provided for by the competent legislative authority and the actual substance of those rights and freedoms must in all circumstances continue to be respected. (Six words deleted) Any limitation must remain within the limits necessary for the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society and limitations may not under any circumstances exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

Reasons:

The purpose of this amendment is to improve the wording and to define concepts more accurately.

Proposed text:

Article 47. Limitation of guaranteed rights

Replace last sentence with: The rights guaranteed by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms shall be exercised in accordance with the conditions and limitations laid down in that Convention.

Reasons:

This amendment is intended to make it clear that – as regards fundamental rights and freedoms – the codification and case law pursuant to the ECHR are the prime yardstick for the application and interpretation of the Charter. This could also avert the danger of competing interpretations by the Courts in Luxembourg and Strasbourg. The formulation corresponds with that of Article 48 dealing with rights enshrined by the EC Treaty.

Submitted by: Piero Melograni

Proposed text:

Insert a new second subparagraph, to read: 'No limitations may be placed on the rights and freedoms recognised in Articles 1(1), 4 and 5(1) of this Charter.'

Reasons:

The inclusion of the new subparagraph draws attention to three rights (the inviolability of human dignity, the ban on torture and inhuman and degrading treatment, and the ban on slavery) which may never be limited by the competent legislative authority, even for the purpose of protecting legitimate interests in a democratic society.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 47

Submitted by: Rodotà, Paciotti and Manzella

Proposed text: Article 47:

Article 47. Guarantee of the rights and freedoms set out in the Charter

- 1. Further provision may be made by the competent legislative authority for the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter, with due respect for their basic substance set out in the Charter and for the principle of proportionality between the interests being protected.
- 2. The rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter which are already provided for in the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms may not be made subject to limitations that exceed those permitted by that Convention.
- 3. The rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter which are already provided for in the Union Treaties shall be exercised under the conditions and subject to the limitations laid down by those Treaties.

Reasons:

The proposed recasting of Article 47, which now incorporates Article 48, is intended to bring within one article the three instruments guaranteeing the rights and freedoms recognised by the Charter. Firstly, any further provision for those rights and freedoms is made subject to respect being shown for the principles of legality and proportionality; secondly, the principle of a level of protection no lower than that provided by the European Convention is established; and thirdly the principle of a level of protection no lower than that provided by the Treaties is also established.

Proposed text:

Delete article.

Reasons:

The limitations referred to in this article are superfluous, as the Charter as a whole, once incorporated in the Treaty, will already be limited by virtue of the definition of its scope in Article 46. Moreover, the formulation in Article 48 could give the impression that the individual rights in the Charter are bound by the provisions of the Treaty, which is not the case, since the rights to which it refers are universal fundamental rights.

Proposed amendment to: Article 48

Proposed text:

Article 48 to be deleted.

Reasons:

The meaning of this article is unclear. If it is intended only to indicate that the rights arising from the EC Treaty which are not enshrined in the Charter will of course continue to apply, this is in any case quite clear, without specific mention of it needing to be made in the Charter.

If, on the other hand, it is intended to mean that rights which are enshrined both in the Charter and in the EC Treaty are to continue to be limited in accordance with the EC Treaty, then such an article should definitely be rejected. It is aimed directly at the exercise of powers under the EC Treaty. A more extensive possibility of limiting rights than that allowed by the Charter on the basis of the EC Treaty would render the Charter worthless.

“The rights in the ‘Proclamation of Rights’ Section of articles 1 to [45] of this Charter are defined in the ‘Definition of Rights’ section in each of those articles, and are to be understood within the meaning and effect given to the corresponding rights under the ECHR by the European Court of Human Rights, and the TEU and the TEC by the European Court of Justice.”

Reasons:

I agree with the Praesidium’s proposal to tie those Charter rights which are based on the treaties to the treaty conditions and limits. However, I firmly believe, as I have consistently argued, that this policy should also extend to the ECHR. Divergence between the ECHR and the corresponding rights in the Charter would risk the creation of a two-tier system of rights protection in Europe. That would create legal and public confusion. It would not strengthen the protection of human rights but weaken it.

My version, therefore, which refers to the Part A/Part B approach (both proclaiming the rights and defining them), makes plain our intention that the rights in the Charter should be understood within the meaning of existing rights.

I believe it important that this article should be moved to the beginning of the Charter to set out its structure.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 49

Submitted by: Charlotte Cederschiöld

Proposed text:

Delete

Reasons:

The purpose of this Article, namely that this Charter will not set a lower standard for fundamental human rights, is already met in Article 50.

The reference to the Member States' constitutions is here less appropriate, as they contradict each other. In a Charter of fundamental rights, there must not be any contradictions. We cannot create a "Europe à la carte" in constitutional matters, where individuals get the impression that it is possible to pick the constitutions he or she wishes to adhere to. Fundamental rights must be absolute, precise and unconditional. The scope of the Charter is to make fundamental and universal human rights visible, understandable - and thus not contradictory - to European citizens.

Reasons:

- 1. The Charter obviously cannot allow the effect of the protective provisions deriving from the European Treaties or the substantive law of the Member States to be limited.*
- 2. To ignore the case-law of the two courts would be to undermine the protection currently provided by certain provisions, which is not, and cannot be, the aim of this Charter.*

“Nothing in this Charter is intended to restrict any right guaranteed by the law of any Member State or under international agreements to which the Union, the Community or the Member States are party”

Reasons:

I agree with what I take to be the intention behind this proposed Article. It would be unfortunate if the Charter had the result of adversely affecting such higher levels of protection as may exist in individual Member States (whatever their source) or under agreements with third parties made by the EU or EC. My version seeks to overcome some drafting difficulties I find in the Praesidium version; e.g.:

- ◆ “constitutions” (too narrow – compare ECHR Article 53)
- ◆ “international law” (too vague in this context)
- ◆ “including the ECHR” (already covered; double inclusion may create legal confusion about our intentions)

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 49: Level of protection

Submitted by: Dr Ingo Friedrich, MEP, and Dr Peter Mombaur, MEP

Proposed text:

This Charter shall not affect the human rights and fundamental freedoms guaranteed by the constitutions of the Member States or by international law or international conventions the contracting parties to which include the Union, the Community or all Member States.

Reasons:

It is open to doubt whether the version of Article 49 which appears in CHARTE 4316/00, and which is based on the ECHR, is as clear as claimed in the statement of reasons. The interpretation which is evidently deemed desirable – that the Charter will institute a minimum level of protection – seems possible. However, it would surely be equally possible to interpret it as establishing a substantive rule for resolution of conflict of laws to the effect that the legal rights conferred by the Charter are deemed, from the outset, not to be capable of limiting aspirations to rights based on other sources of law. It is questionable whether this interpretation would result in a substantively acceptable definition of the rules. The legal fora ought, therefore, to be clearly separated, for example by means of the proposed formulation.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 49

Submitted by: Jürgen Gnauck, Minister of Federal and European Affairs, Thuringia

Proposed text:

Article 49. Level of protection

This Charter is without prejudice to the human rights and fundamental freedoms recognised, in their respective fields of application, by the Member States' constitutions, international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party.

Reasons:

Article 49 is intended to prevent a levelling down of human rights and fundamental freedoms guaranteed elsewhere and, in particular, a reduction in the level of protection. The wording 'This Charter is without prejudice to...' is intended to express this.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 49. Level of protection

Submitted by: Gabriel Cisneros Laborda

Proposed text:

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or undermining human rights and fundamental freedoms recognised, in their respective fields of application, by the Member States' constitutions, international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party.

Reasons:

It is proposed that the reference to the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms be deleted, in line with the second paragraph of the reasons for the amendment to Article 47.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 49. Level of protection

Submitted by: Prof. Daniel Tarschys, Sweden

Proposed text:

Delete the word 'Union'.

Add, in fine: 'as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights.'

Reasons:

The European Union is not a legal person which can enter into international agreements or adhere to international organizations.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 49 (CHARTE 4136/00 CONVENTION 34)

Submitted by: Johannes Voggenhuber and Kathalijne Buitenweg

Proposed text:
Article 53 (new).

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or undermining human rights and fundamental freedoms recognised, in their respective fields of application, by the Member States' constitutions, international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, or as restricting or undermining the authoritative interpretation of these rights and freedoms, such as that by the European Court of Human Rights.

Reasons:

See the statement of reasons for Article 49 in document CHARTE 4316/00 CONVENTION 34: 'The reference to the European Convention on Human Rights obviously means the Convention as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights, whether now or in the future, by virtue of the principle that any interpretation is incorporated into the text interpreted.' This important principle ought to be stated in the text of Article 49 itself.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONProposed amendment to: Article 49*Submitted by: Ieke van den Burg*Proposed text:

No provision of this Charter may be interpreted as a limitation of the protection of fundamental rights provided for by European and national law and international conventions and treaties, referred to in this Charter, including their jurisprudence.

Reasons:

This paragraph is meant to provide a non-regression clause to prevent that the Charter may be misused to weaken existing protection of fundamental rights, as provided for by the national and international standards, and the jurisprudence based on them, that inspired the drafting of the EU Charter. The formulation is similar to article 53 of the ECHR.

In case the Convention is attached to mentioning particularly the ECHR, I propose to also add the RESC!

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article 49: Level of protection

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, representative of the Belgian Government, and Karel DE GUCHT and Roger LALLEMAND, representatives of the Belgian Parliament

Proposed text:

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or undermining human rights and fundamental freedoms recognised, in their respective fields of application, by international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the European Social Charter and the constitutional traditions common to the Member States.

Reasons:

The specific reference to the European Social Charter is justified by the fact that a number of the social rights set out in this draft Charter derive therefrom.

The reference to the constitutions of the Member States should be replaced by the words 'constitutional traditions common to the Member States', so as to bring the text into line with the wording of Article 6(2) of the Treaty on European Union.

Proposed amendment to: Article 49

Submitted by: Gunnar Jansson, Tuija Brax and Paavo Nikula

Proposed text:

Article 49. Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or undermining human rights and fundamental freedoms recognised in international law, [] particularly any general convention for the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms, and the Member States' constitutions [].

Reasons:

In its simplicity and clarity, this formulation corresponds to the statement of reasons in CONVENTION 34.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 49

Submitted by: José Barros Moura and Maria Eduarda Azevedo, Members of the Portuguese National Assembly

Proposed text:

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or undermining human rights and fundamental freedoms recognised, in their respective fields of application, by the Member States' constitutions, international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the United Nations Pacts, the International Labour Organisation Conventions, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and the European Social Charter.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 49

Submitted by: Einem/Holoubek

Proposed text:

1. Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting (two words deleted) human rights and fundamental freedoms recognised (6 words deleted) by the Member States' constitutions, international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party. This applies in particular to the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights.

2. In interpreting the fundamental rights contained in this Charter, and particularly the economic and social rights, account shall be taken of international agreements and conventions concluded by the Member States of the European Union.

Reasons:

The proposed wording endeavours to express the intention of Article 49 more clearly. It is based more closely on Article 53 ECHR than the Presidency's proposed text is.

In particular: no mention should be made of the idea that this Charter could be interpreted as 'undermining' human rights. Any reference to the 'fields of application' of international-law or Member State human rights provisions is confusing and unnecessary, because this is clear from the rights in any case. Because of its great importance the ECHR should be mentioned in a separate sentence, and it should also be stated that – as the Presidency's statement of reasons clearly says – the rights under the Convention are here to be understood as incorporating their interpretation by the European Court of Human Rights.

The proposed second paragraph – in accordance with a proposal by Mr Meyer (doc. 4271/00) – is intended to ensure the concordance of the Charter with other international human rights conventions binding on the Member States by stipulating that in interpreting the Charter these agreements and conventions are to be taken into account.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 49

Submitted by: Marie-Madeleine Dieulangard

Proposed text:

Article 49 (Level of protection) should be inserted after Article 47 (Limitation of guaranteed rights).

Reasons:

The aim is to make the Charter more coherent and intelligible to the layman.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to the following Articles

Submitted by: Einem/Holoubek

Proposed text:

The Union and the bodies it comprises are based on the principles of freedom, democracy, solidarity, respect for human rights, and the rule of law; these principles are common to all the Member States.

Reasons:

At least with reference to the articles of the Charter that deal with fundamental social and economic rights, a formula should be incorporated in a general preamble, as proposed, for example, by MEYER (doc. 4271/00), which specifically introduces the principle of solidarity. The text suggested by Rodota, Manzella and Paciotti (doc. 4308/00) also adopts this approach.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to: Article 42

Submitted by: Prof. Dr Jürgen Meyer

Proposed text:

Article. 42. Access to the courts

Anyone whose rights and freedoms have been infringed shall have the right to bring an action in a court or tribunal specified by law.

Reasons:

Article 42 contains the provision concerning access to the courts which I included in my original discussion draft (Contrib. 2).

CHARTE 4383/00

CONVENT 41

PRAESIDIUM NOTE

Subject: Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Summary of amendments received and of Praesidium compromise amendments on economic and social rights and on the horizontal clauses (Articles 31 to 50)
(reference documents: CHARTE 4316/00 (CONVENT 34), CHARTE 4372/00 (CONVENT 39))

This purpose of this document, drawn up by the Secretariat at the request of the Convention, is to group the amendments to Article 31 to 50 (CHARTE 4316/00) according to topic. This analysis does not cover drafting and linguistic amendments. These will be subject to separate examination.

Article 31. Social rights and principles

The institutions and bodies of the Union, the Member States, exclusively within the scope of Community law, and the social partners at Community level, acting within the framework of their respective powers, shall observe the social rights and implement the social principles set out in this Charter.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Delete the entire Article, to avoid any risk of inconsistency between Article 31 and Article 46: amendments 1 (Gnauck), 2 (Berès), 3 (Duff), 4 (Leinen), 5 (Goldsmith), 6 (van den Burg), 7 (Tarschys), 8 (Cederschiöld), 9 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella), 10 (Hirsch Ballin). Amendments 11 (Barros Moura-Azevedo), 12 (Griffiths) and 14 (Olsen) also favour uniting these two Articles.
- (2) Begin the Article with a reference to subsidiarity: amendment 16 (Braibant)
- (3) Substitute "Union law" for "Community law": amendments 17 (Melograni), 21 (Korthals Altes) and 22 (Dehaene-De Gucht-Lallemand)
- (4) Delete the reference to "social partners": amendments 18 (Neisser) and 19 (Cisneros Laborda)
- (5) Amend the wording of the obligation, either to restrict its scope: amendments 19 (Cisneros Laborda), 20 (Friedrich- Mombaur), and 21 (Korthals Altes), or to reinforce it: 16 (Braibant), 22 (Dehaene, De Gucht, Lallemand), 23 (Loncle) and 24 (Solé Tura).
- (6) Add a reference to the principle of solidarity: amendment 388 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella), [see also: amendment 446 (Einem-Holoubek)]
- (7) Add a new paragraph on invoking social rights on the basis of laws implementing them: amendment 26 (Rodriguez Bereijo)

- (8) Add a new paragraph explicitly referring to the Revised Social Charter: amendment 25 (Korthals Altes).

Praesidium proposal:

Becomes the second paragraph of the current Article 46

Based on amendments submitted by the following members of the Convention:

Gnauck, Berès, Duff, Leinen, van den Burg, Tarschys, Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella, Hirsch Ballin, Barros Moura-Azevedo, Goldsmith, Cederschiöld.

ARTICLE 31a (new)

- (1) Equal treatment for men and women: amendments 30 (Vitorino), 31 (Berès), 32 (Rodriguez Bereijo), 33 (Goldsmith) [see also amendments: 110 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella) and 176 (van den Burg)]

Article 32. Freedom to choose an occupation

Everyone has the right to choose and to engage in an occupation.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Add the concept of the "right to work": amendments 38 (van den Burg), 39 (Dieulangard), 46 (Fayot), 51 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella), or of "employment rights": 28 (Meyer) to the title.
- (2) Limit this right to citizens: amendments 40 (Gnauck), 41 (Friedrich-Mombaur)

- (3) Improve the wording of the right: amendments 28 (Meyer), 37 (Duff), 38 (van den Burg), 39 (Dieulangard), 40 (Gnauck), 42 (Goldsmith), 43 (Cederschiöld), 44 (Barros Moura-Azevedo), 45 (Cisneros Laborda), 51 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella), 131 (Voggenhuber)
- (4) Develop the content of the right as a right to the protection of one's employment and of free access to measures promoting employment: amendment 28 (Meyer)
- (5) Refer to the legal framework setting the conditions for the exercise of this right: amendments 47 (Tarschys), 48 (Korthals Altes), 49 (Dehousse), 50 (Braibant), 53 (Rodriguez Bereijo)
- (6) Add a new paragraph on open access to free job placement services: amendment 47 (Braibant)
- (7) Include the right to protection against unfair redundancy (new paragraph): amendment 28 (Meyer); or a new paragraph referring to the market economy: amendment 53 (Rodriguez Bereijo);

Praesidium proposal:

Becomes Article 31

New title: Freedom to choose an occupation and the right to work

New text:

1. Everyone has the right to work, to choose his or her work and to enjoy job protection.
2. Everyone has in particular the right to engage in an occupation or commercial activity, and to have access to a free job placement service.

Based on amendments submitted by the following members of the Convention:

Korthals Altes, Duff, Van den Burg, Dieulangard, Meyer, Cederschiöld, Goldsmith, Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella, Barros Moura-Azevedo, Braibant.

ARTICLE 32a (new)

- (1) The rights of workers who are EU citizens: amendments 58 (Manzella) [see also amendment 53, para. 2 (Rodriguez Bereijo)]
- (2) The right to life-long training: amendment 59 (Fayot) [see also amendments 51 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella), 154 (Loncle), 130 (Meyer)]
- (3) The right to fair remuneration – the principle "equal work or work of equal value, equal pay": 60 (Fayot), [see also 52 (Berès), 56 (Meyer), 89 (Loncle), 110 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella), 196 (van den Burg) and 347 (Voggenhuber)]
- (4) The right to a minimum wage: amendment 61 (Dieulangard), [see also 111 (Berès)]
- (5) The right to a minimum income: amendment 62 (Dieulangard) [see also amendments: 29 (Voggenhuber), 251 (van den Burg) and 266 (Berès)]

Article 33. Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Workers and their representatives have the right to information and consultation in good time within the undertaking which employs them.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Delete the entire Article: amendments 63 (Goldsmith), 64 (Griffiths) and 65 (Cisneros Laborda)
- (2) Reformulate the Article as a task for the Union, by deleting the words "the right to": amendments 67 and 69 (Korthals Altes)
- (3) Make the wording more precise, either as regards matters covered by the right to information and consultation: amendments 75 (van den Burg), 77 (Dehousse), 79 (Einem Holoubek), 80 (Friedrich-Mombaur), 81 (Gnauck), 82 (Berès), 83 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella), or as regards the level where the right is to be exercised: amendments 75 (van den Burg), 76 (Fayot), 82 (Berès), 83 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella)
- (4) Add a paragraph providing for a strengthened right to consultation in the case of restructuring: amendment 84 (Voggenhuber).

Praesidium proposal:

Becomes Article 32

Text unchanged.

ARTICLE 33a (new)

- (1) Right to fair pay: amendment 89 (Loncle) [see also amendments 52 (Berès), 56 (Meyer), 60 (Fayot), 110 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella), 196 (van den Burg) and 347 (Voggenhuber)]

Article 34. Rights of collective bargaining and action

Employers and workers have the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and to take collective action, in cases of conflicts of interest, to defend their economic and social interests, including at European Union level, under the conditions laid down by national legislation and practice.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Delete the entire Article: amendments 90 (Cederschiöld), 91 (Friedrich) and 92 (Goldsmith)
- (2) Explicitly mention the right to strike: amendments 93 (Korthals Altes), 94 (Dehousse), 95 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella), 96 (Voggenhuber), 97 (Braibant), 99 (Dieulangard), 102 (Fayot), 103 (Berès) and 104 (van den Burg)
- (3) Widen the legal reference framework: amendments 93 (Korthals Altes), 97 (Braibant) and 98 (Melograni)

Praesidium proposal:

Becomes Article 33

Drafting amendments:

Employers and workers have the right, at all levels, to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and to take collective action in cases of conflicts of interest, to defend their economic and social interests (...) under the conditions laid down by national and Community legislation and practice.

Based on amendments submitted by the following members of the Convention:

Braibant, Olsen.

ARTICLE 34a (new)

- (1) The right to fair remuneration and to equality of treatment: amendment 110 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella) [see also, besides Article 40, amendments 30 (Vitorino), 31 (Berès), 32 (Rodriguez Bereijo), 33 (Goldsmith), 176 (van den Burg), and amendments 60 (Fayot), 52 (Berès), 89 (Loncle), 196 (van den Burg) and 347 (Voggenhuber)]
- (2) The right to a minimum wage: amendment 111 (Berès) [see also amendment 61 (Dieulangard)]

Article 35. Right to rest periods and annual leave

Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Delete the entire Article: amendments 112 (Berthu) and 113 (Friedrich-Mombaur)
- (2) Reformulate the Article as a task for the Union, and delete the words "Right to" in the title: amendments 115 and 116 (Korthals Altes)
- (3) Define the concept of maximum working hours on a weekly basis: amendments 116 (Korthals Altes), 122 (Dieulangard) and 123 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella)
- (4) Set a minimum period (4 weeks) for the annual period of paid leave: amendment 124 (Voggenhuber)
- (5) Add a paragraph on the right to increased pay for time worked beyond the maximum working hours: amendment 126 (Berès).

Praesidium proposal:

Merge Articles 35 and 36 to become Article 34

New title: Fair and just working conditions*Drafting amendments:*

1. Every worker is entitled to working conditions which respect his or her health, safety and dignity.
2. Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave.

Based on amendments submitted by the following members of the Convention:

Leinen, Van den Burg, Dieulangard, Fayot, Loncle, Goldsmith, Meyer, Dehousse.

Article 36. Safe and healthy working conditions

Every worker has the right to safe and healthy working conditions.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Delete the entire Article: amendments 133 (Cisneros Laborda), 134 (Berthu), 135 (Friedrich-Mombaur) and 136 (Cederschiöld)
- (2) Reformulate the Article as a task for the Union, and delete the words "the right to": amendments 137 and 138 (Korthals Altes)
- (3) Add the workers' right to the protection of his dignity: amendment 145 (van den Burg) or of his wellbeing and his private life: amendment 147 (Dieulangard)

- (4) Add a subparagraph or a paragraph on the right to compensation in the event of illness or accident at work: amendments 146 (Berès), 147 (Dieulangard) and 148 (Voggenhuber)
- (5) Add a paragraph on the right of workers to participate in improving their working conditions: amendment 148 (Voggenhuber)
- (6) Add a paragraph on the right of certain workers to special protection (inclusion in working conditions of the right to maternity and parental leave and the protection of young people): amendment 150 (Leinen).

Praesidium proposal:

See above (Praesidium proposal on Article 35)

ARTICLE 36a (new)

The right to professional training: amendment 154 (Loncle) [see also amendments 59 (Fayot), 151 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella) and 130 (Meyer)]

Article 37. Protection of young people

The minimum age of admission to employment must not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people, in particular those ensuring their preparation for work through vocational training and subject to derogations limited to certain light work.

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions which suit their age.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Delete the entire Article: amendments 155 (Cederschiöld), 156 (Friedrich-Mombaur) and 157 (Berthu)
- (2) Specify in the title that the Article refers to the protection of young people at work: amendments 158 (Korthals Altes) and 173 (Duff).
- (3) Amend the wording relating to the minimum working age, to strengthen it by setting a minimum: amendments 161 (Dehousse), 162 (Hirsch Ballin), 164 (Korthals Altes), or to attenuate it: amendments 160 (Gnauck), 167 (Goldsmith)
- (4) Delete [amendments 163 (Berès), 170 (Fayot)] or specify [amendments 162 (Hirsch Ballin), 164 (Korthals Altes)] possible derogations
- (5) Reformulate the second paragraph as a task for the Union: amendment 164 (Korthals Altes)
- (6) State the aims of adapting working conditions for young people: amendments 167 (Goldsmith), 169 (Dieulangard), 170 (Fayot) and 166 (van den Burg)

Praesidium proposal:

Becomes Article 35

New title: Protection of young people at work

Drafting amendments: Read the second paragraph as follows:

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions appropriate to their age, and be protected against economic exploitation and any work likely to harm their safety, health or physical, mental, moral or social development or to jeopardise their education.

Based on amendments submitted by the following members of the Convention:

Van den Burg, Dieulangard, Goldsmith, Fayot, Dehousse.

ARTICLE 37a (new)

- (1) Gender equality: amendment 176 (van den Burg) [see also amendments 30 (Vitorino), 31 (Berès), 32 (Rodriguez Bereijo), 33 (Goldsmith) and 110 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella)]
- 2) Protection of the elderly: amendment 177 (Berès) [see also amendments 271 (Einem-Holoubek), 314 (van den Burg), 315 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella)]

Article 38. Right to protection in cases of termination of employment

All workers have a right to protection against unjustified or unfair termination of employment.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Delete the entire Article: amendments 178 (Berthu), 179 (Friedrich-Mombaur), 180 (Goldsmith), 181 (Tarschys)

Article 46. Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union within the framework of the powers conferred on them by the Treaties, and to the Member States exclusively within the scope of Union law.
2. This Charter does not establish any competence or any new task for the Community or the Union or modify competences and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Member States should not be mentioned as addressees of the Charter: amendments 370 (Olsen), 371 (Bonde) or mentioned only to the extent that they are bound by the ECHR: amendment 372 (Goldsmith).
- (2) The list of addressees of the Charter should be supplemented by adding bodies "active in the sphere of the Union on the basis of an initiative by the Council": amendment 379 (Korthals Altes), the social partners: amendments 385 (van den Burg), 380 (Berès) or private persons: amendment 380 (Berès).
- (3) "Union law" should be replaced by "Community law": amendments 374 (Tarschys), 375 (Braibant), 376 (Rodriguez Bereijo) and 377 (Gnauck).
- (4) The 2nd paragraph should be deleted: amendments 381 (Voggenhuber) and 382 (Maij-Weggen)
- (5) A new paragraph on respect for the principle of subsidiarity should be added: amendments 386 (Haenel) and 387 (Melograni)

Praesidium proposal:

Drafting amendments: The Article should read as follows:

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed, with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity, to the institutions and bodies of the Union and to the Member States exclusively when they implement Union law.
2. The institutions and bodies of the Union, the Member States, exclusively within the scope of Community law, and the social partners at Community level, acting within the framework of their respective powers and in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity, shall observe the rights and implement the social principles set out in this Charter.

3. This Charter does not establish any competence or any new task for the Community or the Union or modify competences and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Based on amendments submitted by the following members of the Convention:

Article 47. Limitation of guaranteed rights

Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority. The actual substance of those rights and freedoms must be respected. Subject to the principle of proportionality, any limitation must remain within the limits necessary for the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society. Limitations may not exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Deletion of the entire Article: amendments 390 (Goldsmith), 391 (Cisneros Laborda) and 392 (Rodriguez Bereijo).
- (2) Beginning the Article with the principle of respect for the essential nature of these rights: amendment 398 (Gnauck) or by a general formula to the effect that these rights should not be considered as absolute privileges: amendment 392 (Rodriguez Bereijo)
- (3) Spelling out the objectives which might justify restrictions on the exercise of a right: by linking them with the objectives of the Community: amendment 392 (Rodriguez Bereijo) or by adding protection for rights and liberties: 402 (van den Burg)

- (4) Deletion of the reference to the ECHR: amendments 400 (Braibant), 401 (Korthals Altes) [see also 265 (Meyer)]
- (5) Addition of a reference to the revised European Social Charter: 402 (van den Burg)
- (6) Increasing the force of the reference to the ECHR system by making it more general: amendment 407 (Patijn) or mentioning the case law of the Court of Human Rights: amendments 403 (Voggenhuber-Buitenweg) and 404 (Tarschys)
- (7) Incorporation of Article 48 on the exercise of Treaty rights (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella)

Praesidium proposal

Scope of guaranteed rights

1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may only be made if they are necessary and genuinely correspond to objectives of general interest being pursued by the Communities or other legitimate interests to be respected in a democratic society. The actual substance of those rights and freedoms must be respected.
2. Limitations on rights and liberties which are also recognised by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms may not exceed those permitted by the latter.
3. The rights defined by the Treaty establishing the European Community shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined therein.

Based on amendments submitted by Rodriguez Bereijo and Van den Burg.

Article 48. Conditions and limits defined by the Treaty.

The rights enshrined by the Treaty establishing the European Community shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits laid down therein.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Deletion of the entire Article: 411 (Leinen), 412 (Einem-Holoubek), 413 (Korthals Altes), 414 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella), 415 (van den Burg), 416 (Hirsch Ballin) and 417 (Rodriguez Bereijo)
- (2) Redraft the Article to turn it into a non-regression provision: amendment 418 (Voggenhuber-Buitenweg)
- (3) Redraft the Article in order to break down Charter articles between the ECHR and the Treaties: amendment 419 (Goldsmith)
- (4) Replacement of "Treaty establishing the European Community" by "Treaty on European Union": amendment 421 (Berès)

Praesidium proposal:

Becomes Article 45(3)

Article 49. Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or undermining human rights and fundamental freedoms recognised, in their respective fields of application, by the Member States' constitutions, international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Deletion of the entire Article: amendment 425 (Cederschiöld)
- (2) Deletion of the reference to the possibility of international conventions to which the Union was party: amendments 427 (Rodriguez Bereijo) and 428 (Solé Tura)
- (3) Amendment of the list of references by substituting common constitutional traditions for Member States' constitutions: amendment 436 (Dehaene-De Gucht-Lallemand), adding the law of the Member States: amendment 429 (Goldsmith), adding the UN Pacts, ILO Conventions and the Social Charter: amendment 438 (Barros Moura-Azevedo)
- (4) Explicit reference to the case law of the Court of Human Rights: amendments 433 (Tarschys), 434 (Voggenhuber-Buitenweg), of the Court of Human Rights or the Court of Justice of the European Communities: amendment 426 (Dehousse), of national courts: amendment 358 (Bonde), and jurisprudence in general: amendment 435 (van den Burg)
- (5) Addition of a new subparagraph authorising the establishment or maintenance of stronger national protection measures: amendment 439 (Berès)
- (6) Addition of a paragraph on the interpretation of economic and social rights by reference to the Treaties and to international agreements :amendment 265 (Meyer) and 440 (Einem-Holoubek)

Praesidium proposal:

Becomes Article 46

Move "by the Member States' constitutions" to the end of the text: "and by Member States' constitutions".

Based on the Jansson amendment.

Article 50. Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter may be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms set forth herein or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for in this Charter.

Praesidium proposal

Becomes Article 47

In the first line, replace "may be" with "must be".

Based on the Goldsmith amendment.

ARTICLE 50a (new)

- (1) Right to effective appeal: amendment 442 (Barros Moura-Azevedo)[see also amendment 447 (Meyer)]

- (2) Services of general interest: amendment 445 (Barros Moura-Azevedo) [see also amendments 316 (Berès), 356 (Dehousse), 360 (Fayot), 361 (Dieulangard), 362 (Dehaene-De Gucht-Lallemand), 363 (Rodotà-Paciotti-Manzella), 364 (van den Burg) and 365 (Einem-Holoubek)]

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 26 June 2000CHARTE 4385/00*CONTRIB 244*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a complementary suggestion to article 34 of document CHARTE 4316/00 CONVENT 34, submitted by Mr. Daniel TARCHYS, personal representative of the Gouvernement of Sweden.

Article 34 Rights of collective bargaining and action

Proposal (bold):

Employers and workers or their organisations have the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and to take collective action , in conflicts of interest, to defend or promote their economic and social interests, /.../under the conditions laid down by national legislation, collective agreements, custom or practice.

Should management and labour so desire, the dialogue between them at Community level may lead to contractual relations, including agreements.

Reasons:

The proposed amendments aim to confirm rights already existing at national level as well as those enshrined in the European Social Charter and the Community Charter in a way which will respect the different national systems for these rights.

The reference to the European level is unclear in the current draft article. It seems preferable to mention the right to negotiate at Community level in a separate paragraph and with the same wording as in Article 139.1 TEC.

ANNA BENAKI-PSAROUDA, Représentante du Parlement Hellénique
AMENDEMENTS AU PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX

ARTICLE 1a ou ARTICLE 22§3 (CONVENT 28 en combinaison avec CONVENT 36 et 37):

Il est proposé d'ajouter un 2ème paragraphe à l'article 1a ou de remplacer le paragraphe 3 de l'article 22 par le texte suivant :

Exposé des motifs

1. - L'égalité entre femmes et hommes est un “principe fondamental” du droit communautaire et un “droit fondamental de la personne humaine”, selon une jurisprudence constante de la CJCE (v. p. ex. arrêts du 15.6.1978, Defrenne III, 149/77, Rec 1509; du 10.2.2000, Sievers, C-270/97). Le Traité la proclame en tant que “mission” et objectif de la CE et impose à celle-ci l'obligation positive de la “promouvoir”, c'est à dire, de ne pas se contenter de l'égalité formelle, mais d'oeuvrer pour atteindre l'égalité substantielle entre femmes et hommes dans tous les domaines de son activité (articles 2, 3§2 traité CE).

Le respect de l'acquis communautaire et des impératifs du Traité exige que l'application d'un principe si fondamental de l'Union, comme l'est le principe de l'égalité substantielle entre femmes et hommes, soit garantie par un des premiers articles de la Charte, dans tous les domaines de compétence de l'Union, par un libellé exprès, clair et spécifique, qui ne soit susceptible d'aucun doute ou fausse interprétation. C'est ainsi seulement que sera obtenue la sécurité juridique qu'exige le mandat du Conseil de Cologne.

Le 1er alinéa du 3ème paragraphe de l'article 22 du Projet ne contient pas une norme générale satisfaisante. Par ailleurs, la mention indicative des rémunérations et autres conditions de travail, que contient le 2ème alinéa du même paragraphe, est tout à fait inadéquate, puisque le droit communautaire en vigueur contient des normes qui imposent l'égalité entre femmes et hommes dans bien d'autres domaines.

2. - Par ailleurs, l'égalité substantielle entre femmes et hommes constitue un principe universel, garanti aussi par des traités ratifiés par tous les États membres, tels les Pactes de l'ONU (article 3 du Pacte des droits civils et politiques, article 3 du Pacte des droits économiques, sociaux et culturels) et la Convention sur l'élimination des discriminations contre les femmes.

Comme il est constaté par les institutions communautaires et internationales compétentes, les clauses générales de non discrimination ne suffisent pas pour atteindre l'égalité substantielle entre femmes et hommes. Cela est dû au caractère particulier des discriminations en raison du sexe, qui continuent dans plusieurs domaines et dont souffrent surtout les femmes. Les discriminations à l'encontre de celles-ci sont, d'ailleurs, souvent multiples (en raison du sexe et d'autres motifs).

Cette situation a rendu nécessaires, en plus des clauses générales de non discrimination, des dispositions communautaires et internationales qui exigent l'égalité substantielle entre femmes et hommes, et même des traités spécifiques, telle la Convention pour l'élimination des discriminations contre les femmes dans tous les domaines. Cette Convention a été récemment enrichie d'un Protocole qui permet les recours individuels et que l'Union s'enorgueillit d'avoir soutenu et de promouvoir.

3. – Pour combattre effectivement les discriminations en raison du sexe, des mesures positives temporaires sont requises. Celles-ci ne constituent pas des discriminations, mais des moyens pour atteindre l'égalité substantielle entre femmes et hommes, selon la Convention sur l'élimination des discriminations contre les femmes (Art. 4§1) et le Traité CE (Art. 141). La Déclaration No 28 annexée au Traité d'Amsterdam précise qu'elles doivent viser “avant tout à améliorer la situation des femmes”.

Les mesures ou actions positives sont aussi prévues par un nombre croissant de Constitutions nationales (v. Constitutions allemande, article 3§2; autrichienne, article 7§2; portugaise, article 9(h); finlandaise, article 6§4; suédoise, chapitre 2§16; française, articles 3 et 4; hellénique-projet). Une “tradition constitutionnelle commune”, au sens de l'article 6§2 Traité UE, est ainsi formée. De telles mesures sont, d'ailleurs, recommandées et requises par les institutions communautaires et internationales compétentes.

La nature particulière des discriminations contre les femmes, ainsi que la nécessité des actions positives sont confirmées par la CJCE (arrêt Badeck, C-158/97, 26.3.2000).

ARTICLE 16 § 3 (CONVENT 28 en combinaison avec CONVENT 36 et 37).

Les ajouts suivants, qui sont soulignés, sont proposés :

Exposé des motifs

La nécessité du respect des principes démocratiques ainsi que des droits fondamentaux et des libertés fondamentales par les parents, dans le cadre de l'éducation et de l'enseignement de leurs enfants, ainsi que la nécessité d'enseigner aux enfants et aux jeunes ces principes, droits et libertés est évidente. Par ailleurs, la garantie de l'intérêt de l'enfant est requise aussi par la Convention sur les droits de l'enfant, ratifiée par tous les États membres.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

fundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 29 June 2000
(OR. fr)

SN 3340/00

PRAESIDIUM NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Proposals for horizontal Articles presented by the Praesidium

Article 46

Becomes Article 44, with the wording found in CHARTE 4373/00 CONVENT 40.

Read Article as follows:

- "1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed, with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity, to the institutions and bodies of the Union and to the Member States exclusively when they implement Union law.

2. The institutions and bodies of the Union, the Member States, exclusively within the scope of Community law, and the social partners at Community level, acting within the framework of their respective powers and in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity, shall observe the social rights and implement the social principles set out in this Charter.

3. This Charter does not establish any competence or any new task for the Community or the Union or modify competences and tasks defined by the Treaties."

Based on amendments submitted by the following members of the Convention:

Gnauck, Berès, Neisser, Haenel, Melograni, Duff, Braibant, Leinen, Van den Burg, Tarschys, Rodotà – Paciotti – Manzella, Hirsch Ballin, Barros Moura – Azevedo, Goldsmith, Cederschiold.

Article 47

Becomes Article 45

Scope of guaranteed rights

- 1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may only be made if they are necessary and genuinely correspond to objectives of general interest being pursued by the Communities or other legitimate interests to be respected in a democratic society. The actual substance of those rights and freedoms must be respected.
- 2. Limitations to rights and liberties which are also recognised by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms may not exceed those permitted by the latter.
- 3. The rights defined by the Treaty establishing the European Community shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined therein.

Based on amendments submitted by Rodriguez Bereijo, Van den Burg.

Article 48

Becomes Article 45(3).

Article 49

Becomes Article 46

Move "by the Member States' constitutions" to the end of the text "and by Member States' constitutions".

Based on an amendment by Jansson.

Article 50

Becomes Article 47.

In the first line, replace "may be" with "must be".

Based on an amendment by Goldsmith.

Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union Convent 34

Proposed amendment to Article 47: Limitation of guaranteed rights

Submitted by: Jürgen Gnauck, Thuringian Minister for Federal and European Affairs

Proposed text:

"Article 47. Limitation of guaranteed rights.

The actual substance of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be respected. These rights and freedoms may be limited only by the competent legislative authority. A limitation is permissible only for the purpose of protecting the fundamental rights of third parties or other essential common goods. Limitations may not exceed the degree that is absolutely necessary and must observe the principle of proportionality. These limitations must respect the level of protection afforded by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms."

Reasons:

I think it important to add to my original proposed amendment to Article 47 by clarifying what kind of limits may be set. A limitation must not have the effect of nullifying a fundamental right. The previous wording – "Subject to the principle of proportionality, any limitation must remain within the limits necessary for the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society" – would be unlikely to fulfil this intention as on this basis violations of a fundamental right could (too) frequently be seen as justified. A more restrictive interpretation of the general determination of limits would therefore seem indispensable in the interests of the citizen.

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution relating to the horizontal clauses by Mr Hirsch BALLIN, representative of the Parliament of the Netherlands.

E.M.H. Hirsch Ballin

Comments on the relationship between the Charter and the ECHR in connection with the "horizontal provision" in Article 47 (= Article 45 new), according to CHARTE SN 3340/00 of 29 June 2000.

1. Where reference is made to the ECHR, the "accompanying Protocols" must always be mentioned too. (Alternative: express this in a defining provision). Obviously the effect is limited, as in the case of the ECHR itself, to those Protocols of which provisions are incorporated in the Charter.
2. There are two aspects to clauses limiting fundamental rights: on the one hand they are enabling provisions, without which limitation of the fundamental right is not permitted; on the other hand they make limitation subject to conditions. (The conditions may be of different types: they may, for example, relate to the purpose for which or the interests in which limitations may be imposed, the authority which is entitled to impose them or the procedure which must be followed). There are also two aspects to any vagueness in a limitation clause: it can lead to authorities considering themselves justified in breaching a fundamental right, but can also be invoked to contest what may be a legitimate limitation in lengthy legal proceedings. For that reason vagueness in limitation clauses must be avoided as far as possible and no uncertainty must be generated regarding the relationship to (legal decisions on) the ECHR and Protocols.
3. I therefore support the proposal by various members that it be clearly and explicitly stated that the limitation clauses in the ECHR are applicable. Various ways of doing this could be envisaged (taking over the whole text, adopting a "Parts A and B" system, Korthals Altes proposal with references by Article). Ingo Friedrich's suggestion of listing the relevant provisions corresponding to the ECHR and Protocols in a single Article (which could be Article 47 = 45 new) seems to me a feasible one.
4. There are a few draft provisions in the Charter, e.g. Article 19 (personal data), which do not correspond, or correspond only to a small degree to provisions in the ECHR and Protocols. In these cases, which are fortunately rare, it will be necessary to formulate an independent limitation clause in the Charter. Otherwise, precisely in those places where we want the Charter to have added value, we would have to fall back on a vague, general limitation clause with all its accompanying dangers (see paragraph 2).
5. The revised text of Article 47 (= 45) retains a general condition for limitations of fundamental rights which was also found in previous drafts, namely that they must not affect "the actual substance" of the rights. The "actual substance guarantee" plays an important role in German constitutional law but the significance of incorporating this into the Charter is questionable. The ECHR follows a different line. It may be argued that the "actual substance guarantee" is in essence also to be found in the ECHR's limitation clauses, but then the addition is superfluous. If, on the other hand, we wish to add an extra condition to those in the ECHR – and the wording of the Article seems to imply that – then we are opening up a Pandora's box full of points of contention. I therefore also doubt if it is wise to incorporate the "actual substance guarantee" in our Charter; a reference to it in the notes with an explanation seems preferable to me.

6. I support the proposal by Mr Korthals Altes in amendment 582 (wrongly headed) relating to the interpretation of the Charter in relation to the ECHR (and Protocols – see paragraph 1).

E.M.H. Hirsch Ballin

29 June 2000

Note

Article 46(2) now limits itself to "Community law". That should be extended again to include the law of the Union as a whole.

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union – Draft preamble

PREAMBLE

1. The peoples of Europe have established an ever closer union between them and henceforth share the same destiny;
2. This Union is founded on the indivisible, universal principles of the dignity of the human being, of freedom, of the equality of all persons, both men and women, and of solidarity; it is based on the principles of democracy and the rule of law;
3. The Union contributes to the development of these common values while respecting the diversity of the cultures and traditions of the peoples of Europe as well as the national identities of the Member States and their constitutional organisation at the national, regional and local levels;
4. The protection of fundamental rights in the Union and their visibility to all require that they be anchored in a charter of fundamental rights of the European Union;

5. This charter confirms the rights that arise out of, inter alia, the constitutional principles common to the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention on Human Rights, the social charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe and the jurisprudence of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights;
6. It adapts the content and the scope of these rights to the development of society, to social progress and to scientific and technological developments;
7. Enjoyment of these rights entails responsibilities and duties with regard both to other persons and to the human community;
8. The Charter neither increases nor amends the powers and tasks of the Community and of the European Union as laid down in the Treaties. When they implement Union law the institutions and bodies of the Union and the Member States will guarantee, with regard to every person, the following rights and freedoms, in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity.

Chapter: SolidarityArticle 31 Labour rights

- (1) Everyone has the right to work¹ and the right to job protection. In particular, everyone has the right to choose and to engage in an occupation and the right of free access to job-placement services free of charge.

Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, Dehousse, Beres, Fayot, Dieulangard, van den Burg, Rodota/Pacioti/Manzella

- (2) Everyone has a right to protection against unjustified or abusive termination of employment.

Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, Gnauck, Dehaene/Gucht, Dieulangard, van den Burg, Rodota/Pacioti/Manzella, Beres

- (3) Notwithstanding Article 22 (CONVENT 28) the social and occupational integration of particularly disadvantaged groups shall be promoted.

- (4) Paragraph 3 shall apply in particular for the disabled.

Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, Taschys

Article 32 Right to just and favourable conditions of work

- (1) Everyone has the right to safe and healthy working conditions. For the protection of this right everyone is entitled in particular to have limits imposed on daily and weekly working hours, to have an annual period of paid leave and to have fair and equal remuneration for work of equal value.

Sentence 1: Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, Gnauck, Leinen, van den Burg, Loncle, Beres, Fayot, Dieulangard, Dehousse

Sentence 2 part 1: Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, van den Burg, Dieulangard, Einem/Holoubek, Gnauck, Dehousse, Beres, Rodota/Pacioti/Manzella, Korthals Altes, Goldsmith

Sentence 2 part 2: Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, van den Burg, Beres, Loncle, Fayot, Rodota/Pacioti/Manzella, Dieulangard

- (2) Young people, pregnant women and those bringing up children have the right to special protection. This right includes in particular the granting of maternity leave and parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child, with the aim of reconciling family and professional life.

Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, Beres, Dehousse, Leinen, Einem/Holoubek, van den Burg, Duff

Article 33 Rights of collective bargaining and action

- (1) Everyone has the right to form trade unions and to take collective action, including strike action, to protect their economic and social interests.

Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, van den Burg, Fayot, Dieulangard, Beres, Dehousse, Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella, Korthals Altes

- (2) The autonomy of the trade unions and the employers' organisations in negotiating wage rates shall be respected.

Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, Leinen

- (3) The rights of workers to be involved in measures affecting them within the undertaking shall be protected.

Article 34 Right to health

Everyone has the right to health protection. For the implementation of this right the Union shall above all respect universal access to medical care.

Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, Duff, Beres, Dehousse, Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella, Dieulangard

Article 35 Right to education and continuing training

- (1) Everyone has the right to education, the right of access to vocational and continuing training and the right to lifelong learning. These rights include the right to receive free compulsory education.

Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, Fayot, Loncle, Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella

- (2) The freedom to found educational establishments shall be guaranteed subject to democratic principles.
- (3) The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious, philosophical and pedagogical convictions shall be respected.

Article 36 Right to housing

The universal right to adequate housing shall be respected.

Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, Beres, Fayot, van den Burg

Article 37 Right to social security

- (1) The universal right to social security and the right of access to social services shall be protected, in order to enable everyone to lead a decent life especially in the event of unemployment, industrial accident, invalidity, maternity, illness or old age.

Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, Rodota/Pacioti/Manzella, Beres, Dieulangard, Dehousse

- (2) The Union shall protect the right of anyone lacking sufficient resources to be guaranteed a decent existence through social assistance.

Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, Dehaene/Gucht/Lallemande, Beres, Dieulangard, Rodota/Pacioti/Manzella, Duff, van den Burg, Leinen

Article 38 Right to a healthy environment and to consumer protection

- (1) The Union shall respect the universal right to a healthy environment and shall take steps to protect natural resources.

Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, Einem/Holoubek, Neisser, Dieulangard, Tarschys, van den Burg, Dehaene/Gucht/Lallemande, Rodota/Pacioti/Manzella, Bereijo, Duff

- (2) The Union shall ensure a high level of protection as regards the health, safety and interests of consumers.

Article 39 Services of general interest

The Union shall respect the universal right of free and equal access to services of general interest.

Based on amendments made by Braibant, Meyer, van den Burg, Dehaene/Gucht/ Lallemande, Beres, Fayot, Einem/Holoubek, Dehousse, Dieulangard, Rodota/Pacioti/ Manzella

Vienna, 2 July 2000

Sir,

As I was unable to attend the meeting of the Convention on the afternoon of Friday 30 July, I would like to take this opportunity to forward you my comments on the Articles which were (presumably) discussed in the afternoon.

Article 20.

In Articles 1 to 30 the Praesidium has correctly attempted to formulate the fundamental right concerned very concisely, and to not include its limitations at the same time. In Article 20 the second sentence does not in my view state more than the general horizontal clause of Article 45 (new).

Therefore, my suggestion is: delete the second sentence of Article 20.

Article 21.

I fully agree with the Praesidium's compromise proposal on Article 21. It is the minimum which is to be achieved. Any limitation of the Geneva Convention in the Charter could not, however, be considered.

Article 21a.

I expressly agree with the Praesidium's proposal.

Article 22.

In the Convention's proceedings, the importance of the Charter's readability for citizens has been frequently discussed, as has the importance of its intelligibility. Article 22 provides in legally compressed form the basis of a prohibition of all forms of discrimination. However, in many cases a mere prohibition of discrimination is not enough. In these instances, there is a need for explicit compensation measures (positive discrimination).

For political reasons – i.e., in order to fulfil the hopes and meet the expectations of many people and many groups of people, and in order to make it clearer what is involved and who is to be favoured – as well as for reasons relating to the content, as an explicit provision on positive discrimination in the case of minorities is required, I would like to once again propose splitting Article 22 into three separate Articles:

1. Delete the third paragraph of Article 22
2. A new Article 22a Equal status of women and men
3. A new Article 22b Equal status of minorities

In this connection, I refer to the texts proposed by Einem/Holoubek (proposals for amendment 467 and 470).

Article 23.

The previous version of Article 23 formulated clear rights, one could say personal rights, for children. The Praesidium's compromise proposal now formulates a right to care but at the same time it deprives children of the right to manage their affairs – at least in comparison with the previous version of the text. I therefore propose leaving the previous text as paragraph 1 and adding paragraph 2, consisting of the first sentence of paragraph 1 and of paragraph 2 of the Praesidium compromise, as I also consider the principles of this text to be important.

Therefore, my proposed text is:

Article 23: Children's rights

- (1) Children must be treated as equal individuals, they must be allowed to influence matters pertaining to their person to a degree corresponding to their maturity.
- (2) Children shall have the right to protection and to the care necessary for their well-being. In all decisions relating to children, whether taken by public or private welfare bodies, the first concern shall be the child's best interests.

Article 30.

In line with my proposal for amendment 592, I would once again like to argue in favour of including a paragraph 2 which would also grant freedom of movement to third country nationals after a certain minimum period of legal residence. However, above all, in view of the expected effect on third parties, I believe it is important to include a paragraph 3 which – while not absolutely essential in legal terms, as it is covered by paragraph 1 – clearly formulates a right of return. Experience with expulsions of members of ethnic groups in the Balkans conflict – in countries, of which at least some are working towards membership of an enlarged Union – has highlighted the political importance of sending out a clear message!

Therefore, my proposed text is:

Article 30. Freedom of movement

- (1) Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.
- (2) Every citizen of a third State shall enjoy this right to the same degree, if he or she has resided legally within the territory of the Member States for five years.
- (3) Every citizen of the Union is entitled to leave the territory of the Member States and to return there.

I hope that with these proposals I have put forward a number of arguments which you will find convincing and remain,

Yours faithfully,

Caspar Einem

Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN, Member of the European Parliament.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article 31

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne Kaufmann

Proposed text:

Delete the Article.

Reasons

A separate horizontal Article for fundamental economic and social rights runs counter to the obligation to treat all rights equally.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article 33

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne Kaufmann

Proposed text:

Article 33. Right to information, (one word deleted) consultation and co-determination (three words deleted)

1. Workers have the right to full information and consultation in good time.
2. Workers and their representatives have the right to co-determination in industrial decision-making processes at national, transnational and Union level within the undertaking which employs them.

Reasons

- I. Does not concern the English text.
- II. The German text should refer not to "Pflicht" ("duty") but to the individual right of workers to be informed and consulted within the undertaking. Moreover, the emphasis should be on information being given not only in good time but also in full.
- III. Workers' right to co-determination is referred to in Article 137(3) TEC as part of representation and collective defence of the interests of workers and employers. In the course of establishing European works councils, it is indispensable to secure workers' rights to representation of their interests by means of an individual right to co-determination in industrial decision-making processes. The ECSC Treaty, moreover, lays down specific co-determination provisions. These provisions should not be undermined by the absence of an individual right of workers to co-determination in a firm's internal procedures. In addition, the Charter of Fundamental Rights must be open to future provisions on co-determination, as is clear from Article 137(3) TEC. As a general rule, the Charter should also be open to democratisation of industrial relations, which is playing an ever greater role internationally in discussions about fundamental social rights. From that point of view also, it would be a mistake not to establish workers' right to co-determination as part of fundamental social rights in the EU.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article 34

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne Kaufmann

Proposed text:

Article 34. Rights of collective bargaining and action

1. Employers and workers have the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements (23 words deleted) under the conditions laid down by national legislation and practice.
2. Workers and their trade unions have at national, transnational and Union level, an unlimited right of association, a right to engage in collective bargaining and solidarity action, to strike and to take other collective action.
3. Agreements to restrict or impede workers' right to freedom of assembly and association are invalid. Lock-outs are prohibited.

Reasons:

- I. Does not concern the English text.
- II. The right of collective bargaining and action as contained in the Charter should not fall behind that in the ILO Conventions. In particular, the ILO Conventions stipulate that all attempts to undermine this right and by various acts prevent workers from enjoying it are invalid (ILO Convention No 98, Articles 1 and 2). Furthermore, the means by which workers can enforce their economic and social interests, such as solidarity action, strikes and other collective action, should be mentioned. The International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights explicitly lays down the right to strike in Article 8(1)(d).

- III. Lock-out is an illegitimate weapon which does not achieve "equality of arms". It is an inadmissible restriction of the right to strike as laid down in Article 8(1)(d) referred to above.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article 35

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne Kaufmann

Proposed text:

Article 35. Right to rest periods and annual leave

Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave. Sundays and national holidays continue to be legally protected as days of rest and leisure.

Reasons:

- I. Does not concern the English text.
- II. In many Member States Sunday is legally protected as a day of rest (cf. inter alia German Basic Law, Article 140). This secures the external conditions enabling workers not only to recover physically but also to rest and find time for social contacts.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article 37

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne Kaufmann

Proposed text:

Article 36. Safe and healthy working conditions

1. Every worker has the right to safe and healthy working conditions.
2. Every worker has the right to refuse to work for a certain period if statutory labour, health and environmental provisions are being grossly violated at the workplace.

Reasons:

- I. Does not concern the English text.
- II. In order fully to guarantee the rights of workers at work, it is absolutely essential to have an individual right to a direct remedy, i.e. the right to leave the workplace without endangering one's job. It further develops workers' rights to co-determination in a firm's internal affairs and protects them from damage to health at work and the loss of human dignity in the working environment.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 37

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne Kaufmann

Proposed text:

Article 37. Protection of children and young people

The minimum age of admission of young people to employment may not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age. (33 words deleted)

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions which suit their age.

Child labour is prohibited.

Reasons:

Union Member States prohibit any form of child labour and guarantee compliance on their territory with both ILO Conventions on child labour (C 138 and C 182).

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 38

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne Kaufmann

Proposed text:

Article 38. Right to work

1. Everyone has the right to decent work which guarantees an income.
2. Everyone has the right to equal pay for work of equal value.
3. All workers have a right to protection against unjustified or abusive termination of employment.
4. Everyone has a right to adequate benefits guaranteeing subsistence in the event of unemployment

Reasons:

- I. Does not concern the English text.
- II. view of the ILO Conventions on employment rights which have been signed by Union Member States, limitation of this provision to the right to protection against unjustified or abusive termination of employment, as provided for in the Praesidium's draft, is incomprehensible.

I propose that the right to work be put before employment rights. The right to work is contained in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights adopted by the UN on

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

10 December 1948. Article 23(1) reads: "Everyone has the right to work, to free choice of employment, to just and favourable conditions of work and to protection against unemployment."

In the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the right to work is guaranteed by the Contracting States. Article 6(1) reads: "The States Parties to the present Covenant recognise the right to work, which includes the right of everyone to the opportunity to gain his living by work which he freely chooses or accepts, and will take appropriate steps to safeguard this right. "

The European Social Charter contains provisions on the right to work and employment rights. For example, Part I, 1 reads: "Everyone shall have the opportunity to earn his living in an occupation freely entered upon." Part I, 4 reads: " All workers have the right to a fair remuneration sufficient for a decent standard of living for themselves and their families." and Part II, Article 1, "The right to work," reads "With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right to work, the Contracting States undertake to accept as one of their primary aims and responsibilities the achievement and maintenance of as high and stable a level of employment as possible, with a view to the attainment of full employment."

The "right to work" and extensive "employment rights" are also laid down in many of the constitutions of Union Member States. For example, Article 4 of the Italian Constitution reads: " The Republic recognises the right of all citizens to work and promotes such conditions as will make this right effective", while Article 35 reads: "The Republic safeguards labour in all its forms and methods of execution. (...) It promotes and encourages international agreements, and organisations calculated to confirm and regulate the rights of labour (...) and (...) the protection of Italian labour abroad."

The French Constitution of 1958 includes references to employment rights which must be guaranteed. Thus, Article 34 stipulates that legislation to be enacted by Parliament must govern, inter alia, "employment, trade union and social security law."

In the constitutions of countries which will accede in the next few years as part of the EU enlargement process the "right to work" and "employment rights" are mentioned. For example, Article 24 of the Constitution of the Polish Republic reads: "Work shall be protected by the Republic of Poland. The State shall exercise supervision over the conditions of work." Article 65(1) reads: "Everyone shall have the freedom to choose and to pursue his occupation and to choose his place of work" and Article 66 (1) "Everyone shall have the right to safe and hygienic conditions of work. The methods of implementing this right and the obligations of employers shall be specified by statute." The Hungarian Constitution includes the following Section 70/B: 1. In the Republic of Hungary everyone shall have the right to work and the freedom to choose his work and profession. 2. Everyone shall have the right to the same pay for the same work without any form of discrimination. 3. Every employed person shall have the right to an income corresponding to the quantity and quality of his work. 4. Everyone shall have the right to rest, leisure and regular paid leave."

EEA countries also, such as the Kingdom of Norway, recognise obligations regarding the right to work. Article 110 of the Norwegian Constitution reads: "It is the responsibility of the authorities of the State to create conditions enabling every person capable of work to earn a living by his work. Specific provisions concerning the right of employees to co-determination at their place of work shall be laid down by law."

The constitutions of German Länder also include provisions on the right to work. For example, Article 39 of the Constitution of Saxony-Anhalt states that the Land and the local authorities have a constant obligation to give everyone the opportunity to earn his living through work which has been freely chosen. The corresponding provision of the Brandenburg Constitution, Article 48 I states that the Land has an obligation, within the limits of its powers, to ensure that the right to work, which encompasses the right of every individual to earn his living by work he has freely chosen, is put into effect by means of a policy of full employment and work promotion. There are similar provisions in the constitutions of Mecklenburg-Western Pomerania and Saxony. Article 18 of the Constitution of Berlin states that everyone has the right to work. It is the duty of the Land to protect and promote that right. The Land is to help to create and keep jobs and to guarantee a high level of employment in keeping with the overall balance of the economy. Where a person cannot be found work, he has a claim to maintenance payments from public funds.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Last but not least, Article 127 TEC reads: "The Community shall contribute to a high level of employment by encouraging cooperation between Member States and by supporting and, if necessary, complementing their action. In doing so, the competences of the Member States shall be respected. The objective of a high level of employment shall be taken into consideration in the formulation and implementation of Community policies and activities."

At the EU Special Summit in Lisbon the Heads of State and Government adopted the achievement of full employment in the Union as one of the objectives of Union policies.

- III. Equal pay, protection from dismissal and benefits in the event of unemployment are essential employment rights which protect human dignity in the working environment, and references to them can be found in many constitutions of Union Member States. Employment rights are also explicitly guaranteed in Article 7 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.

Proposed text:

Article 39: Right to reconcile family and professional life

All workers have the right to reconcile their family and professional lives. This right includes in particular the right to maternity leave before and/or after childbirth and the right to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.

Reasons:

Does not concern the English text.

Proposed text:

Article 40: Right of migrant workers to equal treatment

Third-country nationals working lawfully in the territory of the Member States and their families are entitled to treatment not less favourable than that of European Union workers in respect of working conditions and other social benefits.

Reasons:

- I. Does not concern the English text.
- II. This right should also be extended to the principle of equal treatment regarding social benefits as already laid down in Article 7(2) of Regulation (EEC) No 1612/68.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 41

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne Kaufmann

Proposed text:

Article 41: Social Security

- (1) Every person has the right to social security
- (2) Every person has the right to protection from poverty and social exclusion.
- (2) Provision shall be made in accordance with each Member State's rules for social benefits providing protection in the event of maternity, illness, dependence, incapacity for work and invalidity, old age, the need to care for survivors and in the event of unemployment.
- (3) (phrase deleted) Every person lacking sufficient resources has the right to basic social security to guarantee a decent existence.
- (4) Every person has the right to adequate and decent housing.

Reasons:

- I. The basic right to social security should be formulated as an individual right. In the "General Declaration of Human Rights" adopted by the UNO on 10 December 1948, the "Right to Social Security" is specifically laid down. Article 25(1) states that "everyone has the right to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of himself and of his family, including food, clothing, housing and medical care and necessary social services, and the right to security in the event of unemployment, sickness, disability, widowhood, old age or other lack of livelihood in circumstances beyond his control." In the European Social Charter, the references to a right to social security are clear. The right to social security and rights further articulating that right are incorporated in great detail, viz. Article 12, "The right to social security", Article 13, "The right to social and medical assistance", Article 14, "The right to benefit from social welfare services", Article 15, "The right of persons with disabilities to independence, social integration and participation in the life of the community", Article 16, "The right of the family to social, legal and economic protection", Article 17, "The right of children and young persons to social, legal and economic protection", and Article 4 of the Additional Protocol to the European Social Charter sets out the right of elderly persons to social protection. The right to social security is also stated directly or by implication in the constitutional traditions of individual Member States of the Union, for example in Article 38 of the Italian constitution, which states inter alia that "Every citizen incapacitated for work who lacks the necessary resources for life is entitled to support and social care".

Also in the constitutional traditions of the countries which are candidates for accession within the framework of EU enlargement reference is made to a fundamental right to social security. Thus Article 67 of the Polish constitution states that "1. Citizens have the right to social security in the event of incapacity for work following illness or invalidity and after reaching retirement age. The extent and form of social security is regulated by the law. 2. A citizen who through no fault of his own cannot obtain work and has no other means of maintaining himself has a right to social security". Furthermore, social rights are contained in Articles 68 to 71 and Article 75. The Hungarian constitution also recognises the following obligations: "Section 70/E 1. Citizens of the Hungarian Republic are entitled to social security; in old age, in the event of illness, if widowed, orphaned or unemployed through no fault of their own they are entitled to the care necessary for their continued existence". 2. In the Hungarian Republic the right to assistance through social insurance and the system of the social institutions is guaranteed".

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

- II. To guarantee a decent existence, in order to articulate the obligation to safeguard human dignity adopted in Article 1 of the Charter, the "right to social security" must provide social assistance for every person lacking sufficient resources, sickness insurance and medical assistance, housing support and/or publicly financed housing. The "right to social security" must cover at least the minimum of socio-cultural existence and allow the person concerned to have an equal share in social life and to take responsibility for running his own life. It may not be linked to any form of condition, such as forced labour in the low pay sector.
- III. It is indispensable for any society which guarantees and protects the right of every person to dignity, and thus also to a decent existence, to keep in view the goal of offering guarantees of basic social rights; having emerged as premises in social movements since the French Revolution, they must not call into question the guaranteed freedoms of the rule of law but must actually bring about freedom for a majority of citizens and provide the opportunities for taking advantage of it. An idealistic approach to the degree of protection provided by defensive rights is one of the reasons for criticism of the non-specific nature of fundamental social rights; the social conditions for exercising fundamental rights go largely unconsidered. Not to develop to the fullest a clearly delineated fundamental right to social security would mean denying many citizens the material bases for assuming their fundamental rights and freedoms. In the preamble to the "International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights", the States parties to the Covenant committed themselves to implementation of social rights, "...recognising that, in accordance with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the ideal of free human beings enjoying freedom from fear and want can only be achieved if conditions are created whereby everyone may enjoy his economic, social and cultural rights, as well as his civil and political rights".

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

IV. The "right to adequate and decent housing" is an indispensable element of the "right to social security". It is a necessary articulation of the material conditions through which alone the assumption of fundamental rights and freedoms for all people is possible. Here too, the Charter must not fall short of the "Universal Declaration of Human Rights" adopted by the UNO on 10 December 1948; this applies in particular to Article 25(1). Nor must the Charter fall short with regard to the right to adequate and decent housing accorded to every person in Article 11 of the "International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights".

Proposed text:

Article 42. Health

Everyone shall have the right to health, medical attention and health care.

Reasons:

Article 42 should be worded as an individual right to health and on no account should it fall short of the rights confirmed in Article 12(1) and (2) of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. Article 12 reads: 1. The States Parties to the present Covenant recognise the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health. 2. The steps to be taken by the States Parties to the present Covenant to achieve the full realisation of this right shall include those necessary for: (a) The provision for the reduction of the stillbirth-rate and of infant mortality and for the healthy development of the child; (b) The improvement of all aspects of environmental and industrial hygiene; (c) The prevention, treatment and control of epidemic, endemic, occupational and other diseases; (d) The creation of conditions which would assure to all medical service and medical attention in the event of sickness. DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article: 46

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne Kaufmann

Proposed text:

Article 46. Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Community and the Union within the framework of the powers conferred on them by the Treaties, and to the Member States exclusively within the scope of Community and Union law.
2. This Charter does not establish any competence or any new task for the Community or the Union or modify competences and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Reasons:

It is clear from the wording used in Article 46(2) and Article 49 of the draft that a distinction is being made between the Community and the Union. Since the relationship between them is in fact very much debated, they should always be mentioned together so as to establish the scope of fundamental rights clearly.

Letter of Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the government of the Netherlands, to the Convention

Re: EU Charter / relation to ECHR / my proposal for a horizontal article

I refer to my proposal for a new horizontal article on the relation between the EU Charter and the ECHR. The proposal was erroneously published in Charta 4332/00, as a second amendment to article 29 (number 582 on page 710). The proposal should, however, be taken into consideration within the context of the horizontal clauses that the Convention will deal with today.

I draw your attention to this proposal.

For your reference I repeat the contents of my proposal. It reads as follows:

'Insofar as this Charter contains rights corresponding to rights laid down in the European Convention on Human Rights, their meaning and scope are the same as the meaning and scope of the rights under the ECHR, unless this Charter provides greater protection.

Reasons

This clause makes it clear that the rights in the Charter have the same meaning and scope as the provisions of the ECHR, as interpreted by the CDH, even if the formulation differs. In Article 5 of the ECHR, security is linked to the individual person. The Charter does not therefore explicitly cover a right to security in the general sense, as is expressed for example in Article 2 of the Treaty on European Union which states that one of the objectives of the Union is "to maintain and develop the Union as an area of freedom, security and justice...". Clearly that Article leaves open the possibility of further protection under the Charter.

En français:

'Dans la mesure où la présente Charte contient des droits correspondants à des droits énoncés dans la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, leur signification et leur portée sont similaires à la signification et à la portée que leur confère la CEDH, sauf si la présente Charte prévoit une protection plus étendue.

Justificatif:

Cette disposition fait clairement apparaître que les droits énoncés par la Charte ont la même signification et la même portée que les dispositions de la CEDH, telles qu'interprétées par la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme, même si la formulation diffère. Ainsi, la sûreté énoncée à l'article 5 de la CEDH est liée à la personne. Par conséquent, il ne s'agit nullement dans la Charte d'un droit à la sûreté au sens large, comme celui que est énoncé par exemple à l'article 2 du traité sur l'union européenne, aux termes duquel l'Union se donne notamment pour objectif 'de maintenir et de développer l'Union en tant qu'espace de liberté, de sécurité et de justice ...'. Bien entendu, cet article n'empêche pas d'offrir avec la Charte une protection plus étendue.

For the Secretariat: I kindly request you to arrange that copies of this letter be distributed during today's meeting of the Convention in Brussels, and be send around by e-mail.

TOWARDS CONSENSUS

A Contribution by Daniel Tarschys

Time is short, and the Convention is still divided on a number of fundamental issues pertaining to the very architecture of the Charter. To move forwards and reach agreement on a forceful text, we must now urgently find a way of satisfying several seemingly contradictory demands on the Charter. In this paper, I seek to define some key tensions that must be resolved and outline the basis for a possible consensus.

1. Five Tensions in the Convention

There are above all five areas where we need to reconcile divergent positions:

- (i) First of all, we need to find a common ground between those who insist on the exclusively political character of the Charter and those who have their eyes set mainly on a further stage at which the text might be integrated into the Treaties.
- (ii) Secondly, we must agree on whether to draft a single text or to divide the substance into a part A and a part B, the former short and forceful and the latter specifying the conditions for exceptions and the links to the Treaties, the ECHR and eventually other legal instruments.
- (iii) Linked to this issue is a third problem of reconciling the different requirements of the two audiences to which the Charter is addressed. To grasp the interest of the general public, the text should be crisp and concise. But to prevent confusion and satisfy the legal experts, it must also be comprehensive and conform with the various legal instruments in force.
- (iv) We must also bridge the gap between the demand for an autonomous and innovative text and the plea for continuity and consistency with other instruments, particularly the ECHR.
- (v) A final tension persists between, on the one hand, the ambition to draft an inclusive catalogue where no important rights are left out and, on the other, the apprehension that a text offering ample promises in its first 43 articles and then taking large chunks of them back at the end (where it is explained that the rights just proclaimed are valid only within the limits of Community competence, which is in no way extended through the Charter) might fuel cynicism and Euro-scepticism.

For some advice on how to resolve such conflicts, I propose first to consult the house philosopher of the Convention.

2. Kant revisited

The task of the Convention as defined by the Cologne Council is to draft a Charter that could be solemnly proclaimed by the European Council together with the European Parliament and the European Commission. Whether and, if so, how the Charter should be integrated into the treaties is as we know a matter for later consideration.

In recognition of this uncertainty about the ultimate status of the Charter, the Convention has adopted a "Kantian approach". In drafting the political declaration requested by the Cologne Council, it follows the "as if" principle, considering the eventuality that this text might later be translated into law.

The "as if" principle has been invoked in our discussions more frequently than faithfully. What Kant actually wrote in his Critique of Practical Reason was the following:

Handle so, dass die Maxime deines Willens jederzeit zugleich als Prinzip einer allgemeinen Gesetzgebung gelten könne.

What occupied Kant in this context was not so much the individual rules or laws but the principle(s) underlying general legislation. In our own discussions we have moved more and more towards recognising the importance of such principles as a source of inspiration for political action (first in the old draft article 31, now in the new draft article 44:2). I believe that we could proceed even further in this direction and base the Charter on the conviction that the acceptance of common European principles is a powerful stimulus to the successive extension of common rights and standards.

We must also recognise that this is a gradual, laborious and demanding process. A "Europe of Fundamental Rights" does not come about through Summit proclamations; it can only be built through a long chain of sustained efforts. It evolves step by step through institution-building, legislation and jurisprudence. While we have already come a long way in developing fundamental rights in Europe and have a great many acquis to be proud of, there also challenges in front of us, areas in which common principles have not yet been translated into homogeneous rights or efficient political action. These challenges will certainly take years and decades to meet rather than months and weeks.

"Statt Revolution Evolution" -- those were Kant's words in Streit der Fakultäten (1798) where he pleaded for reformism and the patient but determined Fortschritt zum Besseren. Following this idea we should recognise that the strengthening of fundamental rights in Europe is an on-going process and define the role of the Charter accordingly as (1) a concise guide for our citizens and as (2) an expression of firm commitment to a Europe of common values and an impetus to further action on the basis of shared principles.

One purpose of the Charter should thus be to provide a succinct summary of the fundamental rights that have been recognised by the Union and its Member States and to lay down principles for action, particularly in the social field. But the Convention should not compete with or seek to replace the constitutionally regulated and treaty-bound legislative processes. As members of the Convention, we have been appointed by Governments, National Parliaments, the European Parliament and the European Commission -- but we have not been asked to take over the functions of these august bodies. Respecting the established democratic procedures and division of competence, we should therefore regard ourselves not as a legislature but as an eminently political body tasked with the important mission of promoting fundamental rights through a clear, concise and forceful presentation of the rules scattered in different and not so easily accessible legal instruments.

A second function of the Charter should be to give a powerful impetus to further measures purporting to enhance the respect for fundamental rights and principles, through the solemn commitment of the Member States and through the support for the Charter that can be mobilised among European citizens. The keen interest in our work demonstrated by many non-governmental organisations should give added impact to the effort. The Charter will serve to remind the European institutions and the Member States of important obligations that they will have to honour in their political practice.

3. A Forceful and Dynamic Charter

My proposal to reconcile the divergent positions outlined above goes as follows:

(i) In its form, the Charter is clearly a political declaration. In its substance, however, it is both an extensive index of legally binding rights and a resumé of common principles. Most of the articles cover rights that have already been given legal force. The dynamic character resides in the fact that in the future, the number of such articles may gradually grow through the normal legislative process in the EU. Other articles cover political principles on which the Union and its Member States are agreed.

(ii) The Charter can be a single and concise text, accompanied by a commentary or a “user’s manual” which gives references to the legal instruments in which the specific rights and the conditions for exceptions to them are enshrined. While the division into a part A and a part B with equal status is an elegant solution if the Charter is construed as a source of law, this structure is not necessary if the text is clearly recognised to be a guide to law.

(iii) The text should be aimed at the general public. The legal experts will have to continue to consult the Treaties, and ECHR and other instruments where the details of the particular rights are specified. The Charter itself is not intended to compete with these instruments as a source of law. It is an overview, a guide and an index.

(iv) The Charter is a fully autonomous document, and it may very well refer to principles and rights not included in the Treaties and the ECHR if these are acceptable to the Member States.

(v) The Charter will be forceful only if it is truthful. It should therefore recognise that the strengthening of fundamental rights is a lengthy and unfinished process. It should not pretend that guarantees exist where they do not. In such cases, it is better to lay down principles or objectives. In view of the dualism introduced through draft article 44:2, it might be considered to call the final document of the Convention “The European Charter of Fundamental Rights and Principles”.

To give leverage to the Charter, it is important to emphasise its dynamic and evolutionary dimension. We must not allow it to be dismissed as a one-shot event, a document required only in a particular political conjuncture and then forgotten as quickly as it was drafted. It should be presented to the Council explicitly as an agenda for action, “la Charte comme chantier”.

The Charter should serve as a new departure and an important impulse to the process of making the European Union an area of common values. But it should not be seen as an attempt to replace the normal, treaty-bound legislative process by hasty improvisation and by attempts to settle thorny normative questions by shots from the hip. Not only would that compromise the whole enterprise we have embarked upon but it might also run counter to the very ends that we are seeking to pursue.

4. Implications for the Horizontal Articles

To express clearly that the Charter is a forceful summary and presentation of existing, legally binding rights and of important principles pursued by the European Union and its Member States, not an effort to reformulate these rights, we must redraft the horizontal articles. The Charter should not be addressed to the European institutions but to the European citizens. The relationship between the Charter and the ECHR would be less dramatic if it were obvious that each of these texts has its own specific purpose. Giving a succinct overview of fundamental rights recognised in Europe, the Charter would provide valuable guidance to the public, but to ascertain the precise substance of the many different rights covered in it the readers would have to consult the various legal texts (such as the Treaties, the secondary legislation, the ECHR) as well as the jurisprudence of the two Courts. In other words, the Charter should not duplicate or derogate existing legal instruments but provide a clear picture of the fundamental rights recognised in such texts.

A Testament from the Convention to Biarritz and Nice.

Words, words, words. Europeans are rightly suspicious of declarations not followed by action. A Charter adopted in Biarritz or Nice and then just shelved is worse than no Charter at all. The real measure of the our institutions' commitment to fundamental rights is not what they say but what they do -- and are prepared to pay for.

Many suggestions have been put forward to make additional rights justiciable. Before such ideas are considered it would seem imperative to assess how our European Courts are coping with the workload they already have. Waiting-times are growing unacceptably long both in Luxembourg and Strasbourg. The Strasbourg Court in particular is likely to face a dramatically mounting caseload as applications start coming in from the new member states in Central and Eastern Europe. Unless the resource needs of the two Courts are given adequate attention, there are reasons to expect a sharp deterioration of the system for fundamental rights protection in Europe, and even a collapse of the Strasbourg mechanism.

The Convention should alert the European Council of this threatening situation and recommend remedial action. It should also suggest further examination of the quarter-century old proposal to proceed to the ratification by the Community of the ECHR. Though the resistance to this idea is manifestly shrinking, the apprehensions expressed deserve serious analysis and the modalities of a ratification need to be clarified. A study of this issue could perhaps usefully be broadened to consider the non-hierarchical co-operation between the two Courts in the protection of European fundamental rights.

COUR EUROPÉENNE DES DROITS DE L'HOMME
EUROPEAN COURT OF HUMAN RIGHTS

30 June 2000

Address by Mr Marc FISCHBACH, on behalf of the Council of Europe observers, in the debate on the horizontal provisions

As you know, Mr President, we attach particular importance to the horizontal provisions, since they are calculated to dispel a large number of ambiguities and uncertainties which application of the Articles of the Charter as proposed at present would not fail to give rise to without them.

As I have already said on a number of occasions, the first concern of the Council of Europe observers is to ensure that the same rights are not interpreted in divergent or even contradictory ways by the Court of Justice on the one hand and the Strasbourg Court on the other. What we want is to ensure respect for the principle of the universality of human rights, which is nothing other than the European conception of human rights which we defend unceasingly on the international stage, particularly at the UN, in the face of States which have a very different idea of human rights.

After those observations, I would say at the outset that the text of the horizontal Articles, as now proposed, seems to me to satisfy adequately the requirement of ensuring consistency and legal certainty, which are, as you know, decisive factors for the success of the Charter. I therefore express my satisfaction about the wording of the new Articles 47 and 49, which I find sufficiently clear and precise to exclude all wider restrictions than those permitted by the ECHR, or a level of protection lower than that afforded by the ECHR.

However, I would add two provisos to the above assessment. The first concerns the fact that the references to the ECHR in Articles 47 and 49 do not mention the Protocols to the Convention. Yet in so far as the Charter includes certain rights taken from the First, Fourth and Seventh Protocols to the ECHR, it is necessary, in my opinion, to add to the references to the Convention a specific reference to those Protocols. We must not allow it to be thought that the rights in question – such as the right of property, the right to education, the prohibition of collective expulsions or the ne bis in idem principle – are not covered by the safeguards set forth in Articles 47 and 49.

Secondly, I must insist once more on the need to add to the reference to the ECHR a reference to the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights. Here I would refer to the arguments we put forward in our contribution of 5 June (Contrib 196), which have, moreover, been repeated today by a number of speakers. Without returning to those arguments in detail, I consider that it is necessary to include this reference to the case-law mainly in the interests of legal certainty. It will not be at all obvious – unless an express provision to that effect is included – that the minimum level of protection to be respected under Articles 47 and 49 of the Charter will also be applicable to those rights contained in the Charter whose equivalents are to be found not in the ECHR but in the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights.

That applies, for example, to the right to data protection, set forth in Article 19 of the Charter (Convent 37), a provision which, as such, has no equivalent in the text of the ECHR. However, the European Court of Human Rights has developed an important body of case-law on the question, but on the basis of the right to respect for private life (Article 8 of the ECHR). So when Article 47 of the Charter (Charter SN/3340/00) speaks of “rights and liberties which are also recognised by the [ECHR]” does that include the right to data protection as enshrined in the case-law of the Strasbourg Court? Should the rights and restrictions laid down in that case-law be taken into consideration for application of Article 19 of the Charter? It is immediately apparent that a simple reference to the case-law would dispel all doubts on this point, in the interests not only of legal certainty but also of enhanced protection of the rights concerned.

Moreover, I cannot understand the arguments of those who see in a mere reference to the case-law of the Strasbourg Court a threat to the autonomy of the Charter or of Community law. In any event, and this can not be repeated too often, such a reference would not fix interpretation of the Charter at the level of the ECHR, as nothing would prevent interpretation of the Charter going beyond that level, as Article 53 of the ECHR expressly provides. In that sense, such a reference would not represent any threat to the Charter, since if by some extraordinary chance the level of protection afforded by the ECHR were to fall as a result of developments in the case-law – though the first important judgments of the new Court prove that the opposite is true – this would not affect the Charter in any way, the level of the ECHR being a minimum level not a compulsory level.

Would a clear, easily comprehensible wording of the horizontal provisions, coupled with a reference to the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights guaranteeing the advances made under the Convention system, be sufficient to ensure consistency and legal certainty in the future? Here I must say that I do not share the optimism of those who consider that with the horizontal provisions there is no more reason to fear for the harmonious coexistence of the Charter and the ECHR, and who put their trust moreover in the good understanding between the Court of Justice in Luxembourg and the Strasbourg Court. Why?

Because the Charter, when applied and interpreted within the context of the European Union, that is in the framework of a Treaty with its own objectives, which include, moreover, new powers in the fields of immigration, asylum and judicial and police co-operation, is bound to take on a dynamic which is almost certain to affect the harmonious and consistent interpretation of fundamental rights. Since the organ creates the function, it is highly probable that the Charter will generate a far higher number of references to the Court of Justice for preliminary rulings than it receives at present. That will increase in the same proportion the risk that decisions of the Court of Justice will clash with later decisions of the Strasbourg Court, since the member States will remain responsible for their actions under the ECHR but will at the same time be required to comply with and apply Community law. A State obliged to apply a judgment of the Court of Justice which turned out to be at odds with a later judgment of the Strasbourg Court would be placed in a very difficult position.

That shows to what extent the Charter, designed to become a legally binding instrument, replaces on the agenda the question of accession by the European Communities to the ECHR, or at least the idea of a preliminary consultation mechanism, recognised by the member States, between the two Courts. As long as these questions remain unanswered the European Council, if it wishes to avoid the risk of creating legal uncertainty, will scarcely be in a position to reach a final decision on the nature of the Charter. Admittedly, it is not part of our terms of reference to state our views on that question. However, that should not dispense us from identifying and pointing out problems and above all it should warn us not to indulge the illusion that it will suffice to take the Charter and turn it into a legally binding instrument.

 – Structure of the Charter

The Praesidium proposes to the Convention that the Articles in the Charter should be divided into the following 7 chapters:

- Chapter 1: Rights of the human person
- Chapter 2: Freedoms
- Chapter 3: Equality
- Chapter 4: Citizenship
- Chapter 5: Solidarity
- Chapter 6: Justice
- Chapter 7: General provisions.

CONTRIBUTION CHARTER PLAN

On 17 April President Herzog sent us a proposal for the layout of the Charter that comprised seven chapters. On receiving it, I agreed with the idea behind the plan, which to my mind has several advantages. It gets away from the artificial distinctions which emerged at the end of the Second World War and which separate "civil and political rights" from "economic and social rights", distinctions that are still found in the Cologne mandate. Moreover, it makes it possible to avoid the existence of a "basket" devoted to rights reserved for citizens of the European Union, which in any case are very few in number. The formula devised by President Herzog allows the articles to be rearranged in a way that is both more original and more legible. It was elaborated in a recent document.

While I agree with the principle behind the plan, I have some reservations regarding its application.

1. I propose to shorten the titles by using symbolic keywords that express the concepts of the Charter:

Chapter 1: the proposed title could be simplified by replacing it with the wording "Right of the human person".

Chapter 2: the word "freedoms" alone should be sufficient, without characterising them as "fundamental", since in any case we are dealing solely with fundamental rights.

Chapter 3: retain the word "equality" as the expression "equality and non-discrimination" is used for both the title of a chapter and the title of an article.

In this case Article 1a could be entitled "general principle of equality" and Article 22 "non-discrimination".

Chapter 4: the expression "political rights" could be replaced by the more modern term "citizenship".

Chapter 5: what is now Chapter 6 could be inserted here, with the title "Solidarity".

Lastly, the current Chapter 5 would become Chapter 6 with the title "Justice".

The general layout of the Charter would therefore be:

1. Right of the human person
2. Freedoms
3. Equality
4. Citizenship
5. Solidarity
6. Justice
7. General provisions.

CONTRIBUTION DE M. ALVARO RODRIGUEZ BEREIJO, REPRESENTANT DU PRESIDENT DU GOUVERNEMENT ESPAGNOL, AU SEIN DE LA CONVENTION
POUR L'ELABORATION DE LA CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE
L'UNION EUROPEENNE, RELATIVE AU CHAPITRE DES DROITS ECONOMIQUES ET SOCIAUX.

L'élaboration du chapitre des droits économiques et sociaux est cruciale pour la réussite de l'entreprise confiée à la Convention. Le Gouvernement espagnol accorde une grande importance à ce chapitre en tant que valeur ajoutée de la Charte au Droit communautaire, ce qui exige une combinaison adéquate de détermination et de rigueur, en accord avec le mandat du Conseil Européen de Cologne et avec les critères qui doivent guider les travaux de la Convention: ne pas attribuer de nouvelles compétences à l'Union Européenne ni étendre celles déjà existantes; ne pas modifier les Constitutions nationales des Etats Membres ; et ne pas créer de nouvelles charges ni obligations financières pour l'Union ou les Etats Membres.

A partir de ces prémisses, une affirmation adéquate des droits économiques et sociaux est une exigence impérative ayant pour conséquence directe l'évolution juridico-politique européenne. La Convention doit être à la hauteur du mandat reçu et éviter, d'une part, des formulations génériques, étendues ou insubstantielles –qui équivaldraient à un accomplissement défectueux du mandat et frustreraient les attentes que la Charte suscite- et, d'autre part, tomber dans l'excès d'un catalogue de droits juridiquement inapplicable et ne pouvant être assumé politiquement. Cet exercice d'équilibre et de pondération, dans le but de la recherche d'un consensus, se révèle tout particulièrement nécessaire dans le chapitre économique et social, dont la rédaction devrait prendre en spéciale considération les critères suivants :

- a) Ne pas altérer ce qui est prévu dans le Traité CE, ni vider de leur contenu les procédures que celui-ci établit en vue de l'adoption de la législation communautaire ;
- b) Ne pas imposer de charges financières additionnelles à l'Union ou à ses Etats Membres ;
- c) configurer des préceptes suffisamment « ouverts » tels qu'ils puissent contenir les différentes options de la politique économique de l'Union ou des Etats Membres, pour ce faire, la formule « en accord avec la législation et les pratiques nationales des Etats Membres » pourrait être très utile, en accord avec la Charte Sociale Européenne et avec la Charte Communautaire des Droits Sociaux Fondamentaux des travailleurs; et,

- d) ne pas énoncer d'objectifs de la politique économique, conformément au mandat de Cologne.

Ainsi dessiné le périmètre spécifique du chapitre économique et social, et une fois admise la nécessité de l'alimenter aussi bien de droits subjectifs que de principes recteurs –comme il en découle de la clause horizontale 44.2-, nous devons identifier quels préceptes appartiennent à l'une ou l'autre catégorie et les formuler en accord avec leur caractère spécifique.

D'un point de vue juridique, sont considérées « droits » les facultés qui peuvent s'exercer directement d'elles mêmes dans le respect d'autres droits, de biens protégés et de valeurs reconnues. De ce fait, elles ont un caractère subjectif qui dérive de la sphère d'action de l'individu et font partie, en tant que droits de liberté et d'égalité, de la dignité de la personne dans une société démocratique.

De leur côté, les “principes” informent la législation et la pratique judiciaire et lient dans leurs agissements les pouvoirs publics. Il ont une force juridique négative, étant donné qu'ils limitent la disponibilité du législateur, qui dans l'exercice de son pouvoir ne peut les contredire ou les méconnaître. En fin, les “principes recteurs” pourront seulement être invoqués devant l'autorité judiciaire en accord avec ce qui est prévu dans les lois qui effectivement les développent.

Cette distinction a nécessairement des conséquences pratiques dans la formulation des préceptes correspondants: les “droits” proprement dits seront rédigés de la même manière que les droits classiques de liberté et d'égalité.

Au contraire, les “principes” doivent refléter leur caractère inspirateur de la politique sociale et économique, tout en évitant dans leur rédaction l'utilisation du terme « droit » pour des raisons de clarté et afin de ne pas induire en erreur. La décision relative à l'opportunité de leur développement, par lequel ils deviennent des droits de prestations concrètes, appartient à la volonté du législateur ou de l'autorité compétente, communautaire ou nationale, à qui l'on ne peut contraindre dans sa liberté d'agir moyennant l'imposition d'une obligation de faire dérivée d'un principe recteur. Cependant, si le législateur, dans l'exercice de son pouvoir, décidait de les développer, il devra en tous cas, respecter le contenu essentiel de ceux-ci.

La rédaction des « principes » exige, en définitive, un langage qui n'impose pas son développement législatif, ainsi que l'introduction d'une référence expresse au principe de subsidiarité en tant que critère de base pour un éventuel développement. (De même, certains droits subjectifs peuvent nécessiter un renvoi à la législation nationale, conséquence, en tous cas, du partage des compétences entre la Communauté et les Etats Membres).

En tant qu'illustration, on pourrait qualifier de droits sociaux subjectifs, entre autres, le droit au travail et au libre choix d'une profession ou d'un métier ; à la santé et à la sécurité au travail ; au repos ; à la liberté syndicale ; à la négociation et action collective ; et à la non discrimination du travail pour raison de sexe. De leur côté, seraient considérés « principes recteurs » le droit à la sécurité sociale ; à l'assistance sanitaire ; à un logement digne ; à la protection des consommateurs ; et à la protection de l'environnement.

En conclusion, l'élaboration du chapitre économique et social demande un soin tout particulier. Si, en matière de droits fondamentaux de liberté et d'égalité, le défi fondamental consiste à trouver le juste équilibre entre l'autonomie de la Charte et la sécurité juridique, dans le chapitre économique et social on doit tenir particulièrement présents ces critères: la non imposition de nouvelles obligations financières à l'Union ou aux Etats Membres, la non altération des compétences de l'Union ou des Etats Membres et la non imposition aux gouvernements des obligations d'agir de caractère programmatique qui entravent leur liberté d'action en vue d'orienter leurs politiques économiques.

Dear Sir,

Please allow me to take this opportunity to make a number of comments and suggestions with regard to the discussions of the Convention.

1. Re Article 31a.

The title should read "Equal treatment of women and men" to make it clear that it concerns active measures to compensate for disadvantage.

The text should read:

"(1) The Union shall promote the equal treatment of women and men and thereby equality of opportunity, in particular in the areas of work and employment, including equal pay for equal work or work of equal value.

(2) Measures may be taken to promote genuine equality of treatment and/or to ensure that preference is given to the disadvantaged gender when individuals are equally qualified."

Reasons:

The wording "Equal treatment of men and women", as proposed by the Praesidium following Vitorino, is permissible where there are disadvantages that cannot be remedied because it disposes that inequality be treated equally.

This should also expressly remove the concern expressed in discussions in the Convention about preference being given to less qualified women over better qualified men. Preference given to the disadvantaged gender when individuals are equally qualified is what is involved.

2. Re Article 37

The text of this Article should read as follows:

(1) The minimum age of admission to employment must not be lower than the minimum school leaving age.

(2) Young people must have conditions of work and work protection appropriate to their age.

(3) Child labour is prohibited.

Reasons:

The reference to any more favourable arrangements that may exist in Member States may be deleted here and should be expressed in a horizontal Article.

The second paragraph may be worded more concisely without any loss of substance.

In order to make the message clear to the citizens concerned, the third paragraph should be expressly included even if its substance is already contained in paragraph 1.

3. Re Article 46a.

I would propose that an additional horizontal Article be included after "Article 46. Scope", to read as follows:

"Article 46a. Comparison of advantageousness

Any more favourable arrangements existing in the Member States, shall remain unaffected."

Reasons:

The discussions in the Convention have shown that, in particular in the area of economic and social fundamental rights, some Member States are seriously concerned that their often more extensive rights of the beneficiaries could be prejudiced by less extensive rights in the Charter. The new Article should take account of this understandable concern.

I should be obliged if you would pass on these suggestions to the other members of the Convention.

Yours faithfully,

Caspar Einem

ENTWURF DER CHARTA DER GRUNDRECHTE DER EUROPÄISCHEN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brüssel, den 17. Juli 2000CHARTE 4421/00*CONTRIB 277*ÜBERMITTLUNGSVERMERK

Betr.: Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union

Finden Sie bitte nachstehend eine Stellungnahme von Herrn Jo LEINEN, Mitglied des Europäischen Parlaments, zum Artikel 24 (Politische Parteien). ¹

Beitrag zum Chartakonvent zum Artikel 24 – Politische Parteien

Eingereicht von Jo Leinen MdEP

Den Artikel 24 wie folgt beibehalten:

Artikel 24:

Jeder Bürger der Union hat das Recht, mit anderen eine politische Partei auf der Ebene der Europäischen Union zu gründen.

Begründung

Nach der Debatte zu den Artikeln 1-30 am 10.7.00, insbesondere zum Artikel 24 möchte ich noch einmal darauf hinweisen, dass bei einer Streichung des Artikel 24 eine große Lücke im politischen Gefüge der Europäischen Union bestehen bleiben würde. Nach der in Convent 36 vorgeschlagenen Neuformulierung für Artikel 17 (der jetzt nur noch die "...politische... Versammlung" erwähnt, nicht aber politische Parteien), erscheint es umso wichtiger, den Artikel 24 mit einer expliziten Erwähnung der "politischen Parteien auf europäischer Ebene" zu erhalten. Artikel 17 deckt zwar unzweideutig das Recht ab, politischen Parteien beizutreten, aber es ist nicht klar, ob er auch die Gründung von Parteien auf transnationaler- europäischer Ebene garantiert. Durch Art 191 des EG Vertrages wird den Parteien auf europäischer Ebene eine klare Rolle zugeschrieben. Sie sind unentbehrlich für die Meinungsbildung und die Gestaltung des politischen Prozesses in Europa.

Die Charta der Grundrechte richtet sich an die Organe der Union, gleichzeitig muß sie die grundrechtlichen Rahmenbedingungen für den politischen Prozess in Europa festlegen – wie dies auch durch das Wahlrecht zum Europaparlament in Artikel 25 geschieht. Dabei handelt es sich, im Gegensatz zu Artikel 17, der sich an "jede Person" richtet, um ein Europäisches Bürgerrecht. Ich plädiere daher für die Beibehaltung von Art 24 in der revidierten Fassung (Konvent 36, mein Vorschlag siehe oben) als Recht jedes Unionsbürgers, auf europäischer Ebene eine politische Partei zu gründen.

Der Satzteil nach dem Komma ("...und jede Person hat das Recht, dieser beizutreten") ist durch Artikel 17 gedeckt und kann entfallen.

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Complete text of the Charter proposed by the Praesidium

The Members of the Convention will find below the complete text of the Charter proposed by the Praesidium in the light of discussions in the Convention. Members may forward their general comments on this draft, by 1 September 2000, to the following address:

Jean-Paul.Jacque@consilium.eu.int,

indicating:

- "for the attention of Mr Jansson" (for the representatives of the national Parliaments)
- "for the attention of Mr Mendez de Vigo" (for the members of the European Parliament delegation)
- "for the attention of Mr Braibant" (for the personal representatives).

The Secretariat will forward these comments to the relevant addressee.

PREAMBLE

1. The peoples of Europe have established an ever closer union between them and are resolved to share a peaceful future based on common values.
2. The Union is founded on the indivisible, universal principles of the dignity of men and women, freedom, equality and solidarity; it is based on the principle of democracy and the rule of law.
3. The Union contributes to the development of these common values while respecting the diversity of the cultures and traditions of the peoples of Europe as well as the national identities of the Member States and the organisation of their public authorities at national, regional and local levels; it ensures balanced and sustainable development through the free movement of persons, goods, capital and services.
4. In adopting this Charter the Union intends to enhance the protection of fundamental rights in the light of changes in society, social progress and scientific and technological developments by making those rights more visible.
5. This Charter reaffirms, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Community and the Union and the principle of subsidiarity, the rights as they result, in particular, from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the Social Charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights.
6. Enjoyment of these rights entails responsibilities and duties with regard to other persons, to the human community and to future generations.
7. Each person is therefore guaranteed the rights and freedoms set out hereafter.

CHAPTER I. DIGNITY

Article 1. Dignity of the person

The dignity of the person must be respected and protected.

Article 2. Right to life

1. Everyone has the right to life.
2. No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed.

Article 3. Right to the integrity of the person

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and mental integrity.
2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - free and informed consent of the person concerned,
 - prohibition of eugenic practices, in particular those concerned with the selection of persons,
 - prohibition on making the human body and its parts a source of financial gain,
 - prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Article 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment and punishment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 5. Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.
3. Trafficking in human beings is prohibited.

CHAPTER II. FREEDOMS

Article 6. Right to liberty and security

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person.

Article 7. Respect for private and family life

Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and the confidentiality of his communications.

Article 8. Protection of personal data

Everyone has the right to the protection of personal data concerning him. Such data must be processed fairly for specified purposes on the basis of the consent of the person concerned or some other legitimate basis laid down by law. Everyone has the right of access to data which has been collected concerning him, and the right to have it rectified. Compliance with these rules shall be subject to control by an independent authority.

Article 9. Right to marry and right to found a family

The right to marry and the right to found a family shall be guaranteed in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of these rights.

Article 10. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. This right includes freedom to change religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or in private, to manifest religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.

Article 11. Freedom of expression and information

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.
2. Freedom of the media and freedom of information shall be guaranteed with due respect for pluralism and transparency.

Article 12. Freedom of assembly and of association

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association, in particular in political, trade union and civic matters.

Political parties at European level contribute to expressing the political will of the citizens of the Union.

Article 13. Freedom of research

Scientific research shall be free of constraint.

Article 14. Right to education

1. Everyone has the right to education and to have access to vocational and continuing training. This right includes the right to receive free compulsory education.
2. The freedom to found educational establishments with due respect for democratic principles and the right of parents to ensure the education and teaching of their children in conformity with their religious, philosophical and pedagogical convictions shall be guaranteed, in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of such freedom and right.

Article 15. Freedom to choose an occupation

1. To earn a living, everyone has the right to engage in a freely chosen occupation.
2. Every citizen of the Union has the freedom to seek employment, to work, to exercise the right of establishment and to provide or receive services in any Member State.
3. Nationals of third countries who are authorised to reside in the territories of the Member States are entitled to working conditions equivalent to those of citizens of the Union.

Article 16. Freedom to conduct a business

The freedom to conduct a business is recognised.

Article 17. Right to property

1. Every person has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions, except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to fair compensation. The use of property may be regulated insofar as is necessary for the general interest.
2. Intellectual property shall be protected.

Article 18. Right to asylum

The right to asylum shall be guaranteed with due respect for the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees and in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Article 19. Protection in the event of removal, expulsion or extradition

1. Collective expulsions are prohibited.
2. No one may be removed, expelled or extradited to a State where he could be subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment.

CHAPTER III. EQUALITYArticle 20. Equality before the law

Everyone, man or woman, is equal before the law.

Article 21. Equality and non-discrimination

1. Any discrimination based on any ground such as sex, race, colour, ethnic or social origin, genetic features, language, religion or belief, political or any other opinion, membership of a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, and without prejudice to the special provisions of those Treaties, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

Article 22. Equality between men and women

Equal opportunities and equal treatment for men and women as regards employment and work, including equal pay for equal work or for work of equal value, must be ensured.

The principle of equal treatment shall not prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures providing for specific advantages in order to make it easier for the under-represented sex to pursue a vocational activity or to prevent or compensate for disadvantages in professional careers.

Article 23. Protection of children

1. Children shall have the right to such protection and care as is necessary for their well-being. They may express their views freely. Such views shall be taken into consideration on matters which concern them in accordance with their age and maturity.
2. In all actions relating to children, whether taken by public authorities or private institutions, the child's best interests must be a primary consideration.

Article 24. Integration of persons with disabilities

Persons with disabilities have the right to benefit from measures designed to ensure their independence, social and occupational integration and participation in the life of the community.

CHAPTER IV. SOLIDARITY

Article 25. Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Workers and their representatives must be guaranteed information and consultation in good time on matters which concern them within the undertaking, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 26. Right of collective bargaining and action

Employers and workers have the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and, in cases of conflicts of interest, to take collective action to defend their interests, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 27. Right of access to placement services

Everyone has the right of access to a placement service.

Article 28. Protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

Every worker has the right to protection against unjustified dismissal.

Article 29. Fair and just working conditions

1. Every worker has the right to working conditions which respect his or her health, safety and dignity.
2. Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave.

Article 30. Protection of young people at work

The employment of children is prohibited. The minimum age of admission to employment must not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people and except for limited derogations.

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions appropriate to their age and be protected against economic exploitation and any work likely to harm their safety, health or physical, mental, moral or social development or to interfere with their education.

Article 31. Reconciling family and professional life

The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.

Everyone shall have the right to reconcile their family and professional lives, which includes in particular the right to protection from dismissal because of pregnancy and the right to paid maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.

Article 32. Social security and social assistance

1. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to social security benefits and social services providing protection in the event of maternity, illness, industrial accidents, dependency or old age and in the event of loss of employment, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.
2. Workers who are nationals of a Member State residing in another Member State, and members of their families, have the right to the same social security benefits, social advantages and access to health care as nationals of that State.
3. The Union recognises and respects the right to social assistance and housing benefit in order to ensure a decent existence for persons lacking sufficient resources, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 33. Health care

Everyone has the right of access to preventive health care and the right to benefit from medical treatment under the conditions established by national laws and practices.

Article 34. Access to services of general economic interest

The Union respects the access to services of general economic interest as provided for in national laws and practices in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty establishing the European Community in order to promote the social and territorial cohesion of the Union.

Article 35. Environmental protection

All Union policies shall ensure the protection and preservation of a good quality living environment and the improvement of the quality of the environment, taking into account the principle of sustainable development.

Article 36. Consumer Protection

Union policies shall ensure a high level of protection as regards the health, safety and interests of consumers.

CHAPTER V. CITIZENSHIPArticle 37. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State.
2. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage by free and secret ballot.

Article 38. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Article 39. Right to good administration

1. Every person has the right to have his affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.
2. This right includes:
 - the right of every person to be heard before any individual measure which would affect him adversely is taken in relation to him;
 - the right of every person to have access to his file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy;
 - the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.
3. Every person has the right to have the Community make good any damage caused by its institutions or by its servants in the performance of their duties, in accordance with the general principles common to the laws of the Member States.
4. Every person may write to the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of such institutions and have an answer in the same language.

Article 40. Right of access to documents

Any citizen of the Union, and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State, has a right of access to European Parliament, Council and Commission documents.

Article 41. Ombudsman

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration by Community institutions and bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Article 42. Right to petition

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Article 43. Freedom of movement and of residence

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.
2. Freedom of movement may be granted, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, to nationals of third countries legally resident in the territory of a Member State.

Article 44: Diplomatic and consular protection

Every citizen of the Union shall, in the territory of a third country in which the Member State of which he is a national is not represented, be entitled to protection by the diplomatic or consular authorities of any Member State, on the same conditions as the nationals of that Member State.

CHAPTER VI. JUSTICE

Article 45. Right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial

1. Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.
2. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal previously established by law. Everyone shall have the possibility of being advised, defended and represented.
3. Legal aid shall be made available to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is necessary to ensure effective access to justice.

Article 46. Presumption of innocence and right of defence

1. Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
2. Respect for the right of defence of anyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed.

Article 47. Principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties

1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the criminal offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.

2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to international law.
3. The severity of penalties shall be proportional to the gravity of the criminal offence.

Article 48. Right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same criminal offence

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law.

CHAPTER VII. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 49. Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. They shall therefore respect the rights, observe the principles and promote the application thereof in accordance with their respective powers.
2. This Charter does not establish any new power or task for the Community or the Union, or modify powers and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Article 50. Scope of guaranteed rights

1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest being pursued by the Union, other legitimate interests in a democratic society or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.
2. Rights recognised by this Charter which are based on the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.
3. Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be similar to those conferred on them by the said Convention unless this Charter affords greater or more extensive protection.

Article 51. Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or adversely affecting human rights and fundamental freedoms as recognised, in their respective fields of application, by international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and by the Member States' constitutions.

Article 52. Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for herein.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 31 July 2000 (17.08)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4423/00*CONVENT 46*PRESIDENCY NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Text of the explanations relating to the complete text of the Charter as set out in CHARTE 4422/00 CONVENT 45

EXPLANATIONS RELATING TO THE PROVISIONS OF THE DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

The Members of the Convention will find attached an explanatory report on the provisions of the Charter. This report was drawn up by the Secretariat on the basis of instructions from the Praesidium, which requested that it be as factual as possible, setting out the texts or case law used as sources for the wording of each article and refraining from any attempt to interpret the Charter. This report reflects the text in its current state and will be amended as changes are made to the text of the Charter.

Any comments should be sent to the Secretariat either to the following e-mail address:

jean-paul.jacque@consilium.eu.int

or in writing to Jean-Paul Jacqué, Director in the Council Legal Service, Council of the European Union, 175 rue de la Loi, B-1048 Brussels.

CHAPTER I. DIGNITY

Article 1. Dignity of the person

The dignity of the person must be respected and protected.

Explanation

The dignity of the human person is the real basis of fundamental rights. For that reason the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights enshrined this principle in its preamble as follows: "Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world."

Consequently, Article 1 produces the following effects, inter alia:

- 1. None of the rights laid down in this Charter may be used to harm the dignity of another person.*
- 2. The dignity of the human person is part of the actual substance of the rights laid down in this Charter and must therefore be respected, even where a right is restricted.*

Article 2. Right to life

1. Everyone has the right to life.
2. No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed.

Explanation

1. The content of paragraph 1 corresponds to the first sentence of Article 2(1) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

"1. Everyone's right to life shall be protected by law..."

The second sentence of the provision, which referred to the death penalty, was superseded by Article 1 of Protocol No 6 to the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

"The death penalty shall be abolished. No-one shall be condemned to such penalty or executed."

Article 2(2) of the Charter is based on that provision.

2. The right to life may, pursuant to Article 50 thereof, be subject to limitations within certain limits. However, these limitations may "not exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms." Limitations are therefore only permissible in the context of the following provisions:
 - (a) Article 2(2) of the European Convention on Human Rights:

"Deprivation of life shall not be regarded as inflicted in contravention of this article when it results from the use of force which is no more than absolutely necessary:

 - (a) in defence of any person from unlawful violence;
 - (b) in order to effect a lawful arrest or to prevent the escape of a person lawfully detained;
 - (c) in action lawfully taken for the purpose of quelling a riot or insurrection."

 - (b) Article 2 of Protocol No 6 to the European Convention on Human Rights:

"A State may make provision in its law for the death penalty in respect of acts committed in time of war or of imminent threat of war; such penalty shall be applied only in the instances laid down in the law and in accordance with its provisions..."

The provisions of this Article correspond to those of the Articles of the European Convention on Human Rights quoted above. In accordance with Article 50(3), their meaning and scope are therefore similar to those of the Convention articles.

Article 3. Right to the integrity of the person

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and mental integrity.
2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - free and informed consent of the person concerned,
 - prohibition of eugenic practices, in particular those concerned with the selection of persons,
 - prohibition on making the human body and its parts a source of financial gain,
 - prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Explanation

The principles of this Article are already included in the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. The Charter does not set out to depart from those principles.

Article 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment and punishment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Explanation

The right in Article 4 is the right guaranteed by Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which has the same wording. In accordance with Article 50(3), its meaning and scope are therefore similar to those of that Article. The result is that limitations may not exceed those guaranteed by the Convention.

Article 5. Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.
3. Trafficking in human beings is prohibited.

Explanation

The right in Article 5(1) and (2) is the right guaranteed by Article 4(1) and (2) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which has the same wording.

Pursuant to Article 50(3) of the Charter, its meaning and scope are therefore similar to those of Article 4 of the Convention. Consequently:

4. paragraph 1 may not be limited at all;
5. in paragraph 2, "forced or compulsory labour" must be understood in the light of the "negative" definitions contained in Article 4(3) of the European Convention on Human Rights. That provision reads as follows:

"For the purpose of this article the term "forced or compulsory labour" shall not include:

- (a) any work required to be done in the ordinary course of detention imposed according to the provisions of Article 5 of this Convention or during conditional release from such detention;*
- (b) any service of a military character or, in case of conscientious objectors in countries where they are recognised, service exacted instead of compulsory military service;*
- (c) any service exacted in case of an emergency or calamity threatening the life or well-being of the community;*
- (d) any work or service which forms part of normal civic obligations."*

Paragraph 3 stems directly from the principle of human dignity and takes account of recent developments in crime. It is also based on the 1926 Slavery Convention, the 1953 Protocol to it and the 1957 Additional Convention.

CHAPTER II. FREEDOMS

Article 6. Right to liberty and security

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person.

Explanation

The rights in Article 6 are the rights guaranteed by Article 5 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Pursuant to Article 50(3) of the Charter, the meaning and scope of this right are similar to those of Article 5. Consequently, limitations may "not exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms." Therefore, the only limitations which are permissible are those in the context of Article 5 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads:

- "1. Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in the following cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law:*
- (a) the lawful detention of a person after conviction by a competent court;*
 - (b) the lawful arrest or detention of a person for non-compliance with the lawful order of a court or in order to secure the fulfilment of any obligation prescribed by law;*
 - (c) the lawful arrest or detention of a person effected for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority on reasonable suspicion of having committed an offence or when it is reasonably considered necessary to prevent his committing an offence or fleeing after having done so;*
 - (d) the detention of a minor by lawful order for the purpose of educational supervision or his lawful detention for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority;*
 - (e) the lawful detention of persons for the prevention of the spreading of infectious diseases, of persons of unsound mind, alcoholics or drug addicts or vagrants;*
 - (f) the lawful arrest or detention of a person to prevent his effecting an unauthorised entry into the country or of a person against whom action is being taken with a view to deportation or extradition.*

2. Everyone who is arrested shall be informed promptly, in a language which he understands, of the reasons for his arrest and of any charge against him.
3. Everyone arrested or detained in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1.c of this article shall be brought promptly before a judge or other officer authorised by law to exercise judicial power and shall be entitled to trial within a reasonable time or to release pending trial. Release may be conditioned by guarantees to appear for trial.
4. Everyone who is deprived of his liberty by arrest or detention shall be entitled to take proceedings by which the lawfulness of his detention shall be decided speedily by a court and his release ordered if the detention is not lawful.
5. Everyone who has been the victim of arrest or detention in contravention of the provisions of this article shall have an enforceable right to compensation."

Since the Charter is to apply within the context of the Union, the rights enshrined in Article 6 must be respected particularly when, in accordance with Title VI of the Treaty on European Union, the Union is adopting framework decisions for harmonisation in criminal matters.

Article 7. Respect for private and family life

Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and the confidentiality of his communications.

Explanation

The rights guaranteed in Article 7 correspond to those guaranteed by Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights. To take account of developments in technology the word "correspondence" has been replaced by "communications".

In accordance with Article 50(3), the meaning and scope of this right are similar to those of the corresponding article of the Convention. Consequently, the limitations to this right which are permissible are those which result from the Convention. Article 8 of the Convention reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence.*
- 2. There shall be no interference by a public authority with the exercise of this right except such as is in accordance with the law and is necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security, public safety or the economic well-being of the country, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others."*

Article 8. Protection of personal data

Everyone has the right to the protection of personal data concerning him. Such data must be processed fairly for specified purposes on the basis of the consent of the person concerned or some other legitimate basis laid down by law. Everyone has the right of access to data which has been collected concerning him, and the right to have it rectified. Compliance with these rules shall be subject to control by an independent authority.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 286 of the Treaty establishing the European Community and Directive 95/46/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council on the protection of individuals with regard to the processing of personal data and on the free movement of such data (OJ L 281, 23.11.1995) as well as on Article 8 of the ECHR and on the Council of Europe Convention of 28 January 1981 for the Protection of Individuals with regard to Automatic Processing of Personal Data which has been ratified by all the Member States. [The latter Convention is currently being amended to enable the European Communities to accede.] The right to protection of personal data may be limited under the conditions set out in Article 50.

Article 9. Right to marry and right to found a family

The right to marry and the right to found a family shall be guaranteed in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of these rights.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 12 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows: "Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and to found a family according to the national laws governing the exercising of this right." To take account of changes in society, the wording has been altered to cover cases in which national legislation recognises arrangements other than marriage for founding a family.

Article 10. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. This right includes freedom to change religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or in private, to manifest religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.

Explanation

This right corresponds to the right guaranteed in Article 9 of the European Convention on Human Rights and, in accordance with Article 50(3) of the Charter, has similar meaning and scope. Limitations must therefore respect Article 9(2) of the Convention which reads as follows: "Freedom to manifest one's religion or beliefs shall be subject only to such limitations as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of public safety, for the protection of public order, health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others."

Article 11. Freedom of expression and information

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.
2. Freedom of the media and freedom of information shall be guaranteed with due respect for pluralism and transparency.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 of this Article corresponds to Article 10 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers. This article shall not prevent States from requiring the licensing of broadcasting, television or cinema enterprises.*
- 2. The exercise of these freedoms, since it carries with it duties and responsibilities, may be subject to such formalities, conditions, restrictions or penalties as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society, in the interests of national security, territorial integrity or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, for the protection of the reputation or rights of others, for preventing the disclosure of information received in confidence, or for maintaining the authority and impartiality of the judiciary."*

Pursuant to Article 50(3) of the Charter, the meaning and scope of this right are similar to those guaranteed by the Convention and limitations may not exceed those provided for in Article 10(2) of the Convention.

Paragraph 2 of this Article spells out the consequences of paragraph 1 regarding freedom of the press and freedom of information. They are based on Court of Justice case law regarding television, particularly in case C-288/89 (judgment of 25 July 1991, Stichting Collectieve Antennevoorziening Gouda and others [1991] ECR I-4007) and the provisions of the Treaty establishing the European Community regarding rules of competition.

Article 12. Freedom of assembly and of association

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association, in particular in political, trade union and civic matters.

Political parties at European level contribute to expressing the political will of the citizens of the Union.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 of this Article corresponds to Article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his interests.*
- 2. No restrictions shall be placed on the exercise of these rights other than such as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others. This article shall not prevent the imposition of lawful restrictions on the exercise of these rights by members of the armed forces, of the police or of the administration of the State."*

The meaning and scope of the provisions of paragraph 1 are similar to those of the Convention, pursuant to Article 50(3) of the Charter. Limitations on that right may not exceed those provided for in Article 11(2) of the ECHR.

Paragraph 2 of this Article corresponds to Article 191 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Article 13. Freedom of research

Scientific research shall be free of constraint.

Explanation

This right is deduced from the right to freedom of thought and expression. It is to be exercised within the framework of Article 1 and subject to the limitation clause in Article 50. It is subject to respect for the dignity of the person.

Article 14. Right to education

1. Everyone has the right to education and to have access to vocational and continuing training. This right includes the right to receive free compulsory education.
2. The freedom to found educational establishments with due respect for democratic principles and the right of parents to ensure the education and teaching of their children in conformity with their religious, philosophical and pedagogical convictions shall be guaranteed, in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of such freedom and right.

Explanation

This Article is based on the common constitutional traditions of Member States and on Article 2 of the Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

"No person shall be denied the right to education. In the exercise of any functions which it assumes in relation to education and to teaching, the State shall respect the right of parents to ensure such education and teaching in conformity with their own religious and philosophical convictions."

It was considered useful to add the principle of free compulsory education. As it is worded, it merely implies that as regards compulsory education, each child has the possibility of attending an establishment which offers free education. It does not require all establishments which provide education, in particular private ones, to be free of charge. Insofar as the Charter applies to the Union, this means that in its training policies the Union must respect free compulsory education, but this does not, of course, create new powers.

Freedom to found educational establishments is guaranteed as one of the aspects of freedom to conduct a business but it is limited by respect for democratic principles and is exercised in accordance with the arrangements defined by national legislation.

Article 15. Freedom to choose an occupation

1. To earn a living, everyone has the right to engage in a freely chosen occupation.
2. Every citizen of the Union has the freedom to seek employment, to work, to exercise the right of establishment and to provide or receive services in any Member State.
3. Nationals of third countries who are authorised to reside in the territories of the Member States are entitled to working conditions equivalent to those of citizens of the Union.

Explanation

Freedom to choose an occupation, as enshrined in paragraph 1, is recognised in Court of Justice case law (see inter alia judgment of 14 May 1974, Case 4/73 Nold [1974] ECR 491, paragraphs 12 to 14 of the grounds; judgment of 13 December 1979, Case 44/79 Hauer [1979] ECR 3727; judgment of 8 October 1986, Case 234/85 Keller [1986] ECR 2897, paragraph 8 of the grounds). This paragraph also draws upon Article 1(2) of the European Social Charter which was signed on 18 October 1961 and has been ratified by all the Member States, and on point 4 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers of 9 December 1989.

The second paragraph deals with the three freedoms guaranteed by Articles 39, 43 and 49 et seq of the EC Treaty, namely freedom of movement for workers, freedom of establishment and freedom to provide services.

The third paragraph is based on TEC Article 137(3), fourth indent, and on Article 19(4) of the European Social Charter signed on 18 October 1961 and ratified by all the Member States.

Article 16. Freedom to conduct a business

The freedom to conduct a business is recognised.

Explanation

This Article is based on Court of Justice case law which has recognised freedom to exercise an economic or commercial activity (see judgments of 14 May 1974, Case 4/73 Nold [1974] ECR 491, paragraph 14 of the grounds, and of 27 September 1979, Case 230-78 Eridiana and others [1979] ECR 2749, paragraphs 20 and 31 of the grounds) and freedom of contract (see inter alia Sukkerfabriken Nykøbing judgment, Case 151/78 [1979] ECR I, paragraph 19 of the grounds, and judgment of 5 October 1999, C-240/97 Spain v. Commission (not yet published), paragraph 99 of the grounds) and TEC Article 4(1) and (2) which recognises free competition.

Article 17. Right to property

1. Every person has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions, except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to fair compensation. The use of property may be regulated insofar as is necessary for the general interest.
2. Intellectual property shall be protected.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights:

"Every natural or legal person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions. No one shall be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and subject to the conditions provided for by law and by the general principles of international law.

The preceding provisions shall not, however, in any way impair the right of a State to enforce such laws as it deems necessary to control the use of property in accordance with the general interest or to secure the payment of taxes or other contributions or penalties."

This is a fundamental right common to all national constitutions. It has been recognised on numerous occasions by the case law of the Court of Justice, initially in the Hauer judgment (13 December 1979, ECR [1979] 3727). The wording has been updated but, pursuant to Article 50(3), the meaning and scope of the right are similar to those of the right guaranteed by the Convention and the limitations may not exceed those provided for in the Convention.

Protection of intellectual property, one aspect of the right of property, is explicitly mentioned because of its growing importance.

Article 18. Right to asylum

The right to asylum shall be guaranteed with due respect for the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees and in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Explanation

The text of the Article is based on TEC Article 63 which requires the Union to respect the Geneva Convention on refugees. The provisions of Article 1 of Protocol No 7 to the European Convention on Human Rights concerning procedural safeguards in the event of expulsion have not been incorporated, as most Member States have not signed or ratified that Protocol.

Article 19. Protection in the event of removal, expulsion or extradition

1. Collective expulsions are prohibited.
2. No one may be removed, expelled or extradited to a State where he could be subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 of this Article is based on Article 4 of Protocol No 4 to the European Convention on Human Rights concerning collective expulsion. Its purpose is to guarantee that every decision is based on a specific examination and that no single measure can be taken to expel all persons who are nationals of a particular State.

*Paragraph 2 incorporates case law from the European Court of Human Rights regarding Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights (see Ahmed v. Austria, judgment of 17 December 1996, ECR 1996 VI.2206 and Soering, judgment of 7 July 1989).*

CHAPTER III. EQUALITYArticle 20. Equality before the law

Everyone, man or woman, is equal before the law.

Explanation

*Article 2 corresponds to a principle which has been included in all European constitutions since the 1789 Declaration of Human and Civil Rights and has also been recognised by the Court of Justice in a judgment as a basic principle of Community law (judgment of 13 November 1984, Racke, Case 283/83 [1984] ECR 3791, judgment of 17 April 1997, Case 15/95 EARL [1997] ECR I-1961, and judgment of 13 April 2000, Case 292/97 Karlsson, not yet published).*

Article 21. Equality and non-discrimination

1. Any discrimination based on any ground such as sex, race, colour, ethnic or social origin, genetic features, language, religion or belief, political or any other opinion, membership of a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, and without prejudice to the special provisions of those Treaties, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 draws on Article 13 of the EC Treaty, Article 14 of the European Convention on Human Rights and Article 11 of the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine as regards genetic heritage.

Paragraph 2 corresponds to Article 12 of the EC Treaty and must be applied in compliance with the Treaty.

Article 22. Equality between men and women

Equal opportunities and equal treatment for men and women as regards employment and work, including equal pay for equal work or for work of equal value, must be ensured.

The principle of equal treatment shall not prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures providing for specific advantages in order to make it easier for the under-represented sex to pursue a vocational activity or to prevent or compensate for disadvantages in professional careers.

Explanation

The first paragraph is based on Article 141 of the EC Treaty and draws on Article 20 of the revised European Social Charter of 3 May 1996 and on point 16 of the Community Charter.

The second paragraph is based on Article 141(4) of the EC Treaty and Article 2(4) of Directive 76/207/EEC on the implementation of the principle of equal treatment for men and women as regards access to employment, vocational training and promotion, and working conditions.

The principle of equal treatment does not prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures providing for specific advantages in order to make it easier for the under-represented sex to pursue a vocational activity or to prevent or compensate for disadvantages in professional careers.

Article 23. Protection of children

1. Children shall have the right to such protection and care as is necessary for their well-being. They may express their views freely. Such views shall be taken into consideration on matters which concern them in accordance with their age and maturity.
2. In all actions relating to children, whether taken by public authorities or private institutions, the child's best interests must be a primary consideration.

Explanation

This Article is based on the New York Convention on the Rights of the Child signed on 20 November 1989 and ratified by all the Member States, particularly Articles 3, 12 and 13 thereof.

Article 24. Integration of persons with disabilities

Persons with disabilities have the right to benefit from measures designed to ensure their independence, social and occupational integration and participation in the life of the community.

Explanation

The principle set out in this Article is based on Article 15 of the European Social Charter and also draws on the revised Social Charter and point 24 of the Community Charter.

CHAPTER IV. SOLIDARITYArticle 25. Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Workers and their representatives must be guaranteed information and consultation in good time on matters which concern them within the undertaking, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.

Explanation

This Article is based on the revised European Social Charter (Article 21) and the Community Charter (Article 17). There is a considerable Community acquis in this field: Directives 98/59/EC (collective redundancies), 77/187/EC (transfers of undertakings) and 94/45/EC (European works councils).

Article 26. Right of collective bargaining and action

Employers and workers have the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and, in cases of conflicts of interest, to take collective action to defend their interests, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 1 of the European Social Charter and on point 6 of the Community Charter. The right of collective action was recognised by the European Court of Human Rights as one of the elements of trade union rights laid down by Article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Article 27. Right of access to placement services

Everyone has the right of access to a placement service.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 2 of the European Social Charter and point 6 of the Community Charter.

Article 28. Protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

Every worker has the right to protection against unjustified dismissal.

Explanation

This Article draws on Article 24 of the revised Social Charter.

Article 29. Fair and just working conditions

1. Every worker has the right to working conditions which respect his or her health, safety and dignity.
2. Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave.

Explanation

This Article is based on Directive 89/391/EC on the introduction of measures to encourage improvements in the safety and health of workers at work, Article 3 of the Social Charter and point 19 of the Community Charter. The right to dignity at work in particular is proclaimed in Article 26 of the revised Social Charter.

Paragraph 2 is based on Directive 93/104/EC concerning certain aspects of the organisation of working time, Article 2 of the European Social Charter and point 8 of the Community Charter.

Article 30. Protection of young people at work

The employment of children is prohibited. The minimum age of admission to employment must not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people and except for limited derogations.

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions appropriate to their age and be protected against economic exploitation and any work likely to harm their safety, health or physical, mental, moral or social development or to interfere with their education.

Explanation

This Article is based on Directive 94/33/EC on the protection of young people at work, Article 7 of the European Social Charter and points 20 to 23 of the Community Charter.

Article 31. Reconciling family and professional life

The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.

Everyone shall have the right to reconcile their family and professional lives, which includes in particular the right to protection from dismissal because of pregnancy and the right to paid maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.

Explanation

The first paragraph is based on Article 16 of the European Social Charter.

The second paragraph draws on Council Directive 92/85/EEC of 19 October 1992 on the introduction of measures to encourage improvements in the safety and health at work of pregnant workers and workers who have recently given birth or are breastfeeding and Directive 96/34/EC of 3 June 1996 on the framework agreement on parental leave concluded by UNICE, CEEP and the ETUC. It is also based on Article 8 (protection of maternity) of the European Social Charter and draws on Article 27 (right of workers with family responsibilities to equal opportunities and equal treatment) of the revised Social Charter.

Article 32. Social security and social assistance

1. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to social security benefits and social services providing protection in the event of maternity, illness, industrial accidents, dependency or old age and in the event of loss of employment, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.
2. Workers who are nationals of a Member State residing in another Member State, and members of their families, have the right to the same social security benefits, social advantages and access to health care as nationals of that State.
3. The Union recognises and respects the right to social assistance and housing benefit in order to ensure a decent existence for persons lacking sufficient resources, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.

Explanation

The principle set out in paragraph 1 is based on Article 12 of the European Social Charter and point 10 of the Community Charter. The Union must respect it when exercising the powers conferred on it by Article 140 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.

The second paragraph is based on Article 13(4) of the European Social Charter and point 2 of the Community Charter and sets out the rules arising from Regulation No 1408/71 which implements Article 42 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.

The third paragraph draws on Articles 30 and 31 of the revised Social Charter and point 10 of the Community Charter. The Union must respect it in the context of policies based on Article 137 of the Treaty establishing the European Community, particularly the last paragraph.

Article 33. Health care

Everyone has the right of access to preventive health care and the right to benefit from medical treatment under the conditions established by national laws and practices.

Explanation

The principles set out in this Article are based on Article 152 of the EC Treaty and on Article 11 of the European Social Charter.

Article 34. Access to services of general economic interest

The Union respects the access to services of general economic interest as provided for in national laws and practices in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty establishing the European Community in order to promote the social and territorial cohesion of the Union.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 16 of the Treaty establishing the European Community and does not of itself create any right but sets out the principle of respect by the Union for the access to services of general economic interest provided for by national provisions when it is compatible with Community legislation.

Article 35. Environmental protection

All Union policies shall ensure the protection and preservation of a good quality living environment and the improvement of the quality of the environment, taking into account the principle of sustainable development.

Explanation

The principles set out in this Article are based on Articles 2, 6 and 174 of the EC Treaty.

Article 36. Consumer Protection

Union policies shall ensure a high level of protection as regards the health, safety and interests of consumers.

Explanation

The principles set out in this Article are based on Article 153 of the EC Treaty.

CHAPTER V. CITIZENSHIPArticle 37. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State.
2. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage by free and secret ballot.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 of this Article corresponds to the right guaranteed by Article 19(2) of the EC Treaty. Paragraph 2 corresponds to Article 190(1) of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 50(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions set out in the Treaty.

Article 38. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Explanation

This Article corresponds to the right guaranteed by Article 19(1) of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 50(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions set out in the Treaty.

Article 39. Right to good administration

1. Every person has the right to have his affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.
2. This right includes:
 - the right of every person to be heard before any individual measure which would affect him adversely is taken in relation to him;
 - the right of every person to have access to his file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy;
 - the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.
3. Every person has the right to have the Community make good any damage caused by its institutions or by its servants in the performance of their duties, in accordance with the general principles common to the laws of the Member States.
4. Every person may write to the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of such institutions and have an answer in the same language.

Explanation

This right is based on the existence of a Community based on the rule of law and was developed in the case law which enshrined the principle of good administration (see inter alia Court of Justice judgment of 31 March 1992, Case C-255/90 P, Burbán, [1992] ECR 2253, and Court of First Instance judgments of 18 September 1995, Case T-167/94 Nölle [1995] ECR II 2589, and 9 July 1999, Case T-231/97 New Europe Consulting and others (not yet published)). The wording for that right in the first two paragraphs results from the case law (Court of Justice judgment of 15 October 1987, Case 222/86 Heylens [1987] ECR 4097, paragraph 15 of the grounds, judgment of 18 October 1989 in Case 374/87 Orkem [1989] ECR 3283, judgment of 21 November 1991 in Case C-269/90 TU München [1991] ECR I-5469, and Court of First Instance judgments of 6 December 1984 in Case T-450/93 Lisrestal [1994] ECR II-1177, 18 September 1995 in Case T-167/94 Nölle [1995] ECR II-258), and the wording regarding the obligation to give reasons comes from Article 253 of the EC Treaty.

Paragraph 3 reproduces the right guaranteed by Article 288 of the EC Treaty.

Paragraph 4 reproduces the right guaranteed by the third paragraph of Article 21 of the EC Treaty.

In accordance with Article 50(2) of the Charter, those rights are to be applied under the conditions and within the limits defined by the Treaties.

Article 40. Right of access to documents

Any citizen of the Union, and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State, has a right of access to European Parliament, Council and Commission documents.

Explanation

The right guaranteed in this Article is the right guaranteed by Article 255 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 50(2), it applies under the conditions defined by the Treaty.

Article 41. Ombudsman

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration by Community institutions and bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Explanation

The right guaranteed in this Article is the right guaranteed by Articles 21 and 195 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 50(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions defined by the Treaty.

Article 42. Right to petition

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Explanation

The right guaranteed in this Article is the right guaranteed by Article 21 and 194 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 50(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions defined by the Treaty.

Article 43. Freedom of movement and of residence

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.
2. Freedom of movement may be granted, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, to nationals of third countries legally resident in the territory of a Member State.

Explanation

The right guaranteed by paragraph 1 is the right guaranteed by Article 18 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 50(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions and within the limits defined by the Treaty.

Paragraph 2 refers to the power granted to the Community by Article 62(3) and Article 63(4) of the EC Treaty.

Article 44. Diplomatic and consular protection

Every citizen of the Union shall, in the territory of a third country in which the Member State of which he is a national is not represented, be entitled to protection by the diplomatic or consular authorities of any Member State, on the same conditions as the nationals of that Member State.

Explanation

The right guaranteed by this Article is the right guaranteed by Article 20 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 50(2), it applies under the conditions defined by the Treaty.

CHAPTER VI. JUSTICE

Article 45. Right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial

1. Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.
2. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal previously established by law. Everyone shall have the possibility of being advised, defended and represented.

3. Legal aid shall be made available to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is necessary to ensure effective access to justice.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 is based on Article 13 of the European Convention on Human Rights:

"Everyone whose rights and freedoms as set forth in this Convention are violated shall have an effective remedy before a national authority notwithstanding that the violation has been committed by persons acting in an official capacity."

However, in Community law the protection is more extensive since it guarantees the right to an effective remedy before a court. The Court of Justice enshrined the principle in its judgment of 15 May 1986 (Case 222/84 Johnston [1986] ECR 1651; see also judgment of 15 October 1987, Case 222/86 Heylens [1987] ECR 4097 and judgment of 3 December 1992, Case C-97/91 Borelli [1992] ECR I-6313). According to the Court, this principle also applies to the Member States when they are implementing Community law. The inclusion of this precedent in the Charter is not intended to change the appeal system laid down by the Treaties, and particularly the rules relating to admissibility. This principle is to be implemented according to the procedures laid down in the Treaties.

Paragraph 2 corresponds to Article 6(1) of the European Convention on Human Rights which reads as follows:

"In the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. Judgment shall be pronounced publicly but the press and public may be excluded from all or part of the trial in the interests of morals, public order or national security in a democratic society, where the interests of juveniles or the protection of the private life of the parties so require, or to the extent strictly necessary in the opinion of the court in special circumstances where publicity would prejudice the interests of justice."

In Community law, the right to a fair hearing is not confined to disputes relating to civil law rights and obligations. That is one of the consequences of the fact that the Community is a community based on the rule of law as stated by the Court in Case 294/83, "Les Verts" v. European Parliament (judgment of 23 April 1986, [1988] ECR 1339); that means that there is a right to an effective judicial remedy (among the many precedents, Johnston, Case 222/84, judgment of 15 May 1986, [1986] ECR 1682, and the other cases cited above). Nevertheless, in all respects other than their scope, the guarantees afforded by the Convention apply in a similar way to the Union.

With regard to paragraph 3, it should be noted that in accordance with the case law of the European Court of Human Rights, provision should be made for legal aid where the absence of such aid would make it impossible to ensure an effective remedy (ECHR Judgment of 9.10.1979, Airey, Series A, Volume 32, 11). There is also a system of legal assistance for cases before the Court of Justice of the European Communities. That being so, it was deemed important to enshrine this principle in the Charter.

Article 46. Presumption of innocence and right of defence

1. Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
2. Respect for the right of defence of anyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 6(2) and (3) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.*
3. Everyone charged with a criminal offence has the following minimum rights:
 - (a) to be informed promptly, in a language which he understands and in detail, of the nature and cause of the accusation against him;*
 - (b) to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence;*

- (c) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or, if he has not sufficient means to pay for legal assistance, to be given it free when the interests of justice so require;
- (d) to examine or have examined witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him;
- (e) to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court."

In accordance with Article 50(3), the meaning and scope of this right are similar to those of the right guaranteed by the European Convention on Human Rights.

Article 47. Principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties

1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the criminal offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to international law.
3. The severity of penalties shall be proportional to the gravity of the criminal offence.

Explanation

This Article follows the traditional principle of the non-retroactivity of laws and criminal sanctions. There has been added the principle of the retroactivity of a more lenient penal law which exists in a number of Member States and which features in Article 15 of the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

Article 7 of the European Convention on Human Rights is worded as follows:

- "1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed.*
- 2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of law recognised by civilised nations."*

In paragraph 2, the reference to "general principles of law recognised by civilised nations" has been replaced by the more modern reference to "general principles of international law"; this does not change the meaning of this paragraph, which refers to crimes against humanity in particular. Paragraph 3 states the general principle of proportionality between penalties and criminal offences which is enshrined in the common constitutional traditions of the Member States and in the case law of the Court of Justice of the Communities.

Article 48. Right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same criminal offence

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law.

Explanation

Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the European Convention of Human Rights reads as follows:

- "1. No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings under the jurisdiction of the same State for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law and penal procedure of that State.*

2. The provisions of the preceding paragraph shall not prevent the reopening of the case in accordance with the law and the penal procedure of the State concerned, if there is evidence of new or newly discovered facts, or if there has been a fundamental defect in the previous proceedings, which could affect the outcome of the case.
3. No derogation from this Article shall be made under Article 15 of the Convention."

The "non bis in idem" principle applies in Community law (see, among the many precedents, the judgment of 5 May 1996, Cases 18/65 and 35/65, Gutmann v. Commission [1966] ECR 103 and a recent case, the decision of the Court of First Instance of 20 April 1999, Joined Cases T-305/94 and others, Limburgse Vinyl Maatschappij NV v. Commission, not yet published). The rule prohibiting cumulation refers to cumulation of two penalties of the same kind, that is to say criminal law penalties.

*In accordance with Article 48, the "non bis in idem" principle applies not only within the jurisdiction of one State but also between the jurisdictions of several Member States. That corresponds to the acquis in Union law; see Articles 54 to 58 of the Schengen Convention, Article 7 of the Convention on the Protection of the European Communities' Financial Interests and Article 10 of the Convention on the fight against corruption. The very limited exceptions in those Conventions permitting the Member States to derogate from the "non bis in idem" principle are covered by the horizontal clause in Article 50(1) of the Charter regarding limitations.*

Article 49. Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. They shall therefore respect the rights, observe the principles and promote the application thereof in accordance with their respective powers.

2. This Charter does not establish any new power or task for the Community or the Union, or modify powers and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Explanation

The aim of this provision is to determine the scope of the Charter. It seeks to establish clearly that the Charter applies primarily to the institutions and bodies of the Union, within the framework of the Union's powers and tasks. In other words, the Charter applies only to matters covered by Community competence and the tasks of the Union, in compliance with the principle of subsidiarity. This provision is in keeping with Article 6(2) of the Treaty on European Union, which requires the Union to respect fundamental rights, and with the mandate issued by Cologne European Council. The term "institutions" is enshrined in the EC Treaty, Article 7 of which lists the institutions. The term "body" is commonly used to refer to all the authorities set up by the Treaties or by secondary legislation (see Article 286(1) of the Treaty establishing the European Community).

It follows unambiguously from the case law of the Court of Justice that the requirement to respect fundamental rights is also binding on the Member States when they act in the context of Community law (judgment of 13 July 1989, Case 5/88 Wachauf [1989] ECR 2609; judgment of 18 June 1991, ERT [1991] ECR I-2925). The Court of Justice recently confirmed this case law in the following terms: "In addition, it should be remembered that the requirements flowing from the protection of fundamental rights in the Community legal order are also binding on Member States when they implement Community rules..." (judgment of 13 April 2000, Case C-292/97, paragraph 37 of the grounds, not yet published). The second paragraph confirms that the Charter does not affect the competences and tasks which the Treaties confer on the Community and the Union

1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest being pursued by the Union, other legitimate interests in a democratic society or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.

2. Rights recognised by this Charter which are based on the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.
3. Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be similar to those conferred on them by the said Convention unless this Charter affords greater or more extensive protection.

Explanation

The purpose of this provision is to set the scope of the rights guaranteed. Paragraph 1 deals with the arrangements for the limitation of rights. The wording is based on the case law of the Court of Justice: "...it is well established in the case law of the Court that restrictions may be imposed on the exercise of fundamental rights, in particular in the context of a common organisation of the market, provided that those restrictions in fact correspond to objectives of general interest pursued by the Community and do not constitute, with regard to the aim pursued, disproportionate and unreasonable interference undermining the very substance of those rights" (judgment of 13 April 2000, Case C-292/97, paragraph 45 of the grounds).

Paragraph 2 specifies that where a right results from the Treaties it is subject to the conditions and limits laid down by them. The Charter does not alter the system of rights conferred by the Treaties. Paragraph 3 lays down the arrangements for rights which are also guaranteed by the European Convention on Human Rights. Where the Charter does not afford greater or more extensive protection, the meaning and scope of those rights are similar to those conferred on them by the European Convention on Human Rights. It goes without saying that the term "convention" covers both the Convention and its Protocols and that the meaning and scope of the rights are determined not only by the text of the Convention but also by the case law of the European Court of Human Rights. "Scope" means not only the extent of the rights as they result from the Convention but also the arrangements for limitations.

Article 51. Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or adversely affecting human rights and fundamental freedoms as recognised, in their respective fields of application, by international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and by the Member States' constitutions.

Explanation

The aim of the provision is clear - to maintain the level of protection currently afforded by Union law, national law and international law. Owing to its importance, mention is made of the European Convention on Human Rights, which constitutes a minimum standard in all cases. The level of protection afforded by the Charter may not, in any instance, be lower than that guaranteed by the Convention, with the result that the arrangements for limitations may not fall below the level provided for in the Convention.

Article 52. Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for herein.

