Je suis juriste, je ne suis pas linguiste, ça je ne peux pas choisir. Pour la France le mot "sûreté" convient très bien, c'est sûr. Ce que je voulais remarquer c'est que je suis d'accord avec notre collègue espagnol, que on ne peut pas dire simplement dans les cas spécifiques, parce que c'est trop vague. Mais on ne peut pas dire non plus dans les cas prévus par la loi. Parce que si la loi est contraire à la convention européenne des droits de l'homme, elle n'est pas valable. Et là je rejoins sans doute Lord GOLDSMITH, il faut trouver un système qui permette de conserver les limites prévues par la convention européenne des droits de l'homme pour définir les cas d'arrestation arbitraires. C'est une question de technique juridique mais il faut bien y penser, parce que dire des conditions prévues par la loi, qui est la loi nationale, et la loi nationale peut être contraire à la convention européenne des droits de l'homme.

20/03/2000 16:19:50 Mme BERÈS (Le Parlement européen)

Deux observations : sur le terme "sûreté" ou "sécurité", les deux termes n'ont pas la même signification en France. Je ne sais pas si les autres langues bénéficient de cette richesse. Mais en France le terme "sûreté" et le terme historique avait été employé dans les précédents textes, le terme "sécurité" a une conception beaucoup plus large, c'est un concept me semble-t-il beaucoup plus large et lorsque je regarde la proposition de notre collègue espagnol : d'ajouter un droit de réparation, il se comprend bien au regard de la sécurité, mais garantir ce droit nous emmène extrêmement loin parce que on peut pas parler de sécurité alimentaire, de sécurité en terme de santé, et on va bien au-delà du concept de sûreté qui est un concept plutôt lié me semble-t-il aux forces de police. Deuxième observation : sur la fin de la rédaction et notamment la référence à la loi. Si on tentait ou on impliquait et on adoptait cette rédaction, c'est un problème me semble-t-il qu'on va trouver dans beaucoup d'autres articles que nous allons examiner. La loi ce n'est pas un concept européen, or nous rédigeons une charte de l'Union européenne, donc il faut trouver une périphrase ou se mettre d'accord sur une expression qui nous permette de faire référence aux normes aux voies légales de l'Union, mais la loi c'est un concept que l'Union européenne ne connaît pas, donc je ne pense pas que nous puissions y faire référence.

20/03/2000 16:21:25 Lord GOLDSMITH (Le Parlement britannique)

Merci , je suis tout à fait d'accord avec M. BRAIBANT. Je crois que la proposition faite par M. BEREJO pourrait vouloir dire qu'on peut priver quelqu'un d'un droit à cause d'une disposition qui n'est pas prévue par la convention européenne qui elle prévoit six cas spécifiques où il peut y avoir privation de liberté et je suis d'accord avec M. BRAIBANT, il y a une question technique importante, qu'il faut que le langage reflète justement cela et rien d'autre. Alors cette technique c'est important, je préfère le point de vue de M. BRAIBANT à celui de M. BEREJO. Alors deuxièmement le mot "sûreté". J'écoutai avec intérêt les problèmes linguistiques à ce sujet. Le mot apparaît dans la convention européenne et je crois que si on enlève ce mot on réduit la protection pour le citoyen. C'est dans la convention et je pense que c'est lié pour une raison bien précise donc je ne voudrais pas qu'on l'enlève.

20/03/2000 16:22:46 PRESIDENT

Mais nous sommes tout à fait d'accord avec vous, Monsieur GOLDSMITH.

20/03/2000 16:22:53 M. KORTHALS ALTES (Le Parlement néerlandais)

Je voudrais réagir parce que dès que nous nous écartons du texte de l'exposé des motifs on risque d'interpréter les choses autrement. Si M. Braibant dit ne nous écartons pas de l'exposé, je suis d'accord, mais je voudrais que ce soit valable pour cet article et pour certains autres aussi. Si par contre, nous disons nous allons avec un article horizontal faire en sorte qu'il ne puisse y avoir de divergences par rapport à l'exposé des motifs, alors ce sera aussi valable pour cet article et là je pense que nous ne pouvons pas ici déterminer que les droits seraient moins garantis par l'exposé des motifs.

20/03/2000 16:23:56 PRESIDENT

Nous passons à l'article 7 (présidence)

20/03/2000 16:24:14 M. MEYER (Le Parlement allemand)

Une remarque en ce qui concerne le droit à la sûreté à l'article 6 encore : j'aimerais demander au-delà de cette réunion qu'on réfléchisse à la situation de droit. M FRIEDRICH à raison lorsqu'il dit : "la convention prévoit que ce qui suit l'article 5 c'est le droit à la liberté" et que donc ce droit à la sûreté pourrait être supprimé dans la mesure où ce serait couvert, mais c'est en fait la discussion à partir de 1950, maintenant entre-temps dans plusieurs pays de l'Union la discussion a évolué et le droit fondamental à la liberté a par exemple, en République fédérale mais également dans d'autres pays, joué un rôle important dans le débat sur la protection contre la criminalité organisée. On nous a demandé, par exemple, ce qu'il en était des instruments d'écoute qu'on mettait dans les appartements. Au niveau des droits fondamentaux la saisine de profit quand il s'agit de criminalité organisée on a toujours dit que le droit à la liberté et à la sûreté existait aussi au niveau de la victime, mais aussi de celui qui était concerné. Donc je crois que cet aspect doit être pris en compte, depuis qu'on lutte contre la criminalité que c'est devenu quelque chose qui a été communautarisé et qui est devenu un devoir communautaire avec la transposition du troisième pilier. Donc je crois qu'enfin on ne peut pas se contenter de dire que ce constat est vide de sens, je crois qu'il faut réfléchir, aller un peu au-delà, et qu'il s'agit de voir que pour les obstacles aux droits fondamentaux qu'il continue à nous occuper. S'il y a un obstacle à d'autres droits, il faut en tout cas se réserver la possibilité dans la clause générale de dire que de telles limitations des droits fondamentaux à cause de raisons de sécurité, de raisons de sûreté ou de sécurité du fait de criminalité organisée, de la lutte qu'il faut organiser contre elle, etc., et alors on citerait que les moyens doivent être adaptés à l'objectif qui est la lutte contre la criminalité, il faut que ce soit les moyens nécessaires les plus efficaces, et il faut pouvoir aussi pondérer leur importance tant aux droits fondamentaux. C'est un conflit typique ici, avec lequel il nous faudra nous confronter lorsque nous parlerons des limites, je crois qu'il faut simplement dès aujourd'hui réfléchir un petit peu au-delà à ce concept de droits fondamentaux et de sûreté. Donc je propose de ne pas se décider aujourd'hui pour supprimer ou pas, je crois qu'il faut dire que c'est un point intéressant sur lequel il convient de réfléchir parce que de toute façon il y aura un ... plus tard, une décision qui sera prise.

20/03/2000 16:27:33 PRESIDENT

Merci M. MEYER. Nous passons à l'article 5. Droit à un recours en justice

20/03/2000 16:27:46 M. RODRIGUEZ-BEREIJO (Le Parlement espagnol)

Je crois qu'il faut inclure deux choses précises d'un point de vue juridique: la première c'est que la protection a des droits et ce sont les droits repris dans cette charte et pas les autres. Deuxièmement il faut tenir compte du fait que l'accès d'un citoyen au tribunal c'est un droit qui a une énorme force expansive et donc je pense qu'il y a lieu de le mentionner de façon expressive dans le texte en disant que les conditions dans lesquelles on peut avoir accès à un tribunal figurant dans les traités parce que il ne s'agit pas non plus d'avoir accès à un tel recours dans n'importe quelles conditions n'importe où, n'importe comment. non, il faut le faire dans le cadre des tribunaux européens ou dans le cadre des tribunaux des Etats membres et qui détermine aussi les conditions dans lesquelles on peut avoir accès à ces tribunaux. Donc je propose que on ajoute un droit à un recours effectivement au tribunal conformément aux droits communautaires et aux droits de chacun des Etats membres.

20/03/2000 16:29:31 M. MELOGRANI (Le Parlement italien)

Je voudrais signaler un problème de traduction (...?) parce que je pense qu'il faut en tenir compte : le dernier mot en italien on dit juge, en espagnol : tribunal en allemand c'est "Cour" d'accord .

20/03/2000 16:29:59 M. FRIEDRICH (Le Parlement européen)

Il y a deux formules qui existent à l'heure actuelle pour l'article 7 : d'abord 13, on a droit à un recours effectif. Moi j'aurais plutôt l'objection parce que j'ai un autre texte, le corrigendum 1 du convent 13 qui est apparemment aussi un document officiel, une nouvelle proposition, c'est la présidence qui l'a faite, et là à l'article 7 on trouve ... introduction juridique effective... et on dit .. toute personne isolée à le droit à une protection juridique efficace devant le tribunal. La deuxième formule je peux l'accepter mais pas la première.

20/03/2000 16:30:55 PRESIDENT

Vous voulez-bien me passer le corrigendum.

20/03/2000 16:31:04 Lord GOLDSMITH (Le Parlement britannique)

Cet article touche aux questions horizontales, parce que il s'agit de la mise en oeuvre des dispositions figurant dans l'article et ce qui n'était pas clair c'était que nous avons abordé la question avant d'avoir vu le contenu des articles alors si ceci ne concerne que ce que.....

[FIN DE LA BOBINE]

... les institutions, est-ce qu'il s'agit d'un recours effectif devant la Cour européenne de justice, si c'est le cas, qu'en est-il des droits et restrictions qui existent dans le cadre de l'article 230 et de l'article 232 du traité sur les droits des individus à saisir la Cour européenne, donc c'est trop restrictif. Je pense que c'est une question importante qu'il y a lieu d'examiner et ma principale préoccupation c'est de savoir si nous pouvons vraiment traiter cette question avant d'avoir abordé les questions horizontales qui pour des raisons que je comprends vous avez voulu éviter aujourd'hui. Alors, il y a deux autres remarques sur le texte actuel. Premièrement, ce n'est pas une reproduction de l'article 13 de la Convention européenne, cela est expliqué à l'exposé des motifs mais il y a une différence considérable, l'article 13 prévoit un recours pour ceux dont les droits et les libertés sont reconnus dans la Convention. Or, cet article-ci est beaucoup large et semble couvrir tous les droits et toutes les libertés. Ce n'est peut-être pas voulu, mais c'est une distinction importante et je voudrais savoir pourquoi le qualifier en deuxième différence et cela a été abordé par l'exposé des motifs, c'est la Convention sur les droits de l'homme permet qu'un recours effectif soit fait devant une instance nationale et pas uniquement une Cour. C'est très important et cela doit être un recours effectif, cela doit être indépendant et approprié mais dans le cas de certains droits, ce serait possible que quelqu'un d'autre que une cour fournisse un recours effectif et je ne voudrais pas enlever cette possibilité si nous parlons de recours effectif devant une instance nationale. Si c'est devant la Cour européenne, d'accord, mais c'est différent. Et donc je reviens à la question des articles et des questions horizontales, c'est pourquoi pour l'instant, je vous propose de laisser de côté cet article jusqu'à ce que nous ayons abordé les questions horizontales.

20/03/2000 16:34:07 M. BRAIBANT (Le Parlement français)

On ne peut rien cacher à Lord GOLDSMITH. Je voudrais dire qu'ayant participé en réunion de bureau à la rédaction de cet article, il y a effectivement une explication à la différence avec l'article correspondant de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Personnellement, je suis choqué par l'article "convention européenne" parce qu'il comporte un a contrario. Il dit: "toutes les violations des droits et libertés prévus par cette convention, pourront donner lieu à un recours". Cela veut dire à contrario que les violations des droits et libertés non prévus par cette convention ne donnent pas droit à un recours. Et alors nous étions obligés de traduire, évidemment, de modifier le texte parce que là nous disions: "toute violation des droits et libertés prévus par cette charte" et on ne pouvait pas dire "par la présente convention". Mais dans les deux cas personnellement, je pense que c'est une restriction excessive et que toute violation de droit et de liberté prévu par quoi que ce soit, par une loi nationale, par une convention internationale doit donner lieu à un recours effectif. C'est donc en effet un nouveau droit que nous proclamons, que nous reconnaissons. Parce que je crois qu'il est déjà reconnu dans toutes les constitutions des pays d'Europe ou dans les jurisprudences. Le droit au recours effectif dès lors qu'un droit ou une liberté est violé. Et effectivement, à ce moment-là, ce droit devrait être sans doute déplacé mais il devrait être maintenu comme droit autonome. C'est le droit à un recours dès lors qu'une liberté ou un droit est violé. Qu'il soit prévu par la Charte, qu'il soit prévu par la Convention européenne des droit de l'homme ou par une loi nationale ou par un traité international.

20/03/2000 16:36:00 M. VITORINO (La Commission)

Merci Monsieur le président, seulement pour ajouter à ce que M. BRAIBANT vient de dire, je partage tout à fait son raisonnement que dans ce cas, ce qu'on prétend, c'est de maintenir dans la Charte le degré de protection qui est déjà à ce moment assuré par la jurisprudence de la Cour du Luxembourg en ce qui concerne les droits qui sont protégés par le droit communautaire, les droits individuels qui sont protégés par le droit communautaire. La Cour du Luxembourg elle-même dit qu'en ce qui concerne l'application du droit communautaire, il faut garantir toujours l'accès à un juge, l'accès à un tribunal quand il s'agit de la protection des droits subjectifs des citoyens et dans ce cas je trouve que le dire de cette façon c'est nouveau en tant que droit écrit mais c'est la consécration de la jurisprudence de la Cour de Justice européenne et qu'on ne peut pas rester au-dessous du niveau de protection que la Cour elle-même a déjà référé à plusieurs reprises et on pourrait citer l'arrêt du 15 mai 1986 pour illustrer cette interprétation.

20/03/2000 16:37:29 PRESIDENT

Merci, d'autres remarques sur l'article...

20/03/2000 16:37:33 M. HAENEL (Le Parlement français)

Je partage tout à fait les points de vue qui viennent d'être exprimés par MM. VITORINO et BRAIBANT. Je crois qu'effectivement, il faut aller au-delà des simples droits et libertés qui sont reconnus par la Charte. On explique bien dans le commentaire, dans l'exposé des motifs qu'on a écarté le terme "instance nationale", bon, je suis tout à fait d'accord avec ça. Mais en ce qui concerne le terme "tribunal": les uns disent "c'est un tribunal", les autres "une cour", soit en allemand, soit en anglais, on pourrait dire aussi une juridiction mais est-ce que dans certains cas et dans certains pays ce ne sera pas une autorité qui ne sera pas ni tribunal ni cour ni juridiction au sens étroit du terme et à ce moment-là est-ce qu'il ne faut pas une fois de plus être très clair y compris dans le commentaire puisque vous dites vous-mêmes, dans le commentaire "le recours ne peut être exercé soit devant le juge communautaire, soit devant le juge national" mais il peut y avoir des cas et dans certains pays, sans doute en France, je n'ai pas des exemples à l'esprit, mais où le recours ne sera pas directement, en tout cas pas en première instance, devant ce qu'on peut appeler "un juge" au sens étroit du terme, donc "juridiction".

20/03/2000 16:39:00 M. MANZELLA (Le Parlement italien)

Je suis tout à fait d'accord avec cette explication sur la possibilité d'un recours effectif. Je voudrais simplement faire remarquer que ceci n'a rien à voir avec la question du caractère contraignant du droit. Parce que cela pourrait être un principe politique ou un principe juridique. C'est celle-là la question transversale que nous devrions résoudre plus tard mais celle-ci c'est tout à fait différent. Cela constitue l'un des droits fondamentaux de notre Charte.

20/03/2000 16:39:55 M. TARSCHYS (Le Parlement suédois)

J'avais une question à l'adresse de M. BRAIBANT. Je n'ai pas très bien suivi son raisonnement. C'est vrai que ce droit existe dans nos Etats membres mais ne s'agit-il pas d'une charte adressée aux institutions de l'Union européenne et dans ce cas-là, bien sûr, cela ne vise pas les instances nationales en tant qu'organes judiciaires nationaux. Chez nous on fait une distinction entre les cas de juridiction criminelle ou des cas de juridiction civile, donc il ne s'agirait pas d'un seul tribunal qui traiterait toutes les questions mais je pensais, Monsieur le président que nous parlions ici d'une charte visant uniquement les institutions de l'Union.

20/03/2000 16:41:02 M. MEYER (Le Parlement allemand)

Je voudrais défendre le texte, dans la mesure où il fait mention des juridictions. C'est vrai que c'est un petit peu différent de la convention et de son article 7 mais je crois en tout cas d'après moi, que la proposition se fait le reflet de la répartition des pouvoirs lorsqu'on a un tribunal il y a en première instance parfois un contrôle administratif et s'il s'agit de droit communautaire, la Commission, l'organe exécutif Parlement ou Conseil, peuvent prendre des décisions qui sont contrôlées par la Cour et si nous voulons renforcer l'appareil, c'est bien l'objectif de notre travail, il s'agit de faire en sorte qu'aux compétences de la Cour correspondent des compétences pour les tribunaux nationaux, s'il s'agit de l'application du droit communautaire dans chacun des Etats nationaux. Et c'est pour cela que je trouve qu'en ce qui concerne l'intérêt de l'état de droit et de la répartition des pouvoirs, la séparation des pouvoirs, on doit maintenir ce texte. Je voudrais simplement dire que dans la Convention on parle de "droit ou de libertés qui ont été violés" ici on parle de "droits et de libertés", alors je me demande si les violations de libertés doivent faire l'objet d'autres chose que de violation de droits. Bon, c'est vrai qu'on a le droit à la liberté alors je ne sais pas, il conviendrait peut-être de se mettre d'accord si nous voulons une cohérence peut-être, reprendre le texte de la Convention, mettre "ou libertés" parce que sinon cela risque d'être un petit peu.. ça ne fait pas vraiment de sens.

20/03/2000 16:43:17 PRESIDENT

S'il n'y a plus d'intervention, article 8 droit A.1 Tribunal impartial.