Explanation

*This Article corresponds to Article 17 of the European Convention on Human Rights:
"Nothing in this Convention may be interpreted as implying for any State, group or person any right to engage in any activity or perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms set forth herein or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for in the Convention."*

The European Union's Charter of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms and Common Principles

Preamble

Whereas:

1. The Union is founded on the principles of liberty, democracy, respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, and the rule of law - principles which are common to the Member States;
2. The four freedoms enshrined in the Treaties establishing the European Communities namely, freedom of movement of goods, persons, services and capital continue to be enjoyed by citizens and implemented by the institutions and Member States as fundamental rights in the Union;
3. The Union is also obliged to respect fundamental rights as guaranteed by the ECHR and as they result from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, as general principles of Community law;
4. The Union respects the Member States' national identities and the principle of subsidiarity;
5. All fundamental rights of the individual flow from the dignity of the person and the equality of each and every person before the law;
6. Enjoyment of these fundamental rights and freedoms entails responsibilities and duties, both towards other individuals and to society as a whole;
7. The Union recognises that, in addition to fundamental rights and freedoms, there are certain principles, especially in the field of social protection, which are common to all Member States. These are recognised in each Member State to the extent and in accordance with limitations appropriate in each Member State; its own national, regional and local identity; and the principle of subsidiarity;
8. At this stage in the Union's development there is a need to consolidate in a Charter the fundamental rights and freedoms applicable at Union level and the principles common to Member States to make them more visible to the union's citizens;

9. The Union's institutions and bodies [and the Member States when implementing community law] should respect these fundamental rights and freedoms and have due regard to those principles whilst respecting the principle of subsidiarity and the need, in accordance with the Community's overriding task in article 2 of the Treaty establishing the European Community. This task is to promote a harmonious, balanced and sustainable development of economic activities, a high level of employment and of social protection, equality between men and women, sustainable development and non-inflationary growth, a high degree of competitiveness and convergence of economic performance, a high level of protection and improvement of the quality of environment, the raising of the standard of living and quality of life, economic and social cohesion and solidarity among Member States;

10. Having regard to the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, the Community Treaties and the European Convention of Human Rights and drawing upon the Social Charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe, as well as the jurisprudence of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and the European Court of Human Rights;

The Council, European Commission and European parliament proclaim in this Charter the following fundamental rights and freedoms and principles of social protection:

Stellungnahme des Vertreters des Bundesrates im Konvent zu den Kompromissvorschlägen des Präsidiums zu den sozialen Rechten in den Dokumenten CHARTE 4383/00 CONVENT 41 und CHARTE 4399/00 CONVENT 42

Sehr geehrte Damen und Herren, in der Sitzung des Konvents am 10./11. Juli 2000 wurde mit der Prüfung der Artikel 31 bis 50 begonnen. Die Prüfung soll in der nächsten Sitzung des Konvents am 17./18./19. Juli 2000 abgeschlossen werden. Mit Schreiben vom 31. Mai 2000 habe ich Ihnen bereits meine Änderungsvorschläge zu den Vorschlägen des Präsidiums zu den sozialen Rechten übermittelt. Nunmehr hat das Präsidium Anfang Juli seine Kompromissvorschläge zu den sozialen Rechten in den Dokumenten CHARTE 4383/00 CONVENT 41 und CHARTE 4399/00 CONVENT 42 veröffentlicht. Aus diesem Grund sehe ich mich veranlasst, nochmals auf grundsätzliche Positionen der deutschen Länder zu den sozialen Grundrechten einzugehen. Eine ausführliche Stellungnahme liegt meinem Schreiben bei. Ich möchte Sie bitten, diese den Mitgliedern des Konvents in der kommenden Sitzung am 17./18./19. Juli 2000 bekanntzugeben.

Mit freundlichen Grüßen

Jürgen Gnauck

Entwurf einer Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen UnionStellungnahme des Vertreters des Bundesrates im Konvent, Herrn Minister Jürgen Gnauck, zu den sozialen Rechten

Angesichts der derzeitigen Beratungen im Konvent zu den sozialen Rechten sehe ich mich veranlasst, nochmals die grundsätzliche Position der deutschen Länder zu diesen Rechten darzulegen:

Die deutschen Länder bekennen sich zum Sozialstaatsprinzip. Auf dieser Grundlage sind sie in Deutschland Garanten eines hohen sozialen Schutzniveaus. Die Länder halten zugleich die soziale Dimension der Europäischen Union für wichtig und treten für eine Europäische Sozialordnung ein.

Hiervon zu unterscheiden ist jedoch die Frage, ob die vorgeschlagenen sozialen Gewährleistungen in eine Grundrechtecharta der Europäischen Union aufgenommen werden sollten. Die deutschen Länder orientieren sich hierbei an folgenden Kriterien:

Der Entwurf einer Grundrechtecharta hat sich streng an das Mandat des Europäischen Rates von Köln zu halten. Danach sind wirtschaftliche und soziale Rechte lediglich zu „berücksichtigen“, und zwar allein dann, wenn sie nicht nur Ziele für das Handeln der Union begründen. Es soll ein Katalog von Rechten erstellt werden, der die Bindung der Europäischen Union an die fundamentalen Rechtsüberzeugungen der Mitgliedstaaten für die Unionsbürger deutlich sichtbar macht. Nicht geht es um ein politisches Grundsatzprogramm der Union. Politische Zielbestimmungen scheiden mithin aus.

Des Weiteren darf es mit der Charta zu keinerlei Kompetenzerweiterung auf der Ebene der Europäischen Union kommen. Eine detaillierte Befassung mit Sachverhalten, für deren Regelung die Union nicht zuständig ist, mindert die angestrebte Wirkung der Charta, da die Union in diesen Bereich Rechte nicht selbst gewähren kann.

Es ist darüber hinaus stets darauf zu achten, dass die sozialen Rechte justizierbar, d. h. von den Gerichten anwendbar sind.

Ungeachtet all dessen wird die Charta entwertet, wenn sie mit Details überfrachtet wird. Nicht jede soziale Errungenschaft, die die europäischen Staaten auszeichnet, hat die Qualität eines unveräußerlichen Rechts, das auch und gerade unabhängig von der wirtschaftlichen Leistungsfähigkeit eines Gemeinwesen bestehen muss.

Schließlich soll die Charta knapp, lesbar und bürgerfreundlich formuliert sein, so dass sie sich auf allgemeinere, weniger detaillierte Regelungen beschränken muss. Diesen Ansatz hat sich der Konvent gerade auch bei den elementaren Rechten zu Eigen gemacht. Er sollte bei den sozialen Rechten von diesem sachgerechten Bestreben nicht abgehen. Es ist daher zu prüfen, ob nicht Regelungen auf der „einfachgesetzlichen“ Ebene ausreichen.

Da die Charta nach dem Mandat des Europäischen Rates die Rechtsbindung des Handelns der Organe der Union zum Ausdruck bringen soll und es damit um Verpflichtungen der hoheitlichen Gewalt geht, besteht schließlich kein Raum, eine unmittelbare Drittwirkung der Grundrechte, d. h. eine Verpflichtung auch von Bürgerinnen und Bürger oder Unternehmen, zu regeln. Die Länder lehnen eine solche Ausweitung grundsätzlich ab. Auch unter diesem Gesichtspunkt wäre bei einigen Regelungen eine weit größere Zurückhaltung angebracht, um durch einen Rechtstext nicht unerfüllbare Erwartungen bei den Unionsbürgern zu wecken.

An dieser von Beginn an vertretenen Auffassung halten die deutschen Länder unverändert fest. Sie betonen, dass es sich bei den sozialen Rechten in erster Linie nur um Abwehrrechte gegenüber der europäischen Hoheitsgewalt handeln darf, keinesfalls aber um Ansprüche des Einzelnen auf konkrete soziale Leistungen. Darüber hinaus bestehen keine Bedenken dagegen, Respektierungs- und Förderungspflichten in die Charta aufzunehmen, soweit sie nicht nur Ziele für das Handeln der Union begründen oder zu einer Kompetenzausweitung führen. Schließlich haben sich die Länder bereits dafür ausgesprochen, den Grundsatz der Solidarität in der zukünftigen Präambel zu verankern. Damit würde eine zusätzliche Werteentscheidung getroffen, die allen Mitgliedstaaten und den deutschen Ländern gemein ist.

Diesen Vorstellungen kommt der von Prof. Braibant und Prof. Meyer unter dem 13.06.2000 ausgehandigte Kompromissvorschlag nahe, dessen Konzeption (Respektierung/Schutz/Förderung) ebenfalls auf der Vorstellung beruht, soziale Rechte nur als Abwehrrechte in der Charta zu verankern. Prof. Meyer hat diesen Aspekt während der Konferenzberatungen mehrfach betont. Allerdings ist es aus der Sicht der Länder unabdingbar, dass der Charakter der sozialen Grundrechte als reiner Abwehrrechte stärker hervorgehoben wird, als das in dem angesprochenen Kompromisspapier der Fall ist. Für eine solche Klarstellung bieten sich die sogenannten horizontalen Regelungen (derzeit Art. 46 Abs. 2) an.

Soweit es um die Ausgestaltung der einzelnen sozialen Rechte geht, erscheint es für deren Beurteilung sinnvoll, den für Ende Juli angekündigten neuen Präsidiumsvorschlag abzuwarten.

Observations générales sur le projet de la Charte des Droits Fondamentaux (Charte 4422)

Je souscris les observations faites par Mr. Jürgen Meyer et autres (lettre du 30 août), à l'exception de la sous-alinéa ii. de l'alinéa b) du point II (Questions particulières) concernant la transparence des médias (article 11, 2, liberté d'expression), en ajoutant les observations suivantes:

1. Le numéro 3. du préambule devrait mentionner expressément la diversité linguistique.
2. Au texte du numéro 5 du préambule il faut ajouter la référence au droit international en général, en parallèle avec l'article 51° du projet, pour garantir la cohérence interne de la Charte.
3. A propos du numéro 3. de l'article 15° j'insiste, encore une fois, sur le fait que le principe de non discrimination des conditions de travail s'impose même si le travailleur reside illégalement dans le pays membre. En plus, il faut décourager l'utilisation par les employeurs de cette possibilité de dumping social...
4. La garantie de l'article 22° ne devrait pas se limiter à l'emploi et au travail. D'autres aspects, tels que la sécurité sociale, devraient aussi être compris. Pour cela suffit l'utilisation d'une formule exemplificative comme, par exemple, nottament.
5. A l'article 26° il faudrait expliciter que les droits respectifs peuvent être exercés à tous les niveaux, y compris le niveau européen. C'est la précisément la valeur ajoutée d'une Charte Européenne, tenant compte des dispositions du Traité.
6. A l'article 28° il convient d'ajouter le droit à une compensation dans les cas de licenciement par cause économique (tenant compte des directives européennes sur les licenciements collectifs).
7. La référence, dans l'article 30° à la possibilité de "derogations bien delimitées" au principe sur l'âge minimale ne devrait pas figurer dans un texte fondamentale comme la Charte doit être. En plus, l'article 50°, tenant compte de l'article 51°, permet résoudre le problème de la permission du travail d'enfants à caractère formatif et sans préjudice de la personnalité physique et morale de l'enfant. La dérogation doit donc disparaître.
8. L'article 34° devrait reprendre de la Déclaration n° 13 annexe au Traité d'Amsterdam, sur l'interprétation de l'article 16° (ex-article 7°-D) du Traité CE, la référence aux principes de l'égalité de traitement, de qualité et de continuité des services d'intérêt général.

9. L'article 43° semble être la place idéale pour garantir, en tant que noyau dur de la libre circulation européenne, l'exercice des droits prévus dans la Charte dans le pays de l'Union de résidence de la personne. Par exemple, les droits prévus à l'article 12° doivent être expressément garantis dans le pays de résidence.
10. Peut-être un article horizontal pourrait expliciter que les droits prévus par la Charte sont applicables aux personnes morales ou collectives dans toute la mesure compatible avec sa nature non humaine. Par exemple, il faut garantir la protection des données concernant les entreprises et c'est vrai que ces données-là ne revêtent pas un caractère personnel tel qu'il est prévu par l'article 8° du projet. Un article horizontal est une solution.

Les soussignés, José Barros Moura et Maria Eduarda Azevedo, représentants de Assembleia da República, Portugal, adoptent la position commune ci devant sur l'avant-projet de Charte proposé par le Praesidium (Charte 4422/00). Sur les questions de non-accord, chacun des représentants du Parlement portugais présente ou souscrit des positions différenciées.

Observations générales

En général, le texte préparé par le Praesidium a pris en compte les contributions orales et écrites des membres de la Convention et mérite une appréciation favorable. Mais il faut continuer le débat pour améliorer le texte, combler ses lacunes, corriger les imperfections qui subsistent. Nous avons le temps en conformité avec le mandat de Tampere, et serait une grave erreur limiter le débat seulement à cause des convenances d'un calendrier de la Présidence française. En tout cas, nous avons le temps jusqu'au 25 septembre pour faire le débat en profondeur qui est encore indispensable. Pas question, donc, de précipiter les choses dans la réunion du 11 et 12 septembre.

En ce qui concerne la systématique, il conviendrait de ne pas se référer, comme il est fait dans divers articles, aux "législations nationales" et "au droit communautaire". Nous demandons, en conséquence, la suppression de cette référence aux articles 9, 18, 25, 26, 32, 33 et 34.

Compte tenu de la disposition horizontale de l'article 49, al. 1 et 2, cette référence est superflue. Pour des considérations liées à la systématique, la Convention a convenu de formuler les questions horizontales séparément dans le but notamment de faciliter la lisibilité de la Charte et l'identification du citoyen avec l'UE.

La systématique du projet fait croire au citoyen que l'on tend à diluer des articles spécifiques par rapport à d'autres, ce qui n'est pas l'intention de la Convention et ne correspond pas au mandat de Cologne. Par ailleurs, elle peut faire croire que des droits fondamentaux relevant, dans leur acception générale, du droit premier sont valables sous réserve de réglementations nationales ou de futures révisions du traité. Cette impression serait regrettable et contraire à l'esprit de l'article 6, al. 1 du traité de l'UE dans lequel il est dit expressément que l'Union accorde une priorité absolue au respect des droits de l'Homme et des libertés fondamentales. C'est pourquoi nous proposons la suppression pure et simple de l'article 50, al. 2.

Nous approuvons l'énumération au point 5 du préambule des principales sources dont s'inspire la Charte qui est, conformément au mandat de Cologne, la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, les traditions constitutionnelles communes des Etats membres, la Charte sociale européenne et la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs. Cependant, la cohérence du projet risque d'être compromise si l'on omet de mentionner ces sources également à l'article 51. Le préambule et l'article 51 relient entre eux les diverses parties du projet. C'est pourquoi nous plaidons en faveur de l'insertion également à l'article 51, en tant que niveau de protection minimal, les Chartes sociales adoptées par la Communauté et le Conseil de l'Europe. Et, vice versa, la mention au préambule du droit international en général en parallèle avec l'article 51 du projet pour assurer la cohérence interne de la Charte.

Peut-être un article horizontal pourrait expliciter que les droits prévus par la Charte sont applicables aux personnes morales ou collectives dans toute la mesure compatible avec sa nature non humaine. Par exemple, il faut garantir la protection des données concernant les entreprises et c'est vrai que ces données-là ne revêtent pas un caractère personnel tel qu'il est prévu par l'article 8 du projet.

D'une manière générale, il conviendrait de vérifier une nouvelle fois très attentivement l'équivalence des notions employées dans les différentes langues du texte de la Charte.

Nous espérons que la Convention disposera du texte de la Charte dans toutes les langues de l'UE avant sa transmission aux chefs d'état et de gouvernement.

Observations particulières

Le numéro 3 du préambule devrait mentionner expressément la diversité linguistique.

Article 10. Liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion

Il convient d'ajouter à cet article un deuxième alinéa dans lequel sera inscrit le droit à l'objection de conscience. L'insertion donne suite à toute une série d'amendements et aux points de vue exprimés par une majorité au cours de la discussion à la Convention.

Article 13. Liberté de la recherche

Il convient d'ajouter à cet article la liberté des sciences, de l'enseignement et des arts. Cet ajout correspond à une proposition précédente du Présidium (Convent 13, art.15 al. 2, à l'exception de "l'enseignement") que la Convention n'avait pas critiquée à cet égard. Bien au contraire, plusieurs délégués avaient souligné, au cours du débat, l'importance de cet alinéa, le justifiant dans un grand nombre d'amendements. Par ailleurs, ces libertés correspondent aussi bien aux traditions constitutionnelles communes des Etats membres qu'aux conventions internationales.

Article 15. Liberté d'exercice d'une profession

Nous insistons, encore une fois, sur le fait que le principe de non-discrimination des conditions de travail s'impose même si le travailleur réside illégalement dans le pays membre. En plus, il faut décourager l'utilisation par les employeurs de cette possibilité de dumping social...

Article 22. Egalité entre hommes et femmes

La garantie ne devrait pas se limiter à l'emploi et au travail. D'autres aspects, tels que la formation professionnelle, la sécurité sociale, etc., devraient aussi être compris. Pour cela suffit l'utilisation d'une formule exemplificative comme, par exemple, notamment.

Article 26. Droit de négociation et action collective Il faudrait expliciter que les droits respectifs peuvent être exercés a tous les niveaux, y compris le niveau européen. C'est la précisément la valeur ajoutée d'une Charte Européenne, tenant compte des dispositions du Traité.

Article 30. Protection des jeunes au travail

La possibilité de "dérogations bien délimitées" au principe sur l'âge minimal" ne devrait pas figurer dans un texte fondamental comme la Charte doit être. En plus, l'article 50°, tenant compte de l'article 51°, permet résoudre le problème de la permission du travail d'enfants a caractère formatif et sans préjudice de la personnalité physique et morale de l'enfant. La dérogation doit donc disparaître.

Article 32. Sécurité sociale et aide sociale

Tout en approuvant l'article tel que formulé à l'alinéa 1 nous proposons de placer en tête de l'énumération de l'assurance sociale et des services sociaux les termes "plus particulièrement" afin de souligner que cette énumération n'est pas limitative. Les droits fondamentaux devant, par définition, avoir un caractère aussi durable que possible, il convient d'éviter toute liste limitative d'exemples, car les développements futurs dans ce domaine ne sont pas prévisibles.

Par ailleurs, le Présidium n'a retenu à l'alinéa 3, ce que nous déplorons, qu'un seul aspect du "droit au logement", à savoir l'aide au logement. Rappelons encore dans ce contexte que le "droit au logement" est reconnu en droit international par tous les Etats membres (cf. notamment art. 25, al. 1 de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'Homme, art. 11 du Pacte international des Nations Unies relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, art. 27, al. 3 de la Convention des Nations Unies relative aux droits de l'enfant, art. 31 de la Charte sociale européenne révisée) et ancré dans nombre de constitutions des Etats membres (art. 23 Belgique, par. 15 a Finlande, art. 21, al. 4 Grèce, art. 22, al. 2, art. 65 Portugal, chapitre 1, par. 2 Suède, art. 47 Espagne; implicitement art. 1, 13, 14 et 20 Allemagne).

Article 34. Accès aux services d'intérêt général

Le texte devrait reprendre de la Déclaration n° 13 annexe au Traité d'Amsterdam, sur l'interprétation de l'article 16° (ex-article 7°-D) du Traité CE, la référence aux principes de l'égalité de traitement, de qualité et de continuité des services d'intérêt général.

Article 43. Liberté de circulation et de séjour

Voilà la place idéale pour garantir, en tant que noyau dur de la libre circulation européenne, l'exercice des droits prévus dans la Charte dans le pays de l'Union de résidence de la personne. Par exemple, les droits prévus à l'article 12° doivent être expressément garantis dans le pays de résidence

L'alinéa 2 de cet article ne définit pas de droit fondamental et annonce seulement une future révision éventuelle du traité susceptible de créer un droit à la libre circulation en faveur des ressortissants de pays tiers. L'article 63 n° 4 du traité de la CEE autorise l'égalité de traitement des ressortissants de pays tiers concernant la liberté de circulation. La liberté de circulation constitue, selon l'article 13 de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'Homme, l'article 12 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et l'article 2 du protocole n°4 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, un droit de l'Homme et non pas un droit civil.

Il conviendrait d'étendre, dans la Charte des droits fondamentaux, la liberté de circulation aux ressortissants d'Etats tiers en substituant à l'alinéa 1 les termes "toute personne" au terme "citoyen", ou encore de supprimer l'alinéa 2.

Παρατηρήσεις ANNAS ΜΠΕΝΑΚΗ-ΨΑΡΟΥΔΑ

(ΕΛΛΑΣ) επί του Σχεδίου Convent 45:

Αρθρ. 3 : Θα πρέπει να προστεθεί ένας επί πλέον όρος ότι: <<όλες οι ιατρικές πράξεις πρέπει να λαμβάνουν χώρα προς το συμφέρον του ατόμου>>.

Αρθρ. 8 : Επειδή σε περιπτώσεις δίωξης εγκληματικών πράξεων δέν πρέπει να επιτρέπεται η πρόσβαση στα αρχεία διωκτικών αρχών, πρέπει στο τρίτο εδάφιο και μετά τη φράση <<να έχει πρόσβαση στα συλλεγμένα δεδομένα που το αφορούν>> να προστεθεί η φράση <<σύμφωνα με τους περιορισμούς που ορίζει ο νόμος>>. Αυτό είναι σύμφωνο και με τη σχετική Κοινοτική Οδηγία.

Αρθρ. 10 : Οι θρησκευτικές πεποιθήσεις πρέπει να μπορούν να εκφράζονται καθ' οιονδήποτε τρόπο και όχι μόνο με τη λατρεία, την παιδεία κ.λπ. Γι' αυτό πρέπει το δεύτερο εδάφιο να διαμορφωθεί: <<Το δικαίωμα αυτό συνεπάγεται....., καθώς και το δικαίωμα της καθ' οιονδήποτε τρόπο εκδήλωσης του θρησκευματοςδημοσία ή κατ' ιδίαν, ιδίως με τη λατρεία..... και τις τελετουργίες>>.

Αρθρ. 11 : Στην παράγρ. 2 πρέπει να κατοχυρωθεί ο πάσης φύσεως έλεγχος του ΜΜΕ μέσω ανεξάρτητης διοικητικής αρχής. Γι' αυτό προτείνεται να προστεθεί το εξής εδάφιο: <<Ο σεβασμός των κανόνων αυτών υπόκειται στον έλεγχο ανεξάρτητης διοικητικής αρχής>>.

Αρθρ. 14 : Στο τέλος της παρ. 2 πρέπει να τεθεί η φράση: <<Κατά την άσκηση των δικαιωμάτων τους οι γονείς πρέπει πάντα να ενεργούν προς το συμφέρον του παιδιού>>.

Αρθρ. 15 : Σε σχέση με την παράγραφο αυτή πρέπει να διευκρινισθεί, εάν η προστασία περιλαμβάνει και τα πληρώματα υπηκόων τρίτων χωρών επί εμπορικών πλοίων χωρών της Ευρωπαϊκής Ένωσης. Αν ναι, η εξομοίωση πρέπει να περιορισθεί και να μην ισχύει ως προς τις αμοιβές και την κοινωνική ασφάλιση, αλλά να ακολουθούνται οι όροι των χωρών της υπηκοότητας των πληρωμάτων.

Αρθρ. 22 : Το άρθρο αυτό περιορίζει το πεδίο εφαρμογής της ισότητας μόνο στον τομέα της απασχόλησης και της εργασίας και γι' αυτό βρίσκεται πολύ πιο πίσω από το κοινοτικό κεκτημένο των άρθρ. 2 και 3 παρ.2 της Συνθήκης της Ε.Κ. Γι' αυτό και στην παράγρ.1 πρέπει να τεθεί μετά την φράση <<ίση μεταχείριση ανδρών και γυναικών>> η φράση <<σε όλους τους τομείς και ιδίως στον τομέα της απασχόλησης>>.

Η παράγρ.2 του άρθρου βρίσκεται ομοίως πολύ πιο πίσω από τα άρθρα 2 και 3 παρ. 2 της Συνθήκης που υποχρεώνουν την Ένωση να <<προωθεί>> την ισότητα <<σε όλους τους τομείς>> καθώς και με το άρθρο 141 παρ.4 της Συνθήκης και με τη Διακήρυξη Νο28 που προσαρτάται στη Συνθήκη του Αμστερνταμ. Για το λόγο αυτό ή πρέπει να αντικατασταθεί η παράγρ. 2 σύμφωνα με την πρότασή μου Contrib. 251 ή πρέπει να συμπληρωθεί με την εξής φράση: <<Μέχρις ότου εξασφαλισθεί η πλήρης ισότητα ανδρών και γυναικών η αρχή της ισότητας δεν εμποδίζει την διατήρηση ή υιοθέτηση μέτρων που προβλέπουν ειδικά πλεονεκτήματα υπέρ του λιγότερο εκπροσωπούμενου φύλου. Τα μέτρα αυτά πρέπει κυρίως να αποβλέπουν στην βελτίωση της θέσης των γυναικών>>.

Αρθρ. 31: Το άρθρο αυτό παρέχει πολύ περιορισμένη προστασία της μητρότητας και μόνο σε σχέση με την επαγγελματική ζωή.

Οφείλουμε να περιλάβουμε ξεχωριστό άρθρο για την προστασία της μητρότητας σύμφωνα με το κοινοτικό κεκτημένο, που θεωρεί το δικαίωμα αυτό αυτόνομο, ώστε πέραν των άλλων να απαγορεύεται και κάθε δυσμενής μεταχείριση της εγκύου κατά την πρόσβαση στην εργασία ή κατά τη διάρκεια αυτής ή της άδειας μητρότητας, να παρέχονται διευκολύνσεις κατ' αυτήν ή όταν επιστρέφει στην εργασία και να προστατεύεται από συνθήκες εργασίας που βλάπτουν αυτήν και το παιδί.

No. 409218/3390

Observations of Mrs. ANNA BENAKI-PSAROUDA
(GREECE) on the Draft of Convent 45:

- Article 3: An additional term should be added, that: "all medical acts should be made to the benefit of the person"
- Article 8: Because, in cases of prosecution of criminal acts the persecuted person should not be given access to the files, at the third item and after the phrase "to have access to the collected data that concern him", the phrase "in accordance with the limitations of law" should be added. This is consistent with the relevant Community Directive.
- Article 10: Religious convictions should be able to be expressed in any way, and not just by worship, education etc. This is why the second item should be formulated as follows: "This right implies ... as well as the right of manifestation of the religion in any way .. in public or in private, namely by worship .. and rituals".
- Article 11: In paragraph 2, all forms of control of the Mass Media should be secured through an independent administrative authority. This is why we recommend the addition of the following item: "The respect of these rules is subject to the control of an independent administrative authority".
- Article 14: The following phrase should be put at the end of paragraph 2: "In the exercise of their rights, the parents should always act to the benefit of the child".
- Article 15: Concerning this paragraph, it should be clarified whether the protection also includes the crews of third country citizens on commercial ships of European Union countries. If so, the equal ranking should be limited and should not be applicable concerning salaries and social security, for which the terms of the countries of crew citizenship should be followed.

Article 22: This article limits the scope of equality only in the field of employment and work and, for this reason, it is way behind the community acquis of articles 2 and 3 para.2 of the EU Treaty. This is why in paragraph 1, after the phrase "equal treatment of men and women", the following phrase should be added "in all fields, notably in the field of employment ...".

Paragraph 2 of the article is similarly way behind articles 2 and 3 para.2 of the Treaty that oblige the Union to "promote" equality "in all fields" as well as article 141 para.4 of the Treaty and Resolution No.28 attached to the Amsterdam Convention. For this reason, paragraph 2 should either be replaced in accordance with my recommendation Contrib.251 or supplemented with the following phrase: "Until full equality of men and women is secured, the principle of equality does not obstruct the maintenance or adoption of measures that provide for special advantages in favour of the less represented sex. These measures should mainly aim at improving the position of women".

Article 31: This article grants very limited protection of maternity and only in relation to professional life.

We ought to include a separate article on the protection of maternity in accordance with the community acquis which considers this right as autonomous so that, apart all other things, any unfavourable treatment of the pregnant woman is prohibited in her access to work or during pregnancy or during the maternity leave, so that facilities are granted during maternity leave or on return to work and so that she is protected from work conditions that may do harm to her and the child.

M. Mendez de Vigo, pour les représentants du Parlement européen

Monsieur le Président,
Messieurs les vice-présidents,

Je souhaite vous faire part de ma surprise s'agissant de l'actuelle rédaction de l'article 23 concernant la protection des enfants.

En effet celle-ci ne retient pas le droit de chaque l'enfant d'entretenir des relations et contacts directs et réguliers avec ses deux parents.

L'enfant n'est jamais plus en situation de détresse que lorsqu'il se retrouve privé de sa famille, de ses parents ou de l'un d'entre eux, or ce cas de figure se manifeste de plus en plus souvent à l'heure où l'Union favorise la libre-circulation, les mariages mixtes et la mobilité des personnes.

Cette situation est contraire à la Convention de New-York sur le droit des enfants (1989), qui dans son article 19 dispose :

Les Etats parties respectent le droit de l'enfant séparé de ses deux parents ou de l'un d'eux d'entretenir régulièrement des relations personnelles et des contacts directs avec ses deux parents, sauf si cela est contraire à l'intérêt supérieur de l'enfant.

La jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme reconnaît régulièrement qu'une telle situation est contraire à l'article 8 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme.

La présidence portugaise et aujourd'hui la présidence française ont l'une et l'autre reconnu que dans le domaine civil l'harmonisation du droit de la famille est la priorité, afin de régler les conflits qui impliquent des enfants issus de couples binationaux de l'UE. Moi-même, en tant que membre de la Commission parlementaire franco-allemande de médiation, je peux témoigner des nombreux drames frappant les couples binationaux du fait de la coexistence de systèmes judiciaires différents, et du désarroi dans lequel se trouvent leurs enfants subitement privés de tout contact avec l'un de leurs parents.

Comment la Charte peut-elle dès lors prétendre consacrer "l'intérêt supérieur de l'enfant", trop souvent interprété par certains tribunaux comme étant un intérêt à ne pas changer de pays, et ignorer que chacun d'entre eux a un droit et un besoin fondamental de connaître et de bénéficier d'une présence significative de ses deux parents ?

Je serais heureuse que nous puissions encore améliorer le texte du projet de charte sur ce point.

En vous remerciant par avance de l'intérêt que vous porterez à ma requête, je vous prie de croire, Monsieur le Président, Messieurs les Vice-Présidents, à l'assurance de ma haute considération.

de la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union Européenne

*Objet : Observations générales au projet de la Charte des droits fondamentaux
(CONVENT 45)*

Les députés socialistes soussignés, membres de la délégation du Parlement européen à la Convention de la Charte, remercient le Présidium pour le travail qui a abouti à l'élaboration de ce projet de Charte dans lequel nous pouvons retrouver beaucoup de nos contributions. Néanmoins, nous souhaitons faire part des remarques suivantes :

Sur la structure :

La subdivision en 7 chapitres à chaque fois avec un titre comporte une nouveauté et contribue à une plus grande lisibilité du texte, néanmoins il serait souhaitable de revoir la distribution des articles de la Charte dans ces différents titres car dans certains cas cette répartition paraît un peu forcée et artificielle.

Sur le contenu général :

La référence faite dans certains articles de la Charte, et notamment dans le chapitre SOLIDARITÉ, aux législations nationales et au droit communautaire nous semblent tout à fait superflue compte tenu des dispositions énoncées dans l'article 49 relatif au champ d'application de la Charte. Aux yeux des citoyens, cette référence constante aux législations nationales utilisée uniquement dans certaines dispositions de façon arbitraire, surtout en matière relative aux droits sociaux, peut diminuer l'importance et l'impact de ces articles vis-à-vis des autres. Or la Charte, dans son ensemble, doit mettre en évidence l'indivisibilité des droits.

C'est pourquoi nous proposons de supprimer cette référence faite aux articles 9, 14, 18, 25, 26, 32, 33 et 34.

Nous soutenons l'énumération faite au paragraphe 5 du préambule des principales sources qui ont inspiré la rédaction de cette Charte qui d'ailleurs correspondent au mandat de Cologne, c'est-à-dire la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, les traditions constitutionnelles communes des Etats membres, la Charte sociale européenne et la Charte communautaire des droits fondamentaux sociaux des travailleurs.

Cependant, la cohérence du projet risque d'être compromise si l'on omet de mentionner ces sources également à l'article 51. Le préambule et l'article 51 relient entre eux les diverses parties du projet. C'est pourquoi nous plaidons en faveur de l'insertion également à l'article 51, en tant que niveau de protection minimal, les Chartes sociales adoptées par la Communauté et le Conseil de l'Europe.

Dans le chapitre SOLIDARITÉ, nous avons remarqué que beaucoup des articles sont rédigés d'une façon vague ou ambiguë, par exemple, nous proposons de remplacer l'expression « l'Union reconnaît et respecte », par « Toute personne a droit ». Ceci permet une harmonisation de la terminologie valable pour tous les articles.

Sur quelques articles en particulier :

Article 11 – Liberté d'expression et d'information

Nous souhaitons qu'au paragraphe 1 soit mentionné expressément la liberté de "chercher" des informations, et non pas seulement de les recevoir. Ce droit, déjà existant dans l'article 19 de la Déclaration de l'ONU de 1948, est aujourd'hui essentiel étant donné la nouvelle dimension de l'Internet.

Quant au paragraphe 2, nous proposons l'ajout suivant : "Elle peut nécessiter des limitations aux grandes concentrations des moyens de communication".

Article 12 – Liberté de réunion et d'association

Paragraphe 1 : Nous proposons d'ajouter « Toute personne a le droit de fonder et d'adhérer à ces associations au niveau européen. »

Paragraphe 2 : Nous proposons d'ajouter : « les partis politiques au niveau européen contribuent, par voie démocratique, à l'expression (reste inchangé) ».

Article 13 – Liberté de la recherche

Nous proposons d'ajouter à cet article « la liberté des sciences, de l'enseignement et des arts » ainsi qu'un nouveau paragraphe : « Toute personne a le droit de bénéficier, dans des conditions équitables, des résultats des recherches scientifiques, notamment dans le secteur bio-médical ».

Article 15 – Liberté professionnelle et droit de travailler

Paragraphe 1 : Nouvelle rédaction : « Toute personne a le droit de travailler, d'exercer une profession librement choisie ou acceptée et de créer une entreprise, dans le respect du principe du développement économique et social équilibré et durable ».

Article 16 – Liberté d'entreprise

Nous proposons l'inclusion de cet article, comme rédigé, dans le premier paragraphe de l'article 15.

Article 23 bis (nouveau) – Personnes âgées

« Toute personne âgée a le droit de mener une vie indépendante et décente et de jouer un rôle actif dans la vie politique, sociale et culturelle. »

Article 26 – Droit de négociation et d'actions collectives

Nous proposons la rédaction suivante :

« Les organisations des travailleurs ont le droit de négocier et de conclure des conventions collectives avec des employeurs ou leurs organisations, également au niveau de l'Union, et de recourir, en cas de conflits d'intérêts, à des actions collectives, y compris le droit de grève, pour la défense de leurs intérêts.

Les pratiques et traditions des législations nationales sont respectées au niveau européen et l'effet transnational des droits est reconnu. »

Article 29 – Conditions de travail justes et équitables

Paragraphe 1 : A ce paragraphe doit être ajouté « tout travailleur a droit à des conditions de travail saines, sûres, dignes et à une rémunération équitable ».

Article 32 – Sécurité sociale et aide sociale

Paragraphe 1 : « Toute personne a droit à l'accès aux prestations de la sécurité sociale et aux services sociaux (reste inchangé) »

Paragraphe 3 : « Toute personne a droit à une aide sociale et le droit au logement (reste inchangé) »

Article 34 – Accès aux services d'intérêt économique général

Nous proposons de commencer l'article par: « Toute personne a le droit d'accès (reste inchangé) »

Article 36 – Protection des consommateurs

Nouvelle rédaction : « Les consommateurs ont droit à une information complète sur la qualité des biens et des services ainsi qu'à une publicité non mensongère qui répond aux critères de transparence et de vérité ».

Article 43 – Liberté de circulation et de séjour

Nous proposons que ce droit soit étendu aux ressortissants des pays tiers ainsi le paragraphe 1 doit commencer par « Toute personne (reste inchangé) ».

Le paragraphe 2 de cet article doit en conséquence être supprimé.

Article 50 – Portée des droits garantis

Nous proposons la suppression du paragraphe 2 actuel pour le remplacer par le texte suivant : « les droits reconnus par la présente Charte doivent s'exercer selon les pratiques et législations européennes et nationales existantes et sont valables au-delà des frontières dans toute l'Union européenne. »

Paragraphe 3 : Nous proposons l'ajout suivant : « Dans la mesure où la présente Charte contient des droits correspondant à des droits garantis par la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, et des Chartes sociales adoptées par la Communauté et par le Conseil de l'Europe, leur sens et leur portée sont les mêmes que leur confère lesdites conventions (reste inchangé) ».

Article 51 – Niveau de protection

Nous proposons la suppression du mot « tous », avant Etat membres dans la quatrième ligne ainsi que l'insertion après « Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, les Chartes sociales adoptées par la Communauté et par le Conseil de l'Europe (reste inchangé) ».

OBSERVACIONES DE ALVARO RODRIGUEZ BEREIJO. REPRESENTANTE PERSONAL DEL PRESIDENTE DEL GOBIERNO ESPAÑOL AL TEXTO CONSOLIDADO DEL PROYECTO DE CARTA DE DERECHOS FUNDAMENTALES DE LA UNION EUROPEA (Documento del Presidium CONVENT 45 DE 28 DE JULIO DE 2000)

1. A la Estructura.

Se propone cambiar la denominación del capítulo IV "Solidaridad" por "Derechos económicos y sociales".

Justificación: La denominación es equívoca. Cada cabeza de capítulo debe guardar una coherencia estricta con su contenido. La solidaridad es un concepto mucho más amplio que el contenido que se enuncia en este Capítulo, especialmente en el ámbito de la Unión Europea.

2. Al Preámbulo.

- punto 1 . Modificar la frase introductoria: "Les peuples européens"....por la siguiente: "Los ciudadanos de Europa han establecido entre ellos...".

Justificación: Precisar que los sujetos autores de la Unión son los ciudadanos europeos, más que los pueblos.

- punto 7. Se propone su modificación en la siguiente forma: "En los términos previstos en esta Carta, se garantizan los derechos y libertades que se enumeran..."

Justificación:

coherencia con la estructura y contenido de la Carta: la titularidad de los derechos varía en función de su contenido (por ejemplo, algunos derechos corresponden sólo a los ciudadanos de la Unión); por otra parte, la Carta no sólo enuncia derechos sino principios no directamente invocables ante los Tribunales de Justicia.

3. Al Articulado.

En reiteradas ocasiones la representación española ha insistido en la necesidad de fijar en el propio articulado la definición de cada derecho con los límites a su ejercicio, en aquellos casos en que, por su naturaleza, así lo requiera una definición acabada del mismo. La determinación de las limitaciones al ejercicio de un derecho son un elemento esencial de su configuración que debe figurar en la definición del propio derecho. Ello no alargaría necesariamente, el texto del artículo correspondiente, como ya se pudo comprobar en algunos borradores propuestos por el propio Presidium a la Convención.

Esta definición, positiva y negativa a la vez, del derecho no es redundante ni incompatible con la existencia de los artículos "horizontales" relativos a los límites y condiciones bajo las cuales han de ejercitarse los derechos reconocidos en la Carta.

Por otra parte, los artículos horizontales no siempre resuelven el problema de los límites específicos que definen el contenido de un derecho, Debería, al menos, redactarse una cláusula horizontal satisfactoria (en los términos que se expresarán más adelante) para que la representación española pueda desistir de esta petición que considera imprescindible. No puede, por ejemplo, mantenerse el derecho de asociación y sindicación en los términos que recoge el artículo 12.1, que, permitiría la libre sindicación de los militares o de los jueces, sin una cláusula que habilitara a los Estados a introducir límites al ejercicio de este derecho, como de hecho sucede en el Convenio Europeo de Derechos Humanos.

Por otra parte, y respecto al Capítulo IV. "Solidaridad", donde se contienen los derechos sociales y económicos, es preciso resolver de modo satisfactorio el distinto alcance y efectos, según se trate de "derechos" (subjetivos y justiciables) o de "principios" (que rigen la activación de los poderes públicos en su política social y económica, informan la legislación positiva y la práctica judicial. Son también "derechos", desde luego, pero requieren de la mediación del legislador para ser ejercidos como derechos subjetivos, en tanto sólo podrán ser alegados ante la autoridad judicial de acuerdo con lo que dispongan las leyes que los desarrollen.

Esta distinción ha de traducirse, necesariamente, en el lenguaje empleado en la formulación de los artículos correspondientes. Los "derechos subjetivos" se redactarán al modo de los derechos clásicos de libertad e igualdad. Por el contrario, aquellos derechos sociales y económicos que tengan el carácter principal deben reflejar en su formulación, su carácter inspirador de la política social y económica, evitando en ellos, en aras de la claridad y para no inducir a equívocos, la utilización del término "derecho".

4. Al Artículo 19.2.

Se propone modificar su redacción por el siguiente texto: "se prohíben las expulsiones masivas" o "de colectivos regularmente instalados".

Justificación:

Este precepto procede de un protocolo al Convenio Europeo de Derechos Humanos no ratificado por España, debido a los múltiples problemas que plantea la configuración de sus fronteras en relación con la inmigración ilegal. Se propone esta redacción puesto que de otra manera, cabría interpretar que la redacción propuesta impide la expulsión de grupos de personas que atravesasen ilegalmente la frontera.

5. Al Artículo 24.

A fin de evitar la creación de un "derecho prestacional" nacido directamente de la Carta y exigible a los Estados miembros, convendría formularlo de otro modo. Se propone redactar la integración de los minusválidos como un principio que vincula a los Estados miembros más que un derecho directamente exigible.

"La Unión (o los poderes públicos) garantizarán a las personas discapacitadas el acceso y las medidas ..."

6. Al Artículo 27.

Se pide su supresión.

Justificación:

No es un derecho fundamental y no debe figurar como tal en la Carta. Es más propio de la legislación laboral ordinaria.

Además, en la formulación que se propone, es un derecho vacío de contenido que carece de sentido.

7. Al artículo 32.3

Se propone la supresión (o su reformulación con una redacción diferente) del apartado 3), especialmente en lo relativo al derecho a una ayuda a la vivienda a toda persona.

Justificación:

Lo que se reconoce aquí es un derecho de carácter prestacional y extendido a todas las personas (es decir, universalizado), en un ámbito que es más propio de la categoría de los principios rectores. No parece procedente, pues, dotarlo de carácter de derecho subjetivo como se hace en el texto propuesto. La remisión al derecho nacional aunque salva la cuestión competencial (subsidiariedad) no hace lo mismo con su carácter no directamente vinculante o al menos justiciable como derecho subjetivo.

8. Al artículo 33

Modificación: La Unión reconoce y respeta el derecho a beneficiarse de la prevención sanitaria y de acceder a los cuidados médicos en las condiciones establecidas por las legislaciones y prácticas nacionales.

Justificación:

De acuerdo con lo que se acaba de expresar, estas prestaciones a cargo del Estado deben configurarse más como un principio rector que un derecho. Esta propuesta de formulación es por lo demás coherente con la redacción del anterior artículo 32.1 de contenido muy similar de la que sin embargo se separa el texto del Presidium sin motivo aparente.

9. Al artículo 34.

Se pide su supresión

Justificación

Recrea libremente un derecho a partir del art. 16 del Tratado de la Comunidad Europea, que, a su vez, remite a los arts. 73,86 y 87. Estos artículos encierran una gran complejidad y sería necesario un estudio más detenido sobre sus consecuencias y repercusiones antes de incluirlo en la Carta.

10. Al Artículo 35

Supresión del inciso "de un entorno con la calidad de vida adecuada".

Justificación:

Nos se alcanza a comprender el significado de esta expresión que se separa notablemente del contenido del Tratado de la Comunidad.

11. Al Artículo 49.2

Supresión del último inciso del artículo que empieza "Por consiguiente,..." sustituyéndolo una disposición horizontal ad hoc en un Artículo separado e independiente de un tenor similar al siguiente:

- 1) Las Instituciones y órganos de la Unión así como los Estados miembros exclusivamente en la ejecución del Derecho Comunitario, deben respetar los derechos, y observar y promover la aplicación de los principios reconocidos en esta Carta, conforme a su respectiva naturaleza.
- 2) Los derechos enumerados en los arts. 24, 32, 33, 35 y 36 informarán la legislación positiva, la práctica judicial y la actuación de los poderes públicos. Sólo podrán ser alegados ante la autoridad judicial de acuerdo con lo que dispongan las leyes que los desarrollen"

Justificación:

Una cosa es asegurar el principio de subsidiariedad y la interdicción de la ampliación de competencias vía Carta, y otra la diferencia entre derechos y principios. Lo primero se asegura con la disposición propuesta, estableciendo el ámbito de aplicación, el principio de subsidiariedad y el de no ampliación de competencias. El principio de subsidiariedad se refuerza en diversos artículos remitiendo, sobre todo en el caso de los derechos sociales, a las legislaciones y prácticas nacionales, remisión que, puede interpretarse fundamentalmente como un criterio de asignación de competencias entre la Comunidad y los Estados.

Cuestión distinta es la reiteradamente expresada posición de España y otros miembros de la Convención en el sentido de que deben diferenciarse los derechos directamente justiciables de aquellos otros, fundamentalmente los de carácter social, que exigen una prestación estatal. En este último caso, más que hablar de "derechos" procede referirse a "principios", puesto que muchos derechos sociales no son invocables sin su adecuada configuración legal, que se desarrolla en cada caso en función de los recursos presupuestarios que en cada momento pueden disponerse para este fin. Si no se acepta la propuesta española, por considerar que introduce dos diferentes categorías de derechos, al menos debe dejarse clara esa diferencia al intérprete: para ello se propone utilizar la propia formulación del Presidium, que se recoge como apartado 1) de esta propuesta distinguiendo la existencia en la Carta de derechos y de principios para que puedan extraerse las correspondientes consecuencias en el ámbito del amparo judicial. Es cláusula puede completarse con la cláusula prevista en el apartado 2) que aquí se propone.

12. Al Artículo 50.3 y 52.

Supresión del último inciso del artículo 50.3 a partir de "a menos que la presente carta no garantice una protección más elevada o más amplia" hasta el final y del último inciso del artículo 52 desde "o a unas limitaciones más amplias..."

Justificación:

La razón de la supresión es su incoherencia y sus efectos. Como se anticipó, si no se prevén límites en cada derecho, como sería deseable, debe al menos establecerse una buena cláusula horizontal que permita hacerlo. En este sentido se considera que cumplen esta función, los apartados 1,2, y 3 del artículo 50. No sucede sin embargo lo mismo con el último inciso del artículo 50.3 ni con el último inciso del artículo 52. No se entiende el último inciso del artículo 50.3, puesto que si no se incluyen en la Carta los límites a los derechos, entonces la Carta siempre proporcionará una mayor protección, en la medida en que formula los derechos de manera incondicionada por comparación al CEDH, que sí limita los derechos. En tal caso, no podrían entrar en juego las limitaciones del CEDH y Protocolos Adicionales que hayan sido suscritos por los Estados miembros o las contenidas en las Constituciones nacionales y se aplicarían los derechos de la Carta sin restricción o limitación alguna a su ejercicio. En contra, incluso, de lo que disponga la Constitución nacional (por ejemplo, en la libertad de asociación, de sindicación, en los trabajos obligatorios ... , arts. 5, 7, 10, 11 y 12). Ello refuerza la necesidad, ya expuesta al principio de estas observaciones, de especificar en cada caso, los límites al ejercicio del derecho reconocido en la Carta, en vez de formularlos como derechos incondicionados. Comentarios similares pueden hacerse en relación con el inciso final del artículo 52. En definitiva, deben suprimirse los dos incisos, puesto que de lo contrario, se neutralizaría el efecto de la cláusula horizontal, y la Carta carecería de límites, algo que es absolutamente inadmisibile para la representación española,

GEORGES BERTHU

Bruxelles, le 29 août 2000

A Monsieur MENDEZ DE VIGO
Président de la délégation du Parlement européen pour la Charte des droits fondamentaux

Objet : observations sur le projet de Charte "Convent 45"

Cher Président,

Le projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux "Convent 45" appelle de ma part les observations générales suivantes :

1. Ce projet dépasse de loin les compétences européennes existantes, et empiète sur les droits nationaux. Il ne pourrait donc être rendu contraignant que par un nouveau traité. Toutefois, en l'état présent du texte, il faut admettre que ce nouveau traité bouleverserait complètement la répartition des pouvoirs entre l'Union et les Etats membres, ce qui ne paraît guère envisageable.
2. Dans l'hypothèse plus réaliste d'une simple déclaration politique – hypothèse dans laquelle je me place - il ne semble pas que la forme du texte actuel soit adéquate. On n'imagine pas, par exemple, une déclaration politique qui ne ferait aucune référence à la légitimité principale des nations et au droit fondamental des citoyens à l'expression démocratique dans le cadre national.
3. Ces défauts sont encore plus visibles au niveau du préambule, qui paraît trop étroit et juridique. Le bon niveau, pour un préambule, est celui des valeurs. Je vous joins en annexe, à titre indicatif, une proposition de préambule tel que je l'imagine.
4. D'un point de vue juridique, la présentation du texte – d'abord des droits présentés de manière absolue, puis des limitations éventuelles rejetées de manière globale et allusive en dispositions finales – biaise la compréhension. La première impression, qui conditionne la suite, est celle de droits sans limites. Quand on en arrive enfin aux limites (articles 49 et suivants), on s'aperçoit qu'elles ne sont pas claires.

5. La Charte est beaucoup trop axée sur les droits individuels, et très peu sur les devoirs. Par exemple, on trouve un article 19 sur la protection en cas d'éloignement, d'expulsion ou d'extradition, mais rien sur les devoirs des étrangers dont l'inobservance peut justifier ces sanctions.
6. Enfin à de nombreuses reprises, le texte actuel mentionne des droits nouveaux, non-existants, ou qui ne sont pas en vigueur, contrairement au mandat de Cologne. Par exemple (entre autres), l'article 43-2 mentionne un droit de libre circulation des ressortissants de pays tiers qui est effectivement cité par le traité d'Amsterdam, mais est soumis, pour entrer en vigueur, à une série de conditions qui ne sont pas réalisées aujourd'hui. Il est donc prématuré d'en parler, a fortiori de l'inscrire dans une Charte de l'Union européenne.

Pour ces raisons, le texte actuel appelle de ma part les plus expresses réserves.

Vous trouverez ci-joint en annexe de nouvelles propositions d'amendements qui concrétisent ces observations générales.

Je vous prie de croire, cher Président, à l'expression de mes meilleurs sentiments.

PROPOSITION DE NOUVEAU PREAMBULE

Les Etats européens signataires,

Désireux de développer entre eux une Union fondée sur le respect mutuel des peuples, la démocratie et l'Etat de droit,

1. déclarent, conformément à leurs différentes Constitutions nationales, que leurs sociétés reposent sur la valeur fondamentale du respect de la personne, qui découle de son caractère sacré ; ils rejettent toute forme de mépris de l'être humain,
2. reconnaissent, en accord avec les traditions des peuples d'Europe, que cette valeur fondamentale implique :
 - le droit à la vie et à la dignité de tout être humain,
 - l'égalité devant la loi, laquelle définit et protège les droits fondamentaux,
 - la solidarité avec les plus faibles et la protection de la famille, cellule fondamentale de la société,
 - le droit de chaque personne de se gouverner elle-même ; de participer pleinement, en tant que citoyen, à la vie de ses communautés ; de faire un libre usage de ses droits souverains par la démocratie politique et l'économie de marché,
 - le principe de subsidiarité, qui accorde à chaque citoyen le droit d'exercer un contrôle effectif sur ses représentants ; de ne consentir de délégations de pouvoirs que proches, contrôlables et révocables ; de ne jamais accorder aux institutions que des compétences subordonnées,
 - le respect des affections et des solidarités ressenties par chacun, et donc du sentiment d'appartenance fondé sur une culture transmise, une histoire apprise, une langue pratiquée en commun,

3. se déclarent attachés aux spécificités des peuples d'Europe autant qu'à leurs valeurs communes,
4. veulent contribuer à concilier, à ce dernier titre, l'économie de marché et l'expression démocratique, l'initiative individuelle et le soutien mutuel face aux aléas de l'existence,
5. constatent que les citoyens attachent au cadre national une légitimité forte, qui en fait naturellement le niveau principal de l'association politique,
6. estiment que le respect de la diversité des nations et de leurs peuples favorisera la liberté, l'émulation et le pluralisme, sources de la richesse la plus ancienne et la plus constante de la civilisation européenne,
7. déclarent dans ces conditions que l'Union européenne est une Union de nations qui se respectent mutuellement, et respectent l'expression démocratique de chaque peuple,
8. confient à l'Union européenne la mission de favoriser la coopération des peuples d'Europe pour accroître leur prospérité, établir les bases d'un développement durable, protéger leurs valeurs, leurs droits, leurs langues, leurs modèles de société, leurs territoires et leurs frontières,
9. rappellent dans la présente Charte les libertés, responsabilités et droits principaux communs aux Etats membres, qui tirent leur force juridique soit des lois et Constitutions nationales que se sont données les peuples d'Europe, soit des traités européens ou internationaux qu'ils ont régulièrement ratifiés.

Ces droits, responsabilités et libertés ainsi rappelés ne créent aucune compétence ni aucune tâche nouvelle pour la Communauté ou pour l'Union ; ils ne modifient pas la répartition inscrite dans les traités ; ils servent à définir l'esprit du contrôle qu'exerceront les Etats membres sur les institutions européennes.

Justificatif :

Le texte du préambule proposé par le Présidium manque d'ampleur, pour deux raisons :

- il reste trop bref et juridique, alors qu'un document de ce genre devrait élever le débat au niveau des valeurs,
- il n'évoque pas clairement l'expression démocratique dans le cadre national, qui est pourtant le premier fondement de l'Union.

C'est pourquoi nous proposons un essai de rédaction alternative. Si le Présidium maintenait son texte actuel, ou un texte de ce genre, il conviendrait alors que le Conseil européen, dans son rôle politique éminent, réécrive le préambule pour lui donner la dimension nécessaire.

Dans le texte proposé par le Présidium, l'adverbe "notamment" donne l'impression d'un article incomplet. Il est préférable de le supprimer, et d'ajouter un cinquième tiret qui couvre de manière générale toutes les autres possibilités.

Auteur : M. Georges BERTHU, MPE

Texte proposé :

Article 9 – Droit de se marier et de fonder une famille

Le droit de se marier et de fonder une famille est garanti selon les lois nationales qui en régissent l'exercice.

Justificatif :

Le texte proposé par le Présidium a le double inconvénient de sortir du droit communautaire et de créer un nouveau droit (le "droit de fonder une famille", distinct du "droit de se marier").

En outre, le contenu exact de ce nouveau droit est mystérieux, et il rend par contrecoup mystérieux le contenu du droit de se marier. Sachant qu'il est toujours possible de créer une famille en fait, si l'on veut ensuite la créer en droit, cela s'appelle se marier.

Si ce n'était pas le cas, il faudrait supposer que le "droit de se marier" apporte quelque chose de plus que "le droit de fonder une famille". Mais quoi ?

En conclusion, on ne peut pas créer de nouveaux droits sans même connaître leur contenu.

Toute personne a droit à la liberté de réunion pacifique et à la liberté d'association, notamment dans les domaines politique, syndical, civique et religieux ».

(Suite inchangée).

Justificatif :

L'addition du mot "religieux" traduit la conséquence pratique de la liberté de religion, déjà reconnue sous la forme de liberté de pensée par l'article 10.

Amendement à l'article 13 – Liberté de la recherche

Auteur : M. Georges BERTHU, MPE

Texte proposé :

Article 13 – Liberté de la recherche

Dans le respect de la dignité de l'homme, la recherche scientifique est libre.

Justificatif :

Le texte proposé par le Présidium est trop lapidaire. On n'imagine pas, par exemple, une recherche scientifique qui utiliserait contre leur gré des cobayes humains.

Paragraphe 1

Auteur : M. Georges BERTHU, MPE

Texte proposé :

Article 15 – Liberté professionnelle

1. Toute personne a le droit d'exercer une profession librement choisie, dans le cadre des dispositions prévoyant des compétences particulières pour certaines professions.
2. (...)

Justificatif :

Le membre de phrase "afin de gagner sa vie" est trivial, et pas vraiment lié à la liberté professionnelle. Il est possible de le supprimer. Si l'on voulait absolument maintenir une idée de cet ordre, on pourrait écrire : "Afin de subvenir à ses besoins et à ceux de sa famille..."

La deuxième partie de l'amendement est plus importante. Elle vise à rappeler que le choix d'une profession est limité par les réglementations d'ordre public.

Amendement à l'article 19 – Protection en cas d'éloignement, d'expulsion et d'extradition - Paragraphe 1

Auteur : M. Georges BERTHU, MPE

Texte proposé :

Supprimer le paragraphe 1 («les expulsions collectives d'étrangers sont interdites »).

Justificatif :

La présentation de l'article 21 paragraphe 1 proposée ici est trompeuse. En effet, elle paraît inspirée de l'article 4 du protocole n° 4 à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, mais en réalité cet article doit être lu dans son contexte. Il s'insère en effet dans un cadre juridique qui admet les dérogations, notamment "en cas de guerre ou en cas d'autre danger public menaçant la vie de la nation" (article 15 - CEDH).

Dans ces conditions, on ne peut pas laisser subsister une rédaction qui peut faire croire à un lecteur non spécialiste que les expulsions collectives d'étrangers sont interdites à jamais et dans tous les cas. Ou bien cette phrase est supprimée, ou bien on lui ajoute la mention « sauf en cas de guerre ou d'autre danger public, conformément aux règles internationales en vigueur ».

- 1. Toutes les personnes, hommes et femmes, sont égales en droit.
- 2. Des droits et devoirs spécifiques sont attachés à la qualité de citoyen, d'un Etat membre ou de l'Union européenne.

Justificatif :

Cet article 20 pourrait donner lieu à des interprétations erronées si n'étaient pas mentionnés de manière très claire l'existence de droits et devoirs spécifiques attachés à la qualité de citoyen national ou européen.

Amendement à l'article 21 – Egalité et non-discrimination

Auteur : M. Georges BERTHU, MPE

Texte proposé :

Article 21 – Egalité et non discrimination

L'Union combat tout traitement inégal entre les personnes, dans le cadre des conditions et compétences fixées par les traités, ainsi que dans le respect des contraintes de l'utilité publique.

Justificatif :

L'article 21, dans la rédaction proposée, énumère des discriminations figurant déjà dans les traités, mais aussi des motifs nouveaux ne figurant nulle part, et pouvant soulever de sérieux débats (minorités nationales, par exemple).

De plus, cet article 21 apparaît beaucoup plus contraignant que le droit existant : il "interdit" absolument, alors que l'article 13 TCE prévoit seulement que "le Conseil, statuant à l'unanimité... peut prendre les mesures nécessaires en vue de combattre..."

Dans ces conditions, il paraît opportun de remplacer les paragraphes 1 et 2 du texte du Présidium, par une rédaction plus générale.

Addition d'un article 25 – A nouveau

Auteur : M. Georges BERTHU, MPE

Texte proposé :

Avant l'article 25, insérer un article 25-A ainsi rédigé :

Article 25 – A – Libre choix du modèle social

Les droits et principes sociaux rappelés au présent chapitre, dans la mesure où ils ne sont pas déjà fixés par le droit communautaire en vigueur, ont un caractère indicatif.

Ils respectent le droit de chaque pays membre de choisir son modèle social.

Justificatif :

Il est indispensable de rappeler qu'en application du principe de subsidiarité, chaque pays membre est libre de choisir son modèle social.

En outre, plusieurs articles de ce chapitre se situant clairement hors du droit communautaire existant, il convient aussi de rappeler qu'en l'absence de nouveau traité, ils ne peuvent avoir qu'un caractère indicatif.

2. Tout travailleur a droit à une limitation de la durée maximale du travail, à une période annuelle de congés payés, ainsi qu'à des périodes de repos journaliers et hebdomadaires, notamment le dimanche dans les pays qui ont cette tradition.

Amendement à l'article 34 – Accès aux services d'intérêt économique général

Auteur : M. Georges BERTHU, MPE

Texte proposé :

Article 34 – Accès aux services d'intérêt général

L'Union respecte le droit d'accès des citoyens aux services d'intérêt général, y compris les services d'intérêt économique général, tels qu'ils sont définis par les législations et pratiques nationales en conformité avec le droit communautaire.

Justificatif :

Cette proposition contient deux amendements de natures distinctes :

1. Il convient de mentionner, non seulement les services d'intérêt économique général, mais aussi l'ensemble des services d'intérêt général, y compris non économiques. Il serait en effet surprenant que la Charte n'y fasse aucune allusion.
2. La rédaction proposée par le Présidium pourrait signifier que les pouvoirs publics nationaux définissent les services d'intérêt économique général sur délégation donnée par le traité. Bien entendu, ce n'est pas exact : les institutions européennes bénéficient de délégations en matière de concurrence, mais le pouvoir de définir les services d'intérêt général reste aux Etats membres.

Proposition d'ajout

Insérer, entre les chapitres IV et V, un chapitre IV bis – Démocratie, comprenant des articles allant de 36-1 à 36-6.

Auteur : M. Georges BERTHU, MPE

Justificatif :

Ce chapitre a pour but d'explicitier les conséquences du droit à l'expression démocratique des citoyens mentionné par le préambule. C'est évidemment un droit fondamental qui doit occuper une place importante dans la Charte. De plus, il est particulièrement judicieux de l'évoquer ici, car il sert à définir la structure de l'Europe que nous souhaitons.

Au chapitre IV bis (nouveau) – Démocratie :

Auteur : M. Georges BERTHU, MPE

Texte proposé :

Article 36-1 – Expression démocratique

Les citoyens s'expriment démocratiquement en pleine souveraineté, dans le cadre national. Ils décident notamment dans ce cadre des attributions de l'Union européenne qu'ils inscrivent dans les traités.

Justificatif :

Le respect de l'expression démocratique dans le cadre national va tellement de soi que les traités ne l'ont pas explicité jusqu'ici. Pourtant, nous sommes parvenus à une étape du développement de l'Union où le besoin d'une clarification se fait sentir.

Ce principe est tellement important que son niveau d'inscription adéquat est celui de la charte (sans préjudice du préambule, qui doit notamment rappeler de son côté que toute autorité publique émane du peuple).

- 1. Tout citoyen a droit au respect de son identité nationale.
- 2. Dans l'exercice de ses compétences, à l'intérieur comme à l'extérieur, l'Union défend les identités nationales de ses Etats membres.

Justificatif :

Le paragraphe 1 reprend sous une forme différente le principe déjà inscrit à l'article 6-3 TUE. Ce principe paraît si important qu'il ne doit pas être laissé noyé dans l'ensemble du traité, mais être élevé au niveau de la charte des droits fondamentaux.

Le paragraphe 2 rappelle que les pays membres ont créé une Union pour mieux défendre en commun leurs identités respectives, et non pas pour les abolir.

Texte proposé :

Article 36-3 – Droit de retrait

Les citoyens de chaque pays décident librement de l'adhésion de leur Etat à l'Union européenne. De même, ils peuvent choisir démocratiquement de s'en retirer.

Au chapitre IV bis (nouveau) – Démocratie :
Introduction d'un article 36-4 – Droit de sauvegarde

Auteur : M. Georges BERTHU, MPE

Texte proposé :

Article 36-4 – Droit de sauvegarde

Les citoyens des pays membres possèdent le droit fondamental de prendre démocratiquement des mesures de sauvegarde nationales lorsque des circonstances impérieuses l'exigent. Ces mesures restent en tout état de cause dans les limites de ce que le droit international reconnaît permis lorsque la survie de la nation est menacée.

Justificatif :

Ici encore, le droit de sauvegarde national devrait aller de soi. Pourtant, nous avons constaté qu'il s'est trouvé contesté par les institutions de l'Union dans diverses affaires récentes, liées notamment à la protection de la santé publique. Il importe de rappeler ici, au niveau solennel de la charte, que, quelles que soient les modalités du droit communautaire dans tel ou tel domaine précis, nul ne peut enlever à un peuple le droit de prendre les mesures qu'il estime indispensables à sa survie

Texte proposé :

Article 36-5 – Droit d'organisation des Etats

Les citoyens des pays membres ont le droit de décider librement de l'organisation de leur Etat, et notamment des limites et du fonctionnement de leurs services publics.

Justificatif :

Depuis quelques années, les pays membres et les institutions de l'Union prennent conscience de certains effets pervers du principe de concurrence lorsqu'il est appliqué sans discernement à des services publics. Pour lever toute ambiguïté, il serait utile de saisir l'occasion de la charte pour rappeler que les citoyens de chaque pays membre ont le droit de choisir l'organisation de leurs services publics.

Les citoyens des pays membres ont le droit de décider démocratiquement de ne pas s'associer à une coopération particulière au niveau européen, ou de choisir pour eux des règles plus protectrices que celles d'une coopération à laquelle ils participent.

Justificatif :

Par le biais de la reconnaissance explicite de la liberté de choix démocratique des citoyens des pays membres, la charte pourrait montrer la possibilité d'une conception plus flexible des institutions européennes.

Paragraphe 1

Auteur : M. Georges BERTHU, MPE

Texte proposé :

Article 43 – Liberté de circulation et de séjour

Tout citoyen de l'Union a le droit de circuler et de séjourner librement sur le territoire des Etats membres, sous réserve des contrôles destinés à préserver, conformément à l'article 6 de la charte, la liberté et la sûreté des personnes.

Justificatif :

Des affaires récentes (Wijsenbeek) ont montré que la liberté de circulation est parfois interprétée, à tort, comme signifiant automatiquement l'abolition totale des contrôles de toutes natures. Il importe de rappeler, dans l'esprit même de l'article 6 de la charte, que des contrôles peuvent être exercés.

Paragraphe 2

Auteur : M. Georges BERTHU, MPE

Texte proposé :

Supprimer le paragraphe 2 de l'article 43 – Liberté de circulation et de séjour.

Justificatif :

Ce paragraphe traite de la liberté de circulation qui "peut être accordée" (sous entendu "dans le futur") aux ressortissants de pays tiers. Or il convient que la Charte ne traite pas de droits futurs et encore potentiels, mais seulement des droits existants. En effet, si l'article 62 TCE envisage cette liberté de circulation dans un délai de cinq ans après l'entrée en vigueur du traité d'Amsterdam (1999), il y met tout une série de conditions qui ne sont pas réunies pour le moment. Il est donc prématuré d'évoquer cet aspect au niveau de la Charte.

Amendement à l'article 50 – Portée des droits garantis
Paragraphe 3

Auteur : M. Georges BERTHU, MPE

Texte proposé :

3. Dans la mesure où la présente Charte contient des droits correspondant à des droits garantis par la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, leur sens et leur portée sont similaires à ceux que leur confère ladite convention (Reste supprimé).

Justificatif :

La suppression du membre de phrase "à moins que la présente Charte n'assure une protection plus élevée ou plus étendue" est justifiée pour les deux raisons suivantes :

- la Charte ne doit pas dépasser les limites du droit existant ;
- ce membre de phrase rend la lecture de la Charte incompréhensible. Par exemple, devant l'article 6 « Toute personne a droit à la liberté et à la sûreté », comment le lecteur peut-il savoir si les limitations de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme s'appliquent, ou bien s'il s'agit d'un article qui assure volontairement une « protection plus étendue » ?

Persons belonging to [national] minorities have the right to the protection and promotion of their ethnic, cultural, linguistic and religious identity inter alia through effective participation in cultural, religious, social, economic and public life within the Union.

Comment:

As set out in the UN Declaration on the Rights of Persons belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities (1992), the OSCE Copenhagen Document (1990), the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities (1995) and the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages and other relevant standards.

Lande, som i hovedsagen lader arbejdsmarkedet regulere gennem frivillige aftaler på arbejdsmarkedet, kan lade sociale og arbejdsmarkedsmæssige rettigheder implementere gennem overenskomster, uden at være forpligtet til at beskytte dem, der ikke er omfattet af overenskomsterne.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int*LORD BOWNESS*Brussels, 28 July 2000
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4422/00*CONVENT 45*PRESIDENCY NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Complete text of the Charter proposed by the Praesidium

The Members of the Convention will find below the complete text of the Charter proposed by the Praesidium in the light of discussions in the Convention. Members may forward their general comments on this draft, by 1 September 2000, to the following address:

Jean-Paul.Jacque@consilium.eu.int,

indicating:

- "for the attention of Mr Jansson" (for the representatives of the national Parliaments)
- "for the attention of Mr Mendez de Vigo" (for the members of the European Parliament delegation)
- "for the attention of Mr Braibant" (for the personal representatives).

The Secretariat will forward these comments to the relevant addressee.

GENERAL

The Praesidium draft is welcome.

I would hope to see further changes to ensure

1) No uncertainty arises over rights drawn from ECHR and the Treaties. The horizontals must make clear that the existing Convention Treaties and Court decisions will prevail.

2) In the field of economic and social rights either in each article or in an horizontal it must be clear these are governed by the Treaties or National law.

3) The reasons for other changes are noted below.

4) Other changes are drafting changes to ensure clarity.

5) Article 13 is manageable as drawn.

PREAMBLE

1. ~~The people of Europe have established~~ An ever close union is being established between ~~them~~ and the peoples of Europe who are resolved to share a peaceful future based on common values.

Note: Drafting – it is an ongoing process.

2. The Union is founded on the ~~indivisible, universal~~ principles of ~~the dignity of men and women, freedom, equality and solidarity~~, it is based on the principle of democracy liberty democracy respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms and the rule of law.

Note: Follow TEV.

3. The Union contributes to the maintenance and development of these principals ~~common values~~ while respecting the diversity of the cultures and traditions of the peoples of Europe as well as the national identities of the Member States and the organisation of their public authorities at national, regional and local levels; it ~~ensures balanced and sustainable~~ development through the free movement of persons, goods, capital and services, and freedom of establishment.
4. ~~In adopting this Charter~~ In the light of changes in Society, social progress and technological developments the Union intends to enhance the protection of fundamental rights in the light of ~~changes in society, social progress and scientific and technological developments by making~~ and to make those rights more visible, the enjoyment of which entails responsibilities and duties with regard to other persons, to the human community and to future generations.
5. This Charter therefore reaffirms, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Community and the Union and the principle of subsidiarity, the rights as they result, ~~in particular~~, from the constitutional traditions ~~common to~~ of the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the Social Charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights.

6. ~~Enjoyment of these rights entails responsibilities and duties with regard to other persons, to the human community and to future generations.~~

7. ~~Each person is therefore guaranteed the rights and freedoms set out hereafter.~~

CHAPTER I. DIGNITY

Article 1. Dignity of the person

The dignity of the person man or woman must be respected and protected.

Article 2. Right to life

1. ~~Everyone has~~ The right to life shall be protected by law.
2. ~~No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed.~~

Article 3. Right to the integrity of the person

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and mental integrity and subject to national laws and practice.
2. ~~In the fields of medicine and biology,~~ the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - free and informed consent of the person concerned,
 - prohibition of eugenic practices * ~~in particular those concerned with the selection of persons,~~
 - prohibition on making the human body and its parts a source of financial gain,
 - prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Note: As drafted is this too wide?

Article 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment and punishment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 5. Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.
3. Trafficking in human beings is prohibited.

CHAPTER II. FREEDOMS

Article 6. Right to liberty and security

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person.

Article 7. Respect for private and family life

Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and the confidentiality of his communications.

Article 8. Protection of personal data

Everyone has the right to the protection of personal data concerning him. ~~Such data must be processed fairly for specified purposes on the basis of the consent of the person concerned or some other legitimate basis laid down by law. Everyone has the right of access to data which has been collected concerning him, and the right to have it rectified. Compliance with these rules shall be subject to control by an independent authority~~

Note: Too detailed and must have reference in national laws.

Article 9. Right to marry and right to found a family

The right to marry and the right to found a family shall be guaranteed in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of these rights.

Article 10. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. This right includes freedom to change religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or in private, to manifest religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.

Article 11. Freedom of expression and information

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.

~~3. Freedom of the media and freedom of information shall be guaranteed with due respect for pluralism and transparency.~~

Note: The principle is agreed – but it is covered by first paragraph European or national legislation may be needed but it is not for the charter.

Article 12. Freedom of assembly and of association

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association, in particular in political, trade union and civic matters.

~~Political parties at European level contribute to expressing the political will of the citizens of the Union.~~

Note: Agreed but it is not for the Charter.

Article 13. Freedom of research

~~Scientific research shall be free of constraint.~~

Note: This absolute right conflicts with Article 3 and would authorize many undesirable practices.

Article 14. Right to education

1. Everyone has the right to education and to have access to vocational and continuing training. This right includes the right to receive free compulsory education.

2. The freedom to found educational establishments with due respect for democratic principles and the right of parents to ensure the education and teaching of their children in conformity with their religious, philosophical and ~~pedagogical convictions~~ shall be guaranteed, in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of such freedom and right.

Note: Does not add to English texts.

Article 15. Freedom to choose an occupation

1. ~~To earn a living~~, Everyone has the right to choose ~~engage in a freely chosen~~ the occupation they wish to follow subject to and in accordance with Community and national laws.
2. Every citizen of the Union has the freedom to seek employment, to work, to exercise the right of establishment and to provide ~~or receive~~ services in any Member State.
3. Nationals of third countries who are authorised to ~~reside~~ in the territories of the Member States are entitled to legal protection of any employment law applicable to ~~working~~ ~~conditions equivalent to those of citizens of the Union.~~

Article 16. Freedom to conduct a business

The freedom to conduct a business is recognised together with the freedom of persons goods and services in accordance with Community law.

Article 17. Right to property

1. Every person has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his lawfully acquired possessions including intellectual property and shall not ~~No one may be deprived of his possessions, or the use regulated~~ except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to fair compensation paid without unreasonable delay. ~~The use of property may be regulated insofar as is necessary for the general interest.~~

2. ~~Intellectual property shall be protected.~~

Note: Drafting.

Article 18. Right to asylum

The right to asylum shall be guaranteed with due respect for the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees and in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Article 19. Protection in the event of removal, expulsion or extradition

1. Collective expulsions are prohibited and
2. No one may be removed, expelled or extradited to a State where he could be subjected to ~~the~~ ~~death penalty~~, torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment.

Note: Would this create problems with other states with which member states have extradition treaties?

CHAPTER III. EQUALITY

Article 20. Equality before the law

Everyone, man or woman, is equal before the law.

Article 21. Equality and non-discrimination

1. Any discrimination based on ~~any ground such as~~ sex, race, colour, ethnic ~~or~~ social origin, genetic features, language, religion, ~~or~~ belief, ~~political or any other opinion~~, membership of a national minority, ~~property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation~~ shall be prohibited.
2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, and without prejudice to the special provisions of those Treaties, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

Note: As drafted is this too wide – some political parties which do not observe democratic principles may be banned.

Article 22. Equality between men and women

Equal opportunities and equal treatment for men and women as regards employment and work, including equal pay for equal work or for work of equal value, must be ensured but this ~~The principle of equal treatment shall not prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures providing for specific advantages in order to make it easier for the under-represented sex to pursue a vocational activity or to prevent or compensate for disadvantages in professional careers.~~ To redress under representation of one sex in any activity or profession whilst maintaining vocational and professional standards and qualifications.

Note: To prevent a lowering of vocational/professional standards.

Article 23. Protection of children

1. Children shall have the right to such protection and care as is necessary for their well-being. They may express their views freely and such views shall be taken into consideration on matters ~~which concern them~~ concerning their well being and in accordance with their age and maturity.
2. In all actions relating to children, ~~whether~~ taken by public authorities or private institutions, the welfare of the child's best interests must be the primary consideration.

Note: Drafting, and to ensure welfare is the primary consideration.

Article 24. Integration of persons with disabilities

The Union respects the right of persons with disabilities ~~have the right~~ to benefit from measures designed to ensure their independence, social and occupational integration and participation in the life of the community.

CHAPTER IV. SOLIDARITY SOCIAL COHESION

Article 25. Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

In accordance with Community and national laws workers and their representatives ~~must be~~ guaranteed information should be informed and consultation consulted in good time on matters ~~which concern them within~~ the undertaking, in accordance with Community law and national laws ~~and practices~~.

Note: The reference to Community and national laws in this Article and those which follow could be avoided if the point is covered in a suitable horizontal article.

Article 26. Right of collective bargaining and action

Employers and workers ~~may have the right~~ to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and, in cases of conflicts of interest, to take collective action to defend their interests, subject to and in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 27. Right of access to placement services

Everyone has the right of access to any free placement service which may exist.

Note: I would prefer to DELETE. This is not a fundamental right or principle.

Article 28. Protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

~~Every Workers has~~ have the right to protection against ~~unjustified~~ dismissal subject to national laws and practices.

Note; "Unfair" has a particular meaning in this regard.

Article 29. Fair and just working conditions

- ~~1. Every worker has the right to~~ Working conditions which respect the workers' ~~his or her~~ health, safety and dignity shall be promoted and shall include
- ~~2. Every worker has~~ the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave subject to national laws and practices.

Article 30. Protection of young people at work

The ~~employment of children is prohibited~~. The minimum age of admission to employment must not normally be lower than the minimum school-leaving age without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people and except for limited derogations.

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions appropriate to their age and be protected against economic exploitation and any work likely to harm their safety, health or physical, mental, moral or social development ~~or to interfere with their education~~.

Article 31. Reconciling family and professional life

The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection and the need to

~~Everyone shall have the right to reconcile their family and professional lives, which includes in particular the right to protection from dismissal because of pregnancy and the right to paid~~

~~maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.~~ shall be recognised subject to national laws and practices.

Article 32. Social security and social assistance

1. The Union recognises and respects the ~~entitlement~~ to social security benefits and social services providing protection in the event of maternity, illness, industrial accidents, dependency or old age and in the event of loss of employment, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.
2. Workers who are nationals of a Member State residing in another Member State, and members of their families, have the right to the same social security benefits, social advantages and access to health care as nationals of that State.
3. The Union recognises and respects the right to social assistance ~~and housing benefit in order to ensure a decent existence for persons lacking sufficient resources~~, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 33. Health care

~~Everyone has the right of~~ Access to medical care shall be respected ~~preventive health care and the right to benefit from medical treatment~~ under the conditions established by national laws and practices.

Article 34. Access to services of general economic interest

The Union respects the access to services of general economic interest as provided for in national laws and practices in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty establishing the European Community in order to promote the social and territorial cohesion of the Union.

Note: I would prefer to D E L E T E. It does not have any real meaning.

Article 35. Environmental protection

All Union policies shall promote the improvement and ~~ensure the~~ protection and preservation of a ~~good quality living environment and the improvement of the quality of the environment~~, taking into account the principle of sustainable development.

Article 36. Consumer Protection

Union policies shall promote ~~ensure~~ a high level of protection ~~as regards~~ for the health, safety and commercial interests of consumers.

CHAPTER V. CITIZENSHIP

Article 37. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

2. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage by free and secret ballot.

Article 38. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Article 39. Right to good administration

1. Every person has the right to have his affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union and institutions national or local implementing community policies.
2. This right includes:
 - the right of every person to be heard before any individual measure which would affect him adversely is taken in relation to him;
 - the right of every person to have access to his file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy;
 - the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.
3. Every person has the right to have the Community make good any damage caused by its institutions or by its servants in the performance of their duties, in accordance with the general principles common to the laws of the Member States.
4. Every person may write to the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of such institutions and have an answer in the same language.

Article 40. Right of access to documents

Any citizen of the Union, and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State, has a right of access to European Parliament, Council and Commission documents.

Article 41. Ombudsman

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration by Community institutions and bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Article 42. Right to petition

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Article 43. Freedom of movement and of residence

1. Every citizen of the Union and other persons to whom the right is granted by laws has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.
2. ~~Freedom of movement may be granted, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, to nationals of third countries legally resident in the territory of a Member State.~~

Article 44: Diplomatic and consular protection

Every citizen of the Union shall, in the territory of a third country in which the Member State of which he is a national is not represented, be entitled to protection by the diplomatic or consular authorities of any Member State, on the same conditions as the nationals of that Member State.

CHAPTER VI. JUSTICE

Article 45. Right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial

1. Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.
2. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal previously established by law. Everyone shall have the possibility of being advised, defended and represented.
- ~~3. Legal aid shall be made available to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is necessary to ensure effective access to justice.~~

Note: Free legal aid is an impossible commitment.

Article 46. Presumption of innocence and right of defence

1. Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
2. Respect for the right of defence of anyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed.

Article 47. Principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties

1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the criminal offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to international law.

3. The severity of penalties shall be proportional to the gravity of the criminal offence.

Article 48. Right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same criminal offence

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law.

CHAPTER VII. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 49. Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. They shall therefore respect the rights, observe the principles and promote the application thereof in accordance with their respective powers.
2. This Charter does not establish any new power or task for the Community or the Union, or modify powers and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Article 50. Scope of guaranteed rights

1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority, in accordance with the law. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest being pursued by the Union, other legitimate interests in a democratic society or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.
2. Rights recognised by this Charter which are based on the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.
4. Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be similar to those the same as those conferred on them by the said Convention unless this Charter affords greater or more extensive protection.

Note: To avoid uncertainty and conflict.

Article 51. Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or adversely affecting human rights and fundamental freedoms as recognised, in their respective fields of application, by international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and by the Member States' constitutions.

Article 52. Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for herein.

BRAIBANT

Le projet de « charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne », dans la version transmise le 1^{er} août, peut être considéré comme globalement satisfaisant. Rédigé de façon claire et synthétique, ce document couvre non seulement les droits civils et politiques, mais également des droits économiques et sociaux ainsi que des droits dits « nouveaux ». Il répond donc pour l'essentiel au mandat qui avait été arrêté par le Conseil européen de Cologne.

Dans l'esprit des membres de son « praesidium », le travail de substance de la Convention sur le contenu de la Charte est désormais achevé et seules des améliorations rédactionnelles pourraient le cas échéant être apportées à cet avant-projet. Au demeurant et compte tenu des discussions difficiles auxquelles son élaboration a donné lieu, le risque existe que des demandes d'amendements ou de compléments substantiels n'aboutissent à rouvrir les débats et compromettre l'équilibre auquel sont parvenus les négociateurs.

Dans ces conditions, je ne peux que m'opposer à tout recul par rapport au texte actuel, en y incluant les précisions apportées par le Présidium dans sa réunion du 25 août sur les libertés syndicales et les actions collectives « à tous les niveaux ».

Dans l'hypothèse où d'autres Etats membres émettraient des critiques ou proposeraient des modifications de substance, j'insiste pour ma part sur les éléments suivants qui ne sont pas satisfaisants :

- certains droits sociaux essentiels tels que le droit au travail, le droit de grève, le droit à des moyens d'existence (revenu minimum notamment), le droit au logement ne sont pas explicitement mentionnés en tant que tels dans l'avant projet ;

- la formulation de l'article reconnaissant la liberté de circulation aux ressortissants des pays tiers (art. 43.2 de l'avant projet) devrait être revue : en l'état, elle peut, en effet, être interprétée comme allant au delà des dispositions pertinentes du Traité d'Amsterdam ;

- la rédaction actuelle de la liberté de la recherche scientifique (posée à l'article 13) devrait être assortie du rappel selon lequel celle-ci doit s'exercer dans le respect de la protection de l'être humain ;

- l'absence d'un droit à l'accès et à la participation à la vie culturelle est regrettable.

BRAUNEDER

(Fettdruck = Vorschlag Präsidium)

PRÄAMBEL

1. (entfällt)

Da hier vieles fraglich ist, sollte dieser Punkt wegfallen, dessen Formulierung überdies so klingt, als sei die Entwicklung der Union bereits abgeschlossen („haben..geschaffen“, „teilen nurmehr dasselbe Schicksal“).

2. Die Völker der Union verbinden die unteilbaren und universellen Grundsätze der Würde der Menschen, ihrer Freiheit, ihrer Gleichheit und ihrer Solidarität sowie die Grundsätze der Demokratie und der Rechtsstaatlichkeit.

In der vorgeschlagenen Form „diese Union gründet sich...“ klingt die Bestimmung zu sehr auf die Organisation bezogen und nicht auf die Grundrechtsträger, die Individuen. Die hier vorgeschlagene Fassung will den Träger der Grundrechte klar gegenüber der Organisation herausstellen.

3. Die Union garantiert diese Grundsätze durch Grundrechte und trägt damit zur Entwicklung dieser gemeinsamen Werte bei. So wie die nationale Identität der Mitgliedstaaten achtet die Union auch die persönliche Identität und die Würde der Menschen.

Die im Vorschlag enthaltene Wortfolge „achtet dabei die Vielfalt der Kulturen und Traditionen der Völker Europas“ erscheint unüblich, da es gerade im Grundrechtsbereich eine nahezu identische Tradition gibt, ohne kulturelle oder traditionelle Varianten, und überdies dieser Passus als eine Einschränkung hinsichtlich der „gemeinsamen Werte“ erscheint. Das Weglassen bzw. die Modifikation der Wortfolge „die nationale Identität der Mitgliedstaaten sowie deren verfassungsmäßigen Aufbau auf nationaler, regionaler und lokaler Ebene“ versteht sich aus der schon zu Punkt 2. angestellten Erwägung, sie klingt in diesem Sinne zu „etatistisch“ und erscheint in einem Grundrechtskatalog fehl am Platz, da sie zum Organisationsrecht gehört. Die vorgeschlagene Wortfolge „garantiert diese Grundsätze durch Grundrechte“ versteht sich daraus, daß zwischen den „Grundsätzen“ in Punkt 2. und den Grundrechten eine Brücke zu schlagen ist. Die hier vorgeschlagene Fassung stellt der „nationalen Identität“ der Staaten die „persönliche Identität“ der Menschen zur Seite, auch, um den ansonsten „etatistischen“ Eindruck zu entschärfen.

4. (entfällt)

Daß durch die Charta die Grundrechte verankert und sichtbar werden, ist für jeden Leser „sichtbar“ und kann damit als lapidare Feststellung entfallen. Überdies ist die Wortfolge „müssen...verankert werden“ verfehlt, da bei Inkrafttreten der Charta die Grundrechte nicht erst in der Zukunft „verankert werden“, sondern bereits „verankert sind“.

5. Diese Charta bestätigt jene Grundwerte und jene Rechte, die sich vor allem aus der gemeinsamen Grundrechtsauffassung der Mitgliedstaaten und aus der Europäischen Menschenrechtskonvention unter Berücksichtigung des bisherigen Standes der Entwicklung ergeben.

Betont werden soll die hier primär relevante Grundrechts tradition der Mitgliedstaaten bzw. der europäische Grundrechtsstandard, wie er sich zur Zeit der Abfassung der Charta darstellt. Statt „Verfassungsgrundsätze“ ist daher das Wort „Grundrechtsauffassung“ gewählt, da unter „Verfassungsgrundsätzen“ in einigen Staaten primär das demokratische Prinzip, eventuell das republikanische Prinzip, das Prinzip der Gewaltentrennung etc., nämlich überwiegend Organisationsrecht, verstanden werden; aus diesem Grund ist auch der Hinweis auf die Verträge über die Europäische Union und ihre Gemeinschaften entfallen. Der Hinweis auf die Rechtsprechung erübrigt sich dadurch, als einerseits die Europäische Menschenrechtskonvention nicht anders als im Sinne der Rechtsprechung zu verstehen ist, von ihr nicht losgelöst gesehen werden kann, andererseits diese sich als Teil der umfassenden „Entwicklung“ darstellt.

6. (entfällt)

Hiezu gilt das eben Gesagte: Die einzelnen Arten der Entwicklung sind im Wort „Entwicklung“ in Punkt 5. miteingedr.

7. Die durch die Charta gewährleisteten Rechte begründen durch ihre Respektierung Verantwortlichkeiten und Pflichten gegenüber den Mitmenschen.

Die bisherige Fassung klingt zu sehr nach einem do ut des. Ihr gegenüber sollte herausgestrichen werden, daß durch das gegenseitige Respektieren der Rechte Verantwortlichkeiten und Pflichten entstehen, wobei die Wortfolge „gegenüber den Mitmenschen“ sowohl die Einzelperson als auch deren Summe deckt.

8. (entfällt)

79

Das Entfallen des ersten Satzes versteht sich daraus, daß eine derart technische Bestimmung in einer Präambel fehl am Platz ist und außerdem einer begründet entgegengesetzten Auslegung und Handhabung auch keinen Riegel vorzuschreiben vermag. Der Entfall des zweiten Satzes begründet die Ansicht, daß er zu sehr als Einschränkung verstanden werden könnte, ebenfalls in einer Präambel fehl am Platz ist und außerdem durch die grundsätzlichen Bestimmungen (horizontalen Bestimmungen) abgedeckt erscheint.

Insgesamt: Durch den obigen Textvorschlag bleibt der Geist der vom Präsidium vorgeschlagenen Präambel vollaufgezwahrt, jedoch unter Fortlassung „statistischer“, überflüssiger und anderswo ohnedies geregelter technischer Einzelheiten.

COMMENTS AND SUGGESTIONS FOR AMENDMENTS ON CONVENT 45

Submitted by: Mrs. CEDERSCHIÖLD, MEP

General remarks on Convent 45

The Charter, as it is formulated in Convent 45, is in many ways better than earlier drafts. However, I submit some general remarks and some suggestions for amendments.

Pro primo, the Charter should be restructured in the following way:

1. Dignity
2. Freedoms
3. Justice
4. Citizenship
5. Equality
6. Principles of solidarity
7. General provisions

Fundamental rights like everybody's dignity, integrity and equal value are entwined with the rights to be respected before court and to be able to participate in the formation of the society, i.e. the justice and citizenship chapters. The rights belong together and it is therefore more logical to group them together. The chapters of equality and the principles of solidarity focus on specific groups, such as women, employees or disabled, whereas the first four chapters in the list above are common to everyone; they are fundamental and universal.

Pro secundo, as regards the principles of solidarity: The means to achieve our political goals (e.g., to provide sufficient resources for a decent existence for everyone) should not be blocked through structures based on experiences only from the industrial society. The door for new alternatives must be kept open – it is the achievement of the goal that is important! We can not know what Europe will look like in 100, or even in 50, years. The Charter will soon be outdated if we let it block new - and better! - solutions to these problems. If the Charter is seen as outdated, all rights in it will risk to be seen as relative and out-of-date. Secondary legislation is therefore the more suitable level to deal with, and promote, this sort of protection. Every regulation cannot be lifted to constitutional level. (The Convention works under the condition that the Charter may become binding.)

Pro tertio, the question of "he" must be solved. We cannot have a Charter that sometimes explicitly guarantees "his or her" rights but sometimes only "his" rights. It may seem a trivial question when drawing up an entire new Charter of Fundamental Rights. However, that is precisely why we cannot follow old drafts of Charters and let "him" include also "her". With this Charter, we make a statement of the fundamental principles from which we will create the new Europe. To only discuss "his" rights does not follow the principles of equality, which we so boldly state in the three Articles 20-22. For countries like Sweden, it would imply a tremendous step backwards. It is easy to alter this mistake at least in the Swedish version, and in the English.

Finally, the Member States and the institutions and bodies of the European Union should be obliged to inform the citizens about the Charter.

Suggestions for amendments on Convent 45

PREAMBLE (amendment supported by Thierry Cornillet)

2. The Union is founded on the indivisible, universal principles of the dignity of men and women, freedom, equality and solidarity; it is based on the principle of democracy and the rule of law and has a base in humanistic ethics.

5. This Charter reaffirms, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Community and the Union and the principle of subsidiarity, the rights as they result, in particular, from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, drawing upon the Social Charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights.

7. Each person is therefore, by the institutions and bodies of the European Union and of the Member States, implementing Union law, guaranteed the rights and freedoms set out hereafter.

CHAPTER I. DIGNITY

Article 1. Dignity of the person

The dignity of the person, male or female, must be respected and protected.

CHAPTER II. FREEDOMS

Article 8. Protection of personal data

It must be stated clearly that "everyone" and "him" include legal persons. This could be done in the part B of the Charter. In that part it must also be clearly stated that information, which represents an asset (of economic value), but are not intellectual rights, are protected under this Article.

Article 12. Freedom of assembly and of association

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association/non-association, in particular in political, trade union and civic matters.

Political parties at European level contribute to expressing the political will of the citizens of the Union.

In Sweden and Denmark, people who do not belong to a trade union may be harassed and sometimes are not allowed to seek employment at all places if they do not belong to a trade union. If they wish to leave the trade union, this may constitute a legal ground to fire them. This is deeply discriminatory. In the same way as it is a fundamental right to not have any religion or faith, it is a fundamental right not to be forced to join or stay with an organisation.

Article 14. Right to education

2. The freedom to found educational establishments with due respect for principles of democracy and equality and the right of parents to ensure the education and teaching of their children in conformity with their religious, philosophical and pedagogical convictions shall be guaranteed, in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of such freedom and right.

The freedom to found educational establishments can only be guaranteed if these establishments adhere to fundamental democratic principles such as equality. The demand for equality must be expressly stated in the Charter. Young women, not the least from third countries, must be given the same education and the same opportunities as young men to ensure future democracy!

Article 17. Right to property

(amendment supported by Andrew Duff, Ingo Friedrich, Thierry Cornillet and Marie-Thérèse Hermange)

1. Every person has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions except in specified public interest, in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to compensation for the loss in due time.

2. Intellectual property shall be protected.

The last sentence of part 1 should be moved as indicated above to ensure that there will not be problems of interpretation.

CHAPTER III. EQUALITY

Article 21. Equality and non-discrimination

Any discrimination based on any ground, such as nationality, sex, race, colour, ethnic or social origin, genetic features, language, religion or belief, political or any other opinion, membership of a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.

2. (delete)

CHAPTER IV. PRINCIPLES OF SOLIDARITY

Article 26. Right of collective bargaining and action

Delete

Article 137.6 in the EC Treaty explicitly prohibits the interference of EU in national legislation on these matters. This Article cannot, therefore, remain in the Charter.

Article 27. Right of access to placement services

Delete

As stated under "General Remarks" above, this can not be guaranteed as a fundamental right which can and will last for hundreds of years. We can find better ways of solving these matters in the future.

Article 28. Protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

Every worker has the right to protection against legally unjustified dismissal.

In this Article, we would like to change the English word "unjustified" to the English equivalence of the Swedish "saklig grund" or the German "sachliche gesetzliche Grund". The nearest equivalent is probably "legally justified".

Article 34. Access to services of general economic interest

Delete

This Article is incomprehensible. Which right is guaranteed, exactly? The Charter should be fairly easy to understand for European citizens. If the Charter contains an incomprehensible text like this one, it is a disgrace, which lowers the quality of the whole document. The Charter shall be "clean", concentrated, clear, solemn and well phrased. This article is most far from that and has no "fundamental character". One could as well turn it around and say that everything that could be run privately should.

Article 35. Environmental protection

[Delete] Union policies shall promote the protection and preservation of [delete] good [delete] environment [delete], respecting sustainable development.

The Articles 35 and 36 should have a similar wording, therefore should “All” be deleted. The language should be made as simple and clear as possible. The Union will not be able to “ensure” environmental protection since the Union can not direct the environment. But it should certainly promote a sustainable development of the environment! If only the living environment is protected and scarcely populated areas are ignored, it will soon create a worse living environment.

Article 36. Consumer Protection

Union policies shall promote a high level of protection as regards the health, safety and interests of consumers.

The Union will not be able to “ensure” consumer protection since it cannot control every company and its products - or the consumers. But all Union policies should promote the protection of consumers. To guarantee and ensure things that the Union can not fulfil is to render the Charter useless in the eyes of the European citizens.

CHAPTER VI. JUSTICE

Article 47. Principles of legality and proportionality of [delete one word] offences and penalties

1. No one shall be held guilty of any [delete] offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a [delete] offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the [delete] offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the [delete] offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, constituted an offence according to international law.
3. The severity of penalties shall be proportional to the gravity of the [delete] offence.

The presumption of innocence and the other principles stated above are the trademarks of a true democracy. They are some of the most important fundamental rights. To abandon these principles in the way that has been done in Convent 45, Article 47, is very serious. We do not know which offences will be criminal in the future, but we must ensure that every man or woman are entitled to these fundamental devices for protection against unjustified punishment, no matter if the offence they are charged with happens to be in the Criminal Code or not. Otherwise politicians could avoid essential principles in a democracy through administrative measures, leading to a dilution of the Charter.

CHAPTER VII. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 49. Scope

3. (new) The Charter applies to legal and physical persons when otherwise has not been stated.

CEDERSCHIÖLD REV

Article 12. Freedom of assembly and of association

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association/non-association, in particular in political, trade union and civic matters.

Political parties at European level contribute to expressing the political will of the citizens of the Union.

In Sweden and Denmark, people who do not belong to a trade union may be harassed and sometimes are not allowed to seek employment at all places if they do not belong to a trade union. If they wish to leave the trade union, this may constitute a legal ground to fire them. This is deeply discriminatory. In the same way as it is a fundamental right to not have any religion or faith, it is a fundamental right not to be forced to join or stay with an organisation. The right to non-association is recognised in Art. 11 of the 1989 Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Right of Workers (referred to in TEU art. 136): "Employers and workers of the European Community shall have the right of association in order to constitute professional organisations or trade unions of their choice for the defence of their economic and social interests. Every employer and every worker shall have the freedom to join or not to join such organisations without any personal or occupational damage being suffered by him".

Article 17. Right to property

(amendment supported by Andrew Duff, Ingo Friedrich, Thierry Cornillet and Marie-Thérèse Hermange)

1. Every person has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions except in specified public interest, in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to compensation for the loss in due time.
2. Intellectual property shall be protected.

The last sentence of part 1 should be moved as indicated above to ensure that there will not be problems of interpretation. Without the amendments above, the right to property in the Charter would be weaker than the right as interpreted by the Court of Justice in Luxembourg. This can be seen in the Standley case, C-293/97, para. 54, which is further discussed in my opinion (from 22 February 2000) on the Charter adopted in the Legal Affairs Committee.

Observation déposée par Thierry CORNILLET sur le Convent 45 : Charte des Droits fondamentaux 4423/00

à l'attention de Monsieur MENDEZ DE VIGO

Il me paraît essentiel que le principe de neutralité de l'action publique puisse figurer en tant que tel dans la charte.

La neutralité de l'action publique recouvre à la fois :

- La neutralité dont doit faire preuve l'administration vis-à-vis de celles et ceux qui s'adressent à elle quelle que soient leurs opinions ;
- La neutralité que doit s'imposer l'administration dans son action même et notamment en ne se faisant pas le reflet et le relais d'une idéologie dominante tant politique, philosophique ou religieuse.

Je propose donc que l'article 39 puisse être ainsi précisé, la neutralité venant, à mes yeux, heureusement compléter l'équité et l'impartialité :

Article 39 : Droit à une bonne administration

1. Toute personne a le droit de voir ses affaires traitées impartialement, équitablement SELON LE PRINCIPE DE NEUTRALITE DE L'ACTION PUBLIQUE et ce dans un délai raisonnable par les institutions et organes de l'Union.

Merci

A L'ATTENTION DE MONSIEUR BRAIBANT

OBSERVATIONS DE J-L. DEHAENE, REPRESENTANT PERSONNEL DU GOUVERNEMENT BELGEOBJET : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne (Convent. 45 et 46).

1. Il convient de féliciter le Présidium pour le caractère équilibré du projet de Charte qu'il a élaboré à la base des amendements déposés par les membres de la Convention et des échanges de vues extrêmement riches qui se sont tenus au cours des séances plénières de la Convention.

Le Traité d'Amsterdam a consolidé la base institutionnelle de la protection des droits fondamentaux par l'Union en tant que telle, en étendant l'exercice du contrôle juridictionnel de la Cour de Justice en ce qui concerne le respect de ses droits dans le cadre de l'action des institutions.

Il n'en demeure pas moins que le citoyen dans ses relations avec les institutions et les Etats membres chargés de la mise en oeuvre du droit communautaire doit pouvoir identifier et comprendre la portée des droits fondamentaux dont il bénéficie à l'effet de s'assurer de leurs applications correctes et exiger, le cas échéant, le respect de ceux-ci.

C'est la raison pour laquelle une énonciation de ses droits telle qu'envisagée par la Charte conforte la protection offerte aux citoyens.

2. Dans cette perspective, il serait opportun que le préambule qui constitue en quelque sorte la raison d'être de la Charte exprime de façon plus explicite qu'il s'agit avant toute chose d'un instrument visant à clarifier les liens entre le citoyen et les institutions et à l'informer de ses droits. La protection accrue voulue par la Charte comporte à la fois une mission d'information et une mission de prévention ; une meilleure connaissance de ses droits fondamentaux doit permettre au justiciable de pallier immédiatement toute intervention qui menacerait la substance même de ceux-ci.

3. Le Gouvernement belge se félicite de l'intégration dans la Charte des droits économiques et sociaux qu'elle estime fondamentale.

4. La structure proposée qui regroupe les droits énoncés selon des domaines spécifiques de protection est une solution adéquate dans la mesure où elle évite le clivage traditionnel entre droits classiques et droits économiques et sociaux.

La classification des droits selon des domaines déterminés favorise la lisibilité de la Charte.

En définissant soit les sphères d'activités des institutions et des Etats membres où les risques d'atteinte aux droits sont omniprésents, comme en matière de Justice, soit en regroupant les droits sans distinction de leur nature selon un principe directeur fondamental tel que l'égalité, on permet au citoyen d'identifier aisément la violation dont il serait victime.

5. Les observations qui suivent quant au libellé des articles du projet de Charte répondent à un souci d'adéquation de ce projet avec les explications reprises dans le doc. Charte 4423/00 Conv. 46.

* Art 15 - Liberté professionnelle.

Comme le précise le doc. Conv. 46, le paragraphe 1er de cet article s'inspire de l'article 1er paragraphe 2 de la Charte sociale européenne signée le 18 octobre 1961 ratifiée par tous les Etats membres.

Il est à noter que la Charte européenne consacre comme tel un droit au travail (cfr. intitulé de l'article 1er). Il paraît dès lors souhaitable que la Charte proclame également de façon explicite un droit au travail dont l'exercice effectif est notamment garanti par la liberté professionnelle (§ 1er), mais également en ce qui concerne le citoyen de l'Union par la libre circulation des travailleurs, la liberté d'établissement et de libre prestation de services (§ 2).

Le libellé suivant est suggéré :

« Art. 15 - Droit au travail

1. Afin de gagner sa vie, toute personne a un droit au travail qui implique notamment le droit d'exercer une profession librement choisie ».

* Art. 48 - Droit a ne pas être jugé ou puni pénalement deux fois pour un même délit.

Le doc. Conv. 46 précise que conformément à l'acquis du droit de l'Union le principe « non bis in idem » ne s'applique pas seulement à l'intérieur de la juridiction d'un même Etat mais aussi entre les juridictions des Etats membres. La version actuelle de l'article 48 implique que le pouvoir juridictionnel de n'importe quel autre Etat au monde doit être reconnu.

Il est dès lors suggéré d'adopter un libellé qui limite la reconnaissance des décisions judiciaires en matière pénale aux Etats membres de l'Union européenne. Ma proposition d'amendement 204 introduite antérieurement répond à cette exigence.

Le texte proposé était le suivant :

* Art 50 - Portée des droits garantis.

Le paragraphe 1er de l'article 50 traite du régime des limitations. Comme le précise le doc. Conv. 46 la formule s'inspire de la jurisprudence de la Cour de Justice de Luxembourg.

Par souci de cohérence avec la teneur de cette jurisprudence et en vue d'assurer une protection maximale quant à la nature des restrictions permises, il serait opportun de compléter le § 1er en y ajoutant : « sans pour autant porter atteinte à la substance même de ces droits et libertés ».

9A

Le paragraphe 3 de l'article 50 précise le régime des droits qui sont également garantis par la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme .

Ce paragraphe répond de façon adéquate à la nécessité d'assurer la cohérence et la sécurité juridique entre la Charte et la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme.

Il n'en demeure pas moins que l'on ne peut exclure le risque que la Charte appliquée et interprétée dans le cadre de l'Union européenne, c'est à dire dans le cadre d'un Traité avec ses objectifs propres, ne génère une jurisprudence de la Cour de Justice de Luxembourg qui pourrait diverger de la jurisprudence de la Cour de Strasbourg.

A cet égard, le Gouvernement belge tient à souligner qu'une interprétation harmonieuse des droits fondamentaux serait hautement favorisée par une adhésion de l'Union à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme.

Enfin, il serait opportun de citer la Charte sociale européenne à l'art. 50 § 3. Cette référence permettrait de clarifier la portée qu'il convient de donner aux droits sociaux repris dans le projet de Charte et qui émanent de la Charte sociale européenne. L'interprétation de ces droits ont en effet connu, au fil du temps, une évolution en raison de la jurisprudence plus que trentenaire élaborée par un Comité d'experts indépendants, aujourd'hui devenu « Comité européen des droits sociaux ».

Il serait souhaitable de maintenir le dynamisme de la jurisprudence du Comité des droits sociaux dans la même mesure qu'on sauvegarde celui-ci pour la jurisprudence de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. De surcroît, la jurisprudence du Comité des droits sociaux tient compte de la jurisprudence de la Cour de Strasbourg là où des chevauchements se font avec les droits de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme.

Le libellé suivant est suggéré :

« Art. 50.

3. Dans la mesure où la présente Charte contient des droits correspondant à des droits garantis par la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales ou par la Charte sociale européenne, leur sens et leur portée sont similaires à ceux que leur confèrent lesdites conventions, à moins que la présente Charte n'assure une protection plus élevée ou plus étendue ».

DEHOUSSE

Monsieur Jean-Paul JACQUE
Directeur du Service Juridique du Conseil

À l'attention de M. MENDEZ DE VIGO

Monsieur le Directeur,

Le document (Charte 4422/00 - CONVENT 45) reprenant le texte complet de la Charte proposé le 28 juillet 2000 par le Présidium suite aux discussions de la Convention m'est bien parvenu et a retenu toute mon attention.

Je désire tout d'abord exprimer mes remerciements au Présidium pour les efforts considérables qu'il a accepté de fournir afin que la Convention dispose en temps voulu d'un projet structuré de texte.

En se souvenant des hésitations exprimées de part et d'autre lors des premières réunions de la Convention, on ne peut que mesurer avec satisfaction le chemin parcouru et je n'ignore pas le rôle déterminant rempli à cet égard par le Présidium.

Je m'en tiendrais là si le texte à adopter ne se situait pas dans le domaine primordial et essentiel à l'Europe des droits fondamentaux de la personne humaine.

Dans cette matière, personne ne peut renoncer à proposer des améliorations et c'est dans cet esprit que je formule les propositions suivantes.

1. Préambule

1.1. L'idée du caractère limitable des droits ne peut être exprimée par une clause horizontale introduite à la fin de la Charte sans être annoncée dès le début, par exemple sur base du texte suivant :

Aucune liberté n'est absolue. Le droit, par ses principes et dans des textes, détermine les circonstances dans lesquelles des limitations peuvent être reconnues et, dans le cas échéant, détermine les limites ou les dérogations.

1.2. Il serait utile de déterminer pareillement les titulaires des droits retenus, par exemple sur base du texte suivant:

Observations Dehousse.txt

Tout étranger qui se trouve sur le territoire de l'Union jouit de la protection accordée par la présente Charte aux personnes et aux biens, sauf si une disposition de la Charte en dispose autrement.

A cet égard, je désire faire observer que, lorsque des droits ou des libertés sont garanties ou "respectées" au profit d'individus, le texte proposé spécifie toujours à quel "type" d'individus la disposition s'applique, c'est-à-dire "toute personne", "tout citoyen de l'Union", "tout travailleur", "les ressortissants des pays tiers en séjour régulier" (par exemple à l'article 15 sur la liberté professionnelle). Pourtant, aucune clause horizontale n'est prévue concernant les bénéficiaires de la Charte. Il est seulement indiqué à l'article 49 que la Charte s'adresse aux institutions et organes de l'UE ainsi qu'aux Etats membres lorsqu'ils mettent en oeuvre le droit de l'Union. Il apparaît par conséquent nécessaire d'introduire soit au Préambule soit dans les articles horizontaux le principe, conforme à la jurisprudence internationale et européenne en ce qui concerne les droits fondamentaux, selon lequel les droits conférés par la présente s'appliquent aux ressortissants d'Etats tiers résidant légalement sur le territoire de l'Union Européenne sauf si l'article contient une disposition spécifique relative aux destinataires des prérogatives en question.

2. Article 3, Droit à l'intégrité de la personne:

Ajouts suggérés:

- "Le respect de l'intégrité physique et morale implique l'accès libre de tous aux progrès de la médecine et des autres sciences, et en particulier l'accès égal de tous aux soins de santé.
- La matière vivante ne peut être brevetée ni dans sa globalité ni dans une de ses parties.
- Lorsque le vieillissement d'une personne porte atteinte à l'intégrité, celle-ci bénéficie, indépendamment de son droit à la pension, à une aide et une assistance spécifiques.
- Toute personne a le droit de demander et d'obtenir une mort qui respecte sa dignité, en particulier lorsque la dépendance porte atteinte au respect de l'intégrité physique et morale ou à la dignité de l'être humain.

Justifications:

Ad 1: Le principe de l'accès équitable aux soins de santé est prévu notamment par l'article 3 de la Convention sur les Droits de l'Homme et la biomédecine, élaborée dans le cadre du Conseil de l'Europe, entrée en vigueur le 1 décembre 1999, signée par neuf Etats membres et ratifiée par la Grèce et l'Espagne. Il est d'ailleurs fait référence à cette Convention dans l'exposé des motifs (CONV 46). Une autre base juridique qui permet de plaider en faveur de l'in sertion d'un accès libre et égal aux soins de santé est l'article 12 du Pacte des Nations Unies sur les droits économiques et sociaux, ratifié par tous les Etats membres, qui stipule que:

Observations Dehousse.txt

- "1. Les Etats parties au présent Pacte reconnaissent le droit qu'a toute personne de jouir du meilleur état de santé physique et mentale qu'elle soit capable d'atteindre.
2. Les mesures que les Etats parties au présent Pacte prendront en vue d'assurer le plein exercice de ce droit devront comprendre les mesures nécessaires pour assurer:
- a) La diminution de la mortalité et de la mortalité infantile, ainsi que le développement sain de l'enfant;
- b) L'amélioration de tous les aspects de l'hygiène du milieu et de l'hygiène industrielle;
- c) La prophylaxie et le traitement des maladies épidémiques, endémiques, professionnelles et autres, ainsi que la lutte contre ces maladies;
- d) La création de conditions propres à assurer à tous des services médicaux et une aide médicale en cas de maladie."

Ad 2: Le principe de non-brevetabilité de la matière vivante repose dès à présent sur les normes de droit international suivantes: le Pacte des Nations Unies sur les droits économiques et sociaux (article 1, § 1&2), mais surtout la Convention des Nations Unies sur la Biodiversité, ratifiée par tous les Etats membres de l'UE, et la Convention sur le Brevet Européen (CBE), dont l'article 52 établit que "seules sont brevetées les inventions nouvelles".

Ad 3 et 4: Le respect de la dignité de la personne, le droit à la vie (articles 1 et 2 du CONV 45) ainsi qu'une clause sur le droit à une vieillesse et une mort dans la dignité constituent des concepts parfaitement complémentaires.

3. Article 7: Respect de la vie privée

Je propose le maintien de la formulation de l'article 8 CEDH ("Toute personne a droit au respect de sa vie privée et familiale, de son domicile et du secret de sa correspondance") dans la mesure où, face au développement des techniques de communication, les possibilités techniques rendent la garantie du droit au "secret des communications" parfaitement illusoire. Assimiler ce qui est techniquement possible avec ce qui ne l'est pas, c'est construire une parodie de garantie et par conséquent affaiblir toute la Charte.

4. Article 9: Droit de se marier et de fonder une famille

Le texte proposé ne reflète pas les discussions qui ont eu lieu en séance plénière et qui pourraient aboutir sans problème sur un texte tel que celui-ci:

"Deux personnes peuvent contracter une union de longue durée dont les modalités sont définies par la loi, laquelle définit également la protection assurée à cette union."

Observations Dehousse.txt

Une formule de ce type prend en compte les nouvelles formes de la vie de couple qui apparaissent dans les différents Etats de l'Union comme ailleurs dans le monde.

5. Article 10 - Liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion

Je note que le texte proposé par le Présidium affine de façon générale la liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion.

Il renvoie donc implicitement le problème de la limitation aux clauses dites "horizontales".

Ceci ne me paraît pas satisfaisant en l'espèce. Dans un siècle marqué, y compris ces dernières années, par un retour en puissance de tous les sectarismes, il doit exister une condition de réciprocité.

C'est pourquoi j'avais par amendement demandé qu'il soit écrit que "toute personne a droit à la liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion dans la mesure où la pensée, la conscience et la religion respectent le principe de tolérance et le principe de démocratie".

Je réitère mon appel en ce sens.

5.2. Par ailleurs, où finit la secte (dont on ne dit rien) et où commence la religion ?

6. Article 11 - Liberté d'expression

6.1. A nouveau, le texte présenté par le Présidium renvoie le problème des limitations aux clauses horizontales (et en l'occurrence au §2 de l'article 10 CEDH).

6.2. Tout d'abord, c'est avec raison que la CEDH formule des restrictions dans le texte, et à tort que l'on propose d'agir implicitement et indirectement pour la Charte.

6.3. Ensuite, la CEDH ne mentionne pas le souci de préserver l'enfance et la jeunesse, pourtant bien plus nécessaire aujourd'hui qu'en 1950.

6.4. Dès lors, je maintiens la proposition d'insérer, après le groupe nominal "ingérence des autorités publiques", les mots "sauf pour assurer la protection de la démocratie, des droits fondamentaux et de la jeunesse".

6.5. Par ailleurs, je suggère l'insertion des dispositions suivantes:

Observations Dehousse.txt

- "La liberté d'expression implique le droit de s'exprimer dans sa propre langue.
- Là où les exigences d'efficacité sociale impliquent le choix d'une ou plusieurs langues administratives, ce choix doit s'opérer par la loi.
- Là où existe une langue endogène qui ne comporte pas le caractère de langue administrative, elle n'en demeure pas moins un trait culturel fondamental et l'un des éléments de richesse du patrimoine culturel européen.
- A ce titre, toute langue endogène, au sens de langue régionale par rapport à la Charte Européenne des Langues Régionales ou Minorités, mérite respect, protection et aide. La loi détermine les modalités d'application du présent principe, sans que les exigences d'efficacité puissent porter atteinte aux droits et libertés fondamentales."

A cet égard, l'évolution du monde implique une attention accrue au respect et à la protection de la diversité culturelle qui demeure une caractéristique essentielle de l'Europe.

7. Article 14 - Droit à l'éducation

7.1. L'efficacité et pour tout dire la mise en oeuvre du principe demande plusieurs clarifications et compléments. Ainsi, le texte gagnerait à comprendre les dispositions suivantes:

- Toute personne dispose du droit à un accès égal et gratuit aux écoles d'enseignement obligatoire, ce qui implique le devoir pour la collectivité d'assurer l'existence d'écoles en nombre suffisant.
- L'existence et le devenir de l'Union, d'une part, et l'intérêt de chaque enfant pris séparément, d'autre part, convergent pour rendre nécessaire un enseignement systématique et progressif de trois langues, enseignement qui doit commencer dès que possible."

Pour le reste, la garantie de l'accès aux écoles gratuites ne peut être effective que si des infrastructures suffisantes dans ce domaine sont prévues par la collectivité, faute de quoi on exprime un vœu au lieu d'énoncer un droit.

D'autre part, pourquoi la Charte ne tiendrait-elle pas compte de l'article 149.2 CE, qui stipule que "l'action de la Communauté vise à développer la dimension européenne dans l'éducation, notamment par l'apprentissage et la diffusion des langues des Etats membres" ? Si c'est le nombre de trois langues qui gêne le Présidium, je rappellerai que ce nombre a été proposé par le Président DELORS lors que celui-ci dirigeait la Commission Européenne. Mais une disposition se bornant à prévoir l'enseignement de plusieurs langues rencontrerait évidemment ma préoccupation.

7.2. La formule retenue par le Présidium pour l'article 14§2 ("assurer l'éducation et l'enseignement de leurs enfants conformément à leurs convictions religieuses, philosophiques et pédagogiques") e

Observations Dehousse.txt

engendre plusieurs imprécisions dangereuses qui doivent être levées

Ainsi:

1°) les témoins de Jehovah refusent fréquemment que leurs enfants soient vaccinés en raison de leurs croyances: le Présidium propose-t-il de respecter cette volonté (qui met évidemment les autres enfants en péril)? C'est ce qui découle du texte écrit;

2°) le respect des valeurs implique-t-il pour le Présidium que certains enfants puissent échapper à l'obligation scolaire (ce qui est le cas si les parents "assurent l'enseignement")?

3°) Réapparaît ici la frontière parfois ténue entre sectes, religion et pensée (cf. supra 5.2).

8. Article 18 - Droit d'asile

Le droit d'asile ne se conçoit pas comme un simple droit de présence mais comme un acte d'adhésion aux valeurs qui fondent l'Union, et dont la Charte est du reste l'expression.

Ceci justifie l'insertion dans l'article 18 d'une disposition conditionnant l'octroi du droit d'asile à l'engagement du ou des bénéficiaires de respecter les principes de tolérance, le principe de démocratie ainsi que les lois fondamentales de l'Union et de ses Etats membres.

9. Article 25 - Droit à l'information et à la consultation des travailleurs au sein de l'entreprise

9.1. La proposition du Présidium, en stipulant que les travailleurs ont droit à "une information et une consultation en temps utile sur les questions qui les concernent", est très en retrait par rapport au grand nombre d'amendements déposés à ce sujet, qui tendaient à garantir aux travailleurs une information régulière et fiable afin de corroborer la notion de temps utile mais aussi pour s'assurer que les travailleurs ne doivent pas s'enquérir de leur propre initiative sur la situation de l'entreprise dans son ensemble.

9.2. La formule sur "les questions qui les concernent" laisse de toute évidence une trop grande marge d'appréciation à la direction de l'entreprise pour déterminer quels sont les sujets qui concerneraient l'entreprise mais sans concerner les travailleurs et paraît par conséquent inutile et dangereuse parce que partielle.

10. Article 26 - Droit de négociation et d'action collective Comme le relevait le Professeur BRAIBANT dans sa "Contribution 188" du 23 mai 2000, l'article 137.6 CE stipule explicitement que le droit de grève ne relève pas des compétences de la Communauté Euro péenne mais ne signifie pas pour autant que ce droit ne doit pas être respecté par la CE dans la conduite de ses politiques.

Observations Dehousse.txt

En effet, le droit de grève est non seulement garanti par la Charte sociale européenne (article 6, al.4), texte de référence pour les travaux de la Charte selon le mandat de Cologne, mais aussi par le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels de 1966, ratifié par tous les Etats membres de l'UE, qui stipule à l'article 8: "Les Etats parties au présent Pacte s'engagent à assurer*d) le droit de grève, exercé conformément aux lois de chaque pays".

11. Article 31 - Conciliation de la vie familiale et de la vie professionnelle

Une adaptation du texte me paraît nécessaire, par exemple dans l'esprit du texte suivant:

"Quelle que soit la composition de la famille, la protection de celle-ci est garantie sur le plan juridique, économique, social et fiscal".

En effet, la formulation actuellement proposée ne tient pas compte de façon suffisamment explicite de la situation des familles qui ne correspondent pas au schéma classique, comme par exemple les familles monoparentales.

12. Article 32 - Sécurité sociale et aide sociale

A la lumière des traditions constitutionnelles d'un grand nombre d'Etats-membres ainsi que du Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, qui prévoit à l'article 9 que "les Etats parties au présent Pacte reconnaissent le droit à toute personne à la sécurité sociale", le droit à la sécurité sociale doit être reconnu à toute personne.

Il s'agit là d'un principe de droit qui, à l'aube du XXI^e siècle, fonde la spécificité du modèle social européen dans le monde et sa mention dans la Charte me paraît constituer un devoir essentiel.

13. Article 34 - Accès aux services d'intérêt général

Les principes de l'égalité et de la liberté d'accès garanties à toute personne, tel qu'avancés en dernier lieu par la proposition de compromis des Professeurs BRAIBANT et MEYER en date du 13 juin 2000, constituent un seuil en deçà duquel la garantie de l'accès aux services d'intérêt économique général ne peut être apportée dans la vie réelle et il me paraît que le Présidium devrait tenir pleinement compte de cette proposition très adéquate.

Observations Dehousse.txt

Par ailleurs, j'ai pris note de l'invitation inscrite dans le document CONVENT 46 à vous transmettre des commentaires relatifs à ce texte.

A cet égard, lors de la réunion de la Délégation du Parlement Européen qui s'est tenue ce jeudi 31 août, Mme BERES, présidente de séance, a précisé que le document CONVENT 46 constituait un document technique que le Présidium n'avait du reste pas fait sien, du moins à ce jour -- comme le document le souligne indirectement lui-même.

De surcroît, il est également précisé que ce document "est amené à évoluer", ce qui me paraît également naturel.

Dans ces conditions, je ne désire faire aujourd'hui de commentaires ni sur ce que ce document contient ni sur ce qu'il ne contient pas.

Enfin je précise que j'ai mis dans la présente lettre l'accent sur une série de points qui me paraissent particulièrement importants, sans reprendre chacun des amendements que j'ai déposés antérieurement. Ceci ne signifie nullement que je renonce implicitement à ces amendements.

De même, j'ai délibérément omis de développer ici différents arguments dans la mesure où j'ai contresigné des observations formulées collectivement par les membres socialistes de la Délégation, comme j'ai marqué un accord pour partie sur les nouvelles considérations émises par le Professeur MEYER.

En vous remerciant d'avance de votre attention, je vous prie de croire, Monsieur le Directeur, en l'assurance de mes sentiments les meilleurs.

2. ~~T~~Respect for the right of to a defence of anyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed.

Article 47. Principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties

1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the criminal offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.

2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to international law.
3. The severity of penalties shall be proportional to the gravity of the criminal offence.

Article 48. Right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same criminal offence

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he or she has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law.

CHAPTER VII. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 49. Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. They shall therefore respect the rights, observe the principles and promote the application thereof in accordance with their respective powers.
2. This Charter does not establish any new power or task for the Community or the Union, or modify powers and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Article 50. Scope of guaranteed rights

1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest being pursued by the Union, other legitimate interests in a democratic society or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.
2. Rights recognised by this Charter which are based on the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.
3. Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be similar to those conferred on them by the said Convention unless this Charter affords greater or more extensive protection.

Article 51. Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or adversely affecting human rights and fundamental freedoms as recognised, in their respective fields of application, by international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and by the Member States' constitutions.

Article 52. Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for herein.

Article 53. Definition of citizenship

Any right, privilege or obligation pertaining to citizens of the Union may be extended in whole or in part to any natural or legal person by a legislative act of the Union where the extension of the scope of such rights shall not limit in any way those of the Union citizen.

Article 54. Informing the citizen

The Union's institutions and bodies and its Member States undertake to inform the citizen comprehensively ~~the citizen~~ of the rights and duties established by this Charter.

An das
Präsidium des Konvents zur
Erarbeitung der Europäischen Charta der Grundrechte
zHdn des Stellvertretenden Vorsitzenden
Gunnar Jansson

Sehr geehrter Herr Jansson!

Gemäß dem vom Präsidium in Convent 45 (Charte 4422/00) vorgeschlagenen Verfahren erlauben wir uns, folgende allgemeine Bemerkungen zum Gesamtentwurf der Europäischen Charta der Grundrechte zu übermitteln:

1. Wir möchten zunächst die Charta ausdrücklich als wesentlichen Schritt der Entwicklung der Europäischen Union und ihrer Mitgliedstaaten begrüßen. Auch danken wir dem Präsidium für die ausgezeichnete Arbeit, die es geleistet hat. Der vorliegende Entwurf ist eine gute und grundsätzlich zustimmungsfähige Grundlage für die weiteren Beratungen.
2. Wir treten der Stellungnahme, wie sie von Professor Jürgen Meyer abgegeben worden ist, bei. Darüber hinaus erlauben wir uns allerdings einige weitere Anmerkungen zu machen, die wir Sie bitten, in die Endformulierung mit einzubringen:

3. Wir erachten die Verabschiedung einer für die Organe der Europäischen Union verbindlichen Grundrechtscharta für einen wesentlichen Schritt zu einer Rechtsgemeinschaft, in der der Einzelne, wohin er sich in der Europäischen Union auch begibt, stets davon ausgehen kann, dass er in Einklang mit einer gemeinsamen Ordnung von Grundwerten behandelt wird, dass er also berechtigt ist zu sagen „civis europæus sum“ und sich auf diesen Status berufen kann, um sich jeder Verletzung seiner Grundrechte zu widersetzen (vgl. in diesem Sinne die Ausführungen von Generalanwalt Jacobs, Rs C-168/91, Konstantinidis, Slg 1993, I-1191). In diesem Lichte ist es im Übrigen ausdrücklich zu begrüßen, dass Art 15 Abs 3 des vorliegenden Entwurfs auch Drittstaatsangehörige in den Schutzbereich der Berufsfreiheit mit einbezieht. Ebenso halten wir es, will man den Gedanken eines einheitlichen europäischen Grundrechtsraumes verwirklichen, für notwendig, dass Art 43 Abs 2 des Entwurfs das Recht auf Freizügigkeit für Staatsangehörige dritter Länder, die sich rechtmäßig im Hoheitsgebiet eines Mitgliedstaates der Union aufhalten, garantiert. Als bloße Ermächtigung, wie sie derzeit Art 43 Abs 2 des vorliegenden Entwurfs enthält, ist eine solche Bestimmung entbehrlich.

Es hieße freilich, die europäische Grundrechtstradition und auch den gemeinsamen Grundrechtsstandard, den zu erfassen ausdrücklicher Bestandteil des Kölner Auftrags des Konvents ist, zu verlassen, wenn eine Europäische Charta der Grundrechte verabschiedet würde, die keine ausdrückliche Garantie des Schutzes ethnischer, religiöser oder sprachlicher Minderheiten enthielte. Ein derartiges Recht ist als Bestandteil einer Europäischen Grundrechtscharta unverzichtbar. Den Angehörigen solcher Minderheiten ist Chancengleichheit und Gleichbehandlung zu garantieren. Als Mindeststandard, den eine Europäische Grundrechtscharta keinesfalls unterschreiten darf, um aus unserer Sicht zustimmungsfähig zu sein, muss daher jedenfalls ein Artikel über den Minderheitenschutz aufgenommen werden, der mindestens den Inhalt aufweist, den Sie, sehr geehrter Herr Jansson, in Ihrem Schreiben vom 21.7.2000 an die Vertreter der nationalen Parlamente im Grundrechtskonvent vorgeschlagen haben. Es darf im übrigen im Lichte der Haltung aller Fraktionen im österreichischen Parlament darauf hingewiesen werden, dass ein Text der Grundrechtscharta ohne jeden ausdrücklichen Minderheitenschutz wohl auch im Rat nur schwerlich Zustimmung finden wird, bedenkt man das Recht des Parlaments den österreichischen Ratsvertreter in dieser Frage rechtlich binden zu können.

Wir sind aber auch der Auffassung, dass schon in der Präambel unmißverständlich zum Ausdruck gebracht werden muss, dass die Europäische Union die im Folgenden in der Charta enthaltenen Rechte und Freiheiten nicht nur sichtbar macht und bekräftigt, sondern sie vor allem garantiert und gewährleistet. Dieses Anliegen könnte dadurch realisiert werden, dass in Punkt 5 der Präambel davon gesprochen wird, dass diese „Charta gewährleistet und bekräftigt ... die Rechte“, die sich aus den im Folgenden näher bezeichneten Quellen ergeben.

Der erwähnte Grundgedanke eines einheitlichen europäischen Grundrechtsraumes, in dem keine grundrechtsfreien Rechtsbeziehungen bestehen, ist zu vorderst durch die Bindung der Europäischen Union an die Europäische Charta der Grundrechte zu verwirklichen. Um diesem Anliegen umfassend Rechnung zu tragen müssen aber auch die Mitgliedstaaten nicht nur bei der unmittelbaren Durchführung, sondern immer im Anwendungsbereich des Rechts der Europäischen Union an die Rechte und Freiheiten der Charta gebunden werden. Art 49 sollte daher diesen einheitlichen europäischen Grundrechtsschutz auch dadurch zum Ausdruck bringen, dass „diese Charta für die Organe und Einrichtungen der Union unter Einhaltung des Subsidiaritätsprinzips und für die Mitgliedstaaten im Anwendungsbereich des Rechts der Europäischen Union“ gilt.

4. Wir sind der Auffassung, dass die Formulierung in Art 2 Abs 2 der Charta unmißverständlich zum Ausdruck bringt, dass auf dem Gebiete der Europäischen Union die Todesstrafe zu keiner Zeit und zu keinem wie immer gear teten Zweck eingeführt, verhängt oder vollstreckt werden darf. Eine Anwendung des Horizontalartikels 50 auf dieses Recht schließen wir insofern aus, als das Verbot der Todesstrafe keinem allgemeinen Gesetzesvorbehalt im Sinne des Art 50 Abs 1 des Entwurfs unterliegen kann. Insofern gewährleistet die Charta – anders als die Erläuternden Bemerkungen zum Entwurf meinen – einen höheren Standard als Art 2 des 6. Zusatzprotokolls zur EMRK. Wir begrüßen dies ausdrücklich, da es keinen ersichtlichen Grund gibt, auch heute noch die Todesstrafe, selbst bloß für den Kriegsfall, aufrecht zu erhalten.

In systematischer Hinsicht ist weiters zu bemerken, dass entsprechend der grundsätzlichen Konzeption der Charta der „horizontale“ Gesetzesvorbehalt des Art 50 des vorliegenden Entwurfs die Basis für Einschränkungen und Ausgestaltungen der in der Charta anerkannten Rechte und Freiheiten darstellt. Im Lichte dieser Systementscheidung ist es inkonsequent, in einzelnen Artikeln ausdrücklich auf die Ausgestaltung durch das Gemeinschaftsrecht oder das Recht der Mitgliedstaaten zu verweisen. Diese Verweise auf das Recht der Europäischen Union oder mitgliedstaatliche Rechtsvorschriften sollten daher aus den betreffenden Artikeln eliminiert werden (konkret insbesondere aus den Artikeln 25, 26, 32, 33 und 34). Überdies würde damit einem weiteren Grundanliegen des Konvents Rech-nung getragen, nämlich zu vermeiden, Aussagen über Kompetenzzuweisungen an die Europäische Union und/oder die Mitgliedstaaten vorzunehmen.

5. Das Recht auf persönliche Freiheit bildet eine der Wurzeln des europäischen Grundrechtsschutzes überhaupt. Im Kern dieses Rechts steht die Garantie, dass einem Menschen seine Freiheit nur in den gesetzlich vorgeschriebenen Fällen und nur auf Grund einer richterlichen Entscheidung entzogen werden darf. Dies sollte in Art 6 des vorliegenden Entwurfs auch ausdrücklich gesagt werden, weil ansonsten ein wesentlicher Inhalt des Rechts auf Freiheit und Sicherheit nicht ersichtlich wird.

Die Garantie der Versammlungs- und Vereinigungsfreiheit ist ein wesentlicher Bestandteil einer demokratischen Gesellschaftsordnung. Dies schließt in der europäischen Tradition das Recht der Gewerkschaftsbildung und der Gründung politischer Parteien mit ein. Art 12 des vorliegenden Entwurfs sollte die grundlegende Bedeutung dieses Rechts und seine historischen Traditionen unmißverständlich zum Ausdruck bringen, wie dies insbesondere die ursprüngliche Fassung des Art 17 (Convent 37 [Charte 4360/00] – „Jede Person hat das Recht, sich frei und friedlich mit anderen zu versammeln und sich frei mit anderen zusammenzuschließen; dazu gehört auch das Recht, Gewerkschaften oder politische Parteien zu gründen und diesen beizutreten.“) getan hat. Die auf eine Abänderung dieser Formulierung zielenden Änderungsvorschläge und Diskussionsbemerkungen bezogen sich hauptsächlich auf die Vermeidung von Überschneidungen mit einem eigenen Recht, politische Parteien zu gründen (Art 24 Convent 37). Durch die vom Präsidium gewählte kluge Vorgangsweise, diese Punkte in einen Artikel zusammenzuziehen, ist dieses Problem weggefallen.

Im Lichte der gemeinsamen Verfassungstraditionen der Mitgliedstaaten und der kulturellen Tradition Europas überhaupt sollte in Art 13 des Entwurfs ausdrücklich auch die Freiheit der Wissenschaft und die Freiheit der Kunst garantiert werden.

6. Der Grundsatz der Gleichheit zählt zu den Eckpfeilern europäischer Grundrechtstradition. Es ist ausdrücklich zu begrüßen, dass Art 22 des vorliegenden Entwurfs ausdrücklich dazu verpflichtet, die Gleichheit von Männern und Frauen auch tatsächlich sicherzustellen.

Für eine demokratische und soziale Gesellschaft ist es von entscheidender Bedeutung und Aussagekraft, wie sie die Rechte von Menschen schützt, die diese auf Grund ihres Lebensalters nicht in ausreichendem Maß selbst durchsetzen können. Daher zählt die Anerkennung der Persönlichkeitsrechte von Kindern ebenso zum essentiellen Bestandteil eines europäischen Grundrechtskatalogs wie eine Garantie, die die Lebensinteressen älterer Menschen grundrechtlich berücksichtigt. Art 23 Abs 1 des vorliegenden Entwurfs sollte das vordringliche Anliegen der Anerkennung der Persönlichkeitsrechte der Kinder (wie es etwa Art 23 Convent 37 in seiner ursprünglichen Fassung – „Kinder müssen als eigenständige Personen behandelt werden und die Möglichkeit haben, auf Angelegenheiten, die sie selbst betreffen, entsprechend dem Grad ihrer persönlichen Reife Einfluss zu nehmen.“ – trefflich zum Ausdruck gebracht hat) ebenso zum Ausdruck bringen wie eine eigene Bestimmung über den Schutz der Lebensinteressen alter Menschen in die Grundrechtscharta aufzunehmen wäre.

Um in Art 31 des vorliegenden Entwurfs tatsächlich den Einklang von Familien- und Berufsleben herzustellen und nicht ausschließlich auf Aspekte im Zusammenhang mit der Geburt von Kindern abzustellen, sollte der Anspruch auf Pflegeurlaub für pflegebedürftige nahe Angehörige in Art 31 Abs 2 des Entwurfs verankert werden.

Der gleiche Zugang zu Diensten von allgemeinem wirtschaftlichen Interesse zu angemessenen und kontinuierlich gewährleisteten Bedingungen, der allen Menschen in der Europäischen Union gewährleistet ist, zählt zu den wesentlichen Errungenschaften europäischer Kultur und Tradition. Das Konzept der Dienste von allgemeinem wirtschaftlichen Interesse und die damit gewährleistete Versorgungssicherheit und soziale Versorgungsgerechtigkeit für die Bevölkerung ist eine genuin europäische Entwicklung. Es ist daher ausdrücklich zu begrüßen und unbedingt notwendig, dass eine Europäische Charta der Grundrechte eine Garantie des Zugangs zu derartigen Diensten von allgemeinem wirtschaftlichen Interesse enthält. Entsprechend der Tatsache, dass die Charta Rechte und Freiheiten garantiert, sollte auch Art 34 als Zugangsrecht zu derartigen Diensten formuliert werden.

Mit besten Empfehlungen

Artikel 37: Aktives und passives Wahlrecht bei den Wahlen zum Europäischen Parlament

- (1) Jeder Unionsbürger besitzt in dem Mitgliedstaat, in dem er seinen Wohnsitz hat, das aktive und passive Wahlrecht bei den Wahlen zum Europäischen Parlament, wobei für ihn dieselben Bedingungen gelten wie für die Angehörigen des betreffenden Mitgliedstaats.
- (2) Die Mitglieder des Europäischen Parlaments werden in allgemeiner, unmittelbarer, freier und geheimer Wahl gewählt.
- (3) Das Nähere wird durch das Gemeinschaftsrecht geregelt.

26.

Artikel 39: Recht auf eine gute Verwaltung

- (1) Jede Person hat ein Recht darauf, daß ihre Angelegenheiten von den Organen und Einrichtungen der Union unparteiisch, gerecht und innerhalb einer angemessenen Frist behandelt werden.
- (2) Dieses Recht umfaßt insbesondere
 - das Recht einer jeden Person, gehört zu werden, bevor ihr gegenüber eine für sie nachteilige, individuelle Maßnahme getroffen wird,
 - das Recht einer jeden Person auf Zugang zu den sie betreffenden Akten unter Wahrung des legitimen Interesses der Vertraulichkeit und des Geschäftsgeheimnisses,
 - die Verpflichtung der Verwaltung, ihre Entscheidungen zu begründen.
- (3) Streichen

(4) Jede Person kann sich in einer der Amtssprachen der Organe der Union an diese wenden und eine Antwort in derselben Sprache erhalten.

27.

Artikel 40: Recht auf Zugang zu Dokumenten

Streichung

28.

Artikel 41: Der Bürgerbeauftragte

Jeder Unionsbürger sowie jede natürliche oder juristische Person mit Wohnsitz oder satzungsmäßigem Sitz in einem Mitgliedstaat hat das Recht, Beschwerden über Mißstände in der Verwaltung der Organe und Einrichtungen der Gemeinschaft, mit Ausnahme des Gerichtshofs und des Gerichts erster Instanz in Ausübung ihrer Rechtsprechungsbefugnisse, an den Bürgerbeauftragten zu richten

29.

Artikel 45: Recht auf einen wirksamen Rechtsbehelf und ein unparteiisches Gericht

(1) Jede Person, deren Rechte oder Freiheiten durch die öffentliche Gewalt verletzt worden sind, hat das Recht, bei einem Gericht einen Rechtsbehelf einzulegen.

(2) Jede Person hat ein Recht darauf, daß ihre Sache von einem unabhängigen, unparteiischen und zuvor durch Gesetz errichteten Gericht in einem fairen Verfahren, öffentlich und innerhalb angemessener Frist verhandelt wird. Jede Person hat die Möglichkeit, sich beraten, verteidigen und vertreten zu lassen.

(3) Streichung

30.

Artikel 47: Grundsätze der Gesetzmäßigkeit und der Verhältnismäßigkeit im Zusammenhang mit Straftaten und Strafen

(1) Niemand darf wegen einer Handlung oder Unterlassung verurteilt werden, die zur Zeit ihrer Begehung nach innerstaatlichem oder internationalem Recht nicht strafbar war. Es darf auch keine schwerere Strafe als die zur Zeit der Begehung angedrohte Strafe verhängt werden. Wird nach Begehung dieser Straftat durch Gesetz eine mildere Strafe eingeführt, so ist diese zu verhängen.

(2) Dieser Artikel schließt nicht aus, daß jemand wegen einer Handlung oder Unterlassung verurteilt oder bestraft wird, die zur Zeit ihrer Begehung nach internationalem Recht strafbar war.

(3) Das Strafmaß muß im Verhältnis zur Schwere der Straftat und zur Schuld des Täters stehen.

31.

Kapitel VII Allgemeine Bestimmungen

Artikel 49: Anwendungsbereich

(1) Diese Charta gilt für die Organe und Einrichtungen der Union unter Einhaltung des Subsidiaritätsprinzips und für die Mitgliedstaaten ausschließlich bei der Anwendung des Rechts der Union. Dementsprechend achten sie die Rechte, halten sie sich an die Grundsätze und fördern sie deren Anwendung gemäß ihren jeweiligen Zuständigkeiten.

(2) Diese Charta begründet weder neue Zuständigkeiten noch neue Aufgaben für die Gemeinschaft und für die Union, noch ändert sie die in den Verträgen festgelegten Zuständigkeiten und Aufgaben.

(3) neu Die durch diese Charta gewährleisteten Rechte und Freiheiten gelten auch für juristische Personen und sonstige Vereinigungen, soweit sie ihrem Wesen nach auf diese anwendbar sind.

FRIEDRICHENTWURF DER CHARTA DER GRUNDRECHTE DER EUROPÄISCHEN UNION*Änderungsvorschlag zu Ziffer 3 der Präambel aus dem Dokument Charte 4422/00*Verfasser: Dr. Ingo Friedrich, MdEP*Textvorschlag:

Neuer Text:

Die Union trägt zur Entwicklung dieser gemeinsamen Werte, die auf die christlich-jüdischen und humanistischen Wurzeln zurückgehen, bei. Sie achtet dabei die Vielfalt der Kulturen und Traditionen der Völker Europas sowie der nationalen Identität der Mitgliedstaaten und der Organisation ihrer staatlichen Gewalt auf nationaler, regionaler und lokaler Ebene; sie stellt durch den freien Personen-, Waren-, Kapital- und Dienstleistungsverkehr eine ausgewogene und nachhaltige Entwicklung sicher.

Begründung:

Auch bei einer strikten Trennung von Kirche und Staat dürfen die Menschen nicht diskriminiert werden, die sich auf Gott als Quelle der Grundwerte beziehen. Dies trifft mit Sicherheit auf den größten Teil der Bürger Europas zu.

Bei strikter Neutralität wäre eine Anlehnung an die polnische Verfassung auch denkbar: Die Völker Europas haben untereinander eine immer engere Union begründet und beschlossen, eine friedliche Zukunft zu teilen, die auf den Werten gründet, die den Menschen gemein sind, die an Gott als Quelle der Wahrheit und Gerechtigkeit glauben, wie auch den Menschen, die diese universellen Werte aus anderen Quellen ableitend achten.

GNAUCK

Erfurt, den 31.08.2000

Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union

Allgemeine Bemerkungen des Vertreters des Bundesrates im Konvent, Herrn Minister Jürgen Gnauck, zu dem Dokument CONVENT 45 vom 28. Juli 2000

Der vom Präsidium vorgeschlagene vollständige Text (CONVENT 45) kann insgesamt gesehen mitgetragen werden; er stellt eine gute Grundlage für die abschließenden Beratungen dar.

Es erscheint jedoch angebracht, den Entwurf als Rechtstext in einigen entscheidenden Punkten präziser zu fassen, die bereits in der rechtswissenschaftlichen Diskussion in Deutschland aufgegriffen worden sind. So bestimmt der Entwurf nicht mit hinreichender Klarheit, welche Gewährleistungen als unmittelbar geltende subjektive Rechte gedacht sind. Dies wirkt sich insbesondere im Bereich der sozialen Rechte aus, hinsichtlich derer klargestellt werden sollte, dass sie als Besitzstand aus der Europäischen Sozialcharta entnommen und fortgeschrieben wurden, ohne indes die rechtliche Ausrichtung der Sozialcharta aufzugeben, die nicht unmittelbar subjektive Leistungsrechte verleihen will. Ferner bleibt unklar, in welchen Fällen es eine sogenannte Drittwirkung, d.h. eine Wirkung zwischen Privaten geben soll. Schließlich bleiben die Einschränkungsmöglichkeiten jener Rechte undeutlich, die keine Entsprechung in der EMRK haben und hinsichtlich derer somit nicht auf die dortigen Kautelen zurückgegriffen werden kann.

Im Übrigen ist darauf hinzuweisen, dass angesichts des Prinzips der begrenzten Einzelermächtigung eine Reihe von Grundrechten keine rechtliche Bedeutung erhalten werden. Gerade in diesen Fällen muss eine Harmonisierung und insbesondere Nivellierung der in den Mitgliedstaaten und Regionen geltenden Grundrechte ausgeschlossen sein.

Im Einzelnen wären noch folgende Verbesserungen wesentlich:

1. Präambel Ziffer 1

Es wird weiterhin angeregt, dass die Eingangsformel der Präambel die christlichen und humanistischen Grundlagen Europas deutlich macht. Dies wäre mit einem Hinweis auf Gott verbunden. So könnte man an die ausgewogene Einleitung der Verfassung der Republik Polen vom 2. April 1997 anknüpfen, die sowohl diejenigen anspricht, die an Gott glauben, als auch diejenigen, die diesen Glauben nicht teilen, sondern die universellen Werte aus anderen Quellen ableiten.

2. Präambel Ziffer 2

Es wäre besser, im ersten Halbsatz statt von „Würde der Männer und der Frauen“ von der „Würde des Menschen“ zu sprechen. Dies entspräche Artikel 1 und würde einer möglicherweise verkürzten Sichtweise (Würde der Kinder?) entgegen wirken. Weiter sollte im 2. Halbsatz der Grundsatz der Subsidiarität genannt werden.

3. Präambel Ziffer 3

Es wird empfohlen, auf den letzten Halbsatz in Ziffer 3 zu verzichten. Die enge Verknüpfung zwischen dem freien Personen-, Waren-, Kapital- und Dienstleistungsverkehr auf der einen und der Sicherstellung einer ausgewogenen nachhaltigen Entwicklung auf der anderen Seite würde einer zu engen, rein ökonomischen Nachhaltigkeitsdefinition Vorschub leisten. Dies widerspräche dem völker- und europarechtlichen Verständnis des Nachhaltigkeitsprinzips als Trias ökonomischer, sozialer und ökologischer Zielsetzungen und könnte daher vor allem im Zusammenspiel mit Artikel 35 zu der missverständlichen Interpretation von Nachhaltigkeit als einer Begrenzung des Umweltschutzes führen.

4. Artikel 3 Absatz 2

In Absatz 2 sollte der dritte Anstrich wie folgt formuliert werden: „Verbot, den menschlichen Körper und Teile davon als solche zur Erzielung von Gewinnen zu nutzen.“ Durch den Einschub der Worte „als solche“ würde die Konformität mit Artikel 21 der Biomedizin-Konvention gewahrt, der Grundlage der Formulierung der Charta ist. Ziel der Bestimmung in der Biomedizin-Konvention wie in der Charta ist schließlich, dass die Gewinnerzielung bei Organ- und Gewebehandel als solche, also insbesondere seine Kommerzialisierung, verboten werden soll, nicht aber Arzneimittel und Patente auf Gene.

5. Artikel 10

Es erscheint weiterhin wichtig, das Recht zur Kriegsdienstverweigerung als Bestandteil der Gewissensfreiheit in der Charta zu verankern.

6. Artikel 11

In Absatz 1 sollte es eingangs „Jeder“ statt „Jede Person“ lauten, um klarzustellen, dass das Recht auf freie Meinungsäußerung nicht nur natürlichen, sondern zudem juristischen Personen zusteht. Im Übrigen wird angeregt, eine allgemeine Bestimmung zu den juristischen Personen und sonstigen Vereinigungen aufzunehmen (siehe unten Ziffer 16).

Die derzeitige Regelung der Medien- und Informationsfreiheit in Absatz 2 erscheint nicht tragbar, insbesondere die Erwähnung des sehr auslegungsbedürftigen und missverständlichen Begriffes „Pluralismus“. Weiter wäre es wünschenswert, ausdrücklich ein Zensurverbot aufzunehmen. Artikel 11 Absatz 2 sollte daher wie folgt formuliert werden: „Presse, Rundfunk, Film und die übrige an die Allgemeinheit gerichtete Kommunikation sind frei und unabhängig. Eine Zensur findet nicht statt.“

In einem neuen Absatz 3 sollte die Freiheit der Kunst ausdrücklich erwähnt werden. Gerade im Bereich der Kunst, d.h. in Architektur, Musik, Bildender Kunst, dem Schauspiel sowie in Film und Rundfunk zeigt sich das spezifisch europäische Erbe. Ein entsprechender neuer Satz 3 könnte lauten: „Die Kunst ist frei.“

7. Artikel 12 Abs. 1

Zur Klarstellung und Präzisierung wird angeregt, hinter dem Passus „friedlich“ den Zusatz „ohne Waffen“ einzufügen, so dass die Vorschrift lauten könnte: „Jede Person hat das Recht, sich insbesondere im politischen, gewerkschaftlichen und staatsbürgerlichen Bereich frei und friedlich ohne Waffen mit anderen zu versammeln und sich frei mit anderen zusammenzuschließen.“

8. Artikel 13

Es ist unverständlich, dass nur die Freiheit der Forschung, nicht aber die Freiheit der Wissenschaft allgemein und der Freiheit der Lehre in den Text der Vorschrift aufgenommen worden ist. Daher wird folgende weiter gehende Formulierung empfohlen: „Wissenschaft, Forschung und Lehre sind frei.“

9. Artikel 15/Artikel 16

Die Berufsfreiheit und die unternehmerische Freiheit sollten den Unionsbürgerinnen- und -bürgern vorbehalten bleiben. Es erscheint nicht sinnvoll, diese Grundrechte auch Drittstaatsangehörigen zu öffnen, da dies faktisch zu einer personellen Ausweitung der den Unionsbürgern zukommenden Grundfreiheiten des EG-Vertrages führen würde. Zudem besteht die Gefahr, dass bestimmte Beschränkungen im EG-Vertrag und in den Abkommen mit Drittstaaten unterlaufen werden. Nur so wird man zudem dem Mandat von Köln gerecht, dass es auch Rechte geben soll, die nur für die Unionsbürger gelten.

10. Artikel 18

Der Wortlaut gibt die Position des Konvents, dass Artikel 18 kein individuell einklagbares Recht auf Asyl verbürgt, nicht hinreichend zweifelsfrei wieder. Daher empfiehlt sich folgende Formulierung: „Der Schutz politisch verfolgter Personen, die nicht der Union angehören, wird nach Maßgabe des Genfer Abkommens vom 28. Juni 1951 und des Protokolls vom 21. Januar 1967 über die Rechtsstellung von Flüchtlingen gewährt.“

11. Artikel 22

Es wird vorgeschlagen, in Artikel 22 einen neuen Absatz 1 einzufügen: „Frauen und Männer sind gleichberechtigt.“

Weiter erscheint es angebracht, in den „Erläuterungen“ zu Artikel 3 darauf hinzuweisen, dass die Beschneidung der weiblichen Genitalien eine gravierende Verletzung der körperlichen Unversehrtheit darstellt.

12. Artikel 23

In Absatz 2 empfiehlt sich eine Angleichung an die entsprechende Formulierung in dem UN-Übereinkommen über die Rechte des Kindes (Artikel 3 Abs. 1): „Bei allen Kinder betreffenden Maßnahmen öffentlicher oder privater Einrichtungen ist das Wohl des Kindes ein Gesichtspunkt, der vorrangig zu berücksichtigen ist.“

13. Artikel 32

Die Aufzählung in Absatz 1 nach den Worten „sozialen Diensten“ bezieht sich sinngemäß nicht auf „soziale Dienste“, sondern auf „soziale Sicherheit“, und müsste daher nach den Worten „soziale Sicherheit“ folgen. Im Übrigen ist die Aufzählung nicht abschließend, was mit dem Wort „insbesondere“ zum Ausdruck gebracht werden sollte. Außerdem ist das wichtige Risiko der Invalidität zu erwähnen.

Es erscheint notwendig, in Absatz 2 die Worte „nach Maßgabe des Gemeinschaftsrechts“ einzufügen. Das geltende Gemeinschaftsrecht enthält nämlich, vor allem im Hinblick auf Familienangehörige, Einschränkungen gegenüber dem formulierten Gleichbehandlungsgrundsatz, die allerdings zu kompliziert sind, um in die Chartavorschrift aufgenommen zu werden. Durch die Charta sollen in diesem Bereich keinesfalls finanzielle Lasten begründet werden, die derzeit nicht bestehen.

Darüber hinaus ist es zwingend erforderlich, das Wort „Wohnsitz“ durch das Wort „Beschäftigungsort“ zu ersetzen. Im Bereich der sozialen Sicherheit knüpft das Gemeinschaftsrecht an den „Beschäftigungsort“ (lex loci laboris) an. Nach alledem empfiehlt sich folgende Fassung des Absatzes 2: „Arbeitnehmer, die Angehörige eines Mitgliedstaates sind und ihren Beschäftigungsort in einem anderen Mitgliedstaat haben sowie ihre Familienangehörigen haben nach Maßgabe des Gemeinschaftsrechts Anspruch auf die gleichen Leistungen der sozialen Sicherheit, auf die gleichen sozialen Vergünstigungen und auf den gleichen Zugang zur Gesundheitsfürsorge wie die Angehörigen dieses Mitgliedstaates.“

14. Artikel 34

Der letzte Halbsatz „um den sozialen und territorialen Zusammenhalt der Union zu fördern“ sollte entfallen. Seine Übernahme aus Artikel 16 EGV in ein Grundrecht wirkt sinnentstellend.

15. Artikel 35

Die Formulierung des Artikels 35 sollte sich stärker an Artikel 6 und an Artikel 174 EGV orientieren. Damit soll vor allem vermieden werden, dass das bisher im EG-Vertrag verankerte Schutzniveau durch die Bezugnahme auf den völlig unbestimmten Begriff der „hohen Lebensqualität“ nivelliert werden könnte. Es wird daher folgende Formulierung vorgeschlagen: „Der Schutz und die Erhaltung der Umwelt sowie die Verbesserung ihrer Qualität werden zur Förderung einer nachhaltigen Entwicklung durch alle Politiken der Union auf hohem Niveau sichergestellt.“

16. Allgemeine Bestimmungen

Um Unklarheiten und Schwierigkeiten bei der Auslegung zu vermeiden, sollten in einer allgemeinen Bestimmung klargestellt werden, dass juristische Personen und sonstige Vereinigungen Träger von Grundrechten sein können. Es wird daher folgende Formulierung vorgeschlagen: „Die in der Charta aufgeführten Rechte und Freiheiten gelten auch für juristische Personen und für sonstige Vereinigungen mit Sitz in der Europäischen Union, soweit sie ihrem Wesen nach auf diese anwendbar sind.“

Bereits mit Schreiben vom 21. August 2000 habe ich mitgeteilt, dass der Schutz von Minderheiten ausdrücklich in der künftigen Charta Aufnahme finden muss. Dabei sollte allerdings die Formulierung so gewählt werden, dass die betroffenen Personen aus dem Minderheitenschutz keine Leistungsansprüche gegenüber der Europäischen Union herleiten könnten.

Lord Goldsmith
STATEMENT OF REASONS FOR PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO
CONVENT 45

Comments on Specific Articles

THE PREAMBLE

General: The Preamble should reflect the purpose of the Charter and should also be legally accurate. Point 7 in particular gives a false impression as to the purpose of the Charter. It is also appropriate to use the Preamble to help maintain the balance referred to in my letter of general comments - so the proposed Article 3a. The reasons for the individual changes are as follows:

Point 1:

Amend to:

“The peoples of Europe in developing an ever closer Union are resolved to share a peaceful future based on common values”

Reasons: The Praesidium text is not a necessary statement in the Preamble; it is more appropriate to a Constitution which this document is not. However, if something along these lines is to be included, the proposed amendment is a more accurate statement of the position; compare Preamble to Treaty of Amsterdam

Point 2:

Amend to:

“The Union is founded on the principles of liberty, democracy, respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms and the rule of law, principles which are common to all Member States”

Reason: this is the statement in Article 6(1) of the Treaty of Amsterdam. It is neither desirable nor within the powers of the Convention to amend the Treaty.

Point 3:

Amend to:

“The Union contributes to the maintenance of these principles while respecting the diversity of the cultures and traditions of the peoples of Europe as well as the national identities of the Member States and the organisation of their public authorities at national, regional and local levels; it seeks to ensure balanced, socially cohesive and sustainable development through the free movement of persons, goods, capital and services and the freedom of establishment.”

Reasons: To make the statement legally accurate; the Treaty does not provide for the development of common values. To add a reference here to social cohesion (a better expression in the English text than “solidarity”) and to add a reference to freedom of establishment.

New point 3a:

Add:

“The Union is committed to action for jobs, innovation, economic reform and social cohesion”

Reason: It is appropriate that the Charter should recognise explicitly the agenda of the Union as reflected in the Conclusions of the Feira Council para 19)

Point 4:

Amend to:

137

“At this stage in the Union’s development and in the light of changes in society, social progress, and scientific and technological developments, there is a need to consolidate in a Charter the fundamental rights and freedoms, including principles common to Member States, to make them more visible”

Reason: This is closer to the Cologne Conclusions which are our mandate. However, this formulation adds references to changes (as in the Praesidium draft) and introduces the concept of principles.

Point 5:

Amend to:

“This Charter reaffirms, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Community and the Union and the principles of subsidiarity, these rights, freedoms and principles and as they result from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights and taking account of the European Social Charter and the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers.”

Reason: To delete the reference to “in particular” as there is nothing else; to include a reference to principles. And to recognise the somewhat different status of the Social Charters in the exercise as recognised explicitly in the Cologne Conclusions which uses this different language to which this text is faithful.

Point 6a:

Add:

“The dignity of the person, from which all individual rights and freedoms flow, must be respected and protected.”

Reason: This concept appears best in the Preamble or as an introductory principle and not in a substantive article. This recognises its overriding importance as the justification from which all other rights flow.

Point 7:

Amend to:

“This Charter therefore sets out the rights, freedoms and principles which must be respected by the Union’s institutions and bodies, as well as by the Member States when they implement Union law so as to fulfil all the values set out above and the task of the Community

Reason: This is a more accurate statement of the purpose of the Charter. It is inappropriate to say that the Charter “guarantees” rights and freedoms especially when many of the provisions are in fact already guaranteed by national constitutions and laws as well as by the ECHR. Further it implies all that follows can be the subject of individual action in Court which cannot be stated to be the intention of the Charter.

INDIVIDUAL ARTICLES

The changes in the individual articles are to give effect to the points made in my letter of general comments. A number are therefore to align the text more closely with the corresponding ECHR articles: see eg Articles 2,7, 11, 12, 13,14, 17, 45. Others are to achieve a more consistent approach to setting certain economic and social rights as principles whose content is defined by national law and practice or by Community law where it exists; see eg Articles 24, 28,29, 33. The essential changes to the horizontal articles and other articles are also explained.

Article 1 : Dignity of the person

Reword as Introductory Principle:

“All fundamental rights of the individual flow from the dignity of the person and the equality of each and every person before the law”

It has previously been suggested that this reference should be moved to the Preamble. I consider that would be a better place for this important concept. I have serious reservations as to this remaining as a substantive provision where the content and definition of the right is legally uncertain. It is not a provision common to the constitutional traditions of all Members States.

Article 2 : Right to life

Amend to “Everyone’s right to life shall be protected by law.”

Reasons: The formulation of the right needs to be aligned with the ECHR, otherwise there is a risk of confusion about its meaning.

Article 3 : Right to the integrity of the person

Amend to:

“In the application of biology and medicine everyone has the right to respect of his or her physical and mental integrity in the conditions recognised by national law and practice. This includes respect for the following principles:

- respect for the informed consent of the patient subject to the limitations recognised by law
- prohibition of making the human body and its parts as such a source of financial gain
- prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.”

Reasons: This article is intended to cover aspects of bioethics which figure in the Council of Europe Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. However, there are difficulties in achieving that end because the Convention has not yet been ratified by the majority of Member States.

The drafting needs to recognise that we are at this intermediate stage of development in this field and focus therefore on those areas which are presently the subject of national laws whilst recognising the limitations and conditions of the Biomedicine Convention.

An additional but important problem is that the first paragraph has now been separated from the concept of bioethics, giving rise to an apparent right of potentially great width. That would be unacceptable.

There are also certain important drafting changes:

- The reference to eugenic practices has been deleted as the expression is too vague and how it is intended to apply to prenatal diagnosis is uncertain.
- It is important to include the words “as such” (which reflect the Biomedicine Convention) so as to prevent the sale of blood, organs, etc, but to allow for the development of, for example, pharmaceutical products from research on donated tissue.

Article 5(3): Trafficking

Comment: There is no difficulty accepting the principle in Article 5(3), but it is important to be able to point to an appropriate legal base so that the reader of the Charter can find out what is meant legally by the terms “trafficking” and “human beings” and what protection is available. The legal sources referred to in Convent 46 do not answer any of these questions and are in any case not part of EU law. This matter requires further discussion in the Convention.

Article 7 : Respect for private and family life

Amend to:

“Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his communications”

Reasons: Deleting the words “the confidentiality of” avoids narrowing the protection recognised by the Article

Article 8: Protection of personal data

Amend to:

“Everyone has the right to the protection of personal data concerning him in accordance with the provisions of Community law.”

Reasons: This area is covered by existing Community law, notably Directive 95/46/CE on Data Protection made under Article 286 TEC. There is a risk of confusion unless the legal basis for this particular right is identified. That short statement of the right is more in keeping with other formulations in the Charter and avoids misleading elaborations.

Article 9 : Right to marry and found a family

Comment: The essence of the right expressed here is clearly not that in the corresponding Article of the ECHR, which is limited to marriage between a man and a woman. It needs to be established that the legal drafting permits national laws to limit the right to marriage between a man and a woman, ie that doing so is not an impermissible interference with the essence of the right.

Article 11 : Freedom of expression and information

Delete paragraph (2)

Reasons: First, it is of course the case that the freedom of the press is already protected under Article 10(1) ECHR; it is one of the classic cases where the right has been repeatedly recognised; see eg Sunday Times v UK, Judgment of 26 April 1979, Series A No 30. So it is not necessary to single out the rights of this category of persons for special mention. But also it carries real risks. The clause suggests that the media should have greater rights of freedom of expression than other citizens. I cannot agree that this should be the case. Nor is it apparent what those additional rights should be. Such uncertainty is dangerous. For example, the clause is open to the interpretation that the freedom of the press should override other interests, such as the right of privacy (under Article 7 of the Charter), an argument which is strengthened by divorcing this particular freedom from the main body of Article 10 ECHR which would otherwise attract the limitations in Article 10(2) ECHR.

Second, it is not clear whether the reference to “due respect for pluralism and transparency” is supposed to limit the rights which the media have, or to justify what the extra rights broadcasters and newspapers are to have. Nor is it clear what this expression means. Transparency of what, for example?

Third, the reference to “freedom of information” is misplaced as it implies, at least in the English text, the wholly different area of the rights of citizens to obtain information from public bodies. To the extent this topic is to be dealt with in the Charter it is covered by proposed Article 40.

Article 12 : Freedom of assembly and of association

Delete second sentence.

Reasons: The second sentence is a statement having no place in a Charter of fundamental rights. It gives rise also to the risk that it could be used to undermine national controls on cross border party funding.

Article 13: Freedom of research

143

Delete.

Reasons: I do not see the need for this article nor could it be accepted without many qualifications.

As to the need for the article, the right to publish the results of research and the right of others to receive such information is protected already by Article 10 ECHR and therefore by intended Article 11 of the Charter: see case Hertel v Switzerland (59/1997/843/1049) - judgement of 25th August 1998. Articles 8 ECHR (Article 7 Charter - right of privacy) and 9 ECHR (Charter article 10 - freedom of thought) are also relevant. So there is no need to have a separate article as the rights which do exist in relation to research would already be recognized in the articles which are to be included.

The right as drafted in any event would need many qualifications: scientific research is in fact constrained - and rightly so - in many areas. For example, there are restrictions on research in the bioethical field (recognised by the Declaration of Helsinki and the Biomedicine Convention); and in legislation protecting animals. The formulation "scientific research shall be free of constraint" implies also no standards of control over research eg in the safety and quality of clinical trials (which is inconsistent with existing EU acquis in medicines licensing); or in the safeguarding of sourcing and use of materials to prevent the transmission of communicable diseases eg BSE or CJD. It also implies that there should be no licensing requirements or health and safety requirements. It even implies that States should take steps to ensure that there is the funding to carry out particular research.

One of the disadvantages of separating this right from other existing ECHR rights is that it removes the limitations which are to be found in the ECHR and the case law which supports it.

Article 14 : Right to education

144

Amend to:

“1. Everyone has the right to education and to have access to vocational and continuing training.”

“2. The freedom to found educational establishments with due respect for democratic principles and the right of parents to ensure the education and teaching of their children in conformity with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be guaranteed, in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of such freedom and right.”

“3. This right includes the right to receive free compulsory education.”

Reasons: This Article is a good illustration of the problems of divergence from the ECHR text. The second sentence of the first article (“This right includes the right to receive free compulsory education”) does not of course come from the ECHR. It may still be retained but it would be easier to put it into a separate paragraph (3) so that the horizontal article on convergence with the ECHR can distinguish between that right and the rest of the Article.

So far as the rest of the article is concerned, it should be made clear that this is otherwise the same rights as are contained in Article 2 to the First Protocol to the ECHR. This would require: (a) a clear horizontal article saying so (b) that the Commentary should make that fact clear and (c) the deletion of the word “pedagogical” in the list “religious, philosophical and pedagogical”. This word does not appear in Article 2 to the First Protocol to the ECHR which guarantees the right of parents to ensure teaching in conformity with “their own religious and philosophical convictions”. The word “philosophical” has been interpreted widely to include, for instance, convictions about the use of corporal punishment in schools (Campbell and Cosans v UK, Judgment of 25 February 1982, Series A, No 48). The addition of the word “pedagogical” is therefore either unnecessary or it is adding something even wider of uncertain width. For example, if a parent believes that formal education should start at the age of 4 (common in the UK) should that parent have the right to insist on this in a Member State where formal education does not start until the age of 6? Or again could this be taken to undermine systems of selection for primary or secondary education where parents are disappointed with the choice available to their children. It is necessary therefore to remove this additional word of uncertain application or purpose.

Article 15 : Freedom to choose an occupation

“1. Everyone has the right to choose freely the occupation which they wish to pursue in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.”

“2. Every citizen of the Union has the freedom to seek employment, to work, to exercise the right of establishment and to provide services in any Member State.”

“3. Nationals of third countries who are legally-entitled to work within the territory of a Member State are entitled to protection under the employment law of that Member State equivalent to that of citizens of the Union.”

Reasons: Article 15(1) does not recognize that there are many proper restrictions which need to be put on the practice of individual occupations so as, for example, to require appropriate professional or vocational qualifications and that there are certain legal restrictions eg that certain occupations, such as prostitution, may not be carried on or not carried on in a particular way. Some qualification to this apparently unlimited right is therefore appropriate. The formula used elsewhere “in accordance with Community and national law” would solve that problem.

The opening words “To earn a living” are unnecessarily restrictive and potentially discriminatory. Does the right not apply to women who choose to work although their husbands could support them? They would be better deleted.

Subparagraph (2): Art 49 TEC deals with the freedom to provide services and not their receipt.

Subparagraph (3): This is not acceptable as drafted as it goes beyond existing rights in apparently according rights to work to third party nationals merely on the basis of lawful residence in a Member State. This would apparently apply to those admitted to enter a Member State for purposes other than employment. Article 137(3) cited in the Commentary gives a power to the Council acting with unanimity to regulate working conditions for such persons but the power has not been exercised. I believe that the intention may have been to ensure equivalent protection under the employment law of those legally entitled to work to that for citizens of the EU. That was the tenor of the Commission's observations on this point at the last Convention meeting.

Notes:

- (1) Entitlement to work is determined on a State by State basis so it is appropriate to refer to individual States and not the Community as a whole.
- (2) The United Kingdom requires that the reference be to protection under the employment law of the Member State as the expression "working conditions" might be held to apply to certain tax credits which are related to working status but which are of the nature of benefits not necessarily accorded to non EU workers.

Article 16 : Freedom to conduct a business

Amend to:

"Freedom to conduct a business and the free movement of workers, goods, capital and services and the freedom of establishment in accordance with Community law shall be protected."

Reasons: I welcome this reference but believe it can be improved:

First, it would be very valuable to expand this reference to include the other economic freedoms which are at the heart of the Communities and are of enormous importance to many people in the Union whose jobs and livelihoods depend on them.

Secondly, the word “recognised” sits unhappily with the sort of word “protected” “guaranteed” “respected” etc used in relation to other rights. Freedom of enterprise is an important right which should attract similar protection.

Article 17 : Right to property

Amend to:

“Every natural or legal person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions”

Reasons: To reflect more closely the language in Article 1 of the First Protocol to the ECHR. This is an important provision in the ECHR which affects many areas of public and private life. It is encouraging that the Commentary says that this article corresponds to Article 1 of the First Protocol but no reason is given in the Commentary for the change of language other than a suggestion that this is to modernise the language. The language of the existing Article 1: “Every natural or legal person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions” is clear and direct and perfectly understandable to the modern citizen and therefore better than the proposed first sentence.

Of specific concern is that the first sentence would apparently rule out requiring property to be used for death duties or taxation of the words of the First Article.

As to the new subparagraph (2): “Intellectual property shall be protected.”, it is unnecessary in my view to single out this one category of property for special mention. Intellectual property constitutes “possessions” (French: “biens”) for the purposes of the First Protocol as one would expect: see Commission Decision in Smith Kline and French Laboratories v Netherlands (application 12633/87. Decisions and Reports Vol 66 p70).

148

Article 18 : Right to asylum

Amend to:

“The right to asylum, under the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees, shall be guaranteed in accordance with national law and with the Treaty establishing the European Community.”

Reasons: The UK would prefer that this Article should be deleted. It falls into a different category from all the other rights in the Charter in that it is not concerned with showing the rights which citizens and others lawfully residing within the Union should enjoy. Asylum is at the moment an essentially national matter. When Community competence is exercised under Article 63 TEC it will be in accordance with the conditions in that Article which include specific reference to the Geneva Convention. So there is no real need for the Charter to say what is already covered by the Treaty. However, if there is a consensus in favour of including something in the Charter on this sensitive topic, the drafting must be very precise in stating the existing position as accepted by the Member States. I have suggested a small reformulation of the text to clarify and limit the reference to source of the right.

Article 19 : Protection in the event of removal, expulsion or extradition

Amend to:

“No one may be removed, expelled or extradited to a State where he would be subjected to torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment”

Reasons:

The first paragraph is based on Article 4 of the 4th Protocol to the ECHR. But not all Member States have ratified this Protocol. Consistently with the approach taken on other Articles this cannot therefore be taken as a common right to be included in the Charter.

The second paragraph is said to be based on ECHR jurisprudence. However, it goes beyond that jurisprudence in two respects:

First, the ECtHR has not said that it is the threat of the death penalty alone which should prevent extradition; it is where there is a real risk of associated inhuman or degrading treatment eg through the application of long “death row” waits. This is the basis of the Soering decision referred to in the commentary. Therefore, countries may continue, in accordance with their international obligations, to extradite to other countries where this risk does not apply.

Second, in any event, the threshold is too low. The jurisprudence would be better reflected by replacing the word “could” (which connotes a mere possibility - and one unconnected with the offence in question) with “would”.

Article 21 : Equality and non-discrimination

Amend to:

21(1) “Any discrimination based on sex, racial or ethnic origin, religion or belief, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited to the extent that the Council has, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, so provided”.

21(2) “The enjoyment of those rights and freedoms in this Charter which are guaranteed by the ECHR shall be secured without discrimination on any ground such as sex, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status”.

21(3) “Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, and without prejudice to the special provisions of those Treaties, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.”

150

Reasons: Article 21(1) is unacceptable. It would constitute a new and open-ended prohibition on all discrimination in all fields. Whilst this may be a desirable political objective in the long run, such a statement would go beyond existing rights and would constitute a misleading promise. Moreover, such rights unless introduced in a careful and measured way risk imposing very substantial financial burdens. As evidence of the fact that this goes beyond existing law is the fact that there is a proposal from the Council of Europe for a more open-ended non-discrimination article (Protocol 12) but this has not been accepted by a number of the EU Member States. They cannot be expected to accept in the Charter what they are not prepared to accept in the Council of Europe.

The Commentary indicates that the source of this article is Article 13 TEC and Article 14 ECHR. Neither provision justifies the proposed article. As for Article 13 TEC this empowers the Council to take action in a closed list of cases. Proposals are being made but it is not possible to say that there are existing prohibitions in all areas. As for Article 14 ECHR it provides an open-ended list but its ambit is confined to the freedoms and rights given under the Charter. This is therefore overall an area where there may be objectives and aspirations but at this moment the Charter cannot anticipate the development of an open-ended across the board non-discrimination provision covering all areas of activity. What is more the present formulation would apparently by a side-wind grant to all nationals the rights which are restricted under the Treaty to nationals of Member States.

Article 24 : Integration of persons with disabilities

Amend to:

“The Union recognises and respects the right of persons with disabilities to benefit from measures designed to ensure their independence, social and occupational integration and participation in the life of the community”

Reasons: to reflect the article more clearly as a principle rather than a subjective right.

Article 25 : Workers right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Delete.

Reasons: The United Kingdom cannot accept this right. Its legislation contains no general right of consultation and information such as is contained in this Article but believes this to be a matter to be regulated by best practice save in the few specific cases where a right is granted by legislation. Nor is there any general EC legislation creating such a right.

As this is not therefore a right which is recognised in all the Member States it is not right, in the UK's view, to insist on the inclusion of something which is not a general and common right.

Article 26 : Right of collective bargaining and action

Amend to:

“Employers and workers are free to negotiate and conclude collective agreements, and in the event of conflict between them on matters which impact on them directly, to take collective action in accordance with national laws governing the exercise of such freedoms.”

Reasons: The reference to a “right” here creates the appearance of an obligation on the other party to negotiate ie to create a compulsory negotiating right which is not generally recognised in all countries.

The problem could, however, be solved by expressing this Article more consistently as a principle and as a freedom.

152

Article 28 : Protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

Amend to:

“Workers are protected in the event of unfair dismissal subject to the conditions laid down by national law and practice.”

Reasons: This should be expressed as a principle tied to implementation by national law:

Article 29 : Fair and just working conditions

Amend to:

“(1) The provision of safe and healthy working conditions shall be protected by law.”

“(2) In general workers are entitled to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to annual period of paid leave in accordance with Community and national law and practice”

Reasons: First, this is an article which needs to be expressed as a principle implemented by Community and national law.

Second, the second paragraph is too unqualified and does not recognise for example, specific limitations and exceptions.

Article 30 : Protection of young people at work

Amend to:

“(1) The minimum age of admission to employment must generally not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age, except where Community or national law allow for rules that are more favourable to children and young people or provide derogations.

(2) [As existing Praesidium text]

Reasons: The first sentence is new and might be taken to contradict what follows. It is unnecessary as what follows defines more clearly what the limits on the employment of young persons are.

It desirable also to identify the provenance of the rules which may allow for different treatment.

Article 31 : Reconciling family and professional life

Amend to:

“(1) The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection in accordance with national laws and practices.

(2) With a view to reconciling work and family responsibilities and protecting, where necessary, the health and safety of pregnant workers, protection from dismissal on grounds of pregnancy, and maternity leave and parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child, are available in accordance Community law and national law and practice.”

Reasons: This Article risks offering a lot more than it is capable of delivering and thereby creating disappointment and dashed expectations. It should therefore be adjusted to provide more realistic promises.

Article 32 : Social security and social assistance

154

Amend to:

(1) The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to social security benefits providing protection in such events as maternity, illness, industrial accidents, dependency, old age or loss of employment, subject to conditions laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.

(2) Workers who are nationals of a Member State, and members of their families, residing in another Member State have the right to the same social security benefits, social advantages and access to health care as nationals of that State.

(3) The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to social assistance, subject to conditions laid down by Community law and national law and practice.

Reasons: Social security and assistance are matters essentially for national competence. This Article must therefore operate as it is drafted, as a principle, which recognises national differences. It cannot therefore be prescriptive about the events in which such benefits are to be available. Nor can the Charter be prescriptive about the level of benefits or open this question up to judicial interpretation rather than to the decision of those elected by the democratic choice of the people to govern.

Further the reference to “social services” for the first time is unacceptable. At least in the United Kingdom it refers to a range of services which are not provided by central government but by local authorities in accordance with the resources available to them.

Article 33 : Health care

Amend to:

155

“Provision shall be made for access to medical care and health protection in the circumstances established by national legislation and practice”

Reasons: to reword as a principle.

Article 34 : Access to services of general economic interest

Amend to:

“The Union recognises the important place occupied by services of general economic interest and their role in promoting social and territorial cohesion subject to the provisions of the Treaty establishing the European Community.”

Reasons: To align with the Treaty. This Article was the subject of much debate at the last meeting of the Convention. The draft in Convent 45 goes beyond Article 16 TEC.

Article 35 : Environmental protection

Amend to:

“Environmental protection requirements must be integrated into the definition and implementation of all Community policies, in particular with a view to promoting sustainable development.”

Reasons: The Praesidium text is too strong a statement of the position as the Articles of the Treaty do not go so far as to “ensure” the protection of the environment. We should follow more closely Article 6 TEC.

There would be no objection, if desired, to adding a reference to Article 174 TEC by adding “The Community’s policy on the environment is required to contribute towards the following objectives: the protection, preservation and improvement of the quality of the environment, the protection of human health, the prudent and rational use of natural resources and the promotion of measures at international level to deal with regional or world-wide environmental problems.”

Article 36 : Consumer protection

Amend to:

“In order to promote the interests of consumers and to ensure a high level of consumer protection, the Community shall contribute to protecting the health, safety and economic interests of consumers.”

Reasons: The statement that Union policies “shall ensure” is too strong and promises what cannot be delivered. We should follow more closely Article 153.

Article 43 : Freedom of movement and of residence

Amend to:

“Every citizen of the Union, and any other persons to whom the Council accords such rights pursuant to the powers in the TEC and in accordance with the conditions laid down, has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.”

Reasons: The second paragraph does not seem a very elegant way of anticipating rights which may be granted in the future by virtue of the exercise of the powers in Articles 62(3) and 63(4) TEC.

Article 45 Right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial, and

Article 46 Presumption of innocence and right of defence

Amend to:

“(x) Everyone whose directly enforceable rights and freedoms granted under Community law are violated by the Institutions or bodies of the Union or by Member States exclusively when implementing Union law has the right to an effective remedy before a Court.”

In such proceedings the rights guaranteed by [Article 45(2)] shall apply notwithstanding the character of such proceedings.”

(y) Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing in determining his or her civil rights and obligations. Hearings shall be by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.”

Reasons: These Articles divide into two parts:

First, a substantive right to effective recourse to a tribunal where rights or freedoms are violated. This is contained in Article 45 (1).

Second, the essentially procedural guarantees of fair trial. These are contained in Article 45(2) and (3) and 46

Substantive right

This right is said to be based on Article 13 of the ECHR and on ECJ jurisprudence.

So far as Article 13 ECHR is concerned, in two important areas, the proposed Article goes significantly further. First, Article 13 ECHR applies only to the rights and freedoms set out in the ECHR alone. It does not therefore apply to any rights which do not derive from the Convention eg rights provided by a national Statute for which special provision may be made for the remedy. Secondly, the requirement is that there should be an effective remedy before a national authority; it is not essential that it should be before a Judge. The jurisprudence of the ECtHR shows that there are cases in which an effective remedy may be provided even though it is not before a judge (see eg Klass v FRG Series A No28: remedy before a Parliamentary Commission in surveillance cases held sufficient).

But the Praesidium have suggested that this is appropriate because of ECJ jurisprudence eg Johnston. However, that jurisprudence has no application in purely domestic matters but only applies where there is a contravention of enforceable legal rights under a directly effective Community provision (see eg Opinion of AG Tesaro in Factortame No 1 C-213/89 [1990] ECR I-2433 . The proposed Article however goes beyond this area. It may be said that as the Charter is only intended to apply to Union Institutions and Member States when implementing Union law this is what is intended. However, this is not clear from the Article which appears to have general application.

The result is an article whose breadth cannot be justified by the source of law on which it is said to be based.

The solution is to redraft this part of the Article to make it clear that it only applies in the cases where ECJ jurisprudence applies.

Procedural Guarantees

Article 6 of the ECHR is one of the most widely used rights in the whole of the ECHR. It is in daily use in Courts and Tribunals throughout the Union and is constantly considered by judges and lawyers. Any changes from its text must therefore be very anxiously considered. Although the UK would have preferred not to split its provisions between two articles (45 and 46) we are prepared to accept that the rights in Article 6(3) ECHR are dealt with in Article 46 provided there is a strong horizontal article making it clear that this is the same right as in the ECHR

Part of the problem with this Article is that it does not distinguish between domestic proceedings and purely Community matters.

In so far as the Article appears to deal with domestic proceedings, it is unacceptable that there should be any gloss on the Article 6 guarantees. There is a wealth of jurisprudence of the ECtHR and the Commission, interpreting the nature of the guarantees which people are entitled to enjoy in relation to the justice system. Member States have organised their laws and systems to comply with those requirements. It is unreasonable to attempt to rewrite these guarantees. So far therefore as domestic proceedings are concerned, there are a number of points:

- The Article 6 guarantees only apply to civil and criminal proceedings although these have been given a wide and autonomous interpretation by the ECtHR (see eg. Engel v Netherlands Series A No 22, Konig v FRG Series A No27) There remain other cases where these guarantees do not apply eg [certain administrative proceedings]. Those Member States which operate such systems cannot be expected to change them because of the Charter nor subscribe to a Charter which misrepresents the position under domestic law. The first sentence of Article 45(2) must therefore be corrected.
- The second sentence of Article 45(2) relates to legal representation. Outside the criminal law, the right to legal representation is not always essential So this would be creating a new right. Moreover the language appears to create a positive obligation to provide the resources for someone who does not possess them, thus creating new financial obligations.
- Article 45(3) both reduces the protection of criminal defendant and produces new financial obligations which are not acceptable in other cases. The position as to criminal proceedings under the ECHR is clear because it is provided expressly by ECHR Article 6(3) a person should be given legal assistance free “when the interests of justice so require.” This has been interpreted as requiring legal aid to be provided for all but the simplest criminal cases. This Article therefore risks reducing the protection for criminal defendants. So far as other proceedings are concerned, the ECJ jurisprudence (Airey, Series A No3) requires that legal aid be provided where a person cannot effectively plead his case himself. The test proposed in this article is not the same. The provision of legal aid carries with it enormous budgetary implications. The extent of this right should in domestic cases be left to ECHR jurisprudence

It is said however, that in one respect the ECJ case law has gone further in allowing that the guarantees of Article 6 should apply to all proceedings in Community law even if administrative. If there is an extension, it only applies where proceedings in Community matters are concerned. We would not object therefore to the inclusion of the following sentence at the end of the new Article 45(1) we have proposed above:

“In such proceedings the rights guaranteed by [Article 45(2)] shall apply notwithstanding the character of such proceedings.”

Article 47 (3) : The severity of penalties shall be proportional to the gravity of the criminal offence.

Delete Paragraph 3.

Reasons: It is not acceptable to suggest that the ECJ should have the power to judge the appropriateness of sentences passed in domestic courts. This paragraph is therefore unacceptable and should be deleted.

Article 50 : Scope of guaranteed rights

Amend to:

“1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for in accordance with the law. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest being pursued by the Union, other legitimate interests in a democratic society or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.”

“2. The rights in Articles [here will be set out all the articles which cover the TEC/TEU field] have the same scope and meaning as the corresponding rights guaranteed under the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union and shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.”

“3. The rights in Articles [here will be set out all the articles which cover the ECHR field] have the same scope and meaning and are subject to the same permissible limitations as the corresponding rights guaranteed under the ECHR. These rights [ie the ones which correspond to the ECHR rights] apply to a Member State only to the extent to which it has consented to be bound in relation to that Convention and its protocols and subject to any reservations or derogations in force for that Member State.”

Reasons:

As explained in my letter of general comments the UK regards it as unacceptable that there be a lack of consistency between the rights in the Charter and the corresponding rights under the ECHR. The strong conviction has repeatedly been expressed in the Convention of the risks of creating a divergence from those rights or of creating the risk of uncertainty in those rights. These are the rights (liberty, security, freedom of thought and expression, of assembly, of property and of respect for private life etc) which are enjoyed by all persons within the EU and which are the bedrock of our democratic and free societies. We believe that we would be doing a grave disservice to the citizens of Europe if we created confusion and uncertainty about the freedoms which they are to enjoy. We believe that this would be the consequence of appearing to create a parallel and competing system of human rights protection in the areas of the freedoms covered by the ECHR. Such confusion would provide excuses for administrators and work for lawyers but no protection for citizens. The President of the European Court of Human Rights in a speech on 7 March 2000 noted that “the Court’s main concern in the context of this discussion is to avoid a situation in which there are alternative, competing and potentially conflicting systems of human rights protection both within the Union and in the greater Europe. The duplication of protection systems runs the risk of weakening the overall protection offered and undermining legal certainty in this field.” It is worth recalling in this context that legal certainty is itself an essential principle of Community law: see eg Germany v Commission 44/81 [1982] ECR 1855. Nor can Member States be expected to see a situation in which the Charter would impose different obligations of uncertain ambit in the field already covered by the obligations they have accepted under the ECHR.

As our purpose is to make clear what existing rights are, our starting point must be what are the existing common rights in this area. The position here we believe is clear: in the field of rights covered by the ECHR it is the rights in that Convention which are the fundamental rights to be respected by the Union institutions and not different rights. Thus Article 6(2) of the Treaty of Amsterdam demands that the Union “shall respect fundamental rights, as guaranteed by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms”. It does not suggest that the Union should respect “similar” rights but the same rights. This is clear also from the jurisprudence of the ECJ; see for example the statement of AG Jacobs in the Bosphorus Case (1996 ECR I - 3953) “...for practical purposes the Convention can be regarded as a part of Community law and can be invoked as such both in this Court and in national courts where Community laws are in issue.” This is a logical and satisfactory position: each and every Member State has agreed to be bound by the provisions of the ECHR and so all citizens are entitled to the protection of those rights against the Member States. Neither the Union nor the Communities are parties to the European Convention but it is logical and right that they should be subject to the same constraints when acting within their field of competence as the Member States are when acting within theirs.

We believe that it is essential that the Charter should make clear that the rights which cover the same area as the ECHR rights are the same rights. There are, as has previously been discussed, different methods of achieving this. The UK preference would have been for a clear definition of rights which provided a clear definition in relation to each right eg that it was the right guaranteed by such and such an article of the ECHR. I am prepared to consider, however, an alternative way of achieving this clarity of definition by an unambiguous and strong horizontal article and by ensuring that the wording of the Article in question, if not identical to the ECHR article, does not stray too

As to the necessary horizontal article the proposed Article 50(3) requires amendment to make it acceptable.

First, it uses the expression “similar” rather than “same”. This is a very important difference which defeats the objective of the clause which is to maintain consistency between the rights in the ECHR and the Charter and not to create merely similarity. Secondly, even with the change to the word “same” we consider that the formulation does not in any event achieve the desired effect. The reason is that, given the way that the Charter has been drawn up, there is no way of telling whether the “Charter affords greater or more extensive protection.” as indicated by the final words other than by interpreting the words of the respective articles. Where those words are different from the ECHR article it will be argued that the Charter must therefore have been intending to afford greater or more extensive protection. In other words, Article 50(3) will have no effect except in the case where the words of the Article is identical to that of the ECHR.

Further, the reference to “competent legislative authority” in the first sentence does not allow for the different legal traditions of those countries where limitations may derive from the common law.

Saving for existing reservations. There is a further important technical issue. The majority of Member States have lodged reservations or derogations in relation to specific aspects of the ECHR. For example, a number of Member States have registered reservations in relation to Article 2 of the First Protocol (education): It is unreasonable to expect a Member State to agree to a Charter which did not recognise the reservations it had made under the ECHR on the same matter. Equally it would be undesirable to take the lowest common denominator to apply to the Union institutions. It is proposed therefore to allow the continued application of the appropriate reservation or derogation but only in so far as concerns that Member State.

Article 51 : Level of protection

164

As the United Kingdom does not have a written constitution, we would prefer the final words to be amended to, or add a reference to, “the law of the Member States”

EU CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS

1. I thank the Praesidium for the latest draft of the Charter (Convent 45), which I have studied closely.
2. The UK Government's goal remains successful adoption of the Charter at Nice. The latest draft is in some respects a step forward. I welcome this. But there remains a long way to go before we have a text to which the UK and - I suspect - several others could subscribe.
3. You asked for general comments on the text. I have four. Each entails changes which are in our view necessary to make the Charter acceptable and bring it into line with the mandate of the Cologne European Council:
 - (i) The text must make clear that the civil and political rights derived from the ECHR are the same as those in the ECHR. The current text fails to achieve this. Unless corrected, this risks dangerous legal confusion. We would be doing a grave disservice to the citizens of Europe if we were to create uncertainty about the freedoms which they enjoy. Such uncertainty would provide work for lawyers and excuses for administrators, but no help for citizens.

There are a number of solutions. My preference remains for a two-part (A/B) approach throughout the Charter, under which each right is accompanied by a statement clearly defining the right and specifying the instrument from which it derives.

But there is an alternative approach which I would be willing to consider, as follows. First, there must be a stronger and unambiguous horizontal article making clear that the rights concerned have exactly the same scope and meaning, and are subject to the same limitations, as the corresponding right in the ECHR. The proposed article 50(3) does not achieve that end: it says the rights are "similar" rather than the "same" and the final phrase deprives the article of most of its benefit by leaving it to interpretation which articles are intended to give greater protection. Second, we must deal with significant deviation from the language used to describe each of the relevant rights in the Charter by bringing this into line with the language used in the relevant article of the ECHR. Third, the text must make clear that the rights apply to a Member State only to the extent to which they have consented to be bound by the ECHR and subject to any derogations or reservations.

- (ii) The text must not go beyond existing rights. The current text still seeks to introduce "new " rights which do not appear in either the European Convention of Human Rights or the European Union treaties, or in the national law or constitutions of all Member States. This was not what Heads of State and Government agreed at Cologne. There can be no proper consensus among member states on what such new rights should be. Nor is the Convention the right place to seek to invent them. Trying to do so will simply cause confusion and delay, and discredit the Charter and the Union.
- (iii) It must deal with social and economic issues differently and correctly. The text must recognise that social and economic rights are different in nature from civil and political rights, though this does not mean they are inferior; that these rights essentially take the form of principles, which will be respected and recognised by the Union's institutions and Member States when implementing Community law; that these principles in themselves do not create justiciable rights but the national or Community law through which they are implemented may do so; and that they are recognised and given effect in different ways and to different extents by different Member States.

This problem too can be fixed relatively easily, through new horizontal articles, greater clarity in the drafting of the individual articles, and ensuring consistency between the articles (eg the formula “The Union recognises and respects” and the phrase making clear that the content is in accordance with Community law where it exists and national law and practice should be used more consistently in relation to these articles).

- (iv) It must maintain balance between the various rights it proclaims and between these and the Union's other objectives. The Charter must avoid creating a new or different hierarchy of rights. It must permit legislators and courts to strike a proper balance between the various rights in the Charter; and between other objectives of the Union. For example, it is important that the Charter cannot be interpreted as having the effect of changing the task of the Community (Article 2 TEC), undermining the four freedoms of the Single Market, or affecting the political and economic decisions taken at the Lisbon and Feira European Councils. The text, including the Preamble, must therefore reflect these various objectives fully.

4. I hope that these four points will attract broad support from other Member States. Several have already made them forcefully in the Convention meetings. I hope therefore that they can be properly reflected in the next draft of the Charter. In order to facilitate this, I will shortly be circulating amendments illustrating how the necessary changes could be made, together with a commentary on each proposed change.

Yours sincerely,

Lord Goldsmith QC

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int*Brussels, 28 July 2000*(OR: fr)*London: 23 August 2000*CHARTE 4422/00*CONVENT 45
SHOWING LORD
GOLDSMITH'S
PROPOSED CHANGES*PRESIDENCY NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Complete text of the Charter proposed by the Praesidium

The Members of the Convention will find below the complete text of the Charter proposed by the Praesidium in the light of discussions in the Convention. Members may forward their general comments on this draft, by 1 September 2000, to the following address:

Jean-Paul.Jacque@consilium.eu.int,

indicating:

- "for the attention of Mr Jansson" (for the representatives of the national Parliaments)
- "for the attention of Mr Mendez de Vigo" (for the members of the European Parliament delegation)
- "for the attention of Mr Braibant" (for the personal representatives).

The Secretariat will forward these comments to the relevant addressee.

PREAMBLE

1. The peoples of Europe in developing have established an ever closer Union between them and are resolved to share a peaceful future based on common values.
2. The Union is founded on the indivisible, universal principles of liberty, democracy, respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms the dignity of men and women, freedom, equality and solidarity; it is based on the principle of democracy and the rule of law, principles which are common to all Member States.
3. ~~3.~~ The Union contributes to the maintenance development of these principles common values while respecting the diversity of the cultures and traditions of the peoples of Europe as well as the national identities of the Member States and the organisation of their public authorities at national, regional and local levels; it seeks to ensures balanced, socially cohesive and sustainable development through the free movement of persons, goods, capital and services and the freedom of establishment..
- 3a The Union is committed to action for jobs, innovation, economic reform and social cohesion.
4. At this stage in the Union's development and In adopting this Charter the Union intends to enhance the protection of fundamental rights in the light of changes in society, social progress and scientific and technological developments. there is a need to consolidate in a Charter the fundamental rights and freedoms, including principles common to Member States, to by make ing them these rights more visible.
5. This Charter reaffirms, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Community and the Union and the principles of subsidiarity, these rights, freedoms and principles and as they result, in particular, from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights and taking account of the European Social Charters and the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers. adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe and the ~~ease law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights.~~

6. Enjoyment of these rights entails responsibilities and duties with regard to other persons, to the human community and to future generations.

6a ~~The dignity of the person, from which all individual rights and freedoms flow, must be respected and protected.~~

~~[or as specific introductory principle for Chapter 1 – see below]~~

7. ~~7.—~~This Charter therefore sets out the rights, freedoms and principles which must be respected by the Union's institutions and bodies, as well as by the Member States when they implement Union law so as to fulfil all the values set out above and the task of the Community.

~~Each person is therefore guaranteed the rights and freedoms set out hereafter.~~

CHAPTER I. DIGNITYArticle 1. Dignity of the person*Introductory Principle

CHAPTER VII. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 49. Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. They shall therefore respect the rights, observe the principles and promote the application thereof in accordance with their respective powers.
2. This Charter does not establish any new power or task for the Community or the Union, or modify powers and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Article 50. Scope of guaranteed rights

1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for ~~in accordance with the law by the competent legislative authority~~. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest being pursued by the Union, other legitimate interests in a democratic society or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.

2. The rights in Articles [here will be set out all the articles which cover the TEC/TEU field] ~~Rights recognised by this Charter which are based on~~ have the same scope and meaning as the corresponding rights guaranteed under the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union and shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.

3. The rights in Articles [here will be set out all the articles which cover the ECHR field] have the same scope and meaning and are subject to the same permissible limitations as the corresponding rights guaranteed under the ECHR ~~Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be similar to those conferred on them by the said Convention unless this Charter affords greater or more extensive protection.~~

These rights [ie the ones which correspond to the ECHR rights] apply to a Member State only to the extent to which it has consented to be bound in relation to that Convention and its protocols and subject to any reservations or derogations in force for that Member State.

Article 51. Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or adversely affecting human rights and fundamental freedoms as recognised, in their respective fields of application, by international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and by the law of Member States. ~~the Member States' constitutions.~~

Article 52. Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for herein.

HERZOG
Allemagne
Berlin, le août 2000

Position

sur le projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne du 28 juillet 2000

- I. Le texte complet proposé par le Présidium (CONVENT 45) peut être approuvé.
- II. Les améliorations suivantes devraient encore être apportées :

1. Préambule, paragraphe 2

Au lieu la "dignité des hommes et des femmes", il est suggéré de parler de la "dignité de la personne humaine". En effet, la référence à la "dignité des hommes et des femmes" n'apparaît en tout état de cause linguistiquement pas heureuse en allemand et, située à cet endroit important, prêterait peut-être le flanc à des critiques de l'opinion publique. La reformulation proposée correspond à l'article 1. L'égalité des droits entre les hommes et les femmes est régie par des articles ultérieurs.

2. Préambule, paragraphe 3

Il apparaît souhaitable de renoncer au dernier membre de phrase du paragraphe 3, parce que le lien entre la libre circulation des personnes, des biens, des capitaux et des services et la garantie d'un développement équilibré et durable est équivoque.

3. Art. 3

Il est proposé de rédiger le troisième tiret du paragraphe 2 comme suit : "interdiction de faire du corps humain et de ses parties en tant que tels une source de profit".

Cette rédaction devrait être choisie pour coïncider avec l'article 21 de la convention sur la biomédecine, qui est la base de la formulation de la Charte. La suppression des termes "en tant que telles" pourrait conduire à de mauvaises interprétations selon lesquelles un changement concret serait recherché. Les termes "en tant que telles" sont surtout considérés comme importants pour la brevetabilité.

4. Art. 11

Il est suggéré de supprimer le terme "transparence" au paragraphe 2 concernant la liberté des médias et d'information. En effet, sa signification n'est pas claire et son maintien pourrait conduire à une incertitude juridique.

5. Art. 13

Il paraît souhaitable de mentionner aussi la liberté des sciences, de telle sorte que l'article s'établirait comme suit : "les sciences et la recherche scientifique sont libres":

6. Art. 20

Il est suggéré de modifier la formulation actuelle "toutes les personnes, hommes et femmes,...". Cette formulation est linguistiquement maladroite et est également malheureuse, entre autres parce qu'elle soulève la question de l'égalité des enfants. Elle mélange le principe général de l'égalité avec l'aspect spécifique de l'égalité des droits entre hommes et femmes, qu'il vaudrait mieux séparer. La rédaction suivante est suggérée :

„(1) Toutes les personnes sont égales devant la loi.

(2) les hommes et les femmes sont égaux en droits.“

Le dernier alinéa pourrait aussi être intégré à l'article 22 sous la forme d'un paragraphe 1.

7. Art. 22

Rédactionnellement, il est tout indiqué de parler d' "égalité de traitement" dans le titre, puisque l'article dans sa rédaction actuelle ne traite que de cette question.

8. Art. 23

Rédactionnellement, il est tout indiqué de conformer le paragraphe 2 au texte de l'article 3 paragraphe 1 de la convention des Nations Unies sur les enfants sur lequel il s'appuie : "Dans toutes les décisions qui concernent les enfants, qu'elles soient le fait des institutions publiques ou privées, l'intérêt supérieur de l'enfant doit être une considération primordiale ".

195

La définition de l'enfant dans la convention devrait être autant que possible mentionnée dans l'explication, eu égard également à l'article 30.

9. Art. 25

Il est proposé de commencer l'article par les termes "les travailleurs ou leurs représentants" au lieu des termes "les travailleurs et leurs représentants". La formulation proposée tend à éviter de devoir toujours informer les travailleurs directement ainsi que leurs représentants, ce qui ne serait pas conforme au droit secondaire. La formulation proposée correspond à l'article 21 de la Charte sociale révisée et aux directives 98/59/CEE et 77/187/CEE.

Il est par ailleurs suggéré d'introduire, conformément à la distinction opérée dans la directive 77/187/CEE, les mots "ou exploitations" après "entreprises".

11. Art. 27

Il conviendrait d'étudier la possibilité d'introduire à nouveau le terme "gratuitement". Ceci serait conforme à l'article 1 de la Charte sociale et au paragraphe 6 de la Charte communautaire. L'absence de ce terme fait perdre à cet article beaucoup de sa substance.

12. Art. 30

L'emploi du terme "enfants" à l'article 23 et à l'article 30 paragraphe 1 première phrase et du terme "jeunes" à l'article 30 paragraphe 1 phrase 2 et paragraphe 2 pose rédactionnellement un problème de délimitation différente des deux expressions.

13. Art. 32 paragraphe 1

L'énumération après les mots "services sociaux" est source de difficultés. Elle n'est pas exhaustive, ce qui pourrait être explicité par le terme "notamment". Elle ne se réfère pas en substance aux services sociaux mais à la sécurité sociale et devrait de ce fait être placée après les mots "sécurité sociale". Enfin, elle ne mentionne entre autres pas le risque important de l'invalidité.

Pour ces raisons, la rédaction suivante apparaît souhaitable : " L'Union reconnaît et respecte le droit d'accès aux prestations de sécurité sociale assurant notamment une protection en cas de maternité, de maladie, d'invalidité, d'accident du travail, de dépendance ou de vieillesse et en cas de perte d'emploi, ainsi qu'aux services sociaux, selon les modalités établies par le droit communautaire et les législations et pratiques nationales."

14. Art. 32 paragraphe 2

Il est proposé d'introduire l'expression "selon les modalités établies par le droit communautaire". L'introduction de la formule "selon les modalités établies par le droit communautaire" est nécessaire parce que le droit communautaire en vigueur, eu égard notamment aux membres d'une même famille, contient des restrictions par rapport au principe formulé d'égalité de traitement qui sont trop compliquées pour être intégrées dans le texte. Il s'agit d'une demande prioritaire car la Charte ne doit créer dans ce domaine aucune charge financière n'existant pas actuellement. Les paragraphes 1 et 3 de cet article contiennent aussi une référence au droit communautaire.

Il est par ailleurs suggéré de remplacer le terme "résident" par le terme "employés". En effet, le droit communautaire (règlement 1408/71, règlement 1612/68) se réfère toujours, dans le domaine de la sécurité sociale, au lieu d'emploi au lieu d'emploi (lex loci laboris). Selon le droit communautaire, le travailleur est toujours soumis à la législation du lieu d'emploi. Ceci est approprié puisque le travailleur règle ses contributions et ses taxes dans le pays où il est employé. Cette règle est également valable dans le cas où, comme par exemple pour les travailleurs transfrontaliers, les lieux de résidence et d'emploi sont distincts. Dans le cas contraire, l'Etat de résidence devrait verser des prestations sans avoir perçu les contributions et taxes correspondantes.

Il en résulte dans l'ensemble la rédaction suivante : "(2) les travailleurs ressortissants d'un Etat membre et employés dans un autre Etat membre, ainsi que les membres de leur famille, ont droit selon les modalités établies par le droit communautaire aux mêmes prestations de sécurité sociale, aux mêmes avantages sociaux et à un même accès aux soins de santé que les ressortissants de cet Etat."

15. Art. 34

Le dernier membre de phrase à caractère uniquement programmatique n'a pas sa place dans le contexte de l'accès non discriminatoire.

16. Art. 35

Il apparaît souhaitable de mieux calquer cet article sur l'article 6 TCE sur lequel repose le texte de la Charte, c'est-à-dire de supprimer l'expression "en tenant compte du principe du développement durable" et d'ajouter à la fin de l'article "en particulier afin de promouvoir le développement durable".

197

HIRSCH BALLIN
31 augustus 2000

Aan het presidium van de Conventie
Ter attentie van de heer Jansson

Geachte collega,

1. Graag wens ik het presidium geluk met de herziening van de tekst van het Handvest. Er ligt nu een goed geredigeerde, uitgebalanceerde tekst voor die op veel punten redelijke oplossingen bevat. Voor de beide kamers van het Nederlandse parlement is de relatie met het Europese Verdrag tot bescherming van de Rechten van de Mens en de Fundamentele Vrijheden (EVRM) een belangrijk punt. Met genoegen stel ik vast dat de artikelen van het Handvest die zich daarvoor lenen nu woordelijk gelijkkluidend zijn aan de kernbepalingen van het EVRM. Graag vertrouw ik erop dat dit ook in de eindtekst het geval zal zijn.

2. Evenals de andere Nederlandse vertegenwoordigers zou ik er verre de voorkeur aan geven, uitdrukkelijk – via een van de eerder gesuggereerde methodes – te verwijzen naar de relevante beperkingclausules van het EVRM. Artikel 50, derde lid, bevat zo'n verwijzing in algemene bewoordingen. Wanneer in een later stadium wordt besloten aan het Handvest juridisch bindende kracht te geven, zou dit alsnog aan de orde moeten komen in samenhang met de in onze ogen vereiste toetreding van de EU/EG tot het EVRM. Beter zou het dan ook zijn, nu reeds aan artikel 50, derde lid, een tabel toe te voegen waaruit blijkt naar welke bepalingen van het EVRM wordt verwezen.

3. In de preambule mis ik een verwijzing naar het religious and cultural heritage van Europa.

3. Een groot deel van het Handvest is nieuw in vergelijking met het EVRM. Dat geldt met name voor de economische en sociale rechten en de rechten verbonden aan het burgerschap van de Unie. De argumenten daarvoor acht ik in het algemeen steekhoudend. Op de volgende punten zie ik mogelijkheden om nog enige verbeteringen aan te brengen:

a. Artikel 16 zou wat meer substantie kunnen krijgen met de volgende tekst:

- (1) Freedom of enterprise is recognised in the framework of the social market economy.
- (2) Every citizen of the Union has the right to set up a business and to provide services.

b. De bepaling over de onderwijsvrijheid (artikel 14) zou kunnen worden aangevuld met een lid luidende: "The right of parents to educate their children in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be respected."

4. Een gemis is in mijn ogen dat het Handvest geen bepaling over de bescherming van minderheden bevat. Ik suggereer een nieuw artikel met als tekst: "The Union shall respect the cultural, religious, ethnic and linguistic diversity in Europe."

5. Artikel 34 steunt op artikel 16 van het EG-Verdrag. Daarmee staat echter niet vast dat het in het Handvest op zijn plaats is. Het omschrijft immers geen grondrecht.

6. Enkele punten van redactionele aard:

- a. Artikel 31 omvat twee leden; de nummers voor de artikelleden ontbreken echter.
- b. Het Nederlandse opschrift van Hoofdstuk VI ("Rechtvaardigheid") doet wat vreemd aan. Ook andere delen van het Handvest (bijvoorbeeld hoofdstuk IV) gaan over rechtvaardigheid. Beter zou zijn: "Rechtspleging."

- c. In artikel 48 zou moeten worden toegevoegd: "binnen de Europese Unie en haar lidstaten"; anders zou het ne bis in idem een veel te ruime toepassing kunnen krijgen (vgl. artikel 4 van het Zevende Protocol bij het EVRM).
- d. Waar wordt verwezen naar het EVRM moet - net als in artikel 19 EVRM - worden toegevoegd: "en de Protocollen daarbij."

Graag wens ik het presidium en het secretariaat succes bij de afronding van de werkzaamheden.

Met vriendelijke groeten,

Ernst M.H. Hirsch Ballin, vertegenwoordiger van de Eerste Kamer der Staten-Generaal.

An den Vorsitzenden des Konvents

Prof. Dr. Roman Herzog

sowie zu Händen der stellvertretenden Vorsitzenden

Gunnar Jansson, für die Vertreter der nationalen Parlamente
Mendez de Vigo, für die Mitglieder der Delegation des Europäischen Parlaments

Sehr geehrte Herren, gemäß dem vom Präsidium in Convent 45 (Charte 4422/00) vorgeschlagenen Verfahren, reiche ich folgende allgemeine Bemerkungen zum Gesamtentwurf der Charta ein:

201

I. Allgemeines

1. Dem Präsidium möchte ich ausdrücklich für den vorgelegten Entwurf danken. Anregungen aus schriftlichen Änderungsanträgen und mündlichen Beiträgen einzelner Delegierter sind eingearbeitet worden, so dass der Entwurf eine Grundlage für das weitere Verfahren sein kann.
2. Aus Gründen der Verständlichkeit und auch aus systematischen Gründen sollte jedoch davon abgesehen werden, in einzelnen Artikeln Verweise auf „einzelstaatliche Rechtsvorschriften“ bzw. „nach Maßgabe des Gemeinschaftsrechts“ aufzunehmen. Diese stehen m.E. im Widerspruch zu den horizontalen Bestimmungen in Art. 49 Abs. 1 und 2. Auch in den bisherigen Diskussionen im Konvent, u.a. im Bereich wirtschaftliche und soziale Grundrechte, hat sich eine Mehrheit der Konventsmitglieder gegen gesonderte Festlegungen des Geltungsbereiches in Einzelartikeln mit dem Verweis auf die horizontalen Artikel festgelegt. In diesem Sinne spreche ich mich dafür aus, die entsprechenden Verweise aus den Artikeln 18, 25, 26, 32, 33 und 34 zu streichen. Gegen die gesonderte Formulierung horizontaler Bestimmungen in einzelnen Artikeln spricht auch die Missverständlichkeit dieses Vorgehens. So könnte bei den Bürgerinnen und Bürgern der Eindruck entstehen, bestimmte Artikel seien weniger gewichtig als andere. Darüber hinaus könnte das Missverständnis auftreten, dass die Grundrechte unter den Vorbehalt einzelstaatlicher Regelungen und künftiger Vertragsrevisionen gestellt würden. Beides kann nicht die Intention des Konvents sein. In zahlreichen Dokumenten und Erklärungen hat die Europäische Union klargestellt, dass sie Menschenrechten und Grundfreiheiten absolute Priorität einräumt. Deshalb appelliere ich an Sie, den Art. 50 Abs. 2 ersatzlos zu streichen.
3. In Absatz 5 der Präambel werden die Hauptquellen, die zur Erarbeitung der EU-Grundrechtecharta herangezogen wurden, genannt. Diese Quellen sollten aber auch in Art. 51 genannt werden. Die Präambel und Art. 51 bilden die Klammer der Grundrechtecharta, insofern sollten auch in Artikel 51 die von der Gemeinschaft und dem Europarat beschlossenen Sozialcharten als Mindestschutzniveau erwähnt werden. Es ist nicht einsehbar, warum gerade die Europäische Sozialcharta nicht als Quelle in Art. 51 benannt wird, soll sie doch nach den Kölner Beschlüssen ausdrücklich Grundlage zur Erarbeitung der Grundrechtecharta sein.
4. Der Art. 15 „Berufsfreiheit“ des Präsidiumsentwurfs ist in das Kapitel IV „Solidarität“ einzugliedern. Es lässt sich nur schwer ein sachlicher Grund finden, diesen Artikel in Kapitel II

5. Wie schon von zahlreichen deutschsprachigen Konventsmitgliedern bemerkt, ist die Formulierung „Behinderte Menschen“ im deutschen Entwurfstext in Artikel 24 selbst diskriminatorisch. Sie sollte daher unbedingt durch die Formulierung „Menschen mit Behinderung“ ersetzt werden, will man nicht selbst gegen Diskriminierungen mit einem diskriminatorischen Chartatext vorgehen (CONTRIB 262 Kaufmann).
6. Darüber hinaus durchzieht die deutsche Fassung des Präsidiumsentswurf eine in den Text selbst eingeschriebene geschlechterdiskriminierende Sprache, die angesichts des Wandels von Geschlechterrollen und Geschlechterbeziehungen schlicht untragbar ist. Auch hier sollte berücksichtigt werden, dass die Charta Grundrechte im 21. Jahrhundert garantieren soll und explizit auch für die Bürgerinnen der EU erkennbar sein muss. Ich schlage deshalb vor, in Artikeln, in denen ausschließlich die männliche Sprachform vorkommt, diese entweder durch eine geschlechtsneutrale Formulierung oder eine geschlechtsspezifisch ausgewogene zu substituieren.

II. Zum Entwurfstext

1. Präambel

a) In Absatz 1 wird ausschließlich Bezug auf die Völker Europas genommen, die „eine immer engere Union begründet und beschlossen haben“. Diese Formulierung trägt weder der Tatsache Rechnung, dass es bislang in erster Linie die Regierungen sind, die insbesondere über die Revision der Verträge im Ergebnis von Regierungsverhandlungen den Integrationsprozess gestalten noch widerspiegelt sie die doppelte Legitimation der Europäischen Union als „Union der Völker und Union der Staaten“. Ich halte es daher für unabdingbar, die doppelte Legitimation der EU im Chartatext auch entsprechend auszuweisen.

b) Schon in der Präambel im Absatz 2 fällt auf, dass eine Sozialstaatsverpflichtung oder ein Sozialstaatsprinzip keinerlei Erwähnung findet. Stattdessen wird durch den Verweis auf die 4 Freiheiten des EG-Binnenmarkts eine Marktorientierung zum alleinigen Maßstab gesellschaftlicher Entwicklung in der EU erhoben. Dies schlägt sich dann in der Formulierung nieder, dass „durch den freien Personen-, Waren-, Kapital- und Dienstleistungsverkehr eine ausgewogene und nachhaltige Entwicklung“ (Convent 45, Präambel, Abs. 3) sichergestellt wird.

c) In Absatz 6 der Präambel wird die Inanspruchnahme der Grundrechte an Pflichten gebunden. Dies stellt m.E. die Grundrechtecharta in ihrem Kern in Frage. Es sei noch einmal hervorgehoben, dass mit der Grundrechtecharta die Rechte der Bürgerinnen und Bürger gegenüber der Hoheitsgewalt der EU-Institutionen geschützt werden sollen. Rechte mit Pflichten zu verknüpfen, zeugt m.E. von einem rückwärtsgewandten Grund- und Menschenrechtsverständnis, das hinter die Allgemeine Erklärung der Menschenrechte von 1948 zurückfällt.

2. Würde des Menschen/Kapitel I

a) Art. 1 Würde des Menschen

Art. 1 ist insgesamt zu schwach formuliert. Die Würde des Menschen, die zu schützen ist, ist als Fundament der Grundrechtecharta ein so hohes Rechtsgut, dass die Formulierung lauten müsste: „Die Würde des Menschen ist unantastbar“. In diese Richtung gehen zahlreiche Änderungsanträge von Konventsmitgliedern (Convent 35: Änderungsanträge Nr. 2 Kaufmann, Nr. 4 Laborda, Nr. 6 Rodota, Paciotti, Manzella, Nr. 10 Melogranni, Nr. 11 Voggenhuber, Nr. 13 Bereijo). Es ist aus meiner Sicht unverständlich, warum die starke Formulierung des früheren Präsidiumsentwurfs „Die Würde des Menschen ist unantastbar“ (Convent 5) aufgegeben wurde. Selbst noch in Convent 13 lautete die Formulierung von Art.1 „Die Würde des Menschen wird unter allen Umständen geachtet und geschützt.“

3. Freiheiten/Kapitel II

Auf dem Feld der politischen Grund- und Freiheitsrechte trägt der vorliegende Präsidiumsentswurf im Bezug auf einige Artikel aus meiner Sicht keinen zukunftsweisenden Charakter.

a) Art. 9 Recht eine Ehe einzugehen und eine Familie zu gründen Der ausschließliche Verweis auf die Regelungen in den einzelnen Mitgliedstaaten entspricht nicht dem Schutzcharakter einer Grundrechtecharta. Es ist nicht schlüssig, warum hier eine offensichtliche Abweichung des Vorgehens bei anderen Artikel vorgenommen wird. Die frühere Formulierung „Jede Person hat das Recht auf Achtung ihres Familienlebens“ (Convent 28) als Abs. 1 des Artikels, so wie sie noch in der ersten Fassung des Präsidiumsentswurfs vorlag, wurde auch in zahlreichen Änderungsanträgen unterstützt und verstärkt (Convent 35: Änderungsanträge Nr. 229 Berès, Nr. 230 Friedrich, Nr. 231 Gnauck, Nr. 234 Einem/Holoubek, Nr. 238 Dehousse). Die Mehrheitsmeinung bei den Diskussionen im Konvent und verschiedene Änderungsanträge (Convent 35: Änderungsanträge Nr. 232 Kaufmann, Nr. 238 Dehousse, Nr. 239 Voggenhuber/Buitenweg, Nr. 241 Tura) stützten dies und sprachen sich für eine möglichst weite, moderne Auslegung des Familienbegriffs aus.

b) Art.10 Gedanken-, Gewissens- und Religionsfreiheit

Dem Artikel ist ein Abs. 2 hinzuzufügen, in dem das „Recht auf Kriegsdienstverweigerung“ aufgenommen wird. Die Aufnahme eines solchen zweiten Absatzes entspricht einer Reihe von Änderungsanträgen (Convent 35: Änderungsanträge Nr. 256 Voggenhuber/Buitenweg, Nr. 257 Meyer/Leinen/Martin, Nr. 261 Gnauck und Nr. 262 Kaufmann u.a.). Zudem wies die Mehrheitsmeinung im Konvent deutlich in diese Richtung. Eine Nichtaufnahme des Grundrechts auf Kriegsdienstverweigerung würde einen Rückschlag hinsichtlich aller Bemühungen bedeuten, das Individualrecht auf Kriegsdienstverweigerung als unabdingbaren Teil des internationalen Menschenrechtsschutzes zu verankern.

c) Art. 18 Asylrecht

In Artikel 18 „Asylrecht“ findet sich keine individuelle Rechts- und Rechtsweggarantie für Asylsuchende in der Europäischen Union. Die Verankerung des Asylrechts als Individualrecht war von zahlreichen Konventsmitgliedern (Convent 35: Änderungsanträge Nr. 403 Duff, Nr. 404 Melogranni, Nr. 406 Voggenhuber/Buitenweg, Nr. 407 Meyer/Leinen/Martin/ Van den Burg, Nr.

408 Berès, Nr. 413 Kaufmann) gefordert worden. Der vorliegende ausschließliche Bezug auf die Genfer Konvention ohne die Formulierung „Jede Person hat das Recht“ wird diesem Ansinnen nicht gerecht.

4. Gleichheit/Kapitel III

a) Art. 22 Gleichheit von Männern und Frauen

Im früheren Präsidiumsentswurf wurde noch eine inhaltlich stärkere Formulierung gewählt: „Die Union wirkt darauf hin, Ungleichheiten zu beseitigen und die Gleichstellung von Männern und Frauen zu fördern“ (Convent 28). Im jetzigen Entwurf ist statt von „Gleichstellung“ nur noch von „Chancengleichheit“ und „Gleichbehandlung“ von Männern und Frauen die Rede. Diese Abschwächung ist aus meiner Sicht mit Blick auf die Diskussionen im Konvent nicht gerechtfertigt. Auch war in dem in Convent 28 vorgelegten Präsidiumsentswurf noch von einer Gewährleistung der „Gleichheit der Geschlechter ... insbesondere bei der Festsetzung der Arbeitsentgelte und der sonstigen Arbeitsbedingungen“ die Rede, während in Convent 45 sich die Maßgabe der Chancengleichheit und der Gleichbehandlung ausschließlich auf die Bereiche Arbeit und Beschäftigung bezieht. Auch dieses Abgehen von einem stärkeren Text, scheint mir im Ergebnis der Diskussionen im Konvent nicht gerechtfertigt. Die Grundrechtecharta muss jedoch gerade für die Unionsbürgerinnen erkennbar sein. Der Kampf gegen geschlechtsspezifische Ungleichheiten und die Gewährleistung der Gleichstellung von Frau und Mann ist als Rechtsgrundsatz der EU-Grundrechtecharta dafür unabdingbar. In diesem Sinne appelliere ich an Sie, auf die stärkere, in Convent 28 niedergelegte Fassung zurückzugehen und diese im Sinne des Änderungsantrags Nr. 185 Berès (Convent 39) zu präzisieren: „Die Gleichheit von Männern und Frauen ist insbesondere zu gewährleisten im Bildungsbereich, bei den Beschäftigungs- und Lohnbedingungen, den Arbeitsbeziehungen und den sozialen Sicherungssystemen. Ihre Umsetzung kann zu positiven Diskriminierungen führen.“

5. Solidarität/Kapitel IV

Die sozialen Grundrechte sind durch den Chartaentwurf nur unzureichend gewährleistet. Weder ein Recht auf Arbeit, noch wesentliche Grundrechte bei der Arbeit, noch ein Recht zu arbeiten, wie von zahlreichen Konventsmitgliedern vorgeschlagen und wie in den ILO-Konventionen erwähnt und garantiert, fanden eine Aufnahme. Es ist nicht nachvollziehbar, weshalb die noch in Convent 41 (Art. 31 Berufsfreiheit und Recht auf Arbeit) enthaltenen Bestimmungen nunmehr weggefallen sind. Stattdessen wurde ein Grundrecht auf „unternehmerische Freiheit“ postuliert und keine Sozialbindung des Eigentums verankert. Hier zeigt sich ganz deutlich, dass der vorliegende Präsidiumsvorschlag ein gravierender Rückschritt im Bezug auf den bisher international erreichten Grundrechtsschutz ist. Wie ich schon in der Begründung meines diesbezüglichen Änderungsantrags (CONTRIB 262) ausgeführt habe, ist das „Recht auf Arbeit“ Bestandteil internationaler Menschenrechtskonventionen und verschiedener Verfassungen. So wird das „Recht auf Arbeit“ in der „Allgemeinen Erklärung der Menschenrechte“ in Art. 23 garantiert, im „Internationalen Pakt über wirtschaftliche, soziale und kulturelle Rechte“, in der „Europäischen Sozialcharta“. Es findet es sich zudem in den Landesverfassungen der fünf neuen Bundesländer der Bundesrepublik Deutschland oder in den Verfassungen der Beitrittskandidaten Polen, Ungarn und Tschechien. Insofern ist es umso unverständlicher, dass im vorliegenden Präsidiumsentwurf dieses grundlegende Menschenrecht nicht berücksichtigt wurde. Nicht zuletzt wiesen zahlreiche Änderungsanträge und die Diskussionen im Konvent in Richtung der Aufnahme eines Rechts auf Arbeit.

a) Art. 26 Recht auf Kollektivverhandlungen

In Artikel 26 wird nicht einmal das Streikrecht erwähnt. Dies stellt nicht nur eine Missachtung internationaler Standards (zahlreiche ILO-Konventionen, Internationaler Pakt über wirtschaftliche, soziale und kulturelle Rechte, Europäische Sozialcharta) dar. Insbesondere in der Europäischen Sozialcharta (Art. 6 Abs. 4) ist das Streikrecht als kollektive Maßnahme der Arbeitnehmerinnen und Arbeitnehmer ausdrücklich erwähnt. Die Europäische Sozialcharta stellt aber nach dem Mandat von Köln eine der Grundlagen der Arbeit des Konvents dar. Insofern ist es zwingend, die kollektiven Maßnahmen, „einschließlich des Streikrechts“, im Rahmen der EU-Grundrechtecharta zu garantieren. Im übrigen sei noch einmal auf die zahlreichen Änderungsanträge von Konventsmitgliedern, die ausdrücklich eine Aufnahme des Streikrechts in den Text der Grundrechtecharta einforderten, verwiesen (Convent 39: Änderungsanträge Nr. 93 Voggenhuber, Nr. 94 Dehousse, Nr. 95 Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella, Nr. 97 Braibant, Nr. 99 Dieulangard, Nr. 102 Fayot, Nr. 103 Berès, Nr. 104 van den Burg, CONTRIB 262 Kaufmann).

b) Art. 32 Soziale Sicherheit und soziale Unterstützung

Artikel 32 ist nicht als individueller Rechtsanspruch formuliert und läuft so Gefahr, rein symbolischen Charakter zu tragen. So wie auch die anderen sozialen Grundrechte rein symbolischen Charakter zu tragen drohen, was einer künftigen Rechtsverbindlichkeit der Grundrechtecharta zuwiderliefe. Darüber hinaus ist die Aufzählung der Gründe, bei denen soziale Leistungen in Anspruch genommen werden können, weder vollständig noch formulierungsoffen für zukünftige Entwicklungen. Daher sollte vor die Aufzählung die Formulierung „u.a.“ gestellt werden. Im übrigen sei auf die zwingende Unteilbarkeit und international anerkannte Gleichrangigkeit aller Grundrechte verwiesen.

In Art. 32 Abs.3 ist aus dem international und auch von den Mitgliedstaaten anerkannten „Recht auf Wohnen“, die Anerkennung und Achtung des Rechts auf Wohnungsbeihilfe geworden. Dies steht dem in der Allgemeinen Erklärung der Menschenrechte in Art 35 Abs.1 explizit fixierten „Recht auf Wohnen“ entgegen, nicht zu reden von Art. 11 Internationaler Pakt über wirtschaftliche, soziale und kulturelle Rechte, Art. 27 Abs. 3 UN-Kinderrechtskonvention und Art. 31 Europäische Sozialcharta. Die Nichtaufnahme dieses Rechts kommt einer Verletzung völkerrechtlicher Garantien gleich. Ich appelliere daher an Sie, Art. 32 im Sinne internationaler Menschenrechtsnormen zu revidieren.

c) Art. 33 Gesundheitsschutz

Für Art. 33 forderten zahlreiche Mitglieder des Konvents eine nachdrückliche Formulierung im Sinne eines subjektiven Rechts des Anspruchs auf ärztliche Versorgung, Gesundheitsvorsorge und Gesundheitsfürsorge (Convent 39: Änderungsanträge Nr. 279 Dehousse, Nr. 280 Tura, Nr. 281 Berès, Nr. 283 Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella, Nr. 284 Dieulangard, Nr. 108 Meyer, CONTRIB 262 Kaufmann). Es besteht ein großer Unterschied zwischen dem „Recht auf Gesundheitsfürsorge“ und dem „Recht auf Zugang zur Gesundheitsfürsorge“ (Convent 45). Diesen Änderungsanträgen sollte Rechnung getragen werden. Aus meiner Sicht gingen auch die Diskussionen im Konvent mehrheitlich in diese Richtung.

d) Art. 35 Umweltschutz

Es ist unverständlich, warum das Präsidium nicht den zahlreichen Änderungsanträgen einer Mehrheit der Konventsmitglieder Rechnung getragen hat, die die nachdrückliche Formulierung dieses Artikels im Sinne eines Rechtsanspruchs einforderten (Convent 39: Änderungsanträge Nr. 325 Duff, Nr. 327 Tura, Nr. 328 Burg, Nr. 329 Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella, Nr. 330 Voggenhuber/Buitenweg, Nr. 331 Dehane/De Gucht/Lallemand, CONTRIB 262 Kaufmann). Aus meiner Sicht wiesen auch die Diskussionen im Konvent in diese Richtung. Daher sollte Artikel 35 im Sinne eines individuellen Rechtsanspruchs formuliert werden.

e) Art. 36 Verbraucherschutz

Auch für Art. 36 gilt, dass zahlreiche Änderungsanträge von Konventsmitgliedern eine Formulierung im Sinne eines Rechtsanspruchs einforderten (Convent 39: Änderungsanträge Nr. 344 Griffiths, Nr. 345 Duff, Nr. 346 Tura, Nr. 347 Voggenhuber/Buitenweg, Nr. 348 van den Burg, CONTRIB 262 Kaufmann). Gerade hier erwarten Bürgerinnen und Bürger der EU einen umfassenden Schutz und umfassende Rechte, um sich gegen Gesundheits- und Umweltgefährdungen zur Wehr setzen zu können. Daher sollte die Formulierung des Artikels im Sinne eines individuellen Rechtsanspruchs auf Verbraucherschutz abgeändert werden.

6. Bürgerrechte/Kapitel V

a) Art. 43 Freizügigkeit und Aufenthaltsrecht

Zahlreiche Änderungsanträge zu Art. 43 Abs. 1 gingen zumindest in die Richtung, Drittstaatsangehörigen, die sich seit fünf Jahren in der Europäischen Union aufhalten, die gleichen Rechte zu gewähren wie Unionsbürgerinnen und Unionsbürgern (Convent 35: Änderungsanträge Nr. 583 Berès, Nr. 584 Einem/Holoubek, Nr. 588 Hirsch/Patijn/Van Oven, Nr. 589 Voggenhuber/Buitenweg, Nr. 591 Kaufmann). Erstaunlicherweise findet sich davon nichts im Entwurf des Präsidiums.

Der vorliegende Entwurf von Art. 43 Art. 2 enthält kein eigentliches Grundrecht, sondern nur einen Verweis auf zukünftige Vertragsrevision, mit der eventuell ein Recht auf Freizügigkeit auch Drittstaatsangehörigen eingeräumt werden könnte. Diese Formulierung entspricht aus meiner Sicht nicht der Mehrheitsmeinung, wie sie in den Diskussionen im Konvent artikuliert wurde (u.a. Voggenhuber, Meyer, van den Burg, Brax, Einem, Berès, Kaufmann, Paciotti, Leinen, Martin). Nach Art. 63 Nr. 4 EGV ist eine Gleichstellung von Drittstaatsangehörigen möglich. Darüber hinaus ist Freizügigkeit ein Menschenrecht, fixiert in der Allgemeinen Erklärung der Menschenrechte, im Internationalen Pakt über bürgerliche und politische Rechte und Art. 2 Protokoll Nr. 4 Europäische Menschenrechtskonvention. Daher appelliere ich an Sie, Art. 43 Abs. 2 in dem Sinne abzuändern, dass Freizügigkeit als Grundrecht für alle in der Union lebenden Menschen fixiert wird.

Fazit

Ich möchte mit Nachdruck dafür plädieren, im o.g. Sinne entscheidende Änderungen am Präsidiumsentswurf vorzunehmen, denn ich befürchte, die Grundrechtecharta könnte sonst von den Bürgerinnen und Bürgern und in der europäischen Öffentlichkeit als vergebene Chance für die Sicherung eines umfassenden Grundrechtsschutzes wahrgenommen werden.

Mit freundlichen Grüßen

Mme Elena Ornella PACIOTTI

présentent les amendements suivants, considérant qu'il est indispensable de les intégrer au texte final de la Charte des Droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne.

L.L.

1. Toutes les versions linguistiques du texte du présidium contiennent un langage discriminatoire vis à vis du genre que nous ne pouvons pas accepter, étant donnés les changements profonds concernant les rôles et les relations entre les hommes et les femmes dans nos sociétés. La Charte qui est chargée de garantir les droits fondamentaux au 21 siècle, doit s'adresser notamment aussi à la population féminine, les citoyennes. Nous vous demandons donc de modifier tous les articles où ne figure que la forme linguistique masculine en sorte que celle-ci soit remplacée par une formule équilibrée au niveau des sexes.
2. Nous proposons de formuler l'article 22 comme suit:

Article 22. Égalité entre hommes et femmes

L'égalité entre les hommes et les femmes doit être assurée dans tous les domaines, y compris en matière d'emploi, de travail et de rémunération.

Le principe de l'égalité n'empêche pas le maintien ou l'adoption de mesures prévoyant des avantages spécifiques en faveur du sexe sous-représenté.

Explication:

Les traités, notamment l'article 2 et l'article 3 du Traité instituant la Communauté européenne, ne parlent pas de "l'égalité des chances et de traitement", comme cela est le cas dans le texte proposé par le présidium. La notion qui figure - à juste titre - dans les traités est "l'égalité entre les hommes et les femmes". Il s'agit là d'une notion qui va beaucoup plus loin.

En outre, les deux articles mentionnés ci-dessus fixent l'égalité entre les hommes et les femmes en tant que principe fondamental et comme mission et objectif de la Communauté dans tous les domaines. Il est indispensable que l'article 22 ne soit pas inférieur à ce qui est fixé comme acquis communautaire.

nachstehende Änderungsanträge ein, deren Aufnahme in die Endfassung des Entwurfs der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union wir als unverzichtbar erachten.

1. Alle Sprachfassungen des Präsidiumsentwurfs enthalten eine geschlechterdiskriminierende Sprache, die für uns angesichts des gravierenden Wandels von Geschlechterrollen und Geschlechterbeziehungen in unseren Gesellschaften nicht akzeptabel ist. Die Charta, die Grundrechte im 21. Jahrhundert garantieren soll, muß insbesondere auch die weibliche Bevölkerung, die Bürgerinnen, ansprechen. Wir appellieren daher an Sie, alle Artikel, in denen ausschließlich die männliche Sprachform vorkommt, dahingehend zu ändern, daß diese entweder durch eine geschlechtsneutrale oder eine geschlechterspezifisch ausgewogene Formulierung ersetzt werden.
2. Wir schlagen vor, Artikel 22 wie folgt zu formulieren:

Artikel 22. Gleichstellung von Männern und Frauen

Die Gleichstellung von Männern und Frauen ist in allen Bereichen, einschließlich der Bereiche Arbeit, Beschäftigung und Entlohnung, sicherzustellen.

Der Grundsatz der Gleichstellung steht der Beibehaltung oder der Einführung spezifischer Vergünstigungen zugunsten des unterrepräsentierten Geschlechts nicht entgegen.

Begründung:

In den Verträgen, namentlich in Artikel 2 und Artikel 3 des EG-Vertrages, ist nicht, wie im jetzigen Präsidiumsentwurf, von "Chancengleichheit" und "Gleichbehandlung" die Rede. Stattdessen wird völlig zu Recht der inhaltlich wesentlich weitergehende Begriff der "Gleichstellung" von Männern und Frauen verwandt.

Des weiteren ist in den beiden Artikeln die Gleichstellung der Geschlechter sowohl als Grundprinzip, als auch als Aufgabe und Ziel der Gemeinschaft in allen ihren Tätigkeiten festgeschrieben. Wir sehen es als unabdingbar an, daß Artikel 22 in seiner Formulierung nicht hinter den acquis communautaire zurückfällt.

Dear Sirs,

according to the procedure proposed by the Presidium (Convent 45, Charte 4422/00), we, female members of the Convention:

Ms. Maria Eduarda AZEVEDO
Ms. Anna BENAKI-PSAROUDA
Ms. Pervenche BERÈS

Ms. Marie-Thérèse HERMANGE
Ms. Ulpu IIVARI
Ms. Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN
Ms. Catherine LALUMIERE
Ms. Hanja MAIJ-WEGGEN
Ms. Elena Ornella PACIOTTI present the following amendments, which we consider indispensable for the final version of the draft Charter.

1. In all linguistic versions, the Presidium's draft contains a sex-discriminating wording, which is unacceptable to us having regard to the major changes in the roles of the sexes and the relations between the sexes in our modern societies. The Charter will guarantee fundamental rights in the 21st century, and it must, therefore, address the female population also. For this reason, we appeal to you to change all articles, which are formulated solely in masculine wording such that they are replaced by gender-neutral formulations or by existing linguistic forms for both genders equally.
2. We propose to reformulate Article 22 as follows:

Article 22: Equality between men and women

- (1) Equality between men and women must be ensured in all fields, including employment, work and remuneration.
- (2) The principle of equality shall not prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures providing for specific advantages in favour of the underrepresented sex.

Explanation:

In the Treaties (particularly in Articles 2 and 3 of the EC-Treaty) the terms "equal opportunity" and "equal treatment", which appear in the current Presidium text, are not used. Instead, the treaties contain the correct and much broader term "equality between men and women". Furthermore, gender equality is fixed in both abovementioned articles as a basic principle as well as a task and an aim for all fields of Community activities. In our view, it must be ensured that Article 22 does not fall short of the existing "acquis communautaire".

KORTHALS ALTES

The Hague, 28 August 2000

Cher Collègue et Ami,

This letter sets out my general comments on the full draft text of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union as presented by the Praesidium on 28 July 2000.

May I start by saying that the July version seems an improvement on previous ones, but that the intense time pressure under which the Praesidium and the Convention have been working means the drafting is still not adequate for a legally binding document. This could be risky since the Charter will become part of legal practice even if it does not acquire legally binding status. References to the explanatory notes in CONVENT 46 below are based on the French-language version as other language versions are not yet available.

Article 50, paragraph 3

As regards classical fundamental rights, the Dutch government has always attached great importance to ensuring that the rights set out in the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union correspond as closely as possible to the equivalent rights in the ECHR. The main reason is that European citizens (and any others to whom these rights apply) are best served by a single, unitary regime of classical fundamental rights in both the ECHR and the Charter. The Dutch government sees the Charter's added value as lying mainly in its inclusion of fundamental social and economic rights in addition to civil rights.

Lord Goldsmith's proposal for a Part B containing definitions could have achieved completely identical definitions, grounds for restrictions to fundamental rights, and the conditions with which such restrictions must comply. Another way of achieving this could have been for every article governing a classical fundamental right to contain a reference to the corresponding article in the ECHR. When it looked as if Lord Goldsmith's proposal was not going to attract enough support I proposed amendments to this effect. The Praesidium did not adopt them. A third option for ensuring that the meaning and scope of classical fundamental rights in the ECHR and Charter were as nearly as possible identical could have taken the form of a horizontal article, as I proposed in amendment 582. The Praesidium adopted this amendment in principle in article 50 paragraph 3. An irritating mistake was made, however, when the original Dutch wording was translated into French and I regret to say I did not notice it until after sending my letter of 28 June (distributed along with CHARTE 4406/00 CONTRIB 262 of 6 July), in which I incorporated the French and English versions as per CHARTE 4332/00 CONVENT 35 dated 25 May .

The French translation should have read:

Dans la mesure où la présente Charte contient des droits correspondants à des droits énoncés dans la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, leur signification et leur portée sont les mêmes que la signification et la portée que leur confère la CEDH, sauf si la présente Charte prévoit une protection plus étendue.

Instead of "les mêmes que", the French version of CHARTE 4332/00 CONVENT 35 of 25 May reads "similaires à". The English translation, "the same as", is correct.

Article 50 paragraph 3 repeats the French wording "similaires à". The Praesidium or Secretariat obviously used French as its working language when drafting CHARTE 4422/00 CONVENT 45 and the mistake has been translated into the English version as "similar to". The Dutch translation reads "dezelfde als" ("the same as", "les mêmes que"), and I understand that the Danish, Finnish and Swedish versions match this. There is thus a discrepancy between the French and English versions on the one hand and the Dutch, Danish, Finnish and Swedish versions on the other, with the second group matching the original amendment 582.

My intention when tabling the amendment was for it to have the same meaning as the French les mêmes que or identiques à and the English the same as or identical to.

This horizontal provision is of great importance and I therefore strongly urge the Praesidium to ensure that the original intention is reflected correctly and unambiguously, i.e. that the classical fundamental rights in the Charter are identical to those in the ECHR even where wording differs. I also think it would make more sense to move the revised article 50 paragraph 3 to form article 50 paragraph 1.

I could accept Mr Olsen's suggestion to list the articles involved by number so as to make it clear to one and all what the horizontal provision refers to. It would also be possible to drop the last clause if we agree that none of the relevant articles is intended to confer a higher degree of protection than derives from the ECHR, thus putting a stop to any attempt by lawyers to argue that the Charter seeks to provide more protection than the ECHR.

“Everyone” in articles 14 paragraph 1, 15 paragraph 1, 27 and 33, and “persons” in article 32 paragraph 3

The Dutch government maintains its insurmountable objections to the use of “everyone” in articles 14 paragraph 1, 15 paragraph 1, 27, and 33, and “persons” in article 32 paragraph 3, for the reasons I explained at the Convention meetings dealing with these articles. I repeat them below.

Article 14 paragraph 1: Foreign nationals over school leaving age (i.e. 17) and not legally resident in the Netherlands have no right to education and no access to vocational and continuing training. Our objection is insurmountable because a national court might rule on the basis of the Charter that foreigners living illegally in the Netherlands and above the age for compulsory schooling, who cannot be expelled for technical reasons (for example, because their country of origin is not known or they have no passport or valid identity document), have the right to education and to access to vocational and continuing training.

Article 15 paragraph 1: Only people legally resident in an EU member state who are legally entitled to work and in possession of the relevant qualifications have the right to engage in a freely chosen occupation. Persons illegally resident in the EU and asylum seekers whose asylum applications are still under consideration do not normally have the right to engage in a freely chosen occupation. Members of diplomatic representations from third countries are legally resident in a member state but are not allowed to engage in any profession other than the one for which they were granted diplomatic admission. Our objection is insurmountable because a national court might rule on the basis of the Charter that foreign nationals living illegally in the Netherlands who cannot be expelled for technical reasons (for example, because their country of origin is not known or they have no passport or valid identity document) have the right to engage in a freely chosen occupation. Article 50 paragraph 1 allows for limitations on the rights listed in the Charter and could be used to set qualifications and requirements for professions requiring specialised training (e.g. doctors and lawyers), but this does not entitle member states to limit rights that have been conferred on everyone for third-country nationals illegally resident on their territory. Dutch law does in fact provide for foreign nationals illegally resident in the Netherlands to be excluded from certain posts and services.

The Dutch government does not want to put such provisions at risk through loosely worded fundamental rights, even if they are only applicable to EU institutions and bodies and, for member states, within the field of application of EU law. Courts may turn out to be open to the argument that no domestic provisions can apply if they are deemed incompatible at EU level with fundamental rights applicable to everyone.

Article 27: The same reasons apply to our insurmountable objection to the use of “everyone” in article 27: only persons legally resident in a member state and entitled to work there have the right of access to a placement service.

Article 32 paragraph 3: Foreign nationals illegally resident in the Netherlands are not entitled to social assistance or housing benefit. The phrase “in accordance with the rules laid down by national laws and practices” is no solution. Dutch law does not impose any conditions on illegal aliens claiming social assistance or housing benefit; it debars them completely. Furthermore, asylum seekers whose applications are pending are provided with housing and social assistance differently from Dutch nationals and legal aliens, since they are accommodated in reception centres and receive some of their social assistance in kind.

Article 33: Foreign nationals illegally resident in the Netherlands are only entitled to emergency and preventive health care. Other than in emergencies they can only receive care if they pay for it themselves or through their existing insurance, and foreigners illegally resident in the Netherlands are generally not insured. I would also agree with Mr Patijn that the point is not to ensure access to curative and preventive health care but to prevent exclusion from health insurance.

In all the above cases the Dutch government is absolutely opposed to any risk of the courts forcing it to grant foreigners illegally resident in the Netherlands access to services from which legislation has explicitly debarred them. If the above provisions feature in the text put before the European Council, the Netherlands will be unable to cooperate in adopting the Charter without further modifications.

Further comments

I have a few more comments on individual articles, some of which are objections and some intended as suggested improvements.

Recital 7: The Charter contains some horizontal provisions and many references to national laws and practices and can therefore not be said to guarantee the rights and freedoms it lists. In any case, nothing could be guaranteed unless the European Council decided to give the Charter the force of law.

Article 3 paragraph 2: The use of “in particular” (“notamment”) suggests that there are other principles which must be respected but are not listed. That is unacceptable for the people who are expected to respect them. The same objection applies to the prohibition of eugenic practices: what other eugenic practices are prohibited in addition to those concerned with the selection of persons? The Dutch government would prefer to delete Article 3 paragraph 2 altogether. In any case it would like to delete the prohibition of eugenic practices on the grounds that its scope is too vague.

Article 11 paragraph 2: The words “with due respect for pluralism and transparency” (“dans le respect du pluralisme et de la transparence”) make the provision too imprecise. Does “dans le respect” narrow or broaden the scope? Is respecting pluralism and transparency a task for the government, or for the media whose freedom is being guaranteed? The explanatory notes in CONVENT 46 and the 25 July 1991 judgment on case C288/89 do not give any firm answer. How can the right to freedom of information be reconciled with article 40 which states that only citizens and residents of the EU and legal persons established in a member state may have access to European Parliament, Council and Commission documents?

Article 14 paragraph 1 second sentence: Primary education is free in the Netherlands, but fees must be paid for education, including compulsory education, over the age of 16. It is possible to claim reimbursement, however, whereby compulsory post-16 education can be partly or entirely free of charge. But CONVENT 46 refers to “le principe de gratuité de l’enseignement obligatoire”, and since it calls it a principle the question arises whether it is still permissible to charge school fees which are only refunded to those unable to pay. If this provision aims to make compulsory post-16 education free of charge and to prohibit fees for it, the Dutch government would be absolutely unable to accept it.

Article 15 paragraphs 1 and 2: It would be a good idea to switch these two paragraphs.

Article 15 paragraph 3: Not all nationals of third countries who are legally resident in the territory of a member state are entitled to conditions of employment equivalent to those of citizens of the Union. They also require a work permit for the relevant member state. The article should therefore read:

“Nationals of third countries who are authorised to work in the territories of a Member State are entitled to conditions of employment equivalent to those of citizens of the Union.”

Article 18: There is no right to asylum, only a right to request or seek asylum. The article should therefore begin:

“The right to request asylum shall be guaranteed ...”

Article 19 paragraph 2: The Dutch translation renders “pourrait être soumis ...” as a remote condition. This runs counter to case law from the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg, which maintains there must be a real risk of the person whose extradition has been requested being subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment. To be compatible with this case law the paragraph should therefore read:

“No one may be removed, expelled or extradited to a State where there is a real risk that he could be subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment.”

Article 22 paragraph 2: I suspect that some words have been omitted and that the paragraph should read:

“The principle of equal treatment shall not prevent the adoption, in order to ensure full equality in practice for men and women in employment, of measures for specific advantages in order to make it easier for the under-represented sex to pursue a vocational activity or to prevent or compensate for disadvantages in professional careers.”

Article 30 paragraph 1: In the Netherlands the period of compulsory full-time education (up to age 16) is followed by a period of compulsory part-time education (up to age 17) during which employment is allowed as long as it does not interfere with lessons. The second sentence should therefore read:

“The minimum age for admission to employment must not be lower than the minimum age for leaving compulsory full-time schooling ...”

Article 39 paragraph 2: The use of “includes” (“notamment”) is unacceptable for the same reasons as I gave for article 3 paragraph 2 above: the use of “includes” (“notamment”) suggests that the right set out in paragraph 1 includes other rights in addition to the three listed in paragraph 2, which are not mentioned and cannot be identified but do exist. That is acceptable neither for the people who might wish to invoke them nor for the people who are expected to respect them. A choice must therefore be made between listing all rights and omitting the word “includes” (“notamment”).

Article 41: It would be better to confer this right on everyone.

Article 45 paragraph 1: This article is couched in excessively general terms. The explanatory notes make it clear that the article only refers to the “inscription de la jurisprudence de la Cour de Justice de Luxembourg dans la charte” and is not intended “de modifier le système de recours prévu par les traités et notamment les règles relatives à la recevabilité”. This should be made clearer in paragraph 1 in order to ensure that it does not give rise to endless disputes about competence.

Article 47 paragraph 2: I suspect the words “the general principles of” have been omitted.

The article should therefore read:

“This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of international law.”

Article 49 paragraph 1: This raises the question of whether the “institutions and bodies of the Union” is meant to include Europol. The Dutch government is in favour of its doing so. If the current form of words excludes Europol from the scope of this article it should be redrafted to include it. For example:

“The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union in accordance with the powers conferred on them by means of or for the implementation of the Treaties, and also to institutions and bodies operating within the sphere of the Union as a result of Council measures, with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and ...”

Also, the phrase “and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law” could be better rephrased as

“and to the Member States only within the field of application of Union law”.

Article 50

1. I have already explained that I would prefer paragraph 3 to become paragraph 1. May I invite the Praesidium once again to reconsider my amendment and incorporate a reference to the corresponding articles in the revised European Social Charter along the lines of the current paragraph 3:

“Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the revised European Social Charter, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be the same as those conferred on them by the revised European Social Charter.”

In my view, the above text should become paragraph 2, and the current paragraphs 1 and 2 would be renumbered 3 and 4.

2. A further way to ensure this charter remains parallel with the ECHR and the revised European Social Charter, and to provide legal certainty, would be for the current paragraph 1 (paragraph 2 or 3 if my suggestions are accepted) to include a reference to the ECHR and the revised European Social Charter, perhaps as follows:

“Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter shall not extend further than permitted under the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and the revised European Social Charter. Limitations to other rights may be provided for solely by the competent legislative authority. Subject to ...”

Finally I would recommend numbering the separate paragraphs of articles 12, 22, 30 and 31.

I am most grateful for the consideration the Praesidium will give to these general remarks. For the record, may I point out that I have sent a second letter to Mr JAQUÉ. This second letter is intended for the translation service and deals with translation errors and mistakes in the use of the Dutch language.

Yours sincerely,

KORTHALS ALTES

La Haye, le 28 août 2000

Cher collègue et ami,

Vous trouverez ci-après mes observations générales concernant le texte complet du projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne qui a été proposé le 28 juillet dernier par le Présidium.

Je voudrais tout d'abord signaler que je trouve que les textes publiés le 28 juillet dernier ont été améliorés par rapport aux projets de textes précédents, mais qu'ils ne revêtent pas encore – notamment en raison du peu de temps imparti à la Convention et au Présidium – la qualité nécessaire à un document juridiquement contraignant. Cela n'est pas sans danger, car même sans force contraignante formelle, la Charte jouera un rôle dans la pratique judiciaire. Dans mes références aux commentaires contenus dans CONVENT 46, j'ai utilisé le texte français, les textes rédigés dans d'autres langues n'étant pas encore disponibles.

Article 50, paragraphe 3

En ce qui concerne les droits fondamentaux classiques, le gouvernement néerlandais a toujours attaché une grande valeur à une harmonisation aussi large que possible entre les droits fondamentaux à formuler dans la Charte et les droits correspondants formulés dans la Convention. La principale raison en est que le citoyen européen – et tous les autres auxquels ces droits s'appliquent – est le mieux servi par un seul et même régime de droits fondamentaux classiques inscrits dans la Convention et dans la Charte. Aux yeux du gouvernement néerlandais, la plus-value de la Charte par rapport à la Convention réside surtout dans la formulation des droits fondamentaux sociaux et économiques, en plus du règlement des droits civils.

On aurait pu parvenir à une identité totale des définitions, des motifs de limitation et des conditions dans lesquelles des limitations peuvent être apportées aux droits fondamentaux et des conditions auxquelles ces limitations doivent répondre en ajoutant une « partie B » contenant des définitions, comme l'avait proposé Lord Goldsmith, ou en renvoyant dans chaque article de la Charte concernant un droit fondamental classique à l'article correspondant dans la Convention. Lorsqu'il apparut que la proposition de Lord Goldsmith n'obtiendrait pas un soutien suffisant, j'ai soumis des amendements dans ce sens. Le Présidium n'a pas repris ces amendements. Je voyais une troisième possibilité de parvenir à une identité aussi grande possible de teneur et de portée entre les droits fondamentaux de la Convention et ceux de la Charte dans un article horizontal, comme je l'ai proposé dans l'amendement 582. Le Présidium a repris en principe cet amendement dans l'article 50, paragraphe 3. Toutefois, une faute gênante s'est glissée dans la traduction française du texte original néerlandais, faute que je n'ai malheureusement découverte qu'après avoir soumis ma lettre du 28 juin dernier, diffusée avec le document CHARTE 4406/00 CONTRIB 262 du 6 juillet dernier, dans laquelle j'avais repris la version française et la version anglaise telles qu'elles figuraient dans le document CHARTE 4332/00 CONVENT 35 du 25 mai dernier.

La traduction française correcte aurait dû être :

« Dans la mesure où la présente Charte contient des droits correspondants à des droits énoncés dans la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, leur signification et leur portée sont les mêmes que la signification et la portée que leur confère la CEDH, sauf si la présente Charte prévoit une protection plus étendue. »

Au lieu de « les mêmes que », figurait dans la version française de CHARTE 4332/00 CONVENT 35 du 25 mai « similaires à ». Dans le texte anglais figurait à juste titre « the same as ».

Dans l'article 50, paragraphe 3, on retrouve à nouveau « similaires à ». À partir du français, qui était de toute évidence la langue de travail du Présidium ou du secrétariat pour la rédaction de CHARTE 4422/00 CONVENT 45, le texte anglais a été traduit par : « similar to ». Le texte néerlandais a été traduit par « dezelfde als » (les mêmes que). J'ai constaté que les textes danois, finlandais et suédois correspondent au texte néerlandais, comme si le texte français avait comporté « les mêmes que ». Des différences sont donc apparues entre le texte français et le texte anglais, d'une part, et les textes néerlandais, danois, finlandais et suédois, de l'autre, ces derniers textes correspondant à l'amendement original (582).

J'ai eu l'intention formelle de donner aux mots de mon amendement la signification rendue en français par « les mêmes que » ou « identiques à » et en anglais « the same as » ou « identical to ». Compte tenu de la grande importance de cette disposition horizontale, je prie instamment le Présidium de veiller à ce que dans toutes les langues, l'intention originelle – en dépit de la formulation divergente, les droits fondamentaux énoncés dans la Charte sont identiques à ceux contenus dans la CEDH – soit rendue de manière correcte et sans équivoque.

De plus, il me semble préférable, du point de vue de la systématique, que le texte (corrigé) de l'article 50, paragraphe 3, soit repris en tant qu'article 50, paragraphe 1. Je serais d'accord pour que, conformément à la proposition de M. Olsen, les articles dont il s'agit soient cités avec leur numéro, afin que tout le monde sache exactement à quels articles cette disposition horizontale se rapporte. Si nous convenions, par ailleurs, qu'aucune disposition de ces articles ne vise à conférer une protection plus élevée ou plus étendue que la CEDH, le dernier membre de phrase pourrait être supprimé. Cela peut tuer dans l'œuf les tentatives d'avocats de plaider que la Charte vise un degré de protection plus élevé que la CEDH.

« Toute personne » dans les articles 14, paragraphe 1, 15, paragraphe 1, 27, 32, paragraphe 3 et 33

Le gouvernement néerlandais maintient expressément ses objections insurmontables contre l'usage de la notion de « toute personne » dans les articles 14, paragraphe 1, 15, paragraphe 1, 27, 32, paragraphe 2, et 33 pour les raisons que j'ai exposées au cours des conférences de la Convention lors de l'examen de ces articles. Ces raisons sont les suivantes :

Article 14, paragraphe 1 : Les étrangers ayant dépassé l'âge de la scolarité obligatoire (17 ans), séjournant illégalement aux Pays-Bas, n'ont pas droit à l'enseignement et n'ont pas accès à la formation professionnelle et continue. Le caractère insurmontable de l'objection des Pays-Bas réside dans le risque que, sur la base de la Charte, le juge national juge que les étrangers ayant dépassé l'âge de la scolarité obligatoire, séjournant illégalement aux Pays-Bas, qui ne peuvent pas être expulsés pour des raisons techniques (pays d'origine inconnu, l'intéressé n'a pas de passeport, ni un autre document d'identité valable, etc.) ont droit à l'enseignement et accès à la formation professionnelle et continue.

Article 15, paragraphe 1 : Seules les personnes qui séjournent légalement dans un État membre de l'Union et qui, de surcroît, ont le droit de travailler et possèdent les qualifications requises à cet effet, ont le droit d'exercer une profession librement choisie. Les personnes séjournant illégalement dans un État membre de l'Union et les demandeurs d'asile dont la demande est encore à l'examen, n'ont en général pas le droit d'exercer une profession librement choisie. Les membres des représentations diplomatiques de pays tiers séjournent légalement sur le territoire d'un État membre, mais ne sont pas autorisés à exercer un autre métier que celui pour lequel ils ont été admis en tant que diplomate. Le caractère insurmontable de l'objection du gouvernement néerlandais réside dans le risque de voir le juge national juger, sur la base de la Charte, que les étrangers séjournant légalement aux Pays-Bas qui ne peuvent pas être expulsés pour des raisons techniques (pays d'origine inconnu, l'intéressé n'a pas de passeport, ni un autre document d'identité valable, etc.) ont le droit d'exercer une profession librement choisie.

La possibilité offerte par l'article 50, paragraphe 1, d'apporter des limitations aux droits énoncés dans la Charte peut être utilisée pour imposer des critères de compétence et de qualité à des métiers exigeant une certaine formation (médecins, avocats), mais cette compétence ne confère pas aux États membres la liberté de limiter les droits fondamentaux qui ont été reconnus à toute personne uniquement pour des ressortissants de pays tiers séjournant illégalement dans un État membre. Il existe aux Pays-Bas une législation qui exclut les étrangers y séjournant illégalement de certaines compétences et facilités. Le gouvernement n'entend pas voir cette législation menacée par une formulation trop large des droits fondamentaux, même s'ils ne devaient valoir que pour les organes et institutions de l'Union et, en ce qui concerne les États membres, dans le champ d'application du droit communautaire. Le juge pourrait être sensible à l'argument selon lequel aucune réglementation ne peut être applicable dans un pays si elle est considérée, au niveau de l'Union, comme contraire aux droits fondamentaux reconnus à toute personne.

Article 27 : Il existe une objection insurmontable, pour les mêmes raisons, à l'utilisation de la notion de « toute personne » dans l'article 27. Seules les personnes qui séjournent légalement dans un État membre et ont le droit d'y travailler, peuvent faire valoir le droit d'accéder à un service de placement.

Article 32, paragraphe 3 : Les étrangers séjournant illégalement aux Pays-Bas n'ont pas droit à une aide sociale ou à une aide au logement. L'ajout du membre de phrase « selon les modalités établies par les législations et pratiques nationales » n'offre aucune issue. La législation néerlandaise ne pose pas aux étrangers séjournant illégalement aux Pays-Bas de conditions pour bénéficier d'une aide sociale ou d'une aide au logement. Le législateur les en a exclus. En outre, les demandeurs d'asile dont la demande est encore à l'examen bénéficient de conditions d'hébergement et d'aide sociale différentes de celles dont bénéficient les Néerlandais et les étrangers admis aux Pays-Bas, à savoir, ils sont hébergés collectivement dans des centres d'accueil et reçoivent une aide partiellement en nature.

Article 33 : Les étrangers séjournant illégalement aux Pays-Bas ne bénéficient de soins médicaux et de la prévention sanitaire que dans des cas d'urgence. Ne peuvent bénéficier d'autres dispositifs que les services d'urgence les personnes qui peuvent en payer les coûts soit eux-mêmes, soit en vertu d'une assurance. Le problème des étrangers séjournant illégalement aux Pays-Bas est qu'ils ne sont en général pas assurés. Je souscris d'ailleurs à la remarque de monsieur Patijn qu'il ne s'agit pas, au fond, de l'accès aux soins de santé préventifs et curatifs, mais d'une interdiction d'exclusion de l'assurance frais de maladie.

Dans tous ces cas, les Pays-Bas ne veulent en aucun cas courir le risque de se voir condamnés à admettre des étrangers séjournant illégalement aux Pays-Bas à des dispositifs dont le législateur les a expressément exclus. Si ces dispositions figurent dans la version à soumettre au Conseil européen, les Pays-Bas ne pourront pas coopérer à l'élaboration de la Charte si elle reste inchangée.

Autres remarques :

Les remarques ci-dessous sont faites soit à titre d'objection, soit dans le but d'apporter une amélioration qualitative.

Préambule sous 7 : Compte tenu de l'importance de certaines dispositions horizontales et des nombreux renvois aux législations et pratiques nationales, il n'est pas question de garantie des droits et libertés énoncés dans la Charte. De plus, il ne pourrait être question de garantie que si le Conseil européen décidait d'arrêter une charte juridiquement contraignante.

Article 3, paragraphe 2 : L'utilisation du terme « notamment » signifie qu'il y a plus de principes à respecter, mais ceux-ci ne sont pas cités. Cela n'est pas acceptable pour ceux qui doivent respecter ces principes. La même objection s'applique à l'interdiction des pratiques eugéniques. Quelles sont les pratiques eugéniques interdites autres que celles qui visent la sélection des personnes ? Le gouvernement néerlandais préférerait que tout le paragraphe 2 de l'article 3 soit supprimé. Il souhaiterait, en tout cas, voir supprimée l'interdiction des pratiques eugéniques, celles-ci étant insuffisamment définies.

Article 11, paragraphe 2 : Les mots « dans le respect du pluralisme et de la transparence » rendent la disposition imprécise. Doit-on interpréter « dans le respect de » comme une limitation ou comme une extension ? Est-ce la tâche du gouvernement de respecter le pluralisme et la transparence ou de ceux à qui est garantie la liberté des médias ? Le commentaire dans CONVENT 46 et l'arrêt du 25 juillet 1999 dans l'affaire C288/89 ne sont pas concluants à ce sujet. Quel est le rapport entre la liberté d'information et le droit d'accès aux documents du Parlement européen, du Conseil et de la Commission qui n'est accordé dans l'article 40 qu'aux citoyens et aux résidents de l'Union et aux personnes morales ayant un siège statutaire dans un État membre ?

Article 14, paragraphe 1, deuxième phrase : Aux Pays-Bas, l'enseignement primaire est gratuit, mais le paiement d'un droit de scolarité est obligatoire pour l'enseignement post-primaire pour les jeunes à partir de 16 ans, même si cet enseignement est obligatoire. Il y a toutefois une possibilité de bénéficier d'une compensation, donc de suivre gratuitement l'enseignement post-primaire obligatoire, à plein temps ou à temps partiel. Le commentaire dans CONVENT 46 fait toutefois état du « principe de gratuité de l'enseignement obligatoire. » Comme on fait ici état d'un principe, la question se pose de savoir si la disposition laisse la liberté de prélever un droit de scolarité et de ne donner une allocation que dans les cas d'incapacité financière. Si la disposition vise également la gratuité de l'enseignement post-primaire obligatoire et l'exclusion de la possibilité de demander une contribution, cette disposition suscite de la part du gouvernement néerlandais une objection insurmontable.

Article 15, paragraphes 1 et 2 : Il est recommandé d'intervertir les paragraphes 1 et 2.

Article 15, paragraphe 3 : Les ressortissants de pays tiers séjournant illégalement sur le territoire d'un État membre n'ont pas tous droit à des conditions de travail équivalentes. Ils doivent aussi être autorisés à travailler dans cet État membre. L'article devrait donc s'énoncer comme suit :

« Les ressortissants de pays tiers qui sont autorisés à travailler sur le territoire d'un État membre, ont droit à des conditions de travail équivalentes à celles dont bénéficient les citoyens de l'Union ».

Article 18 : Il n'existe pas de droit d'asile. Il existe toutefois un droit de demander asile ou de chercher asile. Le libellé correct devrait donc être :

« Le droit de demander asile est garanti... »

Article 19, paragraphe 2 : La traduction néerlandaise de « pourrait être soumis » marque le mode irréel, alors que la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme à Strasbourg part justement du principe qu'il doit y avoir un danger réel que la personne dont l'extradition est demandée soit condamnée à mort, ou soumise à la torture ou à d'autres peines ou traitements inhumains ou dégradants. Conformément à cette jurisprudence, l'article devrait être libellé comme suit :

Article 22, paragraphe 2 : Je suppose qu'un certain nombre de mots ont été omis et que ce paragraphe doit être libellé comme suit :

« Le principe de l'égalité de traitement n'empêche pas que, pour assurer dans la pratique l'égalité totale de traitement entre les hommes et les femmes en matière d'emploi, des mesures soient maintenues ou adoptées prévoyant des avantages spécifiques destinés à faciliter l'exercice d'une activité professionnelle par le sexe sous-représenté ou à prévenir ou compenser des désavantages dans la carrière professionnelle. »

Article 30, paragraphe 1 : Après une période de scolarité obligatoire à plein temps jusqu'à la 16^e année, les Pays-Bas connaissent une période de scolarité obligatoire partielle pendant la 16^e et la 17^e année. Un jeune est autorisé à travailler à cet âge, en tenant compte des heures d'enseignement obligatoire. La deuxième phrase devrait donc s'énoncer comme suit :

« L'âge minimal d'admission au travail ne doit pas être inférieur à l'âge auquel cesse la période de scolarité obligatoire à plein temps, »

Article 39, paragraphe 2 : L'utilisation du terme « notamment » soulève la même objection que celle que j'ai faite à l'article 3, paragraphe 2. L'utilisation du terme « notamment » suggère que le droit formulé au paragraphe 1 comprend plus de droits que les trois droits énumérés au paragraphe 2, qui ne sont toutefois pas cités et ne sont donc pas reconnaissables, mais qui existent bel et bien. Cela est inacceptable pour ceux qui peuvent invoquer ces droits et pour ceux qui doivent les respecter. Il convient donc de faire un choix entre énumérer tous les droits ou omettre le terme « notamment ».

Article 41 : Il est préférable de reconnaître ce droit à toute personne.

Article 45, paragraphe 1 : La formulation de cet article est beaucoup trop large. Il ressort du commentaire que l'article n'a pour but que « l'inscription de la jurisprudence de la Cour de Justice de Luxembourg dans la Charte » et non « de modifier le système de recours prévu par les traités et notamment les règles relatives à la recevabilité ». Ceci devrait être exprimé plus clairement dans le texte du paragraphe 1 afin d'éviter l'apparition d'innombrables litiges de compétence sur la base de cet article dont la formulation est trop large.

Article 47, paragraphe 2 : Les mots « principes généraux du » ont probablement été omis, à tort. L'article s'énonçait et devrait encore s'énoncer comme suit :

Article 49, paragraphe 1 : La question se pose de savoir s'il faut compter Europol parmi les « institutions et organes de l'Union ». Le gouvernement néerlandais est partisan d'inclure Europol dans le champ d'application de l'article. Si sa rédaction l'exclut, il convient de donner la préférence à une rédaction qui place Europol dans le champ d'application de cet article, et donc de la Charte. Par exemple :

« Les dispositions de la présente Charte s'adressent aux institutions et organes de l'Union dans le cadre des compétences qui leur sont attribuées par des conventions ou pour leur mise en œuvre, ainsi qu'aux institutions ou organes qui sont actifs dans le domaine de l'Union, en vertu de mesures du Conseil, dans le respect du principe de subsidiarité, ainsi... »

De plus, le passage « et uniquement lorsqu'ils mettent en œuvre le droit de l'Union » devrait plutôt s'énoncer comme suit :

« ainsi qu'aux États membres uniquement dans le champ d'application du droit de l'Union. »

Article 50 :

1. J'ai déjà indiqué que je préférerais que le paragraphe 3 prenne la place du paragraphe 1. Je prie à nouveau le Présidium de considérer mon amendement visant à renvoyer de la même manière que dans l'actuel paragraphe 3 aux articles correspondants de la Charte sociale européenne révisée :

« Dans la mesure où la présente Charte contient des droits et des principes sociaux correspondant à des droits et des principes énoncés dans la Charte sociale européenne révisée, leur sens et leur portée sont les mêmes que ceux que leur confère la Charte sociale européenne révisée. »

De mon point de vue, ce paragraphe devrait devenir le paragraphe 2, les paragraphes 1 et 2 étant à renuméroter 3 et 4.

2. Inclure dans le paragraphe 1 originel (de mon point de vue le paragraphe 2 ou 3) des références à la CEDH et à la Charte sociale européenne révisée, renforcerait encore davantage le parallélisme entre la Charte et la CEDH (et la Charte sociale européenne révisée) et, par conséquent, la sécurité juridique. Par exemple comme suit :

« Les limitations à l'exercice des droits et des libertés reconnus par la présente Charte ne doivent pas aller au-delà de celles qui sont autorisées par la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales et par la Charte sociale européenne révisée. Des limitations à d'autres droits fondamentaux ne peuvent être imposées que par l'autorité législative compétente. Dans le respect du principe de...etc. »

Enfin, j'attire l'attention sur le fait qu'il est recommandé de numéroter les paragraphes des articles 12, 22, 30 et 31.

J'apprécierai hautement l'attention que le Présidium voudra bien accorder à ces remarques générales. Je signale, à toutes fins utiles, que j'envoie une deuxième lettre à monsieur JAQUÉ, à l'intention du service de traduction. Cette lettre concerne les erreurs de traduction et l'usage incorrect du néerlandais.

Veillez agréer, cher collègue et ami, les assurances de ma considération distinguée.

KORTHALS ALTES

La Haye, le 7 septembre 2000

Cher Collègue et Ami,

Hieronder volgen mijn algemene opmerkingen naar aanleiding van de volledige ontwerptekst van het handvest van de grondrechten van de Europese Unie die op 28 juli jl. door het Presidium is voorgesteld.

Vooraf maak ik de opmerking dat ik de op 28 juli jl. beschikbaar gekomen teksten in het algemeen verbeterd acht ten opzichte van voorgaande ontwerpteksten, maar dat – mede door de korte tijd die de conventie en het Presidium zijn gegund – de teksten nog niet de kwaliteit hebben die nodig is om tot een juridisch bindend document te geraken. Dat is niet zonder gevaar, want ook zonder formele bindende kracht zal het handvest een rol gaan spelen in de rechtspraak. Voor zover ik in het navolgende naar de toelichtingen in CONVENT 46 verwijs, heb ik gebruik gemaakt van de Franse tekst, daar teksten in andere talen nog niet beschikbaar zijn.

Artikel 50 lid 3:

De Nederlandse regering heeft wat de klassieke grondrechten betreft altijd grote waarde gehecht aan een zo groot mogelijke overeenstemming tussen de in het handvest van de grondrechten van de Europese Unie te formuleren grondrechten en de daarmee corresponderende grondrechten in het EVRM. De belangrijkste reden hiervoor is dat de Europese burger – en alle anderen voor wie deze grondrechten gelden – het meest is gediend met één en hetzelfde regiem van klassieke grondrechten onder EVRM en handvest. De meerwaarde van het handvest ten opzichte van het EVRM ziet de Nederlandse regering vooral in de formulering van de sociale en economische grondrechten, naast de vastlegging van de burgerrechten.

235

Volledige gelijkheid van definitie, beperkingsgronden en voorwaarden waaronder beperkingen op grondrechten mogen worden aangebracht en voorwaarden waaraan deze beperkingen moeten voldoen, had bereikt kunnen worden door een definiërend “Part B”, zoals voorgesteld door Lord Goldsmith. Deze volledige gelijkheid had ook bereikt kunnen worden door in elk artikel betreffende een klassiek grondrecht te verwijzen naar het corresponderende artikel in het EVRM. Toen het er maar uitzag dat het voorstel van Lord Goldsmith onvoldoende ondersteuning zou krijgen, heb ik amendementen van deze strekking ingediend. Het Presidium heeft deze amendementen niet overgenomen. Als derde mogelijkheid van een zo groot mogelijke gelijkheid van inhoud en reikwijdte van de klassieke grondrechten tussen EVRM en handvest zag ik een horizontaal artikel, zoals door mij voorgesteld in amendement 582. Het Presidium heeft dit amendement in beginsel overgenomen in artikel 50 lid 3. Er is echter bij de vertaling van de oorspronkelijk in het Nederlands geformuleerde tekst in het Frans een storende fout opgetreden, die ik helaas pas heb ontdekt na indiening van mijn brief van 28 juni jl., verspreid met CHARTE 4406/00 CONTRIB 262 van 6 juli jl., waarin ik de Franstalige en de Engelstalige versie, zoals deze waren opgenomen in CHARTE 4332/00 CONVENT 35 van 25 mei jl., had overgenomen.

De juiste vertaling in het Frans had moeten luiden:

Dans la mesure où la présente Charte contient des droits correspondants à des droits énoncés dans la Convention européenne des droits de l’homme, leur signification et leur portée sont les mêmes que la signification et la portée que leur confère la CEDH, sauf si la présente Charte prévoit une protection plus étendue.

In plaats van “les mêmes que” stond in de Franse versie van CHARTE 4332/00 CONVENT 35 van 25 mei jl. ”similaires à”. In de Engelse tekst stond ten rechte “the same as”.

In artikel 50 lid 3 staat in de Franse tekst wederom “similaires à”. Uit het Frans, dat bij de opstelling van Charte 4422/00 CONVENT 45 duidelijk de werktaal van het Presidium of het secretariaat is geweest, is nu in de Engelse tekst vermeld “similar to”. In de Nederlandse tekst is dit vertaald als “dezelfde als” (les mêmes que). Mij is gebleken dat in het Deens, het Fins en het Zweeds de tekst overeenkomt met de Nederlandse, alsof in de Franse tekst gestaan zou hebben “les mêmes que”. Er zijn dus verschillen ontstaan tussen de Franse en Engelse tekst enerzijds en de Nederlandse, Deense, Finse en Zweedse tekst anderzijds, waarbij laatstgenoemde teksten overeenstemmen met het oorspronkelijke amendement (582).

Het is mijn uitdrukkelijke bedoeling geweest aan de woorden in mijn amendement de betekenis te geven die in het Frans wordt weergegeven met “les mêmes que” of “identique à” en in het Engels met “the same as” of “identical”.

Vanwege het grote belang van deze horizontale bepaling verzoek ik het Presidium met grote klem erop toe te zien dat in alle talen de oorspronkelijke bedoeling – de klassieke grondrechten zijn in het handvest, ongeacht afwijkende formulering, identiek aan die in het EVRM –juist en ondubbelzinnig wordt weergegeven.

Voorts acht ik het uit oogpunt van systematiek beter, wanneer de (verbeterde) tekst van artikel 50 lid 3 wordt opgenomen als artikel 50 lid 1. Ik zou mij ermee kunnen verenigen wanneer, overeenkomstig het voorstel van de heer Olsen, de artikelen waarom het gaat met hun nummer worden vermeld, zodat het voor een ieder duidelijk is op welke artikelen deze horizontale bepaling betrekking heeft. Wanneer wij het bovendien erover eens zouden zijn dat in geen van deze artikelen beoogd is een hogere of een ruimere mate van bescherming te verlenen dan het EVRM verleent, zou de laatste bijzin kunnen vervallen. Dat kan pogingen van advocaten om te pleiten dat het handvest een hogere beschermingsgraad beoogt dan het EVRM in de kiem smoren.

“Eenieder” in de artikelen 14 lid 1, 15 lid 1, 27, 32 lid 3 en 33:

De Nederlandse regering handhaaft uitdrukkelijk haar onoverkomelijke bezwaren tegen het gebruik van het begrip “eenieder” in de artikelen 14 lid 1, 15 lid 1, 27, 32 lid 3 en 33 op de gronden die ik tijdens de vergaderingen van de Conventie bij de behandeling van deze artikelen heb uiteengezet. Deze gronden zijn voor:

Artikel 14 lid 1: Vreemdelingen boven de leerplichtige leeftijd (tot en met 17 jaar) die niet rechtmatig in Nederland verblijven, hebben geen recht op onderwijs en geen toegang tot beroepsopleiding en bijscholing. Het onoverkomelijke karakter van het bezwaar van de Nederlandse regering is gelegen in het risico dat de nationale rechter op grond van het handvest zal oordelen dat onrechtmatig in Nederland verblijvende vreemdelingen boven de leerplichtige leeftijd die op technische gronden niet kunnen worden uitgezet (betrokkene heeft geen paspoort of ander geldig identiteitsbewijs, land van herkomst onbekend), het recht hebben op onderwijs en toegang tot een beroepsopleiding of bijscholing.

Artikel 15 lid 1: Alleen zij die rechtmatig in een lidstaat van de Unie verblijven en dan bovendien nog het recht hebben te werken en de daartoe vereiste kwalificaties hebben, hebben het recht een vrijelijk gekozen beroep uit te oefenen. Onrechtmatig in de Unie verblijvenden en asielzoekers wier asielverzoek nog in behandeling is, hebben in het algemeen niet het recht een vrijelijk gekozen beroep uit te oefenen. Leden van diplomatieke vertegenwoordigingen van derde landen verblijven rechtmatig op het grondgebied van een lidstaat, maar mogen geen ander beroep uitoefenen dan dat waarvoor zij als diplomaat zijn toegelaten. Het onoverkomelijke karakter van het bezwaar van de Nederlandse regering is gelegen in het risico dat de nationale rechter op grond van het handvest zal oordelen dat onrechtmatig in Nederland verblijvende vreemdelingen die op technische gronden niet kunnen worden uitgezet (land van herkomst onbekend, betrokkene heeft geen paspoort of ander geldig identiteitsbewijs enz.), het recht hebben een vrijelijk gekozen beroep uit te oefenen.

De mogelijkheid die artikel 50 lid 1 biedt om beperkingen aan te brengen op de in het handvest genoemde rechten, kan wel worden aangewend om bevoegdheids- en kwaliteitseisen te stellen voor beroepen waarvoor een bepaalde opleiding vereist is (artsen, advocaten), maar deze bevoegdheid geeft lidstaten niet de vrijheid grondrechten die aan eenieder zijn toegekend alleen voor onderdanen van derde landen die onrechtmatig in die lidstaat verblijven, te beperken. In Nederland bestaat wel wetgeving die onrechtmatig in Nederland verblijvende vreemdelingen uitsluit van bepaalde bevoegdheden en faciliteiten. Die wetgeving wil de regering niet in gevaar brengen door te ruim geformuleerde grondrechten, ook al zouden die slechts gelden voor de organen en instellingen van de Unie en, wat de lidstaten betreft binnen de werkingssfeer van het Unierecht. De rechter zou gevoelig kunnen blijken voor het argument dat binnenslands geen regelingen kunnen gelden die op Unieniveau in strijd worden geacht met voor eenieder geldende grondrechten.

Artikel 27: Op dezelfde gronden bestaat onoverkomelijk bezwaar tegen het gebruik van het begrip “eenieder” in artikel 27. Alleen zij die rechtmatig in een lidstaat verblijven en het recht hebben aldaar werkzaamheden te verrichten, kunnen aanspraak maken op arbeidsbemiddeling.

Artikel 32 lid 3: Onrechtmatig in Nederland verblijvende vreemdelingen hebben geen aanspraak op bijstand of op huursubsidie. De toevoeging “onder de door de nationale wetgevingen en praktijken gestelde voorwaarden” biedt geen uitkomst. De Nederlandse wetgeving stelt aan onrechtmatig in Nederland verblijvende vreemdelingen geen voorwaarden voor bijstand of huursubsidie. De wetgever heeft hen daarvan uitgesloten. Bovendien geldt voor asielzoekers wier asielverzoek nog in behandeling is, dat zij op andere wijze huisvesting en bijstand ontvangen dan Nederlanders en toegelaten vreemdelingen, te weten gezamenlijke huisvesting in opvangcentra en ondersteuning deels in natura.

Artikel 33: Voor onrechtmatig in Nederland verblijvende vreemdelingen staan alleen de dringend vereiste medische en preventieve voorzieningen open. Andere dan dringend vereiste voorzieningen staan slechts open voor hen die de kosten daarvan zelf of krachtens een bestaande verzekering kunnen betalen. Het probleem van de onrechtmatig in Nederland verblijvende vreemdelingen is dat zij in het algemeen niet verzekerd zijn. Ik sluit mij bovendien aan bij de opmerking van de heer Patijn dat het in wezen niet gaat om de toegankelijkheid van de curatieve en preventieve gezondheidszorg, maar om een verbod tot uitsluiting van ziektekostenverzekering.

In al deze gevallen geldt dat de Nederlandse regering onder geen beding het risico wil lopen te worden veroordeeld onrechtmatig in Nederland verblijvende vreemdelingen toe te laten tot voorzieningen waarvan de wetgever hen uitdrukkelijk heeft uitgesloten. Indien de bepalingen mochten voorkomen in de aan de Europese Raad voor te leggen versie, zal Nederland aan ongewijzigde totstandkoming van het handvest niet kunnen meewerken.

Overige opmerkingen:

Hieronder volgen artikelsgewijs nog enkele opmerkingen, hetzij als bezwaar, hetzij met het doel een kwalitatieve verbetering aan te bevelen.

Preambule § 7: Gelet op de betekenis van enkele horizontale bepalingen en de vele verwijzingen naar nationale wetgeving en praktijken, is er geen sprake van waarborging van de in het handvest vermelde rechten en vrijheden. Bovendien zou pas sprake kunnen zijn van waarborging als de Europese Raad zou besluiten tot vaststelling van een rechtens afdwingbaar handvest.

Artikel 3 lid 2: Het gebruik van het begrip “met name” (“notamment”) duidt erop dat er meer beginselen zijn die nageleefd moeten worden, die echter niet worden genoemd. Dat is voor degenen die deze beginselen moeten naleven niet aanvaardbaar. Hetzelfde bezwaar geldt het verbod van eugenetische praktijken. Welke eugenetische praktijken zijn er nog meer verboden dan die welke de selectie van personen ten doel hebben? De Nederlandse regering zou de voorkeur eraan geven het gehele tweede lid van artikel 3 te laten vervallen. In ieder geval zou zij het verbod van eugenetische praktijken, als zijnde te weinig omlijnd, geschrapt willen zien.