20/03/2000 16:43:32 M. JANSSON (Le Parlement finlandais)

Ce n'est peut-être pas aussi stylé. Les membres du présidium pourraient proposer un amendement. Lors de la réunion du présidium du 17 mars j'ai annoncé le texte de base, l'article 8 dans.. pour l'essentiel il est acceptable mais puisque à l'article 6 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme il y a quelques problèmes, j'ai donc une proposition pour un nouvel article 8. C'est l'amendement n° 10 à la page 59, page 69. Il devrait y avoir des dispositions dans le même article et pas seulement pour jugement équitable mais aussi pour une bonne administration. On en a déjà parlé pendant un certain temps. Deuxièmement, pour ce qui est de l'article 7 et ce qu'on en a dit, je crois que serait l'endroit adéquat pour ceci. Pas seulement un jugement équitable devant un tribunal mais aussi sur la façon dont le justiciable est traité dans d'autres instances. C'est la façon dont je l'entend. J'ai une correction à apporter à la version linguistique anglaise. Tout le monde a droit ... Toute personne a droit à ce que sa cause soit entendue équitablement et dans un délais raisonnable et par un tribunal adéquat ou une autre instance et a le droit à une décision judiciaire ou toute autre instance judiciairement indépendante. La deuxième clause.... je reprend... pour ce qui est d'un recours devant un tribunal ou toute autre enceinte indépendante, il est à prévoir une audition publique ainsi que la possibilité de faire valoir sa cause indépendamment et dans un délai raisonnable en fonction de garantie de bonne administration. Donc ça serait en fait dans le paragraphe 2 à la troisième ligne de la version anglaise, troisième ligne donc ... une décision dans un délai raisonnable ainsi que des garanties de bonne administration etc. Je crois que ceci est effectivement important et pour revenir à ce que je disais, je crois que Mme BRAX et NIKULA's avaient également évoqué ce point, donc je crois que ce sont des remarques très constructives pour l'article 4 auquel je me rallie.

20/03/2000 16:48:00 M. HAENEL (Le Parlement français)

Nous sommes tous d'accord pour dire que les droits et libertés qui sont défendus dans le cas d'un recours effectif, et bien, ce recours ne peut être effectif que si pour les personnes qui ne disposent pas de ressources suffisantes une aide soit prévue. Alors là encore on a un problème d'interprétation. Il y a le texte français qui dit "une aide juridique", alors qu'en fait il s'agit d'une "aide judiciaire ou juridictionnelle" puisque dans l'exposé des motifs, vous dites vous-même "il convient de prévoir une aide judiciaire" alors que quand on regarde bien dans le texte anglais et allemand, il semble qu'il n'y ait pas d'équivoque sur le sens du terme "aide juridique". Il s'agit bien dans le texte allemand et anglais de dire "une aide pour pouvoir avoir accès à la justice" alors qu'en français on a l'aide juridique qui est tout à fait différente de l'aide judiciaire ou juridictionnelle. Là encore, Monsieur le président, je me permets d'intervenir là-dessus pour qu'ensuite il n'y ait pas d'équivoque possible.

20/03/2000 16:49:28 M. RACK (Le Parlement européen)

Merci. Très brièvement sur deux points. D'abord en ce qui concerne le concept déjà plusieurs fois discuté de ce que serait le tribunal. Nous en avons vu ce qu'il en était de la convention avec les expériences que nous avons faites les structures administratives et les structures juridictionnelles dans les Etats membres sont parfois très différentes et c'est pour cela que la convention des droits de l'homme a impliqué des modifications des structures administratives des Etats membres plus que cela n'a été prévu au départ. Je crois qu'il y a ici un problème semblable et que il faut être très prudent sur ce point. Quand on parle de tribunal il faut qu'il soit très clair que ce qu'on entend est bien compatible et comparable dans les structures traditionnelles. Il faut par exemple dire que dans la séparation des pouvoirs il y a plusieurs autorités compétentes qui peuvent être impliquées. Et je crois que cela dès le début de la procédure, surtout au début de la procédure. Ensuite, il semble que parfois l'article 8 n'est pas au bon endroit parce que juste avant et juste après on a les articles qui essentiellement parlent de procédures pénales et de garanties pénales alors qu'ici à l'article 8, c'est une cause d'accès au droit donc je pense que cela serait mieux à sa place deux ou trois articles plus loin en ce qui concerne par exemple ce qui dit, mais je crois qu'il faut d'abord terminer ce qui relève du droit pénal, tout ce qui est atteinte aux libertés et ensuite parler de ces garanties générales.

20/03/2000 16:51:41 M. FAYOT (Le Parlement luxembourgeois)

Oui, merci M. le président, en ce qui concerne cet article, je pense qu'il est composé de deux parties assez inégales. La première partie : la première phrase est tirée de la convention des droits de l'homme et ne donne pas lieu à observations. Je trouve que c'est un texte parfait. La deuxième partie est relativement nouvelle et je pense que la formulation pourrait être améliorée. J'ai introduit un amendement pour rendre ce texte plus lisible puisque tel qu'il est il me semble assez compliqué. J'ai une remarque particulière en ce qui concerne le terme d'octroyer. Evidemment, je laisse aux francophones natifs le soin de juger de ce verbe mais j'ai l'impression que le terme octroyer signifie accorder, imposer de force alors qu'il faudrait à mon sens dire qu'une aide juridique est accordée et non pas octroyée. Enfin, c'est une remarque sur la traduction et je pense que le reste de cette phrase pourrait être rendu plus lisible en la tournant autrement, j'ai proposé "une aide juridique gratuite est accordée à ceux qui ne disposent de ressources suffisantes pour leur assurer un accès effectif à la justice".

20/03/2000 16:53:30 M. FISCHBACH (Conseil de l'Europe)

Merci M. le président, je voudrais peut-être souligner en tant qu'observateur, que les deux articles, les articles 8 et 9 de la convention n° 13 se réfèrent à l'article 6 de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Je dois dire que c'est peut-être l'article qui a connu le plus grand développement jurisprudentiel de tous les articles de la convention des droits de l'homme depuis 59 donc depuis que la Cour interprète et applique les dispositions de la convention. Et puisque c'est un article tellement important protégeant essentiellement les citoyens contre l'arbitraire des autorités nationales, je dois dire qu'il faut bien évidemment se défendre de vouloir en faire deux articles distincts alors qu'on ne peut pas séparer ces articles dans leur contenu. Je m'explique. Il y a l'article 6 de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme qui dans son premier paragraphe énonce évidemment le droit de tout citoyen de recourir devant un juge impartial et le droit de voir son procès évacué dans un délai raisonnable avec d'autres conditions de protection. Les autres paragraphes, tels la présomption d'innocence ou les autres conditions prévues au paragraphe 3 de l'article 6 sont en fait des droits ou une liste de droits qui n'est pas exhaustive, c'est une liste de droits qui est illustrative et qui évidemment pourra être développée ultérieurement par de nouvelles applications jurisprudentielles. Je dirais donc que ce sont des conditions particulières du procès équitable et on ne peut pas séparer les conditions particulières et surtout des conditions qui ne sont pas exhaustives mais qui sont illustratives du principe fondamental qui est le principe de tout citoyen, de son droit à un procès équitable. Voilà pourquoi je pense qu'il serait sensé, qu'il serait raisonnable d'essayer au moins de regrouper ces deux articles. Reste enfin, le problème de l'aide juridique gratuite : et là évidemment il y a une petite difficulté quant à l'insertion de cette aide gratuite puisqu'on la retrouve et dans l'article 8 et dans l'exposé des motifs de l'article 9. Alors que dans l'exposé des motifs de l'article 9, elle se rapporte évidemment uniquement à l'aide gratuite, à l'assistance judiciaire gratuite en matière pénale alors qu'elle est déjà couverte en partie par l'article 8. Il faudra voir ça mais en tout cas cela risque d'être un double emploi qui est difficilement, qu'il est difficile de comprendre à la lecture donc de ces deux articles. Merci M. le président.

20/03/2000 16:56:46 M. BERTHU (Le Parlement européen)

Merci M. le président. Je pense que cet article 8 pose un principe très important mais qu'il va beaucoup trop loin dans le détail. Quand je lis par exemple la seconde phrase, sur l'aide judiciaire gratuite, j'ai vraiment l'impression qu'on est en train de définir des modalités d'application et non pas des principes. Et même dans la première phrase quand je vois que l'on parle à la première ligne d'une cause entendue équitablement mais à la deuxième ligne d'un tribunal impartial, il me semble qu'on se répète. Que serait un tribunal impartial qui n'entendrait pas les causes équitablement ? Pour moi, c'est un peu la même chose bien que ce soit dit évidemment dans la convention européenne des droits de l'homme, je crois qu'on pourrait raccourcir et c'est pourquoi, je pense que l'article 7 et l'article 8 ne pourraient faire l'objet en réalité que d'un seul article ramassé sur les principes qui pourrait s'écrire de la manière suivante : "Toute personne dont les droits ou les libertés ont été violés dans le cadre des activités communautaires (puisque nous parlons bien des activités communautaires n'est-ce pas ?) a droit à un recours effectif devant un tribunal indépendant et impartial établi par la loi nationale ou les traités". Je vous signale que nous posons là déjà un principe très important pour la justice communautaire et très, très innovateur. Parler d'aide judiciaire gratuite après avoir posé ce principe-là dans le cadre des activités communautaires aurait des conséquences pour les finances communautaires que je crois il faudrait étudier.

20/03/2000 16:58:43 M. MOMBAUR (Le Parlement européen)

À l'article 8 : deux remarques. Un tribunal qui serait créé pour un cas spécifique, d'après la formule ici correspondrait au texte mais pas à la tradition des Etats membres, ça a déjà été dit. Les tribunaux exceptionnels qui se réunissent sur un dossier alors je me demande si on ne pourrait pas ici dire autre chose pour ne pas légitimer cette Cour d'exception. Ensuite, le problème de cette aide juridique gratuite, moi je dois dire je n'ai pas de difficultés mais je crois que le droit de l'Union ne connaît pas ce concept. On parle des actes juridiques en général et on ne parle pas d'autres concepts donc il faudrait harmoniser les concepts ici sachant que si on représente le Parlement on doit dire qu'il ne peut s'agir que d'un acte juridique qui a été visé par les deux enceintes qui sont au niveau du droit communautaire habilitées d'après notre terminologie à prendre un acte de codécision. En tout cas il faut harmoniser par rapport au texte du traité. Merci Monsieur le président,

20/03/2000 17:00:37 M. TRIAS SAGNIER (Le Parlement espagnol)

Je propose de bien voir les deux parties de cet article. D'abord la première partie qui est le droit à être entendu dans sa cause, équitablement etc. et puis l'aide juridique gratuite ou judiciaire gratuite. Alors je crois que pour simplifier, il vaudrait mieux supprimer "dans la mesure où cette aide serait indispensable pour assurer l'effectivité de l'accès à la justice". Pourquoi biffer ? Parce que l'assistance juridique ou judiciaire ne peut pas dépendre de la subjectivité d'un collège d'avocats, d'un bureau, d'un tribunal ou d'une enceinte de l'Etat qui éventuellement devrait financer cette assistance gratuite. Donc, il peut y avoir une propension de ce fait à interpréter de manière assez restrictive. Donc, à mon avis et vu la jurisprudence espagnole de la Cour constitutionnelle qui a repris la terminologie anglo-saxonne "right of effective representation", c'est pas seulement le droit à la défense dans le sens formel mais dans le sens matériel également avec tout ce que ça implique, assistance gratuite etc. donc je crois qu'il vaut mieux utiliser une formule impérative, une assistance juridique gratuite sera octroyée à ceux qui n'auront pas les ressources suffisantes. Point. Maintenant en ce qui concerne la première partie, l'article. Je crois que la lecture de M. JANSSON est probablement la meilleure. On propose en effet quelque chose qui correspond tout à fait à ce que nous voulons.

20/03/2000 17:02:40 M. MELOGRANI (Le Parlement italien)

Je voulais simplement faire une observation très brève. La Cour de Strasbourg pense qu'il y a au niveau administratif des éléments qui peuvent être controversés en ce qui concerne par exemple des dossiers de haut niveau qui ne seraient pas couverts par le droit civil et la convention des droits de l'homme. Est-ce que certaines sanctions mineures pour lesquelles le tribunal ou la Cour de Strasbourg ne se sent pas apte à faire une sentence pénale. Mais en ce qui concerne l'article 8, la troisième ligne : ce qu'on y dit est un petit peu trop général et il faudrait peut-être envisager d'aller au-delà du mandat qui nous a été donné par Cologne sur ce point. Merci Monsieur le président,

20/03/2000 17:03:52 M. FRIEDRICH (Le Parlement européen)

Encore un point en ce qui concerne l'aide juridique gratuite : il faudrait savoir si on ne pourrait pas indiquer que dans l'Union qui pourrait s'élargir d'ici quelques années, des problèmes linguistiques peuvent se poser. Donc, quand on parle d'aide judiciaire gratuite il faut aussi un appui linguistique, ce qui n'a jamais été dit expressis verbis. Il se peut qu'un plaignant puisse soumettre dans sa langue son dossier même s'il est en fait appelé à un tribunal d'un autre pays. Je crois que ce serait très important d'apporter aussi cette assistance linguistique.

20/03/2000 17:04:48 M. PAPADIMITRIOU (Le Parlement grec)

Merci. Je crois que ce deuxième paragraphe devrait être repris à l'article 7. Il est clair que sur le plan de l'assistance juridique, il s'agit de quelque chose qui permet à un recours d'être efficace et de ce fait je crois que sa place serait dans le recours effectif de l'article 7 mais est-ce que nous devons toujours choisir entre deux libellés ? Parfois, il me semble en effet, qu'on exagère un petit peu. Très bien. L'assistance juridique fait partie du droit à un recours effectif. Alors même si on ne mentionne pas cela dans le texte, si on interprète cela paraît quand même comme faisant partie tout de même à un recours effectif car si quelqu'un remarque qu'un citoyen a besoin de cette aide gratuite, cette aide lui sera accordée. Donc par cet exemple, on voit bien qu'elle est le lien entre notre charte et la convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Si nous pensons que cette référence à l'article 6 donne lieu à des éléments qui relèvent plus de la convention de Rome, la question qu'il faut se poser c'est dans notre libellé devons-nous être analytiques chaque fois ou peut-on laisser les commentaires généraux en fin de texte dans une clause générale qui sera considérée comme un élément qu'on pourra prendre en compte en même temps que la charte. Voyez qu'il y a peut-être des aspects plus fonctionnels à prendre en compte dans ce cas-ci comme dans d'autres. Que voulons-nous ? Voulons-nous une charte intégrant tout et expliquant tout et à ce moment-là, il faut faire très attention aux liens hiérarchiques qui existent entre la charte et la convention européenne des droits de l'homme.

20/03/2000 17:07:26 M. MÉNDEZ DE VIGO(?) (Le Parlement européen)

Merci le président. J'ai écouté avec grande attention les interventions portant sur les articles 7 et 8 et je pense que ces contributions améliorent effectivement le libellé et l'articulation entre ces deux articles tout en recherchant à s'intégrer. Pour résumer ce qui a été dit, il me semble important et d'aborder des éléments essentiels. Les articles 7 et 8 sont de nature horizontale et portent sur la séparation des pouvoirs à la lumière de l'expérience de la société civile, c'est à dire la consécration d'un pouvoir judiciaire indépendant et ceci continue d'être le critère pour l'évaluation de la qualité des démocraties. À cet égard et tenant compte le fait que nous travaillons pour l'avenir et pour une Europe qui va accueillir des cultures avec une tradition démocratique plus ou moins intense, plus ou moins récente, il me semble essentiel que dans ces deux articles il y ait une possibilité de recours avec une entité indépendante qui doit être clairement énoncée. Et pour répondre à cette préoccupation, je pense qu'il serait adéquat de reformuler les articles 7 et 8 et à l'article 8 nous maintiendrions le deuxième paragraphe qui porte sur la question de l'assistance ou aide judiciaire. Je suis effectivement d'accord comme quoi ce libellé ne devrait pas laisser cours à des interprétations restrictives et je suis d'accord avec la séparation stricte des paragraphes 1 et 2 à l'article 8. La question de l'aide judiciaire me semble plus proche de la garantie de l'effectivité du droit de recours et elle ne doit pas apparaître édulcorée ou diluée par la garantie d'un tribunal ou d'une Cour indépendante équitable et publique et dans des délais raisonnables, problème qui touche toutes nos démocraties. Merci.

20/03/2000 17:10:40 M. LONCLE (Le Parlement français)

Monsieur le président, je voudrais simplement insister pour que l'on change au moins dans la traduction française la terminologie, c'est-à-dire remplacer le mot "tribunal" par "juridiction", le mot "aide juridique" par "judiciaire" car cela a tout de même un sens plus large que les mots cités dans la traduction actuelle. Par ailleurs, je partage le point de vue de Monsieur Friedrich sur le fait que la langue peut avoir une importance dans l'aide que l'on doit à un citoyen ayant à faire à la justice. Je vous remercie.

20/03/2000 17:11:40 M. RODRIGUEZ-BEREIJO (Le Parlement espagnol)

Merci Monsieur le président. Je voudrais soutenir Monsieur FISCHBACH quand il proposait de reprendre dans un seul article le 7 et le 8 qu'il faudrait fusionner en deux alinéas d'un même article pour répondre à un mandat que nous avons du Conseil de Cologne en ce qui concerne les droits de la procédure. Il faut que nous les reprenions et c'est la première fois ici qu'on évoque tous les droits liés à la procédure judiciaire qui sont en fait les garanties d'un Etat de droit par rapport à ses citoyens pour pouvoir contrôler les actes qui sont faits par les autorités publiques. Alors on pourrait prévoir deux ou trois alinéas selon que l'on veuille séparer ou exclure l'assistance judiciaire gratuite par rapport aux autres possibilités prévues par la loi. Mais l'important c'est de bien comprendre qu'au niveau de la visibilité pour les citoyens des droits de la procédure, c'est très important en ce qui concerne l'effectivité des recours prévus par la charte. Dernière précision : dans le texte de l'article 8, on emploie un juge établi ou constitué par la loi mais attention il y a peut-être un problème de traduction. Un tribunal préétabli ou prédéterminé par la loi. Pourquoi. La garantie d'un tribunal indépendant qu'est-ce que cela veut dire ? Cela veut dire que ce n'est pas la loi qui peut déterminer la partialité, c'est en fait l'antériorité de l'un par rapport à l'autre. L'interdiction par exemple de tribunaux ad hoc ou exceptionnels peut garantir le fait qu'ils soient ... etc. Donc en espagnol "constituito pre" cela ne suffit pas "préétablis" par la loi. Interdiction d'une cour qui serait une cour exceptionnelle créée pour des motivations ad hoc.