Artikel 11 lid 2: De woorden “met inachtneming van pluralisme en doorzichtigheid” (“dans le respect du pluralisme et de la transparence”) maken de bepaling onduidelijk. Moet “dans le respect de” worden uitgelegd als een beperking of als een uitbreiding? Is het een taak van de overheid om de pluriformiteit en de doorzichtigheid te eerbiedigen of van degenen aan wie de mediavrijheid wordt gegarandeerd. De toelichting in CONVENT 46 en het arrest van 25 juli 1991 in zaak C288/89 geven hierover geen uitsluitsel. Hoe verhoudt zich de vrijheid van informatie zich tot het recht op toegang tot documenten van het Europese Parlement, de Raad en de Commissie, dat in artikel 40 slechts aan burgers en ingezetenen van de Unie en rechtspersonen met statutaire zetel in een lidstaat is verleend?

Artikel 14 lid 1 tweede volzin: In Nederland is het basisonderwijs kosteloos, maar de betaling van schoolgeld voor vervolgonderwijs voor leerlingen vanaf 16 jaar verplicht, ook voor zover dit vervolgonderwijs verplicht is. Er is echter een mogelijkheid tot compensatie, dus een mogelijkheid het verplichte vervolgonderwijs (geheel of gedeeltelijk) kosteloos te volgen. In de toelichting in CONVENT 46 is echter vermeld dat het gaat om “le principe de gratuité de l’enseignement obligatoire”. Omdat het hier een principe wordt genoemd rijst de vraag of de bepaling wel de vrijheid laat schoolgeld te heffen en alleen in geval van onvermogensheid een tegemoetkoming te verlenen. Als de bepaling beoogt ook het verplichte vervolgonderwijs kosteloos te doen zijn en de mogelijkheid van het vragen van een bijdrage uit te sluiten, levert deze bepaling voor de Nederlandse regering een onoverkomelijk bezwaar op.

Artikel 15 leden 1 en 2: Het verdient aanbeveling de leden 1 en 2 om te wisselen.

Artikel 15 lid 3: Niet alle onderdanen van derde landen die rechtmatig op het grondgebied van lidstaten verblijven, hebben recht op gelijkwaardige arbeidsvoorwaarden. Zij moeten ook toestemming hebben om in die lidstaat te werken. Het artikel zou dus moeten luiden:

“Onderdanen van derde landen wie het is toegestaan te werken op het gebied van een lidstaat, hebben het recht op arbeidsvoorwaarden die gelijkwaardig zijn aan die welke de burgers van de Unie genieten.”

Artikel 18: Een recht op asiel bestaat niet. Wel het recht om asiel te vragen of om asiel te zoeken. De juiste redactie zou dus moeten luiden:

“Het recht op het vragen van asiel is gegarandeerd ...”

Artikel 19 lid 2: In de Nederlandse vertaling is “pourrait être soumis” een irrealis, terwijl de jurisprudentie van het Europese Hof voor de Rechten van de Mens te Straatsburg juist ervan uitgaat dat er een reëel risico moet bestaan dat de persoon van wie uitlevering is verzocht, ter dood wordt veroordeeld of aan marteling of aan andere onmenselijke of vernederende behandelingen of bestraffingen wordt onderworpen. De redactie in overeenstemming met deze jurisprudentie zou dus moeten luiden:

“Niemand mag worden verwijderd of uitgezet naar of uitgeleverd aan een staat waarin hij een reëel risico loopt aan de doodstraf, aan marteling of aan andere onmenselijke of vernederende behandelingen of bestraffingen te worden onderworpen.”

Artikel 22 lid 2: Ik vermoed dat een aantal woorden is weggefallen en dat dit artikellid als volgt dient te luiden:

“Het beginsel van gelijke behandeling belet niet dat, om volledige gelijkheid van mannen en vrouwen in het beroepsleven in de praktijk te verzekeren, maatregelen gehandhaafd of genomen worden waarbij specifieke voordelen worden ingesteld om de uitoefening van een beroepsactiviteit door het ondervertegenwoordigde geslacht te vergemakkelijken of om nadelen in de beroepsloopbaan te voorkomen of te compenseren.”

Artikel 30 lid 1: Nederland kent na de periode van volledige leerplicht tot het 16^{de} jaar nog een periode van partiële leerplicht gedurende het 16^{de} en 17^{de} jaar. Op die leeftijd mag wel gewerkt worden, met inachtneming van de te volgen lessen. Daarom zou de tweede volzin moeten luiden:

“De minimumleeftijd voor toelating tot het arbeidsproces mag niet lager zijn dan de leeftijd waarop de volledige leerplicht ophoudt, ...”

Artikel 39 lid 2: Hierbij geldt hetzelfde bezwaar tegen het gebruik van het begrip “met name” (“notamment”) als ik bij artikel 3 lid 2 heb gemaakt. Het gebruik van het begrip “met name” (“notamment”) duidt erop dat het in lid 1 geformuleerde recht meer rechten omvat dan de drie die in lid 2 zijn opgesomd, die echter niet worden genoemd en dus niet kenbaar zijn, maar wel bestaan. Dat is niet aanvaardbaar voor degenen die zich op deze mogen beroepen noch voor hen die deze rechten moeten eerbiedigen. Er moet dus een keuze worden gemaakt tussen het opsommen van alle rechten of het weglaten van “met name” (“notamment”).

Artikel 41: Het verdient de voorkeur dit recht toe te kennen aan eenieder.

Artikel 45 lid 1: Dit artikel is veel te ruim geformuleerd. Uit de toelichting blijkt dat het artikel slechts “inscription de la jurisprudence de la Cour de Justice de Luxembourg dans la charte” ten doel heeft en niet “de modifier le système de recours prévu par les traités et notamment les règles relatives à la recevabilité.” Dat zou in de tekst van lid 1 duidelijker tot uitdrukking gebracht moeten worden om talrijke competentiegeschillen op basis van dit te ruim geformuleerde artikel te voorkomen.

Artikel 47 lid 2: Vermoedelijk zijn ten onrechte de woorden “algemene beginselen van” weggefallen. Het artikel luidde en zou moeten blijven luiden:

“Dit artikel staat niet in de weg aan berechting en bestraffing van iemand die schuldig is aan een handelen of nalaten dat ten tijde van dat handelen of nalaten een misdrijf was overeenkomstig de algemene beginselen van internationaal recht.

Artikel 49 lid 1: De vraag rijst of onder “instellingen en organen van de Unie” ook Europol begrepen dient te worden. De Nederlandse regering is er voorstander van dat Europol wel onder de werkingssfeer valt. Mocht de huidige redactie dat uitsluiten, dan gaat de voorkeur ernaar uit dat een redactie wordt gekozen die Europol onder de werking van dit artikel en dus van het handvest brengt. Bijvoorbeeld:

De bepalingen van dit handvest zijn gericht tot de instellingen en organen van de Unie in het kader van de bevoegdheden die hun bij verdrag of ter uitvoering daarvan zijn verleend, alsmede tot de instellingen of organen die op grond van maatregelen van de Raad werkzaam zijn op het terrein van de Unie, met inachtneming van het subsidiariteitsbeginsel, en, ...”

Voorts zou de passage “en, uitsluitend wanneer zij het recht van de Unie ten uitvoer brengen, tot de lidstaten” beter kunnen luiden:

“en, uitsluitend binnen de werkingssfeer van het Unierecht, tot de lidstaten.”

Artikel 50:

1. Ik gaf al aan een voorkeur te hebben voor de plaatsing van lid 3 als lid 1. Ik verzoek het Presidium nogmaals mijn amendement te overwegen dat op soortgelijke wijze als in het huidige lid 3 gebeurt, te verwijzen naar de corresponderende artikelen in het Herziene Europees Sociaal Handvest:

Dit lid zou in mijn optiek dan lid 2 moeten worden, met vernummering van de huidige leden 1 en 2 tot 3 en 4.

2. De parallelliteit tussen handvest en EVRM (en Herziene Europees Sociaal Handvest) en daarmee de rechtszekerheid kan verder worden gediend door in het oorspronkelijke lid 1

(in mijn optiek lid 2 of lid 3) verwijzingen naar EVRM en Herzien Europees Sociaal Handvest op de nemen, bijvoorbeeld als volgt:

“Beperkingen op de uitoefening van de in dit handvest erkende rechten en vrijheden mogen niet verder strekken dan die welke door het Europees Verdrag tot bescherming van de rechten van de mens en de fundamentele vrijheden en het Herziene Europees Sociaal Handvest zijn toegestaan. Overige beperkingen kunnen slechts door de bevoegde wetgevende autoriteit worden gesteld. Met inachtneming van ...enz”

Tenslotte vestig ik nog de aandacht erop dat het aanbeveling verdient de leden van de artikelen 12, 22, 30 en 31 alsnog te nummeren.

Ik stel de aandacht die het Presidium aan deze algemene opmerkingen zal willen geven, op hoge prijs. Volledigheidshalve deel ik mede dat ik een tweede brief aan de heer JAQUÉ richt bestemd voor de vertaaldienst. Die brief heeft betrekking op vastgestelde vertaalfouten en onjuist gebruik van het Nederlands.

Met gevoelens van de meeste hoogachting, onder teken ik

An

Das Präsidium des Konventes zur Erarbeitung der EU Grundrechtscharta

(Jean-Paul.Jacque@consilium.eu.int)

Zu Händen

Herrn Inigo Mendez de Vigo,

Vorsitzender der Delegation des Europa-Parlamentes im Chartakonvent

Brüssel, den 20.08.2000

Sehr geehrter Herr Mendez de Vigo

Ergänzend zu der gemeinsamen Stellungnahme zum neuen Gesamtentwurf der Grundrechtscharta vom 28.07.00, die der Kollege Prof. Meyer im Namen der Konventsmitglieder van den Burg, Boumediene-Thiery, Duff, Einem, Fayot, Holoubeck, Ilvari, Kaufmann, Leinen, Martin, Paciotti und Voggenhuber eingereicht hat, und deren Inhalt ich noch einmal der Aufmerksamkeit des Präsidiums empfehle, möchte ich noch einige persönliche Bemerkungen machen. Ebenso verweise ich auf den von mir mitgetragenen Kommentar der PSE Angehörigen in der Delegation des Europaparlamentes im Chartakonvent vom 31.08.2000.

Zur Formulierung allgemein:

Generell sollte in der gesamten Charta noch erheblich konsequenter in der Form „Jede Person hat das Recht...“ bzw. „Niemand darf...“ formuliert werden, denn es gibt nur wenige Artikel bei denen eine solche Formulierung aus juristischen oder formalen Gründen tatsächlich nicht sinnvoll ist. In diesem Sinne wären die Artikel 9, 16, 18, 20, 21, 23, 25, 30, 32, 34, 35, 36 zu überprüfen und gegebenenfalls zu ändern. (siehe unten)

Eine konsequente Anwendung dieser Formulierung würde die Lesbarkeit und auch den Identifikationswert der Charta für die Bürger Europas erheblich erhöhen.

Zu den Artikeln im Einzelnen:Die Präambel

Der Präambel kommt in diesem Zusammenhang besondere Bedeutung zu. Um dieser Bedeutung gerecht zu werden, sollte an dieser Stelle besonders auf eine konsequente und kohärente Formulierung geachtet werden.

243

Abs. 1) Die Formulierung „die Völker Europas“ ist umstritten. Besser wäre daher die Formulierung „Die Menschen Europas“. Zusammen mit einer Kürzung des Absatzes schlage ich deshalb folgende Neuformulierung vor:

„Die Menschen Europas haben eine Union begründet, um auf der Grundlage gemeinsamer Werte eine friedliche Zukunft zu teilen.“

Abs. 7) Im Sinne der insgesamt verfolgten Systematik wäre es hier als Überleitung zu den konkreten Artikeln sinnvoll, nicht von einer „Garantie“ der Rechte zu sprechen, sondern ganz einfach zu formulieren:

„Daher hat jede Person die nachstehenden Rechte und Freiheiten.“

Art. 7 Achtung des Privat und Familienlebens

Im Sinne einer größeren Klarheit schlage ich die Ergänzung dieses Artikels um die folgenden zwei Begriffe vor:

„Jede Person hat das Recht auf die Achtung ihres Privat- und Familienlebens, die Unverletzlichkeit ihrer Wohnung sowie die Vertraulichkeit ihrer Kommunikation.“

Art. 8 Schutz personenbezogener Daten

Da es zum gegenwärtigen Zeitpunkt nicht klar ist, welche Ebene öffentlicher Kontrolle die Einhaltung dieser Rechte überwachen soll, ist die gewählte Formulierung irreführend, da nicht deutlich wird, ob die erwähnte „unabhängige Stelle“ schon existiert oder nicht. Deshalb wäre es besser, die unabhängige Kontrolle klar als Teil des Rechtes selbst zu identifizieren:

„Die Überwachung der Einhaltung dieser Rechte durch unabhängige Organe muss gewährleistet sein“

Art. 10 Gedanken-, Gewissens- und Religionsfreiheit

Diesem Artikel sollte im Sinne des von Prof. Meyer im Namen der o.g. Konventsmitglieder eingereichten Vorschlages ein zweiter Absatz hinzugefügt werden, in dem das Recht auf Kriegsdienstverweigerung verankert wird.

Art. 11 Freiheit der Meinungsäußerung und Informationsfreiheit

Der Artikel sollte im Sinne des von Prof Meyer im Namen der o.g Konventsmitglieder eingereichten Vorschlages geändert werden.

Art. 12 Versammlungs- und Vereinigungsfreiheit

Es ist generell zu begrüßen, dass die europäischen Parteien in Abs. 2) dieses Artikels Aufnahme gefunden haben. Allerdings ist die gewählte Formulierung missverständlich und könnte leicht als ein nicht-grundrechtsrelevanter Kommentar zur Rolle der Parteien kritisiert werden. Daher rege ich an, statt dessen als zweiten Absatz folgende Formulierung aufzunehmen:

„Jede Person hat das Recht, Zusammenschlüsse auf trans-nationaler oder europäischer Ebene zu gründen oder ihnen beizutreten.“

Art. 16 Unternehmerische Freiheit

Die für diesen Artikel gewählte Formulierung ist wenig aussagekräftig und durchbricht unnötigerweise die „Jede Person hat das Recht...“ Systematik. Besser wäre eine Formulierung wie:

„Jede Person hat das Recht, sich in Freiheit unternehmerisch zu betätigen“

Art. 18 Asylrecht

Dieses Recht muss unbedingt als ein „Jede Person hat das Recht“ Artikel formuliert werden. Außerdem ist zu überlegen, ob die Stellung des Asylrechtes nach beruflicher und unternehmerischer Freiheit seiner Bedeutung angemessen ist. Die Formulierung sollte also lauten:

„Jede Person hat das Recht auf Asyl nach Maßgabe des Genfer Abkommens vom 28. Juli 1951...“

Art. 20 Gleichheit vor dem Gesetz

Insbesondere, da Gleichbehandlung und Chancengleichheit in den beiden folgenden Artikeln (21 und 22) noch genauer spezifiziert werden, sollte der Artikel 20 unter allen Umständen lauten:

„Alle Menschen sind vor dem Gesetz gleich“

- damit hier nicht der Eindruck einer Einschränkung auf die Geschlechterproblematik entsteht.

Art. 21 Gleichheit und Nichtdiskriminierung:

Im Sinne der im vorhergehenden Artikel angesprochenen Logik erscheint es sinnvoll, diesen Artikel gegen den folgenden auszutauschen, so dass er zu Artikel 22 wird. Gleichzeitig sollte konsequent der Schutz einer jeden Person vor Diskriminierungen formuliert werden:

„Niemand darf auf Grund von... diskriminiert werden“

Art. 22 Gleichheit von Männern und Frauen

Wie im Kommentar zum vorhergehenden Artikel erwähnt, sollte diese Bestimmung unmittelbar auf Artikel 20 folgen. Bei der Formulierung sollte man sich im Deutschen an die alphabetische Reihenfolge der Geschlechter halten, also:

„Gleichheit von Frauen und Männern“

Art. 23 Schutz der Kinder

Abs. 1) Der zweiten Satz „Sie können ihre Meinung frei äußern“ ist zu streichen, da er eine Sonderstellung für Kinder beim allgemeinen Recht auf Meinungsfreiheit suggeriert.

Abs. 2) wäre besser zu formulieren als:

„Bei allen Kinder betreffenden Maßnahmen öffentlicher oder privater Einrichtungen muß das übergeordnete Interesse des Kindes die (statt „eine“) vorrangige Erwägung sein.“

Art. 24 Integration von behinderten Menschen

Wie in dem gemeinsamen Kommentar zur deutschen Version bereits angemerkt, wäre auf jeden Fall die Formulierung „Menschen mit Behinderungen“ zu verwenden.

Außerdem plädiere ich dafür, den Vorschlägen des European Disability Forums zu folgen und diesem Artikel einen Satz hinzuzufügen, der die Maßnahmen zur Eingliederung in die Gemeinschaft im Bezug auf diese Charta präzisiert, da ohne eine solche Bestimmung die Rechte der Charta für viele Menschen mit Behinderungen nicht zugänglich sind. Es sollte also ergänzt werden:

„Dies gilt insbesondere für Maßnahmen, die den Zugang zu den in dieser Charta aufgeführten Rechten ermöglichen“

Art. 25 Recht auf Unterrichtung und Anhörung der Arbeitnehmer im Unternehmen

Auch in diesem Artikel sollte im Sinne der internen Systematik der Charta konsequent ein individuelles Recht für Angehörige einer bestimmten Gruppe formuliert und diese Individuen zum Subjekt der Rechtsformulierung gemacht werden:

„Arbeitnehmer und ihre Vertretungen haben ein Recht auf...“

Art. 26: Recht auf Kollektivverhandlungen und Kollektivmaßnahmen:

Dieser Artikel sollte im Sinne des von Prof. Meyer im Namen der o.g. Konventsmitglieder eingereichten Kommentars geändert werden. Das Streikrecht ist ein unverzichtbarer Bestandteil des bestehenden internationalen Rechtes und der gemeinsamen Traditionen aller Mitgliedstaaten.

Art. 30 Schutz der Jugendlichen am Arbeitsplatz

Wie in den Anmerkungen zu Artikel 25 vorgeschlagen, sollte auch hier im Sinne der Einheitlichkeit besser formuliert werden:

„Jugendliche, die zur Arbeit zugelassen sind, haben ein Recht auf... und Schutz vor...“

Art. 31 Einklang von Familien und Berufsleben

Der im Titel und im Abs. 2 dieser Artikels verwendete Begriff „Einklang“ ist sprachlich problematisch, da er eine Harmonie suggeriert, die nicht per Recht garantiert werden kann. Daher erscheint es sinnvoll, diesen Begriff im Deutschen durch den neutraleren der „Vereinbarkeit“ zu ersetzen. Außerdem sollte auch hier ein Recht für jede Person formuliert und der Artikel insgesamt gestrafft werden. Ich schlage deshalb folgende Neuformulierung vor:

„Jede Person hat das Recht auf die Vereinbarkeit ihres Berufslebens mit ihrem Familienleben. Dieses Recht umfasst insbesondere den Anspruch auf Schutz vor Entlassung bei Mutterschaft sowie den Anspruch auf bezahlten Mutterschaftsurlaub und Elternurlaub nach der Geburt oder Adoption eines Kindes

Art. 32 Soziale Sicherheit und soziale Unterstützung:

Auch dieser Artikel sollte im Sinne der von Prof. Meyer im Namen der o.g. Konventsmitglieder eingereichten Stellungnahme geändert werden. Insbesondere sollte ein klares Recht auf Wohnen in den 3. Absatz dieses Artikels aufgenommen werden.

Sprachlich rege ich auch hier an, diesen Artikel als Recht einer jeden Person zu formulieren.

Der Absatz 1) könnte dementsprechend lauten:

„Jede Person hat das Recht auf Zugang zu den Leistungen der sozialen Sicherheit und zu den sozialen Diensten...Die Union anerkennt und achtet dieses Recht“

Art. 35 Umweltschutz

und

Art. 36 Verbraucherschutz

Beide Artikel durchbrechen unnötigerweise die individuelle Rechtssystematik und laufen in den gegenwärtigen Formulierungen Gefahr, als reine Politikziele außerhalb des Kölner Mandates zu fallen. Daher sollte in beiden Fällen konsequent formuliert werden:

„Jede Person hat das Recht auf ...“ mit dem Zusatz, dass „die Union ...diese Rechte anerkennt und achtet“.

Art. 37 Aktives und Passives Wahlrecht bei den Wahlen zum Europäischen Parlament.“

und

Art. 38 Aktives und Passives Wahlrecht bei Kommunalwahlen

Beide Artikel sollten im Deutschen geschlechtsneutral formuliert werden.

„Jeder Unionsbürger und jede Unionsbürgerin hat das Recht...“

Art. 39 Recht auf eine gute Verwaltung

Dieser Artikel ist von zentraler Bedeutung für die Akzeptanz und den politischen „Mehrwert“ der Grundrechtscharta. Deshalb schlage ich folgende Ergänzungen vor:

Abs. 2 (1. Spiegelstrich) sollte wie folgt geändert werden:

„ – das Recht einer jeden Person, gehört zu werden, bevor eine sie betreffende (ein Wort gestrichen) individuelle Maßnahme getroffen wird“ – diese Formulierung ist kürzer und umfassender als die vom Präsidium vorgeschlagene, denn es ist nicht immer im voraus klar, ob eine geplante Maßnahme für den Einzelnen tatsächlich nachteilig ist oder nicht.

Abs. 3 sollte sprachlich gestrafft werden:

„Jede Person hat Anspruch darauf, dass die Gemeinschaft Schäden, die ihre Organe oder Bediensteten in Ausübung ihrer Amtstätigkeiten verursachen, nach den allgemeinen Rechtsgrundsätzen ersetzt, die den Rechtsordnungen der Mitgliedstaaten gemeinsam sind.“

Abs. 4 sollte deutlicher als Recht formuliert werden:

„Jede Person hat das Recht, sich in einer der Amtssprachen der Union an die Organe der EU zu wenden, und eine Antwort in der derselben Sprache zu erhalten.“

Art. 40 Recht auf Zugang zu Dokumenten

Es erscheint als eine unberechtigte Einschränkung dieses Rechtes, wenn der Artikel eine exklusive Liste der drei Hauptorgane der Union enthält, denn damit wäre eine Anwendung auf andere von der Union geschaffene oder abhängige Institutionen oder Organe ausgeschlossen. Ich rege deshalb an, eine offeneren Formulierung zu suchen und eventuell nötige Einschränkungen im Hinblick auf notwendige Geheimhaltung präziser zu formulieren.

Art. 43 Freizügigkeit und Aufenthaltsfreiheit

Dieser Artikel sollte im Sinne der von Prof. Meyer im Namen der o.g. Konventsmitglieder eingereichten Stellungnahme konsequent als Recht einer jeden Person auf Freizügigkeit formuliert werden.

Art. 45 Recht auf einen wirksamen Rechtsbehelf und ein unparteiisches Gericht

Im zweiten Absatz sollte der 2. Satz klarer als Recht formuliert werden:

„Jede Person hat das Recht, sich beraten, verteidigen und vertreten zu lassen.“

Der dritte Absatz sollte, der Systematik folgend, als ein Recht einer jeden Person, die einer bestimmten Gruppe angehört (nämlich der Gruppe derjenigen, die „nicht über ausreichende Mittel verfügen“) formuliert werden:

„Jeder Person, die nicht über ausreichende Mittel verfügt, wird...“

Art. 47 Grundsätze der Gesetzmäßigkeit und der Verhältnismäßigkeit im Zusammenhang mit Straftaten und Strafen

Der Titel erscheint zu lang und zu kompliziert. Man könnte statt dessen etwa formulieren:

„Recht auf Gesetz- und Verhältnismäßigkeit in Strafsachen“

Der Absatz 2) ist in der gegenwärtigen Form für Nicht- Juristen mißverständlich:

Hier sollte versucht werden, eine verständlichere Formulierung zu finden, etwa:

„Dieser Artikel schließt nicht aus, dass jemand wegen einer Handlung oder Unterlassung verurteilt oder bestraft wird, die zur Zeit ihrer Begehung nur nach internationalem Recht strafbar war.“

Art. 49 Anwendungsbereich

Das Wort „ausschließlich“ im ersten Absatz erscheint als überflüssige Einschränkung. Es sollte daher gestrichen werden. Ebenso erscheint der zweite Satz dieses Absatzes als selbstverständlich und könnte ebenfalls gestrichen werden. Damit würde der Artikel lauten:

(1) Diese Charta gilt für die Organe und Einrichtungen der Union unter Einhaltung des Subsidiaritätsprinzips und für die Mitgliedstaaten bei der Durchführung des Rechtes der Union.

(2) Diese Charta begründet weder neue Zuständigkeiten noch neue Aufgaben für die Gemeinschaft und für die Union, noch ändert sie die in den Verträgen festgelegten Zuständigkeiten und Aufgaben.

Art. 50 Tragweite der garantierten Rechte

Der Artikel zu den Einschränkungen der Rechte in der EU Grundrechtscharta muss klarstellen, dass der Artikel 1, das heisst die Achtung und der Schutz der Menschenwürde, unter keinen Umständen eingeschränkt werden darf. Ein entsprechender Vorbehalt sollte in den Absatz 1 des Artikels 50 aufgenommen werden.

Auf die Schwierigkeiten mit dem 2. Absatz des Artikel 50 ist bereits in der Gemeinschaftsstellungnahme der Konventsmitglieder van den Burg, Boumediene-Thiery, Duff, Einem, Fayot, Holoubek, Ilvari, Kaufmann, Leinen, Martin, Meyer, Paciotti und Voggenhuber eingegangen worden. Dieser Absatz erweckt den falschen Eindruck, als seien die Rechte der Charta durch die „Bedingungen und Grenzen“ der EU Verträge eingeschränkt, und er sollte daher unbedingt gestrichen werden. Auch der Verweis auf Einschränkungen, die zulässig sind, wenn sie "...den von der Union verfolgten Zielsetzungen von allgemeinem Interesse... entsprechen", ist zu weit gehend und muss überprüft werden.

Darüberhinaus sollte die Formulierung des 3. Absatzes unbedingt vereinfacht werden. Die in der Formulierung enthaltene doppelte Bedingung („soweit...sofern“) ist kaum verständlich.

Eine alternative Formulierung könnte lauten:

„Jene Rechte, die die EU Grundrechtscharta aus der Europäischen Konvention zum Schutze der Menschenrechte und Grundfreiheiten übernimmt, haben in der Charta die gleiche Bedeutung und Tragweite wie in der o.g. Konvention, es sei denn, die Charta gewährleistet einen höheren oder umfassenderen Schutz.“

Observations sur la dernière version du Préambule et de la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Le document convent 45 constitue à la date du 28 juillet le dernier état du texte complet de la Charte proposé par le Présidium suite aux travaux de la convention les 17 et 18 juillet. Les membres de la convention peuvent adresser leurs observations sur ce projet au secrétariat de la Charte avant le 1^{er} septembre. La présente note a pour objet de soulever les difficultés que peuvent contenir certaines de ces propositions.

Préambule

Celui-ci aurait été bien accueilli lors des réunions du 17 et 18 juillet.

En affirmant dans son alinéa 3 que l'Union assure par la libre-circulation des personnes un développement équilibré et durable, la Charte anticipe sur la réalité, la libre-circulation des personnes n'étant en l'état reconnue que pour les seuls citoyens de l'Union européenne (art. 18 TCE). La clause de l'article 43, alinéa 2 de la Charte reconnaissant une liberté de circulation aux ressortissants d'Etats tiers résidant légalement sur le territoire d'un Etat membre n'y change rien, puisqu'elle anticipe également sur les compétences dévolues au

251

Conseil par les articles 62 et 63-4 du TCE⁽¹⁾. Donc, dans ce domaine, cette disposition du Préambule anticipe sur l'avenir et empiète sur les compétences du Conseil.

Le cinquième alinéa du Préambule réaffirme les droits qui résultent notamment des jurisprudences de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme et de la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes. Il y a quelque danger à « sacraliser » ainsi dans un texte normatif des jurisprudences par essence évolutives et parfois difficiles à interpréter. Au surplus, ceci constituerait une première dans un texte de droit international. La référence à la C.E.D.H., au traité sur l'Union, aux traités communautaires ainsi qu'au deux chartes sociales est suffisante et inclut de soi la jurisprudence.

Les droits de la Charte

Celle-ci est désormais divisée en sept chapitres. Plusieurs (sept) de ces droits sont nouveaux par rapport à la C.E.D.H. et à ses protocoles additionnels⁽²⁾.

La dignité de la personne : introduite à la demande du Président Herzog, cette disposition placée en tête des droits s'inspire de la Loi fondamentale allemande, qui l'a proclamée pour des raisons historiques évidentes et est reprise dans la jurisprudence constitutionnelle allemande. En France, elle a été invoquée par le Conseil d'Etat pour prohiber le lancer de nains, en 1995, et par le Conseil constitutionnel, à propos de la loi d'orientation relative à la lutte contre les exclusions, en 1998. S'il faut saluer l'introduction de ce principe, il faut savoir qu'il risque d'être abondamment invoqué devant le juge compétent, tant son contenu est flou. Au demeurant, cette notion de dignité recouvre les articles 1 à 5 de la Charte (chapitre I).

L'article 2 (« droit à la vie ») correspond aux articles pertinents de la C.E.D.H.

Le droit à l'intégrité de la personne (article 3) est repris de la convention d'Oviedo pour la protection des droits de l'homme et la biomédecine du 4 avril 1997.

L'article 4 (interdiction de la torture et des traitements inhumains ou dégradants) est calqué sur l'article 3 de la C.E.D.H.. Il y a également une parenté entre l'article 5 sur l'interdiction de l'esclavage et du travail forcé et l'article 4 de la C.E.D.H.

⁽²⁾ Dignité de la personne humaine ; intégrité de la personne ; protection des données à caractère personnel ; liberté de la recherche ; droit d'asile ; protection des étrangers en cas d'éloignement et protection des enfants.

Le chapitre II consacré aux libertés reprend largement les stipulations de la C.E.D.H., sous réserve de quelques novations. Celles-ci portent sur :

– La protection des données personnelles : les principes définis dans la Charte sont issus de la convention du 28 janvier 1981 sur la protection des personnes à l’égard du traitement automatisé des données à caractère personnel et de la directive européenne du 24 octobre 1995 ;

– Le droit au mariage et à la fondation de la famille est assoupli par rapport à la C.E.D.H., dans la mesure où sa définition est renvoyée désormais au droit national ;

– La référence aux partis politiques au niveau européen ; le libellé de l’article 12, alinéa 2 qui est choisi (« les partis politiques au niveau européen contribuent à l’expression de la volonté politique des citoyens de l’Union ») permettra de satisfaire aussi bien les promoteurs de l’Union européenne que ses détracteurs ;

– La liberté de la recherche proclamée à l’article 13 est reprise de la convention d’Oviedo. Sa mention signifie que la recherche ne s’oppose pas à l’innovation scientifique. Il conviendrait toutefois de bien préciser, ce qui n’est pas le cas en l’état de la lecture du document convent 46, qui contient les explications attachées à chaque article de la Charte, que cette liberté de la recherche exige le consentement de l’homme, lorsque celui-ci est sujet de celle-ci et est capable de donner son consentement. Il serait donc souhaitable de l’indiquer dans les explications de cet article, en faisant référence, tant à l’article 3 de la Charte (droit à l’intégrité de la personne) qu’aux articles 16, 17 et 18 de la convention d’Oviedo.

Les articles 14 (droit à l’éducation) et 15 (liberté professionnelle) n’appellent pas d’observation. A l’article 16, il serait sans doute préférable de parler de liberté d’entreprendre, plutôt que de liberté d’entreprise.

S’agissant du droit de propriété (article 17), il n’est prévu une expropriation que moyennant une juste indemnité. Cette disposition n’est pas incompatible avec l’article 1 du protocole additionnel à la C.E.D.H. qui protège le droit de propriété. Toutefois, le mandat de Cologne a demandé aux rédacteurs de la Charte de tenir compte des traditions constitutionnelles communes. Or, l’article XVII de la Déclaration des droits de l’homme et du citoyen de 1789 prévoit que cette indemnisation doit être « juste et préalable », ce qui n’est pas le cas ici et risque de poser un problème de contrariété de texte.

S'agissant du droit d'asile (article 18), il faut se réjouir que la référence à la convention de Genève de 1951, texte fondateur en la matière, ait eu finalement la préséance sur le TCE.

L'article 19 relatif à la protection en cas d'éloignement, d'expulsion et d'extradition n'apporte pas de nouveauté fondamentale par rapport à la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme ;

Axé sur l'égalité, le chapitre III appelle sans doute plus d'observations que le précédent. Si la rédaction de l'article 20, en garantissant l'égalité en droit de toutes les personnes, hommes et femmes, suscite l'approbation, il convient de bien mesurer la portée de l'article 21 sur l'égalité et la non-discrimination. Son premier alinéa pose le principe de l'interdiction de toute discrimination. Un double pas est ainsi franchi ; d'une part, par rapport à l'article 14 de la C.E.D.H. qui ne prohibe les discriminations qu'au regard des seules stipulations de la convention ; d'autre part, par rapport à l'article 13 du TCE qui autorise le Conseil à prendre des mesures pour combattre des discriminations. Par conséquent, le champ d'application de l'article 21, alinéa 1, est plus large que ces deux dispositions dans la mesure où il proscriit toute discrimination, ex abrupto. Par là même, on ne peut exclure un problème d'articulation entre cet article 21 et ces dispositions de la C.E.D.H. et du TCE, d'autant que l'alinéa 2 de l'article 21 prohibe les discriminations sur le fondement de la nationalité dans le seul domaine d'application du TCE.

Les articles 22 et 23 (égalité entre hommes et femmes, protection des enfants) n'appellent pas de remarque, dans la mesure où ils s'inspirent respectivement de l'article 20 de la charte sociale européenne et de la convention de New York (articles 3, 12 et 13).

L'accent mis sur l'intégration des personnes handicapées (article 24) est positif.

Le chapitre social intitulé « solidarité » ne manquera pas de décevoir ceux qui voyaient dans la consécration de droits sociaux la réelle valeur ajoutée de la Charte. Cette déception peut s'expliquer par trois raisons : un renvoi fréquent aux législations et pratiques nationales (art. 25, 26, 32, 33 et 34) ; une distinction entre les droits programmatiques (sécurité sociale et aide sociale ; accès aux services d'intérêt économique général) non opposables et les droits subjectifs opposables ; la timidité des droits subjectifs, puisque par exemple la liberté syndicale n'est pas affirmée et que le droit de grève n'est visé qu'implicitement à l'article 26, en étant mis sur le même plan que le lock-out.

L'allocation des prestations sociales prévue par l'article 32 est envisagée à minima, en étant réservée aux travailleurs ressortissants d'un Etat membre et résidant dans un autre Etat membre, ainsi qu'aux membres de leurs familles. Ces droits se situent donc en deçà des principes affirmés par la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme, qui dans un arrêt Gaygusuz c. Autriche du 16 septembre 1996 a considéré que les droits sociaux ne pouvaient être attribués exclusivement aux ressortissants d'un Etat partie à la C.E.D.H. Mais en faisant jouer les dispositions plus favorables de la C.E.D.H., la clause horizontale de l'article 50 de la Charte palliera le degré de protection inférieure de cet article 32.

Les dispositions des articles 35 et 36 relatives respectivement à la protection de l'environnement et des consommateurs ne constituent pas des avancées considérables au regard des articles 174 et 153 du TCE.

Au chapitre V (citoyenneté), plusieurs articles sont issus du TCE ou de directives. Cela est vrai des articles 37 (droit de vote et d'éligibilité aux élections au Parlement européen), 38 (droit de vote et d'éligibilité aux élections municipales), 41 (médiateur) et 44 (protection diplomatique et consulaire). La nouveauté de ce chapitre est triple. Elle réside d'abord dans la garantie d'un droit à une bonne administration de la part des institutions et organes de l'Union avec notamment la mise en jeu de leur responsabilité (article 39) ; elle est marquée ensuite par la consécration d'un droit d'accès aux documents dont la mise en œuvre était renvoyée jusqu'à maintenant au Conseil par l'article 255 du TCE. Enfin, on relève l'élargissement du champ des personnes autorisées à circuler et séjourner librement sur le territoire des Etats membres, déjà évoqué dans le Préambule avec les problèmes que l'on a relevés plus haut.

Au chapitre VI qui traite de la justice, comme au chapitre II (libertés), les dispositions soit sont proches de la C.E.D.H., soit s'en démarquent pour faire œuvre de nouveauté. Parmi les règles du premier type, on peut ranger la présomption d'innocence et les droits de la défense (art. 46), la légalité et la proportionnalité des délits et des peines (art. 47) et le respect du principe non bis in idem (art. 48). La Charte va plus loin en revanche que la C.E.D.H. dans le droit à un recours effectif et à un tribunal impartial (art. 45). Le champ des droits et libertés faisant l'objet d'un recours est en effet plus large que dans la C.E.D.H., puisque celle-ci renvoyait aux droits et libertés reconnus par la seule convention (art. 13). En outre, tous les contentieux pourront désormais faire l'objet d'un recours, alors que ce champ ne recouvrait à l'origine dans la C.E.D.H. que les contestations sur les droits et obligations de caractère civil et sur le bien-fondé de toute accusation en matière pénale (art. 6).

Le dernier chapitre (chapitre VII. Dispositions générales) ne manque pas de soulever plusieurs interrogations.

S'agissant de l'article 49 (champ d'application), on en retiendra deux. Elles portent sur le champ d'application de ce texte et sur sa justiciabilité.

La question du champ d'application de la Charte n'est pas incluse dans le mandat de Cologne. Cependant, la convention a décidé que la Charte s'adresserait « aux institutions et organes de l'Union dans le respect du principe de subsidiarité ainsi qu'aux Etats membres uniquement lorsqu'ils mettent en œuvre le droit de l'Union ». Il reviendra au Conseil de Nice de se prononcer sur la pertinence de ce champ d'application. Au-delà, on relève qu'en visant la « mise en œuvre du droit de l'Union », cette disposition embrasse les trois piliers de l'Union européenne. Cela mérite d'être noté car si le respect de la Charte ne s'imposait qu'à la mise en œuvre du droit communautaire, la portée de l'exercice aurait été d'un intérêt limité. Toucher en revanche au troisième pilier avec des matières (coopération judiciaire et policière) qui intéressent directement les droits et libertés énoncés par la Charte est beaucoup plus novateur, même si dans ces matières les principes posés par la C.E.D.H. sont d'ores et déjà applicables.

Reste la question de la justiciabilité. Car si le premier alinéa de l'article 49 définit un large champ d'application, le second alinéa précise que la Charte « ne crée aucune compétence ni aucune tâche nouvelle pour la Communauté et pour l'Union et ne modifie pas les compétences et les tâches définies par les traités ».

Cette disposition pourrait être perçue comme contradictoire avec le premier alinéa, dans la mesure où, précisément, jusqu'à maintenant, comme on l'a vu, la mise en œuvre des mesures du troisième pilier était soumise à la C.E.D.H. alors que désormais, ce sera la Charte qui leur sera applicable. En s'appliquant au troisième pilier, la Charte crée bien une nouvelle compétence pour l'Union. Mais ce qui est surtout intéressant de noter, c'est que les compétences de la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes devraient rester inchangées. L'article 46 du TUE combiné avec son article 35 limite en effet la compétence de la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes pour le troisième pilier, au contrôle à titre préjudiciel, de la validité et de l'interprétation des décisions-cadres et des décisions ainsi que de l'interprétation des conventions. La Charte pourra servir de norme de contrôle pour apprécier la légalité de ces textes mais les actes des Etats exclus aujourd'hui de ce contrôle continueront à l'être, compte tenu de la rédaction de cet article 49, alinéa 2.

La définition des droits garantis par la Charte, qui figure à l'article 50, a constitué sans doute l'un des exercices les plus difficiles de la convention. La rédaction choisie au premier alinéa n'est pas totalement satisfaisante. La première phrase dispose que « toute limitation à l'exercice des droits et libertés reconnus par la présente Charte doit être prévue par l'autorité législative compétente ». On ne voit toujours pas à quel organe communautaire ou national renvoie cette notion. Comme cela a déjà été dit à plusieurs reprises, l'expression de « loi » serait d'autant meilleure qu'elle est utilisée par la C.E.D.H.. Dans la deuxième phrase du premier alinéa, il serait également préférable de faire référence aux objectifs d'intérêt général et à « des » intérêts légitimes, les objectifs d'intérêt général n'étant pas forcément légitimes et inversement.

Le troisième alinéa de cet article 50 est sans doute l'une des dispositions les plus importantes de la Charte. Elle prévoit que si la Charte contient des droits correspondant à des droits garantis par la C.E.D.H., leur sens et leur portée sont similaires à ceux que leur confère ladite convention, sauf si la Charte assure une protection plus élevée ou plus étendue. Cette règle est destinée à éviter des conflits d'interprétation entre ces deux textes et à conférer le cas échéant une autorité juridique plus importante à la Charte qu'à la C.E.D.H. Elle est apparue absolument indispensable dès le début des travaux de la convention, dans la mesure où la Charte s'est parfois démarquée de la C.E.D.H (droit au mariage, droit au recours effectif, égalité et non-discrimination, par exemple). Cependant, si comme l'indique le document convent 46, le mot « portée » renvoie aux limitations apportées aux droits, il serait préférable – et plus juridique, comme à l'alinéa 2 de l'article 50 –, de substituer aux mots « leur sens et leur portée » les mots « les conditions et les limites de leur exercice ». Sous ces réserves rédactionnelles, cet article n'appelle pas d'observations, pas plus que les dispositions finales des articles 51 et 52.

Cette version constitue une très nette amélioration par rapport aux textes précédents, qui mérite d'être relevée.

Il serait souhaitable toutefois, dans le Préambule, de revenir sur le droit à la libre-circulation, pour toutes les personnes, ce qui n'est pas la réalité juridique, et de gommer toute référence à la jurisprudence des Cours de Luxembourg et de Strasbourg ;

Dans le texte de la Charte, il conviendrait :

- d'être très attentif à la définition qui sera donnée des limites de la liberté de la recherche (art. 13) dans la partie explicative de ce document (cf. p. 3 de la présente note) ;

257

- de modifier le libellé de la liberté d'entreprise pour lui substituer celui de liberté d'entreprendre (art. 16), qui a un contenu plus large ;
- d'ajouter le caractère préalable à l'indemnisation de l'expropriation (art. 17) ;
- de faire mention expresse du droit syndical et du droit de grève (art. 26) ;
- de faire référence à la loi et non à l'autorité législative compétente (art. 50, 1) et de supprimer dans le même article « d'autres » avant « intérêts légitimes » ;
- de substituer dans le troisième alinéa de cet article à « leur sens et leur portée » les mots « les conditions et les limites de leur exercice ».

Comments on the draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (CONVENT 45)

General remarks

This is the first time a complete draft of a Charter is at hand and the present draft of the Charter will need further consideration when the comments are available in all official languages. The Swedish version of the draft has a number of imperfections. Furthermore, it is not stated under the general provisions if the Charter is drawn up in the official languages of the Union and if all texts are equally authentic. Thus much work remains, and we need to use the time left before the European Council's meeting in Nice in December as fully as possible. According to the European Council's decision in Cologne, the Convention should "present a draft document in advance of the European Council in December 2000".

The Charter is an important contribution to the efforts to present and increase the visibility of the existing European protection for human rights and freedoms in a comprehensive document, with adherent explanations. According to the Cologne decision, the question of integrating the Charter into the Treaties should be decided after the Charter has been adopted. However, at this stage the text needs on my opinion further revisions if the Treaties should be supplemented with a catalogue of rights and freedoms. This is particularly true concerning present limitations of rights in Member States' Constitutions or in Treaties and Conventions, which according to the general provisions also should apply concerning the rights and freedoms that the Charter formulates. To safeguard a just application of law, I consider it necessary that such limitations of rights and freedoms in a legal binding text are formulated in a much more detailed manner.

In the drafts of a Charter and in the comments there is an on-going discussion on the relation between the Charter and the European Convention on the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (ECHR). There are fundamentally three reasons for this: first, the ECHR has been incorporated into many of the Member States' Constitutions; second, the possibility of the European Union entering the ECHR has been discussed as an alternative to a European Charter; third, the ECHR has in many parts served as a basis and source of inspiration in the drafting of the Charter.

Today, the European Union's relation to the ECHR is that the Union as a general principle should respect the fundamental rights as guaranteed in the Convention of the Council of Europe and as follows from the common constitutional traditions of the Member States (article 6.2. of the Treaty on European Union). The provision is a codification of the practice of the Court of the European Communities, which can be summarised in that the Court applies the ECHR as interpreted by the practice of the Strasbourg Court, but only to the extent that the cases in question fall inside the boundaries of the Treaties. Thus, the protection of human rights within the EU has been developed by the practice of the Court of the European Communities, of which at least three problems follow. First, the citizens are not ensured a complete protection, since the practice is limited by the cases that are accepted by the Court. This also complicates the general picture of the protection. Second, it cannot be excluded that the Court of the European Communities may come to conclusions different from those of the Strasbourg Court. Should the Court of the European Communities give a weaker protection than what follows from the practice of the Strasbourg Court, the result would be unsatisfactory from a human rights point of view. Third, it is not desirable that the Treaties' protection for the fundamental rights goes beyond the ECHR, since that would result in a confusing and unpredictable situation for the private citizen. Not least for the reasons above should the possibility of the EU adhering to the ECHR be worth considering.

Therefore, I would recommend that necessary preparations for adherence of the Union to the ECHR be made in parallel with working out the Charter. It is true that a number of juridical problems need to be sorted out before such an adherence is possible. However, those problems are not insoluble. Given the development the Union has seen during the last few years, there should be a solid enough basis for an adherence to the ECHR. The Swedish Government has worked for such an adherence. Naturally, that would require Treaty changes and also modifications of the ECHR itself. Such a system would, however, fully ensure a protection for human rights and fundamental freedoms in Europe and also bring about uniformity in the application of the protection.

Even though the present draft of a EU Charter is inspired by, above all, the ECHR, the desire to let the Charter be influenced by different UN Conventions has been expressed within the Convention. The areas that from a Swedish perspective are of most importance are children's and women's rights, and also social rights. Below follows a separate discussion of children's and women's rights in the Charter.

The structure

The Charter is in my opinion structured in a pedagogic way in a preamble and different chapters. From various points of view the grouping of certain rights can be discussed and it could also be questioned if it would not be preferable to move certain articles to the preamble, thus indicating that they more concern principles from which fundamental rights could derive rather than the rights themselves. There is also a lack of balance between the different articles as to how they are formulated; some are very brief whilst some are unnecessary detailed. The latter is especially evident when it comes to the articles, which are based on Community directives. The content in these legal acts are thus raised to a constitutional level which might in the future cause problems because of the fact that Member States have been free to implement them in various ways into their own national legal order.

Some articles refer to national legislation and jurisprudence. In my opinion it is very important that those references are not deleted. They provide important sources of information on the fact that some areas lie within the competence of the Member States and may be regulated by them in various ways.

The preamble

The wording in paragraph 1 should be brought in line with the wording of article 1 of the Treaty on European union, which indicates that the process of creating an ever closer union is a continuous task. The same goes for paragraph 2, which should be brought in line with the preamble of the Treaty on European union in which the Member states confirm “their attachment to the principles of liberty, democracy and respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms and of the rule of law”.

The reference in paragraph 3 to the “national identities of the Member states” should because of regional differences - be restricted to the “identities of the Member states”. Furthermore, to mention only the four freedoms is in my view not enough. It is important to cover the ongoing development of the single market - this also covers what is mentioned as the fifth freedom - which aims to abolish the remaining restrictions for the employees and their organisations to work freely within the Union. Therefore the last indent should be replaced by the following: “it ensures through progress of freedoms on the single market a balanced and sustainable development”.

Paragraph 4 ought to be adapted to the Cologne decision. According to the decision the institutions shall “solemnly proclaim” not “adopt” the Charter.

Better adaptation to the Cologne decision is also important when it comes to paragraph 5. The first part of the first sentence should be replaced by the following: “This Charter consolidates and makes more evident, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Union and the Community and the principle of subsidiarity, the fundamental rights applicable at Union level, as they result.....”. Paragraph 5 should also contain references to international Conventions appearing in connection with the articles, e.g. relevant UN Conventions.

Since the general articles are placed in the last part of the Charter it is absolutely necessary to insert in the preamble a new wording of paragraph 7, which makes the scope of application of the Charter totally clear. I can therefore fully support the proposal of a new paragraph 7 put forward by Mr. Tarschys.

The rights of the child and of women

Sweden has over the years acted actively in international fora in matters concerning the rights of the child and of women. It is thus natural to comment upon how these rights are mirrored in the draft of the Charter.

The rights of the child

Rights having to do with children are not brought together in one part of the draft but spread out over a number of articles. Articles 14, 23, 30, and 31 are of special interest in this context, but also a number of other articles (e.g. 7 and 18) are relevant. Most of these articles have another focus than the child (e.g. the family, the woman, or the migrant), which, compared to the alternative to let the child as such become the bearer of the rights, may weaken the position of the child.

It has been pointed out that there exists potential conflicts between the formal bearer of the rights on the one hand and the child on the other even in those cases where the child forms a part of the collective bearer of the rights mentioned. An illustration to this is, as is the case both in Council of Europe Conventions and the draft of the Charter (article 7), when the bearer of the rights is the “family”. No problem exists in case the family functions properly and protects the child. But, as is well known, the opposite situation is quite common, and the draft does not indicate how the rights of the child should be protected in case a conflict of interests arises between the parents and the child or between the parents vis-à-vis the child.

A similar problem is connected with article 14, according to which everyone has the right to receive free compulsory education, and which ensures the parents the right to have their children educated and taught in conformity with their (i.e. the parents’) religious, philosophical and pedagogical convictions. The article is based on the constitutional tradition common to the Member States as well as article 2 of Protocol 2 to ECHR. It should be noted, however, that Sweden has ratified the Protocol with a reservation concerning the rights of the parents.

Article 23 concerning the rights of the child is based on the New York Convention on the Rights of the Child. There is however a considerable risk that this vaguely formulated article may be applied in a way giving the child less protection than what is given by existing Conventions.

Among other things the degree of influence given to the child according to article 23 is problematic, especially since the scope of this influence is dependent on how the maturity of the child is judged. This means that the rights given become very relative. The core of the problem seems to be that it is difficult to grant such a complex and comprehensive phenomenon as the rights of the child in one short article. One way of solving this problem would be to list the rights in way more similar to what is done in the Convention on the Rights of the Child. It is true that a more detailed article would not totally solve the problem, but being more precise would give a better idea of which are the rights of the child.

In some places in the draft, notably in the preamble and in article 20, rights are given to “men and women”. This could be interpreted either as “adults of both sexes” or as “everybody, children included”. According to my view the text ought to be adjusted to avoid the possibility of different interpretations.

The rights of women

The draft does not contain any comprehensive listing of rights in the way that is done in the relevant UN Conventions. Indirectly women are given the same rights as men in the articles on civic and political rights, while rights specifically related to women could be found in the articles dealing with social and economic rights.

Gender-related rights are especially mentioned in article 21 which i.a. prohibits any discrimination based on sex. This right corresponds at large with article 14 in ECHR but also with article 13 in the Treaty on European Union. The present draft includes the principle of equal treatment between the sexes when it comes to vocational activities &c., but nothing is said about equality within the public sector, e.g. in politics.

The comments above on the rights of the child when being a part of a collective bearer of rights could mutatis mutandis be applied to women. Of special interest in this context is articles 7 and 9, concerning respect for family life and the right to marry respectively.

Specific articles

Article 1 – This article could be moved to the preamble

Article 2 – The article should be fully brought in line with the ECHR. Another alternative would be to delete the final line of article 50 paragraph 3 (see below). Otherwise there is a risk that the article would be interpreted as a prohibition of abortion. Such an interpretation is not in line with the ECHR.

Article 4 – The word “cruel” ought to be inserted before the word “inhuman” in order to correspond to existing international human rights instruments.

Article 8 – The reference to an independent authority ought to be deleted in order to harmonise it with other articles in which such references not are made, even though similar authorities do exist.

Article 11 – The article should be fully brought in line with the ECHR. It is important not to leave out the possibility of restrictions concerning licensing of television and radio stations put forward in Article 10 of the ECHR. Mr. Tarschys has also emphasised the importance of not leaving out the possibility of restrictions in ECHR. If the final line of Article 50 paragraph 3 is not deleted (see below) it is absolutely necessary to fully adapt the paragraph to the ECHR. If not there would, as is also pointed out by Mr. Tarschys, be a violation of Community law and Swedish constitutional law.

Article 12 – Paragraph 2 of this article ought to be deleted since the Charter is addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union and to the Member States when they are implementing Union and Community law and this paragraph is beside the point.

Article 13 – This article is redundant since the freedom of research follows already from article 11 concerning freedom of expression and information.

Article 17 – The article should be fully brought in line with the ECHR. The second paragraph of Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR should be reflected in this article for reasons of clarity.

Article 18 – It should be made clear that there exist a right to seek asylum not a right to asylum as such.

Article 20 – This article concerns a principle and could be moved to the preamble. It must however also include children and the words “women and men” should therefore be deleted (see above).

Article 23 – A reference to the New York Convention on the Rights of the Child ought to be included in this article (see above). In paragraph 1 the second sentence ought to be deleted, since this right is already included in article 11 and it could otherwise be misunderstood as if children are not included in that article.

Articles 25 and 26 – It is important that these rights also are applicable to workers organisations. The words “or their organisations” should therefore be inserted after “workers” in both articles. As for article 26 the words “including the right to strike” ought to be incorporated after the words “collective action” in order not to devalue existing legislation.

Article 28 – The last part of the article ought to be reformulated as follows: “...right to protection where their employment contract is terminated”. Thereby the protection for workers will be more complete and will also cover situations where there is an unjustified dismissal.

Article 34 – The article is based on article 16 of the EC Treaty and could hardly, even if it is important as such, be regarded as a fundamental right. The article could therefore be deleted.

Article 37 – Paragraph 2 should be reformulated as a right for the citizens to elect members of the European Parliament in direct universal, free and secret ballots.

Article 39 – The second sentence in the second paragraph, about access to files, is already included in article 8, which concerns protection of personal data. Furthermore this right has been restricted here with reference to interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy. This sentence could be deleted.

Article 49 – In addition to the expression “Union law”, the expression “Community law” should also be included.

Article 50 – I fully support Mr. Tarschys and other members as regards the relation between the Charter and ECHR. It should thus be made clear that the Charter and the ECHR have the same not a similar sense and substance.

Furthermore the last sentence in paragraph 3 should be deleted since it is not in accordance with the decision in Cologne that fundamental rights applicable at Union level should be consolidated and made more evident. In particular it should be noted that it is stated in paragraph 5 of the preamble, that this Charter reaffirms the rights as they result from the ECHR, while article 50 paragraph 3 makes it possible to have a greater or more extensive protection. In case the Charter affords greater or more extensive protection this is obvious a problem. Here, I would also like to refer to the explanations given by Mr. Tarschys, whose remarks in connection with this article I fully support.

Article 51 – A reference to the jurisprudence of the courts in Strasbourg and Luxembourg ought to be included (see paragraph 5 in the preamble).

Ill.mo sig.

On. Gunnar JANSSON

Vice Presidente della Convenzione incaricata

di elaborare la Carta dei diritti fondamentali dell'Unione Europea

Nel complimentarmi con il Presidium per l'elaborazione del Progetto completo della Carta, rassegno qui di seguito le mie osservazioni, segnalando che analoghi rilievi vengono formulati, nelle rispettive sedi, dall'On. Elena Paciotti, rappresentante del Parlamento Europeo, e dal Prof. Stefano Rodotà, delegato del Presidente del Consiglio dei Ministri italiano.

Sul Preambolo:

Si propone la seguente modifica:

Al punto 3, dopo le parole: "attraverso la libera circolazione delle persone, dei beni, dei capitali e dei servizi", inserire le parole: "e promuovendo la coesione sociale".

La formula proposta dal Presidium al punto 3, in base alla quale l'Unione assicura uno sviluppo equilibrato e sostenibile "attraverso" la libera circolazione delle persone, dei beni, dei capitali e dei servizi, non appare, infatti, pienamente adeguata. Storicamente, l'Unione Europea ha cercato di promuovere uno sviluppo equilibrato e sostenibile favorendo la coesione sociale e il rispetto dell'ambiente. E' opportuno non ignorare nel Preambolo questo dato di fatto, componente essenziale del "Modello europeo".

Esprimo, inoltre, la mia perplessità sull'indicazione, al punto 5, tra le fonti da cui derivano i diritti fondamentali riconosciuti nella Carta, della giurisprudenza delle Corti europee, che non può essere collocata allo stesso livello dei Trattati, delle Convenzioni e delle Carte formalmente adottate dagli Stati.

Ulteriori perplessità crea la menzione, in questa sede, della Corte europea dei diritti dell'uomo, che appartiene ad un ordinamento diverso da quello dell'Unione: essa infatti non è indicata, a differenza della Corte di giustizia, nel mandato di Colonia. Rimarrebbe, invece, la esatta collocazione della Corte di Strasburgo nell'articolo 50.

Sulla struttura

E' pienamente condivisibile e apprezzabile, per la sua efficacia e novità, la suddivisione del testo sotto i titoli "dignità", "libertà", "uguaglianza", "solidarietà", "cittadinanza", "giustizia", anche se comporta inevitabilmente qualche forzatura nella collocazione di alcuni articoli, ispirati a principi molteplici.

Sarebbe tuttavia di gran lunga preferibile che l'articolo dedicato al diritto alla salute (attuale articolo 33) venisse collocato nel capo intitolato alla dignità. In questo modo si darebbe immediata e giusta evidenza ad uno fra i più significativi nuovi diritti considerato elemento essenziale per la tutela della dignità delle persone.

La libertà di circolazione (attuale articolo 43) andrebbe invece meglio inserita nel Capo relativo alle libertà.

Sull'articolato

Articolo 1.

Si propone di aggiungere, in fine, le seguenti parole:

"nella sua inviolabilità".

La garanzia e la tutela della dignità umana devono essere riferite ad un bene concettualmente intangibile da parte di pubblici poteri. Ci si preoccupa, infatti, del modo in cui i cittadini europei reagiranno alla lettura della Carta: poiché nei testi in cui è nominata (ad esempio, l'art. 1 del Grundgesetz) la dignità è appunto dichiarata "inviolabile" o "intangibile", ogni diversa formulazione può essere percepita come un indebolimento della tutela. E, trattandosi del primo articolo della Carta, questo potrebbe determinare una lettura complessiva della stessa come testo debole.

Articolo 11.

Si propongono le seguenti modifiche:

Al comma 1, dopo le parole: "libertà di ricevere", aggiungere le parole: "di ricercare".

Al comma 2, aggiungere le parole: "anche nei confronti delle concentrazioni dei mezzi di comunicazione di massa".

Si insiste perché, al comma 1, si indichi espressamente la libertà di "cercare" informazioni, non solo di riceverle. Tale diritto, già compreso nell'art. 19 della Dichiarazione dell'Onu del 1948, è oggi primario nella nuova dimensione di Internet (non a caso, i regimi dittatoriali cercano di negarlo).

Al comma 2, appare opportuno che la garanzia del pluralismo dell'informazione vada assicurata anche nei confronti delle gigantesche concentrazioni proprietarie in atto nel mondo.

Articolo 12

Si propone la seguente modifica:

Al comma 2, dopo le parole: "ad esprimere", aggiungere le parole: "con metodo democratico".

E' essenziale infatti che l'Unione Europea, che si fonda sul principio di democrazia, come è anche detto nel Preambolo, riconosca la qualifica di partito politico soltanto alle formazioni che agiscono "con metodo democratico", nel rispetto, cioè, di quel valore.

Articolo 13

Si propone l'aggiunta del seguente comma:

"Tutti hanno il diritto di beneficiare, a condizioni eque, dei risultati delle ricerche scientifiche, in particolare nel campo bio-medico".

L'attenzione dell'opinione pubblica si è concentrata massimamente e con interesse crescente sui problemi della ricerca, soprattutto nel campo della bio-medicina, e sui problemi della brevettabilità e della commercializzazione esclusiva dei risultati della ricerca. Il comma di cui si propone l'introduzione stabilisce un principio di contemperamento tra il diritto di ognuno di beneficiare dei risultati della ricerca, in specie nel campo bio-medico, ed il giusto riconoscimento economico dei costi della ricerca stessa.

Articolo 15

Si propone di sostituire il primo comma con il seguente:

"1. Ogni individuo ha il diritto di realizzare le sue capacità personali con un lavoro liberamente scelto o accettato".

3 267

La diversa formulazione del comma fa, infatti, riferimento alla realizzazione personale dell'individuo e non al solo elemento economico del guadagno per vivere, ma anche al lavoro nel suo significato più generale, comprendente ogni tipo di attività, economica, culturale e artistica, svolta in condizione di indipendenza o autonomia.

Articolo 16

Si propone di aggiungere, in fine, le seguenti parole:

"nel rispetto del principio di uno sviluppo economico e sociale equilibrato e sostenibile".

L'affermazione della libera imprenditorialità deve essere qui temperata con il concetto di sviluppo equilibrato e sostenibile, secondo l'indirizzo fondamentale del modello sociale europeo. Si ricorda a tal riguardo che in nessuna delle Costituzioni europee il diritto di impresa è affermato in maniera assoluta e incondizionata. Esso è sempre temperato con principi di sostenibilità sociale ed ecologica e di equilibrio economico.

Un elemento caratteristico di tutto il costituzionalismo del novecento, è stato, infatti, proprio quello di legare il riconoscimento dei diritti di libertà economica a finalità di ordine sociale. Se fosse mantenuta l'attuale formulazione dell'articolo 16 (come quella del successivo articolo 17), la norma in questione sarebbe percepita, pertanto, come un arretramento rispetto a tradizioni costituzionali comuni.

Articolo 17

Si propone di sostituire il terzo periodo del primo comma con il seguente:

"L'esercizio del diritto di proprietà può essere limitato dalla legge nell'interesse generale e per assicurarne la funzione sociale".

L'espressione "limitato dalla legge", in luogo di quella "regolamentato", offre una migliore garanzia del diritto di proprietà, perché esclude limitazioni che provengano da atti non aventi forza di legge.

Inoltre, il riferimento alla "funzione sociale" rafforza il riferimento all'"interesse generale", che sarebbe altrimenti troppo debole, ed è in linea con la tradizione del costituzionalismo del novecento, che tende a legare il riconoscimento dei diritti di libertà economica e di proprietà a fini sociali. Non basterebbe, a tal fine, la clausola orizzontale dell'art. 50, perché essa postula appunto l'ordinaria assolutezza dei diritti garantiti, mentre nel caso qui discusso (ed in quello di cui al precedente articolo 16) si tratta proprio di stabilire che il riconoscimento di questi particolari diritti è ormai collegato strutturalmente con finalità di interesse generale.

Articolo 21

Si suggerisce l'aggiunta del seguente comma:

"3. L'unione adotta le politiche opportune per eliminare le disparità di fatto e per promuovere le condizioni che rendono effettiva l'uguaglianza".

L'enunciazione meramente formale e negativa del principio di uguaglianza appare, infatti, insufficiente. E', dunque, necessario rafforzarla vincolando l'Unione europea ad adottare politiche attive per rimuovere le condizioni che impediscono di fatto la parità delle opportunità e il riconoscimento di effettiva pari dignità a tutti gli individui.

Articolo 23

Appare opportuno aggiungere - all'inizio dell'articolo ovvero dopo il primo comma - il seguente comma:

"Le bambine e i bambini devono essere protetti contro ogni minaccia alla loro maturazione intellettuale e alla loro integrità psicologica e sessuale".

Il nuovo comma si fa carico delle minacce che incombono sui bambini (anche attraverso tecnologie di informazione) e vincola il potere pubblico ad un obbligo di protezione nei loro confronti. Si tratta di un'esigenza assai sentita dall'opinione pubblica europea.

Articolo 23-bis.

Si insiste sull'opportunità dell'inserimento di un nuovo articolo 23-bis, relativo ai diritti degli anziani, formulato come segue:

"Articolo 23-bis. Diritti degli anziani.
Ogni individuo anziano ha diritto ad un'esistenza autonoma e dignitosa e a partecipare pienamente alla vita politica, sociale e culturale".

L'andamento demografico nei paesi dell'Unione europea impone, infatti, di considerare specificamente la sfera dei diritti delle persone anziane. La norma proposta richiama, d'altronde, l'articolo 23 della Carta sociale europea.

5 269

Articolo 26.

Si suggerisce la seguente modifica:

dopo le parole: "concludere contratti collettivi", inserire le parole: "anche a livello dell'Unione", e dopo le parole: "azioni collettive", aggiungere le parole:
"compreso lo sciopero".

Il riconoscimento nella Carta del diritto di negoziazione collettiva acquista significato, infatti, solo se accompagnato dalla specificazione del possibile ambito europeo della contrattazione. La mancata menzione del diritto di sciopero, riconosciuto dalla Carta sociale europea e da un gran numero di Convenzioni dell'OIL, oltre che dalle tradizioni costituzionali comuni dei Paesi membri, rischia, invece, di essere intesa come una restrizione dei diritti vigenti.

Articolo 29

Si propongono le seguenti modifiche:

Al primo comma, aggiungere, in fine, le parole: "e ad una giusta retribuzione proporzionata alla qualità e quantità del lavoro prestato".
Al secondo comma, aggiungere, in fine, le parole: "e non può rinunziarvi".

Tra le condizioni di lavoro "giuste ed eque" deve necessariamente inserirsi il diritto ad una retribuzione giusta e proporzionata alla prestazione. L'irrinunciabilità alle ferie risponde, invece, ad una tipica necessità di protezione della parte più debole del rapporto di lavoro.

Articolo 34

Si propone di sostituire il testo dell'articolo con il seguente:

"Al fine di promuovere la coesione sociale e territoriale l'Unione riconosce e rispetta il diritto di ogni individuo all'accesso a servizi di interesse generale che assicurino le prestazioni necessarie a garantire la qualità della vita e le possibilità di lavoro. Le prestazioni di servizi di interesse generale si basano sui principi di uguaglianza di accesso, di universalità, di continuità, di trasparenza".

E' opportuno che il diritto ad usufruire di servizi di interesse generale sia inquadrato in principi-guida che, salve le differenziazioni nazionali, ne garantiscano l'effettività, anche in funzione della promozione della coesione sociale e territoriale dell'Unione, prevista dall'articolo 16 del Trattato CE (se venisse menzionata la finalità di garantire le possibilità di lavoro potrebbe, inoltre, essere qui assorbito l'articolo 27 relativo ai servizi di collocamento).

Articolo 36

Si propone l'aggiunta del seguente comma:

"I consumatori hanno diritto ad una informazione completa sulla qualità dei beni e dei servizi e ad una pubblicità non ingannevole che risponda ai criteri di trasparenza e veridicità".

La sensibilità popolare europea si è fatta particolarmente acuta riguardo ai criteri di fabbricazione e manipolazione di prodotti alimentari e di beni di consumo personale. E' necessario che una Unione sempre più vicina ai bisogni della gente si faccia carico nelle sue politiche di queste diffuse preoccupazioni.

Articolo 36-bis

All'articolo 37, che apre l'enunciazione dei diritti riservati ai cittadini europei, andrebbe utilmente premesso un articolo del seguente tenore:

"Articolo 36-bis. Diritto alla cittadinanza.
Ogni individuo ha diritto ad una cittadinanza. Nessuno può essere arbitrariamente privato della sua cittadinanza, né del diritto di mutare cittadinanza".

Si tratta di un diritto universale, sancito all'articolo 15 della Dichiarazione universale di diritti dell'uomo, e appare importante come premessa di ogni altra specificazione dei diritti di cittadinanza.

Articolo 37

Si propone di premettere il seguente nuovo comma, che assorbirebbe il secondo comma previsto nel progetto del Presidium:

7 271

"1. I cittadini dell'Unione hanno il diritto di partecipare all'esercizio del potere pubblico a livello dell'Unione per il tramite di un'assemblea rappresentativa eletta a suffragio universale diretto, libero e segreto".

Il principio di democrazia su cui, com'è detto nel Preambolo, si basa l'Unione europea, deve trovare nell'affermazione del "diritto al Parlamento", contenuto in questo nuovo comma, la concretizzazione di democrazia partecipativa e parlamentare. La formulazione è tratta dalla giurisprudenza della Corte di giustizia (e, in particolare, dalla sentenza Roquette e Maizena).

Il secondo comma nella formulazione del Presidium, è la specificazione di questo "diritto al Parlamento", che ne costituisce pertanto la premessa da esplicitare necessariamente.

Articolo 47

Si propone di aggiungere, alla fine del terzo comma, le seguenti parole:

"e devono tendere alla rieducazione del condannato".

E' infatti un principio di civiltà giuridica, recepito in varie Costituzioni e ordinamenti europei, che l'espiazione della pena debba accompagnarsi a misure dirette a recuperare e rieducare la personalità del condannato.

Articolo 49

Si propone di riformulare il primo comma come segue:

"1. Le istituzioni e gli organi dell'Unione, come pure gli Stati membri quando attuano il diritto dell'Unione, rispettano i diritti fondamentali e osservano i principi enunciati nella presente Carta e ne promuovono l'applicazione nel rispetto del principio di sussidiarietà".

Molti dei diritti fondamentali enunciati nella Carta trovano, infatti, attuazione principalmente nell'ambito nazionale, costituendo, per il diritto dell'Unione, un quadro di riferimento, di orientamento e di limitazione della regolamentazione comunitaria. Affermare che le disposizioni della Carta si applicano agli Stati membri "esclusivamente" nell'attuazione del diritto dell'Unione può creare incomprensioni, dato che al comma 2 dell'articolo 49 già si ribadisce che la Carta non modifica alcuna competenza istituzionale.

Articolo 50

Si suggerisce di riformulare il terzo comma come segue:

"3. I diritti e le libertà riconosciuti dalla presente Carta, che siano già disciplinati dalla Convenzione Europea di salvaguardia dei diritti dell'uomo e delle libertà fondamentali, possono subire le medesime restrizioni previste dalla Convenzione: non possono subire restrizioni maggiori di quelle, ma possono godere della protezione maggiore e più estesa prevista dalla presente Carta".

Nel terzo comma del testo proposto dal Presidium, l'uso del termine "simili", riferito al significato ed alla portata dei diritti fondamentali, può essere fonte di confusione. Con il nuovo testo del comma, si intende proporre una formulazione più chiara e semplice di quella del Presidium, che metta in luce due dati essenziali: e cioè che, con riferimento ai diritti della Convenzione, non vi possono essere restrizioni maggiori di quelle previste dalla Convenzione stessa; ma che, al contempo, la Carta può garantire ad essi una protezione maggiore o più estesa.

Nella speranza che le predette osservazioni trovino consenso nel Presidium, all'unico scopo di migliorare l'eccellente lavoro già svolto, esprimo i sensi della mia più alta considerazione.

All'attenzione del sig. JanssonOn. Piero Melograni - Osservazioni sul progetto di Carta dei diritti fondamentali dell'Unione europea (Convent 45)

1. In via generale appare opportuna e anzi indispensabile, come lo stesso Presidium ha rilevato, una attenta revisione stilistica e linguistica del testo.

A volte si tratta di problemi di traduzione, ma a volte si tratta di questioni più impegnative, con rilevante incidenza sulla portata sostanziale delle norme. Si segnalano di seguito alcune osservazioni di carattere sostanziale (indicate in neretto), nonché, a titolo di esempio, una serie di rilievi di carattere linguistico.

⇒ in molti articoli (articoli 2 e 3, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 17, 27, 31, 33, 39, 45) mentre i testi in altre lingue usano quasi sempre il termine "persona" (o "everyone"), il testo italiano reca "individuo".

Sembra preferibile anche per l'italiano il termine "persona", in particolare per i primi articoli citati, come già indicato in alcuni miei emendamenti. Ciò anche in considerazione del fatto che, se nei Trattati internazionali elaborati in ambito ONU ricorre tendenzialmente il termine "individuo", in quelli elaborati in ambito europeo (CEDU, Carta comunitaria dei diritti sociali fondamentali) prevale il riferimento al termine "persona" (o "chiunque", come nella Dichiarazione dei diritti e delle libertà fondamentali adottata dal Parlamento europeo il 12 aprile del 1989). Anche in dottrina, secondo gli orientamenti più diffusi, si attribuisce al termine "persona" la funzione di tradurre in una qualificazione rilevante per il diritto la condizione naturale dell'individuo.

- ⇒ sarebbe meglio al posto della formula burocratica "la presente Carta" scrivere "questa Carta" (ad esempio ai punti 4 e 5 del Preambolo, all'articolo 49 punti 1 e 2, all'articolo 50 punti 1,2,3, all'articolo 51 e all'articolo 52).
- ⇒ articolo 11. Il termine "media". Benché si tratti di parola latina, noi italiani preferiremmo forse "mezzi di comunicazione di massa".
- ⇒ articolo 12. Meglio dire "in campo politico, sindacale e civico" (anziché nei "settori").
- ⇒ All'articolo 13 - o all'articolo 14 - potrebbe valutarsi l'opportunità di prevedere, accanto al diritto alla libera ricerca, anche il diritto al libero insegnamento, il cui contenuto appare distinto da quello del diritto di "creare istituti di insegnamento", riconosciuto all'articolo 14, comma 2.
- ⇒ articolo 15. Proporrei di togliere "Per guadagnarsi di che vivere", sia perché la frase è un po' rozza, sia perché il diritto deve ovviamente riguardare anche le persone che fortunatamente già hanno i mezzi per vivere. Lasciare quindi: "Ogni persona ha il diritto di esercitare una professione liberamente scelta." Punto e basta.
- ⇒ All'articolo 17 andrebbe forse specificato che la proprietà intellettuale è tutelata a norma della legislazione dell'Unione e delle convenzioni internazionali vigenti in materia.
- ⇒ All'articolo 18, in relazione al diritto di asilo, si potrebbe - come indicava il mio emendamento all'articolo 21 del Convent 28 - integrare, o sostituire, il riferimento alla Convenzione di Ginevra con quello alle norme internazionali vigenti in materia. Sembra infatti inopportuno, in questa sede, il riferimento solo alle norme di una specifica convenzione, in quanto ciò potrebbe limitare la tutela esclusivamente a quanto da questa prescritto, senza tenere conto di eventuali futuri accordi in materia. Per altro l'articolo 63 del Trattato CE incorpora nel diritto comunitario la Convenzione, per cui il riferimento al Trattato dell'ultima parte dell'articolo 18 potrebbe anche rendere superfluo il richiamo specifico a tale Convenzione.

- ⇒ All'articolo 23, comma 2, nella frase "l'interesse superiore del minore deve essere considerato preminente", dovrebbe essere soppressa la parola "superiore", del tutto ultronea.
- ⇒ L'attuale formulazione del nuovo articolo 34 ("Accesso ai servizi di interesse economico generale") lascia alquanto interdetti. Esso non chiarisce in alcun modo di quali servizi si tratti. Si intendono favorire i consumatori o anche i produttori di elettricità che vogliono accedere per esempio alle reti distributive? È un diritto fondamentale? Ma allora perché ci si limita a dichiarare che l'Unione "rispetta" questo accesso?
- ⇒ All'articolo 35 ("In tutte le politiche dell'Unione sono garantiti la tutela e la salvaguardia di un ambiente di vita di buona qualità ed il miglioramento della qualità dell'ambiente nel rispetto del principio dello sviluppo sostenibile.") la ripetizione della parola ambiente non funziona affatto bene, tanto è vero che in altre lingue il Convent 45 usa termini diversi (in francese: "cadre de vie" e "environnement").
- ⇒ L'articolo 37 ("Diritto di voto e di eleggibilità") era linguisticamente migliore nella versione precedente (vedi articolo 25 del Convent 28). La formula "eleggibilità alle elezioni" non suona affatto bene. Meglio dire: "elettorato attivo e passivo". Lo stesso valga per l'articolo 38.
- ⇒ L'articolo 46, comma 1, fa riferimento alla presunzione di innocenza fino alla "prova legale" dell'eventuale colpevolezza. Al riguardo si sottolinea che, in base all'articolo 27, comma 2, della Costituzione italiana "L'imputato non è considerato colpevole sino alla condanna definitiva". Dovrebbe, anche in sede di lavori preparatori, essere chiarito che il riferimento alla prova legale della colpevolezza non dovrà comportare una tutela di grado diverso e minore rispetto a quanto previsto nel nostro ordinamento.

- ⇒ Un punto importante riguarda l'articolo 48 ("Diritto di non essere giudicato o punito due volte per lo stesso reato"). Credo che, allo stato attuale della costruzione di uno spazio europeo di libertà, sicurezza e giustizia, questo articolo 48 - per le ragioni già da me addotte nell'emendamento relativo all'allora articolo 11 del Convent 28 (con particolare riferimento, per esempio, ai casi di reati per falsificazione di moneta, commercio di droghe, tratta di esseri umani) - potrebbe incontrare difficoltà di accettazione presso il Parlamento italiano.
- ⇒ L'articolo 50 ("Portata dei diritti garantiti") merita anch'esso una revisione linguistica. Meglio scrivere: "Tutte le eventuali limitazioni all'esercizio dei diritti e delle libertà riconosciuti in questa Carta possono essere previste soltanto dalla competente autorità legislativa". Da notare che nelle versioni tedesca, spagnola e francese non si dice "eventuali", ma "jede", "cualquier", "toute". In italiano, insomma, andrebbe bene "tutte le eventuali".
- ⇒ Sempre all'articolo 50, comma 3, l'aggettivo "simili" non sembra opportuno. Nella versione tedesca, viene usato molto più correttamente il termine "entsprechende" che in italiano significa "corrispondente". Quindi proporrei che, per non ripetere il termine "corrispondenti" che già si trova all'inizio dell'articolo, potremmo scrivere: "il significato e la portata degli stessi equivalgono a quelli previsti dalla suddetta Convenzione, a meno che questa Carta non garantisca una protezione maggiore o più estesa."

2. L'impressione generale che desta la lettura dell'intero Convent 45 è quella di trovarsi di fronte ad un testo forse un po' troppo ampio. I diritti "veramente fondamentali" possono essere anche meno dei 52 diritti elencati nel Convent 45. Forse la Convenzione non si è abbastanza soffermata sui criteri che distinguono i diritti "veramente fondamentali" da tutti gli altri diritti. Insomma, se i Vertici di Biarritz e di Nizza dovessero esigere una maggiore stringatezza, in linea di massima non mi opporrei. È probabile che tutti avremmo da guadagnare se la Carta risultasse un po' più asciutta ed essenziale.

A l'attention de M. Jansson

M. Piero Melograni. Observations sur le projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne (CONVENT 45)

1. En principe une révision stylistique et linguistique minutieuse, comme le Présidium même l'a remarqué, paraît opportune, voire indispensable. Il s'agit parfois de problèmes de traduction, mais à d'autres endroits sont en jeu des questions de plus grande envergure, qui influent sur la portée substantielle des normes. On présente ci-après quelques observations de substance (en gras), ainsi qu'une série de remarques linguistiques à titre d'exemple.
 - + Au point 1 du préambule il ne semble pas logique de dire que les peuples européens «ont décidé de partager un avenir pacifique». Aucun habitant de la planète ne peut décider de l'avenir, et il serait prétentieux d'exhiber une telle divine assurance dès les premières lignes. Ce serait bien plus émouvant et dramatique si l'on faisait comprendre que l'engagement pour la paix doit être chaque jour renouvelé. Une meilleure formulation pourrait être la suivante: «ont décidé de bâtir ensemble – ou de s'engager ensemble pour bâtir – un avenir pacifique fondé sur des valeurs communes».
 - + Dans de nombreux articles (2, 3, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 17, 27, 31, 33, 39, 45), alors que les autres versions linguistiques utilisent presque toujours le terme «personne» (ou «everyone») la version italienne choisit «individuo». En italien aussi, le mot «personne» semble préférable, particulièrement dans les premiers articles que je viens de mentionner, et comme je l'ai déjà fait valoir dans certains amendements que j'ai présentés. Ceci en considérant aussi le fait suivant: s'il est vrai que dans les Traités internationaux élaborés dans le contexte des Nations Unies le terme «individu» a tendance à apparaître plus fréquemment, dans les Traités élaborés dans le cadre européen (CEDU, Charte européenne des droits sociaux fondamentaux) la référence à la «personne» (ou alors à «chacun», comme dans la Déclaration des droits et des libertés fondamentales adoptée par le Parlement européen le 12 avril 1989) est celle qui prévaut. Dans la doctrine également, d'après les orientations les plus répandues, on attribue au mot «personne» la fonction d'exprimer la condition naturelle de l'individu à travers une qualification qui relève du droit.
 - + Il vaudrait mieux écrire, au lieu de la formule bureaucratique «la présente Charte», «cette Charte» (par exemple aux points 4 et 5 du Préambule, à l'article 49, points 1 et 2, à l'article 50, points 1,2 et 3, à l'article 51 et à l'article 52).
 - + Article 11; le terme «média»: bien qu'il s'agisse d'un mot latin, nous les Italiens aimerions davantage, peut-être, «moyens de communication de masse».
 - + Article 12. Il est mieux de dire «in campo» («dans le domaine») plutôt que «nei settori» («dans les secteurs»).
 - + A l'article 13 – ou 14 – on pourrait réfléchir à l'opportunité de prévoir également, à côté du droit à la liberté de la recherche, le droit à la liberté de l'enseignement, dont le contenu apparaît distinct de celui du droit à la «création d'établissements d'enseignement», reconnu à l'article 14, alinéa 2.

278

- + Article 15. Je propose de biffer «afin de gagner sa vie », parce que d'un côté c'est une façon de s'exprimer un peu rude, mais aussi parce qu'il va de soi que ce droit doit concerner aussi les personnes qui ont déjà, heureusement, de quoi vivre. Bornons-nous donc à dire : « Toute personne a le droit d'exercer une profession librement choisie ». Un point c'est tout.
- + A l'article 17 il faudrait peut-être spécifier que la propriété intellectuelle est protégée conformément aux normes de la législation de l'Union et aux conventions internationales en vigueur en la matière.
- + A l'article 18, relativement au droit d'asile, on pourrait – comme l'indiquait mon amendement à l'article 21 du CONVENT 28 – compléter ou remplacer la référence à la Convention de Genève par celle aux normes internationales en vigueur en la matière. Il paraît inopportun, dans ce contexte, ne se référer qu'aux normes d'une convention spécifique, car cela pourrait restreindre la protection à ce que ladite convention prescrit, sans tenir compte d'éventuels accords à venir en la matière. Par ailleurs l'article 63 du Traité CE transpose la Convention dans le droit communautaire, c'est pourquoi la référence au Traité à la fin de l'article 18 pourrait même rendre superflu le renvoi spécifique à cette Convention.
- + A l'article 23, al. 2 ; dans la phrase «d'intérêt supérieur de l'enfant » le mot 'supérieur' est redondant, et il serait mieux de le supprimer.
- + La rédaction actuelle du nouvel article 34 «accès aux services d'intérêt économique général » me laisse rêveur. Il n'est absolument pas clair de quels services il s'agit. Est-ce que l'on vise à favoriser les consommateurs ou également les producteurs d'électricité qui veulent avoir accès, par exemple, aux réseaux de distribution ? Est-ce qu'il s'agit d'un droit fondamental ? Dans ce cas, pourquoi on se borne à déclarer que l'Union «respecte » cet accès ?
- + A l'article 35 («protection de l'environnement»), dans la traduction italienne le mot 'ambiente' est répété deux fois, ce qui n'est pas bien, tant il est vrai que dans d'autres langues CONVENT 45 a recours à deux mots différents (en français : «cadre de vie » et «environnement »).
- + L'article 37 («Droit de vote et d'éligibilité») avait été mieux rédigé, du point de vue linguistique, dans la version précédente (voir l'article 25 du CONVENT 28). La formule «éligibilité aux élections » ne sonne pas bien. Il serait mieux de dire : «électorat actif et passif ». La même chose vaut pour l'article 38.
- + L'article 46, al.1 concerne la présomption d'innocence jusqu'à ce que la culpabilité soit «légalement établie ». A cet égard il faut dire qu'aux termes de l'art. 27, al. 2 de la Constitution italienne «de prévenu n'est pas considéré coupable jusqu'à ce que sa condamnation définitive n'ait été prononcée ». Il devrait être clair, et cela aussi bien dans les travaux préparatoires, que la référence à l'établissement légal de la culpabilité ne pourra entraîner une protection différente et inférieure à ce qu'il est prévu dans notre législation.
- + L'article 48 («Droit à ne pas être jugé ou puni pénalement deux fois pour un même délit ») concerne une question très importante. A l'état actuel de la construction d'un espace européen de liberté, sécurité et justice cet article 48 pourrait rencontrer, à mon avis, des difficultés à être accepté par le Parlement italien, pour les motifs que j'ai déjà expliqués dans mon amendement à l'ancien article 11 du CONVENT 28 (notamment en ce qui concerne, par exemple, les délits de contrefaçon de monnaie, trafic de stupéfiants, traite des personnes).

+ L'article 50 («Portée des droits garantis») exigerait aussi une révision linguistique. Il serait mieux d'écrire, dans la version italienne : « Tutte le eventuali limitazioni all'esercizio dei diritti e delle libertà etc. » afin de mieux correspondre aux versions allemande, espagnole et française, qui portent 'jede', 'cualquier' et 'toute'. Dans la même phrase, au lieu des mots « devono essere previste » il vaudrait mieux écrire « possono essere previste soltanto » (en français : « ne peut être prévue que »)

+ Dans le même article 50, à l'al. 3, l'adjectif « simili » («similaires» en français) ne semble pas opportun. Pour ne pas répéter le mot « corrispondenti » («correspondants» en français, mais «entsprechende» en allemand) qui se trouve déjà dans la même phrase, je propose la rédaction suivante : « il significato e la portata degli stessi equivalgono a quelli previsti dalla suddetta Convenzione, a meno che questa Carta etc. » (en français ce serait: « leur sens et leur portée équivalent à ceux que leur confère la dite Convention, à moins que la présente Charte etc. »).

2. L'impression générale que l'on tire de la lecture de CONVENT 45 dans son entièreté est celle de se trouver devant un texte qui est peut être trop vaste.

Le nombre des droits «vraiment fondamentaux» peut aussi être inférieur aux 52 recensés dans CONVENT 45. Il se peut que la Convention ne se soit pas penchée suffisamment sur les critères distinguant les droits «vraiment fondamentaux» de tous les autres droits. Si les sommets de Biarritz et de Nice demandent plus de concision, en ligne générale je ne m'y opposerai pas. Il est probable que nous tous aurons quelque chose à gagner si la Charte résulte un peu plus succincte et essentielle.

For the attention of Mr Jansson

Hon. Piero Melograni - Comments of the draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (CONVENT 45)

1. On a general plane, it appears advisable, indeed essential, to undertake a careful stylistic and linguistic revision of the text, as the Praesidium itself has noted.

In certain cases the problems are related to difficulties of translation, but in other instances they are more far-reaching, with a significant impact on the substantive scope of the measures. A number of substantial comments (shown in bold) are given below, together with examples of some of the linguistic issues mentioned above.

⇒ In point 1 of the Preamble, it does not seem logical to say that the peoples of Europe “hanno deciso di condividere un futuro di pace” (in English: “are resolved to share a peaceful future”). The future cannot be decided by anyone, and it would seem excessively bold to assert such divine certainty from the very first lines of the text. It would be more emotionally and dramatically effective to convey the fact that the commitment to peace must be renewed every day.

It might be better to say something along the lines of “hanno deciso di costruire insieme - o di impegnarsi insieme per costruire - un futuro di pace fondato su valori comuni” (in English: “... have decided to build together - or commit themselves to building together - a peaceful future based on common values”).

⇒ in many articles (articles 2, 3, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 17, 27, 31, 33, 39, 45), the text in other languages nearly always contains the term “person” or “everyone”, while the Italian version uses “individuo” [individual]. It would be preferable to use “persona” [person] in the Italian text as well, especially in the first articles cited, as previously indicated in some of my amendments. The case for this choice is even more compelling if we consider the fact that while international treaties drafted under the aegis of the UN tend to use “individual”, those drafted at the European level (European Convention on Human Rights, Community Charter of Fundamental Social Rights) opt for “person” (or “anyone”, as in the Declaration of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms by the European Parliament on 12 April 1989). The most widely accepted scholarly opinions also use the term “person” to represent the natural condition of the individual in law.

⇒ It would be better to use the expression “questa Carta” [this Charter] in place of the more bureaucratic formulation “la presente Carta” [the present Charter] in the Italian version of the text (see, for example, points 4 and 5 of the Preamble, paragraphs 1 and 2 of Article 49, paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 of Article 50, Article 51 and Article 52).

⇒ Article 11. Although “media” it is a Latin term, we Italians might prefer “mezzi di comunicazione di massa” [means of mass communication].

⇒ Article 12. It would be preferable to use “in campo politico, sindacale e civico” rather than “settori” (in English, “field” rather than “sectors”).

⇒ In Article 13 (or Article 14), it might be worth considering including a “freedom to teach” alongside the freedom of research. It seems to represent a different content from the “freedom to found educational establishments”, which is recognised in paragraph 2 of Article 14.

⇒ In Article 15, I would suggest eliminating “to earn a living”, both because the phrase is a bit too colloquial in tone and because such a right must obviously include people who are already fortunate enough to have sufficient means. I would therefore trim the text to “Everyone has the right to engage in a freely chosen occupation” and leave it at that.

⇒ Article 17 should perhaps specify that intellectual property shall be protected in accordance with European Union legislation and international agreements in force in this field.

⇒ Article 18, in relation to the right of asylum, as indicated in my amendment to Article 21 of CONVENT 28, the reference to the Geneva Convention could be supplemented or replaced with a more general reference to international regulations in this field. Reference to a specific convention in this instance does not seem appropriate, as this could limit protection to the areas covered by this convention, without taking account of any future agreements in this area. Moreover, Article 63 of the EC Treaty incorporates the Convention into Community law, meaning that the reference to the Treaty at the end of Article 18 could well make any specific reference to the Convention superfluous.

⇒ Article 23, paragraph 2, the word “best” in the phrase “the child’s best interest must be a primary consideration” should be eliminated, as it is unnecessary.

- ⇒ The current phrasing of the new Article 34 (“Access to services of general economic interest”) is somewhat perplexing. It does not clarify in any way just which services are intended. Is the intention to protect consumers or does its scope also include, say, electricity producers that wish to gain access to distribution networks? Is it a fundamental right? If so, why are we declaring only that the Union “respects” such access?
- ⇒ In Article 35 (“All Union policies shall ensure the protection and preservation of a good quality living environment and the improvement of the quality of the environment, taking into account the principle of sustainable development”) the repetition of the word “ambiente” [“environment” in English] doesn’t work very well. In fact, in other languages different terms have been used (e.g. in French: “cadre de vie” and “environnement”).
- ⇒ Article 37 (“Right to vote and to stand as a candidate”) was phrased better (in Italian) in the previous version (see Article 25 of CONVENT 28). The expression “eleggibilità alle elezioni” has a poor sound to it. A better solution would be “elettorato attivo e passivo”. The same comment holds for Article 38.
- ⇒ Article 46, paragraph 1, refers to the presumption of innocence until “proved guilty” according to law. Under Article 27, paragraph 1, of the Italian Constitution, “The accused is not considered guilty until final judgement has been issued”. It should be clarified, also during the preparatory stages, that “proved guilty” should not involve a lesser degree of protection than that afforded in the Italian system.

- ⇒ An important point concerns Article 48 (“Right not to be tried or punished twice for the same criminal offence”). I believe that at the current stage in the construction of a European space of freedom, security and justice, it could be difficult to obtain the Italian Parliament’s approval for this article - for the reasons I cited in the amendment to Article 11 of CONVENT 28 (with special regard to crimes such as, for example, counterfeiting, drug trafficking, trafficking in human beings).
- ⇒ Article 50 (“Scope of guaranteed rights”) could also benefit from linguistic revision of the Italian version. It would be better to write “Tutte le eventuali limitazioni all’esercizio dei diritti e delle libertà riconosciuti in questa Carta possono essere previste soltanto dalla competente autorità legislativa”. The German, Spanish and French versions do not use “eventuali”, but rather “jede”, “cualquier” and “toute”. The Italian could use “tutte le eventuali”.
- ⇒ The adjective “similar” (“simili” in Italian) in Article 50, paragraph 3, does not seem appropriate. The German version uses “entsprechende”, which means “corrispondente” in Italian (“corresponding” in English). In order avoid repeating the term “corresponding”, which appears at the start of the paragraph, we could use “the meaning and scope of those rights shall be equivalent to those conferred on them by the said convention unless this Charter affords greater or more extensive protection” (In Italian, “il significato e la portata degli stessi equivalgono a quelli previsti dalla suddetta Convenzione, a meno che questa Carta ...”).

2. The general impression one gets from reading the whole of CONVENT 45 is that it is perhaps overly broad. The number of “truly fundamental” rights could well be less than the 52 listed in CONVENT 45. Perhaps the Convention has not given enough attention to the criteria that distinguish “truly fundamental” rights from other rights. I would not object if the summits of Biarritz and Nice should call for greater brevity. It is likely that we will all gain if the Charter that emerges from our work is a more succinct, essential document.

MENDEZ DE VIGO

MEYER ET 11 ANDERE

An den Vorsitzenden des Konvents
 zur Erarbeitung der Europäischen Charta der Grundrechte
 Prof. Dr. Roman Herzog

An die stellvertretenden Vorsitzenden
 Prof. Dr. Guy Braibant
 Gunnar Jansson
 Mendez de Vigo

Sehr geehrte Herren, gemäß dem vom Präsidium in Convent 45 (Charte 4422/00) vorgeschlagenen Verfahren, reichen die Unterzeichner folgende allgemeine Bemerkungen zum Gesamtentwurf der Charta ein:

I. Grundsätzliches

- a) Die Unterzeichner begrüßen den Chartaentwurf ausdrücklich und danken dem Präsidium für die vorgelegte Arbeit. Viele Anregungen aus schriftlichen Änderungsanträgen und mündlichen Beiträgen einzelner Delegierter sind eingearbeitet worden, so dass der Entwurf eine gute Grundlage für eine zustimmungsfähige Charta ist.
- b) Aus systematischen Gründen sollte aber davon abgesehen werden, in einzelnen Artikeln einen Verweis auf „einzelstaatliche Rechtsvorschriften“ und „nach Maßgabe des Gemeinschaftsrechts“ aufzunehmen. Insofern sprechen sich die Unterzeichner dafür aus, diese Verweise aus den Artikeln 9, 18, 25, 26, 32, 33 und 34 zu streichen.

Es sei darauf hingewiesen, dass durch die horizontale Bestimmung in Art. 49 Abs. 1 und 2 ein solcher Verweis überflüssig ist. Aus systematischen Gründen hat sich der Konvent darauf geeinigt, horizontale Fragen separat zu formulieren, nicht zuletzt, um die Lesbarkeit der Charta und damit die Identifikationsmöglichkeit des Bürgers mit der EU zu fördern.

Durch die in Convent 45 vorgelegte Systematik wird dagegen beim Bürger der Eindruck erweckt, dass hier spezifische Artikel gegenüber anderen abgeschwächt werden sollen. Dies entspricht weder der Intention des Konvents noch dem Kölner Auftrag.

Darüber hinaus kann der Eindruck entstehen, dass Grundrechte, die nach allgemeinem Verständnis höchstrangiges Recht darstellen, unter den Vorbehalt einzelstaatlicher Regelungen oder zukünftiger Vertragsrevisionen gestellt werden. Dieser Eindruck wäre fatal und widerspräche dem Geist des Art. 6 Abs. 1 EUV, in dem deutlich zum Ausdruck gebracht wird, dass die Union der Achtung der Menschenrechte und Grundfreiheiten höchste Priorität beimisst. Aus diesem Grund appellieren die Unterzeichner dringend, den Art. 50 Abs. 2 ersatzlos zu streichen.

- c) Die Unterzeichner begrüßen es, dass in Punkt 5 der Präambel die Hauptquellen, die zur Erarbeitung der Charta herangezogen wurden, genannt werden. Dies sind gemäß dem Kölner Mandat die Europäische Menschenrechtskonvention, die gemeinsamen Verfassungstraditionen der Mitgliedstaaten, die Europäische Sozialcharta und die Gemeinschaftscharta der sozialen Grundrechte der Arbeitnehmer.

Die Kohärenz des Entwurfs wird aber dann gefährdet, wenn diese Quellen nicht auch in Art. 51 genannt werden. Die Präambel und der Art. 51 bilden die Klammer der Charta. Insofern plädieren die Unterzeichner dafür, auch in Artikel 51 die von der Gemeinschaft und dem Europarat beschlossenen Sozialchartas als Mindestschutzniveau aufzunehmen.

- d) Der Art. 15 „Berufsfreiheit“ sollte aus systematischen Gründen in das Kapitel IV „Solidarität“ aufgenommen werden und dabei die frühere, vom Präsidium vorgeschlagene Überschrift („Berufsfreiheit und Recht auf Arbeit“) und Allgemeinnorm („Jede Person hat das Recht zu arbeiten“) enthalten (vgl. Convent 41, alter Art. 31).

Es ist kaum ersichtlich, warum der alte Präsidiumsvorschlag (Convent 41), der auf dem Braibant-Meyer-Vorschlag basierte, in der aktuellen Fassung in Stellung und Wortlaut verändert worden ist, obschon sich die überwiegende Mehrheit der Delegierten in der mündlichen Aussprache für den Kompromissvorschlag ausgesprochen hatte (u.a. Nikula, Voggenhuber, Friedrich, Einem, Paciotti, Leinen, Hirsch Ballin, Olsen, Barros Moura, van den Burg, Kaufmann). Auch hat - neben den bereits genannten - eine große Anzahl Delegierter in ihren schriftlichen Änderungsanträgen für eine Norm „Recht zu arbeiten“ plädiert (Convent 39: Änderungsanträge Nr. 35 Sole Tura, Nr. 39 Dieulangard, Nr. 46 Fayot, Nr. 47 Braibant, Nr. 51 Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella, Nr. 53 Beres u.a.)

- e) Generell sollte nochmals sorgfältig geprüft werden, ob die Charta in allen EU-Sprachen die jeweils adäquaten Begrifflichkeiten enthält. So wird z.B. in der deutschen Übersetzung in Art. 24 von „behinderten Menschen“ gesprochen, während anerkanntermaßen der korrekte Begriff „Menschen mit Behinderung“ ist. Auch ist fraglich, ob die in Punkt 2 der Präambel gewählte Formulierung „Würde der Männer und Frauen“ glücklich gewählt ist, da durch diese Begrifflichkeit z.B. Kinder nicht berücksichtigt werden.
- Die Unterzeichner gehen davon aus, dass vor der Übergabe an die Staats- und Regierungschefs die Charta in allen EU-Sprachen dem Konvent vorliegt.

II. Spezielles

a) Art. 10 Gedanken-, Gewissens- und Religionsfreiheit

Dem Artikel ist ein Abs. 2 hinzuzufügen, in dem das Recht auf Kriegsdienstverweigerung aufgenommen wird. Die Aufnahme eines solchen zweiten Absatzes entspricht einer Reihe von Änderungsanträgen (Convent 35: Änderungsanträge Nr. 256 Voggenhuber/Buitenweg, Nr. 257 Meyer/Leinen/Martin, Nr. 261 Gnauck und Nr. 262 Kaufmann, u.a.) und der Mehrheitsmeinung während der Konventsdiskussion.

b) Art. 11 Abs. 2 Freiheit der Meinungsäußerung und Informationsfreiheit Während grundsätzlich die Zielrichtung des Art. 11 Abs. 2 begrüßt wird, und insbesondere durch den Begriff der „Medien“ weitere begriffliche Klarheit im Vergleich zu der vorherigen Version erreicht werden konnte (wobei die Begriffe „Presse- und Rundfunkfreiheit bzw. „an die Allgemeinheit gerichtete Kommunikation“ präziser wäre), fehlen drei Aspekte in der vom Präsidium vorgeschlagenen Formulierung:

- i. Die Organe der Europäischen Union sollen zur Auskunftspflicht gegenüber den Medien verpflichtet werden. Dies ist im Hinblick auf die Herausbildung einer europäischen Öffentlichkeit ebenso von Belang, wie es ein Gebot der Transparenz innerhalb eines demokratischen Gemeinwesens ist. Zwar enthält der Präsidiumsentswurf mit Art. 40 ein allgemeines Recht auf Zugang zu Dokumenten; trotzdem sollte den Medien, mit ihrer speziellen Aufgabe als „Transmissionsriemen“ bzw. Bindeglied zwischen öffentlicher Gewalt und Bevölkerung, diesbezüglich ein explizites Recht gewährt werden.
- ii. Der Begriff der „Transparenz“ in Abs. 2 ist von einer Reihe von Medienanstalten scharf kritisiert worden. Hintergrund dabei ist die Befürchtung, dass freiheitsbeschränkende Maßnahmen durch die öffentliche Verwaltung unter Anwendung des Transparenzgebotes gerechtfertigt werden könnten.
Sollte mit der Regelung intendiert sein, die Medien zu demokratischer Berichterstattung zu verpflichten, wird dieses Ziel bereits über den horizontalen Art. 52 und über praktische Konkordanz erreicht. Wenn hingegen durch den Begriff erreicht werden soll, eine finanzielle Transparenz der Medien zu ermöglichen (Convent 35, Änderungsantrag Nr. 284 Braibant), bedarf dies keiner ausdrücklichen Absicherung in einer Grundrechtscharta. Aus diesem Grund wird empfohlen, den Begriff aus dem Artikel zu streichen, dies auch vor dem Hintergrund, dass die Aufnahme des Begriffs nur in einem Änderungsantrag gefordert worden ist.
- iii. Während der Diskussion innerhalb des Konvent wurde von einer Reihe von Delegierten die Unschärfe des Begriffs „Pluralismus“ kritisiert (Goldsmith, Hirsch Ballin, Rodota, Partijn). Diesen Begriff kann man schärfer fassen: Insofern sollte - auch unter Bezugnahme auf das Protokoll Nr. 23 zum Amsterdamer Vertrag - eine Bestandsgarantie für den öffentlich-rechtlichen Rundfunk in die Charta aufgenommen werden, da hiermit ein Nebeneinander von privaten und öffentlich-rechtlichen Medien gewährleistet und damit eine pluralistischen Berichterstattung sichergestellt werden kann.

c) Art. 13 Freiheit der Forschung

292

Der Artikel ist um die Freiheit der Wissenschaft, Lehre und Kunst zu ergänzen. Dies entspricht einem älteren Präsidiumsvorschlag (Convent 13 Art. 15 Abs. 2, mit Ausnahme von „Lehre“), der in dieser Hinsicht vom Konvent nicht kritisiert worden war. Vielmehr hatte eine Reihe von Delegierten in der mündlichen Debatte die Wichtigkeit dieses Absatzes betont (Meyer, Friedrich, Rack, Leinen, Einem, Rodota, Braibant, Mombaur, Papadimitriou) und dies auch in einer großen Anzahl von Änderungsanträgen begründet. Weiterhin entsprechen die genannten Freiheiten sowohl den gemeinsamen Verfassungsüberlieferung der Mitgliedstaaten als auch internationalen Konventionen. Aus diesem Grund wird die Ergänzung des Artikels dringend empfohlen.

d) Art. 26 Recht auf Kollektivverhandlungen und Kollektivmaßnahmen

Die Unterzeichner sprechen sich dafür aus, dass in den Artikel die Worte „[kollektive Maßnahmen] einschließlich des Streikrechts“ eingefügt werden. Die Formulierung ist unmittelbar aus der Europäischen Sozialcharta entnommen (Art. 6 Abs. 4), die gemäß dem Kölner Mandat eine Grundlage der Konventsarbeit ist.

Diejenigen Delegierten, die das Streikrecht mit dem Hinweis aus der Charta herauslassen wollen, dass dann auch die „Aussperrung“ Eingang finden müsse, irren in diesem Punkt über bestehende gemeinsame Verfassungstraditionen und über von allen Mitgliedstaaten anerkanntes internationales Recht (Europäische Sozialcharta, Art. 8 Abs. 1 d Internationaler Pakt über wirtschaftliche, soziale und kulturelle Rechte, vielfache ILO-Konventionen).

Eine Nichterwähnung des Streikrechts würde dem Versuch gleichkommen, bestehendes Recht zurückzudrängen. Aus diesem Grund hat sich die Mehrheit der Delegierten in ihren Änderungsanträgen für dessen explizite Aufnahme in den Artikel ausgesprochen (Convent 39: Änderungsanträge Nr. 93 Voggenhuber, Nr. 94 Dehousse, Nr. 95 Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella, Nr. 97 Braibant, Nr. 99 Dieulangard, Nr. 102 Fayot, Nr. 103 Beres, Nr. 104 van den Burg).

e) Art. 32 Soziale Sicherheit und soziale Unterstützung

- i. Die Unterzeichner begrüßen den in Abs. 1 formulierten Artikel und regen dabei an, die Auflistung der sozialen Sicherheit und sozialen Dienste durch den Begriff „insbesondere“ einzuleiten, damit die Offenheit der Aufzählung hervorgehoben wird. Da Grundrechte ihrem Wesen nach von möglichst langem Bestand sein sollen, sind abschließende Beispielformulierungen zu vermeiden, da kaum abzusehen ist, wie in diesem Bereichen die zukünftigen Entwicklungen aussehen werden.

- ii. In Abs. 3 hat das Präsidium leider erneut nur an einem einzigen Aspekt des „Rechts auf Wohnen“ – der Wohnungsbeihilfe – festgehalten, obschon mit dem Braibant-Meyer-Vorschlag ein von der Mehrheitsmeinung des Konvents getragener Kompromiss vorliegt, der eine ausschließliche Respektierungspflicht der Union enthält.

Es sei in diesem Zusammenhang erneut daran erinnert, dass das „Recht auf Wohnen“ völkerrechtlich von allen Mitgliedstaaten anerkannt (u.a. Art. 25 Abs. 1 Allgemeine Erklärung der Menschenrechte, Art. 11 Internationaler UN-Pakt über wirtschaftliche, soziale und kulturelle Rechte, Art. 27 Abs. 3 UN-Kinderrechtskonvention, Art. 31 revidierte Europäische Sozialcharta) und in vielen Verfassungen der Mitgliedstaaten enthalten ist (Art. 23 Belgien, § 15 a Finnland, Art. 21 Abs. 4 Griechenland, Art. 22 Abs. 2, Art. 65 Portugal, Kapitel 1 § 2 Schweden, Art. 47 Spanien; implizit in Art. 1, 13, 14 und 20 Deutschland).

f) Art. 43 Freizügigkeit und Aufenthaltsfreiheit

Der Abs. 2 des Artikels enthält kein Grundrecht, sondern nur einen Hinweis auf eine mögliche zukünftige Vertragsrevision, mit der ein Recht auf Freizügigkeit für Staatsangehörige dritter Länder eingeräumt werden könnte. Damit entspricht die neue Formulierung nicht der Mehrheitsmeinung, wie sie in der mündlichen Debatte innerhalb des Konvents vertreten wurde (u.a. Voggenhuber, Meyer, van den Burg, Brax, Einem, Beres, Kaufmann, Paciotti, Leinen, Martin).

Eine Gleichstellung von Drittstaatlern beim Recht auf Freizügigkeit ist nach Art. 63 Nr. 4 EGV möglich. Gemäß dem Art. 13 Allgemeine Erklärung der Menschenrechte, Art. 12 Internationaler Pakt über bürgerliche und politische Rechte und Art. 2 Protokoll Nr. 4 Europäische Menschenrechtskonvention ist die Freizügigkeit ein Menschen- und kein Bürgerrecht.

Entweder müsste – was die Unterzeichner befürworten – eine Ausweitung der Freizügigkeit auch auf Drittstaatler in die Grundrechtscharta aufgenommen werden, in dem in Abs. 1 der Begriff „Bürger“ durch „Jeder“ ersetzt wird, oder der Abs. 2 kann generell gestrichen werden.

Mit freundlichen Grüßen

MEYER ET 11 AUTRES

Monsieur
le professeur dr. Roman Herzog
Président de la Convention chargée d'élaborer la Charte européenne des droits fondamentaux

Messieurs
le professeur dr. Guy Braibant,
Gunnar Jansson,
Mendez de Vigo,
Vice-Présidents

Messieurs,

Conformément à la procédure proposée par le Présidium concernant la Convention 45 (Charte 4422/00), les soussignés présentent sur le projet complet de la Charte les observations générales ci-après :

I. Généralités

- a) Les soussignés approuvent expressément le texte proposé et remercient le Présidium pour le travail accompli. Un grand nombre de propositions de modification écrites et d'interventions orales de divers délégués a été pris en compte, de sorte que ce projet constitue une bonne base pour une Charte susceptible de recueillir une large approbation.

- b) Cependant, pour des considérations liées à la systématique, il conviendrait de ne pas se référer, comme il est fait dans divers articles, aux "législations nationales" et "au droit communautaire". Les soussignés demandent en conséquence la suppression de cette référence aux articles 9, 18, 25, 26, 32, 33 et 34.

Compte tenu de la disposition horizontale de l'article 49, al. 1 et 2, cette référence est superflue. Pour des considérations liées à la systématique, la Convention a convenu de formuler les questions horizontales séparément dans le but notamment de faciliter la lisibilité de la Charte et l'identification du citoyen avec l'UE.

La systématique de la Convention 45 fait croire au citoyen que l'on tend à diluer des articles spécifiques par rapport à d'autres, ce qui n'est pas l'intention de la Convention et ne correspond pas au mandat de Cologne.

Par ailleurs, elle peut faire croire que des droits fondamentaux relevant, dans leur acception générale, du droit premier sont valables sous réserve de réglementations nationales ou de futures révisions du traité. Cette impression serait regrettable et contraire à l'esprit de l'article 6, al. 1 du traité de l'UE dans lequel il est dit expressément que l'Union accorde une priorité absolue au respect des droits de l'Homme et des libertés fondamentales. C'est pourquoi les soussignés proposent la suppression pure et simple de l'article 50, al. 2.

- c) Les soussignés approuvent l'énumération au point 5 du préambule des principales sources dont s'inspire la Charte qui sont, conformément au mandat de Cologne, la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, les traditions constitutionnelles communes des Etats membres, la Charte sociale européenne et la Charte communautaire des droits fondamentaux sociaux des travailleurs.

Cependant, la cohérence du projet risque d'être compromise si l'on omet de mentionner ces sources également à l'article 51. Le préambule et l'article 51 relient entre eux les diverses parties du projet. C'est pourquoi les soussignés plaident en faveur de l'insertion également à l'article 51, en tant que niveau de protection minimal, les Chartes sociales adoptées par la Communauté et le Conseil de l'Europe.

- d) Pour des considérations liées à la systématique, l'article 15 "Liberté professionnelle" devrait figurer au chapitre IV "Solidarité" avec le titre et la règle générale précédemment proposés par le Présidium ("Liberté professionnelle et droit de travailler" et "Toute personne a le droit de travailler") (cf. Convention 41, ancien art. 31).

On voit mal pour quelles raisons la place et le texte de l'ancienne proposition du Présidium (Convention 41), qui reposait sur la proposition Braibant-Meyer, ont été modifiés dans la version actuelle et ce en dépit du fait que, lors de la discussion de la proposition de compromis, une large majorité des délégués (notamment Nikula, Voggenhuber, Friedrich, Einem, Paciotti, Leinen, Hirsch Ballin, Olsen, Barros Moura, van den Burg, Kaufmann) se soit prononcée en sa faveur. Par ailleurs, outre les personnes mentionnées, un grand nombre de délégués avaient plaidé dans leurs propositions de modification écrites en faveur d'une règle concernant le "droit de travailler" (Convention 39 : amendements n° 35 Sole Tura, n° 39 Dieulangard, n° 46 Fayot, n° 47 Braibant, n° 51 Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella, n° 53 Beres et al.).

- e) D'une manière générale, il conviendrait de vérifier une nouvelle fois très attentivement l'équivalence des notions employées dans les différentes langues du texte de la Charte. C'est ainsi qu'à l'article 24 de la traduction allemande figurent les termes "behinderte Menschen" alors que les termes corrects généralement reconnus devraient être "Menschen mit Behinderung". On peut également se demander si les termes de "Würde der Männer und Frauen", au point 2 du préambule, sont bien choisis, car cette notion ne tient pas compte des enfants.

Les soussignés espèrent que la Convention disposera du texte de la Charte dans toutes les langues de l'UE avant sa transmission aux chefs d'État et de gouvernement.

II. Questions particulières

- a) Article 10. Liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion

298

Il convient d'ajouter à cet article un deuxième alinéa dans lequel sera inscrit le droit à l'objection de conscience. L'insertion donne suite à toute une série d'amendements (Convention 35 : amendements n° 256 Voggenhuber/Buitenweg, n° 257 Meyer/Leinen/Martin, n° 261 Gnauck et n° 262 Kaufmann notamment) et au point de vue exprimé par une majorité au cours de la discussion à la Convention.

b) Article 11, al. 2. Liberté d'expression et d'information

L'objectif de l'article 11, al. 2 est approuvé en principe, la notion de "médias" venant apporter plus de clarté par comparaison avec la version précédente (les notions de "liberté de la presse et de la radiodiffusion" ou de "l'information s'adressant au grand public" seraient toutefois plus précises); cependant, la rédaction du Présidium néglige trois aspects :

- i. Les organes de l'Union européenne doivent être tenus de fournir des renseignements aux médias. Cet aspect est tout aussi important pour la formation d'une opinion publique européenne que l'impératif de la transparence requise dans une communauté démocratique. Il est vrai que le projet du Présidium prévoit en son article 49 un droit d'accès général aux documents; néanmoins, compte tenu de leur rôle particulier en tant que "courroie de transmission" ou lien entre le pouvoir public et la population, les médias devraient se voir accorder un droit explicite à cet égard.
- ii. Le terme de "transparence" a été vivement critiqué par un certain nombre d'établissements du secteur des médias; ils craignent que l'administration publique n'invoque l'impératif de la transparence pour justifier des mesures ayant pour effet de restreindre la liberté.
Si la réglementation doit faire obligation aux médias d'assurer l'information selon les principes démocratiques, cet objectif est déjà atteint par les dispositions horizontales de l'article 52 et la concordance pratique. En revanche, si cette notion doit assurer la transparence financière des médias (Convention 35, amendement n° 284 Braibant), ce principe ne doit pas expressément être garanti dans une Charte des droits fondamentaux. C'est pourquoi les soussignés proposent de rayer ce terme dans l'article en cause, d'autant que l'insertion de cette notion a fait l'objet d'un seul amendement.

- iii. Lors de la discussion à la réunion de la Convention, un certain nombre de délégués a critiqué le manque de précision de la notion de "pluralisme" (Goldsmith, Hirsch Ballin, Rodota, Partijn). Cette idée pourrait être exprimée avec plus de rigueur : à cet effet il conviendrait, en se référant notamment au Protocole n° 23 du traité d'Amsterdam, d'ajouter au texte de la Charte une garantie des acquis de la radiodiffusion de droit public, assurant ainsi la coexistence des médias privés et de droit public et de ce fait une information pluraliste.

c) Article 13. Liberté de la recherche

Il convient d'ajouter à cet article la liberté des sciences, de l'enseignement et des arts. Cet ajout correspond à une proposition précédente du Présidium (Convention 13, art.15 al. 2, à l'exception de "l'enseignement") que la Convention n'avait pas critiquée à cet égard. Bien au contraire, plusieurs délégués avaient souligné, au cours du débat, l'importance de cet alinéa (Meyer, Friedrich, Rack, Leinen, Einem, Rodota, Braibant, Mombaur, Papadimitriou), le justifiant dans un grand nombre d'amendements. Par ailleurs, ces libertés correspondent aussi bien aux traditions constitutionnelles communes des Etats membres qu'aux conventions internationales.

d) Article 26. Droit de négociation et d'actions collectives

Les soussignés proposent d'insérer dans cet article les termes "[actions collectives], y compris le droit de grève", formulation directement empruntée à la Charte sociale européenne (art. 6, al. 4) qui constitue, conformément au mandat de Cologne, une des bases sur lesquelles repose le travail de la Convention.

Les délégués qui souhaitent ne pas mentionner le droit de grève en invoquant le fait que son insertion dans la Charte appellerait également l'insertion du "lock-out", se méprennent sur ce point sur les traditions constitutionnelles communes existantes et sur le droit international reconnu par tous les Etats membres (Charte sociale européenne, art. 8, al. 1 d, Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, un grand nombre de Conventions de l'OIT).

Renoncer à mentionner le droit de grève constituerait en quelque sorte une tentative de restreindre le droit en vigueur. C'est pourquoi la plupart des délégués se sont prononcés dans leurs amendements en faveur de la mention expresse du droit de grève dans cet article (Convention 39; amendements n° 93 Voggenhuber, n° 94 Dehousse, n° 95 Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella, n° 97 Braibant, n° 99 Dieulangard, n° 102 Fayot, n° 103 Beres, n° 104 van den Burg).

e) Article 32. Sécurité sociale et aide sociale

i. Les soussignés approuvent l'article tel que formulé à l'alinéa 1 et proposent de placer en tête de l'énumération de l'assurance sociale et des services sociaux les termes "plus particulièrement" afin de souligner que cette énumération n'est pas limitative. Les droits fondamentaux devant, par définition, avoir un caractère aussi durable que possible, il convient d'éviter toute liste limitative d'exemples, car les développements futurs dans ce domaine ne sont pas prévisibles.

ii. Par ailleurs, le Présidium n'a retenu à l'alinéa 3, ce que nous déplorons, qu'un seul aspect du "droit au logement", à savoir l'aide au logement, bien que la proposition Meyer-Braibant constitue un compromis majoritairement approuvé par la Convention et se contente de faire obligation à l'Union de respecter ce droit.

Rappelons encore dans ce contexte que le "droit au logement" est reconnu en droit international par tous les Etats membres (cf. notamment art. 25, al. 1 de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'Homme, art. 11 du Pacte international des Nations Unies relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, art. 27, al. 3 de la Convention des Nations Unies relative aux droits de l'enfant, art. 31 de la Charte sociale européenne révisée) et ancré dans nombre de constitutions des Etats membres (art. 23 Belgique, par. 15 a Finlande, art. 21, al. 4 Grèce, art. 22, al. 2, art. 65 Portugal, chapitre 1, par. 2 Suède, art. 47 Espagne; implicitement art. 1, 13, 14 et 20 Allemagne).

f) Article 43. Liberté de circulation et de séjour

L'alinéa 2 de cet article ne définit pas de droit fondamental et annonce seulement une future révision éventuelle du traité susceptible de créer un droit à la libre circulation en faveur des ressortissants de pays tiers. De ce fait, la nouvelle rédaction n'exprime pas le point de vue défendu par la majorité lors des débats de la Convention (cf. notamment Voggenhuber, Meyer, van den Burg, Brax, Einem, Beres, Kaufmann, Paciotti, Leinen, Martin).

L'article 63 n° 4 du traité de la CEE autorise l'égalité de traitement des ressortissants de pays tiers concernant la liberté de circulation. La liberté de circulation constitue, selon l'article 13 de la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'Homme, l'article 12 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques et l'article 2 du protocole n°4 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, un droit de l'Homme et non pas un droit civil.

Il conviendrait, et c'est ce que préconisent les soussignés, d'étendre, dans la Charte des droits fondamentaux, la liberté de circulation aux ressortissants d'Etats tiers en substituant à l'alinéa 1 les termes "toute personne" au terme "citoyen", ou encore de supprimer l'alinéa 2.

Avec mes meilleures salutations

MEYER AND 11 OTHERS

To the Chairperson of the Convent for elaborating the European Charter of Fundamental Rights
 Prof. Dr Roman Herzog

To the Vice-Chairpersons
 Prof. Dr Guy Braibant
 Gunnar Jansson
 Mendez de Vigo

Dear Sirs,

under the procedure proposed by the Praesidium in Convent 45 (Charte 4422/00), the signatories hereby submit the following general comments on the Draft Charter:

I. General

- (a) The signatories expressly welcome the Draft Charter and thank the Praesidium for the work it has accomplished. Many of the suggestions put forward in written amendments and in oral contributions by individual delegates have been incorporated in the Draft, which therefore provides a good basis for a Charter that can gain assent.
- (b) For systematic reasons, the reference in some articles to “national laws and practices” and “in accordance with Community law” should be taken out. The signatories are therefore in favour of deleting these references from Articles 9, 18, 25, 26, 32, 33 and 34.

It should be pointed out that this reference is superfluous because of the horizontal provision in Article 49(1) and (2). For systematic reasons the Convent agreed to formulate horizontal provisions separately, not least in order to render the Charter more legible and therefore make it easier for the citizens to identify with the EU.

In contrast, the system set out in Convent 45 gives the citizen the impression that specific articles are less important than others. That is consistent neither with the intention of the Convent nor with the Cologne mandate.

Moreover, it could give the impression that fundamental rights, which are generally understood as rights of the first order, are being made subject to the reservation of national laws and practices or future revisions of the Treaty. That would be a disastrous impression to give and would conflict with the spirit of Article 6(1) of the EU Treaty, which makes it quite clear that the Union attaches top priority to respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms. For that reason the signatories urgently call for Article 50(2) to be deleted without replacement.

- (c) The signatories welcome the fact that recital 5 of the Preamble lists the main sources drawn on in drafting the Charter. In accordance with the Cologne mandate, these are the European Convention on Human Rights, the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, the European Social Charter and the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers.

The Draft risks being less coherent if these sources are not also named in Article 51. The Preamble and Article 51 form the cornerstone of the Charter. The signatories therefore also urge the inclusion of the Social Charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe in Article 51 as a minimum level of protection.

- (d) Article 15 "Freedom to choose an occupation" should be incorporated in Chapter IV "Solidarity" for systematic reasons and contain the earlier heading ("Freedom to choose an occupation and the right to work") and the general principle ("Every person has the right to work") proposed by the Praesidium (cf. Convent 41, ex-Article 31).

It is difficult to understand why the position and wording of the earlier Praesidium proposal (Convent 41), which was based on the Braibant-Meyer proposal, has been changed in the present version, even though a large majority of delegates had endorsed the compromise proposal during the oral discussion (including Nikula, Voggenhuber, Friedrich, Einem, Paciotti, Leinen, Hirsch Ballin, Olsen, Barros Moura, van den Burg, Kaufmann). Moreover, a large number of delegates, besides those just mentioned, had tabled written amendments calling for a “right to work” provision (Convent 39: draft amendments Nos 35 Sole Tura, 39 Dieulangard, 46 Fayot, 47 Braibant, 51 Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella, 53 Beres et alia).

- (e) In general, it should be carefully checked again whether the Charter is worded appropriately in all the EU languages. For instance, the German translation of Article 24 refers to “behinderte Menschen” (disabled persons), while the accepted correct term is “Menschen mit Behinderung” (persons with disabilities). It is also questionable whether the choice of wording in recital 2 of the Preamble “dignity of men and women” is a happy one, since that does not cover, for instance, children. The signatories assume that the Charter will be available to the Convent in all the EU languages before it is submitted to the Heads of State and Government.

II. Specific comments

(a) Article 10 Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

A second paragraph should be added, referring to the right to refuse military service. The inclusion of a second paragraph to that effect would correspond to a number of draft amendments (Convent 35: draft amendments Nos 256 Voggenhuber/Buitenweg, 257 Meyer/Leinen/Martin, 261 Gnauck and 262 Kaufmann, et alia) and to the majority opinion expressed during the Convent discussion.

(b) Article 11 (2) Freedom of expression and information

While in principle we welcome the intention of Article 11(2), and especially the greater clarity in comparison with earlier versions thanks to the use of the term “media” (although the terms “freedom of the press and broadcasting”, i.e. “communication directed at the general public” would be more precise), three aspects are missing in the wording proposed by the Praesidium:

305

- i. The European Union bodies should have a binding obligation to inform the media. That is as important to the development of a European public as the need for transparency is within a democratic community. Although Article 40 of the Praesidium's Draft does provide for a general right of access to documents, nevertheless the media, with their special task of acting as a "transmission channel", i.e. a connecting link between the public authority and the people, should be granted an explicit right in this regard.
- ii. A number of media institutions have strongly criticised the use of the term "transparency" in paragraph 2. Their underlying fear is that the public authorities could justify freedom-restricting measures by applying the transparency provision.

Should the intention of this provision be to oblige the media to report democratically, that intention is already achieved by the horizontal provision of Article 52 and practical concordance. If, however, the intention is to provide for the financial transparency of the media (Convent 35, draft amendment No 284 Braibant), that does not need to be guaranteed explicitly in a Charter of Fundamental Rights. For that reason, we recommend deleting that term from the article, given also that only one draft amendment called for it to be incorporated.
- iii. During the discussion in the Convent, a number of delegates criticised the imprecision of the term "pluralism" (Goldsmith, Hirsch Ballin, Rodota, Partijn). This concept can be worded more precisely. Accordingly – with reference also to Protocol No 23 to the Amsterdam Treaty – the Charter should also include a guarantee of the continued existence of public broadcasting, since this would ensure the coexistence of private and public media and guarantee pluralist reporting.

(c) Article 13 Freedom of research

That article should be supplemented with Freedom of science, teaching and art. That would comply with an earlier Praesidium proposal (Convent 13, Article 15(2), with the exception of "teaching"), which the Convent did not criticise in that regard. In fact, a number of delegates had emphasised the importance of that paragraph during the oral debate (Meyer, Friedrich, Rack, Leinen, Einem, Rodota, Braibant, Mombaur, Papadimitriou) and also justified it in a large number of draft amendments.

Furthermore, the freedoms in question are consistent both with the constitutional traditions common to the Member States and with international conventions. For that reason, we urgently recommend that this article be supplemented.

(d) Article 26 Right of collective bargaining and action

The signatories recommend incorporating in that article the words “[collective action] including the right to strike”. That wording is directly derived from the European Social Charter (Article 6(4)), on which the Convent’s activities are based pursuant to the Cologne mandate.

Those delegates who want to leave out the right to strike on the basis that reference would then also have to be made to “lockout” are mistaken here with regard to existing common constitutional traditions and to the international law recognised by all Member States (European Social Charter, Article 8(1)(d), International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, many ILO conventions).

Not to refer to the right to strike would be equivalent to an attempt to devalue existing legislation. For that reason the majority of the delegates tabled amendments calling for it to be explicitly incorporated in that article (Convent 39: amendments Nos 93 Voggenhuber, 94 Dehousse, 95 Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella, 97 Braibant, 99 Dieulangard, 102 Fayot, 103 Beres, 194 van den Burg).

(e) Article 32 Social security and social assistance

- i. The signatories welcome the wording of paragraph 1 and suggest introducing the list of social security benefits and social services with the words “in particular”, to emphasise that it is an open list. Since fundamental rights should by their nature continue to exist as long as possible, any conclusive lists of examples should be avoided, since we cannot foresee future developments in these areas.
- ii. In paragraph 3, unfortunately the Praesidium has yet again referred only to a single aspect of the “right to housing” – housing benefit – although the Braibant-Meyer compromise proposal, which was endorsed by a majority of the Convent, contains a reference to the Union's obligation to fully respect that right.

In this context, it should be recalled that the "right to housing" under international law is recognised by all the Member States (among others Article 25 (1) of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, Article 11 of the International UN Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, Article 27(3) of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, Article 31 of the revised European Social Charter) and in many Member State constitutions (Article 23 Belgium, paragraph 15 a Finland, Article 21(4) Greece, Articles 22(2) and Article 65 Portugal, Chapter 1, paragraph 2 Sweden, Article 47 Spain, implicit in Articles 1, 13, 14 and 20 Germany).

(f) Article 43 Freedom of movement and of residence

Paragraph 2 of that article does not contain a fundamental right, only a reference to a possible future Treaty revision, under which third country nationals could be granted a right of freedom of movement. So the new wording does not reflect the majority opinion, as expressed during the oral debate in the Convent (among others Voggenhuber, Meyer, van den Burg, Brax, Einem, Beres, Kaufmann, Paciotti, Leinen, Martin).

Third country nationals can be granted an equal right to freedom of movement under Article 63(4) of the EU Treaty. Pursuant to Article 13 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, Article 12 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and Article 2 of Protocol No 4 to the European Convention on Human Rights, freedom of movement is a human right and not a civil right.

Either, as the signatories believe, the extension of freedom of movement to third country nationals should be incorporated in the Charter of Fundamental Rights by replacing the term "citizen of the Union" in paragraph 1 by "Everyone", or paragraph 2 can be deleted entirely.

Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen
Union/CONVENT 45 vom 28. Juli 2000

Sehr geehrter Herr Professor Herzog,
sehr geehrter Herr Kollege Mendez de Vigo,

zu dem oben angeführten Vorentwurf möchte ich unter Beschränkung auf das Wesentliche folgende Anmerkungen machen:

1. Präambel:

Die Ziffern 1 und 2 entsprechen meines Erachtens noch nicht dem Ziel, durch eine Grundrechtcharta die Identität der Europäer zu verdeutlichen. Mit der bloßen Benennung „gemeinsamer Werte“ und deren Aufzählung würde die Charta sogar noch hinter den geltenden Text des EGV zurückfallen, der das gemeinsame kulturelle Erbe der Europäer benennt.

EUROPÄISCHES PARLAMENT

RA DR. PETER MICHAEL MOMBAUR
MITGLIED DES EUROPÄISCHEN PARLAMENTS

In der Magna Charta Libertatum, in der Präambel des deutschen Grundgesetzes, der griechischen und der irischen Verfassung sowie auch der polnischen neuen Verfassung lesen sich die Grundrechtsgrundlagen ganz anders.

Ich schlage daher vor, den europäischen Grundrechtsschutz dadurch zu bekräftigen, daß seine tatsächlichen historischen und ideengeschichtlichen Grundlagen benannt werden: Die christlich-jüdische Tradition, die Ideen der französischen Revolution und die Verantwortung der Politiker vor Gott.

Wer andere Quellen benennen möchte, aus denen ähnliche Grundrechtswirkungen abzuleiten sind, sollte dies vorschlagen.

2. Zu Artikel 9:

Die vorgeschlagene Formulierung verfehlt gleich zwei Ziele:

- Sie berücksichtigt die Formulierung der Europäischen Menschenrechtskonvention nicht (übrigens anders als der Entwurf zu Artikel 10).
- Sie verfehlt die Wertschätzung eines zentralen europäischen Kulturwertes. Ehe und Familie sichern „als Keimzelle jeder menschlichen Gesellschaft“ (so Artikel 16 Europäische Sozialcharta) den Weiterbestand der Gesellschaft.

Wenn Artikel 21 ein Diskriminierungsverbot enthält und Artikel 31 Ziffer 2 einen Anspruch auf Elternurlaub „jeder Person“ zugesteht – unabhängig von der Betreuungskonstellation -, kann Artikel 9 nicht ein derart leerer Kompromiß bleiben.

Vorschlag: Entsprechend der EMRK a) Ehe als Verbindung von Mann und Frau und b) das Recht zur Heirat und Familiengründung als zusammengehörendes Recht zu definieren.

EUROPÄISCHES PARLAMENT

RA DR. PETER MICHAEL MOMBAUR
MITGLIED DES EUROPÄISCHEN PARLAMENTS

3. Zu Artikel 22:

Im Konvent bestand Übereinstimmung darüber, daß der Grundsatz des gleichen Entgelts bei gleicher oder gleichwertiger Arbeit auf den einzelnen Mitgliedsstaat zu beziehen ist. Dementsprechend schlage ich vor, zu formulieren:

„... des gleichen Entgelts im jeweiligen Mitgliedsstaat ...“

4. Zu Artikel 23:

Absatz 2 trägt der Balance zwischen dem Recht der Kinder und dem Elternrecht nicht ausreichend Rechnung. Dementsprechend schlage ich vor zu formulieren:

„... muß das übergeordnete Interesse des Kindes im Rahmen des Elternrechts zur Erziehung des und Sorge für das Kind eine vorrangige Erwägung sein.“

5. Zu Artikel 34:

Die Aufnahme dieses Artikels über Artikel 16 EGV hinaus ist entbehrlich. Der Artikel sollte gestrichen werden.

6. Zu Artikel 35 und 36:

Im Blick auf die unterschiedlichen Kompetenzen der Europäischen Union einerseits und der Mitgliedsstaaten andererseits mit Bezug auf Umweltschutz und Verbraucherschutz kann den Unionsbürgern realistischere nicht dargestellt werden, daß die Politik in der Union diese Schutzbereiche sicherstellt. Daher schlage ich vor, realistisch in beiden Artikeln zu formulieren, daß die Politik in der Union zu diesen Zielen „beiträgt“.

7. Zu Artikel 50:

Artikel 50 Abs. (1) verletzt in der gegenwärtigen Formulierung das Gebot, daß die Möglichkeit, Grundrechte zu beschränken, ihrerseits Beschränkungen unterliegen muß.

Einschränkungen dürfen sich auch nicht auf Leerformeln stützen, die zur Beliebigkeit einladen und daher rechtsstaatlich nicht tolerabel sind. Daher schlage ich vor zu formulieren:

- „Die Einschränkung darf den Wesensgehalt der Grundrechte nicht verletzen.“
- Die „anderen legitimen Interessen in einer demokratischen Gesellschaft“ zu streichen.

Mitglied des Konvents zur Erarbeitung eines Entwurfs einer Grundrechte-Charta der Europäischen Union

An das
Präsidium des Konvents

z.H. des Stellvertretenden Vorsitzenden
Guy Braibant

Wien, am 31. August 2000

Betrifft: Allgemeine Bemerkungen zum Gesamtentwurf der Charta (Convent 45)

Sehr geehrter Herr Braibant!

Ich erlaube mir, Ihnen im Folgenden einige allgemeine Bemerkungen zum jüngsten Gesamtentwurf der Charta zur Kenntnis zu bringen.

Ich möchte zunächst dem Präsidium Dank und Anerkennung für die geleistete Arbeit aussprechen. Der derzeitige Textentwurf ist das bislang beste Dokument und grundsätzlich positiv zu beurteilen. Meiner Ansicht nach sind wir mit diesem Entwurf nicht mehr weit entfernt von einem Text, der vom Konvent im Konsens verabschiedet werden kann. Ich halte es dennoch für notwendig, einige kurze Anmerkungen zu machen.

1.) Allgemeines

- Positiv zu vermerken ist die Aufnahme sozialer Grundrechte in die Charta, welche entsprechend der horizontalen Bestimmung des Artikels 49 Abs. 2 keine neuen Zuständigkeiten und Aufgaben für die Gemeinschaft, und somit auch keine unmittelbaren neuen finanziellen Verpflichtungen mit sich bringen dürfen. Der Entwurf spiegelt hier den derzeitigen Bestand dieser Rechte wider und trägt den Strukturunterschieden zwischen „klassischen“ und sozialen Grundrechten Rechnung. Die Kapitelüberschrift „Solidarität“ sollte jedoch besser durch „Sozialer Zusammenhalt“ (engl.: social cohesion) ersetzt werden. Dies entspräche der Textierung des EG-Vertrages (XVII. Titel: Wirtschaftlicher und sozialer Zusammenhalt).
- Insbesondere in der deutschen Sprachfassung sollte auf eine durchgängig geschlechtsneutrale Formulierung geachtet werden.
- Punkt 3 der Präambel scheint etwas zu technisch formuliert, insbesondere auf den letzten Halbsatz könnte verzichtet werden.

2.) Fehlende Grundrechte

- Wie bereits in der Diskussion von mir und zahlreichen anderen Mitgliedern betont, sollte die Charta die Rechte der Minderheiten keinesfalls unerwähnt lassen. Insbesondere der Änderungsantrag 598 (Voggenhuber, Convent 35) scheint mir eine geeignete Grundlage für die Aufnahme von Minderheitenrechten in die Charta, da er den sprachlichen und kulturellen Aspekt dieses Rechtes hervorhebt.
- Unvollständig ist weiters Artikel 13: Hier müsste die Freiheit der Wissenschaft, Forschung und Lehre verankert werden. Dies vor allem deshalb, weil die Forschung ein integrierender Bestandteil der Wissenschaft ist und die Verbindung von Lehre und Forschung ein Wesenselement wissenschaftlicher Tätigkeit ist. In diesem Zusammenhang ist darauf hinzuweisen, dass in den meisten nationalen Verfassungsordnungen dieser Grundrechtsbezug deutlich gemacht wird.

3.) Zu streichende Artikel

- Die Diskussionen innerhalb des Konvents haben meiner Erinnerung nach eine breite Ablehnung einer Aufnahme von Artikel 34 (Zugang zu Diensten von allgemeinem wirtschaftlichen Interesse) gebracht. Die Aufnahme dieses Artikels widerspricht dem Charakter der Charta selbst: Diese soll nämlich eine Charta der Rechte darstellen; Artikel 34 begründet jedoch - wie aus den Erläuterungen hervorgeht - „kein eigentliches Recht“. Er sollte daher gänzlich gestrichen werden.

4.) Anmerkungen zu einzelnen Artikeln

- Der eher komplizierten Formulierung von Artikel 9 wäre eine Textierung im Sinne des Artikel 12 EMRK vorzuziehen.
- Die Verpflichtung zu Pluralismus und Transparenz in Artikel 11 Abs. 2 (Freiheit der Meinungsäußerung und Informationsfreiheit) könnte schwerwiegende Eingriffe in die Freiheit der Presse ermöglichen. Pluralismus und Transparenz in der Gesellschaft sollten nicht die Rechtfertigung für Eingriffe, sondern vielmehr das Ergebnis einer möglichst uneingeschränkten Medienfreiheit sein.
- Der neuerlich umformulierte Artikel 17 (Eigentumsrecht) lässt das Erfordernis einer vorherigen, angemessenen Entschädigung vermissen. Auf dieses Element kann nicht verzichtet werden. Im Lichte der Konventsdiskussion ergab sich eine Präferenz für eine Formulierung, die die Entschädigung vorher gewährleisten sollte.
- Artikel 35 (Umweltschutz) sollte insofern an Artikel 46 (Verbraucherschutz) angepasst werden, als auch beim Umweltschutz ein „hohes Schutzniveau“ anzustreben ist.
- Artikel 37 (Aktives und passives Wahlrecht zum Europäischen Parlament) sollte in Abs. 2 von gleicher, allgemeiner, unmittelbarer, freier und geheimer Wahl sprechen.
- Das aktive und passive Wahlrecht bei Kommunalwahlen (Artikel 38) korrespondiert mit der Autonomie der lokalen Gebietskörperschaften. Die Verankerung eines dementsprechenden Grundrechts auf lokale Selbstverwaltung würde der Bedeutung dieser Ausprägung des Subsidiaritätsprinzips Rechnung tragen.

EU:N PERUSOIKEUSKIRJA; HUOMAUTUKSIA LUONNOKSEEN EU:N PERUSOIKEUSKIRJAKSI (Convent 45)

Haluamme kiittää puheenjohtajistoa ensimmäisestä kokonaisvaltaisesta luonnoksesta Euroopan unionin perusoikeuskirjaksi. Olemme tutustuneet siihen huolellisesti ja keskustelleet siitä alan kansallisten asiantuntijoiden kanssa. Luonnos on myös esitelty Suomen hallitukselle.

Luonnos vastaa pitkälti niihin haasteisiin ja odotuksiin, joita perusoikeuskirjalle asetettiin, kun valmistelu aloitettiin. Olemme kiitollisia, että Suomen edustajien esittämiä ehdotuksia perusoikeuskirjaan kirjattaviksi oikeuksiksi on huomioitu luonnoksessa. Suomen hallituksen tavoitteena on, että Euroopan unionin perusoikeuskirja voidaan hyväksyä Nizzan Eurooppa-neuvoston kokouksessa joulukuussa 2000.

Haluamme kuitenkin tuoda vielä esiin muutamia kohtia, joiden osalta tarkennukset ovat tarpeen, jotta perusoikeuskirjasta tulee kattava, ja samalla Kölnin mandaatin mukainen asiakirja. Tässä muutosehdotukset artikloittain:

13 ja 14 artiklat. Tutkimuksen vapaus ja oikeus koulutukseen:

Muutosehdotus:

13 ja 14 artiklojen järjestys tulisi vaihtaa.

Perustelut:

On loogisempaa, että oikeus koulutukseen käsitellään ennen tutkimuksen vapautta.

17 artikla. Omaisuuden suoja:

Muutosehdotus:

318

17(1) artiklan viimeinen virke (omaisuuden käyttöä voidaan säännellä siinä määrin kuin sen on yleisen edun mukaan tarpeellista) tulisi poistaa.

Perustelut:

Omaisuuksien käytön rajoittaminen ilman, että kävisi ilmi, missä olosuhteissa tällaisesta rajoituksesta on suoritettava korvaus, on epäselvä ja vaarantaa oikeusturvan. Koska käyttörajoitusta ei myöskään voi yksiselitteisesti liittää osaksi pakkolunastusta koskevaa korvausvelvollisuutta, tulisi virke poistaa kokonaan.

21 artikla. Syrjintäkielto:

Muutosehdotus:

Liitetään 21(1) artikla osaksi 20 artiklaa, jolloin 21(2) artiklasta tulee oma erillinen artiklansa. Uuden 21 artiklan perusteluista tulee ilmetä, että EU-kansalaisten syrjintäkielto on alisteinen kansainvälisten ihmisoikeussopimuksen yleiselle syrjintäkiellolle.

Perustelut:

Syrjintäkieltoartiklan jakautuminen yleiseen syrjintäkieltoon ja EU-kansalaisten syrjintäkieltoon on epäselvä ja aiheuttaa tulkintaongelmia. 21(1) artiklan liittäminen osaksi yleistä yhdenvertaisuutta selventäisi näiden kahden eri syrjintäkiellon eroa, ja toisi esiin sen, että EU-kansalaisten syrjintäkiellolla on oma erityinen soveltamisalansa. Tämänkin artiklan tulisi olla alisteinen kansainvälisten ihmisoikeussopimusten syrjintäkiellolle.

32 artikla. Sosiaaliturva ja sosiaaliapu

Muutosehdotus:

Haluamme muistuttaa, että olemme tehneet artiklaa koskevan muutosehdotuksen nro.0221 (Order n.244/ Amendment n.0221), jota puheenjohtajisto ei kuitenkaan huomionnut. Artiklan perusteluosassa tulisi viitata myös EY:n perustamissopimuksen 136 artiklaan, joka säätelee sosiaaliturvasta unionin tasolla. Perusteluosasta tulisi lisäksi käydä ilmi, että artiklassa mainittu hoidon tarve kattaa myös päivähoidon, samoin kuin työpaikan menetys kattaa myös työkyvyttömyystilanteen.

Perustelut:

Sosiaaliturvaa käsittelevän artiklan perusteluosa ei tällä hetkellä viittaa lainkaan EY:n perustamissopimuksen 136 artiklaan, joka on keskeinen sosiaaliturvasta säättävä artikla.

33 artikla. Terveiden suojelu:

Muutosehdotus:

1. Uusi otsikko: Terveys.

2. Artiklaan tulisi lisätä: Kaikkien yhteisön poliitikkojen ja toimintojen määrittelyssä ja toteuttamisessa varmistetaan ihmisten terveyden korkeatasoinen suojelu.

Perustelut:

Yleinen terveydenedistämismääräys on kirjattu EY:n perustamissopimukseen 152 artiklaan, minkä vuoksi tämän tulisi käydä ilmi myös perusoikeuskirjassa.

35 artikla. Ympäristönsuojelu:

Muutosehdotus:

Perusteluosaan tulisi lisätä, että artikla perustuu yhteiseen valtiosääntöperinteeseen sekä Euroopan ihmisoikeussopimuksen tulkintaan.

Perustelut:

Viittaus yhteiseen valtiosääntöperinteeseen ja Euroopan ihmisoikeussopimuksen tulkintakäytäntöön selventäisi artiklan oikeusperustetta. Asiaa on käsitelty yksityiskohtaisemmin ympäristönsuojeluartikkelia koskevan esityksemme yhteydessä (CHARTE 4205/00/Contribution 86, 4.4.2000).

39 artikla. Oikeus hyvään hallintoon:

Muutosehdotus:

Perusteluosasta tulisi käydä ilmi, että artiklan (2) kohdan luetteloa ei tule tulkita tyhjentävästi.

Perustelut:

Artiklan (2) kohdan luettelo on tarkoitettu esimerkinomaiseksi, ei tyhjentäväksi. Tämä tulisi selvittää perusteluosassa.

45 artikla. Oikeus tehokkaaseen oikeussuojakeinoon:

Muutosehdotus:

Perusteluosaan tulisi lisätä, että oikeus tehokkaaseen oikeussuojakeinoon, samoin kuin oikeus hyvään hallintoon, sisältää oikeuden hakea muutosta. Perusteluista tulisi lisäksi käydä ilmi, että muutoksenhakuoikeus on alisteinen 50 artiklan rajoituksille.

Perustelut:

Muutoksenhakuoikeus on yksilön kannalta keskeinen osa oikeusturvaa ja sen toteutumisen tausta. Tämän vuoksi perusteluissa tulisi mainita, että oikeus tehokkaaseen oikeussuojakeinoon, samoin kuin oikeus hyvään hallintoon, sisältää pääsääntöisesti myös oikeuden muutoksenhakuun.

7 luku. Yleiset määräykset:

Muutosehdotus:

Muutetaan luvun nimi: Perusoikeuskirjan soveltaminen

Perustelut:

"Yleiset määräykset" viittaavat usein teknisiin määräyksiin, joita kyseisessä luvussa olevilla määräyksillä ei tarkoiteta. Tämän, ja luvun keskeisen merkityksen vuoksi, uusi nimi olisi perustellumpi.

Lisäksi haluamme tuoda esiin, että perusoikeuskirjan perusteluosassa tulisi asianmukaisissa yhteyksissä Euroopan ihmisoikeussopimuksen ohella viitata myös muihin kansainvälisiin ihmisoikeussopimuksiin, jotka jäsenvaltioita sitovina kuuluvat yhteiseen valtiosääntöperinteeseemme. Tällaisia sopimuksia ovat ennen kaikkea YK:n kansalais- ja poliittisia oikeuksia (KP- sopimus) sekä taloudellisia, sosiaalisia ja sivistyksellisiä oikeuksia (TSS- sopimus) koskevat yleissopimukset sekä eräät ILO:n sopimukset. Perusoikeuskirjan 2 artiklan perusteluissa tulisi viitata KP- sopimukseen, samoin kuin Euroopan ihmisoikeustuomioistuimen käytäntöön voimankäytön rajoituksena. Vapautta ja turvallisuutta käsittelevän 6 artiklan perusteluissa tulisi mainita, että Euroopan ihmisoikeustuomioistuimen käytännön mukaan Euroopan ihmisoikeussopimuksen 5(1) artiklan d- f- kohtia tulisi tulkita supistavasti. Samaan viittaa myös YK:n ihmisoikeuskomitean käytäntö mielivaltaisen vapaudenriiston kiellon osalta. Koulutusta käsittelevän 14 artiklan perusteluissa tulisi viitata KP- sopimuksen 18(4) ja TSS- sopimuksen 13(3) artikloihin samoin kuin lasten oikeuksien sopimuksen 14(2) artiklaan.

Näiden artiklakohtaisten muutosehdotusten lisäksi haluamme kiinnittää huomion eri kieliversioiden epätarkkuuteen eri sukupuolia käsittelevien viittausten osalta. Artikloissa tulisi systemaattisesti viitata sekä nais- että miespuolisiin henkilöihin oikeuksien subjekteina. Toivomme, että puheenjohtajisto kiinnittää huomionsa asiaan ennen valmiin perusoikeuskirjaluonnoksen esittämistä hyväksyttäväksi.

CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION; AMENDMENTS TO THE DRAFT (Convent 45)

We would like to thank the Praesidium for the first complete draft for the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (hereafter “the Draft”). We have carefully acquainted ourselves with the Draft and discussed it with national experts in the matters concerned. The Draft has also been presented to the Finnish Government.

The Draft meets well the expectations and challenges that were set when the negotiations for the Draft started. We are grateful that the amendments proposed by the Finnish representatives have been taken into account in the Draft. The goal of the Finnish Government is the adoption of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union in the European Council meeting in Nice in December 2000.

We would, however, like to draw attention to a few articles that need to be adjusted for the purpose of making the Charter of Fundamental Rights cover everything that is necessary, in accordance with the Cologne Mandate. We propose the following amendments:

322

Articles 13 and 14. Freedom of research and the right to education:

Proposed amendment:

The order of articles 13 and 14 should be changed.

Explanation:

It is more logical to present the right to education before the freedom of research.

Article 17. Right to property:

Proposed amendment:

The last sentence of article 17 should be removed (The use of property may be regulated insofar as necessary for the general interest).

Explanation:

A restriction on the use of property, without providing for the conditions on which a compensation must be paid for such a restriction, is unclear and imperils the legal protection. However, since the provision concerning the regulation of the use of property cannot as such be inserted in the previous sentence providing for the obligation to pay compensation for expropriation, the sentence should be removed.

Article 21. Equality and non-discrimination:

Proposed amendment:

Paragraph 1 of article 21 should be inserted in article 20, making paragraph 2 of article 21 a separate article. The explanatory part of the new article 21 should indicate that the non-discrimination article concerning EU-citizens is dependent on the non-discrimination clauses of the international human rights conventions.

Explanation:

The division into a general prohibition of discrimination and a prohibition of the discrimination of EU citizens is unclear and causes problems of interpretation. Inserting paragraph 1 in the general provision concerning equality would clarify the difference between the two clauses of non-discrimination and would express the fact that the provision on the non-discrimination of the EU-citizens has its own special scope of application. This article too should be dependent on the non-discrimination clauses of the international human rights conventions.

Article 32. Social security and social assistance:

Proposed amendment:

We would like to observe that we have made a proposal of amendment number 0221 (Order No. 244/Amendment 0221) to this article, which the Praesidium did not take notice of. In the explanatory part of the article there should be reference also to article 136 EC which regulates the social security at the Union level. In addition the explanatory part should make clear that the need of care mentioned in the article also covers children's day care and the loss of employment also covers the situation of disability for work.

Explanation:

At the moment the explanatory part of the article concerning the social security does not refer to article 136 EC at all, this being the most important article regulating social security.

Article 33. Health care:

Proposed amendment:

1. Change of the heading: Health.
2. The following should be added to the article: A high level of human health protection shall be ensured in the definition and implementation of all Community policies and activities.

Explanation:

A general duty to promote health is included in article 152 EC and should therefore be also mentioned in the Charter of Fundamental Rights.

Article 35. Environmental protection:

Proposed amendment:

It should be added to the explanatory part that the article is based on the common constitutional traditions as well as on the interpretation of the European Convention of Human Rights.

Explanation:

The legal basis of the article would be clarified with a reference to the common constitutional traditions and the interpretation of the European Convention of Human Rights. This has been dealt with in more detail in the contribution of the Finnish representatives (Contribution 86/CHARTE 4205/00, 4th of April 200).

Article 39. Right to good administration:

Proposed amendment:

It would be important that the explanatory part clearly mentions that the list in paragraph 2 of the article should not be interpreted as being exhaustive.

Explanation:

The list in paragraph 2 should be interpreted as being exemplary, not exhaustive. This should be made clear in the explanatory part.

Article 45. Right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial:

Proposed amendment:

It should be added to the explanatory part that the right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial as well as to a good administration includes the right to appeal. It should also be mentioned that the right to appeal is subject to the restrictions of article 50.

Explanation:

The right to appeal is an inherent part of the individual's legal protection and the guarantee for its implementation. This is why the explanatory part should mention that the right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial as well as the right to good administration include, as a general rule, the right to appeal.

Chapter 7. General provisions:

Proposed amendment:

Change of the chapter's name: Application of the Charter of Fundamental Rights.

Explanation:

“General provisions” often refers to the technical provisions of a document, which is not the case here. Because of this and because of the high importance of the chapter the new name is justified.

In addition we would like to note that, in the explanatory part of the Charter, the European Convention of Human Rights together with the other international conventions of human rights, which because of their binding nature are part of the common constitutional traditions of the Member States, should also be referred to as appropriate. Conventions of this nature include above all the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and some of the ILO conventions. The explanatory part of article 2 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights should refer to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights as well as to the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights concerning the limitations of the use of force. The explanatory part of article 6 concerning freedom and safety should indicate that according to the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights article 5(1) (d) to (f) of the European Convention of Human Rights should be interpreted restrictively. The UN Committee for Human Rights applies the same kind of interpretation in cases concerning the prohibition of arbitrary detention. The explanatory part of the article 14 regulating education should refer to article 13(3) of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights as well as to article 14(2) of the Convention of the Rights of the Child.

In addition to these amendments concerning individual articles we would like to draw attention to the unclarity concerning the references made to the different sexes in the various language versions. The articles should systematically refer to both males and females as the subjects of the rights laid down in the Charter. We hope that the Praesidium pays attention to this fact before the Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights will be proposed to be accepted.

An das
Präsidium des Konvents zur Erarbeitung der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union
z. Hd. Herrn Stellvertretenden Vorsitzenden
Gunnar Jansson

Wien, 31. August 2000
Dr. Ofner/V
V8918.DOC

Sehr geehrter Herr Vorsitzender!

Ihnen persönlich und mit Ihnen dem gesamten Präsidium des Konvents darf ich für die souveräne Bewältigung der umfangreichen Arbeit, der Sie sich im Zusammenhang mit der Erarbeitung des Entwurfes der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union in den vergangenen Wochen und Monaten so nachhaltig unterzogen haben, meinen und meiner parlamentarischen Umgebung in Österreich aufrichtigen Dank aussprechen.

Das Papier 4422/00 vom 28.7.2000 hält ein in der Tat respektables - wohl nur vorläufiges - Ergebnis dieser so eindrucksvollen Bemühungen fest.

Fristgerecht darf ich zu Ihren Händen, sehr geehrter Herr Vorsitzender, folgende Anmerkung zu einem Problemkreis, der in dem Entwurf bisher nicht einmal Erwähnung gefunden hat, obwohl ihm nach meinem Erachten wesentliche und sozusagen von Tag zu Tag steigende Bedeutung zukommt, anbringen:

Seit Jahren wird im Bereich der Europäischen Union und über ihre Grenzen hinaus immer deutlicher die Notwendigkeit der Normierung von Volksgruppenrechten, verbindlich und durchsetzbar, erkannt und hervorgehoben; das heißt, Festlegung von Regeln, die es autochthonen ethnischen Minderheiten ermöglichen, in ihrer angestammten Heimatgebieten weiter bestehen zu können, Minderheiten, die es in fast allen europäischen Ländern gibt.

Es geht diesbezüglich um viel mehr als nur um das Verbot der Diskriminierung von einzelnen Angehörigen von Minderheiten, sondern darüberhinaus um die Anerkennung von Minderheiten als Gruppen und um die Ausstattung eben dieser Gruppen mit besonderen Rechten.

b.w.

Daß diese Problematik in dem Entwurf mit keinem Wort auch nur gestreift wird, wird dem Konvent, so fürchte ich, nicht nur den Vorwurf des politischen Zynismus eintragen, sondern auch die Beschlußfassung hinsichtlich des Gesamtwerkes der Charta wesentlich beeinträchtigen bzw. erschweren.

Ich bitte Sie, sehr geehrter Herr Vorsitzender, und über Sie das gesamte Präsidium des Konvents, sohin, im Rahmen der bevorstehenden Überarbeitung des Entwurfes der Formulierung und Aufnahme von Volksgruppenrechten im angeführten Sinne entsprechendes Augenmerk zu schenken.

Einer Erläuterung bedarf nach meinem Dafürhalten Punkt 6. der Präambel des Entwurfes:

Hier könnte man zu der Ansicht gelangen, daß der diesbezügliche Text beinhaltet, daß die Möglichkeit der Inanspruchnahme von Menschenrechten gemäß der Charta mit der Übernahme bzw. Erfüllung von Pflichten gegenüber Mitmenschen etc. junktiniert sei.

Ich persönlich neige zwar dieser Auslegung nicht zu, eine in dieser Richtung klärende Passage erschiene aber, so glaube ich, sinnvoll.

Mit aufrichtigem Dank und freundlichen Grüßen

O'KENNEDY

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO CONVENT 45 AND REASONING IN RELATION TO SUCH PROPOSALS

General Provisions

Article 49: Scope

Proposed amendment

In the second sentence of 49.1, delete the phrase “respect the rights, observe the principles” and replace with “observe the rights and recognise and respect the principles”.

Revised Article to read

49.1 The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. They shall therefore observe the rights and recognise and respect the principles and promote the application thereof in accordance with their respective powers.

Reasons

This amendment is consistent with suggested amendments to the Preamble and the suggested amendment to Article 50 which would add a paragraph 4, and has the same purpose.

Article 50: Scope of guaranteed rights

Proposed amendments

In the first sentence of 50.1, delete “by the competent legislative authority” and replace with “in accordance with law”.

At the end of 50.2, insert “and secondary legislation”.

The Charter Articles to which it applies should be listed in 50.2.

In the third line of 50.3, “similar” should be deleted and replaced by “identical” and “unless this Charter affords greater or more extensive protection” should be deleted and replaced by “as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights”.

The Charter Articles to which it applies should be listed in 50.3.

Insert a new horizontal provision, becoming 50.4, as set out below.

Revised Article to read

50.1 Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for in accordance with law. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest being pursued by the Union, other legitimate interests in a democratic society or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.

- 50.2 Rights recognised by this Charter, in Articles [to be listed] which are based on the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties and secondary legislation.
- 50.3 Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the meaning and scope of those rights in Articles [to be listed] shall be identical to those conferred on them by the said Convention as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights.
- 50.4 Articles [to be listed] set out economic and social principles which apply insofar as they are provided in Community law or national law and practice and shall be implemented or promoted accordingly. In the light of the foregoing, Article 50.1 does not apply to these principles.

Reasons

As the conditions under which, and the limitations within which, rights are to be exercised are sometimes contained in secondary legislation under Treaty provisions, rather than in the Treaty provisions themselves, this fact should be covered in paragraph 2. This could be done simply by adding the words “.....and secondary legislation”. In the interest of certainty, the relevant Charter provisions should be listed in the paragraph.

The word “similar” in the third line of 50.3 is vague and implies that some difference between the effect of the corresponding provisions of the Charter and the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms is not ruled out. To remove this implication, “similar” should be replaced by “identical”.

Likewise the final phrase in Article 50.3 “unless this Charter affords greater or more extensive protection” invites an examination of the Charter provisions to ascertain whether, as worded, they are more expansive. For example, in Charter Article 2.1, this would surely result in a conclusion that the exceptions in Article 2.2 of the Convention do not apply. Accordingly, the final phrase in Article 50.3 should be omitted. The addition of “as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights” would ensure that the significant evolution of the Convention rights through the jurisprudence of the Court would be incorporated into the Charter.

In the interest of necessary certainty in the Charter, Article 50.3 should list the Charter Articles to which it applies.

The new horizontal Article 50.4 is to cover our concerns in relation to economic and social principles as explained in the reasons for change to paragraph 4 of the Preamble.

THE PREAMBLE

Paragraph 4

Proposed amendment

Insert “and the recognition of economic and social principles” after “fundamental rights” in the first line; insert “and principles” after “those rights” in the third line.

Revised paragraph to read

In adopting this Charter the Union intends to enhance the protection of fundamental rights and the recognition of economic and social principles in the light of changes in society, social progress and scientific and technological developments by making those rights and principles more visible.

Reasons

The Charter deals with economic and social rights as well as fundamental civil and political rights. The former, although not inferior to the latter, differ from them, in conformity with their current status in the instruments from which they are drawn, in not being judicially enforceable. In the Charter, which includes these two sets of different rights, it would be misleading to apply the term “rights” to both. Thus it would be more appropriate to refer to the economic and social provisions as principles and to amend the paragraph accordingly.

Paragraph 5

Proposed amendment

Insert “and principles” after “rights” in the second line.

Revised paragraph to read

The Charter reaffirms, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Community and the Union and the principle of subsidiarity, the rights and principles as they result, in particular, from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the Social Charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights.

Reasons

For the reasons outlined above in relation to the amendment proposed to paragraph 4, it is necessary to include a reference to “principles”.

Paragraph 6

Proposed amendment

Insert “and principles” after “rights” in the first line.

Revised paragraph to read

Enjoyment of these rights and principles entails responsibilities and duties with regard to other persons, to the human community and to future generations.

Reasons

For the reasons outlined above in relation to the amendment proposed to paragraph 4, it is necessary to include a reference to “principles”.

Paragraph 7Proposed amendment

Delete in its entirety and replace by a new paragraph as set out below.

Revised paragraph to read

Therefore this Charter sets out the rights and fundamental freedoms to be observed, and the principles to be recognised and respected, by the institutions and bodies of the Union and the Member States when they are implementing Union law.

Reasons

The word “guaranteed” in the current paragraph 7 is inappropriate when the legal status of the Charter is undecided and is, in any case unacceptable in the context of the principles in the economic and social sphere. Therefore, it is preferable to use the suggested revised language for Article 49 of the draft Charter.

INDIVIDUAL ARTICLES

Article 3: Right to the integrity of the person

Proposed amendment

Insert “subject to the limitations recognised by law” at the end of the first indent of 3.2.

Revised Article to read

3.2 In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:

- free and informed consent of the person concerned subject to the limitations recognised by law,
- prohibition of eugenic practices, in particular those concerned with the selection of persons,
- prohibition on making the human body and its parts a source of financial gain,
- prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Reasons

Limitations are necessary in order to reflect current national medical norms and practices, for example, exceptional cases involving medical treatment of persons unable to give consent. Article 50.1 may not offer sufficient certainty in this respect.

Article 5: Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

Reasons

While we have no difficulty with the principle expressed in Article 5.3, in the absence of further clarification of the legal source for this right, and of definition of the terms “trafficking” and “human beings”, Article 5.3 as drafted is problematic. Further definition and clarification is therefore required.

Article 8: Protection of personal data

Proposed amendment

Add “in accordance with the provisions of Community law” at the end of the first sentence.

Revised Article to read

Everyone has the right to the protection of personal data concerning him in accordance with the provisions of Community law. Such data must be processed fairly for specified purposes on the basis of the consent of the person concerned or some other legitimate basis laid down by law. Everyone has the right of access to data which has been collected concerning him, and the right to have it rectified. Compliance with these rules shall be subject to control by an independent authority.

Reasons

As the legal basis for this right is contained in an EC directive, it is preferable to include a reference to Community law.

Article 9: Right to marry and right to found a family

Proposed amendment

Insert “of men and women” after “The right” and delete “the right” where it appears in the second place in this Article.

Revised Article to read

The right of men and women to marry and to found a family shall be guaranteed in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of these rights.

Reasons

The proposed amendment brings the essence of this right closer to that contained in the relevant Article in the ECHR. The existing language is too vague and would introduce confusion.

Article 11: Freedom of expression and information

Proposed amendment

Delete paragraph 2

Reasons

Paragraph 2 appears to be creating a new right, or rather, expanding an existing right, in an unacceptable fashion. Freedom of the press is protected adequately under Article 11.1. Highlighting it paragraph 2 is unnecessary. Also, paragraph 2 is linking it to undefined concepts of “pluralism” and “transparency” and it is unclear what the purpose of such linkage is.

Article 13: Freedom of research

Proposed amendment

Delete in its entirety.

Reasons

This Article is unacceptable and there is no need for it as the right is adequately covered by other Articles in the draft Charter, for example Articles 10 and 11. If it is to be specifically included, numerous qualifications will be necessary.

Article 14: Right to educationProposed amendment

Delete “and to have access to vocational and continuing training” in the first sentence of paragraph 1.

Insert a new paragraph 2 as set out below.

Renumber existing paragraph 2 as paragraph 3.

Revised Article to read

1. Everyone has the right to education. This right includes the right to receive free compulsory education.
2. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement of its citizens and nationals of third countries who are legally entitled to work in the territories of the Member States to have access to vocational and continuing training in accordance with Community law and national law and practice.
3. The freedom to found educational establishments with due respect for democratic principles and the right of parents to ensure the education and teaching of their children in conformity with their religious, philosophical and pedagogical convictions shall be guaranteed, in accordance with national laws governing the exercise of such freedom and right.

Reasons

In Ireland, access to vocational and continuing training is only available to EU citizens and those legally entitled to work in the country.

The provisions in Articles 14.2, 15.1, 16, 24, 26, 27, 28, 29.1, 31.1, 32.1 and 33 comprise provisions in relation to economic and social matters. As indicated in the explanation for change to paragraph 4 of the Preamble, these differ from other rights in not being judicially enforceable, in conformity with the instruments from which they are drawn. Their practical application rests on Community law and national law and practice. This difference should be reflected in the case of each of the above provisions by an introduction reading “The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to...” and addition at the end of the phrase “in accordance with Community law and national law and practice.” As these changes usually require adjustment of the existing wording, the amended version of each of the individual provisions is set out.

Article 15: Freedom to choose an occupation

Proposed amendment

Reword the first paragraph as set out below.

Delete “or receive” in paragraph 2.

Insert “legally entitled to work” instead of “ authorised to reside” in paragraph 3.

Revised Article to read

1. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement of everyone to engage in a freely chosen occupation to earn a living in accordance with Community law and national law and practice.
2. Every citizen of the Union has the freedom to seek employment, to work, to exercise the right of establishment and to provide services in any Member State.
3. Nationals of third countries who are legally entitled to work in the territories of the Member States are entitled to working conditions equivalent to those of citizens of the Union.

Reasons

With regard to paragraph 1, the right to engage in an occupation does not exist without qualification. It is necessary therefore to introduce a reference to Community law and national laws and practices to clarify that this right can be fettered. It should also be restated as a principle, please see the explanation under Article 14.

The entitlement contained in paragraph 3 is available only to nationals of third countries who are legally entitled to work in the territories of Member States and the provision should so limit it.

Article 16: Freedom to conduct a business

Proposed amendment

Reword as set out below.

Revised Article to read

The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to conduct a business in accordance with Community law and national law and practice.

Reasons

This should be restated as a principle; please see the explanation under Article 14.

Article 17: Right to propertyProposed amendment

Replace “has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath” with “is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of” in the first sentence of paragraph 1.

Replace “his” with “these” in the second sentence of paragraph 1. Insert “and subject, in appropriate cases, to fair compensation” instead of “,subject to fair compensation” in the second sentence of paragraph 1.

Delete paragraph 2 of this Article.

Revised Article to read

Every person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of these possessions, except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, and subject, in appropriate cases, to fair compensation. The use of property may be regulated insofar as is necessary for the general interest.

Reasons

This right is derived from Article 1 of the First Protocol to the ECHR. Ireland has a concern that the changes to the language contained in Article 1 may imply a change in the scope of this right. Ireland would prefer, therefore, to keep to the essence of the wording contained in Article 1 of the First Protocol.

In addition, Ireland has concerns about the reference to fair compensation, as that right cannot exist in all cases. For example, in the field of intellectual property rights, international law allows some scope for exceptions to the protection of intellectual property rights (for example, copyright law allows free (that is no payment) exceptions for certain copying conducted for the purposes of research and private study, etc.). Therefore, the reference to fair compensation must be deleted or else qualified as proposed.

Ireland also advocates the deletion of paragraph 2 as intellectual property is protected under paragraph 1 in any case. If intellectual property is singled out for a particular mention then the same qualifications contained in paragraph 1 should be included.

Article 19: Protection in the event of removal, expulsion or extraditionProposed amendment

In paragraph 2, replace “could” with “would”.

Revised Article to read

2. No one may be removed, expelled or extradited to a State where he would be subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment.

Reasons

Changing “could” to “would” introduces the concept of real risk to the Article. It also more accurately reflects ECHR jurisprudence.

Article 21: Equality and non-discriminationProposed amendment

Reword paragraph 1 as set out below.

Insert a new paragraph 2 as set out below.

Renumber existing paragraph 2 as paragraph 3.

Revised Article to read

1. Any discrimination based on sex, racial or ethnic origin, religion or belief, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited to the extent that the Council has, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, so provided.
2. The enjoyment of those rights and freedoms in this Charter which are guaranteed by the ECHR shall be secured without discrimination on any ground such as sex, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.
3. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, and without prejudice to the special provisions of those Treaties, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

Reasons

Article 21 .1 as currently drafted is unacceptable to Ireland. It does not reflect an established right in any of the relevant instruments. Article 13 of TEC, which is cited as a source for this right, is an enabling provision to permit the Council to take action to combat discrimination on the basis of an exhaustive list of grounds. Also, the application of Article 14 of the ECHR, which is cited as another source for this right, is confined to the freedoms and rights contained in the ECHR. The proposed revised wording addresses these concerns.

It would also be appropriate if this Article included a provision relating to affirmative action.

Article 24: Integration of persons with disabilities

Proposed amendment

Reword as set out below.

Revised Article to read

The Union recognises and respects the entitlement of persons with disabilities to benefit from measures designed to ensure their independence, social and occupational integration and participation in the life of the community in accordance with Community law and national law and practice.

Reasons

This should be restated as a principle; please see the explanation under Article 14.

Article 25: Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Proposed amendment

Delete in its entirety.

Reasons

There is no general right to information and consultation under Irish law or under Community law.

Article 26: Right of collective bargaining and action

Proposed amendment

Delete and replace in its entirety.

Revised Article to read

The Union recognises and respects the entitlement of employers and workers to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and, in cases of conflicts of interest, to take collective action in accordance with Community law and national law and practice.

Reasons

This should be restated as a principle; please see the explanation under Article 14.

Article 27: Right of access to placement services

Proposed amendment

Reword as set out below.

Revised Article to read

The Union recognises and respects the entitlement of everyone to access to a placement service in accordance with Community law and national law and practice.

Reasons

This should be restated as a principle; please see the explanation under Article 14.

Article 28: Protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

Proposed amendment

Reword as set out below.

Revised Article to read

The Union recognises and respects the entitlement of every worker to protection against unjustified dismissal in accordance with Community law and national law and practice.

Reasons

This should be restated as a principle; please see the explanation under Article 14.

Article 29: Fair and just working conditions

Proposed amendment

Replace “Every worker has the right” with “The Union recognises and respects the entitlement of every worker” in paragraph 1.

Insert “in accordance with Community law and national law and practice” at the end of paragraph 2.

Revised Article to read

1. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement of every worker to working conditions which respect his or her health, safety and dignity.
2. Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave in accordance with Community law and national law and practice.

Reasons

This should be restated as a principle; please see the explanation under Article 14.

In addition, paragraph 2 should include a reference to Community law and national law and practice which set out qualifications which apply to the rights listed.

Article 31: Reconciling family and professional life

Proposed amendment

Reword paragraph 1 as set out below.

Reword paragraph 2 as set out below.

Revised Article to read

1. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement of the family to enjoy legal, economic and social protection in accordance with Community law and national law and practice.
2. There shall be protection from dismissal because of pregnancy, and paid maternity leave and parental leave shall be available following the birth or adoption of a child in accordance with Community law and national law and practice and with a view to allowing everyone to reconcile their family and professional lives.

Reasons

This should be restated as a principle; please see the explanation under Article 14.

Article 32: Social security and social assistance

Proposed amendment

Replace “social security and social services” with “social protection” in paragraph 1. Insert “subject to the rules laid down by Community law and national law and practice” instead of

“in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices” at the end of paragraph 1 and reword the entitlements as set out below.

Reword paragraph 2 as set out below, including replacing “social security benefits, social advantages and access to health care” with the term “social protection”.

Delete paragraph 3.

Revised Article to read

1. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to social protection in the event of sickness, maternity, invalidity, old age, accidents at work and occupational diseases, death and unemployment, and to ensure a decent existence for persons lacking sufficient resources, subject to the rules laid down by Community law and national law and practice.
2. Nationals of a Member State who are workers in another Member State, and members of their families, have the right to the same social protection as nationals of that State, subject to the rules laid down by Community law.

Reasons

The term “social protection” encompasses all the social and health benefits, including social assistance, provided in the various Member States. The term “social protection” is used already in the draft Charter, in Article 31.

The provision in paragraph 1 should be restated as a principle; please see the explanation under Article 14. The entitlements referred to are drawn from Article 4.1 of Regulation (EEC) No 1408/71.

In relation to paragraph 2, the various rights expressed therein are subject to conditions in secondary Community legislation to which there should be a reference.

The use of the term “social protection” and a reference to ensuring a decent existence for persons lacking sufficient resources in paragraph 1 enables the deletion of paragraph 3. The reference to housing benefit in this Article creates serious problems for Ireland, which does not address housing problems in this manner.

Article 33: Health care

Proposed amendment

Delete “Everyone has the right of” and replace with “The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to access to” and delete “the right ” before “to benefit”.

Replace the phrase “under the conditions established by national laws and practices” with “in accordance with Community law and national law and practice”.

Revised Article to read

The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to access to preventive health care and to benefit from medical treatment in accordance with Community law and national law and practice.

Reasons

This should be restated as a principle; please see the explanation under Article 14.

Article 35: Environmental protection

Proposed amendment

Delete and replace in its entirety.

Revised Article to read

Environmental protection requirements must be integrated into the definition and implementation of all Community policies, in particular with a view to promoting sustainable development.

Reasons

This principle derives from Article 6 TEC and it is therefore necessary to reflect the wording contained in that Article. The current draft of Article 35 does not do so.

Article 39: Right to good administration

Proposed amendment

Replace “official languages of such institutions” with “languages referred to in Article 21 of the Treaty establishing the European Community” in paragraph 4.

Revised Article to read

Every person may write to the institutions of the Union in one of the languages referred to in Article 21 of the Treaty establishing the European Community and have an answer in the same language.

Reasons

Article 39(4) does not accurately reflect what is contained in the last paragraph of Article 21 of the TEC and as originally drafted does not include the right to correspond in the Irish language.

Article 45: Right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial

Proposed amendment

Delete paragraph 1 and replace by a new paragraph as set out below.

Delete paragraph 2 and replace by a new paragraph as set out below.

Delete paragraph 3 in its entirety.

Revised Article to read

Everyone whose directly enforceable rights and freedoms derived from community law are violated by the institutions or bodies of the Union or by a Member State exclusively when implementing Union law has the right to an effective remedy before a court. In such proceedings the rights guaranteed by Article 45.2 shall apply not withstanding the character of such proceedings.

Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time in determining his or her civil rights and obligations. Hearings shall be by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.

Reasons

The application of the Article should be limited as set out in the proposed amendment in the same way that Article 13 of the ECHR is limited to rights and freedoms as set forth in the Convention. Article 13 of the ECHR refers to an effective remedy before a “national authority” not necessarily a court. This broad interpretation is confirmed by the jurisprudence. The proposal would ensure that the Article applies only to alleged violations of EU law which would have to be dealt with by a court in any case.

In 45.2, the deletion of “previously” established by law is suggested as, although it is in accordance with ECHR jurisprudence, is not in Article 6 of the ECHR. The horizontal article will import ECHR jurisprudence.

It is suggested that the second sentence of 45.2 be deleted as in ECHR jurisprudence it is only in criminal cases that there is a guarantee of legal representation. The sentence would have the risk that it would require universal civil legal aid and that it would require the right to be legally represented before all administrative tribunals.

With regard to Article 45.3, this derives from ECHR jurisprudence with regard to civil cases. However, the ECHR requirement with regard to legal representation in criminal cases is more onerous. Attempting to reduce an ECHR decision to one sentence and attempting to apply it to criminal cases is not appropriate and consequently paragraph 3 should be deleted.

Article 47: Principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties

Proposed amendment

Delete 47.3

Reasons

There is no apparent source for 47.3 in international law and we have concerns that the ECJ could involve itself in arguments that penalties for breaches of offences relating to community matters was not proportionate by comparison with other non EU offences in the jurisdiction.

Article 48: Right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same criminal offence

Reasons

The Article appears to extend the immunity in Article 4 of Protocol 7 of the ECHR. The effect of this Article will need to be clarified.

Mme Paciotti

La Carta dei diritti fondamentali e le due Corti: la Corte di giustizia e la Corte europea dei diritti dell'uomo.

I quindici Stati membri dell'Unione europea hanno, ciascuno separatamente e in tempi diversi, sottoscritto e ratificato la Convenzione europea dei diritti dell'uomo e delle libertà fondamentali firmata il 4 novembre 1950 ed entrata in vigore il 3 settembre 1953. Ad essa aderiscono molti altri Stati europei (in tutto 41) che non fanno parte dell'Unione, ma fanno parte del Consiglio d'Europa.

Il Consiglio d'Europa, e in particolare la Corte di Giustizia, formata da un numero di giudici pari a quello degli Stati contraenti (ma che opera attraverso tre diversi tipi di organi: i comitati, composti di tre membri, le Camere, composte di sette giudici e la Grande Camera, composta di diciassette giudici) assicura la protezione dei diritti degli individui contro gli abusi dei pubblici poteri degli Stati contraenti, garantendo ai singoli un diritto di ricorso individuale allorché – esauriti i ricorsi interni al sistema giudiziario dello Stato contraente – si lamenti la persistenza dell'abuso.

Nell'Unione europea il rispetto del diritto nell'interpretazione e nell'applicazione del Trattato da parte degli Stati membri e delle Istituzioni e degli organi dell'Unione è assicurato dalla Corte di Giustizia, composta di quindici giudici (che può creare nel suo ambito delle sezioni), assistita da nove avvocati generali, nominati di comune accordo dai governi degli Stati membri.

In questa sua funzione la Corte di giustizia garantisce anche il rispetto nell'ambito dell'Unione dei diritti fondamentali: lo ha affermato reiteratamente la stessa Corte a partire dal 1969 (sentenza 12 novembre 1969 causa 29-69) osservando che "la tutela dei diritti fondamentali costituisce parte integrante dei principi giuridici generali di cui la Corte di giustizia garantisce l'osservanza". Lo stesso Consiglio Europeo di Colonia nella sua decisione di elaborare una Carta dei diritti ha ricordato che "... L'obbligo dell'Unione di rispettare i diritti fondamentali è confermato e definito dalla Corte di giustizia europea nella sua giurisprudenza."

L'attuale formulazione dell'art. 6, 2° comma del Trattato dell'Unione ha poi fissato esplicitamente questo dovere, prescrivendo: "l'Unione rispetta i diritti fondamentali quali sono garantiti dalla Convenzione europea per la salvaguardia dei diritti dell'uomo e delle libertà fondamentali, firmata a Roma il 4 novembre 1950, e quali risultano dalle tradizioni costituzionali comuni degli Stati membri, in quanto principi generali del diritto comunitario". Ovviamente, come ha stabilito la stessa Corte (sentenza 11 luglio 1985 cause riunite 60 e 61/84), "benché spetti alla Corte garantire l'osservanza dei diritti fondamentali nel settore specifico del diritto comunitario, non le spetta tuttavia esaminare la compatibilità con la Convenzione europea per la salvaguardia dei diritti dell'uomo e delle libertà fondamentali di una legge nazionale riguardante un campo soggetto alla valutazione del legislatore nazionale".

È evidente che ci si trova di fronte a due diversi sistemi ordinamentali, l'uno che fa capo al Consiglio d'Europa e l'altro che fa capo all'Unione europea: nel primo l'obiettivo principale del sistema è quello di garantire il rispetto dei diritti fondamentali delle persone all'interno degli Stati contraenti; nel secondo il rispetto dei diritti fondamentali è un requisito di legittimità dell'ordinamento sovranazionale. In ciascuno dei due diversi ordinamenti una apposita Corte, secondo apposite procedure, decide sull'osservanza delle norme e dei principi relativi ai diritti fondamentali.

È teoricamente possibile che la giurisprudenza delle due corti europee diverga a proposito dell'interpretazione di taluno di questi diritti, ma in questo caso non si può parlare di un "conflitto" perché, appunto, le due Corti operano nell'ambito di ordinamenti diversi (nessuno parlerebbe di "conflitto" tra una corte francese e una corte tedesca, se interpretassero in modo diverso lo stesso principio): si tratterebbe di mere diversità interpretative che, in linea di massima, costituiscono una ricchezza e uno stimolo a una sempre più affinata e aggiornata evoluzione del diritto. In pratica, peraltro, questa divergenza interpretativa solitamente non si verifica poiché le due corti conoscono e tengono in considerazione la rispettiva giurisprudenza.

Allorché si è proposto di fare aderire la Comunità alla Convenzione europea dei diritti dell'uomo, giustamente la Corte di giustizia (parere 2/94 del 28 marzo 1996) ha osservato, fra l'altro, che ciò non sarebbe stato possibile in mancanza di una riforma dei Trattati perché tale adesione "determinerebbe una modificazione sostanziale dell'attuale regime comunitario di tutela dei diritti dell'uomo, in quanto comporterebbe l'inserimento della Comunità in un sistema internazionale distinto". L'ipotesi dell'adesione dell'Unione europea alla Convenzione europea per la salvaguardia dei diritti dell'uomo solleverebbe inoltre non pochi problemi pratici (per esempio circa la nomina di un ulteriore giudice in "rappresentanza" dei 15 Paesi già singolarmente "rappresentati") e giuridici, perché a questo punto si potrebbe verificare un vero e proprio "conflitto" tra le due corti, che apparirebbero allo stesso sistema ordinamentale, e perché occorrerebbe stabilire apposite procedure per risolvere questa ed altre non semplici questioni, come quella relativa al diritto di ricorso individuale generalizzato, esistente in un sistema e non nell'altro.

La decisione di redigere una Carta dei diritti fondamentali dell'Unione europea non crea alcun nuovo problema, mentre risolve alcuni problemi preesistenti.

Risolve, fra l'altro, il problema della definizione dei diritti fondamentali vigenti nell'Unione europea, finora affidato alla giurisprudenza "creativa" della Corte di giustizia.

Non determina alcuna nuova ipotesi di "conflitto" con la Corte di Strasburgo, perché, quanto al rapporto tra i due ordinamenti e le due corti, mantiene la situazione esistente, limitandosi a specificare esplicitamente quali siano i diritti fondamentali genericamente richiamati nell'articolo 6 del Trattato dell'Unione.

L'adozione della Carta dei diritti influirà comunque sulla giurisprudenza della Corte di giustizia: indirettamente, come riferimento culturale, se non avrà valore vincolante; direttamente, come riferimento normativo, se sarà in qualche forma integrata nei Trattati.

A questo punto perseguire parallelamente anche l'obiettivo dell'adesione dell'UE alla Convenzione europea per la salvaguardia dei diritti dell'uomo creerebbe ulteriori problemi, anche perché la Convenzione contempla unicamente i tradizionali diritti civili e politici, mentre la nuova Carta prevederà anche i diritti economici e sociali. Sicché si avrebbe l'ulteriore rischio di un duplice regime di tutela giurisdizionale, a seconda della natura del diritto fondamentale in questione: si creerebbe un insieme difficilmente districabile di problemi giuridici, procedurali, istituzionali che sarebbe auspicabile evitare.

Un possibile fondamento istituzionale del doveroso coordinamento della giurisprudenza delle due Corti potrebbe essere rinvenuto nella considerazione che delle tradizioni costituzionali comuni degli Stati membri fa parte la giurisprudenza della Corte di Strasburgo, nel senso che i diritti fondamentali delle persone contenuti nella Convenzione vengono interpretati dalle Corti statali tenendo presente la giurisprudenza di Strasburgo.

In questo modo anche la Corte di Giustizia, tenuta ad interpretare i diritti fondamentali "quali risultano dalle tradizioni costituzionali comuni degli Stati membri" (obbligo che non verrebbe meno neppure quando i diritti fondamentali saranno inseriti nella Carta) non potrà prescindere dalla giurisprudenza della Corte europea per la salvaguardia dei diritti dell'uomo.

PACIOTTI

Bruxelles, 30 agosto 2000

Ill.mo signore

Prof. I. Mendez de Vigo
Vice presidente della Convenzione
Incaricata di elaborare la Carta dei
diritti fondamentali dell'Unione europea

Nel complimentarmi con il Presidium per l'elaborazione del progetto completo della Carta, rassegno qui di seguito le mie osservazioni, segnalando che analoghi rilievi vengono formulati dal prof. Stefano Rodotà, delegato del Presidente del Consiglio dei Ministri italiano e dal prof. Andrea Manzella, rappresentante del Senato italiano.

Sul preambolo:

Al punto 3, non appare adeguata la formula secondo cui l'Unione assicura uno sviluppo equilibrato e sostenibile "attraverso" la libera circolazione delle persone, dei beni, dei capitali e dei servizi: si esprime così un rapporto da mezzo a fine fra libertà di circolazione e sostenibilità dello sviluppo che è perlomeno dubbio. Storicamente, l'Unione europea ha cercato di promuovere uno sviluppo equilibrato e sostenibile favorendo la coesione sociale e il rispetto dell'ambiente. E' opportuno non ignorare nel preambolo questo dato di fatto, componente essenziale del "modello europeo".

Si può rimediare all'incongruenza semplicemente dicendo "L'Unione assicura uno sviluppo equilibrato e sostenibile e garantisce la libera circolazione delle persone, dei beni, dei capitali e dei servizi"; meglio sarebbe, tuttavia, menzionare esplicitamente la coesione sociale (ed eventualmente anche il rispetto dell'ambiente), dicendo "L'Unione assicura uno sviluppo equilibrato e sostenibile promuovendo la coesione sociale e il rispetto dell'ambiente e garantisce la libera circolazione...".

Al punto 5, crea perplessità l'indicazione, fra le fonti da cui derivano i diritti fondamentali riconosciuti nella Carta, della giurisprudenza delle Corti europee, che non può essere collocata allo stesso livello dei trattati, delle convenzioni e delle carte formalmente adottate dagli Stati.

Ulteriori perplessità crea la menzione in questa sede della Corte europea dei diritti dell'uomo, che appartiene ad un ordinamento diverso da quello dell'Unione: essa infatti non è indicata, a differenza della Corte di giustizia, nel mandato di Colonia.

(Sulla questione dei rapporti fra le due Corti europee in relazione alla Carta dei diritti fondamentali in corso di elaborazione, allego un appunto che esprime il mio punto di vista).

Sulla struttura:

E' pienamente condivisibile e apprezzabile, per la sua efficacia e novità, la suddivisione del testo sotto i titoli "dignità", "libertà", "uguaglianza", "solidarietà", "cittadinanza", "giustizia", anche se comporta inevitabilmente qualche forzatura nella collocazione di alcuni articoli, ispirati a principi molteplici. Sarebbe tuttavia di gran lunga preferibile che l'articolo dedicato al diritto alla salute (attuale articolo 33) venisse collocato nel capo intitolato alla dignità. In questo modo si darebbe immediata e giusta evidenza ad uno fra i più significativi nuovi diritti, considerato elemento essenziale per la tutela della dignità delle persone.

La libertà di circolazione (attuale articolo 43) andrebbe invece meglio inserita nel Capo relativo alle libertà.

Sull'articolato:

All'art.1 si ritiene necessario insistere sulla formula "la dignità umana è inviolabile" e comunque sulla menzione della inviolabilità della dignità della persona, nel senso che la garanzia e la tutela della dignità umana devono essere riferite a un bene concettualmente intangibile da parte dei pubblici poteri. Ci si preoccupa, infatti, del modo in cui i cittadini europei reagiranno alla lettura della Carta: poiché nei testi in cui è nominata (ad esempio, l'art.1 del Grundgesetz) la dignità è appunto dichiarata "inviolabile" o "intangibile", ogni diversa formulazione può essere percepita come un indebolimento della tutela: E, trattandosi del primo articolo della Carta, questo potrebbe determinare una lettura complessiva della Carta come testo debole.

All'art.11, Si propongono le seguenti modifiche:

Al comma 1, dopo le parole: "libertà di ricevere", aggiungere le parole: "di ricercare".

Al comma 2, aggiungere le parole: "anche nei confronti delle concentrazioni dei mezzi di comunicazione di massa".

Si insiste perché, al comma 1, si indichi espressamente la libertà di "cercare" informazioni, non solo di riceverle. Tale diritto, già compreso nell'art. 19 della Dichiarazione dell'Onu del 1948, è oggi primario nella nuova dimensione di Internet (non a caso, i regimi dittatoriali cercano di negarlo).

Al comma 2, appare opportuno che la garanzia del pluralismo dell'informazione vada assicurata anche nei confronti delle gigantesche concentrazioni proprietarie in atto nel mondo.

All'art.12, Si propone la seguente modifica:

Al comma 2, dopo le parole: "ad esprimere", aggiungere le parole: "con metodo democratico".

E' essenziale infatti che l'Unione Europea, che si fonda sul principio di democrazia, come è anche detto nel Preambolo, riconosca la qualifica di partito politico soltanto alle formazioni che agiscono "con metodo democratico", nel rispetto, cioè, di quel valore.

All'art.13 Si propone l'aggiunta del seguente comma:

"Tutti hanno il diritto di beneficiare, a condizioni eque, dei risultati delle ricerche scientifiche, in particolare nel campo bio-medico".

L'attenzione dell'opinione pubblica si è concentrata massimamente e con interesse crescente sui problemi della ricerca, soprattutto nel campo della bio-medicina, e sui problemi della brevettabilità e della commercializzazione esclusiva dei risultati della ricerca. Il comma di cui si propone l'introduzione stabilisce un principio di contemperamento tra il diritto di ognuno di beneficiare dei risultati della ricerca, in specie nel campo bio-medico, ed il giusto riconoscimento economico dei costi della ricerca stessa.

All'art.15, comma 1, non appare accettabile che si dica che, per guadagnarsi da vivere ciascuno ha "il diritto di esercitare una professione" ma non di lavorare. Occorre aggiungere la menzione del diritto al lavoro. Si propone di sostituire il primo comma con il seguente:

"1. Ogni individuo ha il diritto di realizzare le sue capacità personali con un lavoro liberamente scelto o accettato".

La diversa formulazione del comma fa, infatti, riferimento alla realizzazione personale dell'individuo e non al solo elemento economico del guadagno per vivere, ma anche al lavoro nel suo significato più generale, comprendente ogni tipo di attività, economica, culturale e artistica, svolta in condizione di indipendenza o autonomia.

All'articolo 16 si propone di aggiungere, in fine, le seguenti parole:

351

"nel rispetto del principio di uno sviluppo economico e sociale equilibrato e sostenibile".

L'affermazione della libera imprenditorialità deve essere qui contemperata con il concetto di sviluppo equilibrato e sostenibile, secondo l'indirizzo fondamentale del modello sociale europeo. Si ricorda a tal riguardo che in nessuna delle Costituzioni europee il diritto di impresa è affermato in maniera assoluta e incondizionata. Esso è sempre contemperato con principi di sostenibilità sociale ed ecologica e di equilibrio economico.

Un elemento caratteristico di tutto il costituzionalismo del novecento, è stato, infatti, proprio quello di legare il riconoscimento dei diritti di libertà economica a finalità di ordine sociale. Se fosse mantenuta l'attuale formulazione dell'articolo 16 (come quella del successivo articolo 17), la norma in questione sarebbe percepita come un arretramento rispetto a tradizioni costituzionali comuni.

All'articolo 17 si propone di sostituire il terzo periodo del primo comma con il seguente:

"L'esercizio del diritto di proprietà può essere limitato dalla legge nell'interesse generale e per assicurarne la funzione sociale".

L'espressione "limitato dalla legge", in luogo di quella "regolamentato", offre una migliore garanzia del diritto di proprietà, perché esclude limitazioni che provengano da atti non aventi forza di legge.

Inoltre, il riferimento alla "funzione sociale" rafforza il riferimento all' "interesse generale", che sarebbe altrimenti troppo debole, ed è in linea con la tradizione del costituzionalismo del novecento, come si è detto sopra. Non basterebbe, a tal fine, la clausola orizzontale dell'art. 50, perché essa postula appunto l'ordinaria assolutezza dei diritti garantiti, mentre nel caso qui discusso (ed in quello di cui al precedente articolo 16) si tratta proprio di stabilire che il riconoscimento di questi particolari diritti è ormai collegato strutturalmente con finalità di interesse generale.

All'art.21, Si suggerisce l'aggiunta del seguente comma:

"3. L'unione adotta le politiche opportune per eliminare le disparità di fatto e per promuovere le condizioni che rendono effettiva l'uguaglianza".

L'enunciazione meramente formale e negativa del principio di uguaglianza appare, infatti, insufficiente. E' dunque, necessario rafforzarla vincolando l'Unione europea ad adottare politiche attive per rimuovere le condizioni che impediscono di fatto la parità delle opportunità e il riconoscimento di effettiva pari dignità a tutti gli individui.

All'art.23, Appare opportuno aggiungere - all'inizio dell'articolo ovvero dopo il primo comma - il seguente comma:

352

"Le bambine e i bambini devono essere protetti contro ogni minaccia alla loro maturazione intellettuale e alla loro integrità psicologica e sessuale".

Il nuovo comma si fa carico delle minacce che incombono sui bambini (anche attraverso tecnologie di informazione) e vincola il potere pubblico ad un obbligo di protezione nei loro confronti. Si tratta di un'esigenza assai sentita dall'opinione pubblica europea.

Si insiste sull'opportunità dell'inserimento di un nuovo articolo 23-bis, relativo ai diritti degli anziani, formulato come segue:

"Articolo 23-bis. Diritti degli anziani.

Ogni individuo anziano ha diritto ad un'esistenza autonoma e dignitosa e a partecipare pienamente alla vita politica, sociale e culturale".

L'andamento demografico nei paesi dell'Unione europea impone, infatti, di considerare specificamente la sfera dei diritti delle persone anziane. La norma proposta richiama, d'altronde, l'articolo 23 della Carta sociale europea.

All'art.26, si suggerisce la seguente modifica:

dopo le parole: "concludere contratti collettivi", inserire le parole: "anche a livello dell'Unione", e dopo le parole: "azioni collettive", aggiungere le parole: "compreso lo sciopero".

Il riconoscimento nella Carta del diritto di negoziazione collettiva acquista significato, infatti, solo se accompagnato dalla specificazione del possibile ambito europeo della contrattazione. La mancata menzione del diritto di sciopero, riconosciuto dalla Carta sociale europea e da un gran numero di Convenzioni dell'OIL, oltre che dalle tradizioni costituzionali comuni dei Paesi membri, rischia, invece, di essere intesa come una restrizione dei diritti vigenti.

All'art.29, si propongono le seguenti modifiche:

Al primo comma, aggiungere, in fine, le parole: "e ad una giusta retribuzione proporzionata alla qualità e quantità del lavoro prestato".

Al secondo comma, aggiungere, in fine, le parole: "e non può rinunziarvi".

Tra le condizioni di lavoro "giuste ed eque" deve necessariamente inserirsi il diritto ad una retribuzione giusta e proporzionata alla prestazione. L'irrinunciabilità alle ferie risponde, invece, ad una tipica necessità di protezione della parte più debole del rapporto di lavoro.

Sorprende, nella formulazione di alcuni diritti sociali, l'uso di espressioni attenuate o indirette, che paiono affievolire il riconoscimento di alcuni diritti rispetto ad altri. Così, mentre all'art.31 si dice che "è garantita la protezione della famiglia" (pur trattandosi evidentemente di un diritto che richiede per la sua effettività interventi legislativi e amministrativi a molteplici livelli nell'ambito degli Stati membri e non solo dell'Unione), all'art.32, concernente la sicurezza e l'assistenza sociale, si usa una formula generica e non impegnativa: non solo questi diritti non sono “garantiti”, ma l’Unione si limita a riconoscere e rispettare l’esistente “secondo le modalità stabilite dal diritto comunitario e le legislazioni e prassi nazionali”, formula questa più volte ripetuta soltanto per alcuni diritti , indipendentemente dal fatto che trovino regolamentazione primaria nella legislazione nazionale o in quella comunitaria, e pur trattandosi di una formula superflua in presenza della clausola generale dell’art.49.

All’art.34 si giunge poi ad una formulazione inaccettabile, che non fa cenno ad alcun diritto, neppure nella formula attenuata del riconoscimento da parte dell’Unione di un diritto sancito da legislazioni nazionali, ma al semplice “rispetto dell’accesso ai servizi d’interesse generale quale previsto dalle legislazioni e prassi nazionali, ai sensi delle disposizioni del Trattato...”. Si tratta di una formula tanto sovrabbondante quanto inutile, che dovrà essere adeguata al tenore degli altri articoli.

Si propone di sostituire il testo dell'articolo 34 con il seguente:

"Al fine di promuovere la coesione sociale e territoriale l'Unione riconosce e rispetta il diritto di ogni individuo all'accesso a servizi di interesse generale che assicurino le prestazioni necessarie a garantire la qualità della vita e le possibilità di lavoro. Le prestazioni di servizi di interesse generale si basano sui principi di uguaglianza di accesso, di universalità, di continuità, di trasparenza".

E' opportuno che il diritto ad usufruire di servizi di interesse generale sia inquadrato in principi-guida che, salve le differenziazioni nazionali, ne garantiscano l'effettività, anche in funzione della promozione della coesione sociale e territoriale dell'Unione, prevista dall'articolo 16 del Trattato CE (se venisse menzionata la finalità di garantire le possibilità di lavoro potrebbe, inoltre, essere qui assorbito l'articolo 27 relativo ai servizi di collocamento).

All’art.36, si propone l'aggiunta del seguente comma:

"I consumatori hanno diritto ad una informazione completa sulla qualità dei beni e dei servizi e ad una pubblicità non ingannevole che risponda ai criteri di trasparenza e veridicità".

La sensibilità popolare europea si è fatta particolarmente acuta riguardo ai criteri di fabbricazione e manipolazione di prodotti alimentari e di beni di consumo personale. E' necessario che una Unione sempre più vicina ai bisogni della gente si faccia carico nelle sue politiche di queste diffuse preoccupazioni.

All’art.37 si propone di premettere il seguente nuovo comma, che assorbirebbe il secondo comma previsto nel progetto del Presidium:

"1. I cittadini dell'Unione hanno il diritto di partecipare all'esercizio del potere pubblico a livello dell'Unione per il tramite di un'assemblea rappresentativa eletta a suffragio universale diretto, libero e segreto".

354

Il principio di democrazia su cui, com'è detto nel Preambolo, si basa l'Unione europea, deve trovare nell'affermazione del "diritto al Parlamento", contenuto in questo nuovo comma, la concretizzazione di democrazia partecipativa e parlamentare. La formulazione è tratta dalla giurisprudenza della Corte di giustizia (e, in particolare, dalle sentenze Roquette e Maizena).

Il secondo comma nella formulazione del Presidium, è la specificazione di questo "diritto al Parlamento", che ne costituisce pertanto la premessa da esplicitare necessariamente.

All'art.47, si propone di aggiungere, alla fine del terzo comma, le seguenti parole:

"e devono tendere alla rieducazione del condannato".

E' infatti un principio di civiltà giuridica, recepito in varie Costituzioni e ordinamenti europei, che l'espiatione della pena debba accompagnarsi a misure dirette a recuperare e rieducare la personalità del condannato.

All'art.49, Si propone di riformulare il primo comma come segue:

"1. Le istituzioni e gli organi dell'Unione, come pure gli Stati membri quando attuano il diritto dell'Unione, rispettano i diritti fondamentali e osservano i principi enunciati nella presente Carta e ne promuovono l'applicazione nel rispetto del principio di sussidiarietà".

Molti dei diritti fondamentali enunciati nella Carta trovano, infatti, attuazione principalmente nell'ambito nazionale, costituendo, per il diritto dell'Unione, un quadro di riferimento, di orientamento e di limitazione della regolamentazione comunitaria. Affermare che le disposizioni della Carta si applicano agli Stati membri "esclusivamente" nell'attuazione del diritto dell'Unione può creare incomprensioni, dato che al comma 2 dell'articolo 49 già si ribadisce che la Carta non modifica alcuna competenza istituzionale.

All' art.50, si suggerisce di riformulare il terzo comma come segue:

"3. I diritti e le libertà riconosciuti dalla presente Carta, che siano già disciplinati dalla Convenzione Europea di salvaguardia dei diritti dell'uomo e delle libertà fondamentali, possono subire le medesime restrizioni previste dalla Convenzione: non possono subire restrizioni maggiori di quelle, ma possono godere della protezione maggiore e più estesa prevista dalla presente Carta".

Nel terzo comma del testo proposto dal Presidium, l'uso del termine "simili", riferito al significato ed alla portata dei diritti fondamentali, può essere fonte di confusione. Con il nuovo testo del comma, si intende proporre una formulazione più chiara e semplice di quella del Presidium, che metta in luce due dati essenziali: e cioè che, con riferimento ai diritti della Convenzione, non vi possono essere restrizioni maggiori di quelle previste dalla Convenzione stessa; ma che, al contempo, la Carta può garantire ad essi una protezione maggiore o più estesa.

Infine, si insiste affinché nel capo relativo alla dignità (ovvero in quello relativo alla libertà) siano aggiunti due articoli, già proposti in sede di emendamenti, il cui inserimento è sollecitato dai movimenti femminili, riferiti al diritto all'autodeterminazione e al diritto alla libertà sessuale. Si tratta di articoli che rispecchiano il testo di atti dell'Onu (si veda in particolare il par.96 della Dichiarazione di Pechino) sottoscritti da tutti i Paesi membri, idonei a qualificare le libertà degli europei rispetto a mondi vicini, che vedono l'oppressione quotidiana delle donne e la repressione di libertà sessuali presso di noi pienamente riconosciute. Se ne trascrivono i testi:

“Art.5 bis. Diritto all'autodeterminazione.

Ogni individuo ha il diritto di prendere liberamente le decisioni che riguardano la sua vita e la sua persona, al riparo da ogni forma di coercizione, discriminazione o violenza e con il pieno rispetto dell'eguaglianza tra i generi”.

“Art.5 ter. Diritto alla libertà sessuale.

Ogni individuo ha diritto di decidere liberamente per quanto riguarda la sua sessualità, che comprende il diritto alla salute sessuale e riproduttiva garantito contro ogni forma di coercizione, violenza e discriminazione tra donne e uomini”.

Quanto alla forma del progetto, cioè agli aspetti linguistici e redazionali, mi riservo qualche osservazione sulla versione italiana quando si disporrà del testo definitivo.

Con i sensi della mia più alta considerazione

Elena Paciotti

Subject: Comments on CHARTE 4422/00

Dear Mr. Braibant

As personal representative of the Prime Minister of the Hellenic Republic, I would like to congratulate the Praesidium for their work and to welcome the outcome, the very balanced text of draft Charter (doc.4422/00).

Having said that, I would like, also, to forward to you some comments in order to clarify specific provisions and to ameliorate the general impression of the draft Charter.

1. In the Preamble, I believe that it is a matter of reasoning to redraft the first paragraph in order to show the logical sequence
"1. The peoples of Europe, resolved to share a peaceful future based on common values, have established an ever closer union between them."
2. In the Preamble, second paragraph, at the end, I think that the addition of social justice after the principle of democracy and the rule of law, would be the most appropriate way to announce Chapter IV. Solidarity that follows. This addition also improves the message of the Charter reflecting the social awareness and sensitivity of the Union.
3. In the Preamble, third paragraph, the second sentence (it ensures...and services) could become a separate paragraph (3a) underlining the current importance of sustainable development, recognized inter alia by article 6 TEC.
4. At the title of Chapter I could be added the adjective HUMAN in order to anticipate the forthcoming provisions.
5. The second sentence of article 12 is more appropriate to be placed at article 37 (as third paragraph) for systematic reasons.
6. At article 24, at the end, the present wording sounds as restricting the integration of persons with disabilities. It is, to my belief, better to rephrase as follows in order to achieve a better result: "... participation in social and public life".
7. At article 45 par. 1, the expression "Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated..." is not legally accurate. Since to certify such a violation could not be a prerequisite, in order to provide with an effective remedy, I think that the following wording is correct: "Everyone whose rights and freedoms are deemed to be violated..."
8. At article 49, par. 1, the expression "... only when they are implementing Union law" may produce the false assumption that, a contrario, in any other case, both the Union and its member states are not obliged to take account of the provisions of the Charter. Given the fact that the provisions of the Charter derive from common constitutional traditions and mutually ratified international conventions, this overclarification is both unnecessary and misleading. So, I would propose to strike out the word only in order to avoid undesirable interpretations of article 49.

Dear Mr. Braibant,

I finally recall that an exact and harmonized translation of the text of the Charter in every language of the Union is a matter of special concern and importance and must be conducted under the guidance of the personal representatives.

Sincerely yours,

Professor George Papadimitriou

PATIJN

Aan: Het Presidium van de Conventie voor het Handvest van de grondrechten van de Europese Unie
Ter attentie van: de heer Jansson, Vice-voorzitter
Van: M. Patijn, vertegenwoordiger van de Nederlandse Tweede Kamer der Staten-Generaal bij de Conventie

Volgens de door de Conventie vastgestelde procedure doe ik u hieronder mijn algemene opmerkingen toekomen op het concept-Handvest, weergegeven in document CHARTE 4422/00 CONVENT 45, alsmede de daarop betrekking hebbende toelichting, weergegeven in document CHARTE 4423/00 CONVENT 46.

Ik complimenteer het Voorzitterschap met het tot nu toe bereikte resultaat, met name gelet op de omvang van de opdracht en de krappe termijn waarbinnen deze dient te worden gerealiseerd.

De voornaamste meerwaarde van het thans voorgestelde concept-Handvest is dat het een geslaagde poging betreft om alle bestaande grondrechten, fundamenteel en anderszins, die in diverse rechtsbronnen zijn vastgelegd, in één codificatie bijeen te brengen. Daarmee biedt het de burger van de Unie meer overzicht en duidelijkheid. Voorts zal het Handvest, gelet op het gestelde in artikel 49 van het thans voorliggende concept, de burger een betere rechtsbescherming kunnen bieden bij besluiten van de instellingen en organen van de Unie, alsmede van de Lidstaten wanneer zij Unieregelgeving tenuitvoerleggen.

Uitgangspunt is voor mij steeds geweest dat een te realiseren Handvest geen afbreuk dient te doen aan de werking van het Europees Verdrag voor de Rechten van de Mens en de daarop gebaseerde jurisprudentie van het Europese Hof voor de Rechten van de Mens te Straatsburg. Bij een zorgvuldige beoordeling van het thans voorliggende concept, met name voor wat betreft de juridische consistentie en houdbaarheid, dienen daarom nog enige verbeteringen te worden aangebracht, wil ik aan mijn parlement onverkort kunnen adviseren met het Handvest akkoord te gaan, laat staan in een latere fase mee te werken aan het toekennen van bindende werking daarvan. Mijn wensen tot verbetering hebben betrekking op de volgende punten.

1. Relatie Handvest-EVRM

De Nederlandse vertegenwoordigers hebben zich van meet af aan op het standpunt gesteld dat de juridische behandeling van fundamentele rechten die in het EVRM zijn geregeld, zodanig dient te zijn dat er in de praktische rechtstoepassing geen verschillen kunnen ontstaan tussen het Handvest enerzijds en het EVRM en de daarop gebaseerde jurisprudentie anderzijds, behoudens die gevallen dat het Handvest een verdergaande bescherming biedt. Dit uitgangspunt lijkt nog onvoldoende veilig gesteld in het huidige concept-Handvest. Artikel 50, lid 3 van het concept ondervangt dit, in juridische zin niet afdoende. Dit geldt met name de vraag of de in het EVRM toegestane beperkingen van fundamentele rechten, alsmede de jurisprudentie daarover, onverkort van toepassing zijn. Daarom dient in de artikelsgewijze toelichting, die een officiële status dient te krijgen, per artikel te worden vastgesteld dat het corresponderende EVRM-artikel en de daarop betrekking hebbende jurisprudentie van toepassing zijn. Hiertoe dient de toelichting helder te zijn. Zo dient bijvoorbeeld het woordgebruik eenduidig te worden gemaakt en dienen verschillende termen als “fondé sur” en “inspiré par” niet zonder reden naast elkaar gebruikt te worden.

2. Codificatie nieuwe grondrechten

De in het Handvest op te nemen nieuwe grondrechten (zoals de rechten van het kind en de bescherming van persoonsgegevens) betreffen niet eerder gecodificeerde grondrechten. Uit de tekst van het concept-Handvest en de toelichting blijkt niet of en, zo ja, op welke wijze, deze nieuwe grondrechten door de wetgever van eventuele beperkingen mogen worden voorzien. Is bijvoorbeeld het recht op bescherming van persoonsgegevens absoluut?

3. Beperking van sommige grondrechten tot burgers van de Unie

Vraagtekens zet ik bij de huidige redactie van de artikelen 15 en 43. De beperking van een bepaald grondrecht tot burgers van de Unie betekent a contrario dat dit niet geldt voor burgers van derde landen met een vaste verblijfstitel. Beargumenteerd kan worden dat dit de huidige stand van zaken in de communautaire rechtsontwikkeling weergeeft. Het is echter beter de redenering om te draaien door deze rechten aan eenieder toe te kennen en in de tekst op te nemen dat deze rechten kunnen worden uitgeoefend in overeenstemming met de toepasselijke communautaire en nationale regelgeving.

4. Rechtsmacht HvJEG en EHRM

Hoewel het Handvest voorhands een niet-bindend karakter zal hebben en daardoor de afbakening van de rechtsmacht van het Hof van Justitie van de Europese Gemeenschap en van het Europese Hof voor de Rechten van de Mens thans nog geen discussie behoeven, dient reeds nu te worden nagedacht over de verhouding tussen beide Hoven voor het geval het Handvest uiteindelijk wél een bindend karakter zal hebben. Dit zal uitdrukkelijk onder de aandacht van de Europese Raad dienen te worden gebracht.

5. Strijdigheid van het Handvest met de Nederlandse wetgeving

De Nederlandse regeringsvertegenwoordiger, de heer Korthals Altes, heeft in zijn commentaar aan de heer Braibant gesteld onoverkomelijke bezwaren te hebben ten aanzien van de huidige formulering van de artikelen 14 lid 1, 15 lid 1, 27, 32 lid 3 en 33. Bij deze bezwaren sluit ik mij nadrukkelijk aan.

observations Rack.txt

RACK

Sehr geehrter Herr Vizepräsident, lieber Inigo!

Zum Text der Charta, den das Präsidium uns übermittelt hat, möchte ich die folgenden Bemerkungen machen.

Erstens, der Text ist insgesamt nunmehr doch bereits recht ausgewogen und so gesehen eine gute Grundlage für unsere abschließende Arbeitsphase.

Zweitens, in einem wesentlichen Punkt glaube ich nach wie vor, daß eine Ergänzung des Textes um eine ausdrückliche Schutzgarantie für Rechte der Volksgruppen und Minderheiten im Lichte der historischen Erfahrungen, die wir in Europa im 20. Jahrhundert mit diesem Thema gemacht haben, unverzichtbar ist. Ich erneuere in diesem Sinn in meinem eigenen Namen und unter Berücksichtigung von vielen Zuschriften, die ich zum Thema Minderheitenschutz in den letzten Wochen erhalten habe, meine Bitte um Berücksichtigung meines seinerzeitigen Amendments 597 bzw. vergleichbarer Vorschläge anderer Konventionmitglieder. Wenn trotz allem ein derartiges spezifisches Minderheitenrecht nicht mehrheitsfähig erscheint, dann sollte zumindest die Vielfaltsgarantie des Art 37 Diversity aus dem Vorschlag von Hirsch Ballin/ Altmeier Eingang in unseren Text finden.

Drittens fehlt mir nach wie vor noch ein entsprechender ausdrücklicher Hinweis auf die Wertebasis der Charta. Ein Bezug auf das jüdisch-christliche Erbe Europas und die Zeit der Aufklärung könnte hier den einzelnen konkreten Grundrechtsgewährleistungen mehr Farbe und damit auch mehr Inhalt verleihen.

Eine vierte und abschließende Bemerkung betrifft die innere Ausgewogenheit des derzeit vorliegenden Textes. Hier meine ich, daß nach wie vor allzu große Unterschiede in der sprachlichen Formulierung alter klassischer Garantien und Gesetzesvorbehalte einerseits und neuer - und in diesem Sinn daher sichtlich noch nicht so ausgereifter - Garantien ohne ausformulierte Vorbehalte andererseits, die Wirkung der Charta insgesamt mit unnötigen Verständnis- und Akzeptanzproblemen belasten könnten. Auffallend der Unterschied zwischen Art 3, 8, 14 und 15 einerseits und Art 16 andererseits. Überall und dann gleichförmig weniger wäre vor allem ein Mehr an allgemeiner Verständlichkeit!

Ich hoffe, diese Bemerkungen tragen dazu bei unser gemeinsames Anliegen zu fördern.

RODOTÁ

Bruxelles, 30 agosto 2000

Ill.mo signore

Guy Braibant
Presidium della Convenzione
Incaricata di elaborare la Carta dei
Diritti fondamentali dell'Unione europea

Nel complimentarmi con il Presidium per l'elaborazione del progetto completo della Carta, rassegno qui di seguito le mie osservazioni, segnalando che analoghi rilievi vengono formulati dall'on. Elena Paciotti, rappresentante del Parlamento europeo e dal prof. Andrea Manzella, rappresentante del Senato italiano.

Sul preambolo:

Al punto 3, non appare adeguata la formula secondo cui l'Unione assicura uno sviluppo equilibrato e sostenibile "attraverso" la libera circolazione delle persone, dei beni, dei capitali e dei servizi: si esprime così un rapporto da mezzo a fine fra libertà di circolazione e sostenibilità dello sviluppo che è perlomeno dubbio. Storicamente, l'Unione europea ha cercato di promuovere uno sviluppo equilibrato e sostenibile favorendo la coesione sociale e il rispetto dell'ambiente. E' opportuno non ignorare nel preambolo questo dato di fatto, componente essenziale del "modello europeo".

Si può rimediare all'incongruenza semplicemente dicendo "L'Unione assicura uno sviluppo equilibrato e sostenibile e garantisce la libera circolazione delle persone, dei beni, dei capitali e dei servizi"; meglio sarebbe, tuttavia, menzionare esplicitamente la coesione sociale (ed eventualmente anche il rispetto dell'ambiente), dicendo "L'Unione assicura uno sviluppo equilibrato e sostenibile promuovendo la coesione sociale e il rispetto dell'ambiente e garantisce la libera circolazione...".

36n

Al punto 5, crea perplessità l'indicazione, fra le fonti da cui derivano i diritti fondamentali riconosciuti nella Carta, della giurisprudenza delle Corti europee, che non può essere collocata allo stesso livello dei trattati, delle convenzioni e delle carte formalmente adottate dagli Stati.

Ulteriori perplessità crea la menzione in questa sede della Corte europea dei diritti dell'uomo, che appartiene ad un ordinamento diverso da quello dell'Unione: essa infatti non è indicata, a differenza della Corte di giustizia, nel mandato di Colonia.

Sulla struttura:

E' pienamente condivisibile e apprezzabile, per la sua efficacia e novità, la suddivisione del testo sotto i titoli "dignità", "libertà", "uguaglianza", "solidarietà", "cittadinanza", "giustizia", anche se comporta inevitabilmente qualche forzatura nella collocazione di alcuni articoli, ispirati a principi molteplici. Sarebbe tuttavia di gran lunga preferibile che l'articolo dedicato al diritto alla salute (attuale articolo 33) venisse collocato nel capo intitolato alla dignità. In questo modo si darebbe immediata e giusta evidenza ad uno fra i più significativi nuovi diritti, considerato elemento essenziale per la tutela della dignità delle persone.

La libertà di circolazione (attuale articolo 43) andrebbe invece meglio inserita nel Capo relativo alle libertà.

Sull'articolato:

All'art.1 si ritiene necessario insistere sulla formula "la dignità umana è inviolabile" e comunque sulla menzione della inviolabilità della dignità della persona, nel senso che la garanzia e la tutela della dignità umana devono essere riferite a un bene concettualmente intangibile da parte dei pubblici poteri. Ci si preoccupa, infatti, del modo in cui i cittadini europei reagiranno alla lettura della Carta: poiché nei testi in cui è nominata (ad esempio, l'art.1 del Grundgesetz) la dignità è appunto dichiarata "inviolabile" o "intangibile", ogni diversa formulazione può essere percepita come un indebolimento della tutela: E, trattandosi del primo articolo della Carta, questo potrebbe determinare una lettura complessiva della Carta come testo debole.

All'art.11, Si propongono le seguenti modifiche:

Al comma 1, dopo le parole: "libertà di ricevere", aggiungere le parole: "di ricercare".

Al comma 2, aggiungere le parole: "anche nei confronti delle concentrazioni dei mezzi di comunicazione di massa".

Si insiste perché, al comma 1, si indichi espressamente la libertà di "cercare" informazioni, non solo di riceverle. Tale diritto, già compreso nell'art. 19 della Dichiarazione dell'Onu del 1948, è oggi primario nella nuova dimensione di Internet (non a caso, i regimi dittatoriali cercano di negarlo).

Al comma 2, appare opportuno che la garanzia del pluralismo dell'informazione vada assicurata anche nei confronti delle gigantesche concentrazioni proprietarie in atto nel mondo.

All'art.12, Si propone la seguente modifica:

Al comma 2, dopo le parole: "ad esprimere", aggiungere le parole: "con metodo democratico".

E' essenziale infatti che l'Unione Europea, che si fonda sul principio di democrazia, come è anche detto nel Preambolo, riconosca la qualifica di partito politico soltanto alle formazioni che agiscono "con metodo democratico", nel rispetto, cioè, di quel valore.

All'art.13 Si propone l'aggiunta del seguente comma:

"Tutti hanno il diritto di beneficiare, a condizioni eque, dei risultati delle ricerche scientifiche, in particolare nel campo bio-medico".

L'attenzione dell'opinione pubblica si è concentrata massimamente e con interesse crescente sui problemi della ricerca, soprattutto nel campo della bio-medicina, e sui problemi della brevettabilità e della commercializzazione esclusiva dei risultati della ricerca. Il comma di cui si propone l'introduzione stabilisce un principio di contemperamento tra il diritto di ognuno di beneficiare dei risultati della ricerca, in specie nel campo bio-medico, ed il giusto riconoscimento economico dei costi della ricerca stessa.

All'art.15, comma 1, non appare accettabile che si dica che, per guadagnarsi da vivere ciascuno ha "il diritto di esercitare una professione" ma non di lavorare. Occorre aggiungere la menzione del diritto al lavoro. Si propone di sostituire il primo comma con il seguente:

"1. Ogni individuo ha il diritto di realizzare le sue capacità personali con un lavoro liberamente scelto o accettato".

La diversa formulazione del comma fa, infatti, riferimento alla realizzazione personale dell'individuo e non al solo elemento economico del guadagno per vivere, ma anche al lavoro nel suo significato più generale, comprendente ogni tipo di attività, economica, culturale e artistica, svolta in condizione di indipendenza o autonomia.

All'articolo 16 si propone di aggiungere, in fine, le seguenti parole:

"nel rispetto del principio di uno sviluppo economico e sociale equilibrato e sostenibile".

L'affermazione della libera imprenditorialità deve essere qui contemperata con il concetto di sviluppo equilibrato e sostenibile, secondo l'indirizzo fondamentale del modello sociale europeo. Si ricorda a tal riguardo che in nessuna delle Costituzioni europee il diritto di impresa è affermato in maniera assoluta e incondizionata. Esso è sempre contemperato con principi di sostenibilità sociale ed ecologica e di equilibrio economico.

Un elemento caratteristico di tutto il costituzionalismo del novecento, è stato, infatti, proprio quello di legare il riconoscimento dei diritti di libertà economica a finalità di ordine sociale. Se fosse mantenuta l'attuale formulazione dell'articolo 16 (come quella del successivo articolo 17), la norma in questione sarebbe percepita come un arretramento rispetto a tradizioni costituzionali comuni.

Si suggerisce quindi il seguente testo dell'articolo 16:

" è riconosciuta la libertà di impresa che si esercita nel rispetto dei diritti fondamentali e dei principi enunciati nella presente Carta".

All'articolo 17 si propone di sostituire il terzo periodo del primo comma con il seguente:

"L'esercizio del diritto di proprietà può essere limitato dalla legge nell'interesse generale e per assicurarne la funzione sociale".

L'espressione "limitato dalla legge", in luogo di quella "regolamentato", offre una migliore garanzia del diritto di proprietà, perché esclude limitazioni che provengano da atti non aventi forza di legge.

Inoltre, il riferimento alla "funzione sociale" rafforza il riferimento all' "interesse generale", che sarebbe altrimenti troppo debole, ed è in linea con la tradizione del costituzionalismo del novecento, come si è detto sopra. Non basterebbe, a tal fine, la clausola orizzontale dell'art. 50, perché essa postula appunto l'ordinaria assolutezza dei diritti garantiti, mentre nel caso qui discusso (ed in quello di cui al precedente articolo 16) si tratta proprio di stabilire che il riconoscimento di questi particolari diritti è ormai collegato strutturalmente con finalità di interesse generale.

All'art.21, Si suggerisce l'aggiunta del seguente comma:

"3. L'unione adotta le politiche opportune per eliminare le disparità di fatto e per promuovere le condizioni che rendono effettiva l'uguaglianza".

L'enunciazione meramente formale e negativa del principio di uguaglianza appare, infatti, insufficiente. E' dunque, necessario rafforzarla vincolando l'Unione europea ad adottare politiche attive per rimuovere le condizioni che impediscono di fatto la parità delle opportunità e il riconoscimento di effettiva pari dignità a tutti gli individui.

All'art.23, Appare opportuno aggiungere - all'inizio dell'articolo ovvero dopo il primo comma - il seguente comma:

364

"Le bambine e i bambini devono essere protetti contro ogni minaccia alla loro maturazione intellettuale e alla loro integrità psicologica e sessuale".

Il nuovo comma si fa carico delle minacce che incombono sui bambini (anche attraverso tecnologie di informazione) e vincola il potere pubblico ad un obbligo di protezione nei loro confronti. Si tratta di un'esigenza assai sentita dall'opinione pubblica europea.

Si insiste sull'opportunità dell'inserimento di un nuovo articolo 23-bis, relativo ai diritti degli anziani, formulato come segue:

"Articolo 23-bis. Diritti degli anziani.

Ogni individuo anziano ha diritto ad un'esistenza autonoma e dignitosa e a partecipare pienamente alla vita politica, sociale e culturale".

L'andamento demografico nei paesi dell'Unione europea impone, infatti, di considerare specificamente la sfera dei diritti delle persone anziane. La norma proposta richiama, d'altronde, l'articolo 23 della Carta sociale europea.

All'art.26, si suggerisce la seguente modifica:

dopo le parole: "concludere contratti collettivi", inserire le parole: "anche a livello dell'Unione", e dopo le parole: "azioni collettive", aggiungere le parole: "compreso lo sciopero".

Il riconoscimento nella Carta del diritto di negoziazione collettiva acquista significato, infatti, solo se accompagnato dalla specificazione del possibile ambito europeo della contrattazione. La mancata menzione del diritto di sciopero, riconosciuto dalla Carta sociale europea e da un gran numero di Convenzioni dell'OIL, oltre che dalle tradizioni costituzionali comuni dei Paesi membri, rischia, invece, di essere intesa come una restrizione dei diritti vigenti.

All'art.29, si propongono le seguenti modifiche:

Al primo comma, aggiungere, in fine, le parole: "e ad una giusta retribuzione proporzionata alla qualità e quantità del lavoro prestato".

Al secondo comma, aggiungere, in fine, le parole: "e non può rinunziarvi".

Tra le condizioni di lavoro "giuste ed eque" deve necessariamente inserirsi il diritto ad una retribuzione giusta e proporzionata alla prestazione. L'irrinunciabilità alle ferie risponde, invece, ad una tipica necessità di protezione della parte più debole del rapporto di lavoro.

Sorprende, nella formulazione di alcuni diritti sociali, l'uso di espressioni attenuate o indirette, che paiono affievolire il riconoscimento di alcuni diritti rispetto ad altri. Così, mentre all'art.31 si dice che "è garantita la protezione della famiglia" (pur trattandosi evidentemente di un diritto che richiede per la sua effettività interventi legislativi e amministrativi a molteplici livelli nell'ambito degli Stati membri e non solo dell'Unione), all'art.32, concernente la sicurezza e l'assistenza sociale, si usa una formula generica e non impegnativa: non solo questi diritti non sono “garantiti”, ma l’Unione si limita a riconoscere e rispettare l’esistente “secondo le modalità stabilite dal diritto comunitario e le legislazioni e prassi nazionali”, formula questa più volte ripetuta soltanto per alcuni diritti, indipendentemente dal fatto che trovino regolamentazione primaria nella legislazione nazionale o in quella comunitaria, e pur trattandosi di una formula superflua in presenza della clausola generale dell’art.49.

All’art.34 si giunge poi ad una formulazione inaccettabile, che non fa cenno ad alcun diritto, neppure nella formula attenuata del riconoscimento da parte dell’Unione di un diritto sancito da legislazioni nazionali, ma al semplice “rispetto dell’accesso ai servizi d’interesse generale quale previsto dalle legislazioni e prassi nazionali, ai sensi delle disposizioni del Trattato...”. Si tratta di una formula tanto sovrabbondante quanto inutile, che dovrà essere adeguata al tenore degli altri articoli.

Si propone di sostituire il testo dell’articolo 34 con il seguente:

"Al fine di promuovere la coesione sociale e territoriale l'Unione riconosce e rispetta il diritto di ogni individuo all'accesso a servizi di interesse generale che assicurino le prestazioni necessarie a garantire la qualità della vita e le possibilità di lavoro. Le prestazioni di servizi di interesse generale si basano sui principi di uguaglianza di accesso, di universalità, di continuità, di trasparenza".

E' opportuno che il diritto ad usufruire di servizi di interesse generale sia inquadrato in principi-guida che, salve le differenziazioni nazionali, ne garantiscano l'effettività, anche in funzione della promozione della coesione sociale e territoriale dell'Unione, prevista dall'articolo 16 del Trattato CE (se venisse menzionata la finalità di garantire le possibilità di lavoro potrebbe, inoltre, essere qui assorbito l'articolo 27 relativo ai servizi di collocamento).

All’art.36, si propone l’aggiunta del seguente comma:

"I consumatori hanno diritto ad una informazione completa sulla qualità dei beni e dei servizi e ad una pubblicità non ingannevole che risponda ai criteri di trasparenza e veridicità".

La sensibilità popolare europea si è fatta particolarmente acuta riguardo ai criteri di fabbricazione e manipolazione di prodotti alimentari e di beni di consumo personale. E' necessario che una Unione sempre più vicina ai bisogni della gente si faccia carico nelle sue politiche di queste diffuse preoccupazioni.

All’articolo 37, che apre l’enunciazione dei diritti riservati ai cittadini europei, andrebbe utilmente premesso un articolo del seguente tenore:

"Articolo 36-bis. Diritto alla cittadinanza.

Ogni individuo ha diritto ad una cittadinanza. Nessuno può essere arbitrariamente privato della sua cittadinanza, né del diritto di mutare cittadinanza".

Si tratta di un diritto universale, che richiama l'articolo 15 della Dichiarazione universale di diritti dell'uomo, e appare importante come premessa di ogni altra specificazione dei diritti di cittadinanza.

All'art.37 si propone di premettere il seguente nuovo comma, che assorbirebbe il secondo comma previsto nel progetto del Presidium:

"1. I cittadini dell'Unione hanno il diritto di partecipare all'esercizio del potere pubblico a livello dell'Unione per il tramite di un'assemblea rappresentativa eletta a suffragio universale diretto, libero e segreto".

Il principio di democrazia su cui, com'è detto nel Preambolo, si basa l'Unione europea, deve trovare nell'affermazione del "diritto al Parlamento", contenuto in questo nuovo comma, la concretizzazione di democrazia partecipativa e parlamentare. La formulazione è tratta dalla giurisprudenza della Corte di giustizia (e, in particolare, dalle sentenze Roquette e Maizena).

Il secondo comma nella formulazione del Presidium, è la specificazione di questo "diritto al Parlamento", che ne costituisce pertanto la premessa da esplicitare necessariamente.

All'art.47, si propone di aggiungere, alla fine del terzo comma, le seguenti parole:

"e devono tendere alla rieducazione del condannato".

E' infatti un principio di civiltà giuridica, recepito in varie Costituzioni e ordinamenti europei, che l'espiazione della pena debba accompagnarsi a misure dirette a recuperare e rieducare la personalità del condannato.

All'art.49, Si propone di riformulare il primo comma come segue:

"1. Le istituzioni e gli organi dell'Unione, come pure gli Stati membri quando attuano il diritto dell'Unione, rispettano i diritti fondamentali e osservano i principi enunciati nella presente Carta e ne promuovono l'applicazione nel rispetto del principio di sussidiarietà".

Molti dei diritti fondamentali enunciati nella Carta trovano, infatti, attuazione principalmente nell'ambito nazionale, costituendo, per il diritto dell'Unione, un quadro di riferimento, di orientamento e di limitazione della regolamentazione comunitaria. Affermare che le disposizioni della Carta si applicano agli Stati membri "esclusivamente" nell'attuazione del diritto dell'Unione può creare incomprensioni, dato che al comma 2 dell'articolo 49 già si ribadisce che la Carta non modifica alcuna competenza istituzionale.

All' art.50, si suggerisce di riformulare il terzo comma come segue:

"3. I diritti e le libertà riconosciuti dalla presente Carta, che siano già disciplinati dalla Convenzione Europea di salvaguardia dei diritti dell'uomo e delle libertà fondamentali, possono subire le medesime restrizioni previste dalla Convenzione: non possono subire restrizioni maggiori di quelle, ma possono godere della protezione maggiore e più estesa prevista dalla presente Carta".

Nel terzo comma del testo proposto dal Presidium, l'uso del termine "simili", riferito al significato ed alla portata dei diritti fondamentali, può essere fonte di confusione. Con il nuovo testo del comma, si intende proporre una formulazione più chiara e semplice di quella del Presidium, che metta in luce due dati essenziali: e cioè che, con riferimento ai diritti della Convenzione, non vi possono essere restrizioni maggiori di quelle previste dalla Convenzione stessa; ma che, al contempo, la Carta può garantire ad essi una protezione maggiore o più estesa.

Infine, si insiste affinché nel capo relativo alla dignità (ovvero in quello relativo alla libertà) siano aggiunti due articoli, già proposti in sede di emendamenti, il cui inserimento è sollecitato dai movimenti femminili, riferiti al diritto all'autodeterminazione e al diritto alla libertà sessuale. Si tratta di articoli che rispecchiano il testo di atti dell'Onu (si veda in particolare il par.96 della Dichiarazione di Pechino) sottoscritti da tutti i Paesi membri, idonei a qualificare le libertà degli europei rispetto a mondi vicini, che vedono l'oppressione quotidiana delle donne e la repressione di libertà sessuali presso di noi pienamente riconosciute. Se ne trascrivono i testi:

"Art.5 bis. Diritto all'autodeterminazione.

Ogni individuo ha il diritto di prendere liberamente le decisioni che riguardano la sua vita e la sua persona, al riparo da ogni forma di coercizione, discriminazione o violenza e con il pieno rispetto dell'eguaglianza tra i generi".

"Art.5 ter. Diritto alla libertà sessuale.

Ogni individuo ha diritto di decidere liberamente per quanto riguarda la sua sessualità, che comprende il diritto alla salute sessuale e riproduttiva garantito contro ogni forma di coercizione, violenza e discriminazione tra donne e uomini".

Quanto alla forma del progetto, cioè agli aspetti linguistici e redazionali, mi riservo qualche osservazione sulla versione italiana quando si disporrà del testo definitivo.

Con i sensi della mia più alta considerazione

PREÁMBULO

En general, el “Preámbulo” adolece de una redacción pesada. Yo estoy de acuerdo en situar a “los pueblos europeos” como los sujetos principales de la creación de una unión, pero tal como está redactado el párrafo num.1 “la unión” es un concepto genérico mientras que en el párrafo 2 la “Unión”, con mayúscula, ya designa una estructura política consolidada. Creo, por consiguiente, que en el párrafo 1 habría que añadir, después de “..valores comunes.”, una nueva frase del tenor siguiente: “La Unión Europea es la expresión de esta voluntad”. Así tendría pleno sentido que el párrafo 2 empezase con la expresión de “La Unión.....”, etc.

El párrafo 5 debe estructurarse de otra forma y, a la vez, debería introducirse en él un concepto que no figura en la versión actual, como es el derecho internacional. Propongo, pues, la redacción siguiente :” Con el respeto de las competencias y las tareas de la Comunidad y de la Unión, así como del principio de subsidiariedad, la presente Carta reafirma los derechos que resultan especialmente de las tradiciones constitucionales comunes de los Estados miembros y del derecho internacional, del Tratado de la Unión Europea, etc.etc.”

El párrafo 6 se debe redactar de manera más sencilla. Propongo el siguiente texto: “ El disfrute de estos derechos implica responsabilidades y deberes, tanto en lo que concierne a toda la comunidad humana como a las generaciones futuras”

Capítulo I : DIGNIDAD

Creo que el artículo 2, sobre el derecho a la vida, está bien redactado pero quizá se podría enfatizar más su contenido introduciendo algunos conceptos generales como el siguiente: “El derecho a la vida será protegido por la ley, la pena de muerte será abolida para siempre y nadie podrá ser condenado a ella ni ejecutado”.

Nada que objetar al artículo 3, pero creo que el punto primero del párrafo 2 se podría redactar mejor, diciendo : “-- consentimiento libre e informado de la persona concernida”

En cuanto al artículo 4 no entiendo porque se ha copiado el texto del artículo 5 de la Declaración Universal de los Derechos Humanos de 1948 pero, a la vez, se ha suprimido la palabra "cruels". Creo que habría que reproducir todo el texto del citado artículo 5 y decir, por consiguiente : "Nadie prodrá ser sometido a tortura ni a tratos cruels, inhumanos o degradantes"

El párrafo 2 del artículo 5 plantea un problema importante en su párrafo 2 porque, como prevé el art. 4, 3. del Convenio Europeo de Derechos Humanos, hay trabajos obligatorios que no se consideran forzados, como los trabajos exigidos a los detenidos, los servicios de carácter militar, los servicios en casos de crisis o catástrofes y los trabajos que forman parte de las obligaciones cívicas. Estas excepciones deberían introducirse en el párrafo 2 o en un nuevo párrafo del art. 5.

Capítulo II. LIBERTADES.

Quizá se podría ampliar el artículo 6 con alguna referencia a aspectos concretos del concepto de "seguridad", sobre todo en lo que se refiere al derecho a ser informado de los derechos de la persona, en relación a las detenciones, a las garantías judiciales y a los derechos de los menores.

En el artículo 7 hay que introducir el concepto de que sólo se puede entrar en un domicilio con autorización judicial o con consentimiento del titular, salvo en caso de flagrante delito. También hay que añadir que el secreto de las comunicaciones puede ser anulado por una resolución judicial. Y no estaría de más añadir el concepto de limitación del uso de la informática, todo ello en los términos del art. 18 de la Constitución Española, que en este punto se adelantó a muchas otras.

En el artículo 8 la redacción se presta a algunas confusiones, por lo menos en las versiones española y francesa . Por ejemplo, la frase "Estos datos se tratarán de modo leal..." (versión española) y "doivent être traités loyalement(versión francesa) carecen de rigor jurídico. Por consiguiente, propongo la siguiente redacción : "Estos datos se tratarán con el máximo respeto y con plena seguridad para fines legalmente determinados y siempre con el consentimiento de la persona afectada o en los términos específicos previstos por la ley. Toda persona tiene derecho a acceder a los datos que la conciernan y a exigir su rectificación cuando considere que no se ajustan a la verdad. El respeto y el control de estas normas corresponderán a una autoridad independiente".

Respecto al artículo 9, creo que hay que explicitar mejor su auténtico contenido. A mi entender, lo que se garantiza no es un derecho sino dos: por un lado, el derecho a contraer matrimonio y, por otro lado, el derecho a fundar o crear una familia, independientemente de que se haya contraído matrimonio o no, como en el caso de la pareja de hecho. La remisión genérica a las “.. leyes nacionales que rijan su ejercicio..” no añade nada nuevo o, más exactamente, se supedita a lo que digan ellas. Por esto creo que este artículo debería ser más contundente y propongo la siguiente redacción: “ El derecho a contraer matrimonio y el derecho a fundar una familia, independientemente de que se haya contraído matrimonio o no, serán garantizados por las leyes nacionales”.

Considero que en el artículo 10 hay que introducir el concepto de objeción de conciencia porque no es suficiente reconocer la libertad de conciencia en general: una cosa es la libertad personal y otra la expresión legal de esta libertad en el ejercicio de otros derechos y deberes, como el del servicio militar.

Creo también que el concepto de “.. cambiar de religión o de convicciones” no resuelve el problema general de estas libertades y que, por consiguiente, habría que introducir otro concepto, como es el del derecho a no tener creencias religiosas ni a practicar ninguna religión. Del mismo modo hay que introducir el concepto de que nadie está obligado a declarar sobre sus propias creencias.

El artículo 11 plantea un serio problema, como es el de los límites de la libertad de expresión y de información. El art. 10, 2 del Convenio Europeo de Derechos Humanos establece una serie de límites muy importantes para que la libertad de expresión no perjudique otros valores fundamentales de la sociedad democrática. Estos límites son reconocidos, a su vez, por algunos textos constitucionales, como el art. 20, 4. de la Constitución Española. Por esto considero que debe introducirse un apartado segundo en este artículo 11 que recoja los límites generales enunciados en estos textos.

Algo parecido ocurre en el artículo 12 sobre la libertad de reunión y de asociación. El artículo 11 del Convenio Europeo de Derechos Humanos reconoce, en su apartado 2, la posibilidad y hasta la necesidad de algunas restricciones, sobre todo en lo que se refiere a la seguridad nacional, la seguridad pública, la defensa del orden, la prevención de la criminalidad, la protección de la sanidad o de la moral o la protección de los derechos y de las libertades de las personas y, de manera muy concreta, prevé la posibilidad de limitación de estos derechos a los miembros de las fuerzas armadas, la policía o la administración del Estado. En los mismos términos se expresa el artículo 28, 1 de la Constitución Española.

Por otro lado, no entiendo bien el sentido del apartado 2 de dicho artículo 12. El texto de este apartado parece más una afirmación optimista de carácter general que el reconocimiento de un derecho o de una libertad. Sin duda los partidos políticos a escala europea contribuyen a expresar la voluntad política de los ciudadanos europeos , pero no son lo mismo los partidos democráticos que los antidemocráticos. Por lo demás, también contribuyen a expresar esta voluntad política general los partidos políticos democráticos de ámbito estatal, nacional o regional. Creo,por consiguiente, que este apartado 2 del artículo 12 tiene que ser modificado o,incluso, eliminado .

En el apartado 1 del artículo 15 propongo que se suprima el párrafo inicial "Para ganarse la vida ...". Es totalmente superfluo.

Entre los artículos 16 y 17 hay diferencias en los tiempos verbales que no se comprenden, Así,por ejemplo, en el artículo 16 se dice que "Se reconoce la libertad de empresa ", o sea, en tiempo verbal presente, mientras que en el apartado 2 del artículo 17 se dice que "Se protegerá la propiedad intelectual...", en tiempo de futuro. Mejor sería utilizar en los dos casos una misma fórmula, como por ejemplo :"Se reconoce y protege ..." la libertad de empresa y la propiedad intelectual.

Capítulo III. IGUALDAD

En el apartado 1 del artículo 22 el concepto de "Debe garantizarse....(versión española) o " .. doit être assurée.(versión francesa) no se corresponden con el sentido profundo del propio artículo ni , en general, con el contenido y la razón de ser de la Carta. Decir que que la igualdad entre hombres y mujeres "debe garantizarse" es abandonar la lógica jurídica de la Carta y convertirla en una especie de declaración de buenas intenciones. Propongo,por consiguiente, una nueva redacción : "La igualdad de oportunidades y de trato entre hombres y mujeres en materia de empleo y de trabajo, incluida la igualdad de retribución por un mismo trabajo o por un trabajo de igual valor, es un principio fundamental que orientará la política económica y social de la Unión".

Capítulo IV. SOLIDARIDAD

El artículo 25 debe redactarse de forma que el concepto de garantía no se convierta en un principio inconcreto. Propongo, pues, la siguiente redacción: “ Los trabajadores y sus representantes tendrán garantizadas, con anticipación suficiente, la información y las consultas necesarias sobre los asuntos que les conciernan en el seno de la empresa, de conformidad con el derecho comunitario y la legislación y las prácticas nacionales”

En el artículo 32 , apartados 1 y 3, se dice que la Unión reconoce y respeta unas determinadas prestaciones de la seguridad social y los servicios sociales y una ayuda a la vivienda ,pero todo ello condicionado por “las modalidades establecidas por el derecho comunitario y las legislaciones y las prácticas nacionales”. Tratándose, como se trata, de una cuestión esencial ,en el que la Unión debe formular estos derechos como otros tantos principios rectores de la presente Carta, no es serio que todo se reconduzca a un derecho comunitario ya existente y a unas legislaciones y unas prácticas nacionales igualmente existentes. Con este sistema, el artículo 32 dejar de ser un principio rector para convertirse en un simple recordatorio de derechos y legislaciones comunitarias y nacionales, que es tanto como transformar la presente Carta de Derechos Fundamentales en un documento secundario. Propongo, por consiguiente, suprimir las frases finales de los apartados 1 y 3 , “.. según las modalidades establecidas por el derecho comunitario y las legislaciones y prácticas nacionales”

El artículo 33 repite el planteamiento del artículo anterior. Propongo, pues, suprimir la frase final “.. en las condiciones establecidas por las legislaciones y prácticas nacionales”.

Capítulo V. CIUDADANÍA

En diversos artículos de este capítulo aparece el concepto de “Todo ciudadano”, que engloba por igual al hombre y a la mujer. Considero que en estos casos – que afectan a la mayoría de los artículos del capítulo – el término “todo ciudadano” debería ser substituído por el de “ Los ciudadanos y las ciudadanas de la Unión... tienen derecho”. Tal es el caso de los artículos 37, 1; 38 ; 40; 41; 42; 43 y 44.0

Creo que hay que introducir en este capítulo una cláusula de futuro sobre el derecho de los ciudadanos y las ciudadanas de la Unión a ser electores y elegibles en las elecciones a los Parlamentos de los países miembros. Propongo, pues, un nuevo artículo, 38 bis ,con el siguiente contenido:

“En la medida en que la Unión fortalezca su unidad y su solidaridad todos los ciudadanos y las ciudadanas de la misma accederán al derecho de ser electores y elegibles en las elecciones parlamentarias , generales y regionales, del Estado miembro en que residan, en las mismas condiciones que los nacionales de dicho Estado”

Capítulo VI. JUSTICIA

Considero que en el artículo 48 hay que introducir una referencia al concepto de jurisdicción única. Por consiguiente, propongo la siguiente redacción del texto: “ Nadie podrá ser juzgado o condenado penalmente a causa de una infracción de la cual ya haya sido absuelto o condenado por una misma jurisdicción mediante sentencia penal firme conforme a la ley”.

Capítulo VII, DISPOSICIONES GENERALES

El artículo 50 plantea varios problemas. El primero concierne al apartado 1 cuando prevé la posibilidad de que una autoridad legislativa competente pueda limitar el ejercicio de los derechos y libertades reconocidos por la Carta. Ciertamente que estas limitaciones sólo serán factibles si son necesarias y responden a objetivos de interés general o a la protección de los derechos y libertades, pero éstos son conceptos genéricos que cualquier autoridad legislativa, a nivel de la Unión o de cada Estado miembro, puede interpretar a su manera, sin que este artículo 50 prevea ninguna limitación a la posible acción de una "autoridad legislativa". Incluso es posible que se puedan establecer limitaciones en artículos de la Carta que no las prevén expresamente. Y, por encima de todo, no está claro cuál es la autoridad superior que puede hacer respetar el principio de proporcionalidad e impedir la acción arbitraria de la genérica "autoridad legislativa competente". Por consiguiente propongo:

- A. Que se suprima el apartado 1 del artículo 50.
- B. En caso de no suprimirse, que se establezcan y se enumeren -- en el propio artículo o en forma de cláusula final -- el número y el contenido de las posibles limitaciones que puedan preverse en los derechos de configuración más compleja.

En cuanto al apartado 3 de este mismo artículo 50 propongo que en la frase "... su sentido y alcance serán similares a los que les confiere dicho Convenio..." las palabras "...serán similares..." se substituyan por "no serán inferiores". Con ello, creo que se puede suprimir la frase final de dicho apartado, "... a menos que la Carta asegure una protección más elevada o más amplia", que puede entrar en contradicción con el artículo 51.

PROPUESTAS DE MODIFICACIÓN DEL TEXTO DE LA VERSIÓN ESPAÑOLA

En la versión española del párrafo 2 del Preámbulo habría que decir “..la dignidad”, “la libertad, “la igualdad”, “la solidaridad” y substituir el verbo “reposa” por “se basa”.

En el párrafo 3 del Preámbulo habría que substituir la frase “.. el fomento de tales valores..” por “el fomento de estos valores...” y la frase final del párrafo, que empieza ,tras un punto y coma, con el verbo “..vela..” debería decir “... y asegura, un desarrollo equilibrado y sostenible mediante la libre circulación de personas, bienes, capitales y servicios”.

En el párrafo 4 habría que substituir la palabra inicial “mediante” por “con” y reemplazar las palabras “.. tiene la intención..” por “quiere”.

Remitiéndome siempre al texto de la versión española, creo que el artículo 1 sobre la dignidad de la persona debe redactarse al revés y debe decir : “La dignidad de la persona será respetada y protegida”

En el artículo 23 se plantea un problema de redacción. Si en la versión francesa se puede utilizar el término “enfants” y en la inglesa el término “children” para referirse a los niños y a las niñas, en español el término “niño” supone una discriminación de las niñas. Propongo,por consiguiente que en el enunciado del artículo se substituya la actual redacción – “Protección de los niños” – por el de “Protección de los menores”. Propongo también que en el apartado 1 del artículo 23 (versión española) se haga una leve modificación del primer párrafo: “Los menores tienen derecho a la protección y a los cuidados necesarios para su bienestar” y, en general, que en el conjunto del artículo la palabra “niño” o “niños” se substituya por la de “menores”.

La versión española del artículo 27 se presta a una cierta confusión, con el concepto de “servicio de empleo”. Propongo,pues, la siguiente redacción:” Toda persona tiene derecho a acceder a un servicio de colocación y empleo”.

La versión española del apartado 1 del artículo 29 también debe redactarse de otra manera . Sugiero la siguiente redacción : “Todo trabajador tiene derecho a trabajar en condiciones sanas, seguras y dignas”.

El apartado 2 del artículo 30 (versión española) debe redactarse de la siguiente forma: “Los jóvenes admitidos a trabajar deben disponer de condiciones de trabajo adaptadas a su edad y estar protegidos contra la explotación económica o contra cualquier otro trabajo perjudicial para su seguridad, su salud, su desarrollo físico, mental, moral o social o que ponga en peligro su educación”

En la frase final del apartado 3 del artículo 50 , debe suprimirse la palabra “no”. Si esta frase final se mantiene su redacción debe ser la siguiente: .. a menos que la presente Carta garantice una protección más elevada o más amplia”.

Comments on Convent 45 by prof. Daniel Tarschys, Sweden

Dear Mr. Braibant,

In accordance with the procedure proposed by the Presidium I would like to share with you my observations on the first complete version of the Charter as presented in Convent 45.

Reflected in my comments are some early reactions by experts in various Swedish ministries and organisations. Since the valuable explanations contained in Convent 46 were not yet available in either Swedish or English, some of these experts have not been able to complete their examination of Convent 45. Further comments may therefore be added at a later stage.

In a subsequent letter to Mr. Jacqué I will make some suggestions on the Swedish translation of the text.

General comments

The Presidium and Secretariat have faced a great many tough choices and should be given due recognition for their work. Several articles now read much better than they did in previous drafts. This being said, significant changes are still needed before the text can be regarded as acceptable.

The most serious flaw in the draft Charter is still that it promises very much in Articles 1-48 and then takes back a substantial part of these pledges through the provisions in Articles 49-50. We must improve the document so as to make it completely honest and avoid raising irredeemable expectations.

A second very important problem is the risk that the Charter, instead of promoting the cause of fundamental rights, might actually damage this important objective by introducing legal uncertainty where there is none today. At stake here are the significant acquis which have been attained over several decades through the ECHR, the Strasbourg caselaw, the EC and EU Treaties and secondary legislation as well as the Luxembourg jurisprudence.

1. The first-mentioned effect is brought about particularly through the framework established by the following five provisions:

- First we have the preambular paragraph 7 which claims that the rights and freedoms contained in the Charter are "guaranteed" - but without disclosing just how they are guaranteed, to what extent the various rights are justiciable, and which particular institutions can be held responsible for their enforcement or implementation.
- No light is shed on such questions until the declaration in art. 49:1 that the provisions in the Charter are addressed only to the institutions and bodies of the Union and to the member states exclusively when they implement Community law.
- Since no new tasks or additional competence are conferred upon the Union through the Charter (art. 49:2), this means that most public policies, most categories of government service provision and hence also most encounters between citizens and public authorities fall outside the area covered by the Charter. Some articles become virtually void of substance since what they promise are services neither provided by the European Union (e.g., compulsory basic education, social assistance) nor established through Community legislation. The fact that the Community is in many cases authorised to support, supplement or stimulate national policy does not place the national legislation in such fields within the sphere of art. 49:1.
- Then follow two very important restrictions on the rights recognised in the Charter. First, it is stated (art. 50:1) that limitations on the exercise of the rights and freedoms inscribed into the Charter may be imposed by the "competent legislative authority". It is not clear whether this expression refers to national institutions, union institutions, or both. Many articles obviously refer to national legislation, but the above-mentioned art. 49:1 limits the applicability of the Charter to the sphere of Community law, and such legislation can hardly be modified unilaterally by national parliaments. This riddle remains unsolved.

- A second important restriction is introduced in art. 50:2 which proclaims that the provisions of the Charter are subject to all conditions and exceptions contained in the Treaties. If art. 50:3 makes the ECHR a "floor" for the rights recognised in the Charter, art. 50:2 produces an opposite effect by making the Treaties a "ceiling" for these rights. Promises which at first glance seem bold and innovative (e.g., art. 40 on access to union documents) are effectively neutralised through this rule, which implies that in the area covered by the Treaties, no new ground is broken by the Charter.

To produce a credible Charter, it is imperative to reconsider this framework. If art. 49 would be used as a criterion for selection of rights to be included in the Charter, a significant number of articles would have to be either dropped or, alternatively, reformulated so as to indicate more clearly that the purpose of their inclusion was not to grant these rights but to oblige EU institutions to support or at least not impede their implementation.

Such a Charter defining only the "EU added value" in fundamental rights protection would be relatively meagre and certainly disappointing to many of those who have followed the work of the Convention. A more attractive solution would be to maintain the ambition of drafting a comprehensive list of fundamental rights and principles recognised by both the EU and the member states, combined with an honest and truthful piece of "consumer information" in the Preamble explaining what readers are to expect.

My proposal is to achieve this through a new version of the preambular paragraph 7, which in its present form is categorically and irremediably unacceptable – particularly through its claim of "guarantees". My alternative would read:

The rights and principles recognised in this Charter shall be respected and promoted by the Union, subject to the restrictions contained in articles 49-52.

2. As for the second problem, the main issue is still the divergence in several articles between the Charter and the ECHR. The meaning of various concepts in the European Convention have been considered by the Court and Commission over several decades. Introducing legal uncertainty and risking new rifts in Europe between EU members and non-members could introduce quite unnecessary obstacles to the defence of human rights. Following suggestions by i.a. Mr. Olsen and Mr. Korthals Altes, we should therefore amend art. 50 so that it is unambiguously clear that the provision in the Charter and the Convention do not have a similar but the same meaning and scope. The Swedish version already satisfies this requirement, but neither the French nor the English version.

A further necessity is to delete the final line of art. 50.3 which in its present form can have quite unintended consequences. Two examples:

- Art. 2:2 of the ECHR lists a number of cases in which every human being's "right to life" shall not be considered to have been violated. Art. 2 of Convent 45, in contrast, proclaims "the right to life" without any qualifications. Clearly, the Charter therefore offers a higher level of protection, which would imply that the particular exceptions listed in the European Convention would not be permissible under the Charter.

- In art. 10 of the ECHR there is a provision for the possible licensing of television and radio stations which is not reproduced in art. 11 of Convent 45. Such licensing would no longer be possible (within the EU legal system) since art. 50:3 of the Charter promises a higher level of protection in case of divergence between the two texts. This would run counter to the legislation of member states and, for Sweden, even come into conflict with the Constitution. It would also seem to contradict Council Directive 89/552/EC of 3 October 1989 which also allows restrictions.

Another problem much discussed during the meetings of the Convention is that of brevity vs. comprehensiveness.

Either of these solutions has its obvious advantages and disadvantages. Crisp and succinct articles are easier to read and more forceful. Longer provisions with more details and some principal exceptions spelled out are more correct and informative.

On balance, I support the decision of the Presidium to opt for brevity. This is more fitting for a political declaration aimed at the general public.

382

Readers who want to learn about the details of the legally binding provisions will at any rate have to consult other texts such as the EHCR, the Treaties, secondary Community legislation, the jurisprudence of the Courts etc., and will be well advised in this respect by the explanations provided (presently Convent 46). It is in this way that the Charter will serve as a guide to law, not a source of law.

Convent 45, however, is not consistent in following the brevity line. After some short and snappy articles such as 4, 5, 6, and 7, the reader suddenly plunges into the much more detailed art. 8. There seems to be a need for harmonisation which would be best achieved by trimming some articles with excessive information. Some articles also become clumsy by clinging too closely the wording used in the Treaties. This is not necessary, given the blanket provision in art. 50:2.

Finally, I note with satisfaction that the Swedish version is now gender neutral and hope that this principle will be observed in the other languages, too.

Comments on the Preamble and Specific Articles

The Preamble has been improved but is still in need of substantial revision:

Paragraph 2. Instead of repeating my suggestions of 19 July, I would on further reflection like to align myself with those who have suggested a wording inspired by art. 6:1 in the TEU. The treaty-defined fundamental principles of the Union should be stable and not suddenly changed by the Convention. These principles should therefore be confirmed in a first sentence of this paragraph. A second sentence could then refer to such important objectives as solidarity and equality between women and men.

Paragraph 3 still does not read very well. I reiterate my point that the objective cannot be so much to “develop” the common values as to pursue them and make them guide and inspire our action.

Paragraph 4 echoes the Cologne mandate but remains superfluous.

Paragraph 5. There have been several suggestions to make references to further instruments such as the UN Covenants and ILO Conventions. One objection is that this would make the catalogue even heavier than it already is. My proposal would be to add a mere three words: and international obligations, to be inserted between “constitutional traditions” and “common to the member states”. Such a formula would automatically refer only to instruments ratified by all members states.

Paragraph 7. As indicated above I am particularly concerned about this text which must be reformulated to define adequately the character and implications of the Charter and also reflect the restrictions contained and limitations permitted in the horizontal articles.

Article 1 - dignity of the person

The Swedish heading is satisfactory but “Human dignity” would seem to be a better heading in English.

Article 3 – right to integrity of the person

The concept of “mental integrity” remains a mystery to Swedish experts who cannot find it in either the Convention on Biomedicine and Human Rights or any other international instrument.

I also have problems with the second indent of paragraph 2, where the clause starting “in particular” seems to indicate that there are eugenic methods with a different purpose than the one indicated in the clause. Unless there is some good explanation to this query it seems better to end this sentence after the first four words.

Article 4 – prohibition of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment and punishment

In order not to set lower standards than those in existing international human rights instruments (art. 5 of the UN Universal Decl., art. 7 of the ICCPR as well as the title and preamble of the UN Convention against torture), we should insert the word "cruel" before "inhuman".

A minor adjustment should be made in Convent 46, where there is mention of the limitations “guaranteed” by the ECHR. These limitations are not guaranteed but permitted.

Article 7 - respect for private and family life

384

The scrapping of “correspondence” in favour of “communications” is of course intended to adapt the text to modern information technology, but this is not necessarily a change for the better. Electronic mail is also a form of correspondence whereas communications is a puzzling term in this context as it comprises many different forms of physical transportation.

Article 8 - protection of personal data

This text differs in style and detail from other articles. The most important provisions seem to be sentences 1 and 3 which should be presented as two separate paragraphs. The final sentence deals with an aspect not covered in other articles.

Article 11 - freedom of expression and information

In the general part I have already mentioned a serious problem with this text, i.e. the issue of television and radio licensing. Another one is paragraph 2 where the reference to pluralism and transparency is highly ambiguous. Are these objectives motives for guaranteeing the freedoms of media and information, or reasons for restrictions in such guarantees? If the latter, what kind of restrictions?

Article 12 – freedom of assembly and association

This text is not satisfactory. The final part of the first sentence seems to indicate that there is one area where the freedom of assembly and association is particularly important and another one, undefined, where it is less so. The second paragraph is normative in the Swedish version but descriptive in the French and English versions. Though undoubtedly true, this piece of information serves no particular purpose in the Charter.

Article 13 – freedom of research

Convent 46 rightly refers to Articles 1 and 50. It could also mention Article 3 which introduces some restrictions in the freedom of research.

Article 14 – right to education

In a previous version, the rights of the parents were to be “respected”. In the new draft they are to be “guaranteed”. I would propose a return to the former term, which corresponds to the wording of Protocol 1, art. 2, to the ECHR. Another problem with this article is that it gives complete precedence to the convictions of the parents over those of the child, which comes in conflict with Article 23. Accepting that it would be too complicated to add this aspect in Art. 14, I suggest instead a strongly worded cross-reference to Art. 23 in the explanation of Art. 14.

385

Article 15 – the right to choose an occupation

The heading of this article only reflects paragraph 1, which seems less important from an EU point of view than paragraph 2 and could well be deleted. Paragraph 3 is liable to misunderstanding in its present wording since the right of residence and right to work are not necessarily co-extensive.

Article 18 – the right to asylum

This text should be brought into conformity with the conclusions of the Tampere Council. I am not convinced of the need for a reference to the Treaty if the only motive for this is the argument advanced in Convent 46, which is that the Treaty obliges the Union to respect the Geneva Convention.

Article 20 – equality before the law

I suggest the deletion of the words "men or women" as redundant. They might also seem to exclude children which could not be the intention.

Article 21 – equality and non-discrimination

As I have explained at length in my comment to Convent 28, this article presents very serious difficulties. For an efficient combat against discrimination there is a need for more precise and targeted provisions, as evident from the discussions that have been conducted over several years both in the Council of Europe and in various institutions of the Union. Convent 46 claims that the provision is inspired by Art. 13 of the TEC, but the latter has no direct effect and can rather be seen as an agenda for action. With regard to ethnic discrimination, for instance, the proposed wording goes much further than the Commission's draft directive. The moot question of Drittwirkung is dealt with neither in the Article nor in the explanation.

Article 22 – equality between men and women

386

I propose the insertion of the word "education" before "employment and work" to widen the scope of the provision.

Article 23 – protection of children

The new version appears to be a mixture of articles 3 and 12 of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) but with particular emphasis on the need for protection. This is a step backwards since the notion of the child as an active subject with its own rights has been toned down.

I would recommend that the title is changed to read: the rights of the child.

Furthermore, I would reiterate my previous proposal concerning the wording of this article: "In all actions concerning children the best interestes of the child shall be a primary consideration and the rights of the child shall be respected and ensured without discrimination of any kind. The child shall be assured the right to express its views freely in all matters affecting the child, the views of the child being given due weight." This formulation should present no major problems as all EU member states have ratified the CRC.

Article 25 – workers right to information and consultation within the undertaking

The text should be fully brought in line with art. 2.1 of the Additional Protocol to the European Social Charter (1988) and art. 21 of the Revised Social Charter and therefore read "workers or their organisations", instead of "workers and their organisations". Divergence between the two texts might lead to harmful legal uncertainty.

Article 26 - workers' right to negotiations and collective agreements

Same point as under art. 25; in this case the crucial or is found in art. 6.2 of the Social Charter. I also want to reiterate my earlier proposal to insert the words "or promote" after "defend" (art 26, second sentence).

Article 28 – protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

287

I suggest that art. 28 be brought in line with art. 24 of the revised European Social Charter of 1996 and therefore read: "All workers have the right to protection in cases of termination of their employment."

Article 30 – protection of young people at work

The UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) defines as child anybody under 18 years of age. This creates probably unintended consequences in the first sentence of Article 30, which should refer to “minors” rather than “children”.

The provision about “rules that may be more favourable to young people” is too ambiguous for the Charter since it is anybody’s guess what such rules may imply. In the second paragraph, the words “economic exploitation” are also ambiguous and can easily be deleted since they add nothing to the subsequent extensive definition of harmful work.

Article 34 – right of access to services of a general economic interest

This text reproduces a provision which is ambiguous already in art.16 TEC without adding any clarity about the delimitation of the services mentioned. The problem with these services, however defined, is hardly restrictions on the right of access but rather the cost barriers which may limit effective access. If the idea with this proposal is that certain types of monopoly or subsidy should be accepted, it would seem better to discuss such issues head-on with due regard also to the basic principles of free competition.

Article 39 – right to good administration

In this draft article, the nexus linking the first and second parts of the second indent of paragraph 2 is not sincere enough and the second part itself is not precise enough. What is intended here can hardly be anything else than a restriction on the right to access to documents. As such, it is too sweeping.

Article 45 - right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial

As explained in my comment on Convent 28, I have serious problems with this text. Art. 13 of the ECHR on which this provision is based is more precise as it is limited to the rights and freedoms recognised by the Convention. The present article is open-ended in all three paragraphs and may give the impression of creating opportunities for legal redress and legal aid which do not exist today.

Art. 6 in the ECHR and art. 14(3) of the ICCPR provide for legal aid only in criminal matters. Swedish national law is also more restrictive than the proposed provision. Careful considerations are required if the suggested wording is expected to impose new costs on either the Community or the member states.

For the above reasons I suggest that the draft article is reviewed and brought in line with the corresponding articles in the ECHR

Article 46 – presumption of innocence and right of defence

This text raises questions about the intended field of applicability, in the light of Art. 49:1.

Article 49 - field of application

I refer to my comments on this article in the general part.

Article 50 – scope of guaranteed rights

As indicated above, I propose the deletion of the final part of the last sentence of Article 50:3. Since so many provisions on permissible exceptions are not taken over from the ECHR, the level of protection will automatically seem to be much higher in the Charter (before the reader reaches the horizontal articles). With the present promise at the end of Art. 50 it would then appear as if the Charter derogated a number of rules in the ECHR which of course it has no authority to do.

Looking forward to discuss further any proposals which may not meet with the agreement of the Presidium, let me again express my high appreciation of the constructive efforts of the Presidium and the Secretariat and assure you of my sincere wish to contribute to the successful conclusion of the work of the Convention.

Yours sincerely

TOBISSON

To the Praesidium of the Convention

(for the special attention of Mr Jansson)

General comments on the first complete draft of the Charter (Convent 45)

1. The role and the status of the charter

The key question is the relationship between the Charter and other documents aiming at the protection of fundamental rights, in particular the ECHR.

Since its creation in 1950 an important role in furthering human values has been played by the ECHR in combination with the case-law that has evolved out of the original text. This convention has been of particular importance for the development of the new CEE democracies after the collapse of communism.

It would be most unfortunate, if there should exist in the future two separate and competing systems for the protection of fundamental rights on the European level. We would then run the risk that the ECHR could be looked upon as a lower set of rules for the countries outside the EU, which might erode the authority of the Strasbourg court.

Admittedly, there is a gap in the protection of the individual, when it comes to the application of EU law. This is basically due to the fact that the Union stands outside the Council of Europe and therefore has not adopted the ECHR. Furthermore, this unprotected area is widening, as new matters are brought under EU competence.

The question of the EU's accession to the ECHR and the formal complications associated with it does not fall under the mandate of the Convention. But when the proposed text of the Charter has been delivered, it is necessary to face the crucial problem of the relationship between the two documents.

The best solution would be that changes are made in the treaties of the Council of Europe and the European Union, so that the EU could join the Council and adopt the ECHR. When a future IGC sets out to consolidate the treaties - maybe even write a constitution for the EU - the proposed Charter could then be transformed into a preamble.

If the rights contained in such a legally binding text should go further than the ECHR, it would not constitute a problem - that is already the case with several national declarations of rights. The Luxembourg court should, of course, have jurisdiction based on its "constitution", but in those areas where the subject matter would be covered by the ECHR the final authority would lie in Strasbourg. In practice a consultative procedure could be expected to develop between the two courts.

The necessity to avoid a situation in Europe with two parallel systems and two competing courts, which could lead to conflicting decisions on matters concerning fundamental rights, leads to the conclusion that the EU Charter should be given the status of a political declaration until the reforms sketched above can be realised.

2. Structure

The draft Charter consists of a preamble, 48 articles of substance and 4 horizontal articles. The 52 articles are numbered consecutively. They are organised into seven chapters.

It is doubtful, if there is a real need for a division into chapters. The fact that there is no suggestion of a list of contents may be taken as an indication that it is superfluous.

Under all circumstances there should be no headings to the chapters. Those now proposed are arbitrarily chosen and do not correspond to the contents of the articles in the respective chapters.

The first chapter is a case in point. The heading is "Dignity". The very first article is then titled "Dignity of the person", which must be considered a mere repetition. The situation becomes even more confused, when one finds that the heading of the chapter in the Swedish version is "Individens rättigheter" (= "The rights of the individual"), which is what the whole charter is about.

Moreover, the heading of Chapter II ("Freedoms") does not sound right in plural. In what way can the right to education (article 14) be considered "a freedom"? It seems to be more of a social right. And are the right to asylum (article 18) and the protection against removal, expulsion and extradition (article 19) really "freedoms"?

The chapter heading "Solidarity" has come to stand for what was in the discussions called "economic and social" issues. It would be better to spell that out, if chapter headings are really necessary.

In general, the distinction that was made by the Praesidium during the deliberations between "rights" and "principles" has been obfuscated. There are now many "rights" which are "ensured" when in reality they are "social principles" to be "promoted" - sometimes outside the competence of EU.

It would be preferable to follow the distinction in the original Cologne mandate between rights of different kinds. That would also mean that they would be presented in a more logical fashion and in an order more similar to the one used in our discussions.

Finally, it is somewhat unsatisfactory that a lot of far-reaching promises are given in the first 48 articles, only to be restricted - sometimes most appreciably - by the final horizontal clauses. Those restrictions should at least be hinted at in the preamble.

3. The preamble

In spite of the critical comments at the July 17-19 meeting of the Convention the general structure of the preamble outlined by the Praesidium has been maintained. A shorter version, more along the lines the Mr Tarschys indicated at the meeting, is to be preferred.

Each paragraph starts with a number (1-7). Are they supposed to remain? It seems a little strange to have figures in the lofty wording of a preamble and, therefore, they ought to be deleted.

As to the first paragraph I criticized already during the deliberations the "timing". The phrase should be turned around. Besides, it is strange that we "have established (static!) an ever closer (evolving!) union". The wording could be changed in the following way: "Resolved to share a peaceful future based on common values the peoples of Europe are building an ever closer union between them."

The second paragraph contains a lot of solemn and slightly bombastic words without a clear meaning. Its purpose seems mostly to be to foreshadow the following structure and division into chapters, which I have already questioned. It would be preferable to have something closer to the Tarschys proposal: "The Union is founded on the principles of liberty, democracy, the rule of law, and equal opportunities for men and women".

In paragraph 3 it seems strange that fundamental values, which according to the preceding paragraph are "indivisible" and "universal", could be under "development". Maybe "evolution" would be a better word.

In paragraph 6 there is a lot of overlapping between "other persons", "human community" and "future generations". It should suffice to say "...other persons, including future generations".

In paragraph 7 the word "therefore" seems out of place. Moreover, the word "guaranteed" is much too strong. The wording should be replaced by the final (fourth) paragraph in Mr Tarschys` s version from the July meeting.

4. The articles

My comments on the draft charter have so far dealt with the structure and the preamble, which have been discussed rather hastily at the latest meeting of the Convention. The wording of the proposed articles has been more thoroughly analyzed and debated. However, some additional remarks are motivated.

In general, in those cases where rights are covered by the ECHR there should be more of an ambition to use an identical wording in order to avoid the evolution of varying interpretations.

Moreover, for somebody who is not a legal expert it is somewhat confusing that the expression "Union law" alternates with "Community law" without any apparent reason.

Article 1. The heading of the article in relation to the chapter title has already been commented upon. In addition, the word "person" seems a bit awkward and a little ambiguous. Are "legal persons" (i.e. companies; cf. Article 40) included? Would it not be better to use the word "human being" here and elsewhere in the Charter, when human persons are aimed at exclusively?

Article 3. There is no need for a distinction between "physical" and "mental" integrity. Replace those words with "personal" (integrity). Incidentally, does the 2nd para, 3rd indent, mean that the sale of human hair for the production of wigs is forbidden?!

Article 12. Freedom of association is expressly excluded from Community law. If it is yet to be included in the Charter - with a particular emphasis put on "trade union matters" as in the proposed text - the right to remain outside an association should be treated in the same manner. There has been a clear development in case-law to place the positive and the negative aspects of the freedom to associate on an equal footing.

Article 17. The protection given to property rights in the Charter is too weak. Changes in the text compared to the original wording, which may have been done with the purpose to strengthen these rights, will in fact work the other way. The concept "fair compensation" can be misused to deny the owner adequate compensation for his loss. If the wording "full compensation" is impossible for some reason, the word "fair" must disappear under all circumstances. Write "compensation for his loss" or merely "compensation"!

In comparison to the initially proposed text the words "a prior guarantee" have disappeared. The reason is said to be that there are national bills of rights that don't include such a provision. But the right to compensation is not worth anything, if it takes years and years before it is paid out. After the word "compensation" there should, therefore, be added "to be paid without undue delay".

In paragraph 1 there has appeared a new, third sentence, probably with the aim to restrict the use of regulations to instances where a clear general interest is affected. But the concept of "general interest" - just as "public interest" in the second sentence - is vague and can be interpreted broadly. Therefore, the third sentence should be deleted and the second one reformulated. The whole paragraph 1 should then read:

"Every person has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions, except when there is a strong public need and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to compensation (for his loss) to be paid without undue delay."

Article 20. There is no gender aspect to equality before the law. The insertion "man or woman", which actually weakens the universality of the concept, seems to have been inspired by the chapter heading, and it should be deleted.

Article 27. The right of access to a placement service can not be regarded as a fundamental right on the same level as other freedoms and rights in the Charter. Besides, this service is in the process of being transferred to private agencies working on the market. The whole article should be deleted.

Article 32. There have been efforts to include the social principle/objective of "good housing" in the Charter. This lies clearly outside the EU competence. But there appears in paragraph 3 a remnant of this idea in the form of a right to "housing benefit". This is, however, just one out of many methods to ensure that everyone lives under decent conditions. Subsidies of housing costs for the needy must be considered to be included in "social assistance", and the words "and housing benefit" should, therefore, be deleted.

Article 34. It is totally unclear what is meant by "services of general economic interest". The explanation given by Mr Patijn for the corresponding provision in the Treaty of Amsterdam shows that this is no fundamental right to be included in the Charter. Delete!

Article 35. The expression "a good quality living environment" looks and sounds strange and should be reformulated. The easiest way is to delete the word "quality".

5. Conclusion

My main concern is the relationship between the proposed Charter and other bills of rights, in particular the ECHR. The lack of clarity in this regard affects my willingness to endorse the Charter.

As to the proposed text my most important objections bear upon the structure of the document. This is the first time the members of the Convention see the complete text and can weigh its components (the preamble, the substantial and the horizontal articles) against each other. We have just received Convent 46 with the crucial explanatory text provided by the Secretariat, and this document has not even been discussed!

I deplore that the timetable has been speeded up with the intention to deliver the proposed Charter to the Biarritz summit in October instead of the Nice summit in December as originally decided. Several important aspects remain to be discussed, and many outstanding problems are not satisfactorily settled.

Therefore, as one of the two national parliamentarians from Sweden and representing the leading opposition party I can not recommend that the Charter is adopted - not even as a political declaration - in its present form.

Observations du représentant de la Commission sur le document CONVENT 45

1. QUESTIONS DE FOND

- Préambule

Dans son troisième paragraphe, le préambule fait actuellement référence aux « quatre libertés », sans aucune référence à la citoyenneté de l'Union, donnant une image réductrice de l'intégration européenne. En même temps, la rédaction paraît maladroite car elle donne l'impression de réduire la notion de développement équilibré et durable, utilisée dans un sens très large à l'article 2, premier tiret TUE, aux seules quatre libertés du marché intérieur.

La Commission propose le texte suivant:

Insérer à la fin du deuxième paragraphe :

elle place la personne humaine au cœur de son action, en garantissant la libre circulation des personnes, des biens des capitaux et des services, en instituant la Citoyenneté de l'Union et en créant un espace de liberté, de sécurité et de justice.

Biffer la dernière partie du troisième paragraphe (« elle assure...et durable »)

- Article 25. Droit à l'information et à la consultation des travailleurs au sein de l'entreprise

L'article 25 fait désormais référence à l'information et à la consultation des travailleurs "sur les questions qui les concernent", un segment de phrase qui n'apparaissait pas dans la version précédente (Charte 4316/00 Convent 34, 16 mai 2000).

Le texte précédent était basé sur la Charte sociale européenne révisée (art. 21) et la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux (art. 17). Il était cohérent avec le texte que la Commission a proposé dans son projet de directive sur l'information et la consultation des travailleurs (COM 1998/612 final) qui est actuellement en discussion au Conseil.

Du point de vue juridique, la nouvelle formulation n'altère pas fondamentalement la version antérieure. En revanche, du point de vue politique, le texte actuel apparaît en retrait de la version antérieure, et donc aussi en retrait des textes qui en étaient la base.

La Commission propose le libellé suivant:

Les travailleurs et leurs représentants doivent se voir garantir une information et consultation en temps utile au sein de l'entreprise conformément au droit communautaire et aux législations et pratiques nationales.

• Article 32, paragraphe 2. Sécurité sociale et aide sociale

Après un examen attentif de ce texte, la Commission constate qu'il n'est pas conforme au droit communautaire en matière de sécurité sociale, en particulier aux principes essentiels garantis par le Règlement (CEE) n° 1408/71¹ qui coordonne les systèmes nationaux de sécurité sociale.

Le Règlement 1408/71 vise à protéger les droits à la sécurité sociale non seulement des travailleurs qui sont des ressortissants de l'Union et des membres de leur famille mais aussi d'autres catégories de personnes qui se déplacent à l'intérieur de l'Union, en vue de ne pas les léser par rapport aux personnes sédentaires. Il assure cette protection grâce à quatre grands principes fondamentaux, à savoir 1) l'égalité de traitement avec les ressortissants nationaux, 2) l'unicité de la législation applicable 3) l'exportation des prestations de sécurité sociale et enfin, 4) la totalisation des périodes d'assurance.

Considérant cette réglementation communautaire, la Commission estime que l'article 32, paragraphe 2 devrait être formulé différemment et propose le texte suivant :

Toute personne, qui réside et se déplace légalement à l'intérieur de l'Union, a droit aux prestations de sécurité sociale et aux avantages sociaux dans les conditions établies par les législations nationales et le droit communautaire.

Il est proposé ainsi de supprimer les termes de "travailleurs ressortissants d'un Etat membre et résidant dans un autre Etat membre" et de les remplacer par les termes "toute personne qui réside et se déplace légalement à l'intérieur de l'Union". En effet, le terme "travailleur" n'inclut pas certaines catégories importantes de personnes, telles que les étudiants et les retraités qui sont couvertes par le Règlement 1408/71.

En outre, le terme "personne" permet de couvrir non seulement les citoyens de l'Union, mais aussi les ressortissants des Etats tiers qui résident et se déplacent légalement à l'intérieur de l'Union. En effet, bien que le Règlement 1408/71 s'applique, à l'heure actuelle, aux seuls ressortissants des Etats membres, il existe toutefois une proposition de la Commission européenne² qui vise à étendre ledit règlement aux ressortissants d'un Etat tiers qui résident et se déplacent légalement dans l'Union. Cette idée a été confirmée par le Conseil européen de Tampere du 18 octobre 1999³ et semble également la conséquence logique de la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme⁴.

Il est aussi proposé de remplacer les termes "ont droit aux mêmes prestations.....que les ressortissants de cet Etat" par "ont droit aux prestations de sécurité sociale... dans les conditions établies par les législations nationales et le droit communautaire".

En effet, bien que le texte actuel reflète le principe d'égalité de traitement avec les ressortissants nationaux, il néglige de tenir compte des principes fondamentaux de l'unicité de la législation applicable et de l'exportation des prestations garanties par le Règlement 1408/71. Ainsi, le principe de l'unicité de la législation applicable prévoit que c'est généralement la législation de l'État de travail seule qui s'applique et non pas la législation de l'État de résidence, ce que le texte actuel suggère. En outre, alors que le Règlement oblige l'État de travail à exporter les prestations aux assurés qui résident dans un autre Etat membre, le texte actuel ne se réfère qu'à un droit à des prestations servies par l'État de résidence, ce qui pourrait avoir des conséquences importantes, notamment en ce qui concerne les travailleurs transfrontaliers.

Suite à cette proposition de changement, les termes "à un même accès aux soins de santé" sont superflus car les soins de santé font partie de la notion plus large de "prestations de sécurité sociale".

- Article 43. Liberté de circulation et de séjour

Au paragraphe 2, il convient d'insérer une référence à la liberté de séjour, afin de tenir compte de la compétence donnée à la Communauté dans l'article 63, paragraphe 4 TCE (qui est déjà citée dans les explications à l'article 43).

³ Paragraphe 21 : « Le statut juridique des ressortissants de pays tiers devrait être rapproché de celui des ressortissants des États membres. Une personne résidant légalement dans un État membre pendant une période à déterminer et titulaire d'un permis de séjour de longue durée devrait se voir octroyer dans cet État membre un ensemble de droits uniformes aussi proches que possible de ceux dont jouissent les citoyens de l'Union européenne (...) ».

⁴ Affaire Gaygusuz, n° 39/1995/545/631.

La Commission propose le libellé suivant :

La liberté de circulation et de séjour peut être accordée, conformément au traité instituant la Communauté européenne, aux ressortissants des pays tiers résidant légalement sur le territoire d'un État membre.

2. QUESTIONS DE REDACTION

- Article 3. Droit à l'intégrité de la personne

Étant donné la nouvelle rédaction de l'article 49, qui établit une nette distinction entre droits et principes contenus dans la Charte, la Commission considère que, pour des motifs de cohérence de rédaction, il convient désormais de distinguer clairement entre droits subjectifs et principes objectifs dans la Charte, et par conséquent d'éviter le mot "principes" là où on vise en réalité des droits subjectifs.

La Commission propose le libellé suivant:

Dans le cadre de la médecine et de la biologie, doivent notamment être respectés:

- le consentement libre et éclairé de la personne concernée,
- l'interdiction des pratiques eugéniques, notamment celles qui ont pour but la sélection des personnes,
- l'interdiction de faire du corps humain et de ses parties une source de profit,
- l'interdiction du clonage reproductif des êtres humains.