20/03/2000 17:14:27 M. NIKULA (Chancelier de la Justice)

Je crois qu'ici il est très important de bien comprendre que dans le concept qui était établi ici et qui existe dans plusieurs Etats au niveau du droit communautaire mais au niveau des réglementations nationales, il y a là quelque chose qui est très important et qui méritera en tout cas toute notre attention quand on voudra utiliser dans la pratique ce concept. Au niveau national, ce sont souvent non pas les règlements, les arrêtés pris par les gouvernements mais les lois parlementaires. En tout cas je voudrais remercier l'auteur de cette proposition qui vise à ajouter à l'article une disposition qui nous paraît être très importante pour les institutions communautaires dans la mesure où elles sont directement concernées. Ce principe pour les institutions, peut paraître un peu étrange et un peu nouveau indépendamment de ce qui existe à la cour je dois dire que il faudra réfléchir de toute manière parce que cela fait partie des traditions qui existent au niveau judiciaire finlandais et qu'il est très important de l'indiquer ou d'en tenir compte dans le contexte communautaire. Cela a été dit par ailleurs dans d'autres articles quand on a parlé des problèmes de bonne administration, bonne gouvernance. Merci;

20/03/2000 17:16:22 Lord GOLDSMITH (Le Parlement britannique)

L'article 8 et je voudrais aussi en même temps dire quelque chose à propos de l'article 9 suivent l'article 6 de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme. C'est probablement les articles les plus importants de la convention. A moins que les citoyens aient le droit à un jugement équitable ils n'ont aucun droit. Monsieur PAPADIMITRIOU a posé une question importante sur la façon dont nous parvenons à cette clarté quand à la signification de l'article. Je proposerais cette référence à l'article 6. J'ai proposé plusieurs amendements et je vous inviterais à prendre le document à la page 63 et vous y trouverez ma proposition de libellé pour cet article. En premier lieu on fond les articles 8 et 9 en un seul article. Je comprends la raison pour laquelle on les avait séparés mais je pense qu'il faut suivre les conseils sages et éclairés de M. FISCHBACH comme quoi ces articles sont trop intimement liés pour les séparer donc je suivrais son conseil consistant à les fondre en un seul et unique article. En deuxième lieu inclure les termes "toute charge criminelle" et la raison est que la jurisprudence de la convention européenne reconnaît qu'il y a des procédures. Est-ce qu'il doit y avoir audition publique pour tous les questions administratives ? De manière large il a été accepté qu'il y a des droits qui ne nécessitent pas que tous ces droits de la défense soient respectés et j'aimerais réintroduire ceci dans le libellé en suivant le terme utilisé dans la CEDH. Dernier point, je proposerais d'éliminer les termes "aide judiciaire". En tant qu'avocat, je pense que effectivement il devrait y avoir une aide judiciaire pour toutes les personnes qui n'en n'ont pas les moyens. Et si je parvenais effectivement, en quittant cette salle, à ce que ce droit soit garanti, je serais le héros de la profession en rentrant chez moi. Mais en droit pénal et en droit civil, les limites ne sont pas les mêmes et dans la CEDH il y a une mention particulière des cas de droit pénal. Quand l'intérêt de la justice le requiert, dans le droit civil, ce n'est pas les mêmes nécessités c'est expliqué dans l'exposé des motifs. En fonction de ce que dira la cour à Strasbourg en matière de jurisprudence. On dit ici que l'aide judiciaire est parmi les droits les plus fondamentaux de la défense, hors il y a des droits qui se passent avant qu'on explique les choses clairement au justiciable, etc. Donc, je propose d'avoir une déclaration, brève, à l'article 6 disant qu'il y a des droits qui doivent être garantis et défendus et troisième amendement que je proposerais : je voudrais aussi faire un autre commentaire pour revenir sur ce qu'a dit M. HANSEN. Pour l'instant je ne comprends pas très bien le concept de bonne gouvernance. Monsieur HANSEN a déjà posé cette question auparavant et j'aimerais comprendre mieux le contenu de sa proposition avant que je puisse commenter les amendement que j'ai vus pour la première fois aujourd'hui. Je suis désolé, vous me pardonnerez si j'ai des réserves pour l'instant. Merci, Lord GOLDSMITH.

20/03/2000 17:21:10 M. BRAIBANT (Le Parlement français)

Merci, Monsieur le président. Nous avons beaucoup de questions ici et je crois qu'il faut essayer de les sérier. Elles concernent les articles 7, 8 et 9. Et nous devons je pense les examiner ensemble. Elles ont d'ailleurs été examinées ensemble par plusieurs prédécesseurs. Je prends d'abord la question qui n'est peut-être pas principale mais qui est peut-être la plus simple, c'est celle de l'aide juridique gratuite. Personnellement, je voudrais qu'on enlève le mot "gratuite" parce que le principe d'une aide est d'être gratuite. Si l'aide n'est pas gratuite, c'est un phénomène de corruption. On a entendu parlé d'aide de la Communauté européenne qui n'était pas gratuite. Une aide est en principe gratuite. Ce n'est pas la peine de le préciser. En revanche, ce qui est important c'est de trouver les termes justes. Pour la France c'est le terme "aide juridictionnelle". C'est le plus large. Ce qu'a dit je crois déjà un intervenant précédant. Je serais assez d'accord avec celui qui a dit que cet article, cette disposition sur l'aide juridictionnelle devrait être rapprochée de l'article sur le recours effectif. Car c'est effectivement un élément du recours effectif. Et il ne faut pas prendre l'aide juridictionnelle comme le fait semble-t-il la convention européenne des droits de l'homme uniquement comme un élément des droits de la défense. C'est un élément de l'accès à la justice. Il n'y a pas de recours effectif s'il n'y a pas, pour ceux qui en ont besoin, des dispositions qui leur permettent d'y accéder. Je ne verrais d'ailleurs pas d'objection à ce qu'on en fasse un droit social. Mais il vaut peut-être mieux le garder ici. Alors voilà pour l'aide juridictionnelle. Je suis d'accord également avec la formule de Monsieur Ben FAYOT qui me paraît plus simple et plus claire que celle qui est employée ici sur la définition de l'aide. Le deuxième problème c'est la question du tribunal qui est traitée là et qui doit être séparée à mon avis de l'article (?) comme c'est le cas actuellement. L'article 6 actuel de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme, l'article 8 que nous proposons, savent, 8 c'est le droit à un tribunal impartial. La présomption d'innocence (pardon) et les droits de la défense c'est tout autre chose. La présomption d'innocence ce n'est pas seulement un principe de procédure pénale. C'est un principe général de notre civilisation. Et nous constatons en France, qu'actuellement, c'est un des principes les plus bafoués, les plus attaqués. Et pas par les tribunaux seulement, ou pas par la police seulement, mais par la presse. C'est dans la presse qu'il y a des atteintes à la présomption d'innocence. C'est aussi dans les commissariats de police quand on fait passer une information à la presse disant que Monsieur Untel a été convoqué au commissariat. Et nous avons vu des cas en France où des carrières politiques ont été brisées par des phénomènes de ce genre sans que l'affaire aille devant les tribunaux. Donc c'est un principe général qui devrait être même antérieur dans la charte à mon avis, mais en tout cas peu importe, mais en tout cas séparé du droit à un tribunal impartial. Et les droits de la défense c'est également autre chose. Cela naturellement cela se passe surtout devant les tribunaux mais les droits de la défense se passent aussi devant l'administration, devant toutes les autorités, devant toutes les institutions. Et je crois que c'est bien d'en faire un principe général. Si bien qu'au lieu de proposer de joindre l'article 9 à l'article 8, je proposerais de couper l'article 9 en deux. Parce que de toute façon le titre "droits de la défense" ne convient pas. Il ne convient pas pour la présomption d'innocence cela n'est pas un problème de droits de la défense ; c'est un problème de principe. Quand on n'est pas condamné on ne doit pas accusé ou soupçonné ; et par conséquent, j'aurais proposé deux articles : un article 9 peut importe l'ordre, mais un article présomption d'innocence et un article droits de la défense.

20/03/2000 17:25:22 Mme PACIOTTI (Le Parlement européen)

Je pense qu'en gros Monsieur BRAIBANT a déjà dit ce que je voulais dire. Alors, très rapidement, puisqu'il s'agissait de questions linguistiques. Article 7 on parle de "juge" ; article 8 de "tribunal". Je pense que juge en italien convient mieux. Il est plus général et je suis d'accord avec M. BEREIJO. La pré-constitution légale du juge. Il s'agit d'une interdiction du juge spécial et dans ce cas on évite d'avoir un juge qui tranche que sur ce cas là. L'article 7, article 8 on parle d'un tribunal impartial. A l'article 9 c'est différent ; cela c'est la question pénale et là je suis tout à fait d'accord avec M. BRAIBANT. Donc le 7 et le 8 peuvent être fusionnés parce qu'en fait il s'agit du même principe. Droit un procès impartial, droit d'une juridiction qui décide en temps opportun et qui a assisté et là le terme en italien est correct, donc assistance juridique gratuite si la personne n'a pas les moyens. Et là je voudrais rassurer Monsieur Melograni qu'il a le droit que son affaire soit examinée officiellement publiquement mais par contre s'il y a d'autres instances administratives, il n'y a pas lieu de saisir cette juridiction là.

20/03/2000 17:27:51 M. VITORINO (La COMMISSION)

Merci Monsieur le président. En ce qui concerne la structure des articles, je crois qu'on peut faire la fusion des deux articles ou les traiter séparés. Le seul point que je voudrais souligner dans mon opinion, dans le sens qui a été aussi dit par M. BRAIBANT, c'est que je préférerais la division entre le numéro qui s'occupe de la présomption de l'innocence, d'un côté, et, de l'autre côté, les droits de défense des accusés. Je crois que ce sont des questions tout à fait séparées et avec des champs d'application et des portées tout à fait séparés. En plus, je dirais même qu'en ce qui concerne la présomption d'innocence, je crois qu'on aurait des avantages ici à copier la convention européenne des droits de l'homme et à suivre de très près la rédaction qui est recueillie par l'article 6.2. de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Sur la question de l'aide judiciaire de l'assistance judiciaire, je crois que dans ce domaine la Commission a déjà fait une étude détaillée des conditions d'aide judiciaire dans les États membres et a même fait distribuer une communication là-dessus parce que le Conseil européen de Tampere a demandé d'adopter des mesures qui puissent garantir l'accès à la justice et aux tribunaux dans des conditions d'égalité de chances entre les citoyens de tous les États membres, n'importe où ils doivent accéder à la justice et aux tribunaux. Je dirais qu'il n'y a pas de divergences très profondes dans le cadre juridique des États membres en ce qui concerne la reconnaissance du principe et la consécration d'un tel droit laisse à chaque État membre la définition des conditions d'accès à la justice, les conditions de l'aide judiciaire et, en plus, il y a même un mandat des chefs d'État et de gouvernement dans le sens qu'il faudra rapprocher les législations nationales en matière d'aide judiciaire dans toutes les questions transfrontalières, dans toutes les questions qui ont une dimension transnationale. Et c'est pourquoi, je trouve que par exemple les questions, ce n'est pas seulement une question financière, c'est aussi une question linguistique, de garantir des conditions d'appui et de traduction et d'interprétation linguistique aux accusés quand ils sont accusés dans un État différent de l'État dont ils sont ressortissants. En plus, la jurisprudence de la Cour de Justice européenne reconnaît déjà cette aide judiciaire dans les cas qui sont soulevés devant la Cour de Justice européenne. Finalement, une réflexion sur une question tout à fait horizontale qui a été soulevée à maintes reprises, c'est quelle est l'interprétation de l'expression "la loi". Je crois, M. le président, que, pour ne pas entrer dans des discussions horizontales, on devrait accepter de travailler provisoirement avec cette expression consacrée "la loi" ayant en ligne de compte que, à un moment venu, il sera nécessaire de clarifier quelle est la portée de cette expression parce que ça dépend beaucoup aussi des destinataires de la charte et du champ d'application de la charte. Dans mon avis et pour moi, en ce qui concerne la notion de loi, elle concerne les instruments de droit de l'Union, ça veut dire les traités, ça veut dire les règlements et les directives, ça veut dire les mesures prises en vertu du titre 6 du traité de l'Union européenne - je crois que surtout les conventions qui sont prévues au titre 6 - mais elle ne prévoit pas les mesures d'exécution du droit communautaire, ça veut dire les mesures d'exécution ne peuvent pas être comprises dans le concept de loi aux fins de la charte des droits fondamentaux et je trouve que cet exercice est un exercice qui doit être fait plus en avant dans notre débat pour déterminer, dans une perspective horizontale, quel est le champ d'application de la charte elle-même.

20/03/2000 17:32:56 PRESIDENT

Après cette intervention de M. VITORINO, la liste des intervenants est close quant à cet article. Nous passons à l'article suivant "Droits de la défense", article 9.

20/03/2000 17:33:12 M. PAPADIMITRIOU (Le parlement grec)

Monsieur, sur cet article ou le précédent ? [MANQUE QUELQUE CHOSE ICI] Si ça porte sur l'article 9, il faut faire une distinction claire, comme l'a dit M. BRAIBANT, entre les droits, le droit de la défense qui est celui qui doit être placé en première position et ensuite la présomption d'innocence mais permettez-moi de faire des commentaires sur ce qu'à dit M. le commissaire précédemment. Il ne nous faut pas oublier que notre système juridique est indépendant donc toute référence que nous faisons doit être faite au traité. C'est la bonne façon de faire ces références mais nous avons aussi de nombreux textes juridiques qui découlent des traités et il nous faudra voir ce qui se passera quand l'Union aura la possibilité d'émettre des directives pour réglementer de telles questions. Les lois auxquelles nous faisons référence doivent être pas seulement les traités mais aussi tous les textes juridiques de l'Union, Monsieur le commissaire avait tout à fait raison à cet égard. Il nous faut toujours nous souvenir, nous rappeler des constitutions des différents États membres et il faut voir ce qui va se passer à l'avenir. Vous le savez, quelquefois, nous mentionnons les lois et nous savons exactement de quoi nous parlons au niveau de l'Union. Ce sont les traités, les dispositions statutaires. Nous tentons ici de réaliser quelque chose de difficile. Parfois, la route est longue mais c'est la seule façon, c'est la loi de l'Union européenne, nous avons les traités, les dispositions statutaires et aussi différents textes dans le cadre des traités. Je crois qu'il y a énormément de problèmes au niveau de l'Union. Ce dont nous discutons ne fait que le souligner.

20/03/2000 17:35:49 M. OLSEN (Le Parlement danois)

Je crois qu'il y a une nécessité d'interdire le "self incrimination" à l'article 9. La Cour européenne de Justice, dans sa jurisprudence, est très claire sur cette question. C'est aussi indiqué à l'article 14 de la convention des Nations unies sur les droits civils et politiques. Il est dit là que personne ne peut être forcé à fournir des preuves contre soi ou admettre qu'il est coupable. Je crois que cette disposition est très importante pour protéger tant les citoyens que les entreprises en matière de droits de la concurrence quand la Commission européenne dispose de pouvoirs élargis pour demander de l'information auprès des citoyens et aussi auprès des entreprises concernant des cas de violation de la loi de la concurrence européenne.

20/03/2000 17:37:11 M. NEISSER (Le parlement autrichien)

Merci. Je crois que ce que dit M. VITORINO est tout à fait correct. Quand il y a loi, ça recouvre plusieurs types de normes dans l'ordre législatif national et communautaire. Alors, ce que je voudrais proposer, c'est de modifier le texte et ne pas parler ... bon, quand on parle de l'indépendance de la juridiction, "recht..." en allemand peut être compris par rapport au système concret sur lequel la procédure judiciaire et le tribunal en question reposent. Ça peut être donc, au niveau de l'Union, le droit communautaire mais, sur le plan constitutionnel, ça peut être une Cour, une juridiction de l'ordre juridique ou judiciaire national. Je crois que c'est très important d'éviter ce problème. "Loi", il faut éviter de comprendre trop de choses et de couvrir trop de choses là dessous.

20/032000 17:38:29 M. MANZELLA (Le Parlement italien)

M. le président, je voudrais m'associer à ceux qui ont demandé qu'à l'article 9 les droits de la défense soient séparés de la présomption d'innocence et soient repris dans l'article précédent, à savoir le 8, sur le mécanisme judiciaire. Je profite de l'occasion pour dire que je suis tout à fait favorable à l'autonomie, à la séparation de ces trois droits, tel que formulé par la présidence : articles 7, 8 et 9. Il s'agit, c'est vrai, dans tous les cas, des questions de procédure qui ont des éléments personnels mais je pense que ce qui est important, c'est de voir quels sont les intérêts politiques que l'on vise à protéger. Article 7 "Droit à un recours effectif" : cela concerne l'intégrité des droits des citoyens et d'une personne. Article 8, l'intérêt ou le droit que l'on veut protéger, c'est un mécanisme judiciaire et l'État doit faire en sorte qu'il y ait une égalité dans l'accès à un tribunal. Article 9, ce que l'on protège, c'est la dignité de la personne humaine et à l'article 9, la présomption d'innocence est un mécanisme qui sanctionne ce que nous disions à l'article précédent : dignité humaine. Puis, ce que ce droit révèle, le besoin de protéger la dignité humaine.

20/03/2000 17:41:03 M. TRIAS SAGNIER (Le Parlement espagnol)

Merci Monsieur le président. Très brièvement. L'amendement de nature grammaticale, dans la version espagnole, n'est pas droit "en la defença", c'est droit "de la défense". Et un amendement consistant en un ajout, je pense qu'il faudrait rajouter que les justiciables ont droit au respect des droits de la défense en garantissant le principe d'égalité des moyens pour toutes les parties au procès. Je pense que le principe d'égalité des moyens est un droit de même nature que ce que j'ai mentionné auparavant. Merci.