- Article 11. Liberté d'expression et d'information

La Commission s'interroge sur la formule "la liberté d'information" au 2ème paragraphe. Vu que le premier paragraphe consacre déjà la "liberté de recevoir ou de communiquer des informations", ou bien cette formule est un pléonasme, ou bien elle a une signification supplémentaire. Dans la dernière hypothèse, la Commission s'interroge si la signification de cette formule pourrait être celle d'une "freedom of information", c'est-à-dire le droit des individus à obtenir des informations des autorités publiques, à savoir ici des institutions communautaires. Interprétée d'une telle manière, cette formule pourrait non seulement avoir des conséquences pratiques graves pour le fonctionnement de la Commission, mais serait aussi clairement en conflit avec l'article 40 "droit d'accès aux documents" de la Charte qui règle l'accès aux informations des institutions de manière exhaustive et en respectant soigneusement l'état du droit actuel contenu dans l'article 255 TCE.

La Commission propose donc de clarifier, dans les explications (doc. CONVENT 46) sous cet article, que la formule "liberté d'information" n'est pas à interpréter dans le sens évoqué ci-dessus mais vise uniquement à affermir la liberté notamment des journalistes dans les médias de recevoir et communiquer des informations.

- Article 35. Protection de l'environnement

On pourrait encore améliorer la rédaction actuelle, pour mieux refléter les objectifs de la politique en matière d'environnement tels que fixés dans le TUE et le TCE, en y ajoutant une référence à la santé humaine. Il est certes probable que la protection de la santé humaine est déjà implicitement couverte par l'article 35 dans sa version actuelle, mais il paraît opportun d'exprimer cette notion de façon expresse, eu égard à son importance.

Le libellé proposé est donc le suivant :

La protection et la conservation d'un cadre de vie de qualité, ainsi que l'amélioration de la qualité de l'environnement et la protection de la santé des personnes, en tenant compte du principe du développement durable, sont assurées dans toutes les politiques de l'Union.

- Article 39. Droit à une bonne administration

Au 2ème tiret du paragraphe 2 de cet article, la formule "secret professionnel des affaires" est erronée car elle mélange deux concepts juridiques distincts, l'un étant le "secret des affaires", ce qui est la notion classique utilisée fréquemment dans la jurisprudence en matière de droit de concurrence, et l'autre le secret professionnel, concept plus large utilisé à l'article 287 TCE et qui vise tout ce dont un fonctionnaire d'une institution communautaire a pris connaissance en fonction du service (dont, le cas échéant des informations reçues par des entreprises qui peuvent faire partie du secret des affaires).

Il ne s'agit là probablement que d'une erreur de frappe, omettant le mot "et".

La Commission propose le libellé suivant :

- le droit d'accès de toute personne au dossier qui la concerne, dans le respect des intérêts légitimes de la confidentialité et du secret professionnel et des affaires ;

Afin d'éviter tout malentendu, la Commission propose par ailleurs de clarifier dans les explications (doc. CONVENT 46) que le terme "secret professionnel" correspond à celui utilisé dans l'article 287 TCE et qu'il vise dès lors le secret professionnel des fonctionnaires communautaires.

- Article 47. Principes de la légalité et de la proportionnalité des délits et des peines

Les mots "d'après le droit international" à la fin du deuxième paragraphe de cet article posent un problème rédactionnel. L'intention poursuivie par le Présidium avec cette formule est certes compréhensible: Il s'agit de moderniser le libellé de l'article 7.2 de la CEDH qui parle des "principes généraux de droit reconnus par les nations civilisées". Mais contrairement à l'intention du Présidium, le libellé actuel ne laisse pas apparaître que le paragraphe 2 de cet article constitue une dérogation du paragraphe 1, vu que ce dernier paragraphe vise, lui aussi, "une infraction d'après le droit national ou le droit international".

La Commission propose le libellé suivant :

Le présent article ne porte pas atteinte au jugement et à la punition d'une personne coupable d'une action ou d'une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, était criminelle d'après les principes généraux de droit reconnus par l'ensemble des nations."

Ce libellé correspond à celui de l'article 15.2 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques)

- Article 48. Droit à ne pas être jugé ou puni pénalement deux fois pour un même délit

Le libellé actuel de cet article pourrait être compris en ce sens qu'un jugement définitif rendu dans n'importe quel pays tiers pourrait empêcher toute poursuite pénale dans un Etat membre.

Pour éviter ce malentendu, il convient d'insérer, après le mot "condamné", les mots "dans l'Union européenne".

Allgemeine Bemerkungen zum Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union/CONVENT 45 vom 28.Juli 2000

Sehr geehrter Herr Professor Herzog,
Sehr geehrter Herr Kollege Mendez de Vigo,

Zu dem oben angeführten Vorentwurf möchte ich unter Beschränkung auf das Wesentliche folgende Anmerkungen machen und verweise darüberhinaus auf meine Unterstützung für die gemeinsame Stellungnahme von Herrn Prof. Meyer.

I Präambel.

Die Bürgerinnen und Bürger der Europäischen Union sind entschlossen, unter Wahrung ihrer kulturellen und staatlichen Eigenständigkeit eine immer engere Union zu errichten, sie auf die Unantastbarkeit der Würde des Menschen und die Prinzipien der Demokratie und der Rechtsstaatlichkeit zu gründen, darin frei unter Gleichen, solidarisch, in ökologischer Verantwortung, in äusserem und innerem Frieden zusammenzuleben und erklären die Achtung und den Schutz dieser Prinzipien zur Grundlage allen Handelns der Union in der Welt.

Artikel 2 Recht auf Leben

Die überragende Mehrheit des Konvents hat sich für eine Ächtung der Todesstrafe ohne die Einschränkungen der EMRK ausgesprochen. Dem wurde im Konvent 46 nicht Rechnung getragen.

Artikel 3 Recht auf Unversehrtheit

Der Artikel ist unvollständig, da er weder das Recht jeder Person auf Kenntnis aller Daten über ihre Gesundheit und ihr Erbgut noch das Verbot des Heranziehens von Gendiagnosen in Versicherungs- und Beschäftigungsverhältnissen enthält. Diese in einigen Ländern schon praktizierte Vorgehensweise verstösst gegen den Gleichheitsgrundsatz und die informationelle Selbstbestimmung und müsste in der Charta auf jedem Fall enthalten sein.

404

Artikel 9 Recht eine Ehe einzugehen und eine Familie zu gründen

In Artikel 9 wird die gesellschaftliche Dynamik hin zu einer Vielfalt von Lebensformen nicht berücksichtigt. Dies entspricht nicht der Diskussion im Konvent, in der sich die Mehrheit für eine möglichst weite, moderne Auslegung des Familienbegriffes, der das Individualrecht auf die Wahl der Lebensform und Lebensgemeinschaft gewährleistet, ausgesprochen hat.

Artikel 15 Berufsfreiheit

Die Beschränkung des Anspruchs auf gleiche Arbeitsbedingungen wie Unionsbürger auf Staatsangehörige dritter Länder die sich legal in der Union aufhalten steht im Widerspruch zu Artikel 5 und bedeutet faktisch ein Ausbeutungsverbot nur bei legal ansässigen Drittstaatsangehörigen. Das Wort legal soll im Artikel 15, Abs.3 gestrichen werden.

Artikel 18 Asylrecht

Im Artikel 18 "Asylrecht" findet sich kein individuelles Recht und keine individuellen Rechtsgarantien für Asylsuchende in der Europäischen Union. Die Verankerung des Asylrechts als Individualrecht war von zahlreichen Konventsmitgliedern gefordert worden und die vorliegende Formulierung wird diesem Ansinnen nicht gerecht. Zusätzlich sollte das Recht auf Leben in der Familie aufgenommen werden, wie es ja auch schon Teil der Europäischen Menschenrechtskonvention ist. Die EU-Verträge können niemals den Wesensgehalt von Menschenrechten legitim einschränken, sondern haben sich Gegenteil an der Einhaltung der Grundrechte messen zu lassen. Die horizontale Bestimmung "gemäss dem Vertrag zur Gründung der Europäischen Gemeinschaft" ist daher systemwidrig.

Kapitel IV Solidarität

Das Kapitel Solidarität sollte umbenannt werden in Recht auf soziale Sicherheit. Die sozialen Grundrechte sind im Chartaentwurf nur unzureichend gewährleistet. Weder ein Recht auf Arbeit, noch wesentliche Grundrechte bei der Arbeit, noch ein Recht zu arbeiten, nicht einmal das Recht auf Mindestlohn/Grundsicherung wie von zahlreichen Konventionsmitgliedern vorgeschlagen und wie in den ILO-Konventionen festgelegt und garantiert, fanden eine Aufnahme.

Die unzureichende Anerkennung geltender sozialer Grundrechte im Völkerrecht bzw. den gemeinsamen Verfassungstraditionen der Mitgliedsländer führt zu einer inakzeptablen Schiefelage der gesamten Charta.

Artikel 35 Umweltschutz

Die aktuelle Fassung des Artikels 35 verpflichtet lediglich die Union, Umweltschutznormen zu erlassen. Die Pflicht korrespondiert nicht mit einem individuellen Recht auf Umweltschutz. Es ist unverständlich, warum das Präsidium nicht den zahlreichen Änderungsanträgen einer Mehrheit der Konventsmitglieder Rechnung getragen hat, die die nachdrückliche Formulierung dieses Artikels im Sinne eines Rechtsanspruches einforderten. Zudem sollte das Recht jeder Person, allein oder gemeinsam mit anderen, an Entscheidungen die ihre unmittelbare Umwelt betreffen, mitzuwirken in den Artikel aufgenommen werden.

Ein Artikel zu den Rechten von Minderheiten, der von der Mehrheit der Konventsmitglieder gefordert wurde findet sich im Entwurf 45 der Charta nicht wieder.

Dazu möchte ich noch einmal auf den Änderungsantrag Voggenhuber/Buitenweg hinweisen der das Recht als Individualrecht formuliert und wie folgt lautet:

- (1) Jede Person, die einer Minderheit angehört, hat das Recht gemeinsam und öffentlich mit anderen Angehörigen ihrer Gruppe ihre eigene Sprache zu gebrauchen und ihre eigene Kultur zu pflegen.
- (2) Angehörige von Gruppen, die faktisch benachteiligt werden, haben Anrecht auf besondere Förderung.

Artikel 40 Recht auf Zugang zu Dokumenten

Der Artikel ist insofern unvollständig da er nur das Recht auf Zugang zu Dokument nicht aber das Recht auf Auskunft enthält und sollte dementsprechend geändert werden.

Zu Art 50 Tragweite der garantierten Rechte

Artikel 50, Absatz 1 ist rechtsstaatlich nicht tolerabel. Die Einschränkungen der Grundrechte auf Basis "anderer legitimen Interessen in einer demokratischen Gesellschaft" ist willkürlich und muss ersatzlos gestrichen werden. Zum zweitem fehlt die Formulierung des Gebots dass die Möglichkeit Grundrechte einzuschränken niemals ihren Wesensgehalt verletzen darf.

Mit freundlichen Grüßen

Johannes Voggenhuber

Observations des représentants du Conseil de l'Europe sur le projet de Charte du Présidium (Convent 45)

Notre souci principal étant de veiller à ce que les droits que la Charte emprunte à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme (CEDH) ne donnent pas lieu à des interprétations divergentes voire contradictoires, selon qu'ils sont interprétés par la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme ou la Cour de justice de Luxembourg, nous estimons que le texte proposé rencontre largement cette préoccupation, en attendant une décision définitive sur sa nature juridique. Le mérite en revient à la Convention et à son Présidium, qui se sont montrés sensibles aux remarques et propositions exprimées tout au long des travaux par les observateurs du Conseil de l'Europe et ont apporté au texte des modifications propres à assurer la cohérence et l'harmonie entre la Charte et la CEDH.

C'est vrai en particulier des dernières modifications proposées par le Présidium, tel le nouveau paragraphe 3 de l'article 50, qui a le mérite de dissiper, en principe, tout malentendu quant au sens et à la portée des droits de la Charte correspondant à des droits garantis par la CEDH.¹ Encore faudra-t-il identifier les cas où la Charte entend assurer une protection « plus élevée ou plus étendue ». C'est ici que les explications au texte, telles qu'elles sont proposées dans le document Convent 46, rendront de grands services. Il faudra donc veiller à les rendre aussi accessibles aux lecteurs que le texte lui-même.

De son côté, la référence du Préambule à la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme, en confirmant le principe selon lequel l'interprétation d'autorité s'incorpore au texte interprété, dissipera tout malentendu dans l'identification des « droits correspondant à des droits garantis par la CEDH ». Grâce à elle, il est clair que le renvoi à la CEDH couvre aussi les droits reconnus dans la jurisprudence. De la sorte, la Convention fait œuvre de prévoyance, en assurant dès maintenant la cohérence et l'harmonie entre les développements futurs de la CEDH et de la Charte, évitant ainsi de briser la dynamique commune de ces deux textes.

Le renvoi à la jurisprudence sera essentiel aussi pour l'application de l'article 51 de la Charte, qui fixe le niveau de protection minimum offert par la Charte, notamment par référence à la CEDH. Ici aussi, il importe en effet d'assurer que ce niveau minimum suive tout mouvement ascendant de la jurisprudence.

Cela étant, toutes les précautions de rédaction ne pourront pas empêcher que le débat sur la nature de la Charte soulève un certain nombre de problèmes qui, s'ils ne trouvent pas de solution satisfaisante, seront source potentielle de dérapages dans l'interprétation des droits consacrés à la fois par la Charte et la CEDH, en particulier dans l'hypothèse où la Cour de justice aurait à se prononcer sur des questions non encore soumises à Strasbourg. Pourquoi ?

Parce que la Charte, appliquée et interprétée dans le cadre de l'Union européenne, c'est-à-dire dans le cadre d'un Traité avec ses objectifs propres et englobant par ailleurs de nouvelles compétences dans les domaines de l'immigration, de l'asile et de la coopération judiciaire et policière, ne manquera pas d'engendrer une dynamique qui ne devrait pas rester sans conséquences sur l'interprétation harmonieuse et cohérente des droits fondamentaux. L'organe créant la fonction, il est hautement probable que la Charte générera un contentieux préjudiciel incomparablement plus élevé que celui qui est actuellement porté devant la Cour de justice. Cela augmentera dans la même mesure les risques de voir des décisions de la Cour de justice contredites ultérieurement par la Cour de Strasbourg, au titre de la responsabilité des Etats membres tenus par ailleurs de respecter et d'appliquer le droit communautaire. Dans quel pétrin risque-t-on alors de mettre un Etat appelé à appliquer un arrêt de la Cour de justice qui se trouve en porte-à-faux avec un arrêt ultérieur de la Cour de Strasbourg ?

C'est dire que, dans la perspective d'une intégration harmonieuse de la Charte parmi les autres systèmes internationaux de protection des droits fondamentaux, le débat sur la nature de la Charte remettra à l'ordre du jour la question de l'adhésion des Communautés européennes et/ou de l'Union à la CEDH, selon des modalités à convenir, ou du moins celle d'un mécanisme de consultation préalable entre les deux Cours, cautionné par les Etats membres.²

Tant que ces questions ne seront pas résolues, le Conseil européen, s'il ne veut courir le risque de favoriser l'insécurité juridique, ne sera guère en mesure de se prononcer définitivement sur la nature de la Charte. Certes, il n'entre pas dans le mandat de la Convention de s'exprimer sur cette question. Cela ne devrait pas pour autant la dispenser de voir et de signaler à l'adresse du Conseil européen, sous une forme appropriée, les problèmes tels qu'ils se posent.

Strasbourg, 22 August 2000

Observations of the Council of Europe representatives
on the draft Charter proposed by the Praesidium (Convent 45)

Our primary concern is to ensure that the rights taken by the Charter from the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) are not interpreted in inconsistent or even contradictory ways depending on whether it is the European Court of Human Rights or the Court of Justice in Luxembourg that is construing them. We consider that the proposed text amply deals with that concern, pending a final decision on its legal nature. The Convention and the Praesidium must take the credit for that. They have heeded the comments and proposals made throughout the preparatory work by the observers of the Council of Europe and made the necessary amendments to ensure consistency and harmony between the Charter and the ECHR.

That is true in particular of the latest amendments proposed by the Praesidium such as the new paragraph 3 of Article 50, which has the merit of dispelling, in principle, any doubt over the meaning and scope of the Charter rights corresponding to the rights guaranteed by the ECHR¹. It will, however, still be necessary to identify the instances in which it is intended that the protection afforded by the Charter will be “greater or more extensive”. It is in this sphere that the commentary on the text, as proposed in the Convent 46 document, will prove very useful. It should therefore be made as accessible to readers as the text itself.

By confirming the principle that authoritative interpretations of an instrument are incorporated into the instrument itself, the reference in the preamble to the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights will clear up any misapprehension regarding identification of the “rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the [ECHR]”. That reference makes it clear that the ECHR rights also include rights recognised by the case-law. By including it, the Convention has shown the foresight to ensure at the outset that future developments regarding the ECHR and the Charter will be consistent and harmonious and has thus avoided destroying the common dynamic of these two instruments.

The reference to the case-law will also be vital for the application of Article 51 of the Charter, which sets the minimum level of protection provided by that instrument, notably by reference to the ECHR. Here too it is important to ensure that the minimum level rises to match any enhanced protection afforded by the case-law.

Nevertheless, no amount of careful drafting can prevent the debate on the nature of the Charter posing a number of problems which, unless satisfactorily resolved, will prove a potential source of error in the interpretation of the rights embodied in both the Charter and

¹ Article 50 § 3 refers, however, to rights that have a similar meaning and scope to those conferred by the ECHR, which seems to suggest that divergences are permitted. Yet Article 50 § 3 allows of only two possibilities: the same protection as that afforded by the ECHR, or greater protection. As the latter possibility is covered by Article 50 § 3 in fine, the former must be reflected in the first part of the provision, which, for the avoidance of any unnecessary doubt on the subject, should consequently read as follows: “... the meaning and scope of those rights shall be the same as those conferred on them by the [ECHR]...”.

the ECHR, in particular if the Court of Justice finds itself called upon to decide issues that have not previously been before the Court in Strasbourg. Why?

Because the Charter, when applied and interpreted within the context of the European Union, that is to say in the framework of a Treaty with its own objectives and including new powers in the fields of immigration, asylum and judicial and police co-operation, is bound to take on a dynamic which is almost certain to affect the harmonious and consistent interpretation of fundamental rights. Since the organ creates the function, it is highly probable that the Charter will generate a far higher number of references for preliminary rulings than the Court of Justice receives at present. That will increase in the same proportion the risk that decisions of the Court of Justice will be at variance with later decisions of the Strasbourg Court, since the member States will remain responsible for their actions under the ECHR but will at the same time be required to comply with and apply Community law. A State obliged to apply a judgment of the Court of Justice which turned out to be at odds with a later judgment of the Strasbourg Court would be placed in a very awkward position.

As regards the Charter's being harmoniously combined with the other international systems of protection of fundamental rights, that point shows to what extent the debate about the nature of the Charter will restore to the agenda the question of accession by the European Communities and/or the Union to the ECHR, under arrangements to be agreed, or at least the idea of a preliminary consultation mechanism, recognised by the member States, between the two Courts.²

As long as these questions remain unanswered the European Council, if it wishes to avoid the risk of creating legal uncertainty, will scarcely be in a position to reach a final decision on the nature of the Charter. Admittedly, it is not part of the Convention's terms of reference to state its views on that question. However, that should not dispense it from identifying and pointing out to the European Council, in appropriate form, the problems as they exist.

COMITE DES REGIONS

Monsieur Roman HERZOG
Président de la Convention de la Charte des Droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne
CONSEIL DE L'UNION EUROPEENNE
Rue de la Loi 170
1048 Bruxelles

Bruxelles, le
P/CAB D/110294/00

Monsieur le Président,

Je vous remercie de m'avoir fait parvenir le projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne tel que proposé par le Présidium et dont j'ai pris connaissance avec la plus grande attention.

Comme vous le savez, le Comité des régions a suivi en tant qu'observateur les travaux de la Convention et a assisté avec beaucoup d'intérêt à ses réunions informelles. Il a ainsi eu l'occasion d'apprécier la qualité des membres de la Convention et le niveau élevé de leurs discussions.

A la suite de son avis sur la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne examiné en session plénière les 16 et 17 février 2000, le Comité des régions s'est autorisé à présenter des amendements qui ont rejoint certains de ceux qui étaient proposés par les membres de la Convention et qui figurent dans le texte du projet.

Toutefois, et alors même qu'il a fait l'objet d'un avis très favorable lors de l'audition organisée par le Comité des régions le 4 juillet dernier à laquelle ont participé les associations nationales et européennes représentatives des collectivités locales, l'amendement présenté par le Comité sur la nécessité de mentionner les autorités régionales et locales parmi les collectivités qui mettent en oeuvre les politiques de l'Union n'a pas été retenu.

Cette proposition d'amendement consistait à modifier l'alinéa 1 de l'article 49 comme suit :

"Les dispositions de la présente Charte s'adressent aux institutions et organes de l'Union dans le respect du principe de subsidiarité ainsi qu'aux Etats membres et à leurs autorités territoriales dans le cadre des règles institutionnelles de chaque Etat membre", le reste de l'article demeurant inchangé.

Il m'a été indiqué qu'il n'était pas possible qu'un texte émanant de l'Union prévoie une telle mention dès lors qu'il était fait état des Etats membres et ce, en se référant à l'article 230 (ancien article 173) du Traité sur l'Union européenne et à une décision de la Cour de Justice des Communautés européennes qui stipule dans son ordonnance du 21 mars 1997 :

"Il ressort de l'économie générale des traités que la notion d'Etat membre, au sens des dispositions institutionnelles et, en particulier, de celles portant sur les recours juridictionnels, ne vise que les seules autorités gouvernementales des Etats membres de communautés européennes et ne saurait être étendue aux gouvernements des régions ou de communautés autonomes et ce, quelle que soit l'étendue des compétences qui leur sont reconnues".

Je ne méconnaissais pas l'importance de cette ordonnance. Toutefois, je note que ces termes sont en partie contredits par une décision du Tribunal (5e alinéa Chambre élargie) du 30 avril 1998 qui stipule :

"S'il est vrai que les autorités régionales ne sont pas visées par la notion d'Etat membre au sens de l'article 173, 2e alinéa, elles doivent, en revanche, dès lors qu'elles jouissent de la personnalité juridique en vertu du droit national, être considérées comme des personnes morales au sens de l'article 173, 4e alinéa du Traité".

En l'occurrence, il me semble que le problème ne réside pas dans la reconnaissance de la capacité d'une autorité territoriale à former un recours devant la Cour de Justice des Communautés européennes mais de prendre acte de la réalité du rôle des autorités territoriales dans l'application des politiques relevant de la compétence de l'Union, rôle qui est reconnu dans la même ordonnance de la Cour du 27 mars 1997.

C'est le cas dans tous les Etats membres avec les différences inhérentes à leur organisation interne. Cette réalité qui ne peut être niée ne va pas à l'encontre du droit communautaire. Il apparaît dès lors normal et utile d'incorporer la mention de cette réalité dans l'un des articles d'application de la Charte. Elle rappelle aux autorités régionales et locales les obligations qui leur incomberont du fait de la Charte dès lors que celles-ci mettent en oeuvre les politiques de l'Union.

Je me permettrai d'ajouter qu'il m'apparaît important que ces mêmes autorités de proximité se mobilisent sur la mise en oeuvre de la Charte afin que les droits qu'elle formule pénètrent les esprits des citoyens de l'Union.

Je vous prie de bien vouloir examiner la proposition du Comité des régions soutenue par l'ensemble des associations des collectivités régionales et locales concernant cette modification à l'article 49 du projet de Charte.

Je vous prie de croire, Monsieur le Président, à l'assurance de ma haute considération.

J. CHABERT

NOTE DU COMITE DES REGIONS
SUR LA CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION
EUROPEENNE
CONCERNANT LE ROLE DES AUTORITES REGIONALES ET LOCALES

1 - EXPOSE DU PROBLEME

Le Comité des régions souhaite que les autorités régionales et locales soient mentionnées dans l'article d'application de la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne, dès lors qu'elles doivent mettre en oeuvre certaines politiques relevant de la compétence de l'Union.

Les rédacteurs de la Charte et notamment le Secrétariat général du Conseil de l'Union européenne considèrent qu'elles n'ont pas à être mentionnées dès lors que les Etats membres le sont. Pour ce faire, ils s'appuient sur l'article 230 (ancien article 173) du Traité sur l'Union européenne et sur une décision de la Cour de Justice des Communautés européennes qui stipule dans son ordonnance du 21 mars 1997¹ :

"Il ressort de l'économie générale des traités que la notion d'Etat membre au sens des dispositions institutionnelles et, en particulier de celles portant sur les recours juridictionnels, ne vise que les seules autorités gouvernementales des Etats membres de communautés européennes et ne saurait être étendue aux gouvernements des régions ou de communautés autonomes quelle que soit l'étendue des compétences qui leur sont reconnues. Admettre le contraire conduirait à porter atteinte à l'équilibre institutionnel prévu par les traités qui déterminent notamment les conditions suivant lesquelles les Etats membres, c'est-à-dire les Etats parties aux traités institutifs et aux traités des adhésions, participent au fonctionnement des institutions communautaires. Les communautés européennes ne peuvent, en effet, comprendre un nombre d'Etats membres supérieur à celui des Etats entre lesquels elles sont instituées."

2 - DISCUSSION

Dans ce problème, il ne s'agit pas de reconnaître la capacité d'une autorité territoriale à former un recours devant la Cour de Justice des Communautés européennes mais de prendre acte du fait que les autorités territoriales assurent le respect des règles du droit communautaire dans le cadre de l'application de certaines politiques relevant de la compétence de l'Union.

A cet égard, il est à noter que cette faculté a été reconnue par l'arrêt du Tribunal (5e Chambre élargie) du 30 avril 1998² :

"S'il est vrai que les autorités régionales ne sont pas visées par la notion d'Etat membre au sein de l'article 173, 2e alinéa, elles doivent, en revanche, dès lors qu'elles jouissent de la personnalité juridique en vertu du droit national, être considérées comme des personnes morales au sens de l'article 173, 4e alinéa du Traité."

L'ordonnance de la Cour du 21 mars 1997 précise, en outre, que :

"S'il incombe à toutes les autorités des Etats membres qu'il s'agisse d'autorités du pouvoir central de l'Etat, d'autorités d'un Etat fédéré ou d'autres autorités territoriales, d'assurer le respect des règles du droit communautaire dans le cadre de leurs compétences, il n'appartient pas aux institutions communautaires de se prononcer sur la répartition des compétences par les règles institutionnelles de chaque Etat membre et sur les obligations qui peuvent incomber respectivement aux autorités de l'Etat fédéral et à celle de l'Etat fédéré."

De ces diverses jurisprudences, il résulte que la mention des autorités régionales et locales parmi les autorités compétentes pour l'application de la Charte dans le cadre de la mise en oeuvre des compétences de l'Union se justifie par la reconnaissance par l'Union de la capacité des autorités territoriales, dès lors qu'elle provient des règles institutionnelles de chaque Etat membre, d'assurer le respect des règles du droit communautaire et qu'elle n'apparaît pas incompatible avec les conditions mises à leur capacité de former un recours devant la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes.

Dans le cas où une personne physique formerait un recours devant la Cour de Justice des Communautés européennes contre une décision qui la concernerait directement au titre de la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne et qui résulterait de l'action d'une autorité territoriale infraétatique, il appartiendrait à la Cour de Justice des Communautés européennes de rappeler à l'Etat membre qu'il lui appartient de prendre les mesures pour faire respecter les termes de la Charte. En effet, en application de l'article 226 (anciennement 169) du Traité sur l'Union européenne, l'Etat ne peut invoquer le comportement de ses collectivités territoriales pour contester l'infraction qui lui serait reprochée.

Ainsi, la mention des autorités régionales et locales à l'article 49 de la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne ne va pas à l'encontre du droit communautaire. De surcroît, elle présente l'avantage de rappeler aux dites autorités les obligations qui leur incombent du fait de la Charte, dès lors qu'elles mettent en oeuvre les politiques de l'Union.

Til hr. Braibant

København den 31. august 2000

Kære professor Braibant,

Må jeg indledningsvis complimentere præsidiets for det fremsendte charterudkast (Convent 45/46). Det har bragt os nærmere målet, men efter min mening er der endnu nogle skridt at tage. Derfor tillader jeg mig at fremsende tre generelle bemærkninger til udkastet samt i et bilag at nævne en række punkter, som jeg vil berøre under Konventets kommende gennemgang af udkastet.

Tre generelle bemærkninger.

1. Det bør klargøres, at de artikler, som kort udtrykker rettigheder, der følger af Den Europæiske Menneskerettighedskonvention, er identiske med disse rettigheder.

Her kunne man – som foreslået af mig i Contribution 281 – erstatte artikel 50 stk. 3 med følgende:

”Rettighederne i artiklerne ... skal forstås i overensstemmelse med de samme rettigheder garanteret af Den Europæiske Menneskerettighedskonvention som fortolket af Den Europæiske Menneskerettighedsdomstol.

Disse rettigheder finder udelukkende anvendelse over for en medlemsstat i det omfang den har tilsluttet sig Den Europæiske Menneskerettighedskonvention og dens tillægsprotokoller og under hensyn til de forbehold, som den pågældende medlemsstat har taget”.

Ved udtrykkeligt at henvise til hvilke artikler i charteret, der er de samme rettigheder, som de, der beskyttes i Den Europæiske Menneskerettighedskonvention, skabes der større (juridisk) klarhed over rækkevidden af bestemmelserne.

Man kunne også i artikel 50 stk. 3 fjerne ordene ”medmindre dette charter sikrer en højere eller mere omfattende beskyttelse” samt affatte den franske og engelske version (og muligvis de øvrige sprogversioner) af artikel 50, stk. 3, på følgende måde:

”I det omfang dette charter indeholder rettigheder svarende til dem, der er sikret ved den europæiske konvention til beskyttelse af menneskerettigheder og grundlæggende frihedsrettigheder, har de samme betydning og omfang som konventionens.”

I den franske tekst tales om, at: ”leurs sens et leur portée sont similaires...”. Dette kan give anledning til fortolkningstvivel, idet hensigten jo er at sikre, at de pågældende rettigheder har samme indhold som Den Europæiske Menneskerettighedskonvention. Det foreslås derfor at erstatte ”similaires” med ”identiques”. Tilsvarende i den engelske sprogversion tales om ”similar to those.”, der bør erstattes med ”same scope and meaning”.

Jeg forudsætter samtidigt, at den præambulære henvisning i nr. 5 til Den Europæiske Menneskerettighedskonvention og Menneskerettighedsdomstolens praksis opretholdes og jeg har med glæde noteret mig de forklaringer til artikel 50, der efterfølgende er udsendt i medfør af Convent 46.

2. ”Retten til Arbejde” og ”Retten til en Bolig” bør eksplicit nævnes i charteret under kapitel IV om solidaritet.

Retten til arbejde og retten til bolig genfindes i konventioner, som medlemsstaterne har tilsluttet sig i både FN- og Europarådsregi.

Jeg er i øvrigt enig i, at de økonomiske og sociale rettigheder er ligeværdige med de borgerlige og civile rettigheder.

De sociale og økonomiske rettigheder er ganske vist anderledes i deres karakter, idet de for hovedpartens vedkommende er udmøntet i national lovgivning, kollektive overenskomster eller ved tilslutning til FN's konvention om økonomiske, sociale og kulturelle rettigheder, og fordi de vanskeligt kan håndhæves ved domstolene. Det betyder imidlertid ikke, at de er af underordnet betydning.

Da charteret retter sig til EU's institutioner, indebærer de økonomiske og sociale rettigheder – som påpeget i Braibant-Meyer dokumentet – at institutionerne skal anerkende og respektere disse rettigheder og principper både i lovgivningsprocessen, og når der træffes konkrete afgørelse over for borgerne og virksomhederne.

3. Alle artikler i charteret skal formuleres i et kønsneutralt sprog.

Charteret bør formuleres i kønsneutral form og ikke - som det er tilfældet i flere artikler - henviser til han/ham.

C. BILAG

Bemærkninger jeg vil fremsætte under Konventets kommende møder.

Præambel:

Præambelens nr. 7 er ikke en præcis gengivelse af charterets indhold og bør derfor udgå eller omformuleres.

Til artikel 3:

Stk. 2 bør bringes i overensstemmelse med konventionen om menneskerettigheder og biomedicin.

Særligt pind. 2 om forbud mod racehygiejnisk praksis genfindes ikke præcist i den nævnte form i konventionen. Princippet's udformning i convent 45 efterlader således tvivl om rækkevidden af forbudet mod racehygiejnisk praksis.

Dette princip bør omformuleres i overensstemmelse med konventionen om menneskerettigheder og biomedicin.

Til artikel 5:

Jeg finder, jf. mit forslag i AMD 98 i convent 35, at det af forklaringerne til artiklen klart bør fremgå, at samfundstjeneste som et alternativ til frihedsstraf ikke er omfattet af begrebet ”tvangs- eller pligtarbejde”.

Til artikel 7:

Ordene ”fortroligheden af” bør udgå. I modsat fald kan bestemmelsen fortolkes som en ringere retsbeskyttelse end den, der følger af Den Europæiske Menneskerettighedskonventions artikel 8, stk. 1.

Til artikel 8:

Det foreslås at begrænse bestemmelsens ordlyd til følgende:

”Enhver har i overensstemmelse med fællesskabsretten ret til beskyttelse af personoplysninger, der vedrører den pågældende”.

Af forklaringerne bør det klart fremgå, at persondatadirektivet (Rådets og Parlamentets direktiv 95/46/EF) fastlægger de nærmere regler for beskyttelsens omfang.

Til artikel 11:

Stk. 2 bør udgå, da bestemmelsens rækkevidde er uklar.

Til artikel 12:

I stk. 1 bør sætningen efter kommaet (”navnlig når det gælder ...”) udgå, idet den skaber tvivl om, hvorvidt der er tilstræbt en forbedring i forhold til artikel 11 i Den Europæiske Menneskerettighedskonvention.

I øvrigt kunne stk. 2 udgå, da dette mere har karakter af en tilkendegivelse.

Til artikel 13:

Denne bestemmelse er højst uklar. Forskningen er ikke fri for begrænsninger. Det foreslås at lade bestemmelsen udgå. Rettigheden er allerede tildels omfattet af bestemmelsen om ytringsfrihed som fortolket af Den Europæiske Menneskerettighedsdomstol vedrørende Menneskerettighedskonventions artikel 10.

Til artikel 14:

I stk. 1 bør indsættes ”grundskoleundervisning” således, at bestemmelsen alene omfatter gratis obligatorisk grundskoleundervisning.

Ordet ”pædagogiske” bør udgå i stk. 2.

Forklaringen til stk. 2 om ”frihed til at oprette uddannelsesinstitutioner” kan opfattes som om der gælder et særligt etableringsfrihedsprincip på dette område. Jeg finder, at man bør begrænse omtalen af etableringsfriheder til artikel 16 om den generelle frihed til at oprette og drive virksomhed.

Til artikel 15:

Stk. 3 bør formuleres således:

”Tredjelandstatsborgere, der opholder sig lovligt på medlemsstaternes område, og som i overensstemmelse med de nationale regler har ret til at tage arbejde, har ret til samme arbejdsvilkår som unionsborgere”.

Baggrunden herfor er, at tredjelandstatsborgere skal have tilladelse efter national ret til at tage arbejde i medlemsstaten, førend de har ret til samme arbejdsvilkår som unionborgere.

Til artikel 17:

Som jeg tidligere har givet udtryk for, bør bestemmelsen nøje gengive ordlyden i artikel 1 i 1. tillægsprotokol til Den Europæiske Menneskerettighedskonvention.

Alternativt kunne bestemmelsen erstattes med følgende korte tekst:

”Enhver fysisk eller juridisk person har ret til respekt for sin ejendom”.

I forklaringerne til bestemmelsen bør der i så fald henvises til ordlyden i 1. tillægsprotokol.

Til artikel 19:

Jeg finder, at der i forklaringerne til stk. 2 bør henvises til Genève-konventionen af 28. juli 1951 med henblik på en opregning af de øvrige omstændigheder, hvorunder der ikke kan ske udvisning.

Til artikel 21:

Jeg finder det ønskeligt, at der i forklaringen til stk.1 gøres opmærksomt på, at bestemmelsen ikke er til hinder for positive særforanstaltninger med henblik på at rette op på en skævhed, når disse foranstaltninger er objektivt begrundet og respekterer princippet om proportionalitet.

Til artikel 24:

Det bør understreges, at integration af mennesker med handicap gælder deltagelse ”i alle dele af samfundslivet”.

Til artikel 32:

Stk.2 kan forekomme overflødig, idet rettigheden allerede følger af ligebehandlingsprincippet i artikel 21.

Bestemmelsen bør under alle omstændigheder omformuleres således, at rettigheden på samme måde som i stk. 1 og 3 gælder i overensstemmelse med ”de bestemmelser, der er fastsat ved EF-lovgivningen og medlemsstaternes lovgivning og praksis”.

Stk. 3 kan forekomme specifik og bør generaliseres, da også andre forhold end social bistand og boligstøtte kan bidrage til at sikre den enkelte en værdig tilværelse. Da retten til en bolig bør indgår i charteret, som jeg har argumenteret for under mine generelle bemærkninger, kan den eksplicitte omtale af boligstøtte udgå.

II. Til artikel 34:

Bestemmelsen ser ud til at gå videre end EF-traktatens 16 og bør enten udgå eller bringes i overensstemmelse med sidstnævnte bestemmelse.

Til artikel 35:

Bestemmelsen bør iagttage og sikre, at kravet om "et højt beskyttelsesniveau" på miljøområdet, som findes i EF-traktatens artikel 2 og artikel 174 gengives. Hermed bør der tillige lægges vægt på artikel 6 i EF-traktaten. Dette sikrer også parallelitet vedr. kravet om "et højt beskyttelsesniveau" inden for miljøbeskyttelse og forbrugerbeskyttelse (artikel 36):

Bestemmelsen bør derfor omformuleres til:

"Der sikres et højt niveau for miljøbeskyttelse samt forbedring af miljøkvaliteten under iagttagelse af principperne om bæredygtig udvikling, forsigtighed, forebyggende indsats, fortrinsvis indsats ved kilden, forureneren betaler og proportionalitet".

Til artikel 43:

Bestemmelsen bør gengive TEF art. 18:

"Enhver unionsborger har ret til at færdes og opholde sig frit på medlemsstaternes område med de begrænsninger og på de betingelser, der er fastsat i fællesskabslovgivningen og i gennemførelsesbestemmelserne her til".

Til artikel 45:

Stk. 1 vil jeg foretrække omformuleret til:

” Enhver, hvis rettigheder og friheder er blevet krænket, skal have adgang til effektive retsmidler”.

Henvisningen til ”en domstol” bør udgå, da adgangen til effektive retsmidler ikke alene skal relateres til en domstol, men også andre myndigheder.

I stk. 3 bør det tilføjes, at retten til retshjælp også er betinget af, at søgsmålet ikke er åbenbart ugrundet. I forklaringerne til stk.3 bør det fremgå, at retshjælpsprincippet på dette punkt er i overensstemmelse med de regler, der gælder for meddelelse af fri proces, når borgerne anlægger sag ved De Europæiske Fællesskabers Ret i Første Instans (jf. artikel 94, stk. 2, i Rettens procesreglement).

Til artikel 48:

Det bør klart fremgå af bestemmelsen eller de ledsagende forklaringer, at rettigheden begrænses af de undtagelsesmuligheder, der følger af konventionen af 25. maj 1987 mellem De Europæiske Fællesskabers medlemsstater om forbud mod dobbelt strafforfølgning (ne bis in idem-konventionen), artikel 2.

Disse undtagelsesmuligheder gentages i øvrigt sædvanligvis i EU-retsakter, jf. f.eks. konventionen om beskyttelse af De Europæiske Fællesskabers finansielle interesser (svigskonventionen), artikel 7.

Til artikel 49:

Artikel 49, stk. 1, 2.pkt. bør ændres således, at ordene ”og fremmer anvendelsen heraf” (”et en prouvement l’application”) udgår.

Baggrunden herfor er, at det er uklart om der hermed skabes en positiv handlepligt for Unionens institutioner og/eller medlemsstaterne.

Til artikel 50:

Stk. 2 bør også indeholde en henvisning til afledt fællesskabsret. Det foreslås derfor, at bestemmelsen udformes således:

”De rettigheder, der anerkendes i dette charter, og som er baseret på fællesskabstraktaterne eller traktaten om Den Europæiske Union, udøves på de betingelser og med de begrænsninger, der er fastlagt i disse traktater og i gennemførelsesbestemmelser hertil.”

For en god ordens skyld henledes opmærksomheden på de ovenfor anførte bemærkninger til bestemmelsens stk. 3

Det bør i øvrigt for klarhedens skyld i forklaringerne til artikel 50 fremgå, at der er visse bestemmelser fra Den Europæiske Menneskerettighedskonvention, hvorfra fravigelser ikke kan ske. Dette drejer sig om charterets artikler 2 (undtagen ved død som følge af lovlige krigshandlinger) 4, 5, stk. 1 og 47.

Med venlig hilsen

Erling Olsen

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

fundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 14 September 2000 (18.09)
(OR. fr)

CHARTE 4470/00

CONVENT 47

NOTE FROM THE PRAESIDIUM

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Complete text of the Charter proposed by the Praesidium following the meeting held from 11 to 13 September 2000 and based on CHARTE 4422/00 CONVENT 45¹

PREAMBLE

The peoples of Europe, in developing an ever closer union between them, are resolved to share a peaceful future based on common values.

Taking inspiration from its cultural, humanist and religious heritage, the Union is founded on the indivisible, universal principles of human dignity, freedom, equality and solidarity; it is based on the principles of democracy and the rule of law. It places the individual at the heart of its activities, establishing the citizenship of the Union and creating an area of freedom, security and justice.

¹ Changes to the Articles are in bold.

The Union contributes to the development of these common values while respecting the diversity of the cultures and traditions of the peoples of Europe as well as the national identities of the Member States and the organisation of their public authorities at national, regional and local levels; it aims to promote balanced and sustainable development and ensures free movement of persons, goods, capital and services, and the freedom of establishment.

In adopting this Charter the Union intends to enhance the protection of fundamental rights in the light of changes in society, social progress and scientific and technological developments by making those rights more visible.

This Charter reaffirms, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Community and the Union and the principle of subsidiarity, the rights as they result, in particular, from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the Social Charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights.

Enjoyment of these rights entails responsibilities and duties with regard to other persons, to the human community and to future generations.

Each person is therefore recognised as having the rights and freedoms set out hereafter.

CHAPTER I DIGNITY

3. Nationals of third countries who are authorised to work in the territories of the Member States are entitled to working conditions equivalent to those of citizens of the Union.

Article 16 Freedom to conduct a business

The freedom to conduct a business is recognised.

Article 17 Right to property

1. Everyone has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions, except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to fair compensation being paid within a reasonable period for their loss. The use of property may be regulated insofar as is necessary for the general interest.
2. Intellectual property shall be protected.

Article 18 Right to asylum

The right to asylum shall be guaranteed with due respect for the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees and in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Article 19 Protection in the event of removal, expulsion or extradition

1. Collective expulsions are prohibited.
2. No one may be removed, expelled or extradited to a State where there is a serious risk that he may be subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment.

CHAPTER III EQUALITYArticle 20 Equality before the law

Everyone is equal before the law.

Article 21 Non-discrimination

1. Any discrimination based on any ground such as sex, race, colour, ethnic or social origin, genetic features, language, religion or belief, political or any other opinion, membership of a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, and without prejudice to the special provisions of those Treaties, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

Article 22 Cultural, religious and linguistic diversity

The Union shall respect cultural, religious and linguistic diversity.

Article 23 Equality between men and women

Equality between men and women must be ensured in all areas, including employment, work and pay.

The principle of equality shall not prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures in favour of the under-represented sex.

Article 24 The rights of the child

1. Children shall have the right to such protection and care as is necessary for their well-being. They may express their views freely. Such views shall be taken into consideration on matters which concern them in accordance with their age and maturity.
2. In all actions relating to children, whether taken by public authorities or private institutions, the child's best interests must be a primary consideration.
3. Every child shall have the right to maintain a personal relationship and direct contact with both his parents, unless that is contrary to his interests.

Article 25 Integration of persons with disabilities

The Union recognises and respects the right of persons with disabilities to benefit from measures designed to ensure their independence, social and occupational integration and participation in the life of the community.

CHAPTER IV SOLIDARITY

Article 26 Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Workers or their representatives must at all levels be guaranteed information and consultation in good time on matters which concern them within the undertaking, in the cases and under the conditions provided for by Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 27 Right of collective bargaining and action

Workers and employers, or their respective organisations, have, at all levels, the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and, in cases of conflicts of interest, to take collective action to defend their interests, including strike action, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 28 Right of access to placement services

Everyone has the right of access to a free placement service.

Article 29 Protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

Every worker has the right to protection against unjustified dismissal.

Article 30 Fair and just working conditions

1. Every worker has the right to working conditions which respect his health, safety and dignity.
2. Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave.

Article 31 Prohibition of child labour and protection of young people at work

The employment of children is prohibited. The minimum age of admission to employment may not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people and except for limited derogations.

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions appropriate to their age and be protected against economic exploitation and any work likely to harm their safety, health or physical, mental, moral or social development or to interfere with their education.

Article 32 Family and professional life

1. The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.
2. To reconcile their family and professional lives, everyone shall have the right to protection from dismissal for a reason connected with pregnancy and the right to paid maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.

Article 33 Social security and social assistance

1. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to social security benefits and social services providing protection in such events as pregnancy, illness, industrial accidents, dependency or old age, and in the case of loss of employment, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.
2. Every person residing and moving legally within the European Union is entitled to social security benefits and social advantages in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.

3. The Union recognises and respects the right to social assistance and housing assistance in order to ensure a decent existence for all those who lack sufficient resources, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 34 Health care

Everyone has the right of access to preventive health care and the right to benefit from medical treatment under the conditions established by national laws and practices. A high level of human health protection shall be ensured in the definition and implementation of all Community policies and activities.

Article 35 Access to services of general economic interest

The Union recognises and respects the access to services of general economic interest as provided for in national laws and practices in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty establishing the European Community in order to promote the social and territorial cohesion of the Union.

Article 36 Environmental protection

A high level of environmental protection and the improvement of the quality of the environment shall be integrated into the policies of the Union and ensured in accordance with the principle of sustainable development.

Article 37 Consumer Protection

Union policies shall ensure a high level of consumer protection.

CHAPTER V CITIZENSHIP

Article 38 Right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State.
2. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage by free and secret ballot.

Article 39 Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Article 40 Right to good administration

1. Every person has the right to have his affairs handled impartially fairly, in accordance with the principle of the neutrality of public action (policy?), and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.
2. This right includes:
 - the right of every person to be heard before any individual measure which would affect him adversely is taken in relation to him;
 - the right of every person to have access to his file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy;
 - the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.

3. Every person has the right to have the Community make good any damage caused by its institutions or by its servants in the performance of their duties, in accordance with the general principles common to the laws of the Member States.
4. Every person may write to the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of such institutions and must have an answer in the same language.

Article 41 Right of access to documents

Any citizen of the Union, and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State, has a right of access to European Parliament, Council and Commission documents.

Article 42 Ombudsman

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration by Community institutions and bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Article 43 Right to petition

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Article 44 Freedom of movement and of residence

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.
2. Freedom of movement and residence may be granted, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, to nationals of third countries legally resident in the territory of a Member State.

Article 45 Diplomatic and consular protection

Every citizen of the Union shall, in the territory of a third country in which the Member State of which he is a national is not represented, be entitled to protection by the diplomatic or consular authorities of any Member State, on the same conditions as the nationals of that Member State.

CHAPTER VI JUSTICEArticle 46 Right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial

1. Everyone whose rights and freedoms guaranteed by the law of the Union are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.
2. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal previously established by law. Everyone shall have the possibility of being advised, defended and represented.
3. Legal aid shall be made available to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is necessary to ensure effective access to justice.

Article 47 Presumption of innocence and right of defence

1. Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
2. Respect for the right of defence of anyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed.

Article 48 Principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties

1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the criminal offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles recognised by all nations.
3. The severity of penalties must not be disproportionate to the criminal offence.

Article 49 Right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same criminal offence

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted within the European Union in accordance with the law.

CHAPTER VII GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 50 Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. They shall therefore respect the rights, observe the principles and promote the application thereof in accordance with their respective powers.
2. This Charter does not establish any new power or task for the Community or the Union, or modify powers and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Article 51 Scope of guaranteed rights

1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by law and respect the essential content of those rights and freedoms. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest being pursued by the Union, other legitimate interests in a democratic society or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.
2. Rights recognised by this Charter which are based on the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.
3. Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be the same as those laid down by the said Convention unless this Charter affords greater or more extensive protection.

Article 52 Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or adversely affecting human rights and fundamental freedoms as recognised, in their respective fields of application, by international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and by the Member States' constitutions.

Article 53 Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for herein.

PREAMBLE

The peoples of Europe, in creating an ever closer union among them, are resolved to share a peaceful future based on common values.

Taking inspiration from its cultural, humanist and religious heritage, the Union is founded on the indivisible, universal principles of human dignity, freedom, equality and solidarity; it is based on the principles of democracy and the rule of law. It places the individual at the heart of its activities, by establishing the citizenship of the Union and by creating an area of freedom, security and justice.

The Union contributes to the development of these common values while respecting the diversity of the cultures and traditions of the peoples of Europe as well as the national identities of the Member States and the organisation of their public authorities at national, regional and local levels; it seeks to promote balanced and sustainable development and ensures free movement of persons, goods, services and capital, and the freedom of establishment.

In adopting this Charter the Union intends to enhance the protection of fundamental rights in the light of changes in society, social progress and scientific and technological developments by making those rights more visible.

This Charter reaffirms, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Community and the Union and the principle of subsidiarity, the rights as they result, in particular, from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the Social Charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights.

Enjoyment of these rights entails responsibilities and duties with regard to other persons, to the human community and to future generations.

The Union therefore recognises the rights and freedoms set out hereafter.

Article 28

Right of access to placement services

Everyone has the right of access to a free placement service.

Article 29

Protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

Every worker has the right to protection against unjustified dismissal.

Article 30

Fair and just working conditions

1. Every worker has the right to working conditions which respect his or her health, safety and dignity.
2. Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave.

Article 31

Prohibition of child labour and protection of young people at work

The employment of children is prohibited. The minimum age of admission to employment may not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age, without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people and except for limited derogations.

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions appropriate to their age and be protected against economic exploitation and any work likely to harm their safety, health or physical, mental, moral or social development or to interfere with their education.

Article 32

Family and professional life

1. The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.
2. To reconcile family and professional life, everyone shall have the right to protection from dismissal for a reason connected with maternity and the right to paid maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.

Article 33

Social security and social assistance

1. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to social security benefits and social services providing protection in cases such as maternity, illness, industrial accidents, dependency or old age, and in the case of loss of employment, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.
2. Everyone residing and moving legally within the European Union is entitled to social security benefits and social advantages in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.
3. In order to combat social exclusion and poverty, the Union recognises and respects the right to social assistance and housing assistance, to ensure a decent existence for all those who lack sufficient resources, in accordance with the procedures laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 34

Health care

Everyone has the right of access to preventive health care and the right to benefit from medical treatment under the conditions established by national laws and practices. A high level of human health protection shall be ensured in the definition and implementation of all Union policies and activities.

Article 35

Access to services of general economic interest

The Union recognises and respects the access to services of general economic interest as provided for in national laws and practices in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community in order to promote the social and territorial cohesion of the Union.

Article 36

Environmental protection

A high level of environmental protection and the improvement of the quality of the environment must be integrated into the policies of the Union and ensured in accordance with the principle of sustainable development.

Article 37

Consumer Protection

Union policies shall ensure a high level of consumer protection.

CHAPTER V

CITIZENS' RIGHTS

Article 38

Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at elections to the European Parliament

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he or she resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State.
2. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage by free and secret ballot.

Article 39

Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he or she resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Article 40

Right to good administration

1. Every person has the right to have his or her affairs handled impartially, fairly, in accordance with the principle of the neutrality of acts by public authorities, and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.

2. This right includes:

- the right of every person to be heard, before any individual measure which would affect him or her adversely is taken;
- the right of every person to have access to his or her file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of professional and business secrecy;
- the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.

3. Every person has the right to have the Community make good any damage caused by its institutions or by its servants in the performance of their duties, in accordance with the general principles common to the laws of the Member States.

4. Every person may write to the institutions of the Union in one of the languages of the Treaties and must have an answer in the same language.

Article 41

Right of access to documents

Any citizen of the Union, and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State, has a right of access to European Parliament, Council and Commission documents.

Article 42

Ombudsman

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration in the activities of the Community institutions or bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Article 43

Right to petition

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Article 44

Freedom of movement and of residence

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.
2. Freedom of movement and residence may be granted, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, to nationals of third countries legally resident in the territory of a Member State.

Article 45

Diplomatic and consular protection

Every citizen of the Union shall, in the territory of a third country in which the Member State of which he or she is a national is not represented, be entitled to protection by the diplomatic or consular authorities of any Member State, on the same conditions as the nationals of that Member State.

CHAPTER VI

JUSTICE

Article 46

Right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial

1. Everyone whose rights and freedoms guaranteed by the law of the Union are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.
2. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal previously established by law. Everyone shall have the possibility of being advised, defended and represented.
3. Legal aid shall be made available to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is necessary to ensure effective access to justice.

Article 47

Presumption of innocence and right of defence

1. Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
2. Respect for the rights of the defence of anyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed.

Article 48

Principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties

1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the criminal offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles recognised by the community of nations.
3. The severity of penalties must not be disproportionate to the criminal offence.

Article 49

Right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same criminal offence

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he or she has already been finally acquitted or convicted within the Union in accordance with the law.

CHAPTER VII

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 50

Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. They shall therefore respect the rights, observe the principles and promote the application thereof in accordance with their respective powers.
2. This Charter does not establish any new power or task for the Community or the Union, or modify powers and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Article 51

Scope of guaranteed rights

1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by law and respect the essence of those rights and freedoms. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest being pursued by the Union, other legitimate interests in a democratic society or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.
2. Rights recognised by this Charter which are based on the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.

3. Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be the same as those laid down by the said Convention unless this Charter affords greater or more extensive protection.

Article 52

Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or adversely affecting human rights and fundamental freedoms as recognised, in their respective fields of application, by international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and by the Member States' constitutions.

Article 53

Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for herein.

CHARTE 4471/00

CONVENT 48

NOTE FROM THE PRAESIDIUM

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Text of the explanations relating to the complete text of the Charter as set out in CHARTE 4470/00 CONVENT 47 + COR 1

These explanations have been prepared at the instigation of the Praesidium. They have no legal value and are simply intended to clarify the provisions of the Charter in the light of the discussions conducted by the Convention.

PREAMBLE

The peoples of Europe, in developing an ever closer union between them, are resolved to share a peaceful future based on common values.

Taking inspiration from its cultural, humanist and religious heritage, the Union is founded on the indivisible, universal principles of human dignity, freedom, equality and solidarity; it is based on the principles of democracy and the rule of law. It places the individual at the heart of its activities, establishing the citizenship of the Union and creating an area of freedom, security and justice.

The Union contributes to the development of these common values while respecting the diversity of the cultures and traditions of the peoples of Europe as well as the national identities of the Member States and the organisation of their public authorities at national, regional and local levels; it aims to promote balanced and sustainable development and ensures the free movement of persons, goods, capital and services, and the freedom of establishment.

In adopting this Charter, the Union intends to enhance the protection of fundamental rights in the light of changes in society, social progress and scientific and technological developments by making those rights more visible.

This Charter reaffirms, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Community and the Union and the principle of subsidiarity, the rights as they result, in particular, from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the Social Charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights.

Enjoyment of these rights entails responsibilities and duties with regard to other persons, to the human community and to future generations.

The European Union therefore recognises the rights and freedoms set out hereafter.

CHAPTER I. DIGNITY

Article 1. Human dignity

Human dignity is inviolable. It must be respected and protected.

Explanation

The dignity of the human person is not only a fundamental right in itself but constitutes the real basis of fundamental rights. For that reason the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights enshrined this principle in its preamble as follows: "Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world."

Consequently, Article 1 produces the following effects, inter alia:

- 1. None of the rights laid down in this Charter may be used to harm the dignity of another person.*
- 2. The dignity of the human person is part of the actual substance of the rights laid down in this Charter and must therefore be respected, even where a right is restricted.*

Article 2. Right to life

1. Everyone has the right to life.
2. No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed.

Explanation

1. The content of paragraph 1 corresponds to the first sentence of Article 2(1) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:
"1. Everyone's right to life shall be protected by law..."
The second sentence of the provision, which referred to the death penalty, was superseded by the entry into force of Article 1 of Protocol No 6 to the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:
"The death penalty shall be abolished. No-one shall be condemned to such penalty or executed.
" Article 2(2) of the Charter is based on that provision.

2. Under Article 51 of the Charter, the right to life is clearly defined and the "negative" definitions appearing in the Convention must be regarded as also forming part of the Charter pursuant to Article 51(3). This right is defined as follows in the Convention:
 - (a) Article 2(2) of the European Convention on Human Rights:
"Deprivation of life shall not be regarded as inflicted in contravention of this article when it results from the use of force which is no more than absolutely necessary:
 - (a) in defence of any person from unlawful violence;
 - (b) in order to effect a lawful arrest or to prevent the escape of a person lawfully detained;
 - (c) in action lawfully taken for the purpose of quelling a riot or insurrection."

 - (b) Article 2 of Protocol No 6 to the European Convention on Human Rights:
"A State may make provision in its law for the death penalty in respect of acts committed in time of war or of imminent threat of war; such penalty shall be applied only in the instances laid down in the law and in accordance with its provisions..."

The provisions of this Article correspond to those of the Articles of the European Convention on Human Rights quoted above in accordance with Article 51(3) of the Charter. They therefore have the same meaning and scope as the latter.

Article 3. Right to the integrity of the person

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and mental integrity.
2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - the free and informed consent of the person concerned, according to the procedures laid down by law,
 - the prohibition of eugenic practices, in particular those aiming at the selection of persons,
 - the prohibition on making the human body and its parts as such a source of financial gain,
 - the prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Explanation

The principles of this Article are already included in the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. The Charter does not set out to depart from those principles. The fact that only reproductive cloning is prohibited does not prevent the legislature from prohibiting other forms of cloning. It neither authorises nor prohibits other forms of cloning. The reference to eugenic practices, in particular those aiming at the selection of persons, relates to possible situations in which selection programmes are organised and implemented, involving campaigns for sterilisation, forced pregnancy, compulsory ethnic marriage among others, all acts deemed to be international crimes in the Statute of the International Criminal Court signed in Rome.

Article 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment and punishment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Explanation

The right in Article 4 is the right guaranteed by Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which has the same wording. In accordance with Article 51(3), its meaning and scope are therefore the same as those of that Article, which reads as follows: "No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment".

Article 5. Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.
3. Trafficking in human beings is prohibited.

Explanation

The right in Article 5(1) and (2) is the right corresponding to Article 4(1) and (2) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which has the same wording.

In accordance with Article 51(3) of the Charter, its meaning and scope are therefore the same as those of Article 4 of the Convention. Consequently:

1. paragraph 1 may not be limited at all;
2. in paragraph 2, "forced or compulsory labour" must be understood in the light of the "negative" definitions contained in Article 4(3) of the European Convention on Human Rights. That provision reads as follows:

"For the purpose of this article the term "forced or compulsory labour" shall not include:

 - (a) any work required to be done in the ordinary course of detention imposed according to the provisions of Article 5 of this Convention or during conditional release from such detention;*
 - (b) any service of a military character or, in case of conscientious objectors in countries where they are recognised, service exacted instead of compulsory military service;*

- (c) any service exacted in case of an emergency or calamity threatening the life or well-being of the community;
- (d) any work or service which forms part of normal civic obligations."

Paragraph 3 stems directly from the principle of human dignity and takes account of recent developments in organised crime, such as the organisation of lucrative illegal immigration or sexual exploitation networks. The annex to the Europol Convention contains the following definition which refers to trafficking for the purpose of sexual exploitation: "traffic in human beings: means subjection of a person to the real and illegal sway of other persons by using violence or menaces or by abuse of authority or intrigue with a view to the exploitation of prostitution, forms of sexual exploitation and assault of minors or trade in abandoned children". Chapter VI of the Schengen Convention, which has been integrated into the "acquis communautaire", in which the United Kingdom participates and Ireland has requested to participate, contains the following wording in Article 27(1) which refers to illegal immigration networks: " The Contracting Parties undertake to impose appropriate penalties on any person who, for financial gain, assists or tries to assist an alien to enter or reside within the territory of one of the Contracting Parties in breach of that Contracting Party's laws on the entry and residence of aliens."

CHAPTER II. FREEDOMS

Article 6. Right to liberty and security

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person.

Explanation

The rights in Article 6 are the rights guaranteed by Article 5 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

In accordance with Article 51(3) of the Charter, the meaning and scope of these rights are the same as those of Article 5. Consequently, limitations may not exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms. Therefore, the only limitations which are permissible are those in the context of Article 5 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads:

- "1. Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in the following cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law:
 - (a) the lawful detention of a person after conviction by a competent court;*
 - (b) the lawful arrest or detention of a person for non-compliance with the lawful order of a court or in order to secure the fulfilment of any obligation prescribed by law;*
 - (c) the lawful arrest or detention of a person effected for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority on reasonable suspicion of having committed an offence or when it is reasonably considered necessary to prevent his committing an offence or fleeing after having done so;*
 - (d) the detention of a minor by lawful order for the purpose of educational supervision or his lawful detention for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority;*
 - (e) the lawful detention of persons for the prevention of the spreading of infectious diseases, of persons of unsound mind, alcoholics or drug addicts or vagrants;*
 - (f) the lawful arrest or detention of a person to prevent his effecting an unauthorised entry into the country or of a person against whom action is being taken with a view to deportation or extradition.
- 2. Everyone who is arrested shall be informed promptly, in a language which he understands, of the reasons for his arrest and of any charge against him.*
 - 3. Everyone arrested or detained in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1.c of this article shall be brought promptly before a judge or other officer authorised by law to exercise judicial power and shall be entitled to trial within a reasonable time or to release pending trial. Release may be conditioned by guarantees to appear for trial.*

4. Everyone who is deprived of his liberty by arrest or detention shall be entitled to take proceedings by which the lawfulness of his detention shall be decided speedily by a court and his release ordered if the detention is not lawful.
5. Everyone who has been the victim of arrest or detention in contravention of the provisions of this article shall have an enforceable right to compensation."

Since the Charter is to apply within the context of the Union, the rights enshrined in Article 6 must be respected particularly when, in accordance with Title VI of the Treaty on European Union, the Union is adopting framework decisions for harmonisation in criminal matters.

Article 7. Respect for private and family life

Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and [...] his communications.

Explanation

The rights guaranteed in Article 7 correspond to those guaranteed by Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights. To take account of developments in technology the word "correspondence" has been replaced by "communications".

In accordance with Article 51(3), the meaning and scope of this right are the same as those of the corresponding article of the Convention. Consequently, the limitations to this right which are permissible are those which result from the Convention. Article 8 of the Convention reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence.*

2. There shall be no interference by a public authority with the exercise of this right except such as is in accordance with the law and is necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security, public safety or the economic well-being of the country, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others."

Article 8. Protection of personal data

1. Everyone has the right to the protection of personal data concerning him.
2. Such data must be processed fairly for specified purposes on the basis of the consent of the person concerned or some other legitimate basis laid down by law. Everyone has the right of access to data which has been collected concerning him, and the right to have it rectified.
3. Compliance with these rules shall be subject to control by an independent authority.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 286 of the Treaty establishing the European Community and Directive 95/46/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council on the protection of individuals with regard to the processing of personal data and on the free movement of such data (OJ L 281, 23.11.1995) as well as on Article 8 of the ECHR and on the Council of Europe Convention of 28 January 1981 for the Protection of Individuals with regard to Automatic Processing of Personal Data which has been ratified by all the Member States. The right to protection of personal data may be limited under the conditions set out in Article 51 of the Charter.

Article 9. Right to marry and right to found a family

The right to marry and the right to found a family shall be guaranteed in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of these rights.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 12 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows: "Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and to found a family according to the national laws governing the exercising of this right." To take account of changes in society, the wording has been altered to cover cases in which national legislation recognises arrangements other than marriage for founding a family. This Article neither prohibits nor imposes the granting of the status of marriage to unions between people of the same sex.

Article 10. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. This right includes freedom to change religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or in private, to manifest religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.
2. The right to conscientious objection is recognised, in accordance with the national laws regulating its implementation.

Explanation

The right guaranteed in paragraph 1 corresponds to the right guaranteed in Article 9 of the ECHR and, in accordance with Article 51(3) of the Charter, has the same meaning and scope. Limitations must therefore respect Article 9(2) of the Convention which reads as follows: "Freedom to manifest one's religion or beliefs shall be subject only to such limitations as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of public safety, for the protection of public order, health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others."

The right guaranteed in paragraph 2 corresponds to national constitutional traditions and to the development of national legislation on this issue.

Article 11. Freedom of expression and information

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.
2. Freedom of the media and of its pluralism shall be guaranteed.

Explanation

This Article corresponds to Article 10 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

"1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers. This article shall not prevent States from requiring the licensing of broadcasting, television or cinema enterprises.

2. The exercise of these freedoms, since it carries with it duties and responsibilities, may be subject to such formalities, conditions, restrictions or penalties as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society, in the interests of national security, territorial integrity or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, for the protection of the reputation or rights of others, for preventing the disclosure of information received in confidence, or for maintaining the authority and impartiality of the judiciary."

Pursuant to Article 51(3) of the Charter, the meaning and scope of this right are the same as those guaranteed by the Convention and limitations may not exceed those provided for in Article 10(2) of the Convention, without prejudice to any restrictions which Community law may impose on Member States' right to introduce the licensing arrangements referred to in the third sentence of Article 10(1) of the ECHR..

Paragraph 2 of this Article spells out the consequences of paragraph 1 regarding freedom of the press. It is based in particular on Court of Justice case law regarding television, particularly in case C-288/89 (judgment of 25 July 1991, Stichting Collectieve Antennevoorziening Gouda and others [1991] ECR I-4007). According to the Court of Justice, the pluralism requirement authorises inter alia the competent authorities to take the measures needed to guarantee diversity of sources of information.

Article 12. Freedom of assembly and of association

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association at all levels, in particular in political, trade union and civic matters. In particular, everyone has the right to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his interests.
2. Political parties at European level contribute to expressing the political will of the citizens of the Union.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 of this Article corresponds to Article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his interests.*
- 2. No restrictions shall be placed on the exercise of these rights other than such as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others. This article shall not prevent the imposition of lawful restrictions on the exercise of these rights by members of the armed forces, of the police or of the administration of the State."*

The meaning and scope of the provisions of paragraph 1 are the same as those of the European Convention on Human Rights, with the exception of their area of application since they apply at all levels including European level. In accordance with Article 51(3) of the Charter, limitations on that right may not exceed those provided for in Article 11(2) of the ECHR.. This right is also based on Article 11 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers.

Paragraph 2 of this Article corresponds to Article 191 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Article 13. Freedom of the arts and sciences

The arts and scientific research shall be free of constraint. Academic freedom shall be respected.

Explanation

This right is deduced primarily from the right to freedom of thought and expression. It is to be exercised within the framework of Article 1 and subject to the limitation clause in Article 51. It is subject to respect for the dignity of the person and all the fundamental rights, must be exercised having regard to Article 1 and may be restricted in order to guarantee respect for those rights.

Article 14. Right to education

1. Everyone has the right to education and to have access to vocational and continuing training.
2. This right includes the right to receive free compulsory education.
3. The freedom to found educational establishments with due respect for democratic principles and the right of parents to ensure the education and teaching of their children in conformity with their religious, philosophical and pedagogical convictions shall be respected, in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of such freedom and right.

Explanation

This Article is based on the common constitutional traditions of Member States and on Article 2 of the Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

"No person shall be denied the right to education. In the exercise of any functions which it assumes in relation to education and to teaching, the State shall respect the right of parents to ensure such education and teaching in conformity with their own religious and philosophical convictions."

It was considered useful to extend this right to vocational and continuing training and to add the principle of free compulsory education. As it is worded, the latter principle merely implies that as regards compulsory education, each child has the possibility of attending an establishment which offers free education. It does not require all establishments which provide education, in particular private ones, to be free of charge. Insofar as the Charter applies to the Union, this means that in its training policies the Union must respect free compulsory education, but this does not, of course, create new powers. Regarding the right of parents, it must be interpreted in conjunction with the provisions of Article 24.

Freedom to found public or private educational establishments is guaranteed as one of the aspects of freedom to conduct a business but it is limited by respect for democratic principles and is exercised in accordance with the arrangements defined by national legislation.

Article 15. Freedom to choose an occupation

1. Everyone has the right to work for his living and to engage in a freely chosen or accepted occupation.
2. Every citizen of the Union has the freedom to seek employment, to work, to exercise the right of establishment and to provide services in any Member State.
3. Nationals of third countries who are authorised to work in the territories of the Member States are entitled to working conditions equivalent to those of citizens of the Union.

Explanation

Freedom to choose an occupation, as enshrined in paragraph 1, is recognised in Court of Justice case law (see inter alia judgment of 14 May 1974, Case 4/73 Nold [1974] ECR 491, paragraphs 12 to 14 of the grounds; judgment of 13 December 1979, Case 44/79 Hauer [1979] ECR 3727; judgment of 8 October 1986, Case 234/85 Keller [1986] ECR 2897, paragraph 8 of the grounds).

This paragraph also draws upon Article 1(2) of the European Social Charter which was signed on 18 October 1961 and has been ratified by all the Member States, and on point 4 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers of 9 December 1989.

The second paragraph deals with the three freedoms guaranteed by Articles 39, 43 and 49 et seq of the EC Treaty, namely freedom of movement for workers, freedom of establishment and freedom to provide services.

The third paragraph is based on TEC Article 137(3), fourth indent, and on Article 19(4) of the European Social Charter signed on 18 October 1961 and ratified by all the Member States. The question of recruitment of seamen having the nationality of third States for the crews of vessels flying the flag of a Member State of the Union is governed by Community law and national legislation and practice.

Article 16. Freedom to conduct a business

The freedom to conduct a business is recognised.

Explanation

This Article is based on Court of Justice case law which has recognised freedom to exercise an economic or commercial activity (see judgments of 14 May 1974, Case 4/73 Nold [1974] ECR 491, paragraph 14 of the grounds, and of 27 September 1979, Case 230-78 SPA Eridiana and others [1979] ECR 2749, paragraphs 20 and 31 of the grounds) and freedom of contract (see inter alia Sukkerfabriken Nykøbing judgment, Case 151/78 [1979] ECR I, paragraph 19 of the grounds, and judgment of 5 October 1999, C-240/97 Spain v. Commission [not yet published], paragraph 99 of the grounds) and TEC Article 4(1) and (2) which recognises free competition. Of course, this right is to be exercised with respect for Community law and national legislation. It may be subject to the limitations provided for in Article 51(1) of the Charter.

Article 17. Right to property

1. Everyone has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions, except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to fair compensation being paid within a reasonable time for their loss. The use of property may be regulated insofar as is necessary for the general interest.
2. Intellectual property shall be protected.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 1 of the Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights: "Every natural or legal person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions. No one shall be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and subject to the conditions provided for by law and by the general principles of international law.

The preceding provisions shall not, however, in any way impair the right of a State to enforce such laws as it deems necessary to control the use of property in accordance with the general interest or to secure the payment of taxes or other contributions or penalties."

This is a fundamental right common to all national constitutions. It has been recognised on numerous occasions by the case law of the Court of Justice, initially in the Hauer judgment (13 December 1979, ECR [1979] 3727). The wording has been updated but, in accordance with Article 51(3), the meaning and scope of the right are the same as those of the right guaranteed by the Convention and the limitations may not exceed those provided for in the Convention.

Protection of intellectual property, one aspect of the right of property, is explicitly mentioned in paragraph 2 because of its growing importance and Community secondary legislation. Intellectual property covers not only literary and artistic property but also patent and trademark rights and associated rights.

Article 18. Right to asylum

The right to asylum shall be guaranteed with due respect for the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees and in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Explanation

The text of the Article is based on TEC Article 63 which requires the Union to respect the Geneva Convention on refugees. The provisions of Article 1 of Protocol No 7 to the European Convention on Human Rights concerning procedural safeguards in the event of expulsion have not been incorporated, as most Member States have not signed or ratified that Protocol. Reference should be made to the Protocols relating to the United Kingdom and Ireland annexed to the Treaty of Amsterdam and to Denmark to determine the extent to which those Member States implement Community law in this area and are, in accordance with Article 50(1), bound by the present Article This Article is in line with the Protocol on Asylum annexed to the Treaty of Amsterdam.

Article 19. Protection in the event of removal, expulsion or extradition

1. Collective expulsions are prohibited.
2. No one may be removed, expelled or extradited to a State where there is a serious risk that he may be subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 of this Article has the same meaning and scope as Article 4 of Protocol No 4 to the European Convention on Human Rights concerning collective expulsion. Its purpose is to guarantee that every decision is based on a specific examination and that no single measure can be taken to expel all persons who are nationals of a particular State.

Paragraph 2 incorporates case law from the European Court of Human Rights regarding Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights (see Ahmed v. Austria, judgment of 17 December 1996, [1996] ECR VI.2206 and Soering, judgment of 7 July 1989).

CHAPTER III. EQUALITY

Article 20. Equality before the law

Everyone is equal before the law.

Explanation

This Article corresponds to a principle which has been included in all European constitutions since the 1789 Declaration of Human and Civil Rights and has also been recognised by the Court of Justice as a basic principle of Community law (judgment of 13 November 1984, Case 283/83 Racke [1984] ECR 3791, judgment of 17 April 1997, Case 15/95 EARL [1997] ECR I-1961, and judgment of 13 April 2000, Case 292/97 Karlsson, not yet published).

Article 21. Non-discrimination

1. Any discrimination based on any ground such as sex, race, colour, ethnic or social origin, genetic features, language, religion or belief, political or any other opinion, membership of a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, and without prejudice to the special provisions of those Treaties, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 draws on Article 13 of the EC Treaty, Article 14 of the European Convention on Human Rights and Article 11 of the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine as regards genetic heritage.

Paragraph 2 corresponds to Article 12 of the EC Treaty and must be applied in compliance with the Treaty.

Article 22. Cultural, religious and linguistic diversity

The Union shall respect cultural, religious and linguistic diversity.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 6 of the Treaty on European Union and on Article 151(1) and (4) of the TEC concerning culture. It is also inspired by declaration No 11 to the Final Act of the Amsterdam Treaty on the status of churches and non-confessional organisations.

Article 23. Equality between men and women

Equality between men and women must be ensured in all areas, including employment, work, and pay.

The principle of equality shall not prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures in favour of the under-represented sex.

Explanation

The first paragraph is based on Article 141 of the EC Treaty and draws on Article 20 of the revised European Social Charter of 3 May 1996 and on point 16 of the Community Charter on the rights of workers.

It is also based on Article 141(4) of the EC Treaty and Article 2(4) of Council Directive 76/207/EEC on the implementation of the principle of equal treatment for men and women as regards access to employment, vocational training and promotion, and working conditions.

Paragraph 2 takes over in shorter form Article 141(4) of the EC Treaty which provides that the principle of equal treatment does not prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures providing for specific advantages in order to make it easier for the under-represented sex to pursue a vocational activity or to prevent or compensate for disadvantages in professional careers. In accordance with Article 51(2), the present paragraph does not amend Article 141(4) EC.

Article 24. The rights of the child

1. Children shall have the right to such protection and care as is necessary for their well-being. They may express their views freely. Such views shall be taken into consideration on matters which concern them in accordance with their age and maturity.
2. In all actions relating to children, whether taken by public authorities or private institutions, the child's best interests must be a primary consideration.
3. Every child shall have the right to maintain a personal relationship and direct contact with both his parents, unless that is contrary to his interests.

Explanation

This Article is based on the New York Convention on the Rights of the Child signed on 20 November 1989 and ratified by all the Member States, particularly Articles 3, 12 and 13 thereof.

Article 25. Integration of persons with disabilities

The Union recognises and respects the right of persons with disabilities to benefit from measures designed to ensure their independence, social and occupational integration and participation in the life of the community.

Explanation

The principle set out in this Article is based on Article 15 of the European Social Charter and also draws on Article 15 of the revised Social Charter and point 24 of the Community Charter on the rights of workers.

CHAPTER IV. SOLIDARITY

Article 26. Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Workers or their representatives must at all levels be guaranteed information and consultation in good time on matters which concern them within the undertaking, in the cases and under the conditions provided for by Community law and national laws and practices.

Explanation

This Article appears in the revised European Social Charter (Article 21) and the Community Charter on the rights of workers (points 17 and 18). There is a considerable Community acquis in this field: Directives 98/59/EC (collective redundancies), 77/187/EC (transfers of undertakings) and 94/45/EC (European works councils). The phrase "at all levels" includes the European level.

Article 27. Right of collective bargaining and action

Workers and employers, or their respective organisations, have, at all levels, the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and, in cases of conflicts of interest, to take collective action to defend their interests, including strike action, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 1 of the European Social Charter and on the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers (points 12 to 14). The right of collective action was recognised by the European Court of Human Rights as one of the elements of trade union rights laid down by Article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights. The phrase "at all levels" includes the European level.

Article 28. Right of access to placement services

Everyone has the right of access to a free placement service.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 1(3) of the European Social Charter and point 13 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers.

Article 29. Protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

Every worker has the right to protection against unjustified dismissal.

Explanation

This Article draws on Article 24 of the revised Social Charter.

Article 30. Fair and just working conditions

1. Every worker has the right to working conditions which respect his health, safety and dignity.
2. Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave.

Explanation

This Article is based on Directive 89/391/EEC on the introduction of measures to encourage improvements in the safety and health of workers at work, Article 3 of the Social Charter and point 19 of the Community Charter on the rights of workers. The right to dignity at work in particular is proclaimed in Article 26 of the revised Social Charter.

Paragraph 2 is based on Directive 93/104/EC concerning certain aspects of the organisation of working time, Article 2 of the European Social Charter and point 8 of the Community Charter on the rights of workers.

Article 31. Prohibition of child labour and protection of young people at work

The employment of children is prohibited. The minimum age of admission to employment may not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people and except for limited derogations.

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions appropriate to their age and be protected against economic exploitation and any work likely to harm their safety, health or physical, mental, moral or social development or to interfere with their education.

Explanation

This Article is based on Directive 94/33/EC on the protection of young people at work, Article 7 of the European Social Charter and points 20 to 23 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers.

Article 32. Family and professional life

1. The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.
2. To reconcile their family and professional lives, everyone shall have the right to protection from dismissal for a reason connected with pregnancy and the right to paid maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.

Explanation

The first paragraph is based on Article 16 of the European Social Charter.

The second paragraph draws on Council Directive 92/85/EEC of 19 October 1992 on the introduction of measures to encourage improvements in the safety and health at work of pregnant workers and workers who have recently given birth or are breastfeeding and Directive 96/34/EC on the framework agreement on parental leave concluded by UNICE, CEEP and the ETUC. It is also based on Article 8 (protection of maternity) of the European Social Charter and draws on Article 27 (right of workers with family responsibilities to equal opportunities and equal treatment) of the revised Social Charter.

Article 33. Social security and social assistance

1. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to social security benefits and social services providing protection in events such as pregnancy, illness, industrial accidents, dependency or old age and in the case of loss of employment, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.
2. Every person residing and moving legally within the European Union is entitled to social security benefits and social advantages in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.
3. To combat social exclusion and poverty, the Union recognises and respects the right to social assistance and housing assistance in order to ensure a decent existence for all those who lack sufficient resources, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.

Explanation

The principle set out in paragraph 1 is based on Article 12 of the European Social Charter and point 10 of the Community Charter on the rights of workers. The Union must respect it when exercising the powers conferred on it by Article 140 of the Treaty establishing the European Community. The reference to social services relates to cases in which such services have been introduced for the management of certain social advantages. Where such services do not exist, this reference relates to the advantages allocated directly by public bodies.

The second paragraph is based on Article 13(4) of the European Social Charter and point 2 of the Community Charter and sets out the rules arising from Regulation No 1408/71.

The third paragraph draws on Articles 30 and 31 of the revised Social Charter and point 10 of the Community Charter. The Union must respect it in the context of policies based on Article 137(2) of the Treaty establishing the European Community, particularly the last paragraph.

Article 34. Health care

Everyone has the right of access to preventive health care and the right to benefit from medical treatment under the conditions established by national laws and practices. A high level of human health protection shall be ensured in the determination and implementation of all Community policies and activities.

Explanation

The principles set out in this Article are based on Article 152 of the EC Treaty and on Article 11 of the European Social Charter. The second sentence of the Article takes over Article 152(1).

Article 35. Access to services of general economic interest

The Union recognises and respects the access to services of general economic interest as provided for in national laws and practices in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty establishing the European Community in order to promote the social and territorial cohesion of the Union.

Explanation

This Article fully respects Article 16 of the Treaty establishing the European Community and does not create any new right. It merely sets out the principle of respect by the Union for the access to services of general economic interest as provided for by national provisions, when those provisions are compatible with Community legislation.

Article 36. Environmental protection

A high level of environmental protection and the improvement of the quality of the environment shall be integrated into the policies of the Union and ensured in accordance with the principle of sustainable development.

Explanation

The principles set out in this Article are based on Articles 2, 6 and 174 of the EC Treaty.

Article 37. Consumer protection

Union policies shall ensure a high level of consumer protection.

Explanation

The principles set out in this Article are based on Article 153 of the EC Treaty.

CHAPTER V. CITIZENSHIPArticle 38. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State.
2. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage by free and secret ballot.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 of this Article corresponds to the right guaranteed by Article 19(2) of the EC Treaty. Paragraph 2 corresponds to Article 190(1) of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 51(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions set out in the Treaty. Paragraph 2 of this Article states the basic principles of the electoral system in a democratic State.

Article 39. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Explanation

This Article corresponds to the right guaranteed by Article 19(1) of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 51(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions set out in the Treaty.

Article 40. Right to good administration

1. Every person has the right to have his affairs handled impartially, fairly, in accordance with the principle of the neutrality of public policy and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.
2. This right includes:

- the right of every person to be heard before any individual measure which would affect him adversely is taken in relation to him;
 - the right of every person to have access to his file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of professional and business secrecy;
 - the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.
3. Every person has the right to have the Community make good any damage caused by its institutions or by its servants in the performance of their duties, in accordance with the general principles common to the laws of the Member States.
 4. Every person may write to the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of such institutions and must have an answer in the same language.

Explanation

This right is based on the existence of a Community based on the rule of law and was developed in the case law which enshrined the principle of good administration (see inter alia Court of Justice judgment of 31 March 1992, Case C-255/90 P, Burbán [1992] ECR I-2253, and Court of First Instance judgments of 18 September 1995, Case T-167/94 Nölle [1995] ECR II-2589, and 9 July 1999, Case T-231/97 New Europe Consulting and others [not yet published]). The wording for that right in the first two paragraphs results from the case law (Court of Justice judgment of 15 October 1987, Case 222/86 Heylens [1987] ECR 4097, paragraph 15 of the grounds, judgment of 18 October 1989 in Case 374/87 Orkem [1989] ECR 3283, judgment of 21 November 1991 in Case C-269/90 TU München [1991] ECR I-5469, and Court of First Instance judgments of 6 December 1994 in Case T-450/93 Lisrestal [1994] ECR II-1177, 18 September 1995 in Case T-167/94 Nölle [1995] ECR II-258), and the wording regarding the obligation to give reasons comes from Article 253 of the EC Treaty.

Paragraph 3 reproduces the right guaranteed by Article 288 of the EC Treaty.

Paragraph 4 reproduces the right guaranteed by the third paragraph of Article 21 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 51(2) of the Charter, those rights are to be applied under the conditions and within the limits defined by the Treaties.

Article 41. Right of access to documents

Any citizen of the Union, and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State, has a right of access to European Parliament, Council and Commission documents.

Explanation

The right guaranteed in this Article is the right guaranteed by Article 255 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 51(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions defined by the Treaty.

Article 42. Ombudsman

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration by Community institutions and bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Explanation

The right guaranteed in this Article is the right guaranteed by Articles 21 and 195 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 51(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions defined by the Treaty.

Article 43. Right to petition

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Explanation

The right guaranteed in this Article is the right guaranteed by Article 21 and 194 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 51(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions defined by the Treaty.

Article 44. Freedom of movement and of residence

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.
2. Freedom of movement and residence may be granted, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, to nationals of third countries legally resident in the territory of a Member State.

Explanation

The right guaranteed by paragraph 1 is the right guaranteed by Article 18 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 51(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions and within the limits defined by the Treaty.

Paragraph 2 refers to the power granted to the Community by Article 62(3) and Article 63(4) of the EC Treaty. Consequently, the granting of this right depends on the institutions exercising that power.

Article 45. Diplomatic and consular protection

Every citizen of the Union shall, in the territory of a third country in which the Member State of which he is a national is not represented, be entitled to protection by the diplomatic or consular authorities of any Member State, on the same conditions as the nationals of that Member State.

Explanation

The right guaranteed by this Article is the right guaranteed by Article 20 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 51(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions defined by the Treaty.

CHAPTER VI. JUSTICE

Article 46. Right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial

1. Everyone whose rights and freedoms guaranteed by the law of the Union are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.
2. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal previously established by law. Everyone shall have the possibility of being advised, defended and represented.
3. Legal aid shall be made available to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is necessary to ensure effective access to justice.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 is based on Article 13 of the European Convention on Human Rights:

"Everyone whose rights and freedoms as set forth in this Convention are violated shall have an effective remedy before a national authority notwithstanding that the violation has been committed by persons acting in an official capacity."

However, in Community law the protection is more extensive since it guarantees the right to an effective remedy before a court. The Court of Justice enshrined the principle in its judgment of 15 May 1986 (Case 222/84 Johnston [1986] ECR 1651; see also judgment of 15 October 1987, Case 222/86 Heylens [1987] ECR 4097 and judgment of 3 December 1992, Case C-97/91 Borelli [1992] ECR I-6313). According to the Court, this principle also applies to the Member States when they are implementing Community law. The inclusion of this precedent in the Charter is not intended to change the appeal system laid down by the Treaties, and particularly the rules relating to admissibility. This principle is to be implemented according to the procedures laid down in the Treaties. It applies to the institutions of the Union and of Member States when they are implementing Union law and does so for all rights guaranteed by Union law.

Paragraph 2 corresponds to Article 6(1) of the European Convention on Human Rights which reads as follows:

"In the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. Judgment shall be pronounced publicly but the press and public may be excluded from all or part of the trial in the interests of morals, public order or national security in a democratic society, where the interests of juveniles or the protection of the private life of the parties so require, or to the extent strictly necessary in the opinion of the court in special circumstances where publicity would prejudice the interests of justice."

In Community law, the right to a fair hearing is not confined to disputes relating to civil law rights and obligations. That is one of the consequences of the fact that the Community is a community based on the rule of law as stated by the Court in Case 294/83, "Les Verts" v. European Parliament (judgment of 23 April 1986, [1988] ECR 1339); that means that there is a right to an effective judicial remedy (among the many precedents, Johnston, Case 222/84, judgment of 15 May 1986, [1986] ECR 1682, and the other cases cited above). Nevertheless, in all respects other than their scope, the guarantees afforded by the Convention apply in a similar way to the Union.

With regard to paragraph 3, it should be noted that in accordance with the case law of the European Court of Human Rights, provision should be made for legal aid where the absence of such aid would make it impossible to ensure an effective remedy (ECHR Judgment of 9.10.1979, Airey, Series A, Volume 32, 11). There is also a system of legal assistance for cases before the Court of Justice of the European Communities. That being so, it was deemed important to enshrine this principle in the Charter.

Article 47. Presumption of innocence and right of defence

1. Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
2. Respect for the right of defence of anyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 6(2) and (3) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.*
3. Everyone charged with a criminal offence has the following minimum rights:
- (a) to be informed promptly, in a language which he understands and in detail, of the nature and cause of the accusation against him;*
 - (b) to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence;*
 - (c) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or, if he has not sufficient means to pay for legal assistance, to be given it free when the interests of justice so require;*
 - (d) to examine or have examined witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him;*
 - (e) to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court."*

In accordance with Article 51(3), this right has the same meaning and scope as the right guaranteed by the European Convention on Human Rights.

Article 48. Principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties

1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the criminal offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
2. This article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles recognised by all nations.
3. The severity of penalties must not be disproportionate to the criminal offence.

Explanation

This Article follows the traditional principle of the non-retroactivity of laws and criminal sanctions. There has been added the principle of the retroactivity of a more lenient penal law which exists in a number of Member States and which features in Article 15 of the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

Article 7 of the European Convention on Human Rights is worded as follows:

"1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed.

2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of law recognised by civilised nations."

In paragraph 2, the reference to "civilised" nations has been deleted; this does not change the meaning of this paragraph, which refers to crimes against humanity in particular. In accordance with Article 51(3), the right guaranteed here therefore has the same meaning and scope as the right guaranteed by the European Convention.

Paragraph 3 states the general principle of proportionality between penalties and criminal offences which is enshrined in the common constitutional traditions of the Member States and in the case law of the Court of Justice of the Communities.

Article 49. Right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same criminal offence

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted within the European Union in accordance with the law.

Explanation

Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the European Convention on Human Rights reads as follows:

- "1. No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings under the jurisdiction of the same State for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law and penal procedure of that State.*
2. The provisions of the preceding paragraph shall not prevent the reopening of the case in accordance with the law and the penal procedure of the State concerned, if there is evidence of new or newly discovered facts, or if there has been a fundamental defect in the previous proceedings, which could affect the outcome of the case.

3. No derogation from this Article shall be made under Article 15 of the Convention."

The "non bis in idem" principle applies in Community law (see, among the many precedents, the judgment of 5 May 1996, Cases 18/65 and 35/65, Gutmann v. Commission [1966] ECR 103 and a recent case, the decision of the Court of First Instance of 20 April 1999, Joined Cases T-305/94 and others, Limburgse Vinyl Maatschappij NV v. Commission, not yet published). The rule prohibiting cumulation refers to cumulation of two penalties of the same kind, that is to say criminal law penalties.

*In accordance with Article 49, the "non bis in idem" principle applies not only within the jurisdiction of one State but also between the jurisdictions of several Member States. That corresponds to the acquis in Union law; see Articles 54 to 58 of the Schengen Convention, Article 7 of the Convention on the Protection of the European Communities' Financial Interests and Article 10 of the Convention on the fight against corruption. The very limited exceptions in those Conventions permitting the Member States to derogate from the "non bis in idem" principle are covered by the horizontal clause in Article 51(1) of the Charter regarding limitations. The right guaranteed here has the same meaning as the corresponding right in the European Convention, but its scope is wider.*

CHAPTER VII. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 50. Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. They shall therefore respect the rights, observe the principles and promote the application thereof in accordance with their respective powers.
2. This Charter does not establish any new power or task for the Community or the Union, or modify powers and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Explanation

The aim of this provision is to determine the scope of the Charter. It seeks to establish clearly that the Charter applies primarily to the institutions and bodies of the Union, in compliance with the principle of subsidiarity. This provision is in keeping with Article 6(2) of the Treaty on European Union, which requires the Union to respect fundamental rights, and with the mandate issued by Cologne European Council. The term "institutions" is enshrined in the EC Treaty, Article 7 of which lists the institutions. The term "body" is commonly used to refer to all the authorities set up by the Treaties or by secondary legislation (see Article 286(1) of the Treaty establishing the European Community).

As regards the Member States, it follows unambiguously from the case law of the Court of Justice that the requirement to respect fundamental rights defined in a Union context is only binding on the Member States when they act in the context of Community law (judgment of 13 July 1989, Case 5/88 Wachauf [1989] ECR 2609; judgment of 18 June 1991, ERT [1991] ECR I-2925). The Court of Justice recently confirmed this case law in the following terms: "In addition, it should be remembered that the requirements flowing from the protection of fundamental rights in the Community legal order are also binding on Member States when they implement Community rules..." (judgment of 13 April 2000, Case C-292/97, paragraph 37 of the grounds, not yet published). Paragraph 2 confirms that the Charter may not have the effect of extending the competences and tasks which the Treaties confer on the Community and the Union. Explicit mention is made here of the logical consequences of the principle by which the Union only has those powers which have been conferred upon it. The fundamental rights as guaranteed in the Union do not have any effect other than in the context of the powers determined by the Treaty.

Article 51. Scope of guaranteed rights

1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by law and respect the essential content of those rights and freedoms.
Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest being pursued by the Union, other legitimate interests in a democratic society or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.
2. Rights recognised by this Charter which are based on the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.
3. Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be the same as those laid down by the said Convention unless this Charter affords greater or more extensive protection.

Explanation

The purpose of this provision is to set the scope of the rights guaranteed. Paragraph 1 deals with the arrangements for the limitation of rights. The wording is based on the case law of the Court of Justice: "...it is well established in the case law of the Court that restrictions may be imposed on the exercise of fundamental rights, in particular in the context of a common organisation of the market, provided that those restrictions in fact correspond to objectives of general interest pursued by the Community and do not constitute, with regard to the aim pursued, disproportionate and unreasonable interference undermining the very substance of those rights" (judgment of 13 April 2000, Case C-292/97, paragraph 45 of the grounds). The reference to other legitimate interests relates to possible situations in which the exercise of a right may adversely affect factors other than the public interest or the rights and freedoms of others: reputation, business secrecy, etc.

Paragraph 2 specifies that where a right results from the Treaties it is subject to the conditions and limits laid down by them. The Charter does not alter the system of rights conferred by the Treaties.

Paragraph 3 is intended to ensure the necessary consistency between the Charter and the ECHR by establishing the principle that, insofar as the rights in the present Charter also correspond to rights guaranteed by the ECHR, the meaning and scope of those rights, including authorised limitations, are the same as those laid down by the ECHR. This means in particular that the legislator, in laying down limitations to those rights, must comply with the same standards as are fixed by the detailed limitation arrangements laid down in the ECHR without thereby adversely affecting the autonomy of Community law and of that of the Court of Justice of the European Communities. The list of rights which may at the present stage, without precluding developments in the law, be regarded as corresponding to rights in the ECHR within the meaning of the present paragraph is given hereafter. It does not include rights additional to those in the ECHR..

1. Articles of the Charter where both the meaning and the scope are the same as the corresponding Articles of the European Convention on Human Rights:

- Article 2 corresponds to Article 2 of the ECHR
- Article 4 corresponds to Article 3 of the ECHR
- Article 5(1) and (2) correspond to Article 4 of the ECHR
- Article 6 corresponds to Article 5 of the ECHR
- Article 7 corresponds to Article 8 of the ECHR
- Article 10(1) corresponds to Article 9 of the ECHR
- Article 11 corresponds to Article 10 of the ECHR without prejudice to any restrictions which Community law may impose on Member States' right to introduce the licensing arrangements referred to in the third sentence of Article 10(1) of the ECHR
- Article 17 corresponds to Article 1 of the Protocol to the ECHR
- Article 19(1) corresponds to Article 4 of Protocol No 4
- Article 19(2) corresponds to Article 3 of the ECHR as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights
- Article 47 corresponds to Article 6(2) and(3) of the ECHR
- Article 48(1) (with the exception of the last sentence) and (2) correspond to Article 7 of the ECHR

2. Articles where the meaning is the same as the corresponding Articles of the ECHR, but where the scope is wider:
- Article 12(1) corresponds to Article 11 of the ECHR, but its scope is extended to European Union level
 - Article 14(1) corresponds to Article 2 of the Protocol to the ECHR, but its scope is extended to cover access to vocational and continuing training
 - Article 14(3) corresponds to Article 2 of the Protocol to the ECHR as regards the rights of parents
 - Article 46(2) corresponds to Article 6(1) of the ECHR, but the limitation to the determination of civil rights and obligations or criminal charges does not apply as regards Union law and its implementation
 - Article 49 corresponds to Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR, but its scope is extended to European Union level between the Courts of the Member States.
3. Finally, citizens of the European Union may not be considered as aliens in the scope of the application of Community law, because of the prohibition of any discrimination on grounds of nationality. The limitations provided for by Article 16 of the ECHR as regards the rights of aliens therefore do not apply to them in this context.

Article 52. Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or adversely affecting human rights and fundamental freedoms as recognised, in their respective fields of application, by international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and by the Member States' constitutions.

Explanation

This provision is intended to maintain the level of protection currently afforded within their respective scope by Union law, national law and international law. Owing to its importance, mention is made of the European Convention on Human Right. The level of protection afforded by the Charter may not, in any instance, be lower than that guaranteed by the Convention, with the result that the arrangements for limitations may not fall below the level provided for in the Convention.

Article 53. Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for herein.

Explanation

*This Article corresponds to Article 17 of the European Convention on Human Rights:
"Nothing in this Convention may be interpreted as implying for any State, group or person any right to engage in any activity or perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms set forth herein or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for in the Convention."*

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 11 October 2000 (18.10)
(OR. fr)CHARTE 4473/00*CONVENT 49*NOTE FROM THE PRAESIDIUM

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

– Text of the explanations relating to the complete text of the Charter as set out in CHARTE 4487/00 CONVENT 50

These explanations have been prepared at the instigation of the Praesidium. They have no legal value and are simply intended to clarify the provisions of the Charter.

PREAMBLE

The peoples of Europe, in creating an ever closer union among them, are resolved to share a peaceful future based on common values.

Conscious of its spiritual and moral heritage, the Union is founded on the indivisible, universal values of human dignity, freedom, equality and solidarity; it is based on the principles of democracy and the rule of law. It places the individual at the heart of its activities, by establishing the citizenship of the Union and by creating an area of freedom, security and justice.

The Union contributes to the preservation and to the development of these common values while respecting the diversity of the cultures and traditions of the peoples of Europe as well as the national identities of the Member States and the organisation of their public authorities at national, regional and local levels; it seeks to promote balanced and sustainable development and ensures free movement of persons, goods, services and capital, and the freedom of establishment.

To this end, it is necessary to strengthen the protection of fundamental rights in the light of changes in society, social progress and scientific and technological developments by making those rights more visible in a Charter.

This Charter reaffirms, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Community and the Union and the principle of subsidiarity, the rights as they result, in particular, from the constitutional traditions and international obligations common to the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the Social Charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights.

Enjoyment of these rights entails responsibilities and duties with regard to other persons, to the human community and to future generations.

The Union therefore recognises the rights, freedoms and principles set out hereafter.

CHAPTER I. DIGNITY

Article 1

Human dignity

Human dignity is inviolable. It must be respected and protected.

Explanation

The dignity of the human person is not only a fundamental right in itself but constitutes the real basis of fundamental rights. The 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights enshrined this principle in its preamble: "Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world."

It results that none of the rights laid down in this Charter may be used to harm the dignity of another person, and that the dignity of the human person is part of the substance of the rights laid down in this Charter. It must therefore be respected, even where a right is restricted.

Article 2

Right to life

1. Everyone has the right to life.
2. No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed.

Explanation

1. Paragraph 1 of this Article is based on the first sentence of Article 2(1) of the ECHR, which reads as follows:

"1. Everyone's right to life shall be protected by law..."

2. The second sentence of the provision, which referred to the death penalty, was superseded by the entry into force of Article 1 of Protocol No 6 to the ECHR, which reads as follows:

"The death penalty shall be abolished. No-one shall be condemned to such penalty or executed."

Article 2(2) of the Charter is based on that provision.

3. The provisions of Article 2 of the Charter correspond to those of the above Articles of the ECHR and its Protocol. They have the same meaning and the same scope, in accordance with Article 52(3) of the Charter. Therefore, the "negative" definitions appearing in the ECHR must be regarded as also forming part of the Charter:

- (a) Article 2(2) of the ECHR:

"Deprivation of life shall not be regarded as inflicted in contravention of this article when it results from the use of force which is no more than absolutely necessary:

- (a) in defence of any person from unlawful violence;
 - (b) in order to effect a lawful arrest or to prevent the escape of a person lawfully detained;
 - (c) in action lawfully taken for the purpose of quelling a riot or insurrection."

- (b) Article 2 of Protocol No 6 to the ECHR:

"A State may make provision in its law for the death penalty in respect of acts committed in time of war or of imminent threat of war; such penalty shall be applied only in the instances laid down in the law and in accordance with its provisions..."

Article 3

Right to the integrity of the person

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his or her physical and mental integrity.
2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following must be respected in particular:
 - the free and informed consent of the person concerned, according to the procedures laid down by law,
 - the prohibition of eugenic practices, in particular those aiming at the selection of persons,
 - the prohibition on making the human body and its parts as such a source of financial gain,
 - the prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Explanation

The principles of Article 3 of the Charter are already included in the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine, adopted by the Council of Europe (ETS 164 and additional protocol ETS 168).

The Charter does not set out to depart from those principles, and therefore prohibits only reproductive cloning. It neither authorises nor prohibits other forms of cloning. Thus it does not in any way prevent the legislature from prohibiting other forms of cloning.

2. The reference to eugenic practices, in particular those aiming at the selection of persons, relates to possible situations in which selection programmes are organised and implemented, involving campaigns for sterilisation, forced pregnancy, compulsory ethnic marriage among others, all acts deemed to be international crimes in the Statute of the International Criminal Court adopted in Rome on 17 July 1998 (see its Article 7(1)(g)).

Article 4

Prohibition of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Explanation

The right in Article 4 is the right guaranteed by Article 3 of the ECHR, which has the same wording: "No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment". By virtue of Article 52(3) of the Charter, it therefore has the same meaning and the same scope as the ECHR Article.

Article 5

Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.
3. Trafficking in human beings is prohibited.

Explanation

1. The right in Article 5(1) and (2) corresponds to Article 4(1) and (2) of the ECHR, which has the same wording.

It therefore has the same meaning and scope as the ECHR Article, by virtue of Article 52(3) of the Charter. Consequently:

- no limitation may legitimately affect the right provided for in paragraph 1;*
- in paragraph 2, "forced or compulsory labour" must be understood in the light of the "negative" definitions contained in Article 4(3) of the ECHR:*

"For the purpose of this article the term "forced or compulsory labour" shall not include:

- (a) any work required to be done in the ordinary course of detention imposed according to the provisions of Article 5 of this Convention or during conditional release from such detention;*
- (b) any service of a military character or, in case of conscientious objectors in countries where they are recognised, service exacted instead of compulsory military service;*
- (c) any service exacted in case of an emergency or calamity threatening the life or well-being of the community;*
- (d) any work or service which forms part of normal civic obligations."*

2. Paragraph 3 stems directly from the principle of human dignity and takes account of recent developments in organised crime, such as the organisation of lucrative illegal immigration or sexual exploitation networks. The annex to the Europol Convention contains the following definition which refers to trafficking for the purpose of sexual exploitation: "traffic in human beings: means subjection of a person to the real and illegal sway of other persons by using violence or menaces or by abuse of authority or intrigue with a view to the exploitation of prostitution, forms of sexual exploitation and assault of minors or trade in abandoned children". Chapter VI of the Convention implementing the Schengen Agreement, which has been integrated into the "acquis communautaire", in which the United Kingdom participates and Ireland has requested to participate, contains the following wording in Article 27(1) which refers to illegal immigration networks: " The Contracting Parties undertake to impose appropriate penalties on any person who, for financial gain, assists or tries to assist an alien to enter or reside within the territory of one of the Contracting Parties in breach of that Contracting Party's laws on the entry and residence of aliens."

CHAPTER II. FREEDOMS

Article 6

Right to liberty and security

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person.

Explanation

The rights in Article 6 are the rights guaranteed by Article 5 of the ECHR, and in accordance with Article 52(3) of the Charter, they have the same meaning and scope. Consequently, the limitations which may legitimately be imposed on them may not exceed those permitted by the ECHR, in the wording of Article 5:

- "1. Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in the following cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law:*
- (a) the lawful detention of a person after conviction by a competent court;*
 - (b) the lawful arrest or detention of a person for non-compliance with the lawful order of a court or in order to secure the fulfilment of any obligation prescribed by law;*

- (c) the lawful arrest or detention of a person effected for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority on reasonable suspicion of having committed an offence or when it is reasonably considered necessary to prevent his committing an offence or fleeing after having done so;
 - (d) the detention of a minor by lawful order for the purpose of educational supervision or his lawful detention for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority;
 - (e) the lawful detention of persons for the prevention of the spreading of infectious diseases, of persons of unsound mind, alcoholics or drug addicts or vagrants;
 - (f) the lawful arrest or detention of a person to prevent his effecting an unauthorised entry into the country or of a person against whom action is being taken with a view to deportation or extradition.
2. Everyone who is arrested shall be informed promptly, in a language which he understands, of the reasons for his arrest and of any charge against him.
 3. Everyone arrested or detained in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1.c of this article shall be brought promptly before a judge or other officer authorised by law to exercise judicial power and shall be entitled to trial within a reasonable time or to release pending trial. Release may be conditioned by guarantees to appear for trial.
 4. Everyone who is deprived of his liberty by arrest or detention shall be entitled to take proceedings by which the lawfulness of his detention shall be decided speedily by a court and his release ordered if the detention is not lawful.
 5. Everyone who has been the victim of arrest or detention in contravention of the provisions of this article shall have an enforceable right to compensation."

Since the Charter is to apply within the context of the Union, the rights enshrined in Article 6 must be respected particularly when, in accordance with Title VI of the Treaty on European Union, the Union is adopting framework decisions to define common minimum provisions as regards the categorisation of offences and punishments.

Article 7

Respect for private and family life

Everyone has the right to respect for his or her private and family life, home and communications.

Explanation

The rights guaranteed in Article 7 correspond to those guaranteed by Article 8 of the ECHR. To take account of developments in technology the word "correspondence" has been replaced by "communications".

In accordance with Article 52(3), the meaning and scope of this right are the same as those of the corresponding article of the ECHR. Consequently, the limitations which may legitimately be imposed on this right are the same as those allowed by Article 8 of the ECHR:

- "1. Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence.*
- 2. There shall be no interference by a public authority with the exercise of this right except such as is in accordance with the law and is necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security, public safety or the economic well-being of the country, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others."*

Article 8

Protection of personal data

1. Everyone has the right to the protection of personal data concerning him or her.

2. Such data must be processed fairly for specified purposes and on the basis of the consent of the person concerned or some other legitimate basis laid down by law. Everyone has the right of access to data which has been collected concerning him or her, and the right to have it rectified.
3. Compliance with these rules shall be subject to control by an independent authority.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 286 of the Treaty establishing the European Community and Directive 95/46/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council on the protection of individuals with regard to the processing of personal data and on the free movement of such data (OJ L 281, 23.11.1995) as well as on Article 8 of the ECHR and on the Council of Europe Convention of 28 January 1981 for the Protection of Individuals with regard to Automatic Processing of Personal Data, which has been ratified by all the Member States. The right to protection of personal data is to be exercised under the conditions laid down in the above Directive, and may be limited under the conditions set out by Article 52 of the Charter.

Article 9

Right to marry and right to found a family

The right to marry and the right to found a family shall be guaranteed in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of these rights.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 12 of the ECHR, which reads as follows: "Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and to found a family according to the national laws governing the exercising of this right." The wording of the Article has been modernised to cover cases in which national legislation recognises arrangements other than marriage for founding a family. This Article neither prohibits nor imposes the granting of the status of marriage to unions between people of the same sex. This right is thus similar to that afforded by the ECHR, but its scope may be wider when national legislation so provides.

Article 10

Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. This right includes freedom to change religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or in private, to manifest religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.
2. The right to conscientious objection is recognised, in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of this right.

Explanation

The right guaranteed in paragraph 1 corresponds to the right guaranteed in Article 9 of the ECHR and, in accordance with Article 52(3) of the Charter, has the same meaning and scope. Limitations must therefore respect Article 9(2) of the Convention, which reads as follows: "Freedom to manifest one's religion or beliefs shall be subject only to such limitations as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of public safety, for the protection of public order, health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others."

The right guaranteed in paragraph 2 corresponds to national constitutional traditions and to the development of national legislation on this issue.

Article 11

Freedom of expression and information

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.
2. The freedom and pluralism of the media shall be respected.

Explanation

1. Article 11 corresponds to Article 10 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

"1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers. This article shall not prevent States from requiring the licensing of broadcasting, television or cinema enterprises.

2. The exercise of these freedoms, since it carries with it duties and responsibilities, may be subject to such formalities, conditions, restrictions or penalties as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society, in the interests of national security, territorial integrity or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, for the protection of the reputation or rights of others, for preventing the disclosure of information received in confidence, or for maintaining the authority and impartiality of the judiciary."

Pursuant to Article 52(3) of the Charter, the meaning and scope of this right are the same as those guaranteed by the ECHR. The limitations which may be imposed on it may therefore not exceed those provided for in Article 10(2) of the Convention, without prejudice to any restrictions which Community competition law may impose on Member States' right to introduce the licensing arrangements referred to in the third sentence of Article 10(1) of the ECHR.

2. Paragraph 2 of this Article spells out the consequences of paragraph 1 regarding freedom of the media. It is based in particular on Court of Justice case law regarding television, particularly in case C-288/89 (judgment of 25 July 1991, Stichting Collectieve Antennevoorziening Gouda and others [1991] ECR I-4007), and on the Protocol on the system of public broadcasting in the Member States annexed to the EC Treaty, and on Council Directive 89/552/EC (particularly its seventeenth recital).

Article 12

Freedom of assembly and of association

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association at all levels, in particular in political, trade union and civic matters, which implies the right of everyone to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his or her interests.
2. Political parties at Union level contribute to expressing the political will of the citizens of the Union.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 of this Article corresponds to Article 11 of the ECHR, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his interests.*

2. No restrictions shall be placed on the exercise of these rights other than such as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others. This article shall not prevent the imposition of lawful restrictions on the exercise of these rights by members of the armed forces, of the police or of the administration of the State."

The meaning of the provisions of paragraph 1 is the same as that of the ECHR, but their scope is wider since they apply at all levels including European level. In accordance with Article 52(3) of the Charter, limitations on that right may not exceed those considered legitimate by virtue of Article 11(2) of the ECHR.

2. This right is also based on Article 11 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers.
3. Paragraph 2 of this Article corresponds to Article 191 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Article 13

Freedom of the arts and sciences

The arts and scientific research shall be free of constraint. Academic freedom shall be respected.

Explanation

This right is deduced primarily from the right to freedom of thought and expression. It is to be exercised having regard to Article 1 and may be subject to the limitations authorised by Article 10 of the ECHR.

Article 14

Right to education

1. Everyone has the right to education and to have access to vocational and continuing training.
2. This right includes the possibility to receive free compulsory education.
3. The freedom to found educational establishments with due respect for democratic principles and the right of parents to ensure the education and teaching of their children in conformity with their religious, philosophical and pedagogical convictions shall be respected, in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of such freedom and right.

Explanation

1. This Article is based on the common constitutional traditions of Member States and on Article 2 of the Protocol to the ECHR, which reads as follows:

"No person shall be denied the right to education. In the exercise of any functions which it assumes in relation to education and to teaching, the State shall respect the right of parents to ensure such education and teaching in conformity with their own religious and philosophical convictions."

It was considered useful to extend this right to vocational and continuing training (see point 15 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers and Article 10 of the Social Charter) and to add the principle of free compulsory education. As it is worded, the latter principle merely implies that as regards compulsory education, each child has the possibility of attending an establishment which offers free education. It does not require all establishments which provide education, in particular private ones, to be free of charge. Nor does it exclude certain specific forms of education having to be paid for, if the State takes measures to grant financial compensation. Insofar as the Charter applies to the Union, this means that in its training policies the Union must respect free compulsory education, but this does not, of course, create new powers. Regarding the right of parents, it must be interpreted in conjunction with the provisions of Article 24.

- 2. Freedom to found public or private educational establishments is guaranteed as one of the aspects of freedom to conduct a business but it is limited by respect for democratic principles and is exercised in accordance with the arrangements defined by national legislation.*

Article 15

Freedom to choose an occupation and right to engage in work

1. Everyone has the right to engage in work and to pursue a freely chosen or accepted occupation.
2. Every citizen of the Union has the freedom to seek employment, to work, to exercise the right of establishment and to provide services in any Member State.
3. Nationals of third countries who are authorised to work in the territories of the Member States are entitled to working conditions equivalent to those of citizens of the Union.

Explanation

Freedom to choose an occupation, as enshrined in Article 15(1), is recognised in Court of Justice case law (see inter alia judgment of 14 May 1974, Case 4/73 Nold [1974] ECR 491, paragraphs 12 to 14 of the grounds; judgment of 13 December 1979, Case 44/79 Hauer [1979] ECR 3727; judgment of 8 October 1986, Case 234/85 Keller [1986] ECR 2897, paragraph 8 of the grounds).

This paragraph also draws upon Article 1(2) of the European Social Charter, which was signed on 18 October 1961 and has been ratified by all the Member States, and on point 4 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers of 9 December 1989. The expression "working conditions" is to be understood in the sense of Article 140 of the EC Treaty.

The second paragraph deals with the three freedoms guaranteed by Articles 39, 43 and 49 et seq of the EC Treaty, namely freedom of movement for workers, freedom of establishment and freedom to provide services.

The third paragraph is based on TEC Article 137(3), fourth indent, and on Article 19(4) of the European Social Charter signed on 18 October 1961 and ratified by all the Member States. Article 52(2) of the Charter is therefore applicable. The question of recruitment of seamen having the nationality of third States for the crews of vessels flying the flag of a Member State of the Union is governed by Community law and national legislation and practice.

Article 16

Freedom to conduct a business

The freedom to conduct a business in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices is recognised.

Explanation

This Article is based on Court of Justice case law which has recognised freedom to exercise an economic or commercial activity (see judgments of 14 May 1974, Case 4/73 Nold [1974] ECR 491, paragraph 14 of the grounds, and of 27 September 1979, Case 230-78 SPA Eridiana and others [1979] ECR 2749, paragraphs 20 and 31 of the grounds) and freedom of contract (see inter alia Sukkerfabriken Nykøbing judgment, Case 151/78 [1979] ECR I, paragraph 19 of the grounds, and judgment of 5 October 1999, C-240/97 Spain v. Commission [not yet published], paragraph 99 of the grounds) and TEC Article 4(1) and (2), which recognises free competition. Of course, this right is to be exercised with respect for Community law and national legislation. It may be subject to the limitations provided for in Article 52(1) of the Charter.

Article 17

Right to property

1. Everyone has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his or her lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his or her possessions, except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to fair compensation being paid in good time for their loss. The use of property may be regulated by law insofar as is necessary for the general interest.
2. Intellectual property shall be protected.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 1 of the Protocol to the ECHR:

"Every natural or legal person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions. No one shall be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and subject to the conditions provided for by law and by the general principles of international law.

The preceding provisions shall not, however, in any way impair the right of a State to enforce such laws as it deems necessary to control the use of property in accordance with the general interest or to secure the payment of taxes or other contributions or penalties."

This is a fundamental right common to all national constitutions. It has been recognised on numerous occasions by the case law of the Court of Justice, initially in the Hauer judgment (13 December 1979, ECR [1979] 3727). The wording has been updated but, in accordance with Article 52(3), the meaning and scope of the right are the same as those of the right guaranteed by the ECHR and the limitations may not exceed those provided for there.

Protection of intellectual property, one aspect of the right of property, is explicitly mentioned in paragraph 2 because of its growing importance and Community secondary legislation. Intellectual property covers not only literary and artistic property but also patent and trademark rights and associated rights. The guarantees laid down in paragraph 1 shall apply as appropriate to intellectual property.

Article 18

Right to asylum

The right to asylum shall be guaranteed with due respect for the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees and in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Explanation

The text of the Article is based on TEC Article 63 which requires the Union to respect the Geneva Convention on refugees. Reference should be made to the Protocols relating to the United Kingdom and Ireland annexed to the Treaty of Amsterdam and to Denmark to determine the extent to which those Member States implement Community law in this area and the extent to which this Article is applicable to them. This Article is in line with the Protocol on Asylum annexed to the EC Treaty.

Article 19

Protection in the event of removal, expulsion or extradition

1. Collective expulsions are prohibited.
2. No one may be removed, expelled or extradited to a State where there is a serious risk that he or she would be subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 of this Article has the same meaning and scope as Article 4 of Protocol No 4 to the ECHR concerning collective expulsion. Its purpose is to guarantee that every decision is based on a specific examination and that no single measure can be taken to expel all persons having the nationality of a particular State (see also Article 13 of the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights).

*Paragraph 2 incorporates case law from the European Court of Human Rights regarding Article 3 of the ECHR (see Ahmed v. Austria, judgment of 17 December 1996, [1996] ECR VI-2206 and Soering, judgment of 7 July 1989).*

CHAPTER III. EQUALITY

Article 20

Equality before the law

Everyone is equal before the law.

Explanation

This Article corresponds to a principle which is included in all European constitutions and has also been recognised by the Court of Justice as a basic principle of Community law (judgment of 13 November 1984, Case 283/83 Racke [1984] ECR 3791, judgment of 17 April 1997, Case 15/95 EARL [1997] ECR I-1961, and judgment of 13 April 2000, Case 292/97 Karlsson, not yet published).

Article 21

Non-discrimination

1. Any discrimination based on any ground such as sex, race, colour, ethnic or social origin, genetic features, language, religion or belief, political or any other opinion, membership of a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, and without prejudice to the special provisions of those Treaties, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

Explanation

Paragraph 1 draws on Article 13 of the EC Treaty, Article 14 of the ECHR and Article 11 of the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine as regards genetic heritage. Insofar as this corresponds to Article 14 of the ECHR, it applies in compliance with it.

Paragraph 2 corresponds to Article 12 of the EC Treaty and must be applied in compliance with the Treaty.

Article 22

Cultural, religious and linguistic diversity

The Union shall respect cultural, religious and linguistic diversity.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 6 of the Treaty on European Union and on Article 151(1) and (4) of the EC Treaty concerning culture. It is also inspired by declaration No 11 to the Final Act of the Amsterdam Treaty on the status of churches and non-confessional organisations.

Article 23

Equality between men and women

Equality between men and women must be ensured in all areas, including employment, work and pay.

The principle of equality shall not prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures providing for specific advantages in favour of the under-represented sex.

Explanation

The first paragraph is based on Articles 2 and 3(2) of the EC Treaty, which impose the objective of promoting equality between men and women on the Community, and on Article 141(3) of the EC Treaty. It draws on Article 20 of the revised European Social Charter of 3 May 1996 and on point 16 of the Community Charter on the rights of workers.

It is also based on Article 141(3) of the EC Treaty and Article 2(4) of Council Directive 76/207/EEC on the implementation of the principle of equal treatment for men and women as regards access to employment, vocational training and promotion, and working conditions.

Paragraph 2 takes over in shorter form Article 141(4) of the EC Treaty which provides that the principle of equal treatment does not prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures providing for specific advantages in order to make it easier for the under-represented sex to pursue a vocational activity or to prevent or compensate for disadvantages in professional careers. In accordance with Article 51(2), the present paragraph does not amend Article 141(4) EC.

Article 24

The rights of the child

1. Children shall have the right to such protection and care as is necessary for their well-being. They may express their views freely. Such views shall be taken into consideration on matters which concern them in accordance with their age and maturity.

2. In all actions relating to children, whether taken by public authorities or private institutions, the child's best interests must be a primary consideration.
3. Every child shall have the right to maintain on a regular basis a personal relationship and direct contact with both his or her parents, unless that is contrary to his or her interests.

Explanation

This Article is based on the New York Convention on the Rights of the Child signed on 20 November 1989 and ratified by all the Member States, particularly Articles 3, 9, 12 and 13 thereof.

Article 25

The rights of the elderly

The Union recognises and respects the rights of the elderly to lead a life of dignity and independence and to participate in social and cultural life.

Explanation

This Article draws on Article 23 of the revised European Social Charter and Articles 24 and 25 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers. Of course, participation in social and cultural life also covers participation in political life.

Article 26

Integration of persons with disabilities

The Union recognises and respects the right of persons with disabilities to benefit from measures designed to ensure their independence, social and occupational integration and participation in the life of the community.

Explanation

The principle set out in this Article is based on Article 15 of the European Social Charter and also draws on Article 23 of the revised Social Charter and point 26 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers.

CHAPTER IV. SOLIDARITY

Article 27

Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Workers or their representatives must, at the appropriate levels, be guaranteed information and consultation in good time in the cases and under the conditions provided for by Community law and national laws and practices.

Explanation

This Article appears in the revised European Social Charter (Article 21) and in the Community Charter on the rights of workers (points 17 and 18). It applies under the conditions laid down by Community law and by national laws. The reference to appropriate levels refers to the levels laid down by Community law or by national laws and practices, which might include the European level when Community legislation so provides. There is a considerable Community acquis in this field: Articles 138 and 139 of the EC Treaty, and Directives 98/59/EC (collective redundancies), 77/187/EEC (transfers of undertakings) and 94/45/EC (European works councils).

Article 28

Right of collective bargaining and action

Workers and employers, or their respective organisations, have, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices, the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements at the appropriate levels and, in cases of conflicts of interest, to take collective action to defend their interests, including strike action.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 6 of the European Social Charter and on the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers (points 12 to 14). The right of collective action was recognised by the European Court of Human Rights as one of the elements of trade union rights laid down by Article 11 of the ECHR. As regards the appropriate levels at which collective negotiation might take place, see the explanation given for the above Article. Collective action, including strike action, comes under national laws and practices, including the question of whether it may be carried out in parallel in several Member States.

Article 29

Right of access to placement services

Everyone has the right of access to a free placement service.

Explanation

This Article is based on Article 1(3) of the European Social Charter and point 13 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers.

Article 30

Protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

Every worker has the right to protection against unjustified dismissal, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.

Explanation

This Article draws on Article 24 of the revised Social Charter. See also Directive 77/187/EEC on the safeguarding of employees' rights in the event of transfers of undertakings, and Directive 80/987/EEC on the protection of employees in the event of the insolvency of their employer.

Article 31

Fair and just working conditions

1. Every worker has the right to working conditions which respect his or her health, safety and dignity.
2. Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave.

Explanation

1. This Article is based on Directive 89/391/EEC on the introduction of measures to encourage improvements in the safety and health of workers at work. It also draws on Article 3 of the Social Charter and point 19 of the Community Charter on the rights of workers, and, as regards dignity at work, on Article 26 of the revised Social Charter. The expression "working conditions" must be understood in the sense of Article 140 of the EC Treaty.
2. Paragraph 2 is based on Directive 93/104/EC concerning certain aspects of the organisation of working time, Article 2 of the European Social Charter and point 8 of the Community Charter on the rights of workers.

Article 32

Prohibition of child labour and protection of young people at work

The employment of children is prohibited. The minimum age of admission to employment may not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age, without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people and except for limited derogations.

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions appropriate to their age and be protected against economic exploitation and any work likely to harm their safety, health or physical, mental, moral or social development or to interfere with their education.

Explanation

This Article is based on Directive 94/33/EC on the protection of young people at work, Article 7 of the European Social Charter and points 20 to 23 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers.

Article 33

Family and professional life

1. The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.
2. To reconcile family and professional life, everyone shall have the right to protection from dismissal for a reason connected with maternity and the right to paid maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.

Explanation

Article 33(1) is based on Article 16 of the European Social Charter. The second paragraph draws on Council Directive 92/85/EEC on the introduction of measures to encourage improvements in the safety and health at work of pregnant workers and workers who have recently given birth or are breastfeeding and Directive 96/34/EC on the framework agreement on parental leave concluded by UNICE, CEEP and the ETUC. It is also based on Article 8 (protection of maternity) of the European Social Charter and draws on Article 27 (right of workers with family responsibilities to equal opportunities and equal treatment) of the revised Social Charter. "Maternity" covers the period from conception to weaning.

Article 34

Social security and social assistance

1. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to social security benefits and social services providing protection in cases such as maternity, illness, industrial accidents, dependency or old age, and in the case of loss of employment, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.
2. Everyone residing and moving legally within the European Union is entitled to social security benefits and social advantages in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.
3. In order to combat social exclusion and poverty, the Union recognises and respects the right to social and housing assistance so as to ensure a decent existence for all those who lack sufficient resources, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.

Explanation

The principle set out in Article 34(1) is based on Articles 137 and 140 of the EC Treaty and on Article 12 of the European Social Charter and point 10 of the Community Charter on the rights of workers. The Union must respect it when exercising the powers conferred on it by Article 140 of the Treaty establishing the European Community. The reference to social services relates to cases in which such services have been introduced to provide certain advantages but does not imply that such services must be created where they do not exist. "Maternity" must be understood in the same sense as in the preceding Article.

The second paragraph is based on Article 13(4) of the European Social Charter and point 2 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers and reflects the rules arising from Regulation No 1408/71 and Regulation No 1612/68.

The third paragraph draws on Articles 30 and 31 of the revised Social Charter and point 10 of the Community Charter. The Union must respect it in the context of policies based on Article 137(2) of the Treaty establishing the European Community, particularly the last subparagraph.

Article 35

Health care

Everyone has the right of access to preventive health care and the right to benefit from medical treatment under the conditions established by national laws and practices. A high level of human health protection shall be ensured in the definition and implementation of all Union policies and activities.

Explanation

The principles set out in this Article are based on Article 152 of the EC Treaty and on Article 11 of the European Social Charter. The second sentence of the Article takes over Article 152(1).

Article 36

Access to services of general economic interest

The Union recognises and respects access to services of general economic interest as provided for in national laws and practices, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, in order to promote the social and territorial cohesion of the Union.

Explanation

This Article fully respects Article 16 of the Treaty establishing the European Community and does not create any new right. It merely sets out the principle of respect by the Union for the access to services of general economic interest as provided for by national provisions, when those provisions are compatible with Community legislation.

Article 37

Environmental protection

A high level of environmental protection and the improvement of the quality of the environment must be integrated into the policies of the Union and ensured in accordance with the principle of sustainable development.

Explanation

The principles set out in this Article are based on Articles 2, 6 and 174 of the EC Treaty. It also draws on the provisions of some national constitutions.

Article 38

Consumer Protection

Union policies shall ensure a high level of consumer protection.

Explanation

The principles set out in this Article are based on Article 153 of the EC Treaty.

CHAPTER V. CITIZENS' RIGHTS

Article 39

Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at elections to the European Parliament

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he or she resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State.
2. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage in a free and secret ballot.

Explanation

Article 39 applies under the conditions laid down by the Treaty, in accordance with Article 52(2) of the Charter. Article 39(1) corresponds to the right guaranteed in Article 19(2) of the EC Treaty and Article 39(2) corresponds to Article 190(1) of that Treaty. Article 39(2) takes over the basic principles of the electoral system in a democratic State.

Article 40Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he or she resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Explanation

This Article corresponds to the right guaranteed by Article 19(1) of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 52(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions set out in the Treaty.

Article 41Right to good administration

1. Every person has the right to have his or her affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.

2. This right includes:

- the right of every person to be heard, before any individual measure which would affect him or her adversely is taken;
- the right of every person to have access to his or her file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of professional and business secrecy;
- the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.

3. Every person has the right to have the Community make good any damage caused by its institutions or by its servants in the performance of their duties, in accordance with the general principles common to the laws of the Member States.

4. Every person may write to the institutions of the Union in one of the languages of the Treaties and must have an answer in the same language.

Explanation

Article 41 is based on the existence of a Community subject to the rule of law whose characteristics were developed in the case law which enshrined inter alia the principle of good administration (see inter alia Court of Justice judgment of 31 March 1992 in Case C-255/90 P, Burbán [1992] ECR I-2253, and Court of First Instance judgments of 18 September 1995 in Case T-167/94 Nölle [1995] ECR II-2589, and 9 July 1999 in Case T-231/97 New Europe Consulting and others [1999] ECR II-2403). The wording for that right in the first two paragraphs results from the case law (Court of Justice judgment of 15 October 1987 in Case 222/86 Heylens [1987] ECR 4097, paragraph 15 of the grounds, judgment of 18 October 1989 in Case 374/87 Orkem [1989] ECR 3283, judgment of 21 November 1991 in Case C-269/90 TU München [1991] ECR I-5469, and Court of First Instance judgments of 6 December 1994 in Case T-450/93 Lisrestal [1994] ECR II-1177, 18 September 1995 in Case T-167/94 Nölle [1995] ECR II-258), and the wording regarding the obligation to give reasons comes from Article 253 of the EC Treaty.

Paragraph 3 reproduces the right guaranteed by Article 288 of the EC Treaty.

Paragraph 4 reproduces the right guaranteed by the third paragraph of Article 21 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 52(2) of the Charter, those rights are to be applied under the conditions and within the limits defined by the Treaties.

The right to an effective remedy, which is an important aspect of this question, is guaranteed in Article 47 of this Charter.

Article 42

Right of access to documents

Any citizen of the Union, and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State, has a right of access to European Parliament, Council and Commission documents.

Explanation

The right guaranteed in this Article is the right guaranteed by Article 255 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 52(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions defined by the Treaty.

Article 43

Ombudsman

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration in the activities of the Community institutions or bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Explanation

The right guaranteed in this Article is the right guaranteed by Articles 21 and 195 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 52(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions defined by the Treaty.

Article 44

Right to petition

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Explanation

The right guaranteed in this Article is the right guaranteed by Articles 21 and 194 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 52(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions defined by the Treaty.

Article 45

Freedom of movement and of residence

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.
2. Freedom of movement and residence may be granted, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, to nationals of third countries legally resident in the territory of a Member State.

Explanation

The right guaranteed by paragraph 1 is the right guaranteed by Article 18 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 52(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions and within the limits defined by the Treaty.

Paragraph 2 refers to the power granted to the Community by Article 62(1) and (3) and Article 63(4) of the EC Treaty. Consequently, the granting of this right depends on the institutions exercising that power.

Article 46

Diplomatic and consular protection

Every citizen of the Union shall, in the territory of a third country in which the Member State of which he or she is a national is not represented, be entitled to protection by the diplomatic or consular authorities of any Member State, on the same conditions as the nationals of that Member State.

Explanation

The right guaranteed by this Article is the right guaranteed by Article 20 of the EC Treaty. In accordance with Article 52(2) of the Charter, it applies under the conditions defined by the Treaty.

CHAPTER VI. JUSTICEArticle 47*Right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial

Everyone whose rights and freedoms guaranteed by the law of the Union are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a tribunal in compliance with the conditions laid down in this Article.

Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal previously established by law. Everyone shall have the possibility of being advised, defended and represented.

Legal aid shall be made available to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is necessary to ensure effective access to justice.

Explanation

The first paragraph is based on Article 13 of the ECHR:

"Everyone whose rights and freedoms as set forth in this Convention are violated shall have an effective remedy before a national authority notwithstanding that the violation has been committed by persons acting in an official capacity."

However, in Community law the protection is more extensive since it guarantees the right to an effective remedy before a court. The Court of Justice enshrined the principle in its judgment of 15 May 1986 (Case 222/84 Johnston [1986] ECR 1651; see also judgment of 15 October 1987, Case 222/86 Heylens [1987] ECR 4097 and judgment of 3 December 1992, Case C-97/91 Borelli [1992] ECR I-6313. According to the Court, this principle also applies to the Member States when they are implementing Community law. The inclusion of this precedent in the Charter is not intended to change the appeal system laid down by the Treaties, and particularly the rules relating to admissibility. This principle is therefore to be implemented according to the procedures laid down in the Treaties. It applies to the institutions of the Union and of Member States when they are implementing Union law and does so for all rights guaranteed by Union law.

The second paragraph corresponds to Article 6(1) of the ECHR which reads as follows: "In the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. Judgment shall be pronounced publicly but the press and public may be excluded from all or part of the trial in the interests of morals, public order or national security in a democratic society, where the interests of juveniles or the protection of the private life of the parties so require, or to the extent strictly necessary in the opinion of the court in special circumstances where publicity would prejudice the interests of justice."

In Community law, the right to a fair hearing is not confined to disputes relating to civil law rights and obligations. That is one of the consequences of the fact that the Community is a community based on the rule of law as stated by the Court in Case 294/83, "Les Verts" v. European Parliament (judgment of 23 April 1986, [1988] ECR 1339). Nevertheless, in all respects other than their scope, the guarantees afforded by the ECHR apply in a similar way to the Union.

With regard to the third paragraph, it should be noted that in accordance with the case law of the European Court of Human Rights, provision should be made for legal aid where the absence of such aid would make it impossible to ensure an effective remedy (ECHR Judgment of 9.10.1979, Airey, Series A, Volume 32, 11). There is also a system of legal assistance for cases before the Court of Justice of the European Communities.

Article 48

Presumption of innocence and right of defence

1. Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
2. Respect for the rights of the defence of anyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed.

Explanation

Article 48 is the same as Article 6(2) and (3) of the ECHR, which reads as follows:

- "2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
3. Everyone charged with a criminal offence has the following minimum rights:
 - (a) to be informed promptly, in a language which he understands and in detail, of the nature and cause of the accusation against him;
 - (b) to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence;
 - (c) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or, if he has not sufficient means to pay for legal assistance, to be given it free when the interests of justice so require;
 - (d) to examine or have examined witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him;
 - (e) to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court."

In accordance with Article 52(3), this right has the same meaning and scope as the right guaranteed by the ECHR.

Article 49

Principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties

1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than that which was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of a criminal offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles recognised by the community of nations.
3. The severity of penalties must not be disproportionate to the criminal offence.

Explanation

This Article follows the traditional principle of the non-retroactivity of laws and criminal sanctions. There has been added the principle of the retroactivity of a more lenient penal law, which exists in a number of Member States and which features in Article 15 of the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

Article 7 of the ECHR is worded as follows:

- "1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed.*
- 2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of law recognised by civilised nations."*

In paragraph 2, the reference to "civilised" nations has been deleted; this does not change the meaning of this paragraph, which refers to crimes against humanity in particular. In accordance with Article 52(3), the right guaranteed here therefore has the same meaning and scope as the right guaranteed by the ECHR.

Paragraph 3 states the general principle of proportionality between penalties and criminal offences which is enshrined in the common constitutional traditions of the Member States and in the case law of the Court of Justice of the Communities.

Article 50

Right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same criminal offence

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he or she has already been finally acquitted or convicted within the Union in accordance with the law.

Explanation

Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR reads as follows:

- "1. No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings under the jurisdiction of the same State for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law and penal procedure of that State.*
- 2. The provisions of the preceding paragraph shall not prevent the reopening of the case in accordance with the law and the penal procedure of the State concerned, if there is evidence of new or newly discovered facts, or if there has been a fundamental defect in the previous proceedings, which could affect the outcome of the case.*
- 3. No derogation from this Article shall be made under Article 15 of the Convention."*

The "non bis in idem" principle applies in Community law (see, among the many precedents, the judgment of 5 May 1996, Cases 18/65 and 35/65, Gutmann v. Commission [1966] ECR 103 and a recent case, the decision of the Court of First Instance of 20 April 1999, Joined Cases T-305/94 and others, Limburgse Vinyl Maatschappij NV v. Commission [1999] ECR II-931). The rule prohibiting cumulation refers to cumulation of two penalties of the same kind, that is to say criminal law penalties.

*In accordance with Article 50, the "non bis in idem" principle applies not only within the jurisdiction of one State but also between the jurisdictions of several Member States. That corresponds to the acquis in Union law; see Articles 54 to 58 of the Schengen Convention, Article 7 of the Convention on the Protection of the European Communities' Financial Interests and Article 10 of the Convention on the fight against corruption. The very limited exceptions in those Conventions permitting the Member States to derogate from the "non bis in idem" principle are covered by the horizontal clause in Article 52(1) of the Charter concerning limitations. As regards the situations referred to by Article 4 of Protocol No 7, namely the application of the principle within the same Member State, the guaranteed right has the same meaning and the same scope as the corresponding right in the ECHR.*

CHAPTER VII. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 51

Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. They shall therefore respect the rights, observe the principles and promote the application thereof in accordance with their respective powers.

2. This Charter does not establish any new power or task for the Community or the Union, or modify powers and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Explanation

The aim of Article 51 is to determine the scope of the Charter. It seeks to establish clearly that the Charter applies primarily to the institutions and bodies of the Union, in compliance with the principle of subsidiarity. This provision is in keeping with Article 6(2) of the Treaty on European Union, which requires the Union to respect fundamental rights, and with the mandate issued by Cologne European Council. The term "institutions" is enshrined in the EC Treaty, Article 7 of which lists the institutions. The term "body" is commonly used to refer to all the authorities set up by the Treaties or by secondary legislation (see Article 286(1) of the Treaty establishing the European Community).

As regards the Member States, it follows unambiguously from the case law of the Court of Justice that the requirement to respect fundamental rights defined in a Union context is only binding on the Member States when they act in the context of Community law (judgment of 13 July 1989, Case 5/88 Wachauf [1989] ECR 2609; judgment of 18 June 1991, ERT [1991] ECR I-2925). The Court of Justice recently confirmed this case law in the following terms: "In addition, it should be remembered that the requirements flowing from the protection of fundamental rights in the Community legal order are also binding on Member States when they implement Community rules..." (judgment of 13 April 2000, Case C-292/97, paragraph 37 of the grounds, not yet published). Of course this principle, as enshrined in this Charter, applies to the central authorities as well as to regional or local bodies, and to public organisations, when they are implementing Union law.

Paragraph 2 confirms that the Charter may not have the effect of extending the competences and tasks which the Treaties confer on the Community and the Union. Explicit mention is made here of the logical consequences of the principle of subsidiarity and of the fact that the Union only has those powers which have been conferred upon it. The fundamental rights as guaranteed in the Union do not have any effect other than in the context of the powers determined by the Treaty.

Article 52

Scope of guaranteed rights

1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by law and respect the essence of those rights and freedoms. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest recognised by the Union or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.
2. Rights recognised by this Charter which are based on the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.
3. Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be the same as those laid down by the said Convention. This provision shall not prevent Union law providing more extensive protection.

Explanation

The purpose of Article 52 is to set the scope of the rights guaranteed. Paragraph 1 deals with the arrangements for the limitation of rights. The wording is based on the case law of the Court of Justice: "...it is well established in the case law of the Court that restrictions may be imposed on the exercise of fundamental rights, in particular in the context of a common organisation of the market, provided that those restrictions in fact correspond to objectives of general interest pursued by the Community and do not constitute, with regard to the aim pursued, disproportionate and unreasonable interference undermining the very substance of those rights" (judgment of 13 April 2000, Case C-292/97, paragraph 45 of the grounds). The reference to general interests recognised by the Union covers both the objectives mentioned in Article 2 and other interests protected by specific Treaty provisions such as Articles 30 or 39(3) of the EC Treaty.

Paragraph 2 specifies that where a right results from the Treaties it is subject to the conditions and limits laid down by them. The Charter does not alter the system of rights conferred by the Treaties.

Paragraph 3 is intended to ensure the necessary consistency between the Charter and the ECHR by establishing the principle that, insofar as the rights in the present Charter also correspond to rights guaranteed by the ECHR, the meaning and scope of those rights, including authorised limitations, are the same as those laid down by the ECHR. This means in particular that the legislator, in laying down limitations to those rights, must comply with the same standards as are fixed by the detailed limitation arrangements laid down in the ECHR without thereby adversely affecting the autonomy of Community law and of that of the Court of Justice of the European Communities. The reference to the ECHR covers both the Convention and the Protocols to it. The meaning and the scope of the guaranteed rights are determined not only by the text of those instruments, but also by the case law of the European Court of Human Rights and by the Court of Justice of the European Communities. The last sentence of the paragraph is designed to allow the Union to guarantee more extensive protection.

The list of rights which may at the present stage, without precluding developments in the law, legislation and the Treaties, be regarded as corresponding to rights in the ECHR within the meaning of the present paragraph is given hereafter. It does not include rights additional to those in the ECHR.

1. Articles of the Charter where both the meaning and the scope are the same as the corresponding Articles of the ECHR:

- Article 2 corresponds to Article 2 of the ECHR
- Article 4 corresponds to Article 3 of the ECHR
- Article 5(1) and (2) correspond to Article 4 of the ECHR
- Article 6 corresponds to Article 5 of the ECHR
- Article 7 corresponds to Article 8 of the ECHR
- Article 10(1) corresponds to Article 9 of the ECHR
- Article 11 corresponds to Article 10 of the ECHR without prejudice to any restrictions which Community law may impose on Member States' right to introduce the licensing arrangements referred to in the third sentence of Article 10(1) of the ECHR
- Article 17 corresponds to Article 1 of the Protocol to the ECHR
- Article 19(1) corresponds to Article 4 of Protocol No 4
- Article 19(2) corresponds to Article 3 of the ECHR as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights
- Article 48 corresponds to Article 6(2) and(3) of the ECHR
- Article 49(1) (with the exception of the last sentence) and (2) correspond to Article 7 of the ECHR

2. Articles where the meaning is the same as the corresponding Articles of the ECHR, but where the scope is wider:

- Article 9 covers the same field as Article 12 of the ECHR, but its scope may be extended to other forms of marriage if these are established by national legislation
- Article 12(1) corresponds to Article 11 of the ECHR, but its scope is extended to European Union level
- Article 14(1) corresponds to Article 2 of the Protocol to the ECHR, but its scope is extended to cover access to vocational and continuing training
- Article 14(3) corresponds to Article 2 of the Protocol to the ECHR as regards the rights of parents

- Article 47(2) and (3) correspond to Article 6(1) of the ECHR, but the limitation to the determination of civil rights and obligations or criminal charges does not apply as regards Union law and its implementation
- Article 50 corresponds to Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR, but its scope is extended to European Union level between the Courts of the Member States.
- Finally, citizens of the European Union may not be considered as aliens in the scope of the application of Community law, because of the prohibition of any discrimination on grounds of nationality. The limitations provided for by Article 16 of the ECHR as regards the rights of aliens therefore do not apply to them in this context.

Article 53

Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or adversely affecting human rights and fundamental freedoms as recognised, in their respective fields of application, by Union law and international law and by international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and by the Member States' constitutions.

Explanation

This provision is intended to maintain the level of protection currently afforded within their respective scope by Union law, national law and international law. Owing to its importance, mention is made of the ECHR. The level of protection afforded by the Charter may not, in any instance, be lower than that guaranteed by the ECHR, with the result that the arrangements for limitations may not fall below the level provided for in the ECHR.

Article 54

Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for herein.

Explanation

This Article corresponds to Article 17 of the ECHR:

"Nothing in this Convention may be interpreted as implying for any State, group or person any right to engage in any activity or perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms set forth herein or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for in the Convention."

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 19 octobre 2000CHARTE 4473/1/00*REV 1 (fr)*CONVENT 49*NOTE DU PRESIDIUM

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

— Texte des explications relatives au texte complet de la Charte, tel que repris au doc. CHARTE 4487/00 CONVENT 50

Les présentes explications ont été établies sous la responsabilité du Présidium. Elles n'ont pas de valeur juridique et sont simplement destinées à éclairer les dispositions de la Charte.

PRÉAMBULE

Les peuples de l'Europe, en établissant entre eux une union sans cesse plus étroite, ont décidé de partager un avenir pacifique fondé sur des valeurs communes.

Consciente de son patrimoine spirituel et moral, l'Union se fonde sur les valeurs indivisibles et universelles de dignité humaine, de liberté, d'égalité et de solidarité; elle repose sur le principe de la démocratie et le principe de l'État de droit. Elle place la personne au cœur de son action en instituant la citoyenneté de l'Union et en créant un espace de liberté, de sécurité et de justice.

L'Union contribue à la préservation et au développement de ces valeurs communes dans le respect de la diversité des cultures et des traditions des peuples de l'Europe, ainsi que de l'identité nationale des États membres et de l'organisation de leurs pouvoirs publics au niveau national, régional et local; elle cherche à promouvoir un développement équilibré et durable et assure la libre circulation des personnes, des biens, des services et des capitaux, ainsi que la liberté d'établissement.

A cette fin, il est nécessaire, en les rendant plus visibles dans une Charte, de renforcer la protection des droits fondamentaux à la lumière de l'évolution de la société, du progrès social et des développements scientifiques et technologiques.

La présente Charte réaffirme, dans le respect des compétences et des tâches de la Communauté et de l'Union, ainsi que du principe de subsidiarité, les droits qui résultent notamment des traditions constitutionnelles et des obligations internationales communes aux États membres, du traité sur l'Union européenne et des traités communautaires, de la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, des Chartes sociales adoptées par la Communauté et par le Conseil de l'Europe, ainsi que de la jurisprudence de la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes et de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme.

La jouissance de ces droits entraîne des responsabilités et des devoirs tant à l'égard d'autrui qu'à l'égard de la communauté humaine et des générations futures.

En conséquence, l'Union reconnaît les droits, les libertés et les principes énoncés ci-après.

CHAPITRE I. DIGNITE

Article 1

Dignité humaine

La dignité humaine est inviolable. Elle doit être respectée et protégée.

Explication

La dignité de la personne humaine n'est pas seulement un droit fondamental en soi, mais constitue la base même des droits fondamentaux. La Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme de 1948 établit ce principe dans son préambule : "... considérant que la reconnaissance de la dignité inhérente à tous les membres de la famille humaine et de leurs droits égaux et inaliénables constitue le fondement de la liberté, de la justice et de la paix dans le monde."

Il en résulte, notamment, qu'aucun des droits inscrits dans cette charte ne peut être utilisé pour porter atteinte à la dignité d'autrui et que la dignité de la personne humaine fait partie de la substance des droits inscrits dans cette charte. Il ne peut donc y être porté atteinte, même en cas de limitation d'un droit.

Article 2

Droit à la vie

1. Toute personne a droit à la vie.
2. Nul ne peut être condamné à la peine de mort, ni exécuté.

Explication

1. Le paragraphe 1 de cet article est fondé sur l'article 2, paragraphe 1, première phrase, de la CEDH, dont le texte est le suivant :

"1. Le droit de toute personne à la vie est protégé par la loi..."

2. La deuxième phrase de cette disposition, qui concerne la peine de mort, a été rendue caduque par l'entrée en vigueur du protocole n° 6 annexé à la CEDH, dont l'article 1er est libellé comme suit :

"La peine de mort est abolie. Nul ne peut être condamné à une telle peine ni exécuté."

C'est sur la base de cette disposition qu'est rédigé le paragraphe 2 de l'article 2 de la charte.

3. Les dispositions de l'article 2 de la Charte correspondent à celles des articles précités de la CEDH et du protocole additionnel. Elles en ont le même sens et la même portée, conformément à l'article 52 § 3 de la Charte. Ainsi, les définitions "négatives" qui figurent dans la CEDH doivent être considérées comme figurant également dans la Charte:

a) l'article 2, paragraphe 2, de la CEDH :

"La mort n'est pas considérée comme infligée en violation de cet article dans les cas où elle résulterait d'un recours à la force rendu absolument nécessaire :

- a. pour assurer la défense de toute personne contre la violence illégale ;
- b. pour effectuer une arrestation régulière ou pour empêcher l'évasion d'une personne régulièrement détenue ;
- c. pour réprimer, conformément à la loi, une émeute ou une insurrection."

b) l'article 2 du protocole n° 6 annexé à la CEDH :

"Un Etat peut prévoir dans sa législation la peine de mort pour des actes commis en temps de guerre ou de danger imminent de guerre; une telle peine ne sera appliquée que dans les cas prévus par cette législation et conformément à ses dispositions ...".

Article 3

Droit à l'intégrité de la personne

1. Toute personne a droit à son intégrité physique et mentale.
2. Dans le cadre de la médecine et de la biologie, doivent notamment être respectés:
 - le consentement libre et éclairé de la personne concernée, selon les modalités définies par la loi,
 - l'interdiction des pratiques eugéniques, notamment celles qui ont pour but la sélection des personnes,
 - l'interdiction de faire du corps humain et de ses parties, en tant que tels, une source de profit,
 - l'interdiction du clonage reproductif des êtres humains.

Explication

1. Les principes contenus dans l'article 3 de la Charte figurent déjà dans la convention sur les droits de l'homme et la biomédecine, adoptée dans le cadre du Conseil de l'Europe (STE 164 et protocole additionnel STE 168). La présente charte ne vise pas à déroger à ces dispositions et ne prohibe en conséquence que le seul clonage reproductif. Elle n'autorise ni ne prohibe les autres formes de clonage. Elle n'empêche donc aucunement le législateur d'interdire les autres formes de clonages.

2. La référence aux pratiques eugéniques, notamment celles ayant pour but la sélection des personnes, vise les hypothèses dans lesquelles des programmes de sélection sont organisés et mis en œuvre, comportant par exemple des campagnes de stérilisation, de grossesses forcées, de mariages ethniques obligatoires... tous actes qui sont considérés comme des crimes internationaux par le statut de la Cour pénale internationale adopté à Rome le 17 juillet 1998 (voir article 7 § 1 g).

Article 4

Interdiction de la torture et des peines ou traitements inhumains ou dégradants

Nul ne peut être soumis à la torture, ni à des peines ou traitements inhumains ou dégradants.

Explication

Le droit figurant à l'article 4 correspond à celui qui est garanti par l'article 3 de la CEDH, dont le libellé est identique: "Nul ne peut être soumis à la torture ni à des peines ou traitements inhumains ou dégradants". En application de l'article 52 paragraphe 3 de la Charte, il a donc le même sens et la même portée que ce dernier article.

Article 5

Interdiction de l'esclavage et du travail forcé

1. Nul ne peut être tenu en esclavage ni en servitude.
2. Nul ne peut être astreint à accomplir un travail forcé ou obligatoire.
3. La traite des êtres humains est interdite.

Explication

1. Le droit inscrit à l'article 5, paragraphe 1 et 2 correspond à l'article 4, paragraphes 1 et 2, au libellé analogue, de la CEDH. Il a donc le même sens et la même portée que ce dernier article, conformément à l'article 52, paragraphe 3, de la Charte. Il en résulte que:
 - ☞ Aucune limitation ne peut affecter de manière légitime le droit prévu au paragraphe 1.
 - ☞ Au paragraphe 2, les notions de "travail forcé ou obligatoire" doivent être comprises en tenant compte des définitions "négatives" contenues à l'article 4, paragraphe 3, de la CEDH:

"N'est pas considéré comme "travail forcé ou obligatoire" au sens du présent article:

 - a. tout travail requis normalement d'une personne soumise à la détention dans les conditions prévues par l'article 5 de la présente Convention, ou durant sa mise en liberté conditionnelle;
 - b. tout service de caractère militaire ou, dans le cas d'objecteurs de conscience dans les pays où l'objection de conscience est reconnue comme légitime, à un autre service à la place du service militaire obligatoire;
 - c. tout service requis dans le cas de crises ou de calamités qui menacent la vie ou le bien-être de la communauté;
 - d. tout travail ou service formant partie des obligations civiques normales."
2. Le paragraphe 3 résulte directement du principe de la dignité de la personne humaine et tient compte des données récentes en matière de criminalité organisées, telles que l'organisation de filières lucratives d'immigration illégale ou d'exploitation sexuelle. La convention Europol contient en annexe la définition suivante qui vise la traite à des fins d'exploitation sexuelle: "Traite des êtres humains: le fait de soumettre une personne au pouvoir réel et illégal d'autres personnes en usant de violence et de menaces ou en abusant d'un rapport d'autorité ou de manœuvres en vue notamment de se livrer à l'exploitation de la prostitution d'autrui, à des formes d'exploitation et de violences sexuelles à l'égard des mineurs ou au commerce lié à l'abandon d'enfants" Le chapitre VI de la convention d'application de l'accord de Schengen qui a été intégré dans l'acquis communautaire, et auquel le Royaume-Uni participe, l'Irlande ayant demandé à participer, contient, à l'article 27 § 1, la formule suivante qui vise les filières d'immigration illégale : "Les Parties contractantes s'engagent à instaurer des sanctions appropriées à l'encontre de quiconque aide ou tente d'aider, à des fins lucratives, un étranger à pénétrer ou à séjourner sur le territoire d'une Partie contractante en violation de la législation de cette Partie contractante relative à l'entrée et au séjour des étrangers".

CHAPITRE II. LIBERTES

Article 6

Droit à la liberté et à la sûreté

Toute personne a droit à la liberté et à la sûreté.

Explication

Les droits prévus à l'article 6 correspondent à ceux qui sont garantis par l'article 5 de la CEDH, dont ils ont, conformément à l'article 52, paragraphe 3 de la charte, le même sens et la même portée. Il en résulte que les limitations qui peuvent légitimement leur être apportées ne peuvent excéder les limites permises par la CEDH dans le libellé même de l'article 5:

- "1 Toute personne a droit à la liberté et à la sûreté. Nul ne peut être privé de sa liberté, sauf dans les cas suivants et selon les voies légales :*
- a s'il est détenu régulièrement après condamnation par un tribunal compétent;*
 - b s'il a fait l'objet d'une arrestation ou d'une détention régulières pour insoumission à une ordonnance rendue, conformément à la loi, par un tribunal ou en vue de garantir l'exécution d'une obligation prescrite par la loi;*

- c s'il a été arrêté et détenu en vue d'être conduit devant l'autorité judiciaire compétente, lorsqu'il y a des raisons plausibles de soupçonner qu'il a commis une infraction ou qu'il y a des motifs raisonnables de croire à la nécessité de l'empêcher de commettre une infraction ou de s'enfuir après l'accomplissement de celle-ci;*
 - d s'il s'agit de la détention régulière d'un mineur, décidée pour son éducation surveillée ou de sa détention régulière, afin de le traduire devant l'autorité compétente;*
 - e s'il s'agit de la détention régulière d'une personne susceptible de propager une maladie contagieuse, d'un aliéné, d'un alcoolique, d'un toxicomane ou d'un vagabond;*
 - f s'il s'agit de l'arrestation ou de la détention régulières d'une personne pour l'empêcher de pénétrer irrégulièrement dans le territoire, ou contre laquelle une procédure d'expulsion ou d'extradition est en cours.*
- 2 Toute personne arrêtée doit être informée, dans le plus court délai et dans une langue qu'elle comprend, des raisons de son arrestation et de toute accusation portée contre elle.*
- 3 Toute personne arrêtée ou détenue, dans les conditions prévues au paragraphe 1.c du présent article, doit être aussitôt traduite devant un juge ou un autre magistrat habilité par la loi à exercer des fonctions judiciaires et a le droit d'être jugée dans un délai raisonnable, ou libérée pendant la procédure. La mise en liberté peut être subordonnée à une garantie assurant la comparution de l'intéressé à l'audience.*
- 4 Toute personne privée de sa liberté par arrestation ou détention a le droit d'introduire un recours devant un tribunal, afin qu'il statue à bref délai sur la légalité de sa détention et ordonne sa libération si la détention est illégale.*
- 5 Toute personne victime d'une arrestation ou d'une détention dans des conditions contraires aux dispositions de cet article a droit à réparation."*

La Charte devant s'appliquer dans le cadre de l'Union, les droits inscrits à l'article 6 doivent être respectés tout particulièrement lorsque l'Union adopte, conformément au titre VI du traité sur l'Union européenne, des décisions-cadre pour la définition de dispositions communes minimales en ce qui concerne la qualification des infractions et les peines.

Article 7

Respect de la vie privée et familiale

Toute personne a droit au respect de sa vie privée et familiale, de son domicile et de ses communications.

Explication

Les droits garantis à l'article 7 correspondent à ceux garantis par l'article 8 de la CEDH. Pour tenir compte de l'évolution technique le mot "communications" a été substitué à celui de correspondance.

Conformément à l'article 52, paragraphe 3, ce droit a le même sens et la même portée que celle de l'article correspondant de la CEDH. Il en résulte que les limitations susceptibles de leur être légitimement apportées sont les mêmes que celles tolérées dans le cadre de l'article 8 en question:

- "1 Toute personne a droit au respect de sa vie privée et familiale, de son domicile et de sa correspondance.*
- 2 Il ne peut y avoir ingérence d'une autorité publique dans l'exercice de ce droit que pour autant que cette ingérence est prévue par la loi et qu'elle constitue une mesure qui, dans une société démocratique, est nécessaire à la sécurité nationale, à la sûreté publique, au bien-être économique du pays, à la défense de l'ordre et à la prévention des infractions pénales, à la protection de la santé ou de la morale, ou à la protection des droits et libertés d'autrui."*

Article 8

Protection des données à caractère personnel

1. Toute personne a droit à la protection des données à caractère personnel la concernant.

2. Ces données doivent être traitées loyalement, à des fins déterminées et sur la base du consentement de la personne concernée ou en vertu d'un autre fondement légitime prévu par la loi. Toute personne a le droit d'accéder aux données collectées la concernant et d'en obtenir la rectification.
3. Le respect de ces règles est soumis au contrôle d'une autorité indépendante.

Explication

Cet article se fonde sur l'article 286 du traité instituant la Communauté européenne et sur la directive 95/46/CE du Parlement européen et du Conseil relative à la protection des personnes physiques à l'égard du traitement des données à caractère personnel et à la libre circulation de ces données (JO n° L 281 du 23.11.95), ainsi que sur l'article 8 de la CEDH et sur la Convention du Conseil de l'Europe pour la protection des personnes à l'égard du traitement automatisé des données à caractère personnel du 28 janvier 1981, ratifiée par tous les Etats membres. Le droit à la protection des données à caractère personnel s'exerce dans les conditions prévues par la directive susvisée et peut être limité dans les conditions prévues par l'article 52 de la Charte.

Article 9

Droit de se marier et droit de fonder une famille

Le droit de se marier et le droit de fonder une famille sont garantis selon les lois nationales qui en régissent l'exercice.

Explication

Cet article se fonde sur l'article 12 de la CEDH qui se lit ainsi : " A partir de l'âge nubile, l'homme et la femme ont le droit de se marier et de fonder une famille selon les lois nationales régissant l'exercice de ce droit." La rédaction de ce droit a été modernisée afin de recouvrir les cas dans lesquels les législations nationales reconnaissent d'autres voies que le mariage pour fonder une famille. Cet article n'interdit, ni n'impose l'octroi du statut du mariage à des unions entre personnes du même sexe. Ce droit est donc semblable à celui prévu par la CEDH, mais sa portée peut être plus étendue lorsque la législation nationale le prévoit.

Article 10

Liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion

1. Toute personne a droit à la liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion. Ce droit implique la liberté de changer de religion ou de conviction, ainsi que la liberté de manifester sa religion ou sa conviction individuellement ou collectivement, en public ou en privé, par le culte, l'enseignement, les pratiques et l'accomplissement des rites.
2. Le droit à l'objection de conscience est reconnu selon les lois nationales qui en régissent l'exercice.

Explication

Le droit garanti au paragraphe 1 correspond au droit garanti à l'article 9 de la CEDH et, conformément à l'article 52, paragraphe 3, il a le même sens et la même portée que celui-ci. Les limitations doivent de ce fait respecter le paragraphe 2 de cet article 9 qui se lit ainsi : "La liberté de manifester sa religion ou ses convictions ne peut faire l'objet d'autres restrictions que celles qui, prévues par la loi, constituent des mesures nécessaires, dans une société démocratique, à la sécurité publique, à la protection de l'ordre, de la santé ou de la morale publiques, ou à la protection des droits et libertés d'autrui."

Le droit garanti au paragraphe 2 correspond aux traditions constitutionnelles nationales et à l'évolution des législations nationales sur ce point.

Article 11

Liberté d'expression et d'information

1. Toute personne a droit à la liberté d'expression. Ce droit comprend la liberté d'opinion et la liberté de recevoir ou de communiquer des informations ou des idées sans qu'il puisse y avoir ingérence d'autorités publiques et sans considération de frontières.
2. La liberté des médias et leur pluralisme sont respectés.

Explication

1. L'article 11 correspond à l'article 10 de la CEDH qui se lit ainsi :

"1 Toute personne a droit à la liberté d'expression. Ce droit comprend la liberté d'opinion et la liberté de recevoir ou de communiquer des informations ou des idées sans qu'il puisse y avoir ingérence d'autorités publiques et sans considération de frontière. Le présent article n'empêche pas les Etats de soumettre les entreprises de radiodiffusion, de cinéma ou de télévision à un régime d'autorisations.

- 2 L'exercice de ces libertés comportant des devoirs et des responsabilités peut être soumis à certaines formalités, conditions, restrictions ou sanctions prévues par la loi, qui constituent des mesures nécessaires, dans une société démocratique, à la sécurité nationale, à l'intégrité territoriale ou à la sûreté publique, à la défense de l'ordre et à la prévention du crime, à la protection de la santé ou de la morale, à la protection de la réputation ou des droits d'autrui, pour empêcher la divulgation d'informations confidentielles ou pour garantir l'autorité et l'impartialité du pouvoir judiciaire."

En application de l'article 52, paragraphe 3, ce droit à le même sens et la même portée que celui garanti par la CEDH. Les limitations qui peuvent être apportées à ce droit ne peuvent donc excéder celles prévues dans le paragraphe 2 de l'article 10, sans préjudice des restrictions que le droit communautaire de la concurrence peut apporter à la faculté des Etats membres d'instaurer les régimes d'autorisation visés à l'article 10 § 1, troisième phrase de la CEDH.

2. Le paragraphe 2 de cet article explicite les conséquences du paragraphe 1 en ce qui concerne la liberté des médias. Il est notamment fondé sur la jurisprudence de la Cour relative à la télévision notamment dans l'affaire C-288/89 (arrêt du 25 juillet 1991, Stichting Collectieve Antennevoorziening Gouda e.a.; Rec. I-4007) et sur le protocole sur le système de radiodiffusion publique dans les Etats membres, annexé au traité CE ainsi que sur la directive 89/552/CE du Conseil (voir notamment son 17e considérant).

Article 12

Liberté de réunion et d'association

1. Toute personne a droit à la liberté de réunion pacifique et à la liberté d'association à tous les niveaux, notamment dans les domaines politique, syndical et civique, ce qui implique le droit de toute personne de fonder avec d'autres des syndicats et de s'y affilier pour la défense de ses intérêts.
2. Les partis politiques au niveau de l'Union contribuent à l'expression de la volonté politique des citoyens de l'Union.

Explication

1. Les dispositions du paragraphe 1 de cet article correspondent aux dispositions de l'article 11 de la CEDH qui se lit ainsi:
"1 Toute personne a droit à la liberté de réunion pacifique et à la liberté d'association, y compris le droit de fonder avec d'autres des syndicats et de s'affilier à des syndicats pour la défense de ses intérêts.

- 2 L'exercice de ces droits ne peut faire l'objet d'autres restrictions que celles qui, prévues par la loi, constituent des mesures nécessaires, dans une société démocratique, à la sécurité nationale, à la sûreté publique, à la défense de l'ordre et à la prévention du crime, à la protection de la santé ou de la morale ou à la protection des droits et libertés d'autrui. Le présent article n'interdit pas que des restrictions légitimes soient imposées à l'exercice de ces droits par les membres des forces armées, de la police ou de l'administration de l'Etat."

Les dispositions du paragraphe 1 du présent article 12 ont le même sens que celles de la CEDH, mais leur portée est plus étendue étant donné qu'elles peuvent s'appliquer à tous les niveaux, ce qui inclut le niveau européen. Conformément à l'article 52 § 3 de la Charte, les limitations à ce droit ne peuvent excéder celles considérées comme pouvant être légitimes en vertu du paragraphe 2 de l'article 11 de la CEDH.

2. Ce droit se fonde également sur l'article 11 de la Charte communautaire de droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs.
3. Le paragraphe 2 de cet article correspond à l'article 191 du traité instituant la Communauté européenne.

Article 13

Liberté des arts et des sciences

Les arts et la recherche scientifique sont libres. La liberté académique est respectée.

Explication

Ce droit est déduit en premier lieu des libertés de pensée et d'expression. Il s'exerce dans le respect de l'article 1er et peut être soumis aux limitations autorisées par l'article 10 de la CEDH.

Article 14

Droit à l'éducation

1. Toute personne a droit à l'éducation, ainsi qu'à l'accès à la formation professionnelle et continue.
2. Ce droit comporte la faculté de suivre gratuitement l'enseignement obligatoire.
3. La liberté de créer des établissements d'enseignement dans le respect des principes démocratiques, ainsi que le droit des parents d'assurer l'éducation et l'enseignement de leurs enfants conformément à leurs convictions religieuses, philosophiques et pédagogiques, sont respectés selon les lois nationales qui en régissent l'exercice.

Explication

1. Cet article est inspiré tant des traditions constitutionnelles communes aux Etats membres que de l'article 2 du protocole additionnel à la CEDH qui se lit ainsi :
"Nul ne peut se voir refuser le droit à l'instruction. L'Etat, dans l'exercice des fonctions qu'il assumera dans le domaine de l'éducation et de l'enseignement, respectera le droit des parents d'assurer cette éducation et cet enseignement conformément à leurs convictions religieuses et philosophiques."
Il a été jugé utile d'étendre ce droit à la formation professionnelle et continue (voir point 15 de la charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs et article 10 de la charte sociale) ainsi que d'ajouter le principe de gratuité de l'enseignement obligatoire. Tel qu'il est formulé, ce dernier principe implique seulement que pour l'enseignement obligatoire, chaque enfant ait la possibilité d'accéder à un établissement qui pratique la gratuité. Il n'impose pas que tous les établissements, notamment privés, qui dispensent cet enseignement soient gratuits. Il n'interdit pas non plus que certaines formes spécifiques d'enseignement puissent être payantes dès lors que l'Etat prend des mesures destinées à octroyer une compensation financière. Dans la mesure où la Charte s'applique à l'Union, ceci signifie que dans le cadre de ses politiques de formation, l'Union doit respecter la gratuité de l'enseignement obligatoire, mais cela ne crée bien entendu pas de nouvelles compétences. En ce qui concerne le droit des parents, il doit être interprété en relation avec les dispositions de l'article 24.

- 2. La liberté de création d'établissements, publics ou privés, d'enseignement est garantie comme un des aspects de la liberté d'entreprendre, mais elle est limitée par le respect des principes démocratiques et s'exerce selon les modalités définies par les législations nationales.*

Article 15

Liberté professionnelle et droit de travailler

1. Toute personne a le droit de travailler et d'exercer une profession librement choisie ou acceptée.
2. Tout citoyen ou toute citoyenne de l'Union a la liberté de chercher un emploi, de travailler, de s'établir ou de fournir des services dans tout État membre.
3. Les ressortissants des pays tiers qui sont autorisés à travailler sur le territoire des États membres ont droit à des conditions de travail équivalentes à celles dont bénéficient les citoyens ou citoyennes de l'Union.

Explication

La liberté professionnelle, consacrée au premier paragraphe de l'article 15, est reconnue dans la jurisprudence de la Cour de justice (voir, i.a., les arrêts du 14 mai 1974, aff. 4/73, Nold, Rec. 1974, 491, no. 12 - 14; du 13 décembre 1979, aff. 44/79, Hauer, Rec. 1979 p. 3727; du 8 octobre 1986, aff. 234/85, Keller, Rec. 1986, 2897, no. 8). Ce paragraphe s'inspire également de l'article 1 paragraphe 2 de la Charte sociale européenne signée le 18 octobre 1961, ratifiée par tous les Etats membres, et du point 4 de la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs du 9 décembre 1989. L'expression "conditions de travail" doit être entendue au sens de l'article 140 du traité CE.

Le deuxième paragraphe reprend les trois libertés garanties par les articles 39, 43 et 49 et svts. du traité CE, à savoir la libre circulation des travailleurs, la liberté d'établissement et la libre prestation des services.

Le troisième paragraphe se fonde sur l'article 137 (3), quatrième tiret TCE, ainsi que sur l'article 19 No. 4 de la Charte sociale européenne, signée le 18 octobre 1961, ratifiée par tous les Etats membres. L'article 52 § 2 de la Charte est donc applicable. La question du recrutement de marins ayant la nationalité d'Etats tiers dans les équipages de navires battant pavillon d'un Etat membre de l'Union est réglée par le droit communautaire et les législations et pratiques nationales.

Article 16

Liberté d'entreprise

La liberté d'entreprise est reconnue conformément au droit communautaire et aux législations et pratiques nationales.

Explication

Cet article se fonde sur la jurisprudence de la Cour de justice qui a reconnu la liberté d'exercer une activité économique ou commerciale (voir les arrêts du 14 mai 1974, aff. 4/73, Nold, Rec. 1974, 491, no. 14; et du 27 septembre 1979, aff. 230-78, SPA Eridania et a., Rec. 1979, 2749, no. 20 et 31) et la liberté contractuelle (voir, i.a., les arrêts "Sukkerfabriken Nykoebing", aff. 151/78, Rec. 1979, 1, no. 19; 5 octobre 1999, Espagne c. Commission, C-240/97 [non encore publié] no. 99), ainsi que sur l'article 4 (1) et (2) TCE qui reconnaît la liberté de concurrence. Ce droit s'exerce bien entendu dans le respect du droit communautaire et des législations nationales. Il peut être soumis aux limitations prévues à l'article 52 § 1 de la Charte.

Article 17

Droit de propriété

1. Toute personne a le droit de jouir de la propriété des biens qu'elle a acquis légalement, de les utiliser, d'en disposer et de les léguer. Nul ne peut être privé de sa propriété, si ce n'est pour cause d'utilité publique, dans des cas et conditions prévus par une loi et moyennant en temps utile une juste indemnité pour sa perte. L'usage des biens peut être réglementé par la loi dans la mesure nécessaire à l'intérêt général.
2. La propriété intellectuelle est protégée.

Explication

Cet article correspond à l'article 1er du protocole additionnel à la CEDH :

"Toute personne physique ou morale a droit au respect de ses biens. Nul ne peut être privé de sa propriété que pour cause d'utilité publique et dans les conditions prévues par la loi et les principes généraux du droit international.

Les dispositions précédentes ne portent pas atteinte au droit que possèdent les Etats de mettre en vigueur les lois qu'ils jugent nécessaires pour réglementer l'usage des biens conformément à l'intérêt général ou pour assurer le paiement des impôts ou d'autres contributions ou des amendes."

Il s'agit d'un droit fondamental commun à toutes les constitutions nationales. Il a été consacré à des maintes reprises par la jurisprudence de la Cour de justice et en premier lieu dans l'arrêt Hauer (13 décembre 1979, Rec. p. 3727). La rédaction a été modernisée, mais, conformément à l'article 52 § 3, ce droit a le même sens et la même portée que celui garanti par CEDH et les limitations prévues par celle-ci ne peuvent être excédées.

La protection de la propriété intellectuelle, qui est un des aspects du droit de propriété, fait l'objet d'une mention explicite au paragraphe 2 en raison de son importance croissante et du droit communautaire dérivé. La propriété intellectuelle couvre, outre la propriété littéraire et artistique, le droit des brevets et des marques ainsi que les droits voisins. Les garanties prévues au paragraphe 1 s'appliquent de façon appropriée à la propriété intellectuelle.

Article 18

Droit d'asile

Le droit d'asile est garanti dans le respect des règles de la convention de Genève du 28 juillet 1951 et du protocole du 31 janvier 1967 relatifs au statut des réfugiés et conformément au traité instituant la Communauté européenne.

Explication

Le texte de l'article se fonde sur l'article 63 CE qui impose à l'Union de respecter la convention de Genève sur les réfugiés. Il convient de se référer aux dispositions des protocoles relatifs au Royaume-Uni et à l'Irlande annexés au traité d'Amsterdam ainsi qu'au Danemark afin de déterminer dans quelle mesure ces Etats membres mettent en œuvre le droit communautaire en la matière et dans quelle mesure cet article leur est applicable. Cet article respecte le protocole relatif à l'asile annexé au traité CE.

Article 19

Protection en cas d'éloignement, d'expulsion et d'extradition

1. Les expulsions collectives sont interdites.
2. Nul ne peut être éloigné, expulsé ou extradé vers un État où il existe un risque sérieux qu'il soit soumis à la peine de mort, à la torture ou à d'autres peines ou traitements inhumains ou dégradants.

Explication

Le paragraphe 1 de cet article a le même sens et la même portée que l'article 4 du protocole additionnel n° 4 à la CEDH en ce qui concerne les expulsions collectives. Il vise à garantir que chaque décision fasse l'objet d'un examen spécifique et que l'on ne puisse décider par une mesure unique d'expulser toutes les personnes ayant la nationalité d'un Etat déterminé (voir aussi l'article 13 du Pacte sur les droits civils et politiques).

*Le paragraphe 2 incorpore la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme relative à l'article 3 de la CEDH (voir Ahmed c. Autriche, arrêt du 17 décembre 1996, Rec.1996, VI-.2206 et Soering, arrêt du 7 Juillet 1989).*

CHAPITRE III. EGALITE

Article 20

Égalité en droit

Toutes les personnes sont égales en droit.

Explication

Cet article correspond au principe qui est inscrit dans toutes les constitutions européennes et que la Cour a jugé être un principe fondamental du droit communautaire (arrêt du 13 novembre 1984, Racke, affaire 283/83, rec. 1984, p. 3791, arrêt du 17 avril 1997, c-15/95, EARL, rec.1997, I-1961 et arrêt du 13 avril 2000, C-292/97, Karlsson, non encore publié).

Article 21

Non-discrimination

1. Est interdite, toute discrimination fondée notamment sur le sexe, la race, la couleur, les origines ethniques ou sociales, les caractéristiques génétiques, la langue, la religion ou les convictions, les opinions politiques ou toute autre opinion, l'appartenance à une minorité nationale, la fortune, la naissance, un handicap, l'âge ou l'orientation sexuelle.
2. Dans le domaine d'application du traité instituant la Communauté européenne et du traité sur l'Union européenne, et sans préjudice des dispositions particulières desdits traités, toute discrimination fondée sur la nationalité est interdite.

Explication

Le paragraphe premier s'inspire de l'article 13 du traité CE et de l'article 14 de la CEDH ainsi que de l'article 11 de la convention sur les droits de l'homme et la biomédecine en ce qui concerne le patrimoine génétique. Pour autant qu'il coïncide avec l'article 14 de la CEDH, il s'applique conformément à celui-ci.

Le paragraphe 2 correspond à l'article 12 du Traité CE et doit s'appliquer conformément à celui-ci.

Article 22Diversité culturelle, religieuse et linguistique

L'Union respecte la diversité culturelle, religieuse et linguistique.

Explication

Cet article se fonde sur l'article 6 du traité sur l'Union européenne et sur l'article 151 paragraphes 1 et 4 du traité CE relatif à la culture. Il s'inspire également de la déclaration n° 11 à l'acte final du traité d'Amsterdam sur le statut des Eglises et des organisations non confessionnelles.

Article 23Égalité entre hommes et femmes

L'égalité entre les hommes et les femmes doit être assurée dans tous les domaines, y compris en matière d'emploi, de travail et de rémunération.

Le principe de l'égalité n'empêche pas le maintien ou l'adoption de mesures prévoyant des avantages spécifiques en faveur du sexe sous-représenté.

Explication

L'alinéa 1 de cet article se fonde sur les articles 2 et 3, paragraphe 2, du traité CE qui imposent comme objectif à la Communauté de promouvoir l'égalité entre les hommes et les femmes et sur l'article 141 § 3 du traité CE. Il s'inspire de l'article 20 de la Charte sociale européenne révisée du 3.5.1996 et du point 16 de la Charte communautaire des droits des travailleurs.

Il se fonde également sur l'article 141 § 3 du traité CE et sur l'article 2 § 4 de la directive 76/207/CEE du Conseil relative à la mise en œuvre du principe de l'égalité de traitement entre hommes et femmes en ce qui concerne l'accès à l'emploi, à la formation et à la promotion professionnelles, et les conditions de travail.

L'alinéa 2 reprend, dans une formule plus courte, l'article 141 § 4 du traité CE selon lequel le principe d'égalité de traitement n'empêche pas le maintien ou l'adoption de mesures prévoyant des avantages spécifiques destinés à faciliter l'exercice d'une activité professionnelle par le sexe sous-représenté ou à prévenir ou compenser des désavantages dans la carrière professionnelle. Conformément à l'article 51 § 2, le présent paragraphe ne modifie pas l'article 141 § 4 CE.

Article 24

Droits de l'enfant

1. Les enfants ont droit à la protection et aux soins nécessaires à leur bien-être. Ils peuvent exprimer leur opinion librement. Celle-ci est prise en considération pour les sujets qui les concernent, en fonction de leur âge et de leur maturité.

2. Dans tous les actes relatifs aux enfants, qu'ils soient accomplis par des autorités publiques ou des institutions privées, l'intérêt supérieur de l'enfant doit être une considération primordiale.
3. Tout enfant a le droit d'entretenir régulièrement des relations personnelles et des contacts directs avec ses deux parents, sauf si cela est contraire à son intérêt.

Explication

Cet article se fonde sur la Convention de New York sur les Droits de l'enfant, signée le 20 novembre 1989, ratifiée par tous les Etats membres, et notamment sur les articles 3, 9, 12 et 13 de ladite Convention.

Article 25

Droits des personnes âgées

L'Union reconnaît et respecte le droit des personnes âgées à mener une vie digne et indépendante et à participer à la vie sociale et culturelle.

Explication

Cet article est inspiré de l'article 23 de la Charte sociale européenne révisée et des articles 24 et 25 de la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs. La participation à la vie sociale et culturelle recouvre bien entendu la participation à la vie politique.

Article 26

Intégration des personnes handicapées

L'Union reconnaît et respecte le droit des personnes handicapées à bénéficier de mesures visant à assurer leur autonomie, leur intégration sociale et professionnelle et leur participation à la vie de la communauté.

Explication

Le principe contenu dans cet article se fonde sur l'article 15 de la charte sociale européenne et s'inspire également de l'article 23 de la Charte sociale révisée et du point 26 de la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs.

CHAPITRE IV. SOLIDARITE

Article 27

Droit à l'information et à la consultation des travailleurs au sein de l'entreprise

Les travailleurs ou leurs représentants doivent se voir garantir, aux niveaux appropriés, une information et une consultation en temps utile, dans les cas et conditions prévus par le droit communautaire et les législations et pratiques nationales.

Explication

Cet article figure dans la Charte sociale européenne révisée (article 21) et la Charte communautaire des droits des travailleurs (points 17 et 18). Il s'applique dans les conditions prévues par le droit communautaire et les droits nationaux. La référence aux niveaux appropriés renvoie aux niveaux prévus par le droit communautaire ou par le droit et les pratiques nationales, ce qui peut inclure le niveau européen lorsque la législation communautaire le prévoit. L'acquis communautaire dans ce domaine est important : article 138 et 139 du traité CE, directives 98/59/CE (licenciements collectifs), 77/187/CEE (transferts d'entreprises) et 94/45/CE (comités d'entreprise européens).

Article 28

Droit de négociation et d'actions collectives

Les travailleurs et les employeurs, ou leurs organisations respectives, ont, conformément au droit communautaire et aux législations et pratiques nationales, le droit de négocier et de conclure des conventions collectives aux niveaux appropriés et de recourir, en cas de conflits d'intérêts, à des actions collectives pour la défense de leurs intérêts, y compris la grève.

Explication

Cet article se fonde sur l'article 6 de la Charte sociale européenne, ainsi que sur la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs (points 12 à 14). Le droit à l'action collective a été reconnu par la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme comme l'un des éléments du droit syndical posé par l'article 11 de la CEDH. En ce qui concerne les niveaux appropriés auxquels peut avoir lieu la négociation collective, voir les explications données sous l'article précédent. Les actions collectives, parmi lesquelles la grève, relèvent des législations et des pratiques nationales, y compris la question de savoir si elles peuvent être menées de façon parallèle dans plusieurs Etats membres.

Article 29

Droit d'accès aux services de placement

Toute personne a le droit d'accéder à un service gratuit de placement.

Explication

Cet article se fonde sur l'article 1 § 3 de la Charte sociale européenne, ainsi que sur le point 13 de la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs.

Article 30

Protection en cas de licenciement injustifié

Tout travailleur a droit à une protection contre tout licenciement injustifié, conformément au droit communautaire et aux législations et pratiques nationales.

Explication

Cet article s'inspire de l'article 24 de la Charte sociale révisée. Voir aussi les directives 77/187 sur la protection des droits des travailleurs en cas de transferts d'entreprises, 80/987 sur la protection des travailleurs en cas d'insolvabilité.

Article 31

Conditions de travail justes et équitables

1. Tout travailleur a droit à des conditions de travail qui respectent sa santé, sa sécurité et sa dignité.
2. Tout travailleur a droit à une limitation de la durée maximale du travail et à des périodes de repos journalier et hebdomadaire, ainsi qu'à une période annuelle de congés payés.

Explication

1. L'article 31 se fonde sur la directive 89/391/CEE concernant la mise en œuvre de mesures visant à promouvoir l'amélioration de la sécurité et de la santé des travailleurs au travail. Il s'inspire également de l'article 3 de la Charte sociale et du point 19 de la Charte communautaire des droits des travailleurs ainsi que, pour ce qui concerne le droit à la dignité dans le travail, de l'article 26 de la Charte sociale révisée. L'expression "conditions de travail" doit être entendue au sens de l'article 140 du traité CE.
2. Le paragraphe 2 se fonde sur la directive 93/104/CE concernant certains aspects de l'aménagement du temps de travail, ainsi que sur de l'article 2 de la Charte sociale européenne et sur le point 8 de la Charte communautaire des droits des travailleurs.

Article 32

Interdiction du travail des enfants et protection des jeunes au travail

Le travail des enfants est interdit. L'âge minimal d'admission au travail ne peut être inférieur à l'âge auquel cesse la période de scolarité obligatoire, sans préjudice des règles plus favorables aux jeunes et sauf dérogations limitées.

Les jeunes admis au travail doivent bénéficier de conditions de travail adaptées à leur âge et être protégés contre l'exploitation économique ou contre tout travail susceptible de nuire à leur sécurité, à leur santé, à leur développement physique, mental, moral ou social ou de compromettre leur éducation.

Explication

Cet article se fonde sur la directive 94/33/CE relative à la protection des jeunes au travail, ainsi que sur l'article 7 de la Charte sociale européenne et sur les points 20 à 23 de la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs.

Article 33

Vie familiale et vie professionnelle

1. La protection de la famille est assurée sur le plan juridique, économique et social.
2. Afin de pouvoir concilier vie familiale et vie professionnelle, toute personne a le droit d'être protégée contre tout licenciement pour un motif lié à la maternité, ainsi que le droit à un congé de maternité payé et à un congé parental à la suite de la naissance ou de l'adoption d'un enfant.

Explication

Le premier paragraphe de l'article 33 est fondé sur l'article 16 de la Charte sociale européenne. Le deuxième paragraphe est inspiré de la directive 92/85/CEE du Conseil concernant la mise en œuvre de mesures visant à promouvoir l'amélioration de la sécurité et de la santé des travailleuses enceintes, accouchées ou allaitantes au travail et de la directive 96/34/CE concernant l'accord-cadre sur le congé parental conclu par l'UNICE, le CEEP et la CES. Il se fonde également sur l'article 8 (protection de la maternité) de la Charte sociale européenne et s'inspire de l'article 27 (droit des travailleurs ayant des responsabilités familiales à l'égalité des chances et de traitement) de la Charte sociale révisée. Le terme de maternité recouvre la période allant de la conception à l'allaitement.

Article 34

Sécurité sociale et aide sociale

1. L'Union reconnaît et respecte le droit d'accès aux prestations de sécurité sociale et aux services sociaux assurant une protection dans des cas tels que la maternité, la maladie, les accidents du travail, la dépendance ou la vieillesse, ainsi qu'en cas de perte d'emploi, selon les modalités établies par le droit communautaire et les législations et pratiques nationales.
2. Toute personne qui réside et se déplace légalement à l'intérieur de l'Union a droit aux prestations de sécurité sociale et aux avantages sociaux, conformément au droit communautaire et aux législations et pratiques nationales.
3. Afin de lutter contre l'exclusion sociale et la pauvreté, l'Union reconnaît et respecte le droit à une aide sociale et à une aide au logement destinées à assurer une existence digne à tous ceux qui ne disposent pas de ressources suffisantes, selon les modalités établies par le droit communautaire et les législations et pratiques nationales.

Explication

Le principe énoncé au premier paragraphe de l'article 34 se fonde sur les articles 137 et 140 du traité CE ainsi que sur l'article 12 de la Charte sociale européenne et sur le point 10 de la Charte communautaire des droits des travailleurs. Il doit être respecté par l'Union lorsqu'elle met en œuvre les compétences que lui confère l'article 140 du traité instituant la Communauté européenne. La référence à des services sociaux vise les cas dans lesquels de tels services ont été instaurés pour assurer certaines prestations mais n'implique aucunement que de tels services doivent être créés quand il n'en existent pas. L'expression "maternité" doit être entendue dans le même sens que dans l'article précédent.

Le deuxième paragraphe se fonde sur l'article 13 § 4 de la Charte sociale européenne, ainsi que sur le point 2 de la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs et reflète les règles qui découlent du règlement 1408/71 et du règlement 1612/68.

Le troisième paragraphe s'inspire des articles 30 et 31 de la Charte sociale révisée, ainsi que du point 10 de la Charte communautaire. Il doit être respecté par l'Union dans le cadre des politiques fondées sur l'article 137 § 2 du traité instituant la Communauté européenne et notamment son dernier alinéa.

Article 35

Protection de la santé

Toute personne a le droit d'accéder à la prévention en matière de santé et de bénéficier de soins médicaux dans les conditions établies par les législations et pratiques nationales. Un niveau élevé de protection de la santé humaine est assuré dans la définition et la mise en oeuvre de toutes les politiques et actions de l'Union.

Explication

Les principes contenus dans cet article se fondent sur l'article 152 du traité CE, ainsi que sur l'article 11 de la Charte sociale européenne. La seconde phrase de l'article reproduit le paragraphe 1 de l'article 152.

Article 36

Accès aux services d'intérêt économique général

L'Union reconnaît et respecte l'accès aux services d'intérêt économique général tel qu'il est prévu par les législations et pratiques nationales, conformément au traité instituant la Communauté européenne, afin de promouvoir la cohésion sociale et territoriale de l'Union.

Explication

Cet article respecte pleinement l'article 16 du traité instituant la Communauté européenne et ne crée pas de droit nouveau. Il pose seulement le principe du respect par l'Union de l'accès aux services d'intérêt économique général tel qu'il est prévu par les dispositions nationales, dès lors que ces dispositions sont compatibles avec le droit communautaire.

Article 37

Protection de l'environnement

Un niveau élevé de protection de l'environnement et l'amélioration de sa qualité doivent être intégrés dans les politiques de l'Union et assurés conformément au principe du développement durable.

Explication

Le principe contenu dans cet article se fonde sur les articles 2, 6 et 174 du traité CE. Il s'inspire également des dispositions de certaines constitutions nationales.

Article 38

Protection des consommateurs

Un niveau élevé de protection des consommateurs est assuré dans les politiques de l'Union.

Explication

Le principe contenu dans cet article se fonde sur l'article 153 du traité CE.

CHAPITRE V. CITOYENNETE

Article 39

Droit de vote et d'éligibilité aux élections au Parlement européen

1. Tout citoyen ou toute citoyenne de l'Union a le droit de vote et d'éligibilité aux élections au Parlement européen dans l'État membre où il ou elle réside, dans les mêmes conditions que les ressortissants de cet État.
2. Les membres du Parlement européen sont élus au suffrage universel direct, libre et secret.

Explication

L'article 39 s'applique dans les conditions prévues par le traité, conformément à l'article 52 § 2 de la Charte. En effet, le paragraphe 1 de l'article 39 correspond au droit garanti à l'article 19, paragraphe 2, du traité CE et le paragraphe 2 de cet article à l'article 190, paragraphe 1. Ce dernier reprend les principes de base du régime électoral dans un système démocratique.

Article 40Droit de vote et d'éligibilité aux élections municipales

Tout citoyen ou toute citoyenne de l'Union a le droit de vote et d'éligibilité aux élections municipales dans l'État membre où il ou elle réside, dans les mêmes conditions que les ressortissants de cet État.

Explication

Cet article correspond au droit garanti à l'article 19, paragraphe 1, du traité CE. Conformément à l'article 52, paragraphe 2, il s'applique dans les conditions prévues par le traité.

Article 41Droit à une bonne administration

1. Toute personne a le droit de voir ses affaires traitées impartialement, équitablement et dans un délai raisonnable par les institutions et organes de l'Union.

2. Ce droit comporte notamment :

- le droit de toute personne d'être entendue avant qu'une mesure individuelle qui l'affecterait défavorablement ne soit prise à son encontre ;
- le droit d'accès de toute personne au dossier qui la concerne, dans le respect des intérêts légitimes de la confidentialité et du secret professionnel et des affaires ;
- l'obligation pour l'administration de motiver ses décisions.

3. Toute personne a droit à la réparation par la Communauté des dommages causés par les institutions, ou par leurs agents dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions, conformément aux principes généraux communs aux droits des États membres.

4. Toute personne peut s'adresser aux institutions de l'Union dans une des langues des traités et doit recevoir une réponse dans la même langue.

Explication

L'article 41 est fondé sur l'existence d'une Communauté de droit dont les caractéristiques ont été développées par la jurisprudence qui a consacré notamment le principe de la bonne administration (voir i.a., l'arrêt de la Cour du 31 mars 1992, C-255/90 P, Burban, Rec. 1992, I-2253; ainsi que les arrêts du tribunal de première instance du 18 septembre 1995, T-167/94, Nölle, Rec. 1995, II-2589; 9 juillet 1999, T-231/97, New Europe Consulting e.a., Rec.II-2403). Les expressions de ce droit énoncées dans les deux premiers paragraphes résultent de la jurisprudence (arrêts de la Cour du 15 octobre 1987, aff. 222/86, Heylens, Rec. 1987, 4097, no. 15; du 18 octobre 1989, aff. 374/87, Orkem, Rec. 1989, 3283; du 21 novembre 1991, C-269/90, TU München, Rec. 1991, I-5469; et les arrêts du tribunal de première instance du 6 décembre 1994, T-450/93, Lisrestal, Rec. 1994, II-1177; 18 septembre 1995, T-167/94, Nölle, Rec.1995, II-258) et, en ce qui concerne l'obligation de motiver, de l'article 253 du traité CE.

Le paragraphe 3 reproduit le droit garanti à l'article 288 du traité CE.

Le paragraphe 4 reproduit le droit garanti à l'article 21, troisième alinéa, du traité CE. Conformément à l'article 52, paragraphe 2, ces droits s'appliquent dans les conditions et limites définies par les traités.

Le droit à un recours effectif qui constitue un aspect important de cette question est garanti à l'article 47 de la présente Charte.

Article 42

Droit d'accès aux documents

Tout citoyen ou toute citoyenne de l'Union ou toute personne physique ou morale résidant ou ayant son siège statutaire dans un État membre a un droit d'accès aux documents du Parlement européen, du Conseil et de la Commission.

Explication

Le droit garanti à cet article est le droit garanti à l'article 255 du traité CE. Conformément à l'article 52, paragraphe 2, il s'applique dans les conditions prévues par le traité.

Article 43

Médiateur

Tout citoyen ou toute citoyenne de l'Union ou toute personne physique ou morale résidant ou ayant son siège statutaire dans un État membre a le droit de saisir le médiateur de l'Union en cas de mauvaise administration dans l'action des institutions ou organes communautaires, à l'exclusion de la Cour de justice et du Tribunal de première instance dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions juridictionnelles.

Explication

Le droit garanti à cet article est le droit garanti aux articles 21 et 195 du traité CE. Conformément à l'article 52, paragraphe 2, il s'applique dans les conditions prévues par le traité.

Article 44

Droit de pétition

Tout citoyen ou toute citoyenne de l'Union ou toute personne physique ou morale résidant ou ayant son siège statutaire dans un État membre a le droit de pétition devant le Parlement européen.

Explication

Le droit garanti à cet article est le droit garanti par les articles 21 et 194 du traité CE. Conformément à l'article 52, paragraphe 2, il s'applique dans les conditions prévues par le traité.

Article 45

Liberté de circulation et de séjour

1. Tout citoyen ou toute citoyenne de l'Union a le droit de circuler et de séjourner librement sur le territoire des États membres.
2. La liberté de circulation et de séjour peut être accordée, conformément au traité instituant la Communauté européenne, aux ressortissants de pays tiers résidant légalement sur le territoire d'un État membre.

Explication

Le droit garanti par le premier paragraphe est le droit garanti par l'article 18 du traité CE. Conformément à l'article 52, paragraphe 2, il s'applique dans les conditions et limites prévues par le traité.

Le deuxième paragraphe rappelle la compétence accordée à la Communauté par l'article 62, paragraphes 1 et 3, et 63, paragraphe 4 du traité CE. Il en résulte que l'octroi de ce droit dépend de l'exercice de cette compétence par les institutions.

Article 46

Protection diplomatique et consulaire

Tout citoyen de l'Union bénéficie, sur le territoire d'un pays tiers où l'État membre dont il est ressortissant n'est pas représenté, de la protection des autorités diplomatiques et consulaires de tout État membre dans les mêmes conditions que les nationaux de cet État.

Explication

Le droit garanti par cet article est le droit garanti par l'article 20 du traité CE. Conformément à l'article 52, paragraphe 2, il s'applique dans les conditions prévues par le traité.

CHAPITRE VI. JUSTICEArticle 47*Droit à un recours effectif et à accéder à un tribunal impartial

Toute personne dont les droits et libertés garantis par le droit de l'Union ont été violés a droit à un recours effectif devant un tribunal dans le respect des conditions prévues au présent article.

Toute personne a droit à ce que sa cause soit entendue équitablement, publiquement et dans un délai raisonnable par un tribunal indépendant et impartial, établi préalablement par la loi. Toute personne a la possibilité de se faire conseiller, défendre et représenter.

Une aide juridictionnelle est accordée à ceux qui ne disposent pas de ressources suffisantes, dans la mesure où cette aide serait nécessaire pour assurer l'effectivité de l'accès à la justice.

Explication

Le premier alinéa se fonde sur l'article 13 de la CEDH:

"Toute personne dont les droits et libertés reconnus dans la présente Convention ont été violés, a droit à l'octroi d'un recours effectif devant une instance nationale, alors même que la violation aurait été commise par des personnes agissant dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions officielles".

Cependant, en droit communautaire, la protection est plus étendue puisqu'elle garantit un droit à un recours effectif devant un juge. La Cour de justice a consacré ce principe dans son arrêt du 15 mai 1986, Johnston, aff. 222/84, Rec. p.1651; voir aussi les arrêts du 15 octobre 1987, aff. 222/86, Heylens, Rec. 1987, 4097, et 3 décembre 1992, C-97/91, Borelli, Rec. 1992, I-6313. Selon la Cour, ce principe s'applique également aux Etats membres lorsqu'ils appliquent le droit communautaire. L'inscription de cette jurisprudence dans la charte n'a pas pour objet de modifier le système de recours prévu par les traités et notamment les règles relatives à la recevabilité. Ce principe est donc mis en œuvre selon les voies procédurales prévues dans les traités. Il s'applique à l'égard des institutions de l'Union et des Etats membres lorsqu'ils mettent en œuvre le droit de l'Union et ce pour tous les droits garantis par le droit de l'Union.

Le deuxième alinéa correspond à l'article 6 § 1 de la CEDH qui se lit ainsi :

"Toute personne a droit à ce que sa cause soit entendue équitablement, publiquement et dans un délai raisonnable, par un tribunal indépendant et impartial, établi par la loi, qui décidera, soit des contestations sur ses droits et obligations de caractère civil, soit du bien-fondé de toute accusation en matière pénale dirigée contre elle. Le jugement doit être rendu publiquement, mais l'accès de la salle d'audience peut être interdit à la presse et au public pendant la totalité ou une partie du procès dans l'intérêt de la moralité, de l'ordre public ou de la sécurité nationale dans une société démocratique, lorsque les intérêts des mineurs ou la protection de la vie privée des parties au procès l'exigent, ou dans la mesure jugée strictement nécessaire par le tribunal, lorsque dans des circonstances spéciales la publicité serait de nature à porter atteinte aux intérêts de la justice."

En droit communautaire, le droit à un tribunal ne s'applique pas seulement à des contestations relatives à des droits et obligations de caractère civil. C'est l'une des conséquences du fait que la Communauté est une communauté de droit comme l'a Cour l'a constaté dans l'affaire 194/83, Les Verts contre Parlement européen (arrêt du 23 avril 1986, rec. p.1339. Cependant, à l'exception de leur champ d'application, les garanties offertes par la CEDH s'appliquent de manière similaire dans l'Union.

En ce qui concerne le troisième alinéa, il convient de noter que d'après la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme, une aide judiciaire doit être accordée lorsque l'absence d'une telle aide rendrait inefficace la garantie d'un recours effectif (Arrêt CEDH du 9.10.1979, Airey, Série A, Volume.32, 11). Il existe également un système d'assistance judiciaire devant la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes.

Article 48

Présomption d'innocence et droits de la défense

1. Tout accusé est présumé innocent jusqu'à ce que sa culpabilité ait été légalement établie.
2. Le respect des droits de la défense est garanti à tout accusé.

Explication

L'article 48 est le même que l'article 6 § 2 et 3 de la CEDH qui se lit ainsi :

"2 Toute personne accusée d'une infraction est présumée innocente jusqu'à ce que sa culpabilité ait été légalement établie.

3 Tout accusé a droit notamment à :

- a être informé, dans le plus court délai, dans une langue qu'il comprend et d'une manière détaillée, de la nature et de la cause de l'accusation portée contre lui;*
- b disposer du temps et des facilités nécessaires à la préparation de sa défense;*
- c se défendre lui-même ou avoir l'assistance d'un défenseur de son choix et, s'il n'a pas les moyens de rémunérer un défenseur, pouvoir être assisté gratuitement par un avocat d'office, lorsque les intérêts de la justice l'exigent;*
- d interroger ou faire interroger les témoins à charge et obtenir la convocation et l'interrogation des témoins à décharge dans les mêmes conditions que les témoins à charge;*
- e se faire assister gratuitement d'un interprète, s'il ne comprend pas ou ne parle pas la langue employée à l'audience."*

Conformément à l'article 52 § 3, ce droit a le même sens et la même portée que le droit garanti par la CEDH.

Article 49

Principes de légalité et de proportionnalité des délits et des peines

1. Nul ne peut être condamné pour une action ou une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, ne constituait pas une infraction d'après le droit national ou le droit international. De même, il n'est infligé aucune peine plus forte que celle qui était applicable au moment où l'infraction a été commise. Si, postérieurement à cette infraction, la loi prévoit une peine plus légère, celle-ci doit être appliquée.
2. Le présent article ne porte pas atteinte au jugement et à la punition d'une personne coupable d'une action ou d'une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, était criminelle d'après les principes généraux reconnus par l'ensemble des nations.
3. L'intensité des peines ne doit pas être disproportionnée par rapport à l'infraction.

Explication

Cet article reprend le principe classique de la non-rétroactivité des lois et des peines en matière pénale. Il a été ajouté le principe de la rétroactivité de la loi pénale plus douce qui existe dans de nombreux Etats membres et qui figure à l'article 15 du Pacte sur les droits civils et politiques.

L'article 7 de la CEDH est rédigé comme suit:

- "1 Nul ne peut être condamné pour une action ou une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, ne constituait pas une infraction d'après le droit national ou international. De même il n'est infligé aucune peine plus forte que celle qui était applicable au moment où l'infraction a été commise.*
- 2 Le présent article ne portera pas atteinte au jugement et à la punition d'une personne coupable d'une action ou d'une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, était criminelle d'après les principes généraux de droit reconnus par les nations civilisées."*

On a simplement supprimé au paragraphe 2 le terme "civilisées" ce qui n'implique aucun changement dans le sens de ce paragraphe qui vise notamment les crimes contre l'humanité. Conformément à l'article 52 § 3, le droit garanti a donc le même sens et la même portée que le droit garanti par la CEDH.

Le paragraphe 3 reprend le principe général de proportionnalité des délits et des peines consacré par les traditions constitutionnelles communes aux Etats membres et la jurisprudence de la Cour de justice des Communautés.

Article 50

Droit à ne pas être jugé ou puni pénalement deux fois pour une même infraction

Nul ne peut être poursuivi ou puni pénalement en raison d'une infraction pour laquelle il a déjà été acquitté ou condamné dans l'Union par un jugement pénal définitif conformément à la loi.

Explication

L'article 4 du protocole n° 7 à la CEDH se lit ainsi:

- "1 Nul ne peut être poursuivi ou puni pénalement par les juridictions du même Etat en raison d'une infraction pour laquelle il a déjà été acquitté ou condamné par un jugement définitif conformément à la loi et à la procédure pénale de cet Etat.*
- 2) Les dispositions du paragraphe précédent n'empêchent pas la réouverture du procès, conformément à la loi et à la procédure pénale de l'Etat concerné, si des faits nouveaux ou nouvellement révélés ou un vice fondamental dans la procédure précédente sont de nature à affecter le jugement intervenu.*
- 3 Aucune dérogation n'est autorisée au présent article au titre de l'article 15 de la Convention."*

Le principe «non bis in idem» s'applique en droit communautaire (voir, parmi une importante jurisprudence, arrêt du 5 mai 1966, Gutmann c/Commission, aff. 18/65 et 35/65, Rec 1966, p.150 et pour une affaire récente arrêt du Tribunal du 20 avril 1999, aff. jointes T-305/94 et autres, Limburgse Vinyl Maatschappij NV c/Commission Rec. II-931). Il est précisé que la règle du non cumul vise le cumul de deux sanctions de même nature, en l'espèce pénales.

Conformément à l'article 50, le principe "non bis in idem" ne s'applique pas seulement à l'intérieur de la juridiction d'un même Etat, mais aussi entre les juridictions de plusieurs Etats membres. Ceci correspond à l'acquis du droit de l'Union; voir les articles 54 - 58 de la Convention d'application de l'accord de Schengen, l'article 7 de la Convention relative à la protection des intérêts financiers de la Communauté; l'article 10 de la Convention relative à la lutte contre la corruption. Les exceptions bien limitées par lesquelles ces conventions permettent aux Etats membres de déroger au principe "non bis in idem" sont couvertes par la clause horizontale de l'article 52, paragraphe 1, sur les limitations. En ce qui concerne les situations visées par l'article 4 du protocole n° 7, à savoir l'application du principe à l'intérieur d'un même Etat membre, le droit garanti a le même sens et la même portée que le droit correspondant de la CEDH.

CHAPITRE VII. DISPOSITIONS GÉNÉRALES

Article 51

Champ d'application

1. Les dispositions de la présente Charte s'adressent aux institutions et organes de l'Union dans le respect du principe de subsidiarité, ainsi qu'aux États membres uniquement lorsqu'ils mettent en œuvre le droit de l'Union. En conséquence, ils respectent les droits, observent les principes et en promeuvent l'application, conformément à leurs compétences respectives.

2. La présente Charte ne crée aucune compétence ni aucune tâche nouvelles pour la Communauté et pour l'Union et ne modifie pas les compétences et tâches définies par les traités.

Explication

L'objet de l'article 51 est de déterminer le champ d'application de la Charte. Elle vise à établir clairement que la Charte s'applique d'abord aux institutions et organes de l'Union dans le respect du principe de subsidiarité. Cette disposition est fidèle à l'article 6 § 2 du traité sur l'Union européenne qui impose à l'Union de respecter les droits fondamentaux ainsi qu'au mandat donné par le Conseil européen de Cologne. Le terme "institutions" est consacré par le traité CE qui énumère les institutions dans son article 7. Le terme "organe" est couramment employé pour viser toutes les instances établies par les traités ou par des actes de droit dérivé (voir l'article 286, paragraphe 1, du traité instituant la Communauté européenne).

En ce qui concerne, les Etats membres, il résulte sans ambiguïté de la jurisprudence de la Cour que l'obligation de respecter les droits fondamentaux définis dans le cadre de l'Union ne s'impose aux Etats membres que lorsqu'ils agissent dans le cadre du droit communautaire (Arrêt du 13 juillet 1989, Wachauf, affaire 5/88, rec. p.2609; arrêt du 18 juin 1991, ERT, rec.1991, I-2925). Tout récemment, la Cour de justice a confirmé cette jurisprudence dans les termes suivants: "De plus, il y a lieu de rappeler que les exigences découlant de la protection des droits fondamentaux dans l'ordre juridique communautaire lient également les Etats membres lorsqu'ils mettent en œuvre des réglementations communautaires ..." (Arrêt du 13 avril 2000, aff. C-292/97, attendu 37, non encore publié). Bien entendu, ce principe, tel que consacré dans la présente charte, s'applique aussi bien aux autorités centrales qu'aux instances régionales ou locales ainsi qu'aux organismes publics lorsqu'ils mettent en œuvre le droit de l'Union.

Le second paragraphe confirme que la charte ne peut avoir pour effet d'étendre les compétences et tâches conférées par les traités à la Communauté et à l'Union. Il s'agit de mentionner de façon explicite ce qui découle logiquement du principe de subsidiarité et du fait que l'Union ne dispose que de compétences d'attribution. Les droits fondamentaux tels qu'ils sont garantis dans l'Union ne produisent d'effets que dans le cadre de ces compétences déterminées par le traité.

Article 52

Portée des droits garantis

1. Toute limitation de l'exercice des droits et libertés reconnus par la présente Charte doit être prévue par la loi et respecter le contenu essentiel desdits droits et libertés. Dans le respect du principe de proportionnalité, des limitations ne peuvent être apportées que si elles sont nécessaires et répondent effectivement à des objectifs d'intérêt général reconnus par l'Union ou au besoin de protection des droits et libertés d'autrui.
2. Les droits reconnus par la présente Charte qui trouvent leur fondement dans les traités communautaires ou dans le traité sur l'Union européenne s'exercent dans les conditions et limites définies par ceux-ci.
3. Dans la mesure où la présente Charte contient des droits correspondant à des droits garantis par la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, leur sens et leur portée sont les mêmes que ceux que leur confère ladite convention. Cette disposition ne fait pas obstacle à ce que le droit de l'Union accorde une protection plus étendue.

Explication

L'objet de l'article 52 est de fixer la portée des droits garantis. Le paragraphe 1 traite du régime de limitations. La formule utilisée s'inspire de la jurisprudence de la Cour de justice: "... selon une jurisprudence bien établie, des restrictions peuvent être apportées à l'exercice des droits fondamentaux, notamment dans le cadre d'une organisation commune de marché, à condition que ces restrictions répondent effectivement à des objectifs d'intérêt général poursuivis par la Communauté et ne constituent pas, par rapport au but poursuivi, une intervention démesurée et intolérable, qui porterait atteinte à la substance même de ces droits" (arrêt du 13 avril 2000, aff. C-292/97, considérant 45). La mention des intérêts généraux reconnus par l'Union couvre aussi bien les objectifs mentionnés à l'article 2 que d'autres intérêts protégés par des dispositions spécifiques du traité comme l'article 30 ou 39 (3) CE.

Le paragraphe 2 précise que lorsqu'un droit résulte des traités, il est soumis aux conditions et limites prévues par ceux-ci. La Charte ne modifie pas le régime des droits conférés par les traités.

Le paragraphe 3 vise à assurer la cohérence nécessaire entre la Charte et la CEDH en posant le principe que, dans la mesure où les droits de la présente Charte correspondent également à des droits garantis par la CEDH, leur sens et leur portée, y compris les limitations admises, sont les mêmes que ceux que prévoit la CEDH. Il en résulte en particulier que le législateur, en fixant des limitations à ces droits doit respecter les mêmes standards que ceux fixés par le régime détaillé des limitations prévu dans la CEDH, sans que ceci porte atteinte à l'autonomie du droit communautaire et de la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes. La référence à la CEDH vise à la fois la Convention et ses protocoles. Le sens et la portée des droits garantis sont déterminés non seulement par le texte de ces instruments, mais aussi par la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme et par la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes. La dernière phrase du paragraphe vise à permettre au droit de l'Union d'assurer une protection plus étendue.

La liste des droits qui peuvent au stade actuel et sans que cela exclue l'évolution du droit, de la législation et des traités, être considérés comme correspondant à des droits de la CEDH au sens du présent paragraphe est reproduite ci-dessous. Ne sont pas reproduits les droits qui s'ajoutent à ceux de la CEDH.

1. Articles de la Charte dont le sens et la portée sont les mêmes que les articles correspondants de la CEDH:

- l'article 2 correspond à l'article 2 CEDH
- l'article 4 correspond à l'article 3 CEDH
- l'article 5 § 1 et 2 correspond à l'article 4 CEDH
- l'article 6 correspond à l'article 5 CEDH
- l'article 7 correspond à l'article 8 CEDH
- l'article 10 § 1 correspond à l'article 9 CEDH
- l'article 11 correspond à l'article 10 CEDH sans préjudice des restrictions que le droit communautaire peut apporter à la faculté des Etats membres d'instaurer les régimes d'autorisation visés à l'article 10 § 1, troisième phrase de la CEDH.
- l'article 17 correspond à l'article 1 du protocole additionnel à la CEDH
- l'article 19 § 1 correspond à l'article 4 du protocole additionnel N° 4
- l'article 19 § 2 correspond à l'article 3 CEDH tel qu'interprété par la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme
- l'article 48 correspond à l'article 6 § 2 et 3 CEDH
- l'article 49 § 1 (à l'exception de la dernière phrase) et 2 correspond à l'article 7 CEDH.

2. Articles dont le sens est le même que les articles correspondant de la CEDH, mais dont la portée est plus étendue :

- l'article 9 couvre le champ de l'article 12 CEDH, mais son champ d'application peut être étendu à d'autres formes de mariages dès lors que la législation nationale les institue
- l'article 12 § 1 correspond à l'article 11 CEDH, mais son champ d'application est étendu au niveau de l'Union européenne
- l'article 14 § 1 correspond à l'article 2 du protocole additionnel CEDH, mais son champ d'application est étendu à l'accès à la formation professionnelle et continue
- L'article 14 § 3 correspond à l'article 2 du protocole additionnel à la CEDH, en ce qui concerne les droits des parents

- l'article 47 § 2 et 3 correspond à l'article 6 § 1 CEDH, mais la limitation aux contestations sur des droits et obligations de caractère civil ou sur des accusations en matière pénale ne joue pas en ce qui concerne le droit de l'Union et sa mise en œuvre
- l'article 50 correspond à l'article 4 du protocole n° 7 CEDH, mais sa portée est étendue au niveau de l'Union européenne entre les juridictions des Etats membres
- Enfin, les citoyens de l'Union européenne ne peuvent, dans le champ d'application du droit communautaire, être considérés comme des étrangers en raison de l'interdiction de toute discrimination sur la base de la nationalité. Les limitations prévues par l'article 16 CEDH en ce qui concerne les droits des étrangers ne leur sont donc pas applicables dans ce cadre.

Article 53

Niveau de protection

Aucune disposition de la présente Charte ne doit être interprétée comme limitant ou portant atteinte aux droits de l'homme et libertés fondamentales reconnus, dans leur champ d'application respectif, par le droit de l'Union, le droit international et les conventions internationales auxquelles sont parties l'Union, la Communauté ou tous les États membres, et notamment la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, ainsi que par les constitutions des États membres.

Explication

Cette disposition vise à préserver le niveau de protection offert actuellement dans leur champ d'application respectif par le droit de l'Union, le droit des Etats membres et le droit international. En raison de son importance, mention est faite de la CEDH. En aucun cas le niveau de protection offert par la charte ne pourra être inférieur à celui garanti par la CEDH, ce qui a pour conséquence que le régime de limitations prévu dans la charte ne peut descendre en dessous du niveau prévu par la CEDH.

Article 54

Interdiction de l'abus de droit

Aucune des dispositions de la présente Charte ne doit être interprétée comme impliquant un droit quelconque de se livrer à une activité ou d'accomplir un acte visant à la destruction des droits ou libertés reconnus dans la présente Charte ou à des limitations plus amples des droits et libertés que celles qui sont prévues par la présente Charte.

Explication

Cet article correspond à l'article 17 de la CEDH :

"Aucune des dispositions de la présente Convention ne peut être interprétée comme impliquant pour un Etat, un groupement ou un individu, un droit quelconque de se livrer à une activité ou d'accomplir un acte visant à la destruction des droits ou libertés reconnus dans la présente Convention ou à des limitations plus amples de ces droits et libertés que celles prévues à ladite Convention."

CONVENT 45.¹

¹ This text has been submitted in French and English languages.

Strasbourg, 22 August 2000

Observations of the Council of Europe representatives
on the draft Charter proposed by the Praesidium (Convent 45)

Our primary concern is to ensure that the rights taken by the Charter from the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) are not interpreted in inconsistent or even contradictory ways depending on whether it is the European Court of Human Rights or the Court of Justice in Luxembourg that is construing them. We consider that the proposed text amply deals with that concern, pending a final decision on its legal nature. The Convention and the Praesidium must take the credit for that. They have heeded the comments and proposals made throughout the preparatory work by the observers of the Council of Europe and made the necessary amendments to ensure consistency and harmony between the Charter and the ECHR.

That is true in particular of the latest amendments proposed by the Praesidium such as the new paragraph 3 of Article 50, which has the merit of dispelling, in principle, any doubt over the meaning and scope of the Charter rights corresponding to the rights guaranteed by the ECHR¹. It will, however, still be necessary to identify the instances in which it is intended that the protection afforded by the Charter will be “greater or more extensive”. It is in this sphere that the commentary on the text, as proposed in the Convent 46 document, will prove very useful. It should therefore be made as accessible to readers as the text itself.

By confirming the principle that authoritative interpretations of an instrument are incorporated into the instrument itself, the reference in the preamble to the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights will clear up any misapprehension regarding identification of the “rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the [ECHR]”. That reference makes it clear that the ECHR rights also include rights recognised by the case-law. By including it, the Convention has shown the foresight to ensure at the outset that future developments regarding the ECHR and the Charter will be consistent and harmonious and has thus avoided destroying the common dynamic of these two instruments.

The reference to the case-law will also be vital for the application of Article 51 of the Charter, which sets the minimum level of protection provided by that instrument, notably by reference to the ECHR. Here too it is important to ensure that the minimum level rises to match any enhanced protection afforded by the case-law.

Nevertheless, no amount of careful drafting can prevent the debate on the nature of the Charter posing a number of problems which, unless satisfactorily resolved, will prove a potential source of error in the interpretation of the rights embodied in both the Charter and the ECHR, in particular if the Court of Justice finds itself called upon to decide issues that have not previously been before the Court in Strasbourg. Why?

¹ Article 50 § 3 refers, however, to rights that have a similar meaning and scope to those conferred by the ECHR, which seems to suggest that divergences are permitted. Yet Article 50 § 3 allows of only two possibilities: the same protection as that afforded by the ECHR, or greater protection. As the latter possibility is covered by Article 50 § 3 in fine, the former must be reflected in the first part of the provision, which, for the avoidance of any unnecessary doubt on the subject, should consequently read as follows: “... the meaning and scope of those rights shall be the same as those conferred on them by the [ECHR]...”.

Because the Charter, when applied and interpreted within the context of the European Union, that is to say in the framework of a Treaty with its own objectives and including new powers in the fields of immigration, asylum and judicial and police co-operation, is bound to take on a dynamic which is almost certain to affect the harmonious and consistent interpretation of fundamental rights. Since the organ creates the function, it is highly probable that the Charter will generate a far higher number of references for preliminary rulings than the Court of Justice receives at present. That will increase in the same proportion the risk that decisions of the Court of Justice will be at variance with later decisions of the Strasbourg Court, since the member States will remain responsible for their actions under the ECHR but will at the same time be required to comply with and apply Community law. A State obliged to apply a judgment of the Court of Justice which turned out to be at odds with a later judgment of the Strasbourg Court would be placed in a very awkward position.

As regards the Charter's being harmoniously combined with the other international systems of protection of fundamental rights, that point shows to what extent the debate about the nature of the Charter will restore to the agenda the question of accession by the European Communities and/or the Union to the ECHR, under arrangements to be agreed, or at least the idea of a preliminary consultation mechanism, recognised by the member States, between the two Courts.²

As long as these questions remain unanswered the European Council, if it wishes to avoid the risk of creating legal uncertainty, will scarcely be in a position to reach a final decision on the nature of the Charter. Admittedly, it is not part of the Convention's terms of reference to state its views on that question. However, that should not dispense it from identifying and pointing out to the European Council, in appropriate form, the problems as they exist.

COMMISSION COMMUNICATION

on the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

COMMISSION COMMUNICATION

on the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

1. INTRODUCTION

1. The preparation of the draft Charter of Fundamental Rights is now at a crucial stage. The Feira European Council concluded that:

"The Convention is urged to continue its work in accordance with the timetable laid down in the mandate from the Cologne European Council so that a draft document is presented in advance of the European Council in October 2000"

2. After months of intensive work the Convention has produced a new preliminary draft of the Charter.¹
3. The preliminary draft has been drawn up using the approach adopted by the Convention when it began its work, which involved preparing the draft for submission to the European Council as if it was subsequently to be incorporated into the Community Treaties with mandatory legal force. At the instigation of its President, Roman Herzog, the Convention concluded that this was the only approach that could leave the European Council the choice it will have to make in due course, in accordance with the Cologne mandate, about whether the Charter should take the form of a declaration or be incorporated in the Treaties with mandatory legal force.
4. The work done by the Convention in the last few months involved giving each member of the Convention the possibility of submitting written amendments to previous texts. Over a thousand amendments were submitted, reflecting the full range of feelings within the Convention. The preliminary draft is a compromise drawn up by the Praesidium. It is intended to take account of all the points of view and feelings expressed by the Convention.
5. With a view to concluding the Convention's work and forwarding the draft Charter to the Biarritz European Council, the Praesidium asked the members of the Convention to submit any comments on the preliminary draft text they considered helpful by 1 September. It also established the agenda for the Convention's two final meetings:

- 11 - 12 September the members of the Convention will meet in groups and on 13 September they will inform the Convention of their positions regarding the preliminary draft;
- the meeting of 25 - 26 September is intended to pull together the group's points of view and to enable the President of the Convention, in line with the Cologne conclusions, to establish a consensus within the Convention and forward the draft to the Heads of State or Government.

¹ The draft is contained in the document CHARTE 4422/00, CONVENT 45 of 28 July 2000: Complete text of the Charter proposed by the Praesidium » .

6. The purpose of this communication is therefore:

- to set out the Commission's position concerning the content of the preliminary draft, with the aim of furthering the development of consensus within the Convention, and
- to highlight the political and institutional questions the Commission believes to be of particular importance, especially with regard to the nature of the Charter.

2. THE OBJECTIVES OF THE CHARTER

7. The Cologne European Council set the main objective of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the Union: to make their overriding importance and relevance more visible to the Union's citizens.

Consequently, the European Council mandated the Convention to draw up the Charter, a task of revelation rather than creation, of compilation rather than innovation.

8. However, the Cologne conclusions were reached at a historic time for European integration. There is a need for a Charter of Fundamental Rights because the European Union has entered a new, more resolutely political phase of integration. The Charter is a major milestone for Europe as a political force, which is evolving into an integrated area of freedom, security and justice, simply as a consequence of citizenship. It is an indispensable instrument of political and moral legitimacy, both for the citizens of Europe in relation to politicians, administrations and national powers and for economic and social operators. It is an expression of the common values that are at the very core of our democratic societies.

9. The Charter should be the best possible combination of pragmatism and ambition. It should add real value to the abundance of existing legal or political texts dealing with human rights in Europe.

The Charter is pragmatic, in that it must not give way to the temptation to innovate at all costs and must remain within the framework of the Cologne mandate.

Nevertheless, its added value is ambitious. It has been produced by:

- codifying material from various sources of inspiration: the European Convention on Human Rights, common constitutional traditions, the European Social Charter, the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers, primary and secondary Community legislation, international conventions (Council of Europe, UN, ILO) and rulings by the Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights;

- incorporating in the Charter, alongside the classic civil and political rights and the rights of citizens deriving from the Treaties, fundamental economic and social rights, "insofar as they do not merely establish objectives for action by the Union";
- enshrining certain "new" rights which already exist but have not yet been explicitly protected as fundamental rights, notwithstanding the values they are intended to protect, such as the protection of personal data and the principles of bioethics or the right to good administration.

10. As well as raising the profile of fundamental rights, it must be pointed out that the Charter provides significant legal certainty. This will make it possible to improve the current level of protection of fundamental rights in the Union, by moving beyond the current system, which is basically in the hands of the courts.

In the current Treaties, Article 6 of the Treaty on European Union is the point of reference for questions related to fundamental rights. Its first paragraph sets out the general principles on which the Union is based and which, if seriously and persistently breached, can lead to the imposition of the penalties set out in Article 7 of the Union Treaty. Paragraph 2 lists the sources of fundamental rights respected by the Union, at least one of which (constitutional traditions common to the Member States) it is difficult to challenge by way of legal action. Leaving aside its ultimate legal nature, the adoption of the Charter sets out clearly and concisely the fundamental rights covered by Article 6(2). This could also clarify the principles set out under Article 6(1) and the provisions referring to it (Articles 7 and 49 of the Union Treaty).

11. The Charter applies to the institutions and bodies of the Union, and to the Member States solely where they implement Union law. It will therefore be possible to assess all measures taken in this field on the basis of the rights and freedoms set out in the Charter. This means that, in terms of the protection of fundamental rights, the Charter is an instrument for controlling the exercise of powers devolved by the Treaties to the Union's institutions and bodies
12. With the Union now developing a real common foreign and security policy, in which respect for fundamental rights will play a key role, the adoption of a catalogue of rights will make it possible to give a clear response to those who accuse the Union of employing one set of standards at external level and another internally. The Charter will provide the Union with a clear catalogue of rights that it will have to respect when implementing both internal and external policies.
13. There is no way to avoid addressing the possible repercussions of the adoption of the Charter on the enlargement of the Union. First and foremost, it will be necessary to dispel all fears about the impact of the Charter on enlargement. The Charter imposes no additional conditions on applicant countries. The acceptance of the established body of EU law, for example, on the protection of personal data, already involves the acceptance of and respect for the rules and principles contained in the Charter. In fact, the Charter sets out clear rules regarding fundamental rights, thereby providing the applicant countries and citizens in general with legal certainty. In doing so, it demonstrates that it is an extremely important milestone in the development of Europe as a political force.

14. To ensure that the Charter is a success, it is advisable not simply to highlight its objectives and added value, but also to point out clearly that it will not have certain effects which may have caused alarm in some quarters:

- a) The Charter will not be a vehicle to extend or reduce the powers of the Union and the Community, as established by the Union Treaty and EC Treaty. The Charter is neutral with regard to the division of powers. Changes in any powers would be a matter for the Intergovernmental Conference, not for the Convention.

The Charter's neutrality on the subject of the powers of the Union and the Community is also a consequence of the very nature of fundamental rights. As they protect the individual from abuses of public power, the main purpose of fundamental rights is to allow for the control of existing powers at a given political level, whatever level that may be.

Since fundamental rights are also the values which guide the actions of the Community and the Union, it is clear that such action must be carried out within the framework of the powers of the Community and the Union and with respect for the principle of subsidiarity. This applies particularly to rights requiring implementing measures, such as social rights and principles.

- b) The Charter will not require, as has been shown by the discussions within the Convention, any amendments to the Member States' constitutions. As regards the respect for fundamental rights at national level, in its field of application it will clearly not replace national constitutions; in fact, it will basically group together rights already existing in different documents and in the Treaties.
- c) The Charter will have no impact on forms of court action or the court structure put in place by the Treaties, as it does not provide for new channels of access to Community courts. The right to a court hearing, be it a national or Community court, will be exercised using existing legal channels:
- by bringing an action before the Court of Justice, on the basis of Articles 230, 232 and 235/288 of the EC Treaty, as long as the conditions of admissibility are duly satisfied, or
 - by bringing an action before a national court which may give rise to a request for a preliminary ruling under Article 234 of the EC Treaty.

- d) The Charter neither requires nor precludes accession to the European Convention on Human Rights. The development of the Charter has once again highlighted the question of the Community or the Union signing up to the ECHR. In view of the mandate given to the Convention by the Cologne European Council, the Convention has admitted ever since its work began that this matter does not concern it.

However, the existence of a Charter does not diminish the interest in joining, as accession would effectively establish external supervision of fundamental rights at Union level. Moreover, accession to the ECHR would in no way lessen the importance of drawing up a European Union Charter. The question has also become topical following a recent ruling by the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg on a piece of primary Community legislation (Application No 24 833/94, Matthews v United Kingdom, judgment on 18 February 1999).

3. THE CONTENT OF THE PRELIMINARY DRAFT

15. The preliminary draft has given rise to a number of observations, which are set out below.

3.1. Structure

16. The preliminary draft consists of 52 Articles and an introductory preamble. Apart from the general provisions at the end of the document (Articles 49 to 52), the Articles are grouped around six fundamental values: dignity (Articles 1 to 5), freedoms (Articles 6 to 19); equality (Articles 20 to 24); solidarity (Articles 25 to 36); citizenship (Articles 37 to 44) and justice (Articles 45 to 48).
17. The preliminary draft is accompanied by an explanatory memorandum (CONVENT 46, annexed to this Communication), which lists the sources that provide the basis for the Charter's Articles (including Community Treaties, the Rome Convention on the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, other international conventions and rulings by the Court of Justice). The Commission believes that this explanatory memorandum could be of help with further interpretation of the Charter.

3.2. Form

18. In keeping with the spirit of the Cologne Conclusions, which called for a Charter of Fundamental Rights of the Union to be drawn up to make their overriding importance and relevance more visible to the Union's citizens, the drafting has been characterised by a desire for conciseness and clarity.

3.3. The list of rights

19. In line with the Cologne conclusions and taking account of the principle of the indivisibility of fundamental rights, the preliminary draft includes the rights of liberty and equality, together with the procedural rights guaranteed by the Rome Convention and by the constitutional traditions of the Member States, the fundamental rights of citizens of the European Union and fundamental economic and social rights, grouping them on the basis of the abovementioned structure.

20. The Convention's work has resulted in the explicit inclusion of rights not on the list drawn up by the Praesidium of the Convention as a basis for discussion (CHARTE 4112/00): freedom of scientific research (Article 13); freedom to conduct a business (Article 16); the protection of intellectual property (Article 17); the right to good administration (Article 39); children's rights (Article 23); access to services of general economic interest (Article 34); protection in the event of unjustified dismissal (Article 28). Equality, which found a place in the Praesidium's draft solely in connection with bans on discrimination, is the subject of two specific Articles: one establishing the rule of equality before the law (Article 20) and the other dealing with the equality of men and women (Article 22). Reference is also made in the preamble to duties with regard to other persons.
21. Conversely, certain rights envisaged at the beginning have not been included:
- either because they were seen as simply setting policy objectives, which the Cologne conclusions prevent from being included in the Charter; this is the case as regards the right to work or right to an equitable wage; or
 - because, without being excluded from the list, they were already implicit in other provisions in the preliminary draft; this is the case, for example, of the right to strike, which is covered by Article 26 concerning the right of collective bargaining and action, or the right to a minimum income, which is covered by Article 32 dealing with social assistance.
22. Clearly, the most difficult task for the Convention was to decide which economic and social rights to include in the preliminary draft. This concerns Chapter IV Solidarity (Articles 25 to 36) and Articles 15 (freedom to choose an occupation and to seek work), 22 (equality between men and women) and 24 (integration of persons with disabilities). It is likely to be difficult to reach a consensus within the Convention on these rights.
23. For its part, the Commission believes that the rights contained in the preliminary draft, be they civic and political rights, rights of citizens and economic and social rights, do strike a good balance. True, it would have preferred some rights to be expressed more explicitly (such as the right to strike covered by Article 26 on the right of collective bargaining and action and freedom in trade union matters in Article 12 or the European dimension of the exercise of these rights) or more forcefully (in particular for the protection of the environment in Article 35). But the Commission still considers that the preliminary draft provides an adequate basis for securing a consensus within the Convention.
- 3.4. Holders of rights
24. This initially appeared to be a complex question but was resolved pragmatically: a response was provided for each right contained in the preliminary draft. There is a broad consensus for this approach, which is fully supported by the Commission.

25. In accordance with the principle of the universality of rights, most of the rights listed in the preliminary draft are granted to everyone.

However, certain rights are granted to specific groups of people:

– children (Article 23);

– workers, in relation to some of the social rights;

– Union citizens: freedom to work, to seek work, to settle or provide services in any Member State (Article 15(2)); right to the same access to social security benefits and welfare assistance in another Member State (Article 32(2)); right to take part in elections to the European Parliament (Article 37) and municipal elections (Article 38); right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States (Article 43(1)) and diplomatic and consular protection (Article 44), – Citizens of the Union and persons residing in the Union: right of access to institution documents (Article 40); right to refer cases to the Ombudsman (Article 41) and right to petition the European Parliament (Article 42).

It should be added that certain rights granted to Union citizens may also be accorded to nationals of third countries, such as freedom of movement (Article 43(2)).

Some provisions do not establish subjective rights that can be invoked by the individual directly but set out principles which can be enforced against Community or national authorities in the performance of their legislative or executive functions. This applies to entitlement to social security benefits and social services (Article 32(1)), access to services of general economic interest (Article 34), environmental protection (Article 35) and consumer protection (Article 36).

3.5. Scope and limits of the rights guaranteed

26. With certain exceptions, exercise of the rights may be restricted where other legitimate interests must be respected, either the public interest, for example in the fight against crime, or private interests where the rights or freedoms of others are involved.

The Commission supports the insertion of a horizontal article applicable to almost all rights (Article 50(1)), an approach that has found widespread support within the Convention. Chosen in preference to the approach of explaining possible restrictions on each right, this strategy avoids cumbersome repetitions while giving all the guarantees needed to protect these rights effectively. The restrictions may affect only the exercise of the right; they do not challenge its substance. The appropriate national or Community legislative authorities must make provision for them, and they must be necessary to achieve objectives of general interest that are pursued by the Union, other legitimate interests in a democratic society or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others. They must also be subject to the principle of proportionality.

27. Provision has been made for rights based on the Community Treaties to be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties (Article 50(2)).

3.6. Level of protection

28. The Commission fully shares the desire expressed in Article 51 of the preliminary draft to prevent the interpretation of the Charter restricting or adversely affecting human rights and fundamental freedoms as recognised, in their respective fields of application, by the various laws and agreements in force in the Union.

29. The Commission also fully shares the desire to ensure that differing conceptions of fundamental rights do not develop in Europe, if, contrary to the frequently expressed hope of the Commission, the Union is not eventually allowed to accede to the Rome Convention. For this reason, it supports Article 50(3) of the preliminary draft, which is intended to ensure consistency in the interpretations of the provisions contained in the Rome Convention and the corresponding provisions in the Charter, while respecting the principle of the autonomy of Community law.

3.7. The authorities required to respect the Charter

30. The Commission fully supports the solution chosen in the preliminary draft (Article 49(1)) addressing the provisions of the Charter to the institutions and bodies of the Union and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. This means that the Charter would apply uniformly to all the activities carried out by the institutions and bodies of the Union and by the national authorities under the three pillars of the Union. Of course, this would include the particularly sensitive areas of maintaining and developing the area of freedom, security and justice.

From a legal point of view, this solution is in line with the consistent case-law of the Court of Justice, which has pointed out on numerous occasions that Member States are required to respect fundamental rights when implementing Community law.

31. As pointed out above, the drawing up of the Charter in no way calls into question the powers of the Union or the principle of subsidiarity. The provisions on the subject in the preliminary draft (Article 49) and its preamble have a declaratory value which will help to clarify any misunderstandings on this point. Far from extending the powers of the Union, the Charter, as the sum of the common values recognised in the Union, will in fact be the instrument which explicitly ensures that these powers are exercised in the manner established by the Treaties.

4. THE LEGAL NATURE OF THE CHARTER

32. At current stage in the proceedings, attention should continue to be focused as a matter of priority on the content of the Charter until such time as the draft Charter has been finalised, for only if the Charter is sure to be an ambitious document will the question of its legal nature and its incorporation in the Treaty be a matter of any importance.

33. This question was raised by the Heads of State or Government themselves. The Cologne conclusions clearly state that, after the European Parliament, the Council and the Commission have jointly proclaimed the Charter:

"It will then have to be considered whether and, if so, how the Charter should be integrated into the treaties."

It was for this reason that the line taken by the Convention from the outset of its work was to produce a draft Charter with a content that would allow it to be incorporated in the Treaties.

34. The Commission also notes that the European Parliament stated its clear support for the idea of incorporating the Charter in the Treaties in its resolution adopted in March 2000, a view shared by the Governments of several Member States. The same is true of numerous non-governmental organisations.

35. For its part, the Commission believes that, as the drawing up of the Charter involves the national and Union legislative and executive powers as represented in the Convention, and as long as it remains ambitious, the Charter will have the effect of a proclamation, irrespective of the legal value formally conferred on it.

However, in view of the preliminary draft, the Commission believes that incorporating the Charter in the Treaties would remedy some of the shortcomings in the existing system of protection of fundamental rights in the Union. This system is characterised by indirect protection by means of general principles of Community law, this protection being basically in the hands of the courts, established by judgments on cases brought before them, and by protection which is not immediately evident to its direct beneficiaries.

36. As stated above, the conclusions of the Cologne European Council also raise the question of how the Charter should be incorporated into the Treaties. If the European Council were inclined to give the Charter mandatory force and incorporate it into the Treaties, this would obviously have serious repercussions on the present political dynamics of the Union. Thought would have to be given to the technical arrangements for incorporating the Charter into the Treaties in the future using the methods for the revision of the Treaties

37. For this reason, as soon as the draft Charter has been finalised and depending on the what it has developed into, the Commission will present a communication on the question of its legal nature.

5. CONCLUSIONS

38. In conclusion:

- a) in principle, the Commission supports the preliminary draft Charter as set out in document CONVENT 45 of 28 July; it realises, however, that, in view of the comments made by the members of the Convention, the preliminary draft may still be amended and therefore reserves the right to re-examine the text at a later stage;
 - b) the Commission will present a communication on the legal nature of the Charter once the draft has been finalised by the Convention.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find enclosed a contribution by the Council of Europe's observers, on the draft appendix to the explanatory notes regarding the Article 51 § 3 of the Charter. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in French and English languages.

19.9.2000

Note by the Council of Europe Observers for the attention of the members of the Convention

We have the following observations on the document of 15 September 2000 containing a draft appendix to the explanatory notes on Article 51 § 3 of the Charter (Convent 47).

1. On the basis of the current draft of the Charter, the following amendments to the two lists would appear necessary:

- ❑ Article 9 (right to marry and to found a family), which is not mentioned, should appear in the second list.
- ❑ In the second list, the passage relating to Article 12 (freedom of assembly and of association) should read: “Article 12 § 1 corresponds to Article 11 of the ECHR, but its scope is extended, by paragraph 2, to the European Union level”.
- ❑ Article 14 § 3 (the part concerning the right of parents to ensure the education of their children) should appear in the first list.
- ❑ Article 21 § 1 (non-discrimination), which is not mentioned, should appear in the second list.

2. However, care should be taken to avoid these lists acting to prevent the case-law on the European Convention on Human Rights being taken into account in the application of the Charter. The same applies, mutatis mutandis, to future additional Protocols to the ECHR.

So as to avoid any confusion, it would be appropriate to ensure that the minimum level of protection rule set out in Articles 51 § 3 and 52 of the Charter is valid also for those Charter rights for which, at this point, the equivalent is to be found in the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights, not in the text of the ECHR¹. Indeed, Article 51 § 3 speaks of “rights” guaranteed by the ECHR, not by the Articles of that Convention, and the Charter itself contains rights that are based on the Court’s case-law rather than the text of the ECHR. Examples are provided by Article 19 § 2 (prohibition on removal entailing a risk of ill-treatment) and Article 46 § 3 (right to legal aid; see the explanatory notes on these provisions in Convent 46).

Here are some further examples of Charter provisions (Convent 47) that are covered – at least in part – by the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights:

- ❑ Article 8 (protection of personal data) – see, among other authorities, the following judgments Leander v. Sweden, 26 March 1987; Amman v. Switzerland, 16 February 2000; and Rotaru v. Romania, 4 May 2000;
- ❑ Article 13 (protection of art) – see, in particular, the Müller and Others v. Switzerland judgment of 24 May 1988 and the Karatas v. Turkey judgment of 8 July 1999
- ❑ Article 13 (protection of research): see the Hertel v. Switzerland judgment of 25 August 1998
- ❑ Article 22 (protection of cultural, religious and linguistic diversity): decision of 25 May 2000 in the case of Noack and Others v. Germany (no. 46346/99)

¹ See on this point our contribution of 30 June 2000 (Contrib 268, Charte 4411/00).

- ❑ Article 24 (rights of the child): see, in particular, the T. and V. v. the United Kingdom judgment of 16 December 1999; and the Scozzari and Giunta v. Italy judgment of 13 July 2000
- ❑ Article 25 (integration of persons with disabilities): see the Botta v. Italy judgment of 24 February 1998
- ❑ Article 36 (environmental protection): see, in particular, the following judgments: Lopez Ostra v. Spain, 9 December 1994; Guerra and Others v. Italy, 19 February 1998; L.C.B. v. the United Kingdom, 9 June 1998
- ❑ Article 48 § 3 (proportionality of criminal penalties): in the context of the examination of the necessity for certain measures of interference (see, for example, the Constantinescu v. Romania judgment of 27 June 2000).

Indeed, it is for that reason that the wise precaution has been taken in the explanatory notes (Convent 46) on Article 50 § 3 (currently 51 § 3) to indicate : “It goes without saying that the term “convention” covers both the Convention and its Protocols and that the meaning and scope of its rights are determined not only by the text of the Convention but also by the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights”. For the same reason, the Council of Europe stressed the importance of having a reference to the case-law in the text of the Charter, (the reference is to be found in the Preamble).

The proposed lists should therefore reflect that state of affairs. This could be done by adding a clause explaining that the lists “have been drawn up without prejudice to the application of Article 51 § 3 to rights of the Charter for which there is an equivalent in the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights or in the additional Protocols to the European Convention on Human Rights”.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 28 September 2000
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4487/00*CONVENT 50*NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

PREAMBLE

The peoples of Europe, in creating an ever closer union among them, are resolved to share a peaceful future based on common values.

Conscious of its spiritual and moral heritage, the Union is founded on the indivisible, universal values of human dignity, freedom, equality and solidarity; it is based on the principles of democracy and the rule of law. It places the individual at the heart of its activities, by establishing the citizenship of the Union and by creating an area of freedom, security and justice.

The Union contributes to the preservation and to the development of these common values while respecting the diversity of the cultures and traditions of the peoples of Europe as well as the national identities of the Member States and the organisation of their public authorities at national, regional and local levels; it seeks to promote balanced and sustainable development and ensures free movement of persons, goods, services and capital, and the freedom of establishment.

To this end, it is necessary to strengthen the protection of fundamental rights in the light of changes in society, social progress and scientific and technological developments by making those rights more visible in a Charter.

This Charter reaffirms, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Community and the Union and the principle of subsidiarity, the rights as they result, in particular, from the constitutional traditions and international obligations common to the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the Social Charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights.

Enjoyment of these rights entails responsibilities and duties with regard to other persons, to the human community and to future generations.

The Union therefore recognises the rights, freedoms and principles set out hereafter.

Article 28

Right of collective bargaining and action

Workers and employers, or their respective organisations, have, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices, the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements at the appropriate levels and, in cases of conflicts of interest, to take collective action to defend their interests, including strike action.

Article 29

Right of access to placement services

Everyone has the right of access to a free placement service.

Article 30

Protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

Every worker has the right to protection against unjustified dismissal, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 31

Fair and just working conditions

1. Every worker has the right to working conditions which respect his or her health, safety and dignity.

2. Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave.

Article 32

Prohibition of child labour and protection of young people at work

The employment of children is prohibited. The minimum age of admission to employment may not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age, without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people and except for limited derogations.

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions appropriate to their age and be protected against economic exploitation and any work likely to harm their safety, health or physical, mental, moral or social development or to interfere with their education.

Article 33

Family and professional life

1. The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.
2. To reconcile family and professional life, everyone shall have the right to protection from dismissal for a reason connected with maternity and the right to paid maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.

Article 34

Social security and social assistance

1. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to social security benefits and social services providing protection in cases such as maternity, illness, industrial accidents, dependency or old age, and in the case of loss of employment, in accordance with the procedures laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.
2. Everyone residing and moving legally within the European Union is entitled to social security benefits and social advantages in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.
3. In order to combat social exclusion and poverty, the Union recognises and respects the right to social and housing assistance so as to ensure a decent existence for all those who lack sufficient resources, in accordance with the procedures laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 35

Health care

Everyone has the right of access to preventive health care and the right to benefit from medical treatment under the conditions established by national laws and practices. A high level of human health protection shall be ensured in the definition and implementation of all Union policies and activities.

Article 36

Access to services of general economic interest

The Union recognises and respects access to services of general economic interest as provided for in national laws and practices, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, in order to promote the social and territorial cohesion of the Union.

Article 37

Environmental protection

A high level of environmental protection and the improvement of the quality of the environment must be integrated into the policies of the Union and ensured in accordance with the principle of sustainable development.

Article 38

Consumer Protection

Union policies shall ensure a high level of consumer protection.

CHAPTER V

CITIZENS' RIGHTS

Article 39

Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at elections to the European Parliament

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he or she resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State.
2. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage in a free and secret ballot.

Article 40

Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he or she resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Article 41

Right to good administration

1. Every person has the right to have his or her affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.

2. This right includes:
- the right of every person to be heard, before any individual measure which would affect him or her adversely is taken;
 - the right of every person to have access to his or her file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of professional and business secrecy;
 - the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.
3. Every person has the right to have the Community make good any damage caused by its institutions or by its servants in the performance of their duties, in accordance with the general principles common to the laws of the Member States.
4. Every person may write to the institutions of the Union in one of the languages of the Treaties and must have an answer in the same language.

Article 42

Right of access to documents

Any citizen of the Union, and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State, has a right of access to European Parliament, Council and Commission documents.

Article 43

Ombudsman

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration in the activities of the Community institutions or bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Article 44

Right to petition

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Article 45

Freedom of movement and of residence

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.
2. Freedom of movement and residence may be granted, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, to nationals of third countries legally resident in the territory of a Member State.

Article 46

Diplomatic and consular protection

Every citizen of the Union shall, in the territory of a third country in which the Member State of which he or she is a national is not represented, be entitled to protection by the diplomatic or consular authorities of any Member State, on the same conditions as the nationals of that Member State.

CHAPTER VI

JUSTICE

Article 47

Right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial

Everyone whose rights and freedoms guaranteed by the law of the Union are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a tribunal in compliance with the conditions laid down in this Article.

Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal previously established by law. Everyone shall have the possibility of being advised, defended and represented.

Legal aid shall be made available to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is necessary to ensure effective access to justice.

Article 48

Presumption of innocence and right of defence

1. Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
2. Respect for the rights of the defence of anyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed.

Article 49

Principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties

1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than that which was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of a criminal offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles recognised by the community of nations.
3. The severity of penalties must not be disproportionate to the criminal offence.

Article 50

Right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same criminal offence

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he or she has already been finally acquitted or convicted within the Union in accordance with the law.

CHAPTER VII

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 51

Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. They shall therefore respect the rights, observe the principles and promote the application thereof in accordance with their respective powers.
2. This Charter does not establish any new power or task for the Community or the Union, or modify powers and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Article 52

Scope of guaranteed rights

1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by law and respect the essence of those rights and freedoms. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest recognized by the Union or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.
2. Rights recognised by this Charter which are based on the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.

3. Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be the same as those laid down by the said Convention. This provision shall not prevent Union law providing more extensive protection.

Article 53

Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or adversely affecting human rights and fundamental freedoms as recognised, in their respective fields of application, by Union law and international law and by international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and by the Member States' constitutions.

Article 54

Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for herein.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 10 October 2000
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4487/1/00
REV 1 (el,en,fr,it,sv)*CONVENT 50*NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

PREAMBLE

The peoples of Europe, in creating an ever closer union among them, are resolved to share a peaceful future based on common values.

Conscious of its spiritual and moral heritage, the Union is founded on the indivisible, universal values of human dignity, freedom, equality and solidarity; it is based on the principles of democracy and the rule of law. It places the individual at the heart of its activities, by establishing the citizenship of the Union and by creating an area of freedom, security and justice.

The Union contributes to the preservation and to the development of these common values while respecting the diversity of the cultures and traditions of the peoples of Europe as well as the national identities of the Member States and the organisation of their public authorities at national, regional and local levels; it seeks to promote balanced and sustainable development and ensures free movement of persons, goods, services and capital, and the freedom of establishment.

To this end, it is necessary to strengthen the protection of fundamental rights in the light of changes in society, social progress and scientific and technological developments by making those rights more visible in a Charter.

This Charter reaffirms, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Community and the Union and the principle of subsidiarity, the rights as they result, in particular, from the constitutional traditions and international obligations common to the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the Social Charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights.

Enjoyment of these rights entails responsibilities and duties with regard to other persons, to the human community and to future generations.

The Union therefore recognises the rights, freedoms and principles set out hereafter.

Article 16

Freedom to conduct a business

The freedom to conduct a business in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices is recognised.

Article 17

Right to property

1. Everyone has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his or her lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his or her possessions, except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to fair compensation being paid in good time for their loss. The use of property may be regulated by law insofar as is necessary for the general interest.
2. Intellectual property shall be protected.

Article 18

Right to asylum

The right to asylum shall be guaranteed with due respect for the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees and in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Article 19

Protection in the event of removal, expulsion or extradition

1. Collective expulsions are prohibited.
2. No one may be removed, expelled or extradited to a State where there is a serious risk that he or she would be subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

CHAPTER III

EQUALITY

Article 20

Equality before the law

Everyone is equal before the law.

Article 21

Non-discrimination

1. Any discrimination based on any ground such as sex, race, colour, ethnic or social origin, genetic features, language, religion or belief, political or any other opinion, membership of a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, and without prejudice to the special provisions of those Treaties, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

Article 22

Cultural, religious and linguistic diversity

The Union shall respect cultural, religious and linguistic diversity.

Article 23

Equality between men and women

Equality between men and women must be ensured in all areas, including employment, work and pay.

The principle of equality shall not prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures providing for specific advantages in favour of the under-represented sex.

Article 24

The rights of the child

1. Children shall have the right to such protection and care as is necessary for their well-being. They may express their views freely. Such views shall be taken into consideration on matters which concern them in accordance with their age and maturity.
2. In all actions relating to children, whether taken by public authorities or private institutions, the child's best interests must be a primary consideration.
3. Every child shall have the right to maintain on a regular basis a personal relationship and direct contact with both his or her parents, unless that is contrary to his or her interests.

Article 25

The rights of the elderly

The Union recognises and respects the rights of the elderly to lead a life of dignity and independence and to participate in social and cultural life.

Article 26

Integration of persons with disabilities

The Union recognises and respects the right of persons with disabilities to benefit from measures designed to ensure their independence, social and occupational integration and participation in the life of the community.

CHAPTER IV

SOLIDARITY

Article 27

Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Workers or their representatives must, at the appropriate levels, be guaranteed information and consultation in good time in the cases and under the conditions provided for by Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 28

Right of collective bargaining and action

Workers and employers, or their respective organisations, have, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices, the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements at the appropriate levels and, in cases of conflicts of interest, to take collective action to defend their interests, including strike action.

Article 29

Right of access to placement services

Everyone has the right of access to a free placement service.

Article 30

Protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

Every worker has the right to protection against unjustified dismissal, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 31

Fair and just working conditions

1. Every worker has the right to working conditions which respect his or her health, safety and dignity.

2. Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave.

Article 32

Prohibition of child labour and protection of young people at work

The employment of children is prohibited. The minimum age of admission to employment may not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age, without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people and except for limited derogations.

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions appropriate to their age and be protected against economic exploitation and any work likely to harm their safety, health or physical, mental, moral or social development or to interfere with their education.

Article 33

Family and professional life

1. The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.
2. To reconcile family and professional life, everyone shall have the right to protection from dismissal for a reason connected with maternity and the right to paid maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.

Article 34

Social security and social assistance

1. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to social security benefits and social services providing protection in cases such as maternity, illness, industrial accidents, dependency or old age, and in the case of loss of employment, in accordance with the modalities laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.
2. Everyone residing and moving legally within the European Union is entitled to social security benefits and social advantages in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.
3. In order to combat social exclusion and poverty, the Union recognises and respects the right to social and housing assistance so as to ensure a decent existence for all those who lack sufficient resources, in accordance with the procedures laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 35

Health care

Everyone has the right of access to preventive health care and the right to benefit from medical treatment under the conditions established by national laws and practices. A high level of human health protection shall be ensured in the definition and implementation of all Union policies and activities.

Article 36

Access to services of general economic interest

The Union recognises and respects access to services of general economic interest as provided for in national laws and practices, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, in order to promote the social and territorial cohesion of the Union.

Article 37

Environmental protection

A high level of environmental protection and the improvement of the quality of the environment must be integrated into the policies of the Union and ensured in accordance with the principle of sustainable development.

Article 38

Consumer Protection

Union policies shall ensure a high level of consumer protection.

CHAPTER V

CITIZENS' RIGHTS

Article 39

Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at elections to the European Parliament

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he or she resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State.
2. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage in a free and secret ballot.

Article 40

Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he or she resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Article 41

Right to good administration

1. Every person has the right to have his or her affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.

2. This right includes:

- the right of every person to be heard, before any individual measure which would affect him or her adversely is taken;
- the right of every person to have access to his or her file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of professional and business secrecy;
- the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.

3. Every person has the right to have the Community make good any damage caused by its institutions or by its servants in the performance of their duties, in accordance with the general principles common to the laws of the Member States.

4. Every person may write to the institutions of the Union in one of the languages of the Treaties and must have an answer in the same language.

Article 42

Right of access to documents

Any citizen of the Union, and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State, has a right of access to European Parliament, Council and Commission documents.

Article 43

Ombudsman

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration in the activities of the Community institutions or bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Article 44

Right to petition

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Article 45

Freedom of movement and of residence

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.
2. Freedom of movement and residence may be granted, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, to nationals of third countries legally resident in the territory of a Member State.

Article 46

Diplomatic and consular protection

Every citizen of the Union shall, in the territory of a third country in which the Member State of which he or she is a national is not represented, be entitled to protection by the diplomatic or consular authorities of any Member State, on the same conditions as the nationals of that Member State.

CHAPTER VI

JUSTICE

Article 47

Right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial

Everyone whose rights and freedoms guaranteed by the law of the Union are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a tribunal in compliance with the conditions laid down in this Article.

Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal previously established by law. Everyone shall have the possibility of being advised, defended and represented.

Legal aid shall be made available to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is necessary to ensure effective access to justice.

Article 48

Presumption of innocence and right of defence

1. Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
2. Respect for the rights of the defence of anyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed.

Article 49

Principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties

1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than that which was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of a criminal offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles recognised by the community of nations.
3. The severity of penalties must not be disproportionate to the criminal offence.

Article 50

Right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same criminal offence

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he or she has already been finally acquitted or convicted within the Union in accordance with the law.

CHAPTER VII

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 51

Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. They shall therefore respect the rights, observe the principles and promote the application thereof in accordance with their respective powers.
2. This Charter does not establish any new power or task for the Community or the Union, or modify powers and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Article 52

Scope of guaranteed rights

1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by law and respect the essence of those rights and freedoms. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest recognised by the Union or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.
2. Rights recognised by this Charter which are based on the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.

3. Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be the same as those laid down by the said Convention. This provision shall not prevent Union law providing more extensive protection.

Article 53

Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or adversely affecting human rights and fundamental freedoms as recognised, in their respective fields of application, by Union law and international law and by international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and by the Member States' constitutions.

Article 54

Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for herein.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 9 November 2000
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4487/2/00
REV 2 (en)*CONVENT 50*NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

PREAMBLE

The peoples of Europe, in creating an ever closer union among them, are resolved to share a peaceful future based on common values.

Conscious of its spiritual and moral heritage, the Union is founded on the indivisible, universal values of human dignity, freedom, equality and solidarity; it is based on the principles of democracy and the rule of law. It places the individual at the heart of its activities, by establishing the citizenship of the Union and by creating an area of freedom, security and justice.

The Union contributes to the preservation and to the development of these common values while respecting the diversity of the cultures and traditions of the peoples of Europe as well as the national identities of the Member States and the organisation of their public authorities at national, regional and local levels; it seeks to promote balanced and sustainable development and ensures free movement of persons, goods, services and capital, and the freedom of establishment.

To this end, it is necessary to strengthen the protection of fundamental rights in the light of changes in society, social progress and scientific and technological developments by making those rights more visible in a Charter.

This Charter reaffirms, with due regard for the powers and tasks of the Community and the Union and the principle of subsidiarity, the rights as they result, in particular, from the constitutional traditions and international obligations common to the Member States, the Treaty on European Union, the Community Treaties, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the Social Charters adopted by the Community and by the Council of Europe and the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and of the European Court of Human Rights.

Enjoyment of these rights entails responsibilities and duties with regard to other persons, to the human community and to future generations.

The Union therefore recognises the rights, freedoms and principles set out hereafter.

CHAPTER I

DIGNITY

Article 1

Human dignity

Human dignity is inviolable. It must be respected and protected.

Article 2

Right to life

1. Everyone has the right to life.
2. No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed.

Article 3

Right to the integrity of the person

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his or her physical and mental integrity.
2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following must be respected in particular:
 - the free and informed consent of the person concerned, according to the procedures laid down by law,

- the prohibition of eugenic practices, in particular those aiming at the selection of persons,
- the prohibition on making the human body and its parts as such a source of financial gain,
- the prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Article 4

Prohibition of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 5

Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.
3. Trafficking in human beings is prohibited.

CHAPTER II

FREEDOMS

Article 6

Right to liberty and security

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person.

Article 7

Respect for private and family life

Everyone has the right to respect for his or her private and family life, home and communications.

Article 8

Protection of personal data

1. Everyone has the right to the protection of personal data concerning him or her.
2. Such data must be processed fairly for specified purposes and on the basis of the consent of the person concerned or some other legitimate basis laid down by law. Everyone has the right of access to data which has been collected concerning him or her, and the right to have it rectified.
3. Compliance with these rules shall be subject to control by an independent authority.

Article 9

Right to marry and right to found a family

The right to marry and the right to found a family shall be guaranteed in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of these rights.

Article 10

Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. This right includes freedom to change religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or in private, to manifest religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.
2. The right to conscientious objection is recognised, in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of this right.

Article 11

Freedom of expression and information

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.
2. The freedom and pluralism of the media shall be respected.

Article 12

Freedom of assembly and of association

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association at all levels, in particular in political, trade union and civic matters, which implies the right of everyone to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his or her interests.
2. Political parties at Union level contribute to expressing the political will of the citizens of the Union.

Article 13

Freedom of the arts and sciences

The arts and scientific research shall be free of constraint. Academic freedom shall be respected.

Article 14

Right to education

1. Everyone has the right to education and to have access to vocational and continuing training.
2. This right includes the possibility to receive free compulsory education.

3. The freedom to found educational establishments with due respect for democratic principles and the right of parents to ensure the education and teaching of their children in conformity with their religious, philosophical and pedagogical convictions shall be respected, in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of such freedom and right.

Article 15

Freedom to choose an occupation and right to engage in work

1. Everyone has the right to engage in work and to pursue a freely chosen or accepted occupation.
2. Every citizen of the Union has the freedom to seek employment, to work, to exercise the right of establishment and to provide services in any Member State.
3. Nationals of third countries who are authorised to work in the territories of the Member States are entitled to working conditions equivalent to those of citizens of the Union.

Article 16

Freedom to conduct a business

The freedom to conduct a business in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices is recognised.

Article 17

Right to property

1. Everyone has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath his or her lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his or her possessions, except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by law, subject to fair compensation being paid in good time for their loss. The use of property may be regulated by law insofar as is necessary for the general interest.
2. Intellectual property shall be protected.

Article 18

Right to asylum

The right to asylum shall be guaranteed with due respect for the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees and in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Article 19

Protection in the event of removal, expulsion or extradition

1. Collective expulsions are prohibited.
2. No one may be removed, expelled or extradited to a State where there is a serious risk that he or she would be subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

CHAPTER III

EQUALITY

Article 20

Equality before the law

Everyone is equal before the law.

Article 21

Non-discrimination

1. Any discrimination based on any ground such as sex, race, colour, ethnic or social origin, genetic features, language, religion or belief, political or any other opinion, membership of a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, and without prejudice to the special provisions of those Treaties, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

Article 22

Cultural, religious and linguistic diversity

The Union shall respect cultural, religious and linguistic diversity.

Article 23

Equality between men and women

Equality between men and women must be ensured in all areas, including employment, work and pay.

The principle of equality shall not prevent the maintenance or adoption of measures providing for specific advantages in favour of the under-represented sex.

Article 24

The rights of the child

1. Children shall have the right to such protection and care as is necessary for their well-being. They may express their views freely. Such views shall be taken into consideration on matters which concern them in accordance with their age and maturity.
2. In all actions relating to children, whether taken by public authorities or private institutions, the child's best interests must be a primary consideration.
3. Every child shall have the right to maintain on a regular basis a personal relationship and direct contact with both his or her parents, unless that is contrary to his or her interests.

Article 25

The rights of the elderly

The Union recognises and respects the rights of the elderly to lead a life of dignity and independence and to participate in social and cultural life.

Article 26

Integration of persons with disabilities

The Union recognises and respects the right of persons with disabilities to benefit from measures designed to ensure their independence, social and occupational integration and participation in the life of the community.

CHAPTER IV

SOLIDARITY

Article 27

Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Workers or their representatives must, at the appropriate levels, be guaranteed information and consultation in good time in the cases and under the conditions provided for by Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 28

Right of collective bargaining and action

Workers and employers, or their respective organisations, have, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices, the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements at the appropriate levels and, in cases of conflicts of interest, to take collective action to defend their interests, including strike action.

Article 29

Right of access to placement services

Everyone has the right of access to a free placement service.

Article 30

Protection in the event of unjustified dismissal

Every worker has the right to protection against unjustified dismissal, in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 31

Fair and just working conditions

1. Every worker has the right to working conditions which respect his or her health, safety and dignity.

2. Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave.

Article 32

Prohibition of child labour and protection of young people at work

The employment of children is prohibited. The minimum age of admission to employment may not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age, without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people and except for limited derogations.

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions appropriate to their age and be protected against economic exploitation and any work likely to harm their safety, health or physical, mental, moral or social development or to interfere with their education.

Article 33

Family and professional life

1. The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.
2. To reconcile family and professional life, everyone shall have the right to protection from dismissal for a reason connected with maternity and the right to paid maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.

Article 34

Social security and social assistance

1. The Union recognises and respects the entitlement to social security benefits and social services providing protection in cases such as maternity, illness, industrial accidents, dependency or old age, and in the case of loss of employment, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.
2. Everyone residing and moving legally within the European Union is entitled to social security benefits and social advantages in accordance with Community law and national laws and practices.
3. In order to combat social exclusion and poverty, the Union recognises and respects the right to social and housing assistance so as to ensure a decent existence for all those who lack sufficient resources, in accordance with the rules laid down by Community law and national laws and practices.

Article 35

Health care

Everyone has the right of access to preventive health care and the right to benefit from medical treatment under the conditions established by national laws and practices. A high level of human health protection shall be ensured in the definition and implementation of all Union policies and activities.

Article 36

Access to services of general economic interest

The Union recognises and respects access to services of general economic interest as provided for in national laws and practices, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, in order to promote the social and territorial cohesion of the Union.

Article 37

Environmental protection

A high level of environmental protection and the improvement of the quality of the environment must be integrated into the policies of the Union and ensured in accordance with the principle of sustainable development.

Article 38

Consumer Protection

Union policies shall ensure a high level of consumer protection.

CHAPTER V

CITIZENS' RIGHTS

Article 39

Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at elections to the European Parliament

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he or she resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State.
2. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage in a free and secret ballot.

Article 40

Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he or she resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Article 41

Right to good administration

1. Every person has the right to have his or her affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.

2. This right includes:

- the right of every person to be heard, before any individual measure which would affect him or her adversely is taken;
- the right of every person to have access to his or her file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of professional and business secrecy;
- the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.

3. Every person has the right to have the Community make good any damage caused by its institutions or by its servants in the performance of their duties, in accordance with the general principles common to the laws of the Member States.

4. Every person may write to the institutions of the Union in one of the languages of the Treaties and must have an answer in the same language.

Article 42

Right of access to documents

Any citizen of the Union, and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State, has a right of access to European Parliament, Council and Commission documents.

Article 43

Ombudsman

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration in the activities of the Community institutions or bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Article 44

Right to petition

Any citizen of the Union and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Article 45

Freedom of movement and of residence

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.
2. Freedom of movement and residence may be granted, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, to nationals of third countries legally resident in the territory of a Member State.

Article 46

Diplomatic and consular protection

Every citizen of the Union shall, in the territory of a third country in which the Member State of which he or she is a national is not represented, be entitled to protection by the diplomatic or consular authorities of any Member State, on the same conditions as the nationals of that Member State.

CHAPTER VI

JUSTICE

Article 47

Right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial

Everyone whose rights and freedoms guaranteed by the law of the Union are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a tribunal in compliance with the conditions laid down in this Article.

Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal previously established by law. Everyone shall have the possibility of being advised, defended and represented.

Legal aid shall be made available to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is necessary to ensure effective access to justice.

Article 48

Presumption of innocence and right of defence

1. Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
2. Respect for the rights of the defence of anyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed.

Article 49

Principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties

1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than that which was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of a criminal offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles recognised by the community of nations.
3. The severity of penalties must not be disproportionate to the criminal offence.

Article 50

Right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same criminal offence

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he or she has already been finally acquitted or convicted within the Union in accordance with the law.

CHAPTER VII

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 51

Scope

1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity and to the Member States only when they are implementing Union law. They shall therefore respect the rights, observe the principles and promote the application thereof in accordance with their respective powers.
2. This Charter does not establish any new power or task for the Community or the Union, or modify powers and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Article 52

Scope of guaranteed rights

1. Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by law and respect the essence of those rights and freedoms. Subject to the principle of proportionality, limitations may be made only if they are necessary and genuinely meet objectives of general interest recognised by the Union or the need to protect the rights and freedoms of others.
2. Rights recognised by this Charter which are based on the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.

3. Insofar as this Charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be the same as those laid down by the said Convention. This provision shall not prevent Union law providing more extensive protection.

Article 53

Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or adversely affecting human rights and fundamental freedoms as recognised, in their respective fields of application, by Union law and international law and by international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, and by the Member States' constitutions.

Article 54

Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for herein.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 5 octobre 2000CHARTE 4952/00*CONTRIB 352*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-après une contribution de M. Jean-Luc Dehaene, représentant personnel du gouvernement belge.^{1 2}

² La contribution date du 28 septembre, elle nous est parvenue le 3 octobre, suite à des problèmes de transmission électronique.

Monsieur le Président,

1. A lecture des deux derniers documents qui nous ont été transmis par le Présidium, je crois pouvoir dire que nous avons répondu de manière adéquate au mandat qui nous avait été confié par le Conseil européen de Cologne. Je tiens tout particulièrement à féliciter le Présidium d'avoir pu élaborer un projet de Charte équilibré à l'issue de débats menés au sein de la Convention mais aussi de ses composantes qui ont reflété l'expression de sensibilités parfois difficilement conciliables.

Le projet de Charte se présente sous une structure qui a l'immense mérite de ne pas opérer un clivage entre les droits dits « traditionnels » et les droits économiques et sociaux mais celui-ci consacre également des droits qui bien qu'existant n'avaient pas encore été reconnus en qualité de droits fondamentaux nonobstant les valeurs importantes qu'ils visent à protéger, comme les principes bioéthiques, le droit à une bonne administration ou encore l'accès aux services d'intérêt économique général.

Comme je viens de le préciser, nous avons rempli notre mission et répondu à l'objectif fixé, il s'agissait non pas d'innover, de créer des droits nouveaux mais de se livrer à une compilation des droits existants à l'effet de les rendre plus visibles pour le citoyen.

Il faut par ailleurs se féliciter de ce que le texte proposé respecte le vœu exprimé par le Président Herzog au début de nos travaux. La rédaction d'un texte sous forme juridique devrait permettre le cas échéant, son intégration future dans les traités.

2. En vue de répondre à certaines critiques qui évoquent le caractère trop peu ambitieux de nos travaux, j'observe que la Charte renforcera la sécurité juridique.

Comme le précise, sans ambiguïté la Charte, celle-ci s'adressera aux institutions de l'Union et aux Etats membres quant ils agissent dans la sphère d'application du droit communautaire.

Dorénavant, toutes les mesures qui seront prises par ces acteurs importants de la mise en œuvre des droits fondamentaux, seront appréciées au regard des principes énoncés par la Charte.

L'Union s'est dotée d'un catalogue de droits qui s'impose à elle dans l'exercice des compétences qui lui sont conférées par les traités et je songe plus précisément au secteur particulièrement sensible d'un espace de liberté, de sécurité, et de justice, mais également dans la mise en œuvre de ses politiques externes comme l'a souligné judicieusement la Commission dans sa dernière contribution.

3. Je souhaite par ailleurs vous exprimer mon opinion au sujet des deux difficultés essentielles sur lesquelles ont buté nos travaux : les rapports entre la Charte et la CEDH et l'épineuse question de la définition des droits sociaux.

3.1. Certes on ne peut sous estimer les craintes exprimées par certains qui prédisent que la Charte va favoriser le développement de conceptions divergentes des droits fondamentaux selon que leur interprétation sera faite par la Cour de Luxembourg au regard d'objectifs propres au droit communautaire ou par la Cour de Strasbourg, gardienne de la CEDH.

A cet égard, le nouveau texte de l'article 51 § 3 permet de dissiper grandement les malentendus quant à la portée des droits énoncés par la Charte et correspondant à des droits garantis par la CEDH. Il serait cependant préférable qu'il y soit explicitement prévu une référence à la jurisprudence de la Cour de Strasbourg.

J'estime toutefois pouvoir me référer à la contribution des représentants du Conseil de l'Europe, selon lesquels la référence dans le préambule à la jurisprudence de la Cour de Strasbourg permet de considérer que le renvoi à la CEDH couvre également les droits reconnus par la jurisprudence de cette Cour. (cfr. observations des représentants du Conseil de l'Europe relatives au doc. 4422/00 Convent 45).

Par ailleurs, la Belgique comme elle a déjà maintes fois eu l'occasion de le plaider reste persuadée qu'une interprétation harmonieuse des droits fondamentaux serait favorisée par une adhésion de l'Union à la CEDH.

3.2. J'en viens maintenant à la définition des droits sociaux.

Nous l'avons constaté tous les EM ne sont pas parties aux mêmes conventions en matière de droits sociaux et le système de protection sociale connaît des développements différents selon les Etats membres.

L'approche minimaliste de certains qui prétendirent que la Charte devait se contenter d'énoncer exclusivement les droits que le citoyen pouvait réclamer en justice aurait conduit à un instrument d'une extrême pauvreté, le droit à la santé, la protection de l'environnement ne sont pas toujours concrétisés par des droits directement justiciables mais il n'en demeure pas moins qu'ils constituent des principes essentiels qui doivent être mis en œuvre par les autorités publiques dans leurs politiques.

Il est heureux qu'un consensus paraisse se dégager même si, personnellement je regrette que certains droits soient énoncés de façon fort peu volontariste ainsi le droit à un revenu minimum garanti est couvert implicitement par l'article 33 qui prévoit que l'Union reconnaît et respecte une aide sociale à l'effet d'assurer une existence digne à tous ceux qui ne disposent pas de ressources suffisantes.

En vue de répondre aux critiques de ceux qui considèrent la Charte comme un instrument de régression sociale, il est primordial de préciser que celle-ci ne portera pas atteinte aux droits sociaux fondamentaux garantis par d'autres instruments internationaux ou par les législations nationales.

En vue de dissiper certaines craintes à ce sujet, il conviendrait à l'article 52 de faire une référence explicite à la Charte sociale européenne.

Un travail important d'explication de la Charte, de ses objectifs de son mécanisme et notamment de ses clauses horizontales devra être mené.

Les explications élaborées par le Présidium s'avèrent un instrument précieux qu'il faudra rendre accessible au lecteur en même temps que le texte de la Charte.

4. La nature juridique de la Charte est également un sujet qui alimente la réflexion des diverses sphères politiques et associatives qui s'interrogent quant à la valeur ajoutée de l'instrument que nous préparons.

Les conclusions de Cologne prévoient une proclamation conjointe de la Charte par le Parlement européen, le Conseil et la Commission. Toutefois, il ne faut pas perdre de vue qu'après cette proclamation il faudra examiner si et, le cas échéant, de quelle façon intégrer la Charte aux traités.

Conférer à la Charte un caractère contraignant et l'insérer dans les traités renforcerait à mon sens la légitimité de l'Union. La Charte est un jalon important de cette Europe politique qui est en train de se constituer. Le développement d'une politique étrangère et de sécurité commune impose l'adoption d'un instrument de référence en matière de droits de l'homme, que l'Union devra respecter dans la mise en œuvre de ses politiques tant internes qu'externes.

En septembre 1999, le Président de la Commission européenne m'avait invité ainsi que Monsieur Richard Von Weizsäcker, ancien Président de la République Fédérale d'Allemagne et Lord Simon of Highbury, à lui remettre un rapport sur les implications institutionnelles de l'élargissement.

Nous avons insisté à l'époque sur la nécessité de rapprocher le citoyen des institutions européennes. Parmi les propositions que nous formulions à cet effet figurait la restructuration des traités européens. Les traités pourraient ainsi être séparés en deux parties. Un traité de base pourrait fixer les objectifs, les principes et le cadre institutionnel de l'Union ainsi que les droits fondamentaux des citoyens européens. Un texte séparé contiendrait les autres dispositions des traités actuels et leurs modifications. L'institut européen de Florence a remis un rapport qui propose dans un sens similaire une réorganisation des traités et l'adoption d'un traité fondamental.

Il va de soi que la Charte des droits fondamentaux s'inscrirait, dans une telle perspective, parfaitement dans un Traité de base de l'Union dont elle pourrait constituer un chapitre introductif. L'Union serait ainsi dotée d'un texte fondateur comparable aux constitutions des Etats. La légitimité de ses institutions et la conscience européenne ne pourraient qu'en tirer avantage.

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution sent on 20 September 2000 by Mrs. VAN DER BURG. Mrs. VAN DER BURG (Member of the European Parliament) asked for publication of this contribution.¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English language only.

Note to the attention of the Presidium of the Convention (for its meeting on 20 September), and to the members of the Convention

Improvement of the Draft EU Charter of Fundamental Rights (convent 47) with the objective to bring it in line with the Revised European Social Charter of the Council of Europe

1. The last draft of the Charter text, Convent 47, is still lacking a clear reference to the Revised European Social Charter (as was proposed a.o. by the PSE members, and by the Dutch and Belgium government representatives Korthals Altes and Dehaene). This is the more striking, now the Presidium has elaborated a detailed annex with an explanation as to the correspondence of articles in the EU Charter with specific articles in the ECHR. A similar exercise is necessary for the articles that correspond with the content of the Council of Europe's instruments on social rights. With this note I would like to give some background information to underpin the urgent appeal to make the relationship of the EU Charter with the Revised European Social Charter clear, in the interest both of those who presently criticize the draft EU Charter as a step backwards compared to the Revised, and even the 1961 Social Charter, as to those who fear that an open formulation of particularly social and economic rights may give rise to misinterpretations and undue pressures on Member States, if they lack a clear context of interpretation and case law. Particularly for the countries, that prepare for accession tot the EU, it is imperative to bring in line the demands from the Council of Europe in which they are actively working already and the EU-'acquis' on fundamental rights in draft EU charter.
2. Both the criticisms and the misunderstandings may be largely taken away by including a clear reference to the Revised European Social Charter of the Council of Europe, not only in the preamble, but also in the (horizontal) articles 51(3) and 52. Such a reference does not put any direct or indirect obligations to Member States vis-a-vis this Revised Social Charter of the Council of Europe ¹. With full respect for the individual national responsibilities and choices of Member States with respect to the ratification process and the selection of articles to be ratified ², it is possible and from the point of view of these Member States desirable to have a joint reference framework for the interpretation of the articles in the draft EU Charter that correspond with articles in the (R)ESC. As is formulated in the former horizontal article 49, now art. 50, this interpretation and reference exclusively deals with the obligations of the EU institutions and bodies (and to the Member States where they implement Union law) to respect, observe and promote the rights and principles in this Charter. So a reference to the RESC in art's 51 and 52, in addition to that to the ECHR, and a detailed reference to the ESC and RESC and its case law, as well as to ILO Conventions, UN conventions and other sources of inspiration and interpretation in the explanatory text of Convent 46, is not in any way binding or committing Member States in their individual relation to the Council of Europe (or these other international organisations), but only providing them with a joint reference framework for the EU Charter.

¹ All the 15 Member States have ratified the European Social Charter of 1961 and decided to and participated in the revision of that Charter, that led to the Revised European Social Charter of 1996. Three Member States have already ratified the Revised Charter; the others are in the process of ratification. Also the accession countries are actively involved in implementing the Social Charter's provisions. See annex 1 for a more precise description on the basis of information of the Council of Europe.

² In the structure of the European Social Charter it is possible not to ratify all the individual articles. Nevertheless reporting and monitoring activities take place throughout the Council of Europe members with respect to all the elements.

3. Analyzing the parallelity of Convent 47 with the Revised European Social Charter³, some omissions are clearly striking, and have alarmed both legal experts⁴ the European Trade Union Confederation and organisations of NGO's⁵. Taking into account that not the complete text of the RESC can be included, and that some articles of the draft EU Charter have been formulated that broad that they may include elements of several RESC articles, three substantial elements of the RESC are most obviously missing in the present draft text: 1) fair remuneration (which as the most evident element of working conditions may be added to the present article 30), 2) housing and the protection against poverty and social exclusion (which may be included in art. 33(3) and the rights of elderly persons (which may be added in the Equality chapter as an article about the (respect for) "the rights of the elderly to an independent and decent existence and to take full part in political, social and cultural life" (which is more than non-discrimination on the basis of age). Taking into account that the substance of these articles as such is not controversial in the careful formulation of the texts as they are now drafted, the addition of them may make the Charter more complete and corresponding to the (R)ESC. Additionally in the context of all the activities with respect to Employment Guidelines and employment policies in the EU, it would be also an inexplicable omission if not (in line with the - formulation of the - articles 34, 36 and 37) the ensuring of a high level of employment would be included as a separate article, in line with the Treaty⁶.
4. In Convent 47 the Presidium has followed up the suggestion to include the clause in 51(1) that limitations may never infringe upon the very substance of the fundamental rights. Nevertheless the EP delegation's demand to also delete the clause "other legitimate interests in a democratic society" has not been followed. The text of this article would be improved by deleting this clause, and by adding a sentence that was contained in previous drafts, making clear that restrictions and limitations may not exceed those of the ECHR and RESC. This also serves the objective of parallelity with the ECHR and RESC.
5. Horizontal article 51, para 2 is still formulated in a way that is interpreted by several legal experts as implying that the fundamental rights included in the Treaty might be overruled and subordinated by changes in the Treaties. This is not in line with the explanatory text in Convent 46 that explains that this paragraph is meant to say that where a right results from the Treaties it is subject to the conditions and limits laid down by these Treaties. Since in several cases the rights that are indicated here (a precise list of these would also be useful) also exist in the ECHR and/or the (R)ESC, it is necessary to at least add a clause saying that this reference to the Treaties (and the possibility to change these in future) cannot undermine the guarantees given in the other two paragraphs of this article. (the start of the sentence could read: " Without prejudice

⁴ See for instance the Executive Summary of the International Conference "The Challenge of the EU Charter" of Leiden University in Noordwijk 4-5 september 2000.

⁵ See press releases and comments of the last weeks.

⁶ Both article 2 TEU and art. 1 of the 1961 and of the Revised European Social Charter speak about a high level of employment to the other two paragraphs of this article"). From the point of view of logic and readability, it would further be preferable to start with para 3 of this article, followed by 1, and then end with the para referring to the Treaties as amended.

6. In (horizontal) article 52 (level of protection) the Revised European Social Charter should be mentioned explicitly, and the word "all" in front of Member States should be deleted. As argued under 2 above, this does not imply that this affects the position of individual Member States who may happen not to be bound by particular international conventions. In fact it is exactly the same situation as with the reference to the Member States' Constitutions in the same provision. Here also Member State A is not via the EU Charter bound to the provisions of Member State B's Constitution. The article is precisely meant to guarantee that the interpretation of the EU Charter will not undermine the substance of rights and freedoms provided for in the international or national fundamental rights that the Member States are bound to. It should prevent Member States from having to deal with conflicting interpretations and demands, also with respect to those international obligations that do not have the signature of all other EU countries.

Text proposals:

Summarizing, the following changes in Convent 47 are proposed (in the sequence of the draft text) :

Chapter III:

Add a new article (before or after art. 25), dealing with the rights of the elderly:

"The Union recognizes and respects the right of elderly persons to an independent and decent existence and full participation in political, social and cultural life."

Chapter IV:

Add a new article (right at the start of the chapter before art. 26), dealing with the employment objective:

"A high level of employment is ensured in the policies of the Union"

Add a paragraph (preferably the first) on fair remuneration in article 30:

"Every worker has the right to fair remuneration"

Add to article 33(3) a reference to the fight against social exclusion and poverty, and change "housing benefit" into "housing":

"With a view to fighting social exclusion and poverty, the Union recognizes and respects the right to social assistance and to housing, in order to ensure a decent existence for all those lacking sufficient resources, in accordance with.. etc "

Chapter VII:

Article 51.

(NB change the order of paragraphs: 3,1,2)

1. (previously 3):

"Insofar as this charter contains rights which correspond to rights guaranteed by the ECHR and the Revised European Social Charter, the meaning and scope of those rights shall be the same as those conferred on them by the said Council of Europe instruments and their case law, unless this Charter affords greater or more extensive protection."

2. (previously 1):

delete: "other legitimate interests in a democratic society" and add: "Restrictions may not exceed the restrictions permitted by the ECHR and RESC in the corresponding articles"

3. (previously 2):

"Without prejudice to the paragraphs 1 and 2 of this article, rights recognised by this Charter which are based on the Community Treaties or the Treaty on European Union shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits defined by those Treaties.