20/03/2000 17:41:59 M. PATIJN (Le Parlement néerlandais)

Merci Monsieur le président. Je voulais faire une remarque sur le lien ou les liens entre les articles 7 à 11. Il s'agit de procédures pénales, d'accès aux tribunaux, etc. et j'ai l'impression que si cette charte doit réglementer les institutions de l'Union, j'ai l'impression qu'aucun organe, aucune institution a compétence au niveau pénal. Donc, ce qui me surprend, c'est la passivité avec laquelle nous essayons de modeler la convention ou la prochaine charte des droits fondamentaux parce que il s'agit quand même d'une question qui établit un lien direct entre la convention et les États membres, donc je pense qu'il ne faut pas essayer de réinventer la roue parce qu'il y a déjà certaines choses qui figurent déjà dans la convention européenne sur les droits de l'homme. Alors, laissons les choses comme ça. J'ai une remarque sur l'article 7 qui, je pense, est un peu plus large que les autres. Il s'agit d'un droit violé par une institution et, là, je pense qu'il s'agit bien d'institution ou d'organe de l'Union et donc on formule un droit de recours et donc, là, je pense qu'il faut se fonder sur ce qui figure déjà dans la convention européenne sur les droits de l'homme. Donc, je pense que pour ces articles-là, il faut essayer de s'en tenir un maximum à ce qui figure déjà dans la convention, article 7, des droits plus spécifiques pour ce qui est de l'intervention des institutions de l'Union.

20/03/2000 17:44:40 M. HAENEL (Le Parlement français)

Merci Monsieur le président. Je suis tout à fait d'accord, comme certains l'ont souligné, que le chapeau - on appellera ça comme on veut - ou l'intitulé de l'article 9 ne convient plus puisqu'on dit "droits de la défense" alors qu'il s'agit de deux droits de nature différente, le droit à la présomption d'innocence et le droit au respect des droits de la défense. Donc, soit on change le chapeau, l'intitulé et on en trouve un autre et on met deux alinéas, ou alors on scinde l'article 9 en deux. Alors, à ce moment-là, la rédaction deviendrait "tout accusé" mais "accusé", c'est un terme qui, à mon avis, ne convient pas car une fois de plus, en français, l'accusé, c'est celui qui comparait devant une cour d'assise et celui qui comparait devant un tribunal correctionnel c'est le prévenu. Alors je préférerais qu'on reprenne la rédaction de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme qui dit "toute personne accusée d'une infraction est présumée". La traduction anglaise est beaucoup plus conforme "toutes personnes contre lesquelles il existe des charges", hein, je crois que c'est ça. Bien, voilà ma première observation. Ma seconde observation, il faut bien qu'on se mette d'accord à ce moment-là si on fait un autre article ou un autre alinéa, ça reviendrait à la rédaction suivante "toute personne a droit au respect des droits de la défense". Alors, il faut bien se mettre d'accord sur la portée d'une nouvelle rédaction. Est-ce que, si on prend cette rédaction-là, - alors, j'ai pas très bien compris la portée que lui donnait M. BRAIBANT - ce texte s'appliquerait seulement au procès pénal ou à tout procès ? C'est la question qui se pose.

20/03/2000 17:46:33 M. KORTHALS ALTES (Le Parlement néerlandais)

... plaider ce qui vient d'être dit par M. PATIJN notamment, je voudrais dire que moi aussi j'ai l'impression que l'article 8 concerne non seulement le droit pénal mais aussi le droit civil et les procédures administratives et je pense qu'il est important de savoir si le but c'est que l'article 9 soit ... (?) aie une présomption générale d'innocence en dehors du cadre pénal parce que si on reprend cela la question est de savoir s'il faut le mettre à cet endroit-ci ou alors plutôt dans le texte dans les droits individuels. En soi c'est une discussion intéressante de savoir si la présomption d'innocence ne devrait pas avoir une signification plus large que le pénal.

20/03/2000 17:47:43 M. DUFF (Le Parlement européen)

Merci M. le président, pour revenir à ce que M. PATIJN a dit sur ces articles, je suis assez d'accord avec lui. Quant à l'accent sur l'Union européenne dans ces articles, ce n'est pas du tout clair et cela nécessite une meilleure description et une analyse plus détaillée dans l'exposé des motifs. C'est la raison pour laquelle je pense qu'il faut avoir une approche plus structurée dans la rédaction de l'exposé des motifs. Je pense que c'est nécessaire dans tous les cas. Je pense qu'il est aussi important pour nous de prendre en compte les compétences toujours croissantes de l'Union européenne en matière pénale et juridictionnelle. C'est partiellement envisagé dans la sphère de sécurité et de justice et l'intégration de l'acquis Schengen lors de la signature du traité. C'est aussi postulé quand on parle la création d'Europol, l'Agence de coordination des forces de polices européennes sous l'égide de l'Union européenne. Quelque chose qui pourrait se développer à l'avenir et pourrait devenir quelque chose de comparable au Bureau fédéral d'investigation dans les années à venir (FBI). Mais ce qui est important aussi à l'heure actuelle c'est de voir que cela constitue un progrès pour ce qui est du mouvement des personnes. C'est un progrès. Il est important que la Charte de l'Union européenne soit pleinement préparée pour cette extension et l'élargissement imprévisible. Merci.

20/03/2000 17:51:36 PRESIDENT

Bien avec ceci l'article 9 est terminé et je crois qu'il nous reste 10 minutes encore. Nous commençons à traiter l'article 10.

20/03/2000 17:51:55 M. RODRIGUEZ-BEREIJO (Le Parlement espagnol)

Les observations sur cet article tout comme les autres articles visant à protéger le citoyen dans le cadre des procédures pénales ne sont pas des réserves de fond. Mais la proposition de rédaction me pose certains problèmes que j'essaierai d'expliquer brièvement même si cela figure avec plus de détails dans le texte écrit. Tout d'abord, il est nécessaire de préciser que ce dont il s'agit ici ce sont des condamnations pénales. Nul ne peut être condamné pour une action qui ... et le droit, la référence au droit de l'Union me pose un problème parce que comme vous le savez l'Union n'a pas de compétence pour qualifier les délits et les peines. Et puis ce que je n'arrive pas très bien à comprendre c'est le numéro 2, l'alinéa 2 de cet article quand on parle des principes généraux de droit reconnus par les nations démocratiques. Cela me semble une expression dont l'objectif est bien sûr louable et avec laquelle je suis d'accord mais si nous sommes en train de rédiger un texte comme s'il était juridique, je pense qu'il faut être très précis surtout quand il s'agit d'une question liée au droit pénal. Je crois que ces principes généraux ne sont jamais que des principes de légalité pénale liés à l'état de droit. Donc, je proposerais que l'entête de l'article 10 "pas de peine sans loi" et bien si nous voulons respecter l'expression latine "pas de crime pas de peine" et que je voudrais que l'on supprime la référence au droit de l'Union quant au droit international, la référence devrait être plus précise et la référence aux principes généraux de droit reconnus par les nations démocratiques, je pense que ce n'est pas nécessaire si nous proclamons le principe de légalité pénale et si nous le formulons de façon précise. Et pour ce qui est des infractions ou actes et qui sont considérés comme des délits punissables pénalement, je le dis parce que j'ai une réserve beaucoup plus importante à l'article 11 et qui parle du "nebis in idem" donc j'insiste et c'est d'ailleurs ce que fait la convention européenne sur les droits de l'homme.

20/03/2000 17:55:45 Lord GOLDSMITH (Le Parlement britannique)

Premier point. Je suis d'accord avec M. BEREIJO et la référence au droit de l'Union à ce stade mérite d'être clarifiée. Il s'agit d'un article qui devrait être lié aux offenses pénales et je ne pense pas qu'il y ait de crimes pénaux dans le cadre du droit de l'Union. C'est uniquement dans le cadre du droit national mais j'aimerais qu'on me précise la chose. Deuxième point. Il y a un changement qui est expliqué dans l'exposé des motifs qui concerne le mot démocratique : civilisé remplacé par démocratique. Le deuxième paragraphe de l'article 10 est très important parce qu'il s'agit de crimes de guerre, crimes contre l'humanité qui sont très importants et c'est une exception au principe de "pas de peine sans loi" mais je m'inquiète un peu de modifier ce concept de nations démocratiques. Il s'agit de lois des nations démocratiques dans le monde et nous risquons de nous limiter si nous incluons ce concept occidental de démocratie donc je ne suis pas sûr que ce changement soit nécessaire. Et enfin, sur la dernière phrase du paragraphe premier l'exposé des motifs dit certains Etats membres acceptent cette position. Je ne suis pas sûr que ce soit le cas pour tous les Etats membres. Je remets en question donc l'insertion de cet ajout et je me demande si tous les Etats membres adoptent cette approche, si ce n'est pas le cas, je pense qu'il faut être prudent et ne pas nécessairement la reprendre. Ce sont des petits points mais qui sont quand même importants pour cet article. Et enfin, je pense que si nous voulons une déclaration brève concise, il est possible de le faire pour autant que l'on inclue ces mots quelque part ailleurs dans le document et si vous examinez l'amendement que j'ai proposé, vous constaterez c'est exactement cela. Cela permet justement d'avoir une petite déclaration dans une partie du document mais cela reprendrait ce que je viens de dire.

20/03/2000 17:58:31 PRESIDENT

J'ai encore trois orateurs, SVP soyez brefs.

20/03/2000 17:58:39 M. TRIAS SAGNIER (Le Parlement espagnol)

Merci. Très rapidement, je suis d'accord avec ce qu'a dit M. RODRIGUEZ-BEREIJO et Lord GOLDSMITH. Je pense que on pourrait résoudre la question en ajoutant "applicable au droit international" comme je l'avais proposé. Il y a des infractions administratives qui impliquent la limitation de certains droits et là je pense aussi qu'ils doivent pouvoir bénéficier de la loi la plus favorable. Par contre, je supprimerais volontiers le paragraphe 2 parce que soit nous parlons directement d'un tribunal pénal international mais parler du droit des nations démocratiques c'est beaucoup mieux que les nations civilisées mais le Pérou, par exemple, est une nation civilisée sans être démocratique. Alors les principes reconnus par les nations démocratiques, c'est un désastre. Parce que les Etats-Unis c'est une nation démocratique mais on applique quand même la peine de mort, peine de mort interdite par cette charte et en République fédérale d'Allemagne le parti communiste est interdit qui fait partie de la coalition au pouvoir en France. Donc, personnellement, je pense quand même que c'est un vœu pieux mais un peut malheureux si nous souhaitons que cette charte soit applicable.

20/03/2000 18:00:40 M. KORTHALS ALTES (Le Parlement néerlandais)

Je voudrais souligner une chose. Je pense qu'il est important de reprendre ces droits dans la charte parce que même si l'Union européenne n'a pas directement des législations ou des procédures de répression en cas d'application ou de transposition dans le droit national, elle a des dispositions pénales sont introduites. Je parle notamment du blanchiment d'argent et aussi des problèmes liés à l'évasion fiscale. Donc, je pense quand même qu'il est important de reprendre de telles dispositions dans la charte et que ces principes de droit y sont liés. Je vous rappelle la discussion que nous avons eue sous la présidence de M. HERZOG qui a renvoyé ou qui a parlé des crimes de guerre et qui a parlé à cet égard de nations civilisées. Et là, je pense qu'il vaut nous en tenir et ne pas parler de nations démocratiques parce que là nous, ce n'est pas un statut reconnu par le droit des peuples. Et puis pour répondre à M. GOLDSMITH dans mon pays, aux Pays-Bas quand après une sanction, il y a une sanction plus légère qui est reprise dans la loi on reprend aussi la sanction la plus légère et mais en général la législation va dans le sens inverse donc on décide d'une sanction plus lourde.

20/03/2000 18:02:55 M. SCHULZ (Le Parlement européen)

Président chers collègues. Moi c'est moins la question de savoir comment les communistes et les socialistes ont fait leur accord de pouvoir en France que la coopération entre la police et la justice qui m'intéresse et je dois dire que le débat m'interpelle. Nous discutons depuis un certain temps et c'est également l'interprétation que je fais de Cologne et de Tampere, des effets éventuels de la charte sur le deuxième et le troisième piliers et je dois dire qu'il en résulte qu'il y a du côté de l'Union une volonté d'harmonisation du droit pénal pour pouvoir effectivement faire face à la criminalité organisée et il faut bien comprendre dans la charte des droits fondamentaux, il faut dire quelque chose sur le droit pénal sinon on reste en dehors de la dynamique politique.

20/03/2000 18:03:51 M. VITORINO (La COMMISSION)

Je pense que cet article 10 est tout à fait pertinent parce que il y a des dispositions qui proviennent du traité ou qui sont adoptées par le Conseil et concernent la définition des sanctions pénales dans le cadre communautaire. Je pense notamment à l'article 280 sur la protection des intérêts financiers de l'Union qui pourrait donner naissance à un cadre décisionnel pour des sanctions et puis aussi des sanctions liées à l'article 31 e) qui dit que des Etats membres vont progressivement adopter des mesures établissant des règles minimum ayant des objectifs pénaux et ces actes ont été identifiés par le Conseil lui-même à Tampere, demander des décisions cadres c'est à dire des définitions communes, accriminations (?) communes et aussi sanctions communes sur une série de crimes, traite des êtres humains, crimes visant les enfants, trafic de drogues, terrorisme et cybercrimes et il est clair que si nous avons une monnaie commune il faudra très rapidement adopter une décision cadre sur la lutte contre la contrefaçon de l'euro et je ne vois pas d'autres solutions de lutter contre la contrefaçon de l'euro à moins que nous n'ayons des définitions communes, des sanctions communes, des accriminations (?) communes et cela requiert que au sein de l'Union nous ayons des orientations claires pour adopter ces sanctions pénales, ces dispositifs pénaux pour les crimes nationaux et transfrontaliers. Donc, il est essentiel que ce soit étayé par un article comme l'article 10.

20/03/2000 18:06:26 PRESIDENT

Merci voilà qui conclut nos travaux de cet après-midi. Je vous remercie de votre patience. Je donne la parole à M. JANSEN qui a encore une petite annonce importante à vous faire.

20/03/2000 18:06:38 M. JANSEN (Le Parlement finlandais)

Président. Trois choses. Je voudrais remercier M. MÉNDEZ DE VIGO pour le travail effectué cet après-midi. Je voudrais remercier les interprètes et trois : Lord GOLDSMITH et d'autres m'ont demandé ce qu'on entendait par "bonne administration". Je vais vous répondre personnellement ce soir parce que vous êtes tous invités à un cocktail à 18h30 à la représentation finlandaise. Voilà. Pour le reste, je vous vois demain 9 heures.

21/03/2000 09:14:04 PRESIDENT

Nous allons poursuivre la séance d'hier, avant tout permettez-moi de souhaiter la bienvenue à un nouveau membre de la Convention, il représente le Parlement danois, c'est M. LARSEN JENSEN qui a remplacé notre ancien collègue M. BOUKSI qui a été nommé Ministre au Danemark. C'est vous dire l'importance que de siéger à cette convention et il y a quelques jours il était encore parmi nous maintenant il est Ministre. Donc tous nous pouvons aspirer aux plus hautes fonctions, les membres de la Convention ont parmi leurs connaissances des Ministres. Bien je lui souhaite donc la bienvenue et le meilleur pour l'avenir. Article 10. Bien j'espère que nous allons pouvoir poursuivre sous la Présidence dynamique de M. JANSSON qui va me remplacer au cours de la matinée, je ne sais plus si c'est M. VASCONCELLOS qui voulait intervenir ce matin sur l'article 10 alors le Vice-Président de la Convention et représentant du Conseil et ensuite M. RODOTA.

21/03/2000 09:15:59 M. BACELAR de VASCONCELLOS (Le Parlement portugais)

Merci M. le Président. Bien hier je n'ai pas assisté au début du débat sur l'article 10 et c'est avec un certain délai que je me suis aperçu que les points faisant problème de la proposition de la Présidence portaient sur la mention dans la dernière ligne de l'article 10 des principes généraux de droit communément acceptés par les Nations civilisées, c'était le résultat d'une proposition que j'avais faite qui a été directement intégrée par M. HERZOG lors d'une précédente réunion et je dois à ce titre vous donner une explication rapide. Une bonne partie des arêtes étant déjà limée pour ce qui est de l'interprétation de cet article, je voudrais encore juste insister sur la chose suivante : nous avons souvent une formation professionnelle en droit constitutionnel et donc nous sommes tout à fait à même de comprendre ce qui sous-tend ce principe et comme nous avons conscience du poids historique et de l'impact sur l'évolution du droit international il ne serait pas bon d'avoir dans une déclaration de droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne au seuil du troisième millénaire une expression encore véhiculant des connotations néo-coloniales comme des comment les principes de droit commun aux nations civilisées comment une telle formule pouvait encore figurer dans un document aussi solennel. C'est la raison pour laquelle nous avons choisi une autre formulation ce ne sera peut-être pas la formule la plus heureuse, mais je pense que toutes les propositions qui pourraient tendre à protéger ce que l'on cherche à couvrir et qui fait référence à la condamnation pour crimes contre l'humanité ou pour génocide domaine dans lequel il y a un droit international pénal naissant et domaine dans lequel on commence à avoir une juridiction avec des tribunaux internationaux ad hoc et ceci découle de la convention de Rome, toute expression qui place au niveau international de telles juridictions et qui les rendent aptes à juger des crimes contre l'humanité, toute formule de ce type, je disais donc, me semble raisonnable, suffisante et compatible avec l'état de civilisation dans lequel nous nous trouvons et avec les principes démocratiques que nous souhaitons imprimer dans ce document. Monsieur le Président, je vous remercie.

21/03/2000 09:19:21 M. RODOTA (Le Parlement italien)

Merci M. le Président. Je voudrais très rapidement revenir sur ce qui vient d'être dit parce que moi aussi je pense que ce numéro deux a une grande importance. Je comprends que par rapport aux modes traditionnels d'examiner la légalité, ceci peut sembler une exception. Toutefois je suis convaincu que dans une déclaration de droit fondamental on ne peut manquer de faire une référence qui est désormais naturelle quand il s'agit de protéger les droits fondamentaux à savoir que les crimes contre l'humanité et les crimes contre la paix constituent un élément qui permet de donner aux autres droits leur importance et je pense que le droit international a beaucoup évolué en la matière et pas uniquement le droit international d'ailleurs parce qu'à côté de l'intervention des organismes internationaux ad hoc ou des organisations internationales comme celles de la Convention de Rome sur la Cour permanente eh bien il y a eu de nombreuses interventions aussi de la part des Etats qui ont fait référence à ces éléments du cadre international. Vous savez tous qu'il y a eu une grande étude, un français qui a parlé de dédoublement fonctionnel et il y a un jeu qui est fait qu'il faut une référence forte au droit international. Alors cet article, on pourrait faire référence aux critères généraux, aux grands principes c'est une question de rédaction, mais c'est quand même un point qui me semble important.

21/03/2000 09:21:46 M. LEHMANN (Le Parlement danois)

Merci Monsieur le Président, pour ce qui est de l'article 10 j'aimerais simplement dire que c'est un article assez typique si vous le comparez avec d'autres articles dont nous traitons dans cette partie de la charte quand on tente de donner une description brève et claire des droits fondamentaux que nous voulons protéger et dans l'exposé des motifs nous citons normalement les dispositions pertinentes dans la Convention qui est la Convention pertinente. Ici il s'agit de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Ici nous avons procédé à l'inverse. Nous avons pris le texte complet de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme et nous l'insérons dans l'article et ce n'est pas la façon dont nous avons procédé dans les autres articles et je pense que nous devrions peut-être essayer de parvenir à un accord sur une version plus courte peut-être la première phrase du premier paragraphe avec la phrase établissant les principes généraux du droit reconnu par les nations démocratiques ou les Etats ou les nations civilisées dans la deuxième partie. Bien entendu, ??? pose la question de savoir pourquoi nous changeons ce libellé en introduisant les termes "nations démocratiques et droit de l'Union" quand nous traitons de la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme parce que cette convention contient une interprétation des termes, il y a aussi la jurisprudence bien sûr qui dit que nous devons voir ceci à la lumière des circonstances actuelles, donc il faut interpréter ce libellé à la lumière du temps dans lequel nous vivons et non pas à la lumière du passé quand cette convention a été mise en place. Je crois qu'il y a des améliorations à apporter ici donc je proposerais une version plus courte pour cette partie du document et dans l'exposé des motifs nous pourrions avoir le libellé complet comme c'est le cas normalement avec mention de l'interprétation et de la jurisprudence, interprétation de la Cour. Merci.

21/03/2000 09:24:55 M. PAPADIMITRIOU (Le Parlement grec)

Merci Monsieur le Président. Il y a un problème au sujet de l'article 10. Ici on dit qu'il n'y a pas de peine sans loi et pas de rétroactivité. Peut-être devrions-nous étendre ce principe à d'autres lois administratives, une sanction disciplinaire par exemple peut être utilisée de manière rétroactive, peut-être dans l'Union devrions-nous étendre ce principe de pas de peine sans loi à d'autres types de sanctions. Voilà. Merci M le Président.

21/03/2000 09:25:46 M. GRIFFITHS (Le Parlement britannique)

Oui, très brièvement M. le Président, pour soutenir ce que M. LEHMANN vient juste de dire, je pense que la question dans le fond est que personne ne devrait être puni en dehors de la loi. La Convention entre dans le détail à ce sujet. Je pense que nous devrions suivre cela en tant que principe de travail, avoir un principe bref et dans l'exposé des motifs avoir quelque chose de plus étoffé et avoir peut-être une deuxième partie comme l'a proposé Lord GOLDSMITH. Merci.

21/03/2000 09:26:28 Mme CEDERSCHIÖLD (Le Parlement européen)

J'aimerais soutenir fortement les intervenants qui disent qu'on doit aller plus loin ici et inclure le principe traditionnel de non rétroactivité des lois en tant que telle. Si c'est possible je préférerais avoir un texte plus court mais avec l'extension du principe de rétroactivité à d'autres domaines autres que le droit pénal. Merci Madame.

21/03/2000 09:27:05 M. MANZELLA (Le Parlement italien)

Sur le deuxième paragraphe à la fin, je voudrais proposer un libellé différent. Pour ce qui est des nations démocratiques, je proposerais principes généraux de droit reconnus dans la législation démocratique internationale. Pourquoi, parce que je pense que dans cette reconnaissance des principes généraux, je pense que nous devons faire une mention expresse de la nature objective et non subjective donc de cette reconnaissance, autrement dit la reconnaissance doit être donnée par la législation et non pas par les Etats ou les Nations et cela correspond parfaitement à l'évolution que nous constatons dans le droit international qui passe, droit international de conventions entre les Etats à un droit constitutionnel international. Merci Monsieur MONCELA, vous étiez le dernier intervenant, ah non.

21/03/2000 09:28:26 M. HAENEL (Le Parlement français)

Merci Monsieur le président, très rapidement moi je crois qu'il faut s'en tenir au principe que nous nous sommes fixés c'est-à-dire d'essayer d'être le plus bref possible. Alors, moi je crois que pour l'article 10, il suffirait de s'en tenir à la première phase du 1. et pour le reste renvoyer à la rédaction plus longue de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Ca me paraîtrait tout à fait suffisant. Je vous remercie.

21/03/2000 09:28:51 PRESIDENT

Merci à vous. Nous allons passer à l'article 11 : Droit à ne pas être jugé ou puni deux fois, M. RODRIGUEZ-BEREIJO.

21/03/2000 09:29:05 M. RODRIGUEZ-BEREIJO (Le Parlement espagnol)

Merci Monsieur le président. J'aimerais faire quelques remarques au sujet de cet article, la première au sujet du chapeau de cet article "Droit à ne pas être jugé ou puni deux fois". Jugé ou condamné deux fois pour le même fait serait un terme plus approprié, parce qu'une personne peut être jugée ou punie deux fois pour des délits distincts. Donc je pense qu'il faut rajouter les termes "pour le même fait". Je pense qu'il faut aussi renforcer le caractère pénal du champ d'application de cet article 11. Cet article fait écho, reprend l'article 7 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, possibilité d'une double sanction pénale disciplinaire ou administrative pour les mêmes faits. C'est la raison pour laquelle l'Espagne ainsi qu'un autre pays n'a pas ratifié le protocole 7 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme parce que dans certains cas il est possible que pour les mêmes faits on ait une sanction pénale et une sanction disciplinaire de type administratif et ici dans cet article, il s'agit des garanties du citoyen lors du processus pénal et de la règle sacrée du droit pénal qui dit que on ne peut pas être condamné deux fois pour les mêmes faits ni être puni deux fois pour les mêmes faits, donc je propose de dire "personne ne peut être accusé ou condamné pénalement en raison de faits pour lesquels la personne a déjà été acquitté ou condamnée par un jugement définitif conformément à la loi. Je veux insister sur le fait que pour l'Espagne, cet article en l'état aurait, entraînerait des problèmes constitutionnels, parce que dans le droit constitutionnel espagnol on reconnaît la possibilité d'avoir en même temps et pour le même fait une sanction disciplinaire et une sanction pénale. Dans l'exposé des motifs quand on cite la sentence de Gütman de la Cour européenne de justice, Gütman contre la Commission, affaires 1865 et 3565, il s'agit d'un problème distinct parce que dans ce cas là il s'agissait d'une sanction imposée par la Commission à un fonctionnaire communautaire, et il s'agissait de deux sanctions administratives pour le même fait, mais ce n'est pas le même problème qui se pose pour l'Espagne si on ne rajoute pas les termes "pour le même fait", parce qu'on envisage pas la possibilité d'avoir une sanction disciplinaire avec une sanction pénale. Je pense qu'il faut réfléchir à l'opportunité d'une proposition innovatrice pour cette charte, c'est-à-dire établir un article, un nouvel article, où l'on énonce la compétence spécifique au sein des institutions européennes pour ce qui est du droit administratif, régime administratif et des fonctionnaires au sein de des institutions européennes pourrait faire l'objet d'un article distinct. Ici, cet article est essentiellement destiné à couvrir les sanctions de droit pénal. Merci Monsieur.

21/03/2000 09:33:48 M. TRIAS SAGNIER (Le Parlement espagnol)

Merci Monsieur le Président. Je crois que la première partie de l'amendement de M. Rodrigues Baerero devrait être complété. Alors conformément à la loi applicable parce qu'il y a des lois qui ont été approuvées mais qui n'ont pas été, ne sont pas encore entrées en vigueur, parce que le décret d'application n'a pas été émis par exemple. Donc, je pense qu'il faut rajouter ce terme "loi applicable". Le président remercie l'orateur.

21/03/2000 09:34:23 PRESIDENT

J'espère que ma prononciation était à la hauteur.

21/03/2000 09:34:40 M. HAYES (Le Parlement irlandais)

Excellente prononciation, et ce n'est pas facile pour un orateur d'origine latine que de prononcer mon nom. Merci Monsieur le Président. J'ai remarqué qu'à cet article et comme M. LEHMANN a attiré notre attention là dessus, nous avons un texte concis ici et on reprend l'exposé des motifs l'article entier du de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme mais je ne suis peut être pas aussi satisfait que M. LEHMANN et M. GRIFFITHS et pour cela je dois reprendre les commentaires quand on dit que l'article 2 a été mentionné en référence au traité de l'Union, l'article 6 fait référence à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme c'est effectif et c'est approprié tant qu'il n'y a pas d'instruments des droits de l'homme de l'Union, mais nous sommes en train de le préparer et quand ce sera le cas, l'article 53 de la CEDH sera pertinent et cet article 53 dit que "cela n'empêche pas les parties à la Convention d'aller au-delà des droits qui sont énoncés dans la Convention" et j'en reviens à cet article ici parce qu'il va au-delà des droits énoncés et c'est pourquoi je pense qu'il faut maintenir le paragraphe 2 de la Convention européenne pour nous pré, pour laisser la porte ouverte à cette éventualité. Donc, je ne suis pas satisfait que l'on fasse cette référence dans l'exposé des motifs et je pense que ça doit être beaucoup plus, ça doit faire partie du texte de l'article, surtout si c'est un instrument qui est destiné à faire partie des traités. Merci Monsieur.

21/03/2000 09:37:05 PRESIDENT

Bien après avoir fait le tour de l'article 10, nous en revenons à l'article 11. M. MELOGRANI.

21/03/2000 09:37:13 M. MELOGRANI (Le Parlement italien)

Merci Président, je voudrais dire que actuellement le droit interne national permet à un pays de juger pour un même fait une personne qui a déjà été condamnée dans un autre pays, et c'est le cas par exemple pour le commerce international des stupéfiants ou pour la falsification, la contrefaçon de monnaie. Donc, il me semble opportun de mettre cela dans le texte l'article 11 en disant que personne ne peut être poursuivi ou condamné dans un Etat si il a déjà été poursuivi ou condamné pour le même fait par la même législation dans un même Etat, parce que rien n'empêche qu'on puisse ouvrir une autre procédure dans un autre Etat.

21/03/2000 09:38:27 M. MOMBAUR (Le Parlement européen)

Eh bien justement par rapport à ce qui vient d'être dit, ça tombe bien. L'article 11 porte sur le problème de l'utilisation des arrêts et ce qu'on fait des jugements. La Convention elle parle de ce qu'on fait au niveau des jugements et comment on s'en sert au sein d'un Etat, mais il y a aussi la possibilité de voir entre Etat membre ce que l'on fait d'un jugement prononcé. Par rapport à l'accord de Schengen, il y a un décret d'application en quelque sorte une ... d'application qui prévoit que l'utilisation du jugement par les Etats membres peut se faire de la même manière avec des exceptions tout en sachant que les dispositions que nous avons effectivement valent pour les exceptions comme pour le reste du texte, mais on dit simplement que dans les exceptions la possibilité entre Etats membres de convenir de certaines dispositions est prévue, mais il faut que ce ça soit précis parce que je crois que la jurisprudence de toute façon augmentera de plus en plus sur ce point.

21/03/2000 09:39:59 M. TARSCHYS (Le Parlement suédois)

Nous avons un petit problème, car on dit que l'article est rédigé de telle manière qu'il ne peut priver d'effet juridique l'article 2 du protocole n° 7. Mais je continue en anglais... L'article 6 du TUE ne renvoie qu'au corps du texte et pas au protocole supplémentaire ou additionnel.

Donc il y a une petite difficulté ici. On ne peut pas couvrir ceci comme le prévoit le texte du bureau.

21/03/2000 09:40:55 M. MANZELLA (Le Parlement italien)

... ces deux remarques de technique rédactionnelle. Et d'abord, je pense que cet article 11, il vaudrait mieux le mettre au premier paragraphe de l'article 10 ou alors en tant que paragraphe 2, toujours de l'article 10. Mais pour ce qui est des mécanismes généraux des délits et des peines, alors que je ferai un article séparé pour le deuxième paragraphe de l'article 10 qui, lui, concerne les crimes internationaux. Deuxième proposition, ou plutôt, je voudrais soutenir l'intervention de M. HAYES de tout à l'heure.

21/03/2000 09:41:59 M. LEHMANN (Le Parlement danois)

Merci Monsieur le Président. Avant que vous ne poursuiviez et passiez à l'article suivant, j'aimerais faire écho à ce qu'a dit M. l'Ambassadeur HAYES au sujet de ce que j'avais mentionné auparavant. Ce n'est pas très souvent que, il n'arrive pas souvent que je ne sois pas d'accord avec M. HAYES quant à l'interprétation d'un article. Ce que je disais, c'est qu'une partie du raisonnement qui sous-tend ce texte bref est reprise dans la deuxième partie du document, et je pense que la structure ne m'apparaît pas comme un article et un exposé des motifs. Là je vois un tout qui n'est pas divisible, et quand on parle de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, parce qu'il y a une jurisprudence et une interprétation de la Cour, je pense qu'il est nécessaire de reprendre le texte et la référence à la jurisprudence de la Cour. Le fait de mentionner simplement l'article 6 n'est pas, l'article 6 du traité de l'Union européenne, n'est pas suffisant. La Convention européenne des droits de l'homme a un statut particulier. Il faut mentionner les deux dans le libellé, avec la jurisprudence. J'espère que M. l'Ambassadeur HAYES pourrait être d'accord avec moi. Merci.

21/03/2000 09:43:45 Lord GOLDSMITH (Le Parlement britannique)

Merci Monsieur le Président. En premier, je suis d'accord avec M. BEREIJO. Cet article couvre les procédures pénales, et je pense que cela apparaît clairement d'après le libellé. Et effectivement il a raison quand il propose l'ajout de "pour le même fait". M. LEHMANN et M. l'Ambassadeur HAYES ont parlé de l'importance de l'exception dans l'article 4 du protocole. Je suis tout à fait d'accord avec eux. C'est une exception importante. Nous avons eu le cas d'un jeune homme tué dans notre pays par une attaque raciste et les gens pensaient que c'était dû à l'incompétence de la police et de la justice qui ont acquitté, ont fait que les coupables ont été acquittés. Les coupables ont été acquittés. Et je pense que l'article 4 du protocole 7 devrait être inclus par une référence expresse à la convention et au protocole. Et mon approche juridique serait de l'incorporer au travers de la définition des droits dans la partie B. Mais je suis aussi d'accord avec M. MELOGRANI quand il fait la distinction importante en disant que personne ne devrait être poursuivi dans des États ou dans le même État, et je pense qu'il faudrait un éclaircissement. Est-ce que cet article vise à être limité aux actes commis dans la Communauté ? Dans ce cas, il y aurait une seule réponse, un même fait ne pourra être poursuivi dans deux pays. Ou bien est-ce que c'est une déclaration qui doit s'appliquer à tous les États membres ? Et pour l'instant nous n'avons pas là les procédures permettant d'avoir des reconnaissances mutuelles des jugements criminels. Et parce qu'il y a un acquittement dans un pays, cela ne veut pas dire qu'un autre pays va s'abstenir de juger cette affaire. Donc, là je pense qu'il nous faut travailler encore plus à fond.

21/03/2000 09:46:21 M. PATIJN (Le Parlement néerlandais)

Monsieur le Président, j'ai la même question que Lord GOLDSMITH. Est-ce que le but de cet article est de faire en sorte que la limite de l'article 4 du protocole 7 doit être reprise par cela que c'est un élargissement des dispositions du protocole, est-ce bien là l'objectif ? Et j'ai une question à l'adresse de M. TOBISSON. L'article 6 du Traité d'Amsterdam parle de la convention, et si j'ai bonne mémoire, l'objectif concernait, était aussi que cela couvre les protocoles qui auraient été adoptés après.

21/03/2000 09:47:14 PRESIDENT

Merci Monsieur PATIJN, qui connaît très bien le Traité d'Amsterdam puisque vous y avez activement participé. Article 12. Monsieur RODRIGUEZ-BEREIJO, vous êtes toujours le plus rapide.

21/03/2000 09:47:36 M. RODRIGUEZ-BEREIJO (Le Parlement espagnol)

Je vais essayer de ne prendre la parole qu'une fois et dire tout ce que j'ai à dire. Je suis d'accord avec l'article 12. Il s'agit plutôt de modifier la structure de ce texte. Tout d'abord, il vaudrait peut-être mieux que, pour ce qui est du respect de la vie privée, il vaudrait mieux parler de la vie privée familiale, et après avoir garanti le secret des communications indépendamment du moyen utilisé et protection des données à caractère personnel. Parce que dans le projet du présidium, il manque l'élargissement du droit au secret des communications, mais aussi au secret des communications, et quel que soit le moyen utilisé pour ces communications. Et ensuite, je crois qu'il faut ajouter un nouveau droit, celui de la protection des données à caractère personnel. Et enfin, je crois que, dans cet article, il est indispensable de faire une référence aux limites de ce droit. C'est pourquoi je propose que l'on ajoute "L'exercice de ces droits ne pourra être limité par la loi et, le cas échéant, avec une autorisation judiciaire préalable". Je dis cela parce que dans l'exposé des motifs, on dit que on ne fait pas référence à la limite du droit. Néanmoins, je me permets de vous rappeler quelque chose que j'ai déjà dit. J'ai l'impression que cette référence à l'article 6 du Traité d'Amsterdam n'est pas correct, et en plus, cela ne résout pas le problème de l'intégration des restrictions ou des limites dans la charte. Parce que l'article 6 du Traité sur l'Union européenne dit que l'Union respectera les droits fondamentaux tels que garantis par la convention en tant que principes généraux du droit communautaire. Et il est évident que l'application des droits de la convention en tant que principes généraux du droit communautaire, c'est différent de l'application de la convention en tant que telle. Parce que de plus, si ce n'était pas le cas, si l'article 6 du Traité sur l'Union européenne signifiait ce que semble donner entendre l'exposé des motifs, cela signifierait que il n'y aurait plus besoin de faire une charte, parce qu'au travers de l'article 6, la convention serait déjà insérée dans le traité. Ce qui n'est pas le cas. Donc, il me semble que il est nécessaire, même si c'est un travail difficile mais pas impossible sur le plan technique, qu'en définissant les droits il faut aussi définir ses limitations, parce que les droits ont, comme une feuille ou comme une monnaie, un recto et un verso, et à chaque droit sont liés des droits d'une part ou les limites d'autre part.

21/03/2000 09:52:15 Mme BRAX (Le Parlement finlandais)

Contribuer hier une proposition conjointe avec M. Nicolas sur une modification de l'article 12 et M. Gunnar a marqué son accord. Alors deux choses : d'une part, nous aimerions changer le libellé pour qu'il soit un peu plus clair. Plutôt que de parler du droit au respect de certaines valeurs, nous parlerions d'un droit à la protection de certaines valeurs. Donc ce serait droit à la protection. Deuxième proposition : la protection de la vie familiale ; je pense que c'est étroitement lié à ce droit-ci. Cela correspond au texte de la convention européenne parce que la protection de la vie familiale a toujours été un élément central dans les conventions sur les droits de l'homme de façon générale. Et j'imaginerai que ce sera toujours le cas à l'avenir. Mais l'institution familiale au cours des dernières décennies a beaucoup évolué. Et nous pensons que nous devrions reconnaître cette évolution, ce changement et respecter le droit du citoyen à choisir différentes formes de famille. C'est leur choix. Et c'est pourquoi nous pensons que le respect de la vie familiale fait partie du respect de la vie privée. Et puis M. Mayer a parlé de la même chose je pense dans le cadre de l'article 13 et il a résolu le problème de façon légèrement différente. En fait, le même problème se pose avec la diversification des familles.

21/03/2000 09:54:39 PRESIDENT

Oui, mais pour l'instant nous en restons à l'article 12. Monsieur RODOTA.

21/03/2000 09:54:46 M. RODOTA (Le Parlement italien)

J'interprète cet article comme une norme de caractère général qui sera ensuite précisée et dans les autres articles qui parlent de la famille, mais aussi de la protection des données personnelles qui méritent des paragraphes séparés. S'il s'agit d'un article plus général et là je pense qu'il vaut mieux garder respect plutôt que de parler de protection qui peut paraître un peu paternaliste par rapport à un article qui affirme les droits d'une personne en tant que telle. Je suis d'accord avec Mme BRAX quand elle dit qu'il faut respecter le choix des individus en matière de famille mais je pense qu'il est plus approprié de le faire ailleurs. Et puis je voudrais proposer un ajout dans le texte pour le rendre conforme tant aux révolutions constitutionnelles qu'à l'interprétation des cours et à leur parler, non seulement du secret des communications mais ajouter liberté, liberté et secret de la communication parce que c'est quand même la prémisse de base. Merci. Mme KAUFMANN.

21/03/2000 09:56:17 Mme KAUFMANN (Le Parlement européen)

Dans l'exposé des motifs on dit que le concept d'honneur serait nouvellement introduit parce qu'il existe dans diverses constitutions nationales. Alors, moi je suis contre le fait de reprendre ce concept car très souvent on s'est rendu compte que lorsqu'on renvoyait à l'honneur il y a aussi une limitation du droit à la libre expression parce que il faut faire attention quand on parle aux droits de l'homme qui sont inattaquables dans l'article 1 et bien on risque avec le concept d'honneur de voir certaines limites intervenir.

21/03/2000 09:57:09 M. BACELAR de VASCONCELLOS (Le Parlement portugais)

Merci, Monsieur le président. Je voudrais intervenir sur ces questions où il peut y avoir des divergences, divergences qui sont plus de culture ou d'interprétation que vraiment des divergences de fond. Ici quoiqu'il en soit, je préfère le texte tel qu'il a été rédigé. Mais si vraiment c'est nécessaire, nous pourrions biffer la référence à l'honneur et si on estime que c'est une limite à la liberté d'expression. Et puis on parle aussi du secret des communications. Parce que les libertés on en parle ailleurs, donc je n'ai pas d'autres meilleurs choix à vous proposer. Pour ce qui est du respect de la vie privée là aussi je préfère en fait garder le texte en l'état parce que je pense qu'il y a une différence importante entre l'expression respect et l'expression protection. La protection elle se justifie, elle est nécessaire mais dans un autre cadre. Ici ce dont il s'agit, ce sont les droits fondamentaux élémentaires. Et donc la seule chose que l'on puisse demander à un Etat de droit c'est qu'il respecte ces concepts.

21/03/2000 09:59:07 Lord GOLDSMITH (Le Parlement britannique)

Je suis d'accord avec vous. Les remarques qui ont été faites, Mme BRAX, M. NIKULA, à savoir qu'il vaudrait mieux insérer la vie familiale dans cet article, plutôt que dans un article ultérieur. Je suis d'accord aussi avec les arguments qu'elle a avancés. Je pense que il faut respecter les différentes traditions. La convention européenne l'a fait ; elle a reconnu le respect de la vie familiale y compris pour ces formes moins traditionnelles. Donc je suis tout à fait d'accord avec ce qu'elle a proposé. Toutefois, je ne crois pas pouvoir accepter le libellé qu'elle a proposé pour la protection de la vie privée. Je pense que respect est mieux et c'est plus conforme aussi à la convention. Et puis je suis d'accord avec Mme KAUFMANN à savoir qu'il vaudrait mieux exclure la référence à l'honneur. Chez moi, dans mon pays, on risque de l'interpréter de façon tout à fait différente. On aurait l'impression que cela vise chez les gens d'être l'objet de diffamations, protéger certaines personnes contre la diffamation ce qui n'est pas le but. Je sais bien que c'est un terme qui figure dans certaines constitutions, mais cela risque de poser des problèmes dans mon pays. C'est pourquoi je propose qu'on le biffe. Troisième point, cela concerne les limitations. Je suis d'accord avec M. BEREIJO une limitation est importante. Contrairement aux autres droits, le droit à la vie privée n'est pas absolu et ne devrait pas être absolu. Dans une société libre et démocratique parfois il est approprié de violer la vie privée et la liberté sur les communications l'accepte ou l'admet. Et donc il y a une disposition de la convention européenne qui je pense devrait être répétée ici ; cela figure dans les documents que vous avez à la page 19. Là je reformulerai comme les membres de la convention peuvent le voir les droits fondamentaux donc on enlève l'honneur et on remet la vie familiale. Mais, dans une autre partie du même document, on reprendrait aussi la totalité du texte à l'article 12 et j'expliquerai plus tard pourquoi un article horizontal qui est actuellement proposé ne serait pas une bonne façon de traiter ces limitations. Donc, j'y reviendrai dans le cadre de l'article suivant puisque cela concerne le même point.

21/03/2000 10:02:34 M. FRIEDRICH (Le Parlement européen)

On repart sur les principes. Je continue à penser et je suis désolé de le répéter que nous devons essayer de trouver des phrases courtes et aussi proches que possible de la convention, précises également. Alors, on devrait avec Lord GOLDSMITH et le bureau essayé de faire en sorte justement là encore de ne pas chaque fois devoir tout rediscuter. Je crois qu'en effet que les articles 12, 13 et 14 et même le 15 sont très liés et la structure de chacun de ces articles doit faire l'objet d'une analyse mais je mets en garde contre le fait de vouloir tout regrouper. Deuxièmement, l'honneur. Alors, chez moi, dans ma langue, c'est quelque chose d'un petit peu paternaliste qui n'est peut-être plus tout à fait moderne, plus tout à fait actuel. Mais j'aimerais quand même que cela soit repris parce que le supprimer sans le remplacer cela ne me paraît pas être une bonne solution. Alors au lieu de dire son honneur, on pourrait dire réputation personnelle. Car c'est cela finalement que l'on vise. La réputation personnelle doit être respectée. Nous avons eu un cas de quelqu'un qui a été mis bon, comment dire en liberté surveillée presque, enfin cela n'existe presque plus, mais disons qui a été presque mis en prison et qui a demandé réparation pour sa réputation. Donc je crois qu'il faut plutôt garder l'honneur pas non plus introduire un nouveau niveau de protection, domaine de protection. Parce que quand on regarde cet article par rapport à l'article 14, si on commence à passer de respect à protection, on risque, sans le vouloir, d'ouvrir d'autres portes, d'autres possibilités dont les conséquences ne sont pas toujours prévisibles. Et on risque de se trouver dans un terrain très mouvant et dangereux dans la mesure où on nous accuserait de nous arroger de nouvelles compétences à l'Union. Donc, respect, je demande qu'on maintienne ce concept plutôt que protection ; je voudrais aussi que l'on reprenne les données personnelles et la protection des données personnelles d'une manière ou d'une autre dans ces articles parce que ces nouvelles technologies ouvrent de nouvelles possibilités qu'il faut prendre en compte. Dernier ajout que je souhaiterais, je ne sais pas où : ou 12 ou 13, ou 15 peut-être, mais en tout cas il faut en tout cas ce que je vais vous proposer. Nous savons tous que les nouvelles technologies et Internet tout particulièrement ouvrent certaines possibilités d'abus des enfants que ce soit par la pornographie, d'abus autres, etc.. C'est une menace réelle qui a pris des dimensions importantes. Et je crois qu'il est important que dans ces articles dont nous discutons, nous puissions amener la protection des droits des enfants ou la protection des enfants eux-mêmes face à de telles menaces nouvelles. Bon quand je parle de protection, c'est encore respect. Mais je ne sais pas où il faudra le mettre. Ici ou peut-être dans l'article suivant ; je n'ai pas trouvé de formule adéquate. Mais les temps sont tels que nous sommes obligés de tenir compte de ces nouvelles menaces pour les enfants. Je crois qu'il faut aussi être crédibles. Vous savez que les enfants ne peuvent plus être protégés sur le plan national, non plus, avec Internet il faut que cela soit fait de manière internationale. Donc je lance un appel pour que ce problème nouveau, qui touche les enfants, soit couvert dans un de ces articles. Merci.

21/03/2000 10:07:05 PRESIDENT

Et bien je pense que cela pose un problème important parce que nous avons de plus en plus d'orateurs et de moins en moins de temps. Oui., oui, oui, je sais j'ai une longue liste, alors je vous demanderais, s'il vous plaît, d'être concis sinon je vais devoir vous interrompre et je n'aime pas beaucoup le faire.

21/03/2000 10:07:31 M. NEISSER (Le Parlement autrichien)

Très brièvement. Le problème de M. KAUFMANN dans l'exposé des motifs on parle d'honneur. Or ce concept au niveau national, je ne sais pas comment il est repris chez lui. Moi, cela m'intéresserait parce que c'est un contexte qui n'est pas seulement à voir dans le contexte de la vie privée, mais aussi de la vie publique je crois. Donc, un droit fondamental qui fixe la dignité de l'homme devrait être précisé car la jurisprudence de Strasbourg avec l'article 8 de la convention prévoit le respect de l'identité. Mais le respect de l'identité cela implique d'après la jurisprudence, l'honneur. Donc je suis assez critique là dessus. Maintenant je préfère aussi le respect parce que le respect cela renforce plus l'aspect social de la valeur et cela exprime mieux cet aspect sociétal. Merci.

21/03/2000 10:08:42 Mme CEDERSCHIÖLD (Le Parlement suédois)

Merci, je vais essayé moi aussi d'être brève et la protection des données je pense que c'est, il faudrait le remettre à l'article 15. Deuxièmement je pense que l'article 12 et l'article 13 devraient être séparés et enfin je pense que nous avons besoin d'une analyse des conséquences de remplacer respect par protection. Personnellement je pense qu'on peut garder les deux peut-être. De toute façon, garder respect. Mais je voudrais aussi savoir quelles seraient les implications si on ajoute "protection".

21/03/2000 10:09:33 M. PATIJN (Le Parlement néerlandais)

Merci Président. Très rapidement, les rédacteurs du texte ont essayé d'être brefs mais je pense que le texte de la Convention européenne, il est court et il est meilleur. On n'a pas parlé de la vie familiale ni de la famille. Vous avez ajouté l'honneur, ce n'est pas vraiment la même chose. En fait, cet article vise à protéger la vie privée contre le pouvoir public et moi j'ai l'impression parfois que c'est l'inverse : on essaie de protéger l'ordre public contre l'intervention des citoyens. Pour le reste, il faudrait voir si je pourrais accepter l'élargissement, mais je pense que de toute façon l'ancien texte de la Convention européenne est un bien meilleur texte que celui-ci.

21/03/2000 10:10:42 M. MOMBAUR (Le Parlement européen)

Je suis d'accord avec Lord GOLDSMITH. Il a parlé du débat que nous avons déjà eu, à savoir que l'ordre public peut respecter des droits que si les citoyens de l'Union respectent eux leurs propres responsabilités. Il ne faudrait pas l'oublier. Et puis je voudrais souligner, une fois de plus, que il y a une idée fondamentale, l'état de droit, mais il n'y a pas d'état de droit si l'on ne respecte ou si les citoyens ne respectent pas leurs responsabilités. C'est un principe important. Je pense qu'il faudrait le mettre quelque part, peut-être au début.

21/03/2000 10:11:38 M. KORTHALS ALTES (Le Parlement néerlandais)

Monsieur le président, moi je préfère que l'on garde "respect" plutôt que de mettre "protection" et la mention de l'"honneur" : je voudrais qu'on la biffe. Je vous signale qu'à l'article 1, nous avons déjà parlé de la valeur humaine : je pense que c'est tout à fait clair. Les rédacteurs ont par ailleurs, dans l'exposé des motifs, parlé du fait que l'honneur avait été ajouté sur base de ce qui figure dans certaines constitutions mais cela ne figure pas dans la constitution néerlandaise et cela me poserait un problème d'interprétation à l'avenir si on devait garder ce concept. Alors comment faut-il l'interpréter? C'est vrai: nous n'avons pas besoin de citer la vie familiale ici, puisque nous reprenons cela à l'article 13, je pense que c'est une bonne chose et puis M.Bereijo a dit qu'il serait nécessaire de parler des limitations. Je pense que je suis d'accord avec lui et pour que cette référence soit aussi courte que possible, je voudrais vous rappeler ma contribution, page 35. Malheureusement, pendant longtemps cela n'a été disponible qu'en néerlandais, mais depuis hier c'est disponible en anglais. Et là j'ai proposé quelques méthodes de renvoi ou de référence. Je pense que ce serait justement utile pour l'article 12 pour faire référence aux limitations. Ceci pour avoir malgré tout un texte clair et concis.

21/03/2000 10:13:58 M. HAENEL (Le Parlement français)

Merci Monsieur le président. Je ne crois pas qu'il soit très cohérent d'ajouter ici le terme "familial" car nous examinons successivement dans la Charte la vie privée (article 12), la vie familiale (article 13), puis ensuite on aura la vie sociale. Alors si on met "familial", alors il faudrait peut-être fondre les articles 12 et 13 ou alors supprimer le 1 du 13 car on a l'impression de se répéter. Ensuite en ce qui concerne le mot "honneur", je crois me souvenir que ce mot a été introduit à la demande de M. BRAIBANT. Il faudrait peut-être qu'il nous explique pourquoi il avait souhaité le mot "honneur". On ne peut pas éliminer ça d'un trait de plume, peut-être faudrait-il envisager à ce moment-là de substituer le terme "réputation".

21/03/2000 10:14:50 PRESIDENT

Merci de nous rappeler qu'effectivement, c'est le professeur BRAIBANT qui avait demandé l'inclusion de ce terme.

21/03/2000 10:14:56 Lord BOWNESS (Le Parlement britannique)

La question que je souhaiterais poser c'est "pourquoi veut-on un article séparé pour la protection des données, les principes couverts par les projets d'articles et les exceptions prévues pour les autorités publiques ou les pouvoirs publics. En tout cas, il me semble que la plupart des problèmes se posent au niveau des intéressés privés qui utilisent ces données. Et c'est plutôt la législation plutôt qu'une charte qui serait surtout dirigée aux institutions européennes. Donc c'est la législation disais-je qui devrait couvrir cet aspect parce que sinon on risque de rentrer en conflit avec ce qui est couvert à l'article 15.

21/03/2000 10:15:53 M. TRIAS SAGNIER (Le Parlement espagnol)

Merci. L'honneur, c'est vrai que cela répond à certaines traditions culturelles qui peuvent être distinctes. Donc on pourrait peut-être trouver une formule et remplacer l'honneur par l'honorabilité, par exemple. Et là, je partage ce que disaient M. FRIEDRICH et Lord GOLDSMITH dans les propositions qu'ils ont faites. Je crois que de toute manière on devrait ajouter "au secret des communications" bon, quels que soient la possibilité technique qui existe et les moyens techniques...

FIN DE LA BOBINE

...tout en ayant des limitations, ces droits pouvant être violés chaque fois qu'ils ont été omis par une loi.

21/03/2000 10:16:54 M. LEHMANN (Le Parlement danois)

Je voudrais juste dire que il serait certainement utile que de manière aussi moderne et actuelle que possible, on puisse trouver une formulation mais je rappelle quand même que là on revient au libellé de la convention et que nous avons depuis 50 (? 5 ans) une jurisprudence qui s'est développée mais il faut nous en tenir à notre avis au terme de la convention avec une terminologie aussi proche que possible de ce qu'elle a voulu couvrir. Maintenant en ce qui concerne ces problème, je ne sais absolument pas de quoi on veut parler au-delà de ce qui est dit dans le texte, j'ai entendu avec beaucoup d'intérêt certains qui nous disaient que on devrait peut-être modifier certains concepts, mais par quelles modifications ? La famille, l'honneur... c'est un petit peu paternaliste, je ne sais pas moi tout cela, est-ce que l'on peut vraiment envisager de dire "son honneur, son domicile, sa vie privée..." cela paraît un peu curieux quand même. Dans certains cas cela pourrait paraître un peu masculin, je trouve qu'on pourrait en effet envisager quelque chose de beaucoup plus neutre. Donc moi, je n'ai personnellement pas l'impression que nous pouvons céder à la tentation d'être trop moderne par rapport au texte d'origine.

21/03/2000 10:19:09 M. BRAIBANT (Le Parlement français)

Merci Monsieur le Président, sur deux points je voudrais juste intervenir. D'abord l'honneur. Je ne suis pas le premier qui ait prononcé le mot "honneur" dans cette réunion, c'est notre collègue espagnol et j'avais d'ailleurs fait observer que ce n'était pas par hasard. Je ne veux pas me battre jusqu'à la mort, je ne veux pas être Don Quichotte sur la question de l'honneur, mais je pense quand même que c'est une valeur occidentale fondamentale, même si elle a été et surtout si elle a été un peu oubliée, et je voudrais rappeler que notamment dans les régimes totalitaires que nous voulons condamner, les atteintes à l'honneur ont été un des éléments pour déconsidérer les citoyens et pour les éliminer de la société. Alors je pense personnellement, je préférerais qu'on garde le mot "honneur". Ce serait d'ailleurs dommage que l'on puisse dire que l'Europe n'a plus le sens de l'Honneur. C'est un premier point. Le deuxième point concerne la vie familiale, et là aussi je voudrais rappeler un peu l'historique de ce qui s'est passé. Nous avons décidé et j'y avais contribué, de séparer la vie privée et la vie familiale qui dans la convention européenne des droits de l'homme sont actuellement réunies et de faire cette séparation pour donner plus d'importance à la famille qui désormais fait l'objet d'un article, l'article 13 je crois. La vie familiale était mêlée avec la vie privée et il y avait un autre article uniquement sur le droit au mariage. Nous avons voulu renforcer le caractère de protection de la famille, faire un article sur la famille et pour ne pas faire de répétition donc l'enlever de l'article 12 et le mettre dans un article particulier qui ne concerne pas seulement le respect de la vie familiale et je crois que ça c'est un progrès.

21/03/2000 10:21:03 M. VOGGENHEUBER (Le Parlement européen)

Ce qui m'apparaît, c'est que dans la convention sur les droits de l'homme, il y a l'utilisation de deux concepts. A l'article 8, on parle du respect et de la sphère biprivée ou vie privée dans un autre article. Alors "pritate(?), sphère privée" bon c'est très large, c'est très banal et ça peut couvrir tout une série de choses sans en tenir compte d'autres. Qu'entend-on par vie privée ? C'est la vie qui n'est pas couverte par la vie publique, la vie professionnelle, c'est tout le reste de la vie qui n'est ni publique ni professionnelle, mais il y a aussi une sphère privée quand on est dans la vie professionnelle malgré tout, lorsqu'on parle de la protection de données d'informations etc. et du harcèlement sexuel par exemple, c'est aussi la sphère privée qui est couverte par la vie professionnelle, donc je trouve qu'il faut faire la distinction et je trouve dommage que dans les deux cas dans notre texte on a parlé de vie privée plutôt que de parler de sphère privée qui en allemand aurait été meilleur. En ce qui concerne "l'honneur" je serais assez d'accord avec Monsieur NEISSER. La dignité couvre tout cela et si on dit qu'en Europe il n'y a plus d'honneur, je ne sais pas dans quelles époques on a eu, à certaines époques on a plus parlé d'honneur et moins de dignité, je crois que c'est une question de mode et c'est une question d'accent, on peut perdre son honneur mais pas sa dignité, je crois en plus. Dans la première partie du texte, donc "Honneur" cela serait mieux mais quand on parle du secret des communications dans notre texte, cela veut dire la poste, les télex, télécommunications etc., je sais pas si vraiment c'est l'ensemble des communications qui doit être couvert dans la protection du secret d'information qui en fait sont des informations personnelles. Dans le cas de la société d'information et des nouveaux médias, si on réfléchit par exemple à ce qui est couvert par la transmission électronique des informations, tout ce qui est poste, télécommunications etc...tout n'est pas couvert et ce mot là n'est pas convaincant.

21/03/2000 10:23:46 PRESIDENT

Merci, M. VOGGENHUBER Nous allons passer à l'article 13 malgré tout. C'est la vie familiale, justement

21/03/2000 10:24:06 M. SOLÉ TURA (Le Parlement espagnol)

J'ai une brève observation à faire sur l'article 13, "toute personne à droit au respect et à la protection de sa vie familiale" moi j'ajouterais, les deux. Point 2, il faudrait éliminer "le droit de se marier", ce qui est important c'est qu'une personne ait le droit de fonder une famille, selon les lois quant à l'exercice de ce droit dans les Etats membres, cela peut se faire à travers le mariage ou pas mais cela dépend. J'ajouterais également un point 4 sur la protection des enfants justement. Il était là à la première version et puis on l'a perdu entre-temps.

21/03/2000 10:24:57 PRESIDENT

Il y aura un article séparé sur la protection de l'enfance.

21/03/2000 10:25:06 M. SCHULTZ (Le Parlement européen)

Président, Monsieur Jurgen MEYER qui est au "Buntestaks matin" (?) a dû vous transmettre par écrit des amendements pour les articles 13, 14 et 15. Il m'a demandé ce matin de vous les présenter, de faire quelques remarques supplémentaires que je voudrais présenter en son nom ici, si vous en êtes d'accord. En ce qui concerne l'alinéa 1 de l'article 13, nous avons, si vous avez suivi les propositions de modifications de notre collègue MEYER, une formule qui est un petit peu différente mais qui correspond à la déclaration générale sur les droits de l'homme de la convention et la constitution ..ALMEINT(?), mais nous avons également préféré des formules qui correspondent au pacte des droits des citoyens et nous avons essayé de reprendre ces termes qui selon nous par rapport à la formule qui est choisie dans votre texte, élargissent un petit peu le droit, bon le droit de se marier par exemple et le droit des parties dans le mariage de définir leur contrat comme ils l'entendent tout particulièrement parce qu'à l'article 13 à l'alinéa 2, il y a de nouvelles formes de coexistences et de cohabitations dans la société qui sont prises en compte, les communautés de vie différentes qui sont, qui vont au-delà du mariage traditionnel et qui ont pour objectif de rester la vie durant. Alors nous proposons donc ici de coller à l'évolution de la société dans les temps modernes et dans une charte moderne comme celle que nous voulons il faut que dans l'Union nous tenions compte des nouvelles formes qui ont remplacé le mariage, et cela vaut pour toutes les formes qui existent dans tous les Etats membres, vous avez vu qu'il y a aussi des tendances à des partenariats homosexuels ou des partenariats de gens de même sexe qu'il faut reconnaître aussi même si on ne fait pas d'évaluation en valeur, on indique simplement qu'on ne peut pas discriminer une forme minoritaire. Sur le plan juridique, il n'y a pas d'évaluation à laquelle on procède et je crois que c'est cela les sens des modifications proposées par notre collègue Meyer dont vous avez le texte dans votre dossier.

21/03/2000 10:27:57 M. BERTHU (Le Parlement européen)

Merci Monsieur le Président. Je crois que l'idée qui a présidé à la séparation de la vie privée et de la vie familiale (article 12 et article 13), comme le rappelait M. BRAIBANT à l'instant, est excellente et opère une grande clarification, mais je crois qu'on n'est pas allé jusqu'au bout de cette idée et que dans l'article 13 il reste encore des choses différentes mélangées, par exemple quand on dit que "toute personne a le droit de se marier" il est bien évident que l'on recouvre une réalité très large qui ne se limite pas à la famille traditionnelle. C'est pour ça que je serais partisan de regarder le problème en face et d'aller jusqu'au bout et d'essayer de séparer les deux, c'est-à-dire de renvoyer dans l'article précédent, l'article 12, le droit au respect de la vie de couple et donc dans un sens très large et de dire "toute personne a droit au respect de la vie de couple qu'il peut avoir choisie selon les lois nationales". Et puis, dans l'article 13, en sens inverse, comme on aurait dit carrément les choses dans l'article 12, dire carrément les choses dans l'article 13, c'est-à-dire se référer à la Convention universelle des droits de l'homme, dire que la famille qui élève des enfants, parce que c'est quand même ça le critère, est la cellule fondamentale de la société et a droit à la protection des pouvoirs publics et de la société - il y a une répétition mais elle est dans la convention universelle -, et puis dire au point 2 que l'homme et la femme ont le droit de fonder une famille selon les lois nationales régissant l'exercice de ce droit, et puis pour les enfants soit un point 3 soit un article séparé comme vous l'avez dit tout à l'heure. Mais sur les deux points disons, la vie de couple en général et la vie de famille au sens "élevage" des enfants, je crois qu'il faut regarder les choses en face et donc bien les séparer.

21/03/2000 10:30:11 M. DUFF (Le Parlement européen)

Moi aussi je voudrais soutenir ceux qui disent que la référence à la famille conventionnelle doit être complétée par une référence à des formes non conventionnelles de famille ou de partenariat, même s'il est vrai qu'il est implicite que les familles non formelles sont couvertes par l'article 13 mais notre public et nos citoyens ne comprendraient pas qu'il n'y ait pas de référence explicite à ces partenariats. Je sais que ce n'est pas facile à exprimer mais je m'y suis essayé à la page 73, dernière page du gros document qui a été diffusé hier. Merci.

21/03/2000 10:32:18 M. TRIAS SAGNIER (Le Parlement espagnol)

Merci M. Président. Moi je trouve que l'on devrait supprimer le droit de se marier de ce texte parce que de toute façon c'est un droit intrinsèque qui existe dans le fait de fonder une famille. Dans ce concept de fonder une famille d'après les lois des États membres, il y a tous types de partenariats qui peuvent être couverts : les nouvelles familles, les homosexuels, la vie en couple et les autres formes d'union. Donc faire référence uniquement à la famille traditionnelle moi je crois que c'est une imprécision sur le plan de la terminologie, ça n'a aucun sens, alors qu'il est clair que toute personne a le droit de fonder une famille selon les lois des États membres et dans ce droit, je le rappelle, il y a tout type d'union qui est couvert. Merci.

21/03/2000 10:33:21 Mme BERÈS (Le Parlement européen)

Moi, je m'associe à ce qui propose de supprimer la référence au droit de se marier parce que en tout cas tel qu'il figure ici il soulève une difficulté. J'ai une préoccupation c'est de ne pas comprendre le texte proposé par le professeur MEYER puisque nous ne l'avons qu'en allemand pour l'instant, donc peut-être aurait-il été utile qu'il soit lu pour que les membres de la convention, à travers l'interprétation, puissent en prendre connaissance et puis je m'interroge sur la question de la distinction entre famille et couple, parce que je crois que si nous rentrons dans ce degré de précision nous introduirons plus de difficultés que nous n'en résoudrons.

21/03/2000 10:34:11 M. LEHMANN (Le Parlement danois)

En ce qui concerne l'article 13 paragraphe 1 ce droit à la vie familiale on le met à l'écart, enfin on le ressort par rapport à d'autres aspects de la vie privée dans la convention, on lui donne une vie particulière par rapport à la vie privée. Donc je crois qu'il est très important de faire en sorte que les paragraphes 1 et 2 soient combinés en quelque sorte, à moins qu'on ne répète les limites qui existent à l'article 8 de la convention. L'alinéa 3 fait lui mention d'un problème général. Est-ce qu'on a vraiment besoin d'incorporer des éléments politiques dans notre charte ? Nous avons dit dans la charte au départ que tout le monde a des droits individuels mais il y a aussi des droits de groupe. Mais qu'en serait-il pour les droits de l'homme dans chacune des politiques de l'Union, est-ce qu'on les mentionne ? Je crois qu'on pourra en discuter lorsqu'on reviendra aux questions horizontales. Faudrait-il introduire vraiment des objectifs politiques et ne devrait-on pas à ce moment-là le faire dans le préambule de la charte plutôt qu'ailleurs ?

21/03/2000 10:36:04 M. MOMBAUR (Le Parlement européen)

Je crois qu'ici nous sommes arrivés à un point qui est essentiel et central : le fait de savoir si nous permettrons au citoyen de l'Union de se trouver reflété dans notre texte. Là je dois dire que j'ai pas mal de sympathie pour la proposition du collègue MEYER qui permet de résoudre la quadrature du cercle dans la mesure où il n'y a pas dans l'Union de définition de ce qu'est une famille ou un mariage. Alors dans la mesure où il n'y a pas de définition je crois qu'on peut solutionner le problème en exprimant comme il l'a fait un renvoi aux lois nationales. C'est vrai qu'il faut mentionner le concept de famille parce que dans la plupart des ordres juridiques nationaux c'est un concept qui existe. Pour le concept de mariage, c'est vrai que c'est un peu bizarre que d'ajouter celui de... bon, si on parle de famille je rappelle quelle est la discussion de fond que nous avons et que nous avons eue autour de la convention, c'est vrai qu'il y a des nuances juridiques que l'on peut faire valoir mais si on peut... On nous dit toujours qu'il faut s'en tenir à la convention, on exclurait alors le concept de mariage mais franchement il y a là quelque chose de bizarre dans l'évaluation que l'on fait d'un principe par rapport à l'autre selon ce qu'on vit dans les États membres. Moi je sais qu'hier nous avons discuté avec le collègue MEYER et qu'il serait également d'accord avec un complément à son amendement. J'ai dit en effet que ce serait bien pour la convention qu'on ne parle pas seulement du droit constitutionnel des États membres et de son évolution actuelle et qu'on en tienne compte, mais qu'on voie également ce qui se passe au niveau des pays candidats à l'adhésion dans leurs constitutions. Par exemple, la Pologne définit le mariage comme un lien entre un homme et une femme et je ne vous citerai pas le reste. Le professeur MEYER dit qu'il serait d'accord dans sa proposition pour que l'on puisse spécifier le concept de mariage comme tel à côté de la famille pour pouvoir justement couvrir toute la diversité de la communauté de vie qui peut exister dans nos différents pays. Alors je vous lance un appel essayons de formuler dans ce sens parce que nous revenons toujours là aussi à la protection et au respect dans cette affaire. Le respect c'est autre chose que la protection. La protection c'est un aspect positif de ce que peut faire l'Union. Le respect c'est autre chose. Mais il faut bien comprendre que dans la plupart des articles on ne peut pas faire une liste complète et comme il ne s'agit pas de nouvelles compétences à l'Union - de toute façon ce n'est pas nous qui en décidons, c'est la Conférence intergouvernementale -, donc dans une clause générale je crois qu'il serait plus opportun de faire une mention générale de ce qu'est justement la protection par rapport au respect.

21/03/2000 10:39:18 PRESIDENT

J'ai encore dix intervenants et je vais fermer la liste... vous y êtes, vous y êtes. Alors je vais clore cette liste. Je rappelle que vous avez aussi la possibilité de faire valoir d'autres amendements ailleurs, pas seulement aujourd'hui.

21/03/2000 10:39:41 M. FRIEDRICH (Le Parlement européen)

Je pense moi aussi que l'article 13 ... bon, il nous convient avec son titre "vie familiale" mais qu'on ne peut pas par ailleurs définir trop de chose et de manière incorrecte. La formule de la convention elle est très claire, très précise : les hommes et les femmes à l'âge adulte ont le droit, d'après l'ordre national et son exercice, de fonder une famille et de contracter un mariage. Alors, à mon avis, et ça serait ce que je proposerais, nous pourrions nous nous permettre de définir justement ce que c'est qu'un mariage, mais on n'essayerais pas de définir ce qu'est par contre une famille, parce que finalement les évolutions en terme de famille, par rapport à la forme traditionnelle, bon et bien elle s'ajoute, il y a d'autres possibilités qui se sont ajoutées à la forme traditionnelle et toute définition aujourd'hui serait de toute manière restrictive par rapport au développement des États membres. Demain, en plus vous savez qu'il y a des évolutions très différentes, il y a des partenariats qui existent etc... moi je crois qu'il faut en tirer une conséquence logique. On s'en tient à la définition du mariage tel qu'il est défini dans la Convention et nous respectons la famille (protégeons) mais nous ne définissons pas ce que l'Union souhaite comprendre sous "famille", parce que dans deux ans, cinq ou dix ans de toute façon ce ne sera pas la même chose. Comme le voit Lord GOLDSMITH, je crois qu'il est important de toute manière à ce stade de se limiter au texte de la Convention qui est général et qui permet d'être valable aujourd'hui.

21/03/2000 10:41:47 M. PATIJN (Le Parlement néerlandais)

Je dois vous signaler que j'ai quelques problèmes avec ce chapitre qui parle de la vie familiale. Pour ce qui est du premier paragraphe qu'on a déjà fait remarquer lors de la discussion ensure l'article 12, c'est en fait un respect de la vie privée et de la vie familiale. Cela a été séparé, je vous propose de les rassembler à nouveau. Deuxième paragraphe, cela concerne la famille traditionnelle, telle que définie par les lois nationales et comme dans beaucoup d'autres pays, aux Pays-Bas, il y a une rapide évolution en la matière et bientôt on autorisera le mariage entre deux personnes de même sexe, ce qui signifie qu'il faudra interpréter ainsi l'article 12 pour rendre cela possible. Mais si une Union européenne parle de vie familiale et que le paragraphe 2 est entouré de deux autres paragraphes, qui ne parlent que de la vie familiale, je crains fort que chez moi personne ne comprendra ce que je suis venu faire ici. Il faudrait éviter cela. Et puis, paragraphe 3, j'imagine que cela provient de l'article 16 de la Charte sociale européenne et qui concerne ou qui reprend des droits économiques et je crains que en fait ce n'est pas à sa place. Je vous propose de revenir sur ce paragraphe 3 quand nous reviendrons sur les questions sociales.

21/03/2000 10:44:07 M. TARSCHYS (Le Parlement suédois)

Monsieur le président, il y a un problème que j'ai et que nous n'avons pas encore considéré. Les conflits qui peuvent apparaître entre parents et enfants. C'est bien de protéger la vie familiale et de la respecter, mais nous savons aussi dans nos États membres que parfois les parents utilisent ce principe comme excuse pour traiter leurs enfants comme ils l'entendent. Alors je crois qu'il faut effectivement certes donner sa dignité à la vie familiale mais il faut aussi protéger les droits des enfants de manière adéquate. Donc, il me semble que la formule actuelle, que nous avons dans le texte de la Convention, convient mieux lorsqu'on parle de la séparation entre la vie privée et la vie familiale, nous sommes d'accords, pour le reste d'accord également avec le texte du M. LEHMANN.

21/03/2000 10:45:23 Lord GOLDSMITH (Le Parlement britannique)

Merci, sur la plupart des interventions qui ont été faites "respect de la vie familiale et droit au mariage", je crois que je suis d'accord avec M. FRIEDRICH. Il faut bien faire la distinction entre le respect de la vie familiale que j'aurais couvert moi comme les autres articles que ça l'est fait dans la Convention, tout en reconnaissant ce que reconnaît la jurisprudence de la Cour de Strasbourg, les familles non traditionnelles existent. Il y a des familles monoparentales et d'autres. Le droit au mariage implique certaines obligations et certains droits dans certains Etats membres et c'est autre chose. Donc, quand M. FRIEDRICH ce que je préférerais c'est qu'on sépare ces éléments et qu'on s'en tienne au texte de la Convention pour le mariage. Je voudrais approfondir un élément qui n'a pas été abordé, sauf par M. PATIJN. Le troisième alinéa, la protection de la famille au plan juridique, économique et social est assuré. Moi je voudrais quand même poser une question, ça va très loin, qui va faire cette protection ? C'est la collectivité qui va financer le rapprochement des familles qui se séparent ? Qu'est-ce que ça veut dire "protection au niveau social", est-ce que ça veut dire qu'on va prendre des mesures pour veiller à ce que pères reviennent prendre soin de leur famille, ce sont des domaines très importants et je ne vois pas très bien ce que cela recouvre. Certes l'exposé des motifs nous dit que ça s'appliquera lorsque l'Union adoptera les mesures qui sont dans ses compétences et qui permettront de répondre aux besoins des familles, mais je ne comprend pas, à l'heure actuelle, je crois que cela va bien au-delà et je pense comme M. PATIJN que c'est peut-être quelque chose qu'il faudra revoir dans le contexte des dossiers sociaux. A l'heure actuelle, je ne peux pas soutenir ce point. Mais j'attire aussi votre attention sur la page 19, c'est là où j'ai fait mes amendements, je vous le rappelle et je vous signale que, comme Mme BRAX, j'ai remis ce respect de la vie de famille dans les articles précédents.

21/03/2000 10:47:54 M. RODOTA (Le Parlement italien)

Monsieur le Président, beaucoup de choses importantes ont été dites. Moi je crois pour devoir défendre l'article 13 dans sa rédaction actuelle parce que je pense que ce que nous voulons ce que les citoyens européens comprennent cette déclaration et éditent un article qui reproduit ce qui a été écrit il y a 50 ans dans la Convention européenne serait incompréhensible. Les habitudes ont beaucoup changé, mais comme l'a rappelé à juste titre, Lord GOLDSMITH, il y a déjà dans la législation ou les jurisprudences de tous les pays une reconnaissance des organisations de type familiales. Donc, la famille est considérée comme famille avec un seul géniteur et cette organisation familiale là est aussi considérée comme une famille. Donc, ce n'est plus, si vous voulez, nécessairement un couple. Parce que sinon cela voudrait dire qu'une maman avec un enfant n'aurait pas droit à cette protection. Je pense que quand même la remarque est judicieuse et je suis d'accord avec M. SOLÉ TURA, il y a lieu de biffer le droit de se marier, de fonder une famille. Ce sont aussi des traditions culturelles et cela dépend de l'évolution culturelle. Par ailleurs, je pense qu'il faut maintenir une différence entre l'article 12 et l'article 13. L'article 12 concerne la personne. L'article 13 concerne en fait une forme d'organisation sociale. Et chaque personne pourra se retrouver dans une organisation en fonction de sa culture et de ses traditions propres. Donc, c'est quand même différent du respect de la vie privée qui concerne l'individu en tant que tel. Le point 3. Je comprends les préoccupations qui ont été exprimées par Lord GOLDSMITH mais d'une part, cela pose le problème soulevé par M. PATIJN, il y a lieu de se demander si c'est le lieu approprié pour mettre une règle comme celle-ci, justement parce qu'il s'agit d'être clairs par rapport aux citoyens. Et je pense que c'est le lieu approprié, parce que ce que nous appelons citoyens européens, et bien ce sont ceux qui sont visés par ces droits. Droit de se marier, droit d'obtenir un soutien pour ce type d'organisation sociale par rapport à d'autres. Il s'agit de droits pour ceux qui décideraient de s'insérer au sein d'une organisation familiale.

21/03/2000 10:51:31 M. BRAX (Le Parlement finlandais)

Je veux répéter ce que j'ai dit auparavant. Je suis d'accord avec Lord GOLDSMITH, plus ou moins, sur l'article 13. Toutefois, nous avons décidé avec M. Nicholas d'un libellé encore plus synthétique, nous dirions toute personne a le droit de se marier, etc. et nous espérons avec ce libellé plus bref de parvenir à un accord. Parce que dans les différents États membres comme nous avons pu l'entendre, il y a des concepts différents. Et pour les droits sociaux je suis d'accord avec les autres intervenants qui se sont exprimés. C'est important. Mais ça devrait être couvert par les articles sur les droits sociaux, mais il faut encore décider de comment on va l'intégrer. J'aimerais dire aussi que le droit des enfants doit faire l'objet de mentions séparées. Cette proposition a recueilli un soutien assez large à ce stade de rédaction.

21/03/2000 10:53:05 PRESIDENT

Oui, Mme BRAX, comme je l'ai dit auparavant, il y aura un article traitant des enfants de manière séparée, comme la convention l'a demandé.

21/03/2000 10:53:22 M. FAYOT (Le Parlement luxembourgeois)

M. le Pdt, je pense pour cet article, comme d'aucuns l'ont déjà dit, nous ne pouvons pas biffer le droit de se marier. C'est un droit qui est inscrit dans la convention des droits de l'homme et il a été inscrit dans ces conventions pour protéger l'individu aussi contre un certain arbitraire de l'État. Donc, moi je pense qu'il faut le laisser. Je me demande cependant si le problème que nous avons ne peut être résolu en scindant cette phrase du paragraphe 2 en deux parties : c'est-à-dire de mettre "toute personne a le droit de se marier." Et de faire ensuite un 3^{ème} paragraphe : "toute personne a le droit de fonder une famille". De cette façon nous séparons, nous éloignons un peu le mariage du droit de fonder une famille. De toute façon nous ajoutons que nous le faisons conformément aux lois relatives de chaque État membre et évidemment il y a une évolution différente selon les États membres en ce qui concerne le droit de fonder une famille. Voilà donc je pense peut-être une solution pour notre problème. En ce qui concerne, je voudrais dire un mot de la proposition de M. MEYER dont on a parlé. M. MEYER dit dans sa proposition pour l'article 13 que les communautés de vie, donc les communautés qui ne sont pas des familles traditionnelles, qui sont destinées à avoir une certaine durée ont le droit à la protection devant toute discrimination. Évidemment, le terme de discrimination est relativement ambigu, puisqu'il peut y avoir une discrimination positive et une discrimination négative. Je pense que M. MEYER ici parle de la discrimination négative, probablement. Mais je pense donc que ce texte de M. MEYER malgré toute la sympathie que j'en ai est assez dangereux et donne lieu à toutes sortes d'interprétations. Moi je pense que si on séparait donc le mariage de la fondation d'une famille, on pourrait peut-être ouvrir la notion de famille de cette façon en la séparant en tout cas dans le texte du droit au mariage. Enfin, pour le troisième point, en ce qui concerne la protection de la famille : il est certain que nous entrons là dans les droits sociaux. nous devons en parler. Ce sera certainement un problème important dans cette enceinte. Mais je pense aussi qu'il est utile et important de mettre cette protection de la famille ici dans cet article 13 en mettant l'ensemble qui concerne la vie familiale à cet endroit. Il est évident aussi qu'en parlant de droits sociaux et économiques nous entrons dans une autre sorte de droits qui ne sont pas simplement des droits individuels mais qui sont aussi des incitations pour les États et pour la Communauté, pour l'Union européenne, d'agir. Mais comme le droit au travail ou d'autres droits sociaux, mais là évidemment c'est une autre discussion. Mais pour moi, je pense qu'il faut le laisser ici dans cet article.

21/03/2000 10:56:37 PRESIDENT

Merci. Je vous rappelle que nous avons peu de temps et je vous demanderai donc d'être brefs et de ne pas répéter les mêmes arguments.

1/03/2000 10:56:52 M. LALLEMAND (Le Parlement belge)

M. le Pdt, je pense que l'article 13 doit être maintenu pour l'essentiel, mais je crois que s'il faut protéger et faire respecter la vie familiale, il y a un problème qui se pose qui est celui de l'évolution dans je crois la plupart des pays européens des conceptions que l'on se fait des relations homosexuelles. Plusieurs pays de l'Union ont d'ailleurs voté des lois en cette matière et ont consacré l'existence de couples homosexuels. Les termes de la loi du projet qui figure devant nous suscitent questions, parce que la famille dont on parle, c'est évidemment la famille hétérosexuelle, de manière, oui oui, je sais bien, c'est en tout cas le sens qu'il a dans la convention européenne des droits de l'homme où là il est clairement dit qu'il s'agit de l'union de l'homme et de la femme. Donc, on étend le mot, le concept de famille et donc je m'en réjouis. Personnellement, je suis d'accord avec cette extension du sens du mot famille. Je me posais la question : ne faut-il pas viser plutôt que famille le mot couple tout simplement, de fonder un couple ? Ce qui là est beaucoup plus clair et élimine toutes les ambiguïtés qui sont liées à toutes les traditions, à tous les sens traditionnels que véhicule le concept de famille. Enfin, je laisse ça à votre attention, si l'on s'accorde sur l'idée que le concept est large, je veux bien me rallier au mot, mais je me demande s'il ne serait pas plus simple de se référer à cet endroit là très précis au mot couple. Enfin, je vous signale qu'il y a une erreur en français dans le texte : il faut parler de fonder une famille selon les lois des États membres qui régissent l'exercice de ce droit et non pas selon les lois relatives des États membres à l'exercice de ce droit. C'est une faute linguistique mais je crois qu'il faut la corriger.

21/03/2000 10:59:00 M. HAYES (Le Parlement irlandais)

Merci M. le Pdt, je serai bref parce que ce que je voulais dire a déjà été mentionné. On a dit que la famille traditionnelle que nous connaissons depuis de nombreuses années, n'est pas complétée par d'autres unités, disons. Ça a été reconnu par la Cour de Strasbourg, l'application de la convention. Le concept de mariage aussi suscite des opinions variables. Nos gouvernements, nos sociétés ont réagi de manières différentes et différentes dispositions s'appliquent dans ce domaine. La question du mariage ne permet pas que l'on parvienne à un accord sur la définition et il est tout à fait pertinent de dire que l'on ne peut pas aboutir à une définition dans l'Union européenne du concept de mariage et je pense qu'il est essentiel que nous maintenions la formulation qui permette aux États membres de maintenir tant la famille que le concept de mariage. Paragraphe 3 : je suis d'accord avec les préoccupations exprimées dans le sens qu'on n'est pas certains de ce que cela signifie. Merci M. le Pdt.

21/03/2000 11:00:45 M. AZEVEDO (Le Parlement portugais)

J'ai cru vous entendre dire monsieur .. J'aimerais juste souligner quelque chose à la suite d'une discussion que nous avons eue lors d'une séance précédente. La source du concept de famille. Cette convention et la charte que nous sommes en train de façonner ne doit pas prendre position de manière préférentielle, ne doit pas privilégier une forme de mariage. Tous les citoyens européens doivent se retrouver dans cette charte. Donc, il ne faut pas de parti pris et en privilégiant une forme ou une autre. A cet égard, je voulais dire que notre tâche n'est pas d'actualiser, de mettre à jour la convention de Strasbourg, mais selon moi la formulation à partir de l'âge nubile, l'homme et la femme ont le droit de se marier et bien pour moi c'est quelque chose qui est dépassé au vu de l'actualité sociale. J'ai le bénéfice d'intervenir en dernier et donc je ne peux que faire suite, qu'emboîter le pas aux interventions précédentes. Je pense qu'il faudrait avoir une définition plus vaste et plus inoffensive "constituer famille", et je pense qu'il ne faut pas aller au-delà de ce terme. Merci.

21/03/2000 11:02:32 M. VOGGENHUBER (Le Parlement européen)

Ce n'est pas par hasard que dans la discussion ça soit cet article qui ait donné lieu à la citation de droit politique, de nouvelles formes sociétales, de nouvelles formes d'union. Je crois que là nous sommes dans le danger d'aller vers une dimension idéologique. Et c'est pour cela qu'il est important selon moi d'essayer de procéder à une explication. Il n'est pas nouveau que nous nous trouvions face à de nouvelles formes d'union personnelle ou de vie en société, mais l'important c'est de voir si on poursuit des visions politiques. Il ne faut pas perdre de vue qu'ici, notre exercice porte sur les droits à la dignité, au respect de la vie privée, qui doivent être couchés dans une charte - ah, hors micro malheureusement -. Les formes dont on parle, elles ont toujours existé, elles n'ont pas été respectées jusqu'alors. Ce ne sont pas forcément des nouvelles formes de vie. C'est ça l'important. Dans une société jusqu'à maintenant on avait des formes de vie et des valeurs qui n'étaient pas pleinement respectées. Pas prises en compte. Alors, c'est ça. Il s'agit de constituer un droit fondamental qui tienne compte de ce qui se passe mais qui n'est pas forcément quelque chose de nouveau. Quand on parle de droit à la protection de la vie privée, c'est des relations, des partenariats, des formes de vie qui existent peut-être depuis des siècles. Mais la protection n'était pas réservée à ces formes là jusqu'à maintenant. Il ne s'agit pas donc de reconnaître de nouvelles formes de liens. Alors, je sais qu'on ne peut pas laisser tomber cet article, parce que justement il y a un droit qui est contesté, qui dans la pratique n'est pas intégré et parce que la dignité et le droit ne sont pas suffisamment assurés dans ces domaines. Mais pour que cette protection et que ce droit soient complets, et pas nouveau, mais pour qu'ils soient complets, je crois qu'il suffirait de reprendre "toute personne a le droit de se marier, de fonder une famille et de constituer une communauté de vie". Ca suffirait à tenir compte de la réalité sociale "constituer une communauté de vie".

21/03/2000 11:05:00 PRESIDENT

Merci M. VOGGENHUBER. Nous remercions M. MÉNDEZ DE VIGO qui nous quitte entre-temps et je vais présider la fin de la réunion. Nous allons continuer jusqu'à midi et demi et sur l'article 13 j'ai encore deux noms sur la liste. Je pense qu'ensuite nous pourrions terminer afin de passer aux autres articles de la convention 13 et après nous entamerons les travaux de la convention 8.

21/03/2000 11:06:01 M. HAENEL (Le Parlement français)

Merci M. le président. L'idée émise tout à l'heure par un collègue d'inclure le droit de former un couple hétérosexuel ou homosexuel dans l'article 12 paraît séduisante. Cela éviterait sans doute des mélanges des genres et bien des ambiguïtés qui risquent de soulever des interprétations et donc des polémiques. Mais je crois que la rédaction du 2 de l'article 13 règle la question si le membre de phrase "selon les lois relatives des Etats membres à l'exercice de ce droit" donc ce membre de phrase est bien en facteur commun à droit de fonder une famille et droit de se marier. Je crois que c'est clair : chaque Etat met ce qu'il veut sous le terme mariage et famille et je crois qu'il faut s'en tenir là. Donc, je suis pour la formulation actuelle. Cependant, une question : est-ce que cette rédaction, le droit de se marier, sous-entend le droit de divorcer ?

21/03/2000 11:07:31 PRESIDENT

Dieu vous entende !

21/03/2000 11:07:31 M. VITORINO (La Commission)

Merci M. le président. Je crois que dans cet article on a eu un débat très intéressant et que la formule qui a été présentée par le bureau a l'avantage d'être une formule ouverte. Ouverte dans le sens incontestable qu'elle va au-delà de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme ce que je crois correspond non seulement à un constat de l'évolution sociale mais il correspond aussi à un principe d'orientation du droit communautaire en vigueur surtout l'article 13 du traité qui consacre le principe de la non-discrimination sur plusieurs éléments parmi lesquels sans doute l'orientation sexuelle. Mais surtout la question c'est la formule ouverte est la seule qui, de mon avis, respecte le principe de la sociabilité et ici il faut respecter absolument le principe de la sociabilité. Il ne s'agit pas de définir une nouvelle centrale de famille ou de mariage et de l'imposer aux Etats membre, il s'agit de consacrer un droit qui laisse la définition des modalités en concret à la loi régissant les relations familiales dans chaque Etat membre. C'est pourquoi la proposition de M. LALLEMAND de la correction de la version française en disant que selon les lois des Etats membres régissant ce droit. Cela me paraît plus évident et c'est la meilleure façon de respecter le principe de la sociabilité. Et pourtant c'est à la loi des Etats membres de définir les implications du droit de mariage, du droit de fonder une famille et de reconnaître dans quelles conditions on peut fonder une famille au-delà du mariage ou quels types de mariage sont reconnus par la loi de chaque Etat membre. C'est une formule ouverte au principe de la sociabilité. De mon avis, il y a toujours des raisons pour ne pas supprimer le droit de se marier. Parce que le droit de se marier a un contenu autonome en ce qui concerne la modalité de formation d'une famille ou les modalités de vie en commun. Il y a un contenu indépendant subjectif et personnel du droit de se marier surtout en ligne de compte que dans certaines communautés culturelles ou ethniques les mariages inter-ethniques sont défendus, ils ne sont pas permis et il faut rendre clair qu'il s'agit d'un droit fondamental humain qui ne peut pas être limité par des préjugés culturels ou même des mesures législatives discriminatoires. Finalement, en ce qui concerne le n° 3, on pourrait renforcer l'interprétation de ce n° 3 en disant "dans le cadre de ses compétences l'Union veille à la protection de la famille sur le plan juridique, économique et social". Mais je trouve que ça c'est un critère qu'on doit adopter pour toutes les questions semblables en ce qui concerne des objectifs politiques et pourtant il faudrait adopter une solution cohérente et globale pour tous les cas où il s'agit de définition des objectifs et c'est pourquoi je crois que c'est une question horizontale qu'on doit adresser en tant que telle à la fin de notre travail. Merci.

21/03/2000 11:11:24 PRESIDENT

Cet article 12 est extrêmement délicat comme cela a été dit. Je pense que le système social dans son ensemble ce sont des concepts difficiles en ce qui concerne l'article 13. Voilà passons maintenant à l'article 14 : liberté de pensée de conscience et de religion. Qui souhaite prendre la parole ? Mme KAUFMANN.

21/03/2000 11:12:38 Mme KAUFMANN (Le Parlement européen)

Merci le Président. Dans son contexte, permettez-moi de revenir sur quelque chose que j'avais dit la dernière fois. Moi je crois qu'il faut dans l'Union une nouvelle politique. On parle de la PESC, on parle de la politique de la défense, on parle de force militaire qui pourrait être présente en dehors de l'Europe alors dans ce contexte, je trouve que le droit à l'objection de conscience devrait figurer parce que ça fait justement partie de la politique de l'Union maintenant. Quand on voit l'exposé des motifs on s'aperçoit qu'il s'agit finalement aussi essentiellement de liberté et de religion : très bien mais si le droit à l'objection de conscience n'est pas explicitement nommé moi je ne pourrais pas souscrire à cette rédaction car je crois que c'est un droit qui est un droit réel qui doit être préservé face à la nouvelle politique de l'Union.

21/03/2000 11:14:05 M. HIRSCH BALLIN (Le