Article 52:

Delete "all" in front of Member States

And add after ECHR: "and the Revised European Social Charter"

Annex 1

Information about the European Social Charter and the Revised European Social Charter of the Council of Europe

- 1) The Council of Europe is founded in 1949, and presently has 41 Member States, of which all the EU member states and all accession countries. In 1961 the Council of Europe adopted the European Social Charter. This has consequently been signed and ratified by all EU member states. In 1988, 1991, and 1995 additional protocols were concluded. In 1991 the Ministerial Conference decided (unanimously) to make a Revised European Social Charter, with the purpose of updating and replacing the old charter and the protocols.
- 2) In 1996 this Revised European Social Charter was unanimously adopted, first in the so-called CHARTE-REL Committee that drafted the text in a long intensive process; and consequently in the Committee of Ministers. The Revised European Social Charter is due to progressively replace the old one and the protocols, which means that those Member States ratifying the Revised Charter are no longer bound by the 1961 Charter and that in the transitional period different situations of ratification exist.
- 3) The Revised European Social Charter is presently ratified by the EU member states France, Italy, and Sweden, (and by Romania, Slovenia, Cyprus, Bulgaria, and Estonia). The other 12 are still bound by their ratification of the 1961 Charter. EU member states Austria, Belgium, Finland, Ireland and Portugal, and non-EU states Albania, Croatia, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Moldova, Switzerland, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Ukraine, Georgia, Lithuania, and the Russian Federation are engaged now actively in the process of ratification.
- 4) A Committee of 9 independent experts, called the European Committee of Social Rights, monitors reports that Member States (after consultation of social partners) must submit; their conclusions and recommendations go to the Governmental Committee, composed of representatives of Member States, and - in cases of serious infringements, to the Committee of Ministers, that may make recommendations to Member States. Trade unions, employers' organisations and NGO's may also raise complaints with the ECSR, which after investigation may bring these to the Committee of Ministers. This complaint procedure is an optional one which has been accepted to date by Cyprus, Finland, France, Greece, Italy, Norway, Portugal, Slovenia and Sweden.
- 5) The structure of the Charter and its ratification is such that there is room for optional selection of articles, under clear conditions of a minimum number in certain clusters of articles.
- 6) In the first article of the "Social Chapter" (art 136, TEC) a reference is made to the 1961 Charter (at the time of the negotiations on the Amsterdam Treaty, the Revised Charter was not yet adopted); the Cologne mandate for the EU Charter also refers to the European Social Charter.
- 7) In the Council of Europe the Parliamentary Assembly recently pleaded for an integration of fundamental social rights in the European Convention on Human Rights (Recommendation 1415, adopted on 23 June 1999). The Ministerial Committee has not yet taken a position on this.
- 8) In its Recommendation 1439 and Resolution 1210 of January 2000 on the drafting of an EU Charter of Fundamental Rights, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe expressed its clear recommendation that the EU charter should take into account the revised European Social Charter when referring to social rights.

Presently a new resolution is prepared for the Plenary Assembly of 25/26 september. Both the Legal Affairs Committee, the Political Affairs Committee and the Social Affairs Committee contribute to that resolution. The text that has been distributed to the Convention Members is that of the Legal Affairs Committee (rapporteur Magnusson); the Social Affairs Committee text is under preparation (rapporteur Evan) and will undoubtedly again contain the recommendation to include a reference to the RESC in the EU Charter.

Strasbourg, 9 November 2000

Comments of the Council of Europe observers on the draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

The Council of Europe observers wish to express their satisfaction with the draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, as approved by the Heads of State and Governments of the member States of the European Union at the European Council's informal session at Biarritz on 14 October 2000 (Convent 50).

Firstly, the Charter draws to a significant degree on certain Council of Europe conventions, namely the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR), the revised Social Charter and the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. At the same time, in certain spheres, the Charter extends their scope or level of protection and even establishes new rights. That is a noteworthy development, particularly as it is consistent with the aforementioned instruments, thus answering a major concern voiced by the Council of Europe observers throughout the duration of the works on the Convention, since, in the domain of fundamental rights, inconsistencies not only undermine legal certainty, but above all entail a risk that the rights will be weakened rather than strengthened.

That is particularly true of the links between the Charter and the ECHR. Harmony between the two instruments is essential, as when implementing Community law the member States of the European Union will be bound by both the ECHR and the Charter, once it is in force. Thus, the slightest discrepancy between the two instruments would place the member States in a difficult position, one that must accordingly be avoided at all cost. It is to that end that the Charter expressly relies on the ECHR and, thus, constitutes a sort of extension to it in Community law.

That this is so is clearly apparent from Articles 52 § 3 and 53 of the Charter, whose effect, in substance, is to ensure an identity of scope and meaning between the rights contained in the two instruments, without preventing Union law from affording wider protection than that provided under the ECHR. The ECHR is thus recognised as a minimum standard for the interpretation and application of the Charter. That solution is entirely compatible with the ECHR, Article 53 of which indicates that the ECHR is not intended to impose a uniform level of protection of human rights throughout Europe, but solely to ensure a minimum standard, which the Contracting Parties to the ECHR are free to raise, either individually or by agreement with other States. It is the latter situation which will be brought about by the Charter, if it is given binding force.

Of course, for these principles to be implemented correctly the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights will need to be taken into account. It is the European Court of Human Rights which, through its interpretation of the ECHR, has continually determined and increased the level of protection afforded by the ECHR, a level which is today recognised by the Charter as a minimum standard. Furthermore, certain rights set out in the Charter have no equivalent in the ECHR, but are echoed in the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights. Examples of this are the protection of personal data (Article 8 of the Charter) and of children (Article 24). Certain provisions of the Charter – Articles 19 § 2 and 47 § 3 – even expressly adopt parts of that case-law. It is in order to reflect the role and importance of the case-law that a reference is made to it in the Preamble to the Charter and in the accompanying explanations. By thus establishing at the outset that future case-law developments regarding the ECHR and the Charter may be taken into account, the danger that the common dynamic which these two instruments have the potential to produce will be destroyed has been avoided.

The coherence established between the Charter and the ECHR serves not only to preserve – even enhance – with legal certainty, the level of protection of fundamental rights already attained in Europe, but also to respect the universality of human rights, a notion which reflects the European conception of the value of every human being. The fact that human rights are universal does not prevent the member States of the European Union from reinforcing the protection of fundamental rights through the Charter. However, that protection would be totally undermined if the Charter was designed not to complete or to reinforce the ECHR, but to replace it by establishing a new minimum standard applicable only in the member States of the European Union. The Committee of Ministers (press release on the 106th session, 10-11 May 2000) and the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe (Resolutions 1210 (2000) of 25 January 2000 and 1228 (2000) of 29 September 2000) have each warned against such a development, since it would create a new dividing line in Europe and lend credence to the notion that the content of human rights may be adjusted to fit the economic situation of the States called upon to protect them. That would be counter to European tradition and deprive Europe of all credibility on the international scene when asserting the universality of human rights, since it would find itself accused of using different standards.

Mutatis mutandis, each of these considerations also applies to the relations between the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union and the (revised) Social Charter of the Council of Europe. Even if the Charter of Fundamental Rights contains only some of the rights set out in the Social Charters, their inclusion, alongside the so-called “classic” rights, in an international instrument intended to be enforceable through the courts, represents real progress which is worthy of note.

Nevertheless, although the principles are clear and satisfactory, there will be many recurring practical difficulties in their implementation. Thus, for example, the application of the Charter rights borrowed from the ECHR presupposes the determination of the exact level of protection of that right afforded by the European Court of Human Rights, that being the minimum level recognised by Article 52 § 3 of the Charter.

In other words and a fortiori, no amount of careful drafting can prevent the debate on the final nature of the Charter from posing a number of problems which, unless satisfactorily resolved, will prove a potential source of error in the interpretation of the rights embodied in both the Charter and the ECHR, in particular if the Court of Justice finds itself called upon to decide issues that have not previously been before the Court in Strasbourg. Why?

Because the Charter, when applied and interpreted within the context of the European Union, that is to say in the framework of a Treaty with its own objectives and including new powers in such sensitive fields as immigration, asylum and judicial and police co-operation, is bound to take on a dynamic which is almost certain to affect the harmonious and consistent interpretation of fundamental rights. Since the organ creates the function, it is highly probable that the Charter will generate a far higher number of references for preliminary rulings than the Court of Justice receives at present. That will increase in the same proportion the risk that decisions of the Court of Justice will be at variance with later decisions of the Strasbourg Court, since the member States will remain responsible for their actions under the ECHR but will at the same time be required to comply with and apply Community law. A State obliged to apply a judgment of the Court of Justice which turned out to be at odds with a later judgment of the Strasbourg Court would be placed in a very awkward position.

As regards the Charter's being harmoniously combined with the other systems of protection of fundamental rights, that point shows to what extent the debate about the nature of the Charter will restore to the agenda the question of accession by the European Communities and/or the Union to the ECHR, under suitable arrangements to be agreed by all those concerned. By entrusting a single court, the European Court of Human Rights, with the task of interpreting those ECHR rights which are also contained in the Charter, this solution would guarantee perfect harmony between the two instruments. In addition, it would have the advantage of enabling the Community Institutions to play a full role in proceedings before the European Court of Human Rights that concern Community law, so avoiding the risk that member States may find themselves obliged to bear sole responsibility under the ECHR while in certain cases being unable to take the action which a judgment may require at the Community level.

Subject : Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union – Solemn proclamation, Nice, 7 December 2000

1. The Convention charged with elaborating a draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union reached agreement on 2 October 2000 on a text within the terms set out in the Presidency conclusions of the European Council, meeting in Tampere on 15 and 16 October 1999, Annex, point B(v).
2. The Presidency conclusions at the European Council, meeting in Cologne on 15 and 16 October 1999, Annex IV, fourth paragraph, provide that "the European Council will propose to the European Parliament and the Commission that, together with the Council, they should solemnly proclaim on the basis of the draft document a European Charter of Fundamental Rights". Mr Jacques CHIRAC, as President of the European Council, has written to the European Parliament and to the Commission to that effect.
3. The Presidency proposes that the Council sign the solemn proclamation in parallel with the European Council at Nice on 7 December 2000. The text to be signed will be the most recent revised version of the draft, preceded by the following text:

"The European Parliament, the Council and the Commission solemnly proclaim the text below as the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union."
Done at Nice, 7 December 2000.
4. The Presidency requests that Coreper recommend that the Council approve this procedure as an "A" item and consider that, by so doing, it authorises the Presidency to sign the solemn proclamation on its behalf.

Annexes p.19

Le Conseil européen de Cologne des 3 et 4 juin 1999 a affirmé son intention d'«établir une charte des droits fondamentaux afin d'ancreur leur importance exceptionnelle et leur portée de manière visible pour les citoyens de l'Union». Le Conseil extraordinaire de Tampere des 15 et 16 octobre 1999 a mis sur pied l'enceinte pour l'élaboration du projet de charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne, définissant sa composition, sa méthode de travail et ses modalités pratiques de fonctionnement (voir Annexe). Jusqu'à présent, les discussions ont essentiellement porté sur des questions de procédure. Le temps est à présent venu de réfléchir aux enjeux d'une telle charte, dont la portée ne saurait demeurer symbolique.

En effet, la FIDH considère que la seule justification possible à l'adoption d'une Charte européenne, alors que tous les Etats membres sont déjà parties à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, réside dans l'adoption d'une Charte qui soit davantage protectrice que la Convention européenne elle-même.

La FIDH demande, depuis plusieurs années, que la Communauté européenne adhère à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, ainsi qu'à la Charte sociale européenne et à son Protocole additionnel prévoyant un système de réclamations collectives (1995). Lorsque tous les Etats membres de l'UE auront ratifié la Charte sociale européenne révisée, la Communauté devrait à son tour ratifier cette dernière.

La FIDH maintient sa position à cet égard, et considère que le débat sur l'adoption d'une nouvelle Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'UE ne doit en aucune façon reléguer cette question au second plan.

Par ailleurs, la FIDH se réserve de préciser sa position concernant l'adoption d'une nouvelle Charte en fonction du projet dont elle aura pu prendre connaissance. Si le nouvel instrument n'aboutit pas à un renforcement de la protection des droits de l'Homme qui prévaut actuellement, la FIDH n'hésitera pas à prendre position contre l'adoption d'un tel instrument. C'est le degré de protection effectif, réel, qui guidera le choix de notre organisation.

Il serait souhaitable qu'à l'occasion de l'adoption de la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne, la Communauté européenne se voie investie de la compétence d'adhérer aux instruments internationaux de protection des droits de l'Homme qui présentent un rapport avec les compétences déjà attribuées à la Communauté. A défaut, les Etats membres de l'Union européenne pourraient être accusés d'avoir surtout adopté ladite Charte afin de protéger l'ordre juridique communautaire contre toute tentation de la part de la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme d'effectuer un contrôle plus poussé de la garantie qu'y reçoivent les droits fondamentaux. Il n'est pas indifférent à cet égard que le Conseil de Cologne à l'occasion duquel l'idée de la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne a été lancée à l'initiative de la présidence allemande, ait pris place quatre mois après l'arrêt Matthews c. Royaume-Uni de la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme, dans lequel celle-ci affirme en termes nets que «La Convention n'exclut pas le transfert de compétences à des organisations internationales, pourvu que les droits garantis par la Convention continuent d'être 'reconnus'. Pareil transfert ne fait donc pas disparaître la responsabilité des Etats membres» (para. 32 de l'arrêt).

Il serait regrettable que l'initiative de l'élaboration d'une Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne ait pour objectif – et, sinon pour objectif, pour conséquence – de placer le droit communautaire, autant que possible, à l'abri d'un contrôle de la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme, et ainsi, de permettre aux Etats membres de l'Union d'échapper à la «responsabilité conjointe» qui est la leur, vis-à-vis de la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, dans l'élaboration du droit communautaire. L'adoption de la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne pourrait en effet avoir un tel effet, compte tenu de ce que la jurisprudence récente de la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme, telle qu'elle résulte de l'arrêt Matthews précité, n'a pas formellement rejeté le raisonnement qui était à la base de la jurisprudence antérieure de la Commission européenne des droits de l'Homme. Cette jurisprudence considérait en effet que "le transfert de pouvoirs à une organisation internationale n'est pas incompatible avec la Convention, à condition que, dans cette organisation, les droits fondamentaux reçoivent une protection équivalente" (Cf. DH, déc. Meelchers et Co. c. RFA, du 9 février 1990, req. n°13258/87). Compte tenu de cette jurisprudence, l'adoption d'une Charte des droits fondamentaux au sein de l'Union européenne, dont le respect serait susceptible de contrôle juridictionnel de la part de la Cour de justice des Communauté européenne (CJCE), pourrait être de nature à encourager un contrôle moins exigeant de la part de la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme sur les actes de droit communautaire, ou sur les actes étatiques qui s'inscrivent dans le champ d'application du droit communautaire.

La FIDH considère que l'adoption d'une nouvelle Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'UE génère au moins cinq enjeux, lesquels sont interdépendants et devront être examinés attentivement dans le cadre de l'enceinte chargée de l'élaboration de la Charte.

Le présent rapport de position part du postulat que la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne ne se présentera pas sous la forme d'une Déclaration solennelle des institutions communautaires (Commission, Conseil et Parlement européens), mais sous la forme d'un chapitre additionnel au traité sur l'Union européenne ou au traité CE.

Si la Charte ne devait faire l'objet que d'une Déclaration solennelle, sa valeur ajoutée par rapport à la protection déjà reconnue aux droits fondamentaux dans l'Union européenne serait faible ou nulle. L'initiative pourrait dans ce cas être suspectée de ne répondre qu'à des préoccupations démagogiques : gagner l'adhésion des citoyens au projet européen parfois en manque de légitimité. Les personnes vivant sur le territoire de l'UE seraient très surprises si elles ne pouvaient pas se prévaloir des droits inscrits dans la nouvelle Charte. A terme, une telle opération porterait atteinte à la crédibilité du projet européen.

Il convient cependant de préciser que la note est élaborée à un moment où la forme que revêtira la Charte n'a pas encore été tranchée.

I. Droits fondamentaux à reconnaître dans la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Le contenu des droits qui vont figurer dans la Charte doit tenir compte du statut qui est actuellement déjà reconnu aux droits fondamentaux dans l'Union européenne, statut par rapport auquel la Charte doit constituer une source de progrès.

A l'heure actuelle, les droits fondamentaux qui figurent parmi les principes généraux du droit communautaire, dont la CJCE assure le respect, sont puisés aux traditions constitutionnelles communes aux Etats membres et dans les instruments internationaux de protection des droits de l'Homme auxquels les Etats membres ont adhéré ou coopéré. Aux droits ainsi identifiés s'ajoutent des droits propres à l'ordre juridique communautaire. Ces sources s'interpénètrent fréquemment, si bien qu'il n'est pas toujours aisé d'identifier l'origine du droit fondamental que la Cour de justice choisit d'intégrer parmi les principes généraux du droit communautaire.

a) Les droits fondamentaux figurant dans les instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'Homme auxquels les Etats membres ont adhéré ou à l'élaboration desquels ils ont participé

Parmi l'ensemble des droits ainsi consacrés par la jurisprudence communautaire - qui leur reconnaît le statut de principes généraux du droit communautaire, sur lequel l'on revient ci-dessous (Titre IV) -, il en est que la CJCE est tenue de respecter en vertu du droit communautaire lui-même.

L'article 307 du traité CE (anc. art. 234 du traité CE, amendé) dispose en effet que «Les droits et obligations résultant de conventions conclues antérieurement» à leur adhésion aux Communautés européennes par les Etats membres de celles-ci, «entre un ou plusieurs Etats membres, d'une part, et un ou plusieurs Etats tiers, d'autre part, ne sont pas affectés par les dispositions du présent traité» (al. 1). La véritable raison d'être de cet article n'est pas uniquement, comme le suggère la CJCE, de «lever l'obstacle pouvant résulter pour un Etat membre à son adhésion à la Communauté, en ce qui concerne l'exécution de conventions antérieurement conclues avec des Etats tiers». Elle n'est pas politique, mais juridique, en ce qu'elle est imposée par le droit international lui-même, qui ne permet pas qu'un Etat puisse échapper à ses obligations envers des Etats tiers par la conclusion d'un traité international postérieur.

A moins que l'on ne soit prêt à accepter une exception au principe de l'uniformité d'application du droit communautaire, chaque fois que celui-ci impose aux Etats membres des obligations contraires à celles contractées antérieurement par cet Etat dans l'ordre juridique international (ce qui serait la conséquence immédiate de l'article 307 du traité CE), cette disposition vise en réalité à prévenir de telles situations. Elle oblige les institutions communautaires à ne pas prendre de dispositions contraires aux engagements antérieurs des Etats membres, si ces dispositions ne peuvent être respectées de manière uniforme à travers l'ensemble de la Communauté.

Précisément, cela signifie que l'élaboration du droit communautaire doit tenir compte notamment des instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'Homme suivants, chacun de ces instruments ayant été ratifié par au moins un Etat membre de l'Union européenne avant le 1er janvier 1958, date d'entrée en vigueur du traité de Rome, ou avant l'adhésion de cet Etat aux Communautés ou à l'Union européenne :

- la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'Homme et des libertés fondamentales, ouverte à la signature le 4 novembre 1950 (STE, n°5), entrée en vigueur le 3 septembre 1955 à l'égard de cinq des six Etats membres originaires de la Communauté économique européenne ;
- le Protocole n°1 additionnel à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, ouvert à la signature le 20 mars 1952 (STE, n°9), entré en vigueur le 18 mai 1954 ;
- les dispositions de la Charte sociale européenne, ouverte à la signature le 18 octobre 1961 (STE, n°35), entrée en vigueur le 26 février 1965, qui étaient déjà acceptées par les Etats (Royaume-Uni, Irlande, Danemark, Grèce, Espagne, Portugal, Finlande, Suède, Autriche) lors de leurs adhésions respectives aux Communautés ou à l'Union européennes ;
- le Protocole n°4 à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, ouvert à la signature le 16 septembre 1963 (STE, n°46), entré en vigueur le 2 mai 1968 ;
- la Convention internationale sur l'élimination de toutes les formes de discrimination raciale, ouverte à la signature le 21 décembre 1965 (660 UNTS 195), entrée en vigueur le 4 janvier 1969 ;

- le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques, ouvert à la signature le 16 décembre 1966 (999 UNTS 171), entré en vigueur le 23 mars 1976 ;
- le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, ouvert à la signature le 16 décembre 1966 (993 UNTS 3), entré en vigueur le 3 janvier 1976 ;
- la Convention sur l'élimination de toutes les formes de discrimination envers les femmes, ouverte à la signature le 18 décembre 1979, entrée en vigueur le 3 septembre 1981 ;
- la Convention pour la protection des personnes à l'égard du traitement automatisé des données à caractère personnel, ouverte à la signature le 28 janvier 1981 (STE, n°108), entrée en vigueur le 1er octobre 1985 ;
- le Protocole n°7 à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, ouvert à la signature le 22 novembre 1984 (STE, n°117), entré en vigueur le 1er novembre 1988;
- la Convention internationale relative aux droits de l'enfant, ouverte à la signature le 20 novembre 1989, entrée en vigueur le 2 septembre 1990.
- certaines conventions fondamentales adoptées dans le cadre de l'Organisation Internationale du Travail.

L'énumération de ces instruments appelle deux précisions complémentaires, le caractère non limitatif de cette énumération ayant déjà été souligné.

La première précision concerne l'effet normatif de l'article 307 du traité CE . Alors que cette disposition ne constitue que la traduction, dans le traité CE, du principe de la force obligatoire des traités internationaux et de leur effet relatif, la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes a dû se prononcer sur l'étendue des obligations qui résultaient de cet article pour les institutions communautaires, elles-mêmes. Dans ¹⁰des arrêts rendus notamment à propos de l'effet des conventions de l'OIT sur le travail de nuit des femmes ou de la convention unique de 1961 sur les stupéfiants , elle a décidé qu'il résultait de cet article que, lorsqu'une convention conclue par un Etat membre antérieurement à l'entrée en vigueur du traité CEE ou à son adhésion lui imposait certaines obligations, ce qu'il appartient aux juridictions nationales de vérifier, l'exécution de ces obligations internationales peut faire obstacle à l'application du droit communautaire, uniquement dans la mesure où il n'est pas possible à l'Etat d'en assurer l'exécution fidèle de manière compatible avec le droit communautaire. Il en résulte pour les institutions communautaires «l'obligation (...) de ne pas entraver l'exécution des engagements des Etats membres découlant d'une convention antérieure. Toutefois, cette obligation des institutions communautaires ne vise qu'à permettre à l'Etat membre concerné d'observer les engagements qui lui incombent en vertu de la convention antérieure sans, pour autant, lier la Communauté à l'égard de l'Etat membre intéressé» .

Ainsi, si l'article 307 CE permet de justifier certaines dérogations au principe de l'applicabilité uniforme du droit communautaire, et ainsi d'en réduire l'effectivité, il n'a pas pour effet d'imposer de nouvelles obligations à la Communauté dans l'ordre juridique international. Il ne saurait en aller autrement, conformément aux principes généraux du droit international, que dans l'hypothèse où la Communauté se substitue aux engagements internationaux d'un ou de plusieurs Etats membres, par la conclusion d'un nouvel accord qui, avec le consentement de tous les partenaires, prend la place du premier.

Dès lors, si les instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'Homme qu'on a énumérés doivent être pris en compte dans l'élaboration de la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne, ce n'est pas parce que ces instruments obligeraient les Communautés ou l'Union européennes dans l'ordre juridique international, mais parce que si leurs prescrits ne sont pas respectés dans l'élaboration du droit communautaire, l'uniformité d'application de ce dernier à travers l'ensemble de la Communauté européenne est menacée. Cela pourrait notamment conduire à des distorsions de concurrence entre les entreprises selon l'Etat membre sur le territoire duquel elles conduisent leurs activités . Ainsi, par exemple, si les obligations imposées aux entreprises dans le domaine social ne sont pas uniformes sur tout le territoire de l'UE, des distorsions de concurrence en résulteraient.

La seconde précision concerne le cas particulier des instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'Homme qu'un Etat membre ratifie à un moment où il a déjà adhéré à l'Union européenne, et où, par conséquent, l'article 307 du traité CE ne s'applique pas. Les règles qui, dans le droit international public, régissent la conclusion de traités successifs par un même Etat, conduisent à conclure que la responsabilité internationale de cet Etat, vis-à-vis des autres parties au traité postérieur, ne saurait être engagée pour les conséquences qui résultent du traité antérieur. Ainsi notamment, un Etat membre de l'Union européenne ne pourra normalement être tenu de répondre des conséquences qui pourraient résulter des actes de droit dérivé communautaire à l'adoption desquels il n'a pas pu s'opposer, même si ces conséquences sont en violation d'un instrument international de protection des droits de l'Homme auquel il a adhéré, lorsque ce dernier instrument est entré en vigueur à son égard à un moment où il était déjà membre de l'Union européenne.

Par contre, dans cette hypothèse, l'Etat demeure tenu de s'opposer à toute révision des traités constitutifs des Communautés européennes, ou à toute révision du traité sur l'Union européenne, dont l'effet serait d'aboutir à une violation des droits fondamentaux qu'il s'est engagé à respecter. Même si l'adhésion d'un Etat à un instrument international de protection des droits de l'Homme est postérieure à son adhésion à l'Union européenne, le fait de ratifier cet instrument crée dans le chef de l'Etat ce qu'on pourrait qualifier d'obligation de standstill (non-rétrogression) : l'Etat doit s'opposer, au sein de l'Union européenne, à toute évolution qui ne peut avoir lieu sans son assentiment, c'est-à-dire qu'il a le pouvoir d'empêcher, si pareille évolution risque de conduire à une violation des droits de l'Homme que cet Etat s'est internationalement engagé à respecter.

Telle était précisément l'hypothèse de l'affaire Matthews c. Royaume-Uni, qui a donné lieu le 18 février 1999 à un arrêt de la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme dans lequel celle-ci condamne le Royaume-Uni pour avoir consenti à une extension des pouvoirs du Parlement européen lors des négociations du traité de Maastricht sur l'Union européenne, sans obtenir concomitamment une extension du droit de suffrage aux élections européennes au bénéfice des habitants de Gibraltar.

Un aspect notable de l'arrêt est en effet que la disposition violée était l'article 3 du Protocole n°1 à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, alors que ce protocole s'applique à Gibraltar depuis le 25 février 1988, date postérieure à l'adhésion du Royaume-Uni aux Communautés européennes. Selon la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme, «La Convention n'exclut pas le transfert de compétences à des organisations internationales, pourvu que les droits garantis par la Convention continuent d'être 'reconnus'. Pareil transfert ne fait donc pas disparaître la responsabilité des Etats membres».

Ainsi, s'il est loisible aux Etats membres de l'Union européenne de progresser sur la voie de l'union politique, en réalisant une intégration toujours plus poussée, c'est à condition de ne pas aller à l'encontre de leurs engagements internationaux en matière de droits de l'Homme, sans qu'y change quoi que ce soit la circonstance que l'intégration était déjà entamée avant leur adhésion aux instruments où ces engagements sont inscrits.

b) Les droits fondamentaux émanant des traditions constitutionnelles communes des Etats membres

Il résulte du paragraphe précédent que la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne doit au moins comprendre les droits fondamentaux inscrits dans les instruments internationaux de protection des droits de l'Homme énumérés. L'inclusion de ces droits est incontournable si la Charte a notamment pour objectifs (1) de faciliter le respect par les Etats membres de l'Union européenne de leurs engagements internationaux en matière de droits de l'Homme (la Charte devant alors énumérer des droits de façon telle que le processus d'intégration européenne pourra progresser sans que la responsabilité internationale des Etats membres risque d'être engagée au regard des instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'Homme auxquels ils ont adhéré) et (2) d'éviter une mise en cause de l'uniformité d'application du droit communautaire, telle que la rend possible l'exception que ménage l'article 307 du traité CE. Cette disposition peut en effet être invoquée par un particulier devant une juridiction nationale pour inviter celle-ci à écarter la disposition du droit communautaire qui s'avérerait incompatible avec un traité international entré en vigueur à l'égard de l'Etat dont ce juge est l'organe avant son adhésion à l'Union européenne.

La Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne pourrait tendre non seulement à éviter une mise en cause de l'uniformité d'application du droit communautaire sur l'ensemble du territoire de l'Union européenne, mais aussi à assurer la primauté du droit communautaire.

L'on sait en effet que cette primauté n'a été admise, notamment par le Tribunal constitutionnel fédéral allemand, que dans la mesure où la protection des droits fondamentaux dans l'ordre juridique communautaire demeure à un niveau suffisamment protecteur de l'individu. Soucieuse de ne pas reconnaître la subordination du droit communautaire aux ordres juridiques nationaux, y compris dans l'identification des principes généraux du droit communautaire dont elle assure le respect, la CJCE a parfois explicitement refusé d'aligner sa jurisprudence relative aux droits fondamentaux sur le droit national le plus protecteur. Elle court ainsi le risque, délibérément, d'un démenti de la part du juge constitutionnel national, si celui-ci choisit de faire primer les garanties de sa constitution étatique sur la reconnaissance de la primauté du droit communautaire.

Afin de mettre un terme aux doutes qui entourent encore les rapports entre ordre juridique communautaire et ordre juridique national – doutes que la décision du 12 octobre 1993 du Tribunal constitutionnel allemand relative à la constitutionnalité du traité de Maastricht sur l'Union européenne a encore ravivés –, la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne devrait être élaborée avec le souci de faire prévaloir le niveau de protection le plus élevé, en alignant systématiquement le niveau de protection du droit communautaire sur la protection constitutionnelle la plus forte.

c) Autres sources d'inspiration de la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Des motifs proprement juridiques incitent à proposer l'intégration dans la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne des droits figurant dans les deux sources mentionnées. Le même raisonnement ne peut en revanche être tenu à propos de l'intégration des garanties, particulièrement développées, qui figurent dans la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs, adoptée en décembre 1989 par onze Etats des douze Etats alors membres des Communautés européennes .

La FIDH est cependant favorable à l'intégration des garanties de cette Charte des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs dans la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne. La question centrale est celle de l'opportunité d'énoncer des droits sociaux dans la Charte – lesquels droits seraient alors juridiquement contraignants et susceptibles de produire des effets juridiques immédiats. A l'heure actuelle, la Charte de 1989 se limite en effet à définir les objectifs à atteindre par un programme législatif d'adoption du droit communautaire dérivé .

L'ensemble des droits de l'Homme - civils, politiques, économiques, sociaux et culturels – sont interdépendants et indivisibles. Ces principes ont été consacrés dans la Déclaration de Vienne de 1993, mais ont également été régulièrement réaffirmés depuis par l'UE elle-même. Le Premier Rapport annuel de l'Union européenne sur les droits de l'Homme est rédigé en des termes dépourvus de toute ambiguïté à cet égard.

Il serait paradoxal et difficilement justifiable qu'à l'heure où cette indivisibilité et cette interdépendance sont reconnues par l'ensemble des Etats membres de l'UE, le nouvel instrument envisagé ne couvre pas l'ensemble de ces droits.

Par ailleurs, le Premier Rapport annuel de l'Union européenne sur les droits de l'Homme souligne le besoin pour l'Union d'identifier des mesures concrètes que les gouvernements pourraient adopter pour renforcer la jouissance des droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, afin qu'ils deviennent une réalité pour tous. L'adoption d'une Charte incluant les droits économiques, sociaux et culturels serait un premier pas dans le sens d'une promotion et d'une protection renforcées de ces droits.

II. Catégories de droits fondamentaux

La notion de «droits sociaux» figure déjà dans les paragraphes qui précèdent, à différents endroits, pour désigner deux réalités distinctes qu'il importe de ne pas confondre en dépit de leur homonymie.

Le terme «droits sociaux» s'applique d'abord, dans certains cas, aux droits fondamentaux qui sont invoqués dans le contexte de l'emploi ou de la relation de travail : l'on y fera figurer, par exemple, le droit au respect de la vie privée du travailleur dans les rapports d'emploi, le droit à la liberté de circulation comprise comme droit d'accès à un emploi offert, ou la liberté d'association syndicale.

Seuls méritent un bref commentaire les droits qualifiés de «sociaux» non parce qu'ils seraient invoqués dans le contexte d'un rapport d'emploi, mais parce que, impliquant des prestations de la part de l'Etat, leur justiciabilité est parfois contestée, c'est-à-dire qu'il est parfois difficile de les invoquer devant le juge (juge national ou juge communautaire) afin que celui-ci en garantisse le respect. Tel est le cas par exemple du droit à une rémunération équitable (art. 4 de la Charte sociale européenne (CSE)), du droit à une formation professionnelle (art. 9 de la CSE), du droit à une protection sociale adéquate (art. 13 et 14 de la CSE), ou du droit à l'intégration professionnelle et sociale des personnes handicapées (art. 15 CSE).

Le droit international des droits de l'Homme affirme aujourd'hui l'identité de principe entre les droits dits «civils et politiques» et les droits «économiques et sociaux», lesquels réclament généralement une intervention de la part de l'Etat, notamment par l'engagement de ressources budgétaires. Cette tendance n'est pas seulement doctrinale . Elle se manifeste d'ailleurs de façon spectaculaire dans la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme, lorsque celle-ci reconnaît les prolongements d'ordre économique et social que peuvent appeler, pour leur effectivité, les droits que la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme énonce, ce qui se traduit par l'imposition à l'Etat d'obligations positives impliquant l'engagement de certaines ressources budgétaires .

La même tendance se traduit en outre, dans la jurisprudence, par l'émergence d'une série de techniques qui permettent d'atténuer la séparation entre les deux catégories de droits, selon qu'ils appellent ou non des prestations de la part de l'Etat. Ces techniques sont d'autant plus à rappeler qu'elles connaissent des manifestations en droit communautaire, précisément quand ce droit ne peut être appliqué directement et afin que son effectivité soit néanmoins garantie.

Une première technique consiste à permettre au particulier dont le droit à certaines prestations a été violé d'agir contre l'Etat en réparation du dommage subi du fait du manquement de celui-ci à son obligation internationale, au contentieux de la responsabilité . L'utilisation de cette technique afin d'assurer l'effectivité des droits sociaux repose sur l'idée que, s'il peut être délicat pour un juge de se substituer au législateur afin de donner un contenu concret et précis aux droits sociaux invoqués devant lui, en revanche, il n'est pas exclu que le juge puisse en constater la violation lorsque celle-ci est manifeste, et évaluer le dommage éventuel qui en résulte dans le chef du demandeur en responsabilité. Point n'est besoin pour un juge de mettre sur pied un système de formation professionnelle, s'il peut constater le manquement à son obligation internationale dont l'Etat se rend coupable en ne prenant aucune mesure en matière de formation professionnelle, alors que, l'offre et la demande de main d'oeuvre sur le marché du travail ne se rencontrant pas, subsiste un chômage massif. Face à l'inscription de droits sociaux dans la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne, on peut concevoir que le juge communautaire procède vis-à-vis de ces droits comme vis-à-vis des droits attribués par une directive communautaire que l'Etat n'a pas transposée dans les délais impartis : en affirmant que la méconnaissance de l'obligation de mettre en oeuvre lesdits droits «impose un droit à réparation» .

Une seconde technique consiste à imposer le respect d'une obligation de standstill, ou de non-rétrogression, à l'Etat qui s'est engagé au respect de certains droits sociaux qui n'ont pas été définis avec une précision suffisante, et ainsi ne peuvent comme tels fournir au juge le fondement nécessaire à sa décision de justice. Il s'agit à travers l'affirmation d'une telle obligation d'interdire de réduire le niveau de protection déjà atteint de ces droits. Entre les mains du juge, cette doctrine se traduit par le refus d'application de la règle qui, postérieure à la règle d'où l'obligation de standstill est déduite, prétend diminuer le niveau de protection du droit, par rapport au niveau qui était le sien au moment de l'entrée en vigueur de la règle imposant l'obligation de standstill : à la règle qui risque de diminuer le niveau de protection du droit déjà atteint, le juge préférera substituer la règle antérieure, ou le droit commun, qui avait permis d'atteindre tel niveau de protection déterminé. Ici encore, un tel effet de substitution n'est pas inconnu du droit communautaire, la CJCE. ayant, par exemple, résolu par le recours à une technique semblable le problème résultant du silence de la directive 76/207 relative à l'égalité de traitement quant au niveau des sanctions qu'œ la loi nationale d'un Etat membre doit prévoir dans l'hypothèse de violation de la règle de non-discrimination .

Une troisième technique résulte de la combinaison de l'affirmation de tel droit requérant certaines prestations de la part de l'Etat avec la règle de non-discrimination. La jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme admet l'autonomie de la règle qui prohibe toute différence de traitement discriminatoire dans la jouissance des droits et libertés reconnus dans la Convention ; par conséquent, la violation de la disposition garantissant tel droit ou telle liberté combinée avec l'exigence de non-discrimination est concevable, même en l'absence d'une violation de la première disposition considérée isolément. Identiquement ici, l'on peut concevoir que tel droit à une prestation, dont la violation indépendante ne saurait se concevoir faute pour ce droit d'être défini de manière suffisamment précise, produise néanmoins un effet juridique – et soit, à ce titre, justiciable –, si l'on en combine la garantie avec l'interdiction de toute discrimination : ainsi le droit au travail ou le droit au logement, même si l'on devait considérer qu'ils ne peuvent en tant que tels être invoqués devant le juge, pourraient être invoqués en combinaison avec la règle de non-discrimination ; ce pourrait être le cas si les règles relatives à l'accès à l'emploi ou au logement aboutissaient à créer entre catégories de personnes des différences de traitement non susceptibles d'une justification objective et raisonnable. Ce raisonnement est transposable aux droits sociaux qui seraient énumérés dans une Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne : le juge communautaire, ou le juge national en application du droit communautaire, procéderaient comme lorsque, par exemple, des avantages sociaux sont accordés de façon discriminatoire en fonction de la nationalité des tributaires, donc en violation de l'article 12 du traité CE (ancien article 6) .

Enfin, il ne faut pas sous-estimer la capacité du juge de prolonger l'oeuvre du législateur, en identifiant plus concrètement le contenu de certains droits, dont la définition aurait été laissée relativement vague, par le choix de critères leur conférant une précision dont ils auraient été initialement dépourvus. Ainsi le comité européen des droits sociaux, alors appelé comité d'experts indépendants, a-t-il estimé que la notion de «rémunération suffisante» figurant à l'article 4, § 1er, de la Charte sociale européenne, doit s'entendre comme faisant référence à un «seuil de décence» établi à 68 % du salaire moyen national, en tenant compte non seulement du salaire effectivement versé, mais également des mécanismes de redistribution dont bénéficient les couches de la population les plus défavorisées (allocations familiales, aides au logement, prestations sociales importantes par exemple). En application de ce critère, l'Etat lié par cette disposition qui tolère que les travailleurs les moins bien payés se situent en-dessous de ce seuil des 68% du salaire moyen national se place en infraction par rapport à son engagement « à reconnaître le droit des travailleurs à une rémunération suffisante pour leur assurer, ainsi qu'à leurs familles, un niveau de vie décent » (art. 4, § 1er, CSE) .

Cette quatrième technique implique que le juge, appelé à se prononcer sur la violation d'un droit social invoqué devant lui, compense par son inventivité le défaut de précision dans la formulation de ce droit : cela revient pour le juge à se substituer au législateur, afin de compléter son ouvrage. Les autres techniques réclament cependant moins de la part du juge. En accueillant l'action en responsabilité introduite contre l'Etat qui a échoué de manière manifeste à garantir les droits sociaux qu'il s'est engagé à respecter, en imposant de la part de l'Etat qu'il ne diminue pas le niveau de protection déjà atteint de ces droits, en combinant les droits sociaux avec l'exigence de non-discrimination, le juge se contente de reconnaître un effet utile aux droits sociaux ainsi consacrés, tout en demeurant dans les limites de son office.

La FIDH considère que les droits sociaux devraient figurer dans une Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne, au même rang que les droits civils et politiques . La question n'est pas de savoir si ces droits sont justiciables ou non, car ils le sont. En les inscrivant dans la Charte, ses rédacteurs conféreront au juge le pouvoir, potentiellement considérable, de procurer une signification concrète à ces droits ; ils peuvent également privilégier l'option consistant à restreindre les virtualités de ces droits en définissant avec précision leur contenu et leur portée.

Les techniques passées en revue ont été présentées en fonction de l'hypothèse où des droits sociaux seraient invoqués contre l'Etat, et ce lorsque l'Etat met en oeuvre le droit communautaire ou fait usage d'une clause de dérogation prévue par le droit communautaire (voy. ci-dessous, section IV). Rien ne paraît cependant s'opposer à ce qu'il soit recouru à ces techniques afin d'obliger les institutions communautaires, dans les limites de leurs compétences, à respecter les droits sociaux. La possibilité d'engager la responsabilité extra-contractuelle des Communautés lorsque celles-ci se rendent coupables d'une violation manifeste des droits sociaux qu'elles se sont engagées à respecter (a), la possibilité de postuler l'annulation ou de faire constater l'invalidité de l'acte de droit communautaire dérivé qui, soit, diminue le niveau de protection déjà atteint des droits sociaux fondamentaux (b), soit reconnaît ces droits de façon discriminatoire (c), peuvent s'inscrire dans les modalités que recouvre déjà actuellement le contrôle juridictionnel communautaire.

III. Garanties juridictionnelles

L'utilité de la reconnaissance des droits fondamentaux est fonction des voies de recours qui permettent d'en réclamer le contrôle juridictionnel. Or, le système des voies de recours de l'ordre juridique communautaire présente deux insuffisances, l'une plus grave, l'autre plus marginale.

a) Le recours direct du particulier en annulation de l'acte communautaire de portée générale

La première insuffisance résulte des limites que met la jurisprudence actuelle de la CJCE à la recevabilité des recours directs en annulation du particulier, dans les conditions que prévoit l'article 230, al. 4 du traité CE. Il est exceptionnel que de tels recours puissent être reçus lorsqu'ils sont dirigés contre des actes communautaires de portée générale, c'est-à-dire contre des actes qui ne constituent pas des « décisions » au sens matériel du terme. Il en résulte qu'il est plus aisé pour les particuliers qui s'estiment victimes d'une violation de leurs droits fondamentaux d'introduire une requête en vertu de l'article 34 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, y compris lorsque la violation alléguée a sa source dans un acte normatif de portée générale, que d'agir devant le juge communautaire en annulation des actes communautaires de portée générale.

Le problème qui résulte de cette situation est double. Tout d'abord, il en résulte une lacune dans la protection des droits fondamentaux des destinataires du droit communautaire. Dans son Rapport de mai 1995 sur certains aspects de l'application du traité sur l'Union européenne, la Cour de justice notait : « L'on peut (...) se demander si le recours en annulation prévu par l'article 173 du TCE et par les dispositions correspondantes des autres traités qui n'est ouvert aux particuliers qu'à l'égard des actes qui les concernent directement et individuellement est suffisant pour leur garantir une protection juridictionnelle effective contre les atteintes à leurs droits fondamentaux pouvant résulter de l'activité législative des institutions » (point 20). Elle semblait ainsi rejoindre une doctrine majoritaire qui regrette depuis les arrêts de 1962-1963 Confédération nationale des producteurs des fruits et légumes et Plaumann les limites mises à la recevabilité des recours en annulation introduits par les particuliers contre les actes communautaires ayant une portée générale .

L'autre difficulté résulte des différences qui séparent, sur le plan de la recevabilité des recours des particuliers contre les actes normatifs de portée générale, les interprétations jurisprudentielles de l'article 230, al. 4, du traité CE, d'une part, et de l'article 34 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, d'autre part. Cette situation implique en effet que tel individu qui estime ses droits fondamentaux lésés par l'existence d'un acte normatif communautaire de portée générale pourra être tenté d'introduire une requête auprès de la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme, en prenant appui sur sa qualité de «victime» au sens de l'article 34 de la Convention, sans que l'on puisse lui reprocher de n'avoir pas agi en annulation devant le juge communautaire, et sans, par conséquent, qu'on puisse même songer à lui opposer l'exception de l'absence d'épuisement des voies internes de recours (art. 35 de la Convention). L'ordre juridique communautaire serait plutôt mieux préservé, et non menacé, d'un contrôle de la part de la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme s'il procédait à un élargissement du recours direct en annulation du particulier.

Si l'utilité d'un élargissement des conditions du recours en annulation introduit par le particulier est généralement admise, les modalités qu'il devrait prendre ne sont pas toujours comprises de façon identique. La formulation choisie par la CJCE pour exprimer sa préoccupation à cet égard indique que sa préférence irait à un recours limité à la protection des droits fondamentaux, sur le modèle du Verfassungsbeschwerde prévu à l'article 93, § 4, de la Loi fondamentale allemande . D'autres imaginent un recours général, visant à faire sanctionner toute illégalité figurant dans un acte communautaire de droit dérivé, qu'elle conduise à une violation des droits fondamentaux ou non, et à la seule condition que le requérant ait un intérêt à agir contre l'acte querellé. Le choix entre ces différentes pistes doit tenir compte non seulement de la nécessité de ne pas encore surcharger un juge communautaire qui éprouve de plus en plus de difficultés à faire face au flot de recours ou de renvois qui lui sont présentés, mais également en fonction de la faisabilité – douteuse, et cela de l'avis même des meilleurs spécialistes de la matière – de la solution intermédiaire préconisée par la CJCE dans son rapport de mai 1995.

b) Le recours en annulation dans l'intérêt collectif

Certains ont suggéré que le traité reconnaisse le recours en annulation dans l'intérêt collectif, introduit par des personnes morales en vue de la protection de leur objet social, y compris contre les actes communautaires normatifs de portée générale.

Si elle était admise, une telle modification du régime du recours en annulation aboutirait à une décentralisation considérable de la mission de surveillance du traité que celui-ci confie encore essentiellement à la Commission européenne et aux États membres. Pourtant, cette solution pourrait s'avérer à certains égards plus prometteuse que l'extension pure et simple du droit du particulier d'agir en annulation contre des actes communautaires de portée générale. Spécialement, elle permettrait de garantir la représentativité de l'auteur du recours en annulation, laquelle est plus aisée à contrôler dans le chef d'un groupement que dans le chef d'un individu déterminé. Elle présenterait aussi l'avantage, dans les termes mêmes qu'emploie le juge communautaire, de permettre «d'éviter l'introduction d'un nombre élevé de recours différents» dirigés contre les mêmes actes communautaires, ce qui présente, note le juge, des «avantages procéduraux» .

Aussi cette solution mérite-t-elle qu'on l'étudie avec soin, même si l'on doit définir les limites dans lesquelles le recours en annulation dans l'intérêt collectif doit être admis, par analogie avec le droit des groupements d'agir en justice, dans les ordres juridiques étatiques, au contentieux administratif ou au contentieux de la constitutionnalité des lois.

La FIDH est convaincue que toute tentative d'améliorer la protection des droits fondamentaux dans l'ordre juridique communautaire devrait s'accompagner d'un assouplissement des conditions d'accès au juge communautaire ou, à défaut, d'une extension des circonstances dans lesquelles les juridictions nationales des États membres doivent accueillir l'action en justice portée devant elles et qui tend à la préservation de la légalité communautaire.

IV. Conséquences de la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne sur la définition des compétences de la Communauté européenne

L'article 25, § 1er, de la Déclaration des libertés et droits fondamentaux adoptée par le Parlement européen le 12 avril 1989 prévoyait que «la présente Déclaration protège toute personne dans le champ d'application du droit communautaire».

Cette formulation est conforme au statut que reçoivent aujourd'hui les droits fondamentaux comme faisant partie des principes généraux du droit communautaire dont la CJCE assure le respect. Celle-ci a en effet estimé pouvoir imposer le respect des droits fondamentaux aux actes communautaires et aux actes étatiques s'inscrivant dans le domaine d'application du droit communautaire. La CJCE contrôle ainsi la conformité des actes des Etats membres aux droits fondamentaux figurant parmi les principes généraux du droit communautaire, soit, lorsque ces actes des Etats membres prétendent faire emploi d'une exception qu'autorise le droit communautaire, soit, lorsqu'ils appliquent le droit communautaire ou lui procurent exécution, soit encore lorsqu'ils s'inscrivent dans une procédure conduisant à l'adoption d'un acte communautaire. Par contre, elle se refuse à contrôler la compatibilité avec les droits fondamentaux inclus parmi les principes généraux du droit communautaire des mesures nationales ne présentant aucun lien de rattachement avec le droit communautaire.

Aux termes de l'arrêt Cinéthèque du 11 juillet 1985 : «S'il est vrai qu'il incombe à la Cour d'assurer le respect des droits fondamentaux dans le domaine propre du droit communautaire, il ne lui appartient pas, pour autant, d'examiner la compatibilité, avec la convention européenne, d'une loi nationale qui se situe (...) dans un domaine qui relève de l'appréciation du législateur national». Comme un arrêt ERT du 18 juin 1991 l'illustre parfaitement, le statut reconnu aux droits fondamentaux en tant que principes généraux du droit communautaire ne prive pas ces droits de toute portée autonome vis-à-vis des actes des Etats membres qui s'inscrivent dans le domaine d'application du droit communautaire : la reconnaissance de ces droits implique que des actes étatiques, par ailleurs conformes aux autres exigences du droit communautaire, pourraient être jugés incompatibles avec le droit communautaire s'ils sont adoptés en violation des droits fondamentaux. Par contre, les rapports juridiques régis par le seul droit national, c'est-à-dire vis-à-vis desquels le droit communautaire est indifférent, ne sont soumis qu'aux règles nationales ou, le cas échéant, aux instruments internationaux de protection des droits de l'Homme applicables dans cet Etat, sans que les principes généraux du droit communautaire trouvent à s'y appliquer.

Il convient d'interpréter dans le même sens l'article 6, § 2, du traité sur l'Union européenne (anc. art. F, § 2), qui énonce que «l'Union respecte les droits fondamentaux, tels qu'ils sont garantis par la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'Homme (...) et tels qu'ils résultent des traditions constitutionnelles communes aux Etats membres, en tant que principes généraux du droit communautaire».

Cette dernière disposition, initialement introduite par le traité de Maastricht sur l'Union européenne du 7 février 1992, n'a eu d'autre effet que de constitutionnaliser la jurisprudence de la CJCE mentionnée précédemment. Il ne s'agissait pas d'affirmer une compétence de l'Union ou de la Communauté européennes en matière de droits fondamentaux, ni de fournir à la CJCE une base juridique sur laquelle fonder un éventuel contrôle de la conformité de l'ensemble des actes des Etats membres par rapport aux exigences des droits fondamentaux ; il s'agissait uniquement d'interdire à la fois aux institutions communautaires et aux Etats membres, dans la mesure où ils agissent dans le cadre du droit communautaire, de prendre des dispositions contraires à ces droits. Reconnaître aux droits fondamentaux un tel statut n'affecte pas l'étendue des compétences de la Communauté ou de l'Union européennes par rapport aux compétences des Etats membres.

Il n'est manifestement pas envisagé de reconnaître un statut différent aux droits figurant dans la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne. Pourtant la question se pose de savoir si l'insertion dans le traité CE d'un catalogue de droits fondamentaux ne peut pas conduire, au moins à terme, à une extension des compétences de la Communauté européenne, d'une part, à un rôle plus actif de la CJCE dans la garantie des droits fondamentaux par les Etats membres, d'autre part. Ces deux questions sont liées : elles affectent l'une et l'autre la répartition des compétences entre la Communauté et les Etats membres.

Cette question comporte différents aspects :

1. La plupart des droits fondamentaux dont l'insertion dans la Charte est envisagée sont susceptibles de faire l'objet de certaines restrictions, pour autant que celles-ci soient «prévues par la loi», et puissent être considérées comme «nécessaires, dans une société démocratique», à la réalisation de certaines fins considérées comme légitimes. La première de ces conditions, traditionnellement appelée condition de légalité, signifie que des restrictions ne peuvent être apportées à un droit fondamental qu'au travers d'une réglementation suffisamment précise et accessible, permettant au titulaire de droits de prévoir avec un degré de certitude suffisant les limites qui s'attachent à l'exercice de ces droits ; s'il estime que la restriction qui lui est imposée est arbitraire, il peut solliciter le juge pour qu'il contrôle les conditions entourant cette restriction.

Cette condition de légalité n'est pas problématique lorsqu'elle intervient dans le cadre du contrôle du respect des droits fondamentaux par des mesures étatiques qui, soit parce qu'elles apportent une restriction à une liberté, restriction que prévoit le droit communautaire, soit parce qu'elles mettent en oeuvre le droit communautaire, s'inscrivent dans son champ d'application, et doivent dès lors être conformes aux droits fondamentaux contenus dans une Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne.

En revanche, lorsque telle mesure de droit communautaire dérivé crée une ingérence dans un droit fondamental de l'individu, mais sans que le droit communautaire définisse le régime juridique de l'ingérence litigieuse, le juge communautaire pourrait être amené à constater que cette condition de légalité est violée.

Une telle appréciation aurait pour conséquence d'imposer aux institutions communautaires qu'elles adoptent une réglementation suffisamment précise et complète en telle matière, afin de doter leurs interventions du cadre légal qui leur fait défaut, ou qui n'est pas suffisamment précis. Certes, cette exigence n'affecte pas directement la répartition des compétences entre le niveau communautaire et le niveau étatique ; mais elle peut impliquer que la Communauté européenne soit tenue d'adopter des réglementations particulièrement détaillées, le cas échéant en limitant la marge d'appréciation des autorités nationales lorsqu'elles mettent en oeuvre le droit communautaire.

Tel pourrait être le cas, à tout le moins, des actes de droit communautaire dérivé qui sont directement applicables par les autorités nationales, et qui aboutissent par conséquent à imposer au particulier l'adoption de comportements déterminés. En effet, dès lors que ces actes imposent certains comportements sous la menace de sanctions, communautaires ou nationales, l'imprécision des conditions entourant la restriction dont est assorti le droit considéré risque d'inciter le bénéficiaire de ce droit à ne pas l'exercer par crainte de subir des sanctions, dont il ne sait pas exactement dans quelles hypothèses elles peuvent être imposées.

2. L'insertion dans le traité CE d'une Charte de droits fondamentaux encouragerait un courant qui tend à présenter la garantie des droits fondamentaux, à un niveau de protection uniforme sur l'ensemble du territoire de l'Union européenne, comme un aspect des libertés fondamentales de circulation. Menacés de voir certains de leurs droits fondamentaux violés, certains bénéficiaires des libertés de circulation prévues en droit communautaire pourraient renoncer à exercer ces libertés qui leur sont formellement reconnues.

Cela justifierait que les droits fondamentaux soient considérés comme invoqués «dans le domaine d'application du droit communautaire» dès l'instant où une telle liberté de circulation a été exercée et qu'il en est résulté une violation d'un droit fondamental, ou lorsque cette liberté n'a pas pu être exercée en raison de la crainte, bénéficiaire de la liberté de circulation de voir ses droits fondamentaux violés s'il devait accepter un emploi, s'établir comme indépendant, ou offrir des services dans un autre Etat membre . L'on peut rappeler à cet égard que la directive 95/46/CE du Parlement européen et du Conseil du 24 octobre 1995 relative à la protection des personnes physiques à l'égard du traitement des données à caractère personnel et à la libre circulation de ces données «précise et amplifie» les garanties de la Convention n°108 conclue le 28 janvier 1981 dans le cadre du Conseil de l'Europe dans la même matière, notamment en «considérant que l'établissement et le fonctionnement du marché intérieur dans lequel (...) la libre circulation des marchandises, des personnes, des services et des capitaux est assurée, nécessitent non seulement que des données à caractère personnel puissent circuler librement d'un Etat membre à l'autre, mais également que les droits fondamentaux des personnes soient sauvegardés» ; la directive est adoptée, du reste, sur la base juridique de l'article 100 A du traité CE (actuel art. 95), qui prévoit la procédure applicable à l'adoption des mesures «relatives au rapprochement des dispositions législatives, réglementaires et administratives des Etats membres qui ont pour objet l'établissement et le fonctionnement du marché intérieur».

L'extension de cette tendance dans le droit communautaire impliquerait que le domaine d'application du droit communautaire, dans lequel les droits fondamentaux reconnus en droit communautaire sont susceptibles d'être invoqués, s'étendrait à toute hypothèse où une liberté communautaire a été exercée mais a abouti à placer celui qui a exercé cette liberté sous la juridiction d'un Etat qui viole ses droits, ou au contraire n'a pas pu être exercée en raison de ce que le titulaire de la liberté de circulation a eu des motifs de craindre de subir cette violation s'il en faisait usage.

Le nombre de situations où pourraient être invoqués les droits fondamentaux reconnus en droit communautaire se trouverait évidemment radicalement étendu à la suite d'une telle évolution. Pourtant l'on ne serait pas encore, pour autant, dans l'hypothèse maximaliste où toute violation des droits fondamentaux sous la juridiction d'un Etat membre de l'Union européenne serait interprétée comme une violation du droit communautaire, puisqu'un certain élément de rattachement au droit communautaire demeurerait requis.

3. Il résulte de la considération précédente que l'expression «dans le domaine d'application du droit communautaire» n'est pas toujours univoque, même si elle doit servir explicitement à éviter que l'inscription des droits fondamentaux dans le traité CE ne conduise à un bouleversement des compétences respectives de la Communauté européenne et des Etats membres. L'on doit encore souligner que la formulation de pareille limitation n'est pas la seule option ouverte.

Une autre option consisterait, sur le modèle de la clause de non-discrimination inscrite dans le traité CE par le traité d'Amsterdam du 2 octobre 1997 (nouvel article 13 du traité CE) ou sur celui de l'égalité de traitement (actuel article 141 du traité CE), à prévoir que les institutions communautaires reçoivent la compétence de prendre les mesures propres à garantir les droits fondamentaux figurant dans la Charte des droits incluse dans le traité CE.

Certes, une telle perspective paraît pour l'heure peu réaliste. Elle impliquerait en effet une extension des compétences de la Communauté, et un développement de l'activité législative de ses institutions, qui paraissent aller à contre-courant de la tendance actuelle, qui encourage plutôt une subsidiarité de l'intervention. En outre, même si une telle option aurait pour elle de créer dans l'ensemble de l'Union européenne un espace où les droits fondamentaux bénéficieraient d'une protection uniforme, contribuant de la sorte à l'effectivité des libertés de circulation dans cet espace, force est de constater que cette uniformité résulte déjà, très largement, du fait que tous les Etats membres de l'Union européenne sont Parties à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme.

4. Enfin, quelle que soit en définitive l'option choisie entre les différentes possibilités qui viennent d'être passées en revue, il convient de souligner que l'insertion d'une Charte des droits fondamentaux dans le traité CE devrait s'accompagner d'une modification du traité permettant de surmonter l'obstacle que, dans son avis 2/94 du 28 mars 1996, la CJCE voyait à l'adhésion de la Communauté européenne à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme .

Rendu à la veille de l'ouverture de la Conférence intergouvernementale qui allait déboucher sur le traité d'Amsterdam du 2 octobre 1997, l'avis 2/94 constatait qu'en raison de l'«envergure constitutionnelle» de l'adhésion envisagée, le recours à l'article 235 du traité CE (actuel article 308) ne pouvait suffire à lui fournir sa base juridique, à défaut d'une compétence plus explicite de la Communauté européenne dans le domaine des droits de l'Homme. Les négociateurs du traité d'Amsterdam n'ont cependant pas investi la Communauté européenne d'une telle compétence . Il est probable qu'il ne suffise pas, pour surmonter l'obstacle que la CJCE voyait à l'adhésion de la Communauté à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, de faire figurer la protection des droits de l'Homme parmi les missions et objectifs de la Communauté (articles 2 et 3 du traité CE) : la création d'une nouvelle compétence, plus explicite, paraît requise .

V. Bénéficiaires des droits fondamentaux

Les instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'Homme, et la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme en particulier, garantissent ces droits à toute personne placée sous la juridiction des Etats que ces instruments obligent, indépendamment de la nationalité de ces personnes .

Certes, les garanties de la Charte sociale européenne, comme celles de la Charte sociale révisée de 1996, ne sont reconnues aux étrangers que «dans la mesure où ils sont ressortissants des autres Parties résidant légalement ou travaillant régulièrement sur le territoire de la Partie intéressée (...)» . Mais il convient de relativiser la portée de cette restriction, d'un double point de vue.

a) S'agissant de droits aussi fondamentaux que le sont, par exemple, le droit à la protection de la santé (art. 11 CSE) ou le droit à l'assistance sociale et médicale (art. 13 CSE), il est très contestable d'en réserver le bénéfice aux personnes séjournant légalement dans l'Etat où elles se trouvent. Si certains droits économiques et sociaux, notamment liés aux prestations de sécurité sociale, peuvent être subordonnés à la régularité du séjour sur le territoire de l'Union européenne du ressortissant d'un Etat tiers, les droits à l'assistance médicale et sociale sont au cœur de la dignité humaine et la privation de ces droits peut constituer un traitement inhumain et dégradant. Certains droits économiques et sociaux devraient ainsi être reconnus non seulement aux résidents légaux, mais également aux demandeurs et aux personnes en situation illégale. De même, le droit des enfants à l'instruction ne peut être refusé au motif que la situation administrative des parents ne serait pas régulière, et ne saurait être subordonné à la légalité du séjour.

Il faut par ailleurs garder à l'esprit la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'Homme, le Pacte international relatifs aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, ainsi que la Déclaration de l'OIT sur les droits fondamentaux des travailleurs (juin 1998).

On peut de plus s'interroger sur l'utilité d'exclure de ces garanties les personnes qui ne sont pas en ordre de séjour car, d'une part, une série de dispositions de la Charte sociale européenne ne peuvent par principe s'appliquer à ces personnes, parce qu'elles sont liées à l'exercice d'un emploi auquel elles n'ont pas accès, et, d'autre part, la différence entre la situation d'un étranger en séjour légal sur le territoire d'un Etat partie et celle d'un étranger qui n'est pas en ordre de séjour est suffisamment objective pour justifier, le cas échéant, une différence de traitement entre les deux situations, pour autant qu'elle soit raisonnablement justifiée.

b) Le fait de réserver aux seuls nationaux des Etats parties à la Charte sociale européenne révisée le bénéfice des droits qui s'y trouvent, suivant le modèle de la réciprocité, ne paraît guère compatible avec l'exigence de non-discrimination qui figure, dans la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, en tant que garantie complémentaire à chacun des droits protégés. Dans une affaire où était précisément revendiqué le bénéfice d'un droit social patrimonial - une allocation de chômage d'urgence -, la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme a affirmé que «seules des considérations très fortes peuvent [l]'amener (...) à estimer compatible avec la Convention une différence de traitement exclusivement fondée sur la nationalité». Il est ainsi certain que, là du moins où c'est un même droit qui est reconnu à la fois par la jurisprudence relative à la Charte sociale européenne et par la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, la restriction de la protection aux seuls nationaux des autres Etats parties ne pourra pas être admise sans autre justification, plus circonstanciée.

Même dans les autres champs, une différence de traitement fondée uniquement sur la nationalité du bénéficiaire potentiel d'un droit ne semble pas pertinente : soit cette différence de traitement peut être justifiée, et alors les limites mêmes qu'impose la règle de non-discrimination suffisent à justifier cette différence de traitement – la règle de non-discrimination n'interdit pas une différence de traitement fondée sur une justification objective et raisonnable –; ou bien elle ne peut être justifiée, et alors elle constitue une discrimination, ce que prohibent d'autres instruments internationaux de protection des droits de l'Homme.

La FIDH considère absolument fondamental que les droits figurant dans une Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne soient reconnus à toute personne, sans discrimination. Seule une telle définition des bénéficiaires des droits fondamentaux est conforme au droit international des droits de l'Homme et au principe d'universalité, qui en est un des fondements essentiels. Des différences de traitement pourront ensuite être établies entre les ressortissants d'Etats membres et les ressortissants d'Etats tiers, à condition cependant qu'elles demeurent objectivement justifiables et proportionnées à l'objectif, dont la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme a reconnu la légitimité, de constituer entre Etats de l'Union européenne «un ordre juridique spécifique, ayant instauré de surcroît une citoyenneté propre».

Il est essentiel de délier nettement la reconnaissance des droits fondamentaux dans l'Union européenne de la notion de citoyenneté de l'Union européenne, et cela d'autant plus que la citoyenneté européenne est fondée sur le critère de la nationalité d'un Etat membre. Il convient d'ailleurs de noter que certains droits énoncés dans la deuxième partie du traité CE («La citoyenneté de l'Union») sont d'ores et déjà étendus aux personnes physiques résidant dans un Etat membre (droit de pétition au Parlement européen (art. 194 du traité CE), droit de s'adresser au médiateur de l'Union européenne (art. 195 du traité CE)). Il serait inadmissible que la nouvelle Charte marquât une régression à cet égard.

VI. Conclusion

La Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne devrait tendre à un niveau de protection qui soit au moins équivalent à celui des instruments internationaux de protection des droits de l'Homme liant au moins un Etat membre de l'Union européenne au moment de son adhésion aux Communautés européennes, et aux dispositions constitutionnelles nationales les plus protectrices relatives aux droits de l'Homme. C'est à cette condition seulement que l'uniformité d'application du droit communautaire et la primauté dont il bénéficie dans l'application qu'en procurent les juridictions nationales seront préservées.

Les droits sociaux devraient figurer dans la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne, à l'instar des droits civils et politiques. Le juge devant qui ces droits seront invoqués, lorsque pareille invocation a lieu dans le domaine d'application du droit communautaire, dispose de techniques permettant de leur reconnaître un effet juridique. Le juge communautaire a développé ces techniques, notamment au moment où il a dû garantir l'effectivité des droits attribués par voie de directives, à l'instar du juge national lorsqu'il lui a fallu reconnaître la juridicité des droits sociaux.

L'accès des particuliers, voire des organisations non-gouvernementales et autres associations intéressées, aux garanties juridictionnelles (CJCE) devrait être élargi dans le domaine des droits fondamentaux.

L'inscription de droits fondamentaux dans une Charte propre à l'Union européenne n'opérera normalement reconnaissance de ces droits que dans le domaine d'application du droit communautaire ; l'identification exacte de ce que recouvre ce domaine d'application n'est cependant pas définitivement arrêtée. Aussi conviendrait-il de préciser de manière claire ce que signifie cette expression. En outre, il conviendrait de décider si, oui ou non, l'affirmation des droits fondamentaux investit les institutions communautaires d'une compétence nouvelle, celle de prendre les mesures propres à mettre en oeuvre les droits reconnus à l'échelle de la Communauté. Enfin, il faudrait prévoir dans le Traité une compétence nouvelle dans le chef de la Communauté européenne, celle d'adhérer aux instruments internationaux de protection des droits de l'Homme qui présentent un rapport avec les compétences déjà attribuées à la Communauté.

Les droits fondamentaux inscrits dans la Charte envisagée doivent être reconnus à tous, sans distinction aucune, notamment de nationalité. Seuls les droits politiques stricto sensu, c'est-à-dire les droits d'électorat et d'éligibilité actuellement reconnus aux citoyens de l'Union européenne, quel que soit leur Etat membre de résidence, peuvent être attachés à la citoyenneté de l'Union européenne. Ces droits devraient cependant également être étendus aux personnes résidant légalement sur le territoire de l'Union, sous certaines conditions à préciser.

D'autres droits jusqu'à présent réservés aux seuls ressortissants d'Etats membres, notamment les droits liés à la liberté de circulation, ne devraient pas – dans la logique même d'un espace sans frontières intérieures – être subordonnés à cette condition de nationalité. Dès à présent, l'exigence de non-discrimination détermine dans certaines limites l'exclusion de certaines personnes du bénéfice de ces droits. L'exigence de non-discrimination exclut en effet qu'une différence de traitement soit justifiée par le seul argument formel d'une différence de nationalité. On peut du reste considérer que le droit de «circuler librement» et de «choisir librement sa résidence» (art. 2, Protocole n°4 à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme), que la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme reconnaît à «quiconque se trouve régulièrement sur le territoire d'un Etat», sera à l'avenir interprété de façon à imposer l'extension de ces droits à toute personne se trouvant sur le territoire de l'UE dans le cadre communautaire, à mesure même que progresse l'intégration de l'Union européenne.

5. Cette expression résulte de l'arrêt rendu dans l'affaire Nold le 14 mai 1974, lequel est intervenu avant que la Convention en cause n'entre en vigueur à l'égard de la France; c'est pourquoi la CJCE ne pouvait pas retenir simplement "les instruments internationaux auxquels les Etats membres ont adhéré".

8. Ne sont énumérés ici que les instruments les plus importants, dont l'objet présente certains liens avec les compétences communautaires, et qui garantissent certains droits substantiels, à l'exclusion d'autres instruments dont l'objet est sans lien avec les compétences des Communautés européennes, ou qui sont relatifs aux mécanismes de contrôle dans le système des Nations Unies ou dans celui du Conseil de l'Europe.

9. Le second alinéa de l'article 307 du traité C.E., qui figurait déjà dans l'article 234 du traité C.E. avant sa révision par le traité d'Amsterdam, précise : «Dans la mesure où ces conventions ne sont pas compatibles avec le présent traité, le ou les Etats membres en cause recourent à tous les moyens appropriés pour éliminer les incompatibilités constatées». Les traités ultérieurs n'ont apporté aucune modification à cet article, devenu art. 307 par l'effet de la renumérotation opérée par le traité d'Amsterdam. Du second alinéa, il se peut qu'il faille déduire dans le chef des Etats membres de l'Union une obligation de dénoncer le traité international incompatible avec le respect de leurs obligations communautaires. C'est en tout cas l'attitude adoptée par l'Etat français à la suite de l'arrêt Stoeckel de la Cour de justice (C.J.C.E., 25 juillet 1991, Stoeckel, C-345/89, Rec., p. I-4047) : la dénonciation de la convention n°89 de l'O.I.T. est intervenue le 26 février 1992, soit avant le prononcé de l'arrêt Lévy (C.J.C.E., 2 août 1993, Lévy, C-158/91, Rec., p. I-4287), dans lequel la Cour de justice admet pour la première fois que l'article 234 du traité C.E.E. fait obstacle à ce qu'il puisse être reproché à l'Etat partie à ladite convention de ne pas respecter la directive 76/207, sur le point où une incompatibilité existe. Voy. sur ceci les concl. de l'avocat général G. Tesoro du 16 janvier 1997 préc. C.J.C.E., 13 mars 1997, Commission des C.E. c. Rép. française, C-197/96. Si une telle obligation de dénonciation devait être affirmée - l'arrêt du 13 mars 1997 ne fournit cependant aucun indice à cet égard -, les conséquences en seraient considérables, la plupart des instruments internationaux relatifs aux droits de l'Homme précités fixant des conditions relativement peu exigeantes à leur propre dénonciation.

(...) There is no Covenant right which could not, in the great majority of <national legal> systems, be considered to possess at least some significant justiciable dimensions. It is sometimes suggested that matters involving the allocation of resources should be left to the political authorities rather than the courts. While the respective competences of the various branches of government must be respected, it is appropriate to acknowledge that courts are generally already involved in a considerable range of matters which have important resource implications. The adoption of a rigid classification of economic, social and cultural rights which* puts them, by definition, beyond the reach of the courts would thus be arbitrary and incompatible with the principle that the two sets of human rights are indivisible and interdependent. It would also drastically curtail the capacity of the courts to protect the rights of the most vulnerable and disadvantaged groups in society» (para. 10).

Nihoul, «La recevabilité des recours en annulation introduits par un particulier à l'encontre d'un acte communautaire de portée générale», R.T.D.E., 1994, pp. 171-194.

33. C'est là aussi ce qu'avait envisagé la présidence irlandaise du second semestre 1996, le recours du particulier contre des actes communautaires de portée générale devant se trouver limitée à la protection de ses droits fondamentaux. Voy. Conference of The Representatives of the Governments of the Member States, Presidency Suggested Approach, 8 octobre 1996, CONF/3945/96, p. 4.

34. Il faut cependant souligner que lors d'une discussion informelle avec un des auteurs de ce rapport, le juge K. Lenaerts a souligné la difficulté qu'il y a à faire dépendre la recevabilité d'un recours de l'identité des moyens invoqués à l'appui du recours, surtout lorsque, ces moyens devant être pris de la violation des droits fondamentaux dans la proposition de la Cour de justice des C.E., ils peuvent couvrir une gamme d'arguments extrêmement vaste. En effet, le jugement de recevabilité sera très proche, du point de vue de la motivation qui sera requise et du point de vue de l'étude que l'affaire requiert de la part du juge, du jugement rendu au fond.

47. Annexe à la Charte sociale européenne révisée: «Portée de la Charte sociale européenne révisée en ce qui concerne les personnes protégées». La Charte sociale européenne se distingue à cet égard de la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme. Une autre trace en est les rédactions différentes que reçoit la clause de non-discrimination dans chacun de ces instruments : comp., avec l'article 14 de la C.E.D.H. (qui fait référence, entre autres motifs de discrimination prohibés, à l'«origine nationale»), l. E de la Charte sociale européenne révisée (qui ne réfère pas à ce critère de distinction mais seulement à l'«ascendance nationale», alors que le texte est manifestement inspiré de l'art. 14 C.E.D.H.). Ces deux dispositions, cependant, affirment que les motifs de distinction repris ne doivent pas être conçus comme limitativement énumérés. Aux termes du rapport explicatif de la Charte sociale révisée, «Alors que l'origine nationale n'est pas un motif de discrimination acceptable, l'exigence d'une citoyenneté spécifique peut être acceptée sous certaines circonstances, par exemple pour le droit d'être employé dans les forces armées ou dans l'administration» (§ 133). Ce passage semble en contradiction avec l'Annexe à la Charte sociale européenne révisée, dont on a rappelé le texte.
48. De ce point de vue, l'article E de la Charte sociale révisée, relatif à la non-discrimination, aurait largement suffi à justifier que les étrangers qui ne sont pas en ordre de séjour soient exclus du bénéfice de certaines prestations, sans qu'il soit nécessaire de les en écarter d'office.
49. Cour eur. dr. h., arrêt Gaygusuz c. Autriche du 16 septembre 1996, § 42.
50. Il faut s'attendre à des interactions, surtout, en ce qui concerne la liberté d'association syndicale (art. 11 C.E.D.H. et art. 5 de la Charte sociale révisée), le droit aux prestations de sécurité sociale (art. 1er du Prot. n°1 à la C.E.D.H. et art. 12 de la Charte sociale révisée), le droit de l'enfant à une protection de la part de l'Etat contre «la négligence, la violence ou l'exploitation» (art. 8 C.E.D.H. (voy. Cour eur. D.H., arrêt Stubbings c. Royaume-Uni du 22 octobre 1996, § 64: "Les enfants et autres personnes vulnérables ont droit à la protection de l'Etat, sous la forme d'une prévention efficace les mettant à l'abri de sortes aussi graves d'ingérence dans des aspects essentiels de leur vie privée") et art. 17, § 1er, de la Charte sociale révisée), et le droit au respect de la vie familiale (art. 8 C.E.D.H. et art. 16 de la Charte sociale révisée).
51. En ce sens, C. Pettiti, «La Charte sociale européenne révisée», Rev. trim. dr. h., 1997, pp. 3-16, ici pp. 13-14. Cependant, contrairement à ce que l'auteur suggère, nous ne sommes pas d'avis que la règle de non-discrimination conduit simplement à étendre la bénéfice des dispositions de la Charte sociale révisée aux seuls travailleurs étrangers «de la nationalité d'un des Etats membres du Conseil de l'Europe»: l'arrêt Gaygusuz ne contient nullement cette restriction.

Annexe 1 : Conclusions de la présidence

Conseil européen de Tampere (15 - 16 octobre 1999)

Annexe : Composition, méthode de travail et modalités pratiques de l'enceinte pour l'élaboration du projet de charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne envisagé dans les conclusions de Cologne.

A.Composition de l'enceinte

i) Membres

a) Chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des Etats membres Quinze représentants des chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des Etats membres.

b) Commission
Un représentant du président de la Commission européenne.

c) Parlement européen
Seize membres du Parlement européen désignés par celui-ci.

d) Parlements nationaux
Trente membres des parlements nationaux (deux par parlement) désignés par ceux-ci.
Les membres de l'enceinte peuvent être remplacés par des suppléants en cas d'empêchement.

ii) Président et vice-présidents de l'enceinte

L'enceinte élit son président. Un membre du Parlement européen, un membre d'un parlement national et le représentant du président du Conseil européen exercent les vice-présidences de l'enceinte, s'ils n'ont pas été élus à la présidence.

Le membre du Parlement européen exerçant la vice-présidence est élu par les membres du Parlement européen faisant partie de l'enceinte. Le membre du parlement national exerçant la vice-présidence est élu par les membres des parlements nationaux faisant partie de l'enceinte.

iii) Observateurs

Deux représentants de la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes désignés par la Cour.

Deux représentants du Conseil de l'Europe, dont un représentant de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme.

iv) Instances de l'Union européenne devant être entendues

Le Comité économique et social

Le Comité des régions

Le médiateur

v) Echange de vues avec les pays candidats

Il convient d'organiser un échange de vues approprié entre l'enceinte ou son président et les pays candidats.

vi) Autres instances, groupes sociaux ou experts devant être entendus

D'autres instances, groupes sociaux et experts peuvent être entendus par l'enceinte.

vii) Secrétariat

Le Secrétariat général du Conseil assure le secrétariat de l'enceinte. Afin de garantir une bonne coordination, des contacts étroits seront établis avec le Secrétariat général du Parlement européen, avec la Commission, et, dans la mesure nécessaire, avec les secrétariats des parlements nationaux.

B. Méthodes de travail de l'enceintei) Travaux préparatoires

Le président de l'enceinte propose, en étroite concertation avec les vice-présidents, un programme de travail pour l'enceinte et effectue les autres travaux préparatoires nécessaires.

ii) Transparence des délibérations

En principe, les débats de l'enceinte et les documents présentés au cours de ces débats devraient être rendus publics.

iii) Groupes de travail

L'enceinte peut constituer des groupes de travail ad hoc, qui sont ouverts à tous ses membres.

iv) Rédaction

Sur la base du programme de travail établi par l'enceinte, un comité de rédaction, composé du président, des vice-présidents et du représentant de la Commission et assisté par le Secrétariat général du Conseil, élabore un avant-projet de charte en tenant compte des propositions de texte soumises par tout membre de l'enceinte.

Chacun des trois vice-présidents procède régulièrement à des consultations avec les composantes respectives de l'enceinte dont il est issu.

v) Elaboration du projet de charte par l'enceinte

Lorsque le président de l'enceinte, en concertation étroite avec les vice-présidents, estime que le texte du projet de charte élaboré par l'enceinte peut être en définitive adopté par toutes les parties, celui-ci peut être transmis au Conseil européen conformément à la procédure préparatoire habituelle.

C. Modalités pratiques

L'enceinte se réunit à Bruxelles, alternativement dans les locaux du Conseil et dans ceux du Parlement européen.

Le régime linguistique intégral s'applique aux réunions de l'enceinte.

Communication préliminaire aux chefs d'Etat et de Gouvernement à propos du projet de Charte européenne des droits fondamentaux. Communication conjointe FIDH - Amnesty international

A la veille du Sommet européen de Cologne, où sera débattue la proposition de la présidence allemande de doter l'Union européenne d'une Charte de droits fondamentaux, la FIDH et Amnesty International entendent rappeler certaines données essentielles.

La présente communication préliminaire ne préjuge pas de la position de nos organisations sur l'utilité d'une Charte européenne des droits fondamentaux, mais a pour seule vocation de souligner, de façon non-exhaustive, quelques questions qu'il nous paraît essentiel de voir prises en compte dès le début des discussions sur le sujet. Pour autant, nos organisations considèrent que la seule justification possible à l'adoption d'une Charte européenne, alors que tous les Etats membres sont déjà parties à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, réside dans l'adoption d'une Charte qui soit davantage protectrice que la Convention européenne elle-même.

A cet égard, nos organisations se réservent de préciser leurs positions en fonction du projet dont elles auront pu prendre connaissance et réitérent leurs appels précédents à ce que l'Union européenne en tant que telle se mette en position d'adhérer à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme et à la Charte sociale européenne révisée.

Les questions sur lesquelles nos organisations souhaitent d'ores et déjà attirer l'attention des Chefs d'Etat et de Gouvernement sont de trois ordres: elles concernent la détermination des catégories de droits et de leurs titulaires ; les garanties juridictionnelles dans le domaine des droits fondamentaux ; et enfin la coordination entre les instruments et les mécanismes de protection de l'Union européenne et du Conseil de l'Europe.

I. Catégories de droits fondamentaux et catégories de bénéficiaires

La notion de «droits civiques», utilisée notamment dans le Rapport du Comité des Sages, présidé par Maria de Lourdes Pintasilgo, intitulé «Pour une Europe des droits civiques et sociaux» (octobre 1995-février 1996) , est contestable en ce qu'elle fusionne deux catégories de droits distinctes quant à leurs destinataires, et prête ainsi à confusion.

Les droits dits «civils» doivent être reconnus à tous sans distinction, en raison même de leur caractère universel et fondamental. La Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme oblige d'ailleurs les Etats membres de l'Union européenne à garantir ces droits à toute personne se trouvant sous leur juridiction (art. 1er de la C.E.D.H); ils ne sauraient se délier de cette obligation internationale en déléguant certaines compétences aux Communautés européennes, sans que leur responsabilité internationale se trouve engagée vis-à-vis des autres parties à la Convention. De même les droits reconnus dans le Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques doivent être accordés sans discrimination, fondée notamment sur l'origine nationale, «à tous les individus se trouvant sur le territoire et relevant de la compétence» des Etats ayant ratifié cet instrument (art. 2 du Pacte international du 16 décembre 1966 relatif aux droits civils et politiques)

Seuls les droits dits «politiques» - droit d'électorat et d'éligibilité – peuvent être réservés aux citoyens de l'Union, conformément à l'article 25 du Pacte international du 16 décembre 1966 relatif aux droits civils et politiques qui admet que soient réservés aux seuls «citoyens» certains droits de citoyenneté (prendre part à la direction des affaires publiques, voter et être élu, accès à la fonction publique). Ces droits devraient également être étendus aux personnes résidant légalement sur le territoire de l'Union, sous certaines conditions à préciser.

Le droit à la liberté de circulation, jusqu'à présent réservé aux seuls ressortissants des Etats membres de l'Union européenne, ne devrait pas – dans la logique même d'un espace sans frontières intérieures –être subordonné à cette condition de nationalité. On peut du reste considérer que le droit de «circuler librement» et de «choisir librement sa résidence» (art. 2, Protocole n°4 à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme), que la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme reconnaît à «quiconque se trouve régulièrement sur le territoire d'un Etat», sera à l'avenir interprété de façon à imposer cette exigence dans le cadre communautaire, à mesure même que progresse l'intégration de l'Union européenne.

Il convient d'autant plus de délier la reconnaissance des droits fondamentaux dans l'ordre juridique communautaire de la nationalité d'un Etat membre de l'Union européenne que les droits économiques et sociaux traditionnels, envisagés par la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme comme des créances susceptibles de constituer des «biens» au sens de l'article 1 du Protocole n°1 à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, ne peuvent selon cette juridiction être réservés aux seuls nationaux d'un Etat, sans que cette différence de traitement soit susceptible d'aboutir à une discrimination contraire aux articles 1 du Protocole n°1 et 14 combinés de la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme. Selon la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme en effet, «seules des considérations très fortes peuvent amener la Cour à estimer compatible avec la Convention une différence de traitement exclusivement fondée sur la nationalité» (Cour eur. D.H., arrêt Gaygusuz c. Autriche du 16 septembre 1996, § 42). De même, le Pacte international du 16 décembre 1966 relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels fait obligation aux Etats l'ayant ratifié de reconnaître les droits qui s'y trouvent énoncés sans discrimination, fondée notamment sur l'origine nationale (art. 2, § 2).

Certains droits économiques et sociaux, notamment liés aux prestations de sécurité sociale, peuvent être subordonnés à la régularité du séjour sur le territoire de l'Union européenne du ressortissant d'un Etat tiers; en revanche, les droits à l'assistance médicale et sociale sont au cœur de la dignité humaine et la privation de ces droits peut constituer un traitement inhumain et dégradant. Certains droits économiques et sociaux devraient ainsi être reconnus non seulement aux résidents légaux, mais également aux demandeurs d'asile et aux personnes en situation illégale. De même, le droit des enfants à l'instruction ne peut être refusé au motif que la situation administrative des parents ne serait pas régulière, et ne saurait être subordonné à la légalité du séjour.

II. Garanties juridictionnelles

La Cour de justice des C.E. garantit déjà un certain nombre de droits fondamentaux, qu'elle fait figurer parmi les principes généraux du droit communautaire dont elle assure le respect dans le domaine d'application du droit communautaire.

Les difficultés qui subsistent sont principalement au nombre de deux.

D'une part, l'accès au juge communautaire ne garantit pas une protection pleinement efficace des droits fondamentaux. Cela tient d'abord aux conditions restrictives auquel est soumis le recours direct en annulation introduit par un particulier (article 230, al. 4 du Traité C.E.) et à l'interprétation restrictive que la Cour de justice des C.E. fait de cette disposition; cette dernière impose d'ailleurs des conditions plus restrictives au recours du particulier que, par exemple, l'article 34 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. L'insuffisance de la garantie communautaire tient ensuite à ce que l'alternative de la saisine d'une juridiction nationale suivie d'un renvoi préjudiciel vers la Cour de justice des C.E. (art. 234 du Traité C.E.) n'est pas satisfaisante dans le domaine des droits fondamentaux dans la mesure où elle peut contraindre l'individu, qui soupçonne que tel acte de droit dérivé communautaire viole ses droits fondamentaux, à violer cet acte ou la règle nationale qui en assure la transposition, afin de fournir au juge communautaire la possibilité de se prononcer sur sa validité.

D'autre part, si elle garantit effectivement les droits fondamentaux dits «civils», la Cour de justice des C.E. apparaît encore très réticente à accepter l'invocation en justice des droits économiques et sociaux, tels qu'ils sont codifiés, notamment, dans la Charte sociale européenne révisée ou dans la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux (au plan européen), ainsi que dans le Pacte international relatif aux droits économiques, sociaux et culturels (au plan international).

Aussi, toute tentative d'améliorer la protection des droits fondamentaux dans l'ordre juridique communautaire devrait s'accompagner d'un assouplissement des conditions d'accès au juge communautaire ou, à défaut, d'une extension des circonstances dans lesquelles les juridictions nationales des Etats membres doivent accueillir l'action en justice portée devant elles et qui tend à la préservation de la légalité communautaire. Demeurera également insatisfaisante toute réforme qui ne progressera pas vers l'affirmation du caractère juridiquement contraignant, dans le cadre communautaire, des droits sociaux fondamentaux.

III. Coordination entre l'Union européenne et le Conseil de l'Europe

Sur un nombre de questions toujours croissant, et notamment en ce qui concerne les droits sociaux et la protection de la vie privée vis-à-vis du traitement des données à caractère personnel, l'Union européenne prend des initiatives qui dédoublent les acquis du Conseil de l'Europe. Amnesty International et la FIDH insistent sur la nécessaire complémentarité qui doit exister entre les deux organisations, en lieu et place d'une concurrence aux conséquences essentiellement négatives.

Premièrement, une conception étroite de la nécessité de préserver l'autonomie de l'ordre juridique communautaire, qui conduit à préférer l'adoption de garanties des droits fondamentaux propres au système communautaire à l'adhésion de l'Union européenne ou des Communautés européennes aux instruments existants du Conseil de l'Europe, a pour conséquence que la Communauté européenne n'est pas, ou n'est pas suffisamment, représentée au sein des instances du Conseil de l'Europe.

Pourtant, le droit communautaire est effectivement soumis au jugement de ces instances, à travers la transposition ou l'exécution qu'en font les Etats membres. Rendu le 18 février 1999 par la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme, l'arrêt Matthews c. Royaume-Uni illustre ce danger : en dépit de ce que la Communauté européenne n'a pas adhéré à la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme, les négociateurs du traité d'Amsterdam n'ayant pas jugé devoir combler la lacune identifiée à cet égard dans les compétences de la Communauté européenne par la Cour de justice des C.E. (avis 2/94 du 28 mars 1996), la Cour européenne des droits de l'Homme s'est effectivement prononcée dans cet arrêt sur la compatibilité du droit communautaire dérivé (en l'espèce, l'acte portant élection du Parlement européen au suffrage universel direct (décision 76/787 du Conseil du 20 septembre 1976)) avec l'article 3 du Protocole n°1 à la Convention (droit à des élections libres au scrutin secret).

L'applicabilité directe de la plupart des dispositions du droit communautaire impliquant leur assimilation au droit interne des Etats membres, ces dispositions sont soumises au même contrôle que le droit interne; il s'imposerait d'en tirer les conséquences procédurales. L'adhésion des Communautés européennes ou de l'Union européenne aux instruments du Conseil de l'Europe qui sont pris dans le champ de leurs compétences permettrait ainsi une représentation spécifique du point de vue communautaire dans les institutions que ces instruments mettent sur pied.

Deuxièmement, les candidats à l'adhésion à l'Union européenne sont déjà membres du Conseil de l'Europe. Ils ont ratifié la plupart des conventions les plus importantes ouvertes à la signature dans le cadre de cette organisation et font d'importants efforts pour réformer leur système juridique. L'amélioration du système communautaire des droits fondamentaux par de nouveaux instruments différents de ceux existant déjà au sein du Conseil de l'Europe imposerait à ces pays un effort supplémentaire alors que la logique du système voudrait que les ratifications des instruments du Conseil de l'Europe et les réformes qu'elles ont impliquées dans les systèmes juridiques de ces Etats, constituent une étape sur le chemin de leur adhésion à l'Union européenne.

Amnesty International et la FIDH espèrent que les remarques contenues dans cette communication préliminaire seront entendues par les Chefs d'Etat et de Gouvernement des Etats membres de l'Union à Cologne, et que leurs préoccupations seront reflétées dans les décisions qui seront prises à l'issue du Conseil européen.

Notes :

1. La Commission européenne avait décidé la mise en place de ce Comité des Sages en avril 1995, notamment pour examiner les suites susceptibles d'être réservées à la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux des travailleurs dans le cadre de la révision des traités de l'Union européenne prévue par le Traité de Maastricht.

Annexe 3 : lettre ouverte de la FIDH et d'Amnesty international adressée aux membres du Comité des représentants permanents

To the members of the Committee of Permanent Representatives of Member States

Dear Permanent Representatives,

Re : Composition of the Body to elaborate a draft EU Charter of Fundamental Rights

We are writing you to express our concern in relation to the composition of the Body to elaborate a draft EU Charter of Fundamental Rights. The common position that came out of the discussions within the Committee of Permanent Representatives of Member States (Coreper) seems to be that human rights and social NGOs will not benefit from the status of observers to that Body. They will not necessarily be consulted by the Body and will not be allowed to systematically follow the discussions going on within the Body. Human Rights and social NGOs " may " be invited by the body to give their views, which means that their consultation is not ensured.

We regret the weakness of this formula. The wording of the Decision of the European Council of Cologne (June 1999) was stronger in this regard (" social groups as well as experts should be invited to give their views "). The European Parliament also adopted a clearer position : " Calls, as regards the membership of the drafting authority and the organisation of its work : (...) for appropriate steps to be taken to ensure transparency of activities ; for contributions from NGOs and the general public also to be ensured, and for public hearings to be held ") .

Amnesty International and FIDH have already contributed in the past to the discussions concerning the establishment of a new EU Charter (notably through a note elaborated in view of the Cologne Council), and our organisations have also asked since a long time the accession of the European Community to the European Convention on Human Rights.

Amnesty International and FIDH intend to further contribute to the discussions concerning the EU Charter and will issue a position on this question before the end of the year. We are convinced that full consultation of specialised and representative NGOs as well as experts is essential in relation to such a delicate exercise.

The Platform of European Social NGOs, which regroups 25 European networks and federations working in the social field, maintains that representative NGOs must be fully consulted on, and involved in the preparation of the Charter and support the call of human rights NGOs for NGOs to be given observer status on the Drafting Committee.

As the Expert Group on Fundamental Rights established by the Commission says in its February 1999 report (Simitis report), " Experience shows that the development of both credible and efficient fundamental rights policies depends to a decisive extent on continuous dialogue with those whose rights are to be guaranteed " .

We hope that you will have the possibility to take into consideration the points we raised and that a fruitful collaboration will take place during the whole drafting process of the Charter.

We remain,

Sincerely yours

Brussels, October 6, 1999

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

European Citizens' Charter (Draft)

Preamble

This Charter constitutes the founding pact of a Community of Peoples and States reflecting the humanism characteristic of European civilization.

Presented on the 40th anniversary of the Treaty of Rome, it marks a turning point in the history of European construction.

It confirms the economic, social, cultural, civil and political rights of citizens of the Union. It also defines their duties.

This draft presented by the European Forum of Civil Society, in Rome on 22 March 1997, will be forwarded to the European Parliament for adoption and to the High Contracting Parties for ratification

The Signatory States agree to annex this Charter as a Joint Declaration to the Treaty on European Union. They undertake to make its provisions their criteria for the evaluation and approval of the Union's initiatives. They promise to ensure that the Treaty comes into force in accordance with the principles of the Charter.

Title I

A People's Europe

Article 1 The Union is based upon the human individual.

The human individual is at the heart of the European undertaking.

The Union is based upon all the fundamental rights prescribed by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (New York, 1948), the European Convention on the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 1950), the European Social Charter (Turin, 1961, revised 1988), the Community Charter of Workers' Fundamental Social Rights (Strasbourg, 1989), the Charter for the Protection of Ethnic Minorities and the United Nations International Covenants on Civil, Political, Economic and Social Rights (1966). These rights form its ethical, moral and cultural heritage.

The Union adheres to the International Convention on the Protection of Minorities and the International Convention on the Protection of Children. The Union protects the diversity of identity of all its inhabitants.

The Union is the guardian of a common good made up of all individual civil, economic and social rights. It cultivates the shared values of civilisation that are peace, dignity and respect for the human individual, democracy, freedom and the duty of solidarity.

Article 2 European citizenship

Citizenship entails complementary local, regional, national, European and worldwide dimensions, in line with the principle of subsidiarity.

Every citizen of any Member State is a citizen of the Union. Residents have the right to obtain the citizenship of the State where they reside. The Union shall ensure the harmonization of rights of access to national citizenship.

European citizenship has two principal components: civic and political, social and economic. These two elements of citizenship are indivisible. The Union shall endeavour to strengthen them jointly.

European citizenship resides on a European model of society which includes respect for the individual and for fundamental rights and a commitment to solidarity amongst its members.

Article 3 Sovereign power

Within the framework of the competences of the Union, sovereign power belongs to the citizens of the European Union.

Article 4 The missions of the European Union

The Union shall have the task of ensuring peace and democracy, balanced and sustainable development, economic and social cohesion, full employment and occupation and cultural development based on pluralism, dignity and respect for others.

4.1 Sustainable human development

The Union shall work to promote sustainable human development that is at once economic, social and ecological, giving each individual the opportunity to participate in an employment-creating economic and social life. Every individual is entitled to a healthy environment. The Union shall guarantee respect for the integrity of the human person in the environment and in the face of technological development, in particular with respect to biotechnology and the information society. The rights of future generations are recognized and protected in the Union.

Rejecting unrestrained competition and all forms of exclusion, this project is based on solidarity and equity in relations between Europeans and between Europe and other regions of the world.

The Union shall base its external activities, in particular its common foreign and security policy, on peace and the promotion of sustainable development, economic, social, cultural, civil and political rights, economic and social equity, equality between men and women and the fight against poverty and social exclusion.

In the context of Community policies and legislation, the Union shall respect the undertakings agreed at the United Nations Conferences on the Environment and Development (Rio, 1992), Human Rights (Vienna, 1993), the Population (Cairo, 1994), Women (Beijing, 1995), Social Affairs (Copenhagen, 1995) and the Habitat (Istanbul, 1996).

The Union shall ensure that the World Trade Organization guarantees the tying-in of social standards and trade on the basis of corresponding ILO conventions on forced labour, child labour and all forms of discrimination at the workplace, freedom of association and the right to collective bargaining. All trade cooperation treaties or agreements to which the Union shall become a contracting party must establish positive social and environmental clauses inciting respect for human and democratic rights.

4.2 A cultural project

The Union's cultural and educational activities shall be built on both the diversity and richness of its cultural and linguistic heritage and recognition of a common heritage, and on a cultural community, shared values, respect for the arts and cultures of the peoples of Europe, cross-border cooperation and dialogue with other civilisations. Protection of the cultural and linguistic heritage are civic rights.

It shall promote the conditions enabling each individual to develop his cultural, civic, creative and cognitive abilities.

The Union shall assure the protection and development of the common European heritage composed of its natural resources and the environment and its natural, cultural and linguistic heritage, in all its diversity.

4.3 A European civic area

The Union is a representative and participatory democracy. It shall guarantee the balanced representation of men and women. It shall provide the means necessary for active participation, in particular through the democratization of knowledge of decision-making.

4.4 Security

The Union shall have the objective of ensuring the security of all its inhabitants by working in favour of the social integration of all and of protection of the environment and worldwide natural resources.

The Union shall also endeavour to protect citizens against all forms of crime which are a threat to security and the European civil area.

Title II

The European Civic and Political Area

Article 5 Civic and political citizenship

The equality of men and women is a fundamental principle of the Union. The Union prohibits all forms of racism and xenophobia. The Union and its Member States shall provide conditions of equality and freedom for men and women alike. The Union shall take measures necessary for the establishment of sanctions.

Every citizen of the Union, in exercising his civil, political, social and economic rights, is entitled to the diplomatic protection of the Union and its Member States, and to the consular protection of the Member States in accordance with international rules

Democracy at the level of the Union is made up of two components : representation and participation.

Article 6 A representative democracy

The will of the citizens, the sovereign power; shall express itself directly at the level of the Union in particular through the election of the European Parliament and indirectly through the Council.

The European Parliament shall elect the European Commission, after consultation of the Council of the Union.

The Commission shall be accountable to Parliament and the Council. The President of the Commission may replace a Member of the Commission at the request of the European Parliament.

All of the Union's legislation, constitutional and budgetary acts and international agreements shall require approval by the majority of Members of the European Parliament and the national governments meeting in the Council of the Union.

Article 7 A participatory democracy

All citizens and all representative organizations have the right to formulate and make known their opinions on every area of the Union's competence. The Union shall guarantee the participation of all, in particular individuals and groups in a situation of poverty and social exclusion.

Practical implementation of rights and duties must not be limited to relations between the institutions and individuals. It also requires the presence of group players who stimulate the development of these rights and duties, explain them, defend them and implement them. Civil society is structured in this way.

The Union shall recognize organisations representing civil society as its permanent partners. It shall consult them regularly on all areas of Union citizenship, in particular on all Community acts related to civil, political, economic and social rights recognized by this Charter.

7.1 Representation of citizens

All European citizens have the right to vote and stand for election in European and local elections in their place of residence, irrespective of their nationality. The right to vote and stand for election in European and local elections shall be extended to all persons having resided legally in the European Union for five years. There shall be one method of voting for European elections. The voting method chosen shall include the right to cast a vote of preference amongst different individuals, since lists of candidates may be established on a transnational basis.

7.2 The right to information, transparency and public enquiry

The deliberations, proposals and legislative acts of all Union bodies, in particular the Council of the Union, shall be public.

The Union shall guarantee access to information in every area for which it has competence. The public and private mandates exercised by European officials and agents shall be public.

7.3 The right to evaluation

The Community's plans, programmes, policies and budgets shall be subject to prior evaluation by the European Parliament in a procedure that is transparent, public, pluralist and adversarial, in line with the principles and rights recognized by this Charter. The European Parliament shall consult the Economic and Social Committee and the Committee of the Regions.

The Charter signatory States shall make such evaluation a prerequisite to their acceptance of proposals from the Commission.

7.4 The right of legislative initiative

This right may be exercised collectively by citizens of the Union, in accordance with the conditions laid down by a Community law.

7.5 The right of popular consultation

The exercise of this right by European citizens, following presentation of a petition which has obtained signatures in all the States of the Union, shall be governed by a Community law developed on the basis of existing national legislations and practices..

7.6 The right to justice

All European citizens and all individual residing in a Member State have the right to institute legal proceedings before the Court of Justice of the Union in cases of non-observance of Community legislation or of the rights and principles recognized by this Charter.

7.7 The right of association

The Union recognizes the right of association. It shall establish a statute of European association enabling European group players to participate in the life of the Union and, through social experimentation and innovation, to defend and implement the rights and duties of European citizenship. It shall involve them in regular assessment of its activities and policies. The Member States shall not restrict the right of association on grounds of the nationality of members.

Title III

The European social and economic area

Article 8 Social and economic citizenship

European citizenship entails economic and social rights which are an integral part of the objectives of the Union. The Union shall promote the right to human dignity, education, life-long training, paid employment, recognition of socially useful activities, a minimum income guaranteeing respect for human dignity, equitable working conditions and pay, retirement, housing, the professional and social integration of the disabled, social protection and the consideration of the interests of the family and of the child.

The need for social policies shall be implemented by means of a partnership between the public authorities and civil society.

European citizenship as defined above must lead every individual to participate fully in the economic and social life of the Union, his country of residence and his local communities.

8.1 Social Rights

The rights of citizens include those laid down in the revised Turin European Social Charter, the Community Charter of Workers' Fundamental Social Rights and conventions of the International Labour Organization and the World Health Organization.

The rights of trade unions are guaranteed. Transnational rights of association, information, consultation, negotiation and action, including the right to strike, are part and parcel of citizens' rights. The different bodies of the Union shall be responsible for developing European collective bargaining legislation.

Child labour and forced labour are prohibited in the European Union, as are all forms of trade in human beings.

8.2 Services of general interest

The Union is the guardian of solidarity and social cohesion. It shall establish to this effect public and social rules on the internal market and common development policies. Access of European citizens, at Union and Member State level, to services of general interest contributing to the objectives of equality, solidarity and social cohesion, is an integral part of the recognition and guaranteed exercise of the fundamental rights of the individual. Every European citizen shall be entitled in particular to a healthy environment, equal justice for all, education, health care and quality social services.

Title IV

Constitutional Pact

Article 9 Sanctioning of a Member State

In the event of an infringement of the principles of the present Charter, the Commission, the European Parliament, any Member State and any individual as defined in Article 7.6 may initiate proceedings before the Court of Justice of the Union, which is entitled to take sanctions.

Member State status shall be suspended by a vote of the European Parliament for any State found to be in serious infringement of the principles of this Charter. The infringement finding shall be made by the Court of Justice of the Union.

Article 10 Final and interim provisions

This Charter shall constitute the basis of a constitutional pact open to the Peoples and States of Europe willing to accept it. The Union and the Member States shall be charged with setting into place a constitutional process with the peoples of the Union.

(DRAFT) EUROPEAN CITIZENS' CHARTER

Explanatory Memorandum

1. In spite of the historical, institutional and practical importance of the treaty, mere reading of it will never be enough to draw crowds of enthusiastic European Union supporters, nor will its revision. “The European Union must draw up a Charter of its own, clearly setting out the ideals on which it is based, its role and the values it hopes to represent.” (Vaclav Havel). That is the ambition of the draft European Citizens' Charter.
2. The draft Charter is meant to establish a hierarchy of the Union's values. Where the Union is perceived as primarily a “free-trade area”, “a market”, the Charter places men and women at the heart of the undertaking. It defines what constitutes the common good.
3. The Charter presented on the fortieth anniversary of the Treaty of Rome is meant to mark a turning point in European history. It proposes a new founding pact for a community of Peoples and States reflecting the humanism characteristic of European civilisation. It proposes the definition of a European model of society.
4. It asserts that sovereign power belongs to the citizens of the Union and not to the market or the technocracy.
5. It constitutes the basis of a constitutional pact open to the Peoples and States willing to accept it.
6. As noted in the report by the Committee of Wise Men, For a Europe of Civil and Social Rights, “the European Union must assert its identity more clearly, an identity that cannot be separated from citizenship. At this stage, citizenship of the Union as laid down in Articles 8 to 8E of the EC Treaty is lacking in substance.” The Charter develops the concept of European citizenship, recognizing its two principal elements: civil and political, social and economic. It is aimed at defining a frame of reference for the Union's actions and laying down the bases of a future collective and democratic demarche: the constitutional process.
7. This Charter also concerns the definition of a European civil area. The text proposes an inter-linking between European representative democracy and European participatory democracy. The writing of the Charter itself puts this vision into practice: drafted at a forum bringing together more than 80 European organisations, the text was forwarded to the European Parliament with the request that it be debated, amended if necessary and adopted in a final version that would then be submitted to the States for ratification.

8. The Charter concerns the fundamental rights and duties resulting, on the one hand, from European citizenship and, on the other, extended in part to all individuals residing legally on Union territory but who are not citizens of the Union.

From the time of its creation, the Union has been a multinational, multicultural, multilingual and multireligious Community with a strictly secular nature. The Charter aspires to place its proposals on non-Union citizens residing legally on its territory within the framework of the geopolitical developments in which war and peace will be played out in the 21st century. Given the globalization of the economy, the communication technologies changing the world of work, the acceleration of population movements, the need to maintain a young population as a means of preserving the rights of retired Europeans, Europe must be given a strategy adapted to its new challenges. A “war of civilizations” must also be rejected. Civilizations considering foreigners to be their enemy either degenerate into barbarism or perish.

The Charter seeks to build bridges to other peoples and other civilizations. It plays the card of hospitality, integration, exchange and multiple memberships, convinced that this approach will best guarantee reciprocity and the economic and social future of Europeans and will make Europe the avant-garde of the future democracy without frontiers that will become a reality in the 21st century.

9. Social cohesion is at the heart of the challenges facing the Union and its identity. The Charter defines the initial elements of a social and economic citizenship. European citizenship encompasses economic and social rights that are an integral part of the objectives of the Union and which must make possible the full participation of every individual.

10. This Charter is the Charter of European Citizenship, and not simply of European Citizens' Rights. In laying down the elements of European citizenship, the Charter is structured on the idea “that there are no rights without responsibilities, nor democracy without a sense of civic duty”. The need to take action to ensure the success of the European civil area and of European policies promoting social cohesion is reflected in and built upon strong commitments by civil society. The partnership with the new group players acting in civil society is recognized.

11. The Charter defines an ambitious project for Europe. It takes as its foundations the most advantageous provisions existing in the Member States and rejects the smallest-common-denominator strategy. The most favorable provisions in force in one or more Member States and incorporated into the Charter concern in particular the right to vote in European and local elections, the right of popular initiative and the right of popular consultation.

12. The Charter complements existing treaties that form the foundation of the European Union. Rights and obligations at European level come on top of the fundamental rights guaranteed at national level. The organisations submitting it to Parliament reiterate the imperative nature of the revision of the Treaty proper. They note that their concerns regarding employment, social rights and the fight against poverty and social exclusion imply inclusion in the Treaty of a platform of social and civil rights. It is also imperative for the Treaty to make co-decision with Parliament and majority vote the rule.

13. One of the roles of the Charter is the definition of standards for the strategic assessment of Community programmes, projects and budgets. The Charter signatory States shall ensure that the Treaty comes into force in accordance with the principles outlined in the Charter. The Charter signatory States must undertake to make such evaluation a prerequisite for their acceptance of proposals from the Commission.

14. Just as the revised treaty shall be submitted to a vote by the European Parliament, this Charter shall be forwarded to the European Parliament for debate, amendment and adoption. The Forum calls on the Member States wishing to sign the Charter passed by Parliament to establish a link between the timing of the signature of the revised Treaty and the signature of the present Charter. If necessary, as in 1985 and 1992 precedents, the Forum shall ask Member States to postpone the signature of the Treaty until the time of adoption of the present Charter by Parliament and its annexation to the Treaty as a Joint Declaration of the Charter signatory States.

Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Report

Committee on Legal Affairs and Human Rights

Rapporteur: Mr Göran Magnusson, Sweden, Socialist Group

Summary

Is the coexistence of two parallel systems of human rights protection in Europe possible and in particular is it not likely to lead to inconsistencies? That is the question the Assembly was confronted with following the decision taken by the European Council, in Cologne in June 1999 to draw up a Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union.

The Assembly, while welcoming improvements in the guarantee of fundamental rights in Europe, draws the attention of the European Union to the existence of the European Convention on Human Rights, to which all of its member states have adhered, and to the European Court of Human Rights responsible for its interpretation. It also proposes solutions which would make it possible to avoid the inconsistencies of such a coexistence: the inclusion in the Charter of the rights contained in the European Convention on Human Rights and the ratification of the Convention by the European Union.

I. Draft resolution

1. The Assembly considers it necessary to make a number of observations following the decision by the EU European Council in Cologne on 3 and 4 June 1999 to draw up a Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, to be submitted to the European Council in December 2000.
2. At this stage, without knowing the Charter's content, the Assembly wishes to bring a number of matters to the attention of those responsible for drafting this instrument, that is to say the "body" established to that end in Tampere, and may have occasion to make observations on the substance of the Charter in due course.
3. The European institutions, first the Communities and then the European Union, have always shown an interest in human rights, in particular the European Convention on Human Rights, and have mentioned those rights as the foundation of democracy in their successive treaties. The European Parliament and the Commission have on a number of occasions come out in favour of the Union's accession to the Convention. The Parliamentary Assembly has itself welcomed this proposal. However, it has not yet been translated into action, following an opinion by the Court of Justice in Luxembourg on whether accession to the Convention was compatible with the Community treaties, in which the Court found that, as Community law stood at the time, the Commission had no competence to accede.
4. At a time when it is reinforcing its powers, the Union wishes to make the importance of human rights more visible to its citizens, as stated in the decision taken in Cologne, and to bring these currently scattered rights together in a single text. The Assembly welcomes this initiative as a sign of a resolve to strengthen further the cause of human rights in Europe.
5. The Assembly nonetheless considers that, in adopting a Charter of Fundamental Rights, the achievements of the European Convention on Human Rights and the body of its case-law established over almost fifty years, which has had far-reaching effects on the law of the member states of the Council of Europe and therefore of the European Union, cannot be disregarded. It further draws attention to the risks of having two sets of fundamental rights which would weaken the European Court of Human Rights.

6. In this connection, the Assembly recalls the communication of 19 November 1990 issued by the Commission of the European Communities on accession to the European Convention on Human Rights, in which it stated that accession did not rule out the option of a set of fundamental rights specific to the Community. The opposite inference can therefore be made, ie that adoption of a Charter does not rule out accession to the Convention on Human Rights.

7. The European Union and the Council of Europe undeniably guarantee a number of rights which are not contained in the European Convention on Human Rights, particularly economic and social rights, and the Charter should therefore include these rights, adding to them others now accepted as fundamental rights. The Assembly draws attention to the other instruments for the protection of human rights on which the Charter could draw, in particular the revised European Social Charter, which guarantees economic and social rights and is an instrument to which the Assembly has invited the Union to accede. It recalls that, following the Treaty of Amsterdam, a reference to the Social Charter of the Council of Europe was included in the Treaty on the European Union.

8. The Assembly refers to the European Union report, prepared in February 1999 by an expert group chaired by Professor Simitis, which recommends that Articles 2 to 13 of the European Convention on Human Rights be incorporated into Community law, together with the rights secured in the protocols to the Convention. The inclusion of rights guaranteed by the Convention would be a means of avoiding having two different sets of rights in Europe, thus creating two categories of citizens enjoying different rights.

9. The Assembly believes that there can be no discrimination in the application of fundamental rights and that everyone coming under the jurisdiction of a Council of Europe member state must enjoy the protection of such rights, as provided for in Articles 1 and 14 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

10. In conclusion, in the light of the above, the Assembly invites the European Union:

to incorporate the rights guaranteed in the European Convention on Human Rights and its protocols in the Charter of Fundamental Rights and to do its utmost to safeguard the coherence of the protection of human rights in Europe and to avoid diverging interpretations of those rights;

to pronounce itself in favour of accession to the European Convention on Human Rights of the Council of Europe and make the necessary amendments to the Community treaties;

to make sure that when referring to social rights the revised European Social Charter of the Council of Europe will be taken into account.

II. Draft recommendation

1. The Assembly, having regard to its Resolution ... (2000) on the European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights, in which it invites the European Union:

to incorporate the rights guaranteed in the European Convention on Human Rights and its protocols in the Charter of Fundamental Rights and to do its utmost to safeguard the coherence of the protection of human rights in Europe and to avoid diverging interpretations of those rights

to pronounce itself in favour of accession to the European Convention on Human Rights of the Council of Europe and make the necessary amendments to the Community treaties;

to make sure that when referring to social rights the revised European Social Charter of the Council of Europe will be taken into account, recommends that the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe pronounce itself in favour of the accession of the European Union to the European Convention on Human Rights and prepare the appropriate amendments to be made to this treaty.

III. Draft order

The Assembly, having regard to its Resolution ... (2000) and Recommendation ... (2000), instructs its Committee on Legal Affairs and Human Rights to carefully follow and monitor the outcome of the drafting work on the Charter of Fundamental Rights, and to report back to it on this subject in due course.

IV. Explanatory memorandum by Mr Magnusson

A. Introduction

1. In a motion for a resolution (Doc 8542), some members of the Parliamentary Assembly expressed their concern on learning of the decision taken by the European Union's European Council, in Cologne on 3-4 June 1999, to draw up a Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union.

2. As the draft is to be prepared and presented in time for the meeting of the European Council in December 2000, the signatories of the motion felt there was a certain urgency to take a stand on that decision. They considered it necessary that the Council of Europe be involved in the drawing up of such a Charter. They believed that such a Charter should not be integrated into the treaties of the European Union, as it would doubtless result in different interpretations of the Convention's provisions by the European Court on Human Rights on the one hand and the Court of Justice of the European Communities on the other.

3. They therefore called upon the Parliaments of the European Union's member States to renew their efforts in favour of the accession of the Union to the Council of Europe's European Convention on Human Rights (hereafter: ECHR), and in the meantime to do their utmost to prevent the granting of treaty value to any European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights.

4. The present draft report aims at analysing the situation, starting by summarising the relations of the European Institutions with human rights, trying to identify the possible developments in the light of the decision taken at the Cologne meeting and making proposals to avoid the above-mentioned risks of duplication in the interpretation of the rights and of two systems of protection, one for the citizens of the European Union's member States and another for the citizens of the rest of Europe.

B. The European Institutions and Human Rights

5. It is to be noted that the European Institutions, first the Communities and now the European Union (hereafter: EU), have always shown an interest in human rights and in so doing they have always made reference to the ECHR.

6. The preamble of the Single European Act of 1986 expressed the European Community member states' determination "to work together to promote democracy on the basis of the fundamental rights recognised in the constitutions and laws of the member states, in the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and the European Social Charter, notably freedom, equality and social justice".

7. Some specific rights are explicitly included in the Treaties of the Communities, such as freedom of movement for workers, freedom of establishment and freedom to supply services, equality of treatment between men and women and non-discrimination on the ground of nationality.

8. To these rights four new rights have been added in the Treaty on the European Union: right to move and reside freely within the territory of member states; right to vote and to stand as a candidate in municipal and European elections in the member State where one resides; right to petition the European Parliament and right to apply to the European Ombudsman; protection in third countries by the diplomatic and consular authorities of any member State.

9. However, these rights are scattered and it has been thought that they should be grouped and also completed with other ones. At the same time, protection through accession to the ECHR was already envisaged in the 1970s.

10. As was recalled in the report on the accession of the European Community to the ECHR (Doc 7383) of 1995, presented by Mrs Wohlwend, following the Commission of the European Communities' memorandum of 4 April 1979 and the European Parliament Resolution of 27 April 1979, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe welcomed the prospect of such accession, emphasising in its Resolution 745 of January 1981 that accession "would form an important bond between the European Communities and the member states of the Council of Europe in the specific field of human rights and fundamental freedoms, and would thus contribute to strengthening the principles of parliamentary democracy and the implementation of basic human rights".

11. This was reaffirmed several times by the European Parliament, which reiterated its support in three resolutions, on 18 January 1994, on 4 May 1994 and on 11 April 1995. The Parliamentary Assembly also reiterated its support in its Recommendation 1365 (1998).

12. In its Communication on the accession to the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and some of its Protocols (SEC (90) 2087 final of 19 November 1990), the Commission of the European Communities concluded as follows:

"The Commission accordingly requests that the Council:

- approve the request for the Community's accession to the ECHR
- authorise the Commission to negotiate the details of this accession in accordance with the directives set out in Annex 1, the aim being to make necessary adjustments to the Convention to make possible this accession (notably to provide for Community representation in the Commission of Human Rights and the Court of Human Rights)."

It also stated that the accession of the European Community to the ECHR does not exclude the option of a catalogue of fundamental rights specific to the Community.

13. The Parliamentary Assembly adopted Resolution 1068 (1995) on the accession of the European Community to the ECHR on 27 September 1995. In this text, it expressed the hope that the Community would soon take the necessary steps to submit its formal application for accession.
14. Since the adoption of that resolution important developments have taken place. First, on 26 April 1994, the Council of Ministers of the Community asked the Court of Justice of the European Communities for its opinion on the compatibility of accession to the European Convention on Human Rights with the Community treaties.
15. In its opinion adopted in March 1996, the Court held that "such a modification of the system for the protection of human rights in the Community, with equally fundamental institutional implications for the Community and for the Member States, would be of constitutional significance and would therefore be such as to go beyond the scope of Article 235. It could only be brought about by way of Treaty amendment" and it concluded that as Community law stood at that time the Community had no competence to accede to the ECHR.
16. Following this opinion by the Court of Justice, the question of European Community accession to the ECHR was not subsequently discussed in the framework of the Intergovernmental Conference which led to the conclusion of the Treaty of Amsterdam.
17. The Amsterdam Treaty, signed on 2 October 1997, and which entered into force on 1 May 1999, affirms in its Article 6§1 the European Union's commitment to human rights and fundamental freedoms and confirms the Union's attachment to fundamental social rights.
18. This is nothing new, as we have already seen.
19. What is new is the decision taken by the European Council of the European Union at its meeting in Cologne on 3 and 4 June 1999 "to draw up a Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, to make their overriding importance and relevance more visible to the Union's citizens".
20. According to the terms of the decision "the European Council believes that this Charter should contain fundamental rights and freedoms as well as basic procedural rights guaranteed by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and derived from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, as general principles of Community law. The Charter should also include the fundamental rights that pertain only to the Union's citizens. In drawing up such a Charter account should furthermore be taken of economic and social rights as contained in the European Social Charter and the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social rights of Workers, insofar as they do not merely establish objectives for action by the Union".

C. Strengthening Human Rights in Europe

21. As already said, the concern for human rights has always been present in the European Union. However, with the adoption of the Amsterdam Treaty which reinforces the power of the EU, some member States felt it necessary to put in a single text the rights which are already guaranteed and to add to it other rights. Another reason for that is the wish to make visible EU concern for human rights (see para 19).

22. As stated before, the Commission of the European Communities already said in its communication of 1990 that the accession of the Community to the ECHR does not exclude the option of a catalogue of fundamental rights specific to the community.

23. Furthermore, the Parliamentary Assembly itself, in the explanatory memorandum to its Resolution 1068 (1995), acknowledged that the fundamental rights and freedoms of Community citizens needed to be clearly affirmed, especially as new protection requirements were becoming apparent. It also stated: "in the absence of explicit references in the treaties, some Community states have given the fundamental rights appearing in their national constitutions precedence over the provisions of derived Community law. Such a threat to the uniform application of Community law is one of the factors behind the drawing of a Community code of fundamental rights."

24. From all the foregoing it seems very clear that the decision to draw up a Charter is a logical consequence of the evolution in both the European Institutions and in the Council of Europe towards the protection of human rights in Europe.

25. What remains to be seen is how this aim would be best achieved.

26. The Council of Europe has to contribute to reaching this aim. One has to recall that all the member States of the EU are also members of the Council of Europe and that they should be coherent.

27. Firstly, concerning the involvement of the Council of Europe in the drawing up of the Charter of Fundamental Rights, the decision setting up the body¹ to elaborate a draft EU Charter foresees that the Council of Europe will be represented in the body set up to elaborate the Charter as an observer. It is entitled to two representatives, including one from the European Court of Human Rights.

28. Secondly, it must be taken into account that five members of the Parliamentary Assembly have been nominated among the two members from each national parliament, including the Rapporteur and the Chairperson of the Committee on Legal Affairs and Human Rights.

D. The Charter: contents and implementation

a. The rights to be guaranteed

29. As mentioned in the decision of Cologne, the ECRH is a reference to be taken into consideration when drafting the Charter. How?

30. Should the ECHR be included as such in the Treaty of the EU? This was to some extent the opinion expressed by the Expert Group on Fundamental Rights, chaired by Professor Simitis, which prepared a report at the request of the European Commission.

This report entitled "Affirming fundamental rights in the European Union - Time to act" was completed in February 1999. According to the Expert Group "the rights provided in Articles 2 to 13 of the ECHR should be incorporated in their entirety into the Community law, together with the rights in the Protocols to the ECHR". They considered that clauses detailing and complementing the ECHR must be added, as it appears necessary. They gave as an example a list of rights which are already recognised in Community law or in the case-law of the Court of Justice of Luxembourg:

- the right to equality of opportunity and treatment, without any distinction such as race, colour, ethnic, national or social origin, culture or language, religion, conscience, belief, political opinion, sex or gender, marital status, family responsibilities, sexual orientation, age or disability ;
- the freedom of choice of occupation ;
- the right to determine the use of personal data ;
- the right to family reunion ;
- the right to bargain collectively, and to resort to collective action in the event of a conflict of interests; and
- the right to information, consultation and participation in respect of decisions affecting interests of workers.

31. One cannot know at this stage what will be the proposals by the body responsible for elaborating the Charter. However, the following comments have to be made regarding Professor Simitis's report.

32. First, the inclusion of the ECHR in the Community law would be a good solution in that it would avoid having two different sets of rights in Europe thus creating two categories of citizens entitled to different rights.

33. One has, however, to question the exclusion of article 1 of the ECHR. Article 1 of the ECHR states: "the High Contracting Parties shall secure to everyone within their jurisdiction the rights and freedoms defined in section 1 of the Convention".

34. This is an essential aspect of the protection of human rights: one cannot exclude people on the ground of their national origin, as mentioned in the article on non -discrimination cited as an example by the Expert Group. This should cover not only the citizens of the Union's member states wherever they are, but also the citizens of other countries who are within their jurisdiction. Only some political rights, such as the right to vote or to be elected, which are recognised to the citizens of the EU, could be linked to citizenship, although they could also be extended to persons residing on a legal basis on the territory of the Union.

35. The other articles which have been excluded by the Expert Group are Article 14 of the ECHR, which concerns the prohibition of discrimination, Article 15 concerning the derogation in time of emergency and Article 16 concerning restrictions on political activity of aliens.

36. Article 14 is the object of a draft Protocol No 12 to the ECHR with a view to extending it. The Assembly has been called upon to give its opinion on this draft Protocol. At this stage it is however obvious that the scope envisaged by the Expert Group is much wider than that of the draft Protocol.

37. This does not seem to be an obstacle, on the contrary. The approach is to take the ECHR as minimum standard to which the Union could add more rights in order to take into account its own law.

38. The report refers also to the "relevant rights in the Protocols to the ECHR". They mention the following rights: the right to property (Article 1 of the First Protocol), the right to vote (Article 3 of the First Protocol) and the right to free movement (Article 2 of the Fourth Protocol).

39. They leave out a number of other rights, such as the right to education, the prohibition of imprisonment for debt, the prohibition of expulsions of nationals, the prohibition of collective expulsion of aliens, the abolition of the death penalty, as well as Protocol No 7, which guarantees some procedural rights.

40. As regards the social rights one could also recommend the inclusion of the European Social Charter into the Community law. Of course the question of their implementation remains to be solved. Social rights require an intervention by the State and in particular have financial implications.

b. The implementation of the rights guaranteed

41. Even if the ECHR were included into the Charter of Fundamental Rights, the risk still exists that their interpretation might vary if two Courts are responsible for it. This is probably the main concern upon which the Parliamentary Assembly should concentrate.

42. The European Court on Human Rights is responsible for the interpretation of the ECHR and should continue to be so. Ways should be found to keep its competence for the interpretation of the rights contained in the ECHR even if they are included in the Charter, while the Court of Justice of Luxembourg should keep its competence to interpret the other rights and in particular the alleged violations of human rights by Community institutions without a member State intervention.

43. The report on which is based Resolution 1068 (1995), paragraph 25, had foreseen a problem which has occurred in the meantime. In implementing the Community's law, it is the member States that are ultimately liable to be subjected to the sanctions of the European Court of Human Rights in the Community's stead, and be condemned on account of derived Community law. The conclusion of the Community treaties by the states has not released them from the obligations they contracted in the framework of the ECHR. Consequently, it is still possible for an individual to submit to the Strasbourg Court an application against a member State in respect of a national measure designed to implement Community law, and even a measure taken by the Community, and for the state to be condemned.

44. This occurred recently in the Matthews case against the United Kingdom, which concerned the situation of the people of Gibraltar who were not allowed to vote in the European Parliament elections even though they were subject to European Union "legislation". The case was brought before the European Court of Human Rights.

45. Accession to the ECHR would remove this risk by permitting direct appeals against such acts as well as against implementing measures taken by member States in cases where they do not possess wide discretionary powers.

46. Of course both the accession of the European Communities/Union to the ECHR and the repartition of competencies between the two courts need adjustments. These adjustments are of a legal nature and if the political will exists they should not be an obstacle.

47. Different options exist, such as prejudicial request for an opinion of one Court to the other, or a repartition according to the right involved or the organ or State respondent for the alleged violation.

48. Already in 1990, the Commission of the Communities, in its Communication on the accession to the ECHR, appended the following negotiating directives:

- "1. The purpose of the negotiations is to draw up an additional Protocol to the ECHR of 1950, enabling the Community to become a party to the Convention and some of its Protocols;
2. In order to ensure that the Community participates fully in the organs of the Conventions, the Community will have to be represented as such in the (Commission of Human Rights) the Court of Human Rights. An ad hoc solution will have to be envisaged for its representation in the Committee of Ministers.
3. The negotiating directives will be defined, where necessary, by the usual procedures."

E. Preliminary conclusions

49. The Parliamentary Assembly recognises that the drawing up of a Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union is a logical development in the evolution of the European Union and considers it as a strengthening of the protection of human rights in Europe. It should ensure that this is the case and that the rights are guaranteed to everyone within the jurisdiction of the Union.

50. It however would like to draw attention to the existence of the ECHR and its mechanism of protection through the former European Commission and the Court of Human Rights, which have proved their efficiency. It accordingly calls on the attention of the body in charge of elaborating this Charter to take this mechanism into account. In particular, it recommends it to follow the conclusions of the Expert Group on Fundamental Rights, chaired by Pr Simitis, to include and incorporate the articles of the ECHR into the Community law, together with the relevant rights in the Protocols to the ECHR. One should avoid in the future a situation in which there are two different systems of protection with two different courts whose case-law could be divergent

51. The Parliamentary Assembly also reiterates its recommendation that the European Communities/Union accede to the ECHR, to which all its member states are Parties, as was advised on many occasions in the past both by the institutions of the European Communities and by the Council of Europe. It could also accede to the European Social Charter. In order to allow this accession, the Committee of Ministers should start preparatory work.

52. In addition, in order to avoid a different interpretation of these rights by the two European Courts, it recommends that the competence of each of them be clearly defined.

APPENDIX

COMPOSITION METHOD OF WORK AND PRACTICAL ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE BODY TO ELABORATE A DRAFT EU CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS, AS SET OUT IN THE COLOGNE CONCLUSIONS

A. COMPOSITION OF THE BODY

(i) Members

(a) Heads of State or Government of Member States

Fifteen representatives of the Heads of State or Government of Member States.

(b) Commission

One representative of the President of the European Commission.

(c) European Parliament

Sixteen members of the European Parliament to be designated by itself.

(d) National Parliaments

Thirty members of national Parliaments (two from each national Parliament) to be designated by national Parliaments themselves.

Members of the Body may be replaced by alternates in the event of being unable to attend meetings of the Body.

(ii) Chairperson and Vice-Chairpersons of the Body

The Chairperson of the Body shall be elected by the Body. A member of the European Parliament, a member of a national Parliament, and the representative of the President of the European Council if not elected to the Chair, shall act as Vice-Chairpersons of the Body.

The member of the European Parliament acting as Vice-Chairperson shall be elected by the members of the European Parliament serving on the Body. The member of a national Parliament acting as Vice-Chairperson shall be elected by the members of national Parliaments serving on the Body.

(iii) Observers

Two representatives of the Court of Justice of the European Communities to be designated by the Court. Two representatives of the Council of Europe, including one from the European Court of Human Rights.

(iv) Bodies of the European Union to be invited to give their views

The Economic and Social Committee

The Committee of the Regions

The Ombudsman

(v) Exchange of views with the applicant States

An appropriate exchange of views should be held by the Body or by the Chairperson with the applicant States.

(vi) Other bodies, social groups or experts to be invited to give their views

Other bodies, social groups and experts may be invited by the Body to give their views.

(vii) Secretariat

The General Secretariat of the Council shall provide the Body with secretariat services. To ensure proper coordination, close contacts will be established with the General Secretariat of the European Parliament, with the Commission and, to the extent necessary, with the secretariats of the national Parliaments.

I: B. WORKING METHODS OF THE BODY

(i) Preparation

The Chairperson of the Body shall, in close concertation with the Vice-Chairpersons, propose a work plan for the Body and perform other appropriate preparatory work.

(ii) Transparency of the proceedings

In principle, hearings held by the Body and documents submitted at such hearings should be public.

(iii) Working groups

The Body may establish ad hoc working groups, which shall be open to all members of the Body.

(iv) Drafting

On the basis of the work plan agreed by the Body, a Drafting Committee composed of the Chairperson, the Vice-Chairpersons and the representative of the Commission and assisted by the General Secretariat of the Council, shall elaborate a preliminary Draft Charter, taking account of drafting proposals submitted by any member of the Body.

Each of the three Vice-Chairpersons shall regularly consult with the respective component part of the Body from which he or she emanates.

(v) Elaboration of the Draft Charter by the Body

When the Chairperson, in close concertation with the Vice-Chairpersons, deems that the text of the draft Charter elaborated by the Body can eventually be subscribed to by all the parties, it shall be forwarded to the European Council through the normal preparatory procedure.

II. C. PRACTICAL ARRANGEMENTS

The Body shall hold its meetings in Brussels, alternately in the Council and the European Parliament buildings.

A complete language regime shall be applicable for sessions of the Body.

Open letter to the members of the body responsible for drawing up a Charter of fundamental rights

Brussels, 12 January 2000

Dear Sir/Madam/Colleagues,

Since 1980 Members of the European Parliament have met in an intergroup called the "European Fourth World Committee" in order to include the concerns of the poor in Parliament's discussions. The secretariat of this intergroup is run by the International Movement ATD Fourth World, which brings together people experiencing extreme poverty and other citizens who ally themselves with them. The Committee has decided to write to you today because its action has always been dominated by the fact that poverty is a violation of all fundamental rights (civil, political, economic, social and cultural).

It would like to inform you of its proposals regarding the drafting of a Charter of fundamental rights. It considers that:

(a) the Charter must be incorporated in the European Union Treaties and must be designed with this in mind, since it would otherwise amount to an ineffectual declaration and prove to be a source of further disappointment;

(b) the Charter must include all the rights enshrined in the European Convention on Human Rights (Rome, 1950) and in the revised European Social Charter (Strasbourg, 1996);

(c) this Charter must include not only the rights which can be invoked direct but also "positive-action" programmatic rights (which can be invoked only indirectly since they oblige the institutions concerned to take measures or implement programmes in order to give everyone access to the rights). This is particularly important as regards rights enshrined in the revised European Social Charter such as:

- the right to protection against poverty and social exclusion (Article 30),
- the right to housing (Article 31);

(d) this Charter must include, as the "Comité des sages" chaired by Ms Maria de Lourdes Pintasilgo proposed in 1996, the right to a guaranteed minimum income which allows all people to live in dignity, to safeguard their health and well-being and that of their families;

(e) this Charter must include the right of the European NGOs to participate in, and be consulted by, the European institutions through the implementation of a structured civil dialogue;

(f) this Charter must contain an explicit undertaking by the European Community that it will sign the European Convention on Human Rights and the revised European Social Charter.

In order for the views of the least favoured sections of the population to be heard, the Committee also asks you to give hearings to the International Movement ATD Fourth World during your discussions.

Our hope is that the European Union can be given a new grounding in fundamental rights.

Yours faithfully,

Marietta Giannakou-Koutsikou

THE CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS AND FREEDOMS

EVIDENCE TO COUNCIL OF EUROPE

1. Outline of evidence

1. The Fair Trials Abroad Trust is a unique EU based organisation concerned with the individual citizen's rights to justice when outside their own country. Our concerns are not theoretical but the practical enforcement of fundamental rights in the police stations and courts of first instance throughout the community.

2. Background to the Charter It is particularly important to take note of the creation of a European Legal Space initiated at the Tampere conference. A number of novel measures were proposed: mutual recognition of judgements, fast track extradition etc. These developments without appropriate counter measures pose unparalleled and unacceptable risks to civil liberties and fundamental rights within Community's geographical area. Such basic problems as equality before the law will become exacerbated by the Tampere proposals. Whilst there is now a general recognition by European institutions that there are problems it is unlikely that effective solutions to them will become universally operative because of treaty limitations.

3. Standards of justice within the Union Concern is expressed that in certain countries of the Union the individual facing serious criminal charges is unlikely to receive such fundamental rights as adequate interpretation or access to a competent lawyer to defend him if he cannot afford to pay. Crucially, there is as yet no general standard that the judicially advanced states of the Union, including the United Kingdom, consider adequate for their own citizens. There appears to be, in general terms, three standards of administration of justice co-existing within the Union: "Best practice," European Convention and Mediterranean.

4. The need for an effective charter The European Legal space is a creature of the successive treaties that have created the present parameters of the European Union: it is subject to the built in limitations of those treaties. The measures required to ensure that the citizen has adequate protection against abuse of fundamental freedoms cannot be formulated within them. It is clear that the European Convention of Human Rights does not represent an adequate standard for the Union: the enlargement process will make matters worse.

5. Some essential characteristics of an effective Charter We consider it important that the Charter be considered as the latest in a line of international instruments giving ever more detailed protection to the citizen. Effective mechanisms for adjudicating citizens grievances and supplying appropriate remedies are required. The shortcomings of the European Court of Human Rights are considered and recommendations made for improvements.

6. Conclusions The Union has a pressing need for a modern and effective charter. The European Convention standards are obsolescent and poorly policed by its mechanisms. Unless the Charter has substantive legal effect many Citizens will not enjoy the fundamental freedoms they expect in their native lands when they travel to other parts of the union. Having regard to the stasis in development of standards under the ECHR we would particularly encourage the concept of the Charter as a living document with sufficient flexibility to change with the times.

Introduction

7.The Fair Trials Abroad Trust was formed in July 1994 with the intention of ensuring Fair Trials for EU Citizens out of country. Now widely known as Fair Trials Abroad, or FTA for short, it remains the only EU based organisation concerned with the individual citizen's rights to justice when outside their own country. The basis of these rights are the domestic law of the country concerned including international treaty obligations where those obligations give rise to justiciable rights (European Convention of Human Rights, International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights) recognised in that country.

8.The Trust has developed into a major advisory body for all those concerned with interstate machinery of criminal justice problems affecting the Union Citizen. This it has done by concentrating on individual cases exhibiting injustices, and discovering patterns exhibiting problems in the machinery of justice. One of the most important tools of advice and research has proven to be the unique network of local native correspondents.

9.It will be seen that the trust is a practitioners organisation utilising international treaty law in the specialist sector of the administration of criminal justice. Our observations should be considered as directly applicable to our sphere of competence, though they may have more general implications for the content of the new Charter and its enforcement machinery.

Background to the Charter

10.It is particularly important to take note of developments in the parallel creation of a European Legal Space also initiated at the Tampere Conference. Mutual recognition of judgements was endorsed without any reference to standards of judicial competence or other safeguards (Clause 33). The Council approved fast track extradition without attention drawn to the potential for discrimination in the current lack of provisional liberty for non-native citizens. It was also apparent that extradition without formality was to be granted in cases of final judgement (even if trials have taken place in absentia and without notice to the accused!) (Clause 34).

11.These developments without appropriate counter measures pose unparalleled and surely unacceptable risks to civil liberties and fundamental rights within the Community's geographical area. There is now a general recognition by European institutions that what is needed is a twin track approach to the creation of a European Legal Space in which the innocent sojourner (to include visitors, asylum seekers and migrants as well as citizens) is protected against injustice by tackling the "Freedom" problems of defence simultaneously with the "Security" problems of prosecution.

12.Unfortunately, the history of Third Pillar development and consequent evolution of the department supporting the Commissioner of Justice and Home Affairs has been entirely law enforcement orientated. There was, so far as we are aware, no recorded instance of a civil liberties topic achieving priority for consideration by the Council of Ministers prior to the conception of the Charter of Freedoms during the German Presidency. The summit created a novel area of operational responsibility for Civil Liberty oriented tasks within the Commission. We have little doubt that a number of the problems highlighted by us will be tackled methodically and pragmatically over the next five years. If the pattern of compliance with European Court of Human Rights decisions in the past is any guidance, those countries which represent "best practice" of fundamental rights will undoubtedly improve the protection they offer foreigners against injustice: nevertheless the citizens throughout the Union as a whole are likely to suffer if they have no direct remedies. Such basic problems as equality before the law and de facto application of fundamental rights to an acceptable standard will become exacerbated by the Tampere proposals.

Equality before the law.

13.The proposed measures were publicly and clearly aimed at international crimes of a conspiratorial nature (Community fraud, drug and human trafficking and terrorism) which represent menaces to society. The difficulties created in the pragmatic solutions to prosecution problems proposed by the European Council is that they will inevitably result in a far higher proportion of conspiracy cases involving a mixture of native and foreign defendants being brought before the various national courts of Europe. It follows that the numbers of defendants, some innocent, being handicapped by unequal treatment before the law will increase. Equality before the law is therefor an issue, and must be addressed by appropriate measures.

14.We should emphasise here that whilst one recognises there will be sections of the Charter that only apply to rights of citizens (freedom of movement, residence and rights to work) the rights to Fair Trial cannot be so confined. We are unaware of anywhere in the civilised world where a two tier system of criminal justice is countenanced.

The application of fundamental rights within the Union.

15.The issues of general protection from injustice were ignored in the preparations for Tampere and did not feature at the summit itself. This may have been due to two mistaken presumptions: that the standards of the European Convention on Human Rights are being implemented in practice throughout the Union and that these standards in themselves are adequate.

16.From the outset of our research into causes of injustice to the travelling Union citizen we have been concerned about obvious major defects in the observance of the ECHR within the Union. Two research projects we have been responsible for AJISE (Access To Justice in Southern Europe) and ELIP (European Legal Interpreters Project) gave substance to the proposition that in certain countries of the Union the individual facing serious criminal charges is unlikely to receive such fundamental rights as adequate interpretation so that he can understand and be understood, or access to a competent lawyer to defend him if he cannot afford to pay.

Standards of Justice within the Union

17.Crucially, there is as yet no general standard that the more judicially advanced states of the Union, including the United Kingdom, consider adequate for their own citizens within their own geographical boundaries: it is to the Charter that one must look for the creation of such a standard.

18.There appears to be, in general terms, three standards of administration of justice co-existing within the Union; “best practice,” European Convention and Mediterranean. The differences between them can be illustrated through the standards applied in the provision to the accused of state funded representation and interpretation services.

“Best practice”

19. Modern “best practice” was codified in a resolution adopted by General assembly of the United Nations in 1988, “A body of principles for the protection of all persons, under any form of detention or imprisonment”. It was adopted without a vote. These principles build on the experience of previous regional and international treaties and go into far more detail on protection than, for example, the International Convention on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR.)

20. Under Principle 15, communication with counsel cannot be denied under any circumstances for more than a matter of days. He shall be entitled to have the assistance of counsel promptly after arrest (Principle 17) and have legal counsel assigned to him if he does not have means to pay.

21. Under Principle 14, a person who does not adequately understand or speak the language used by the authorities in question is entitled to receive promptly in a language he understands all information required under the principles and to have the assistance free of charge of an interpreter in connection with legal proceedings subsequent to his arrest.
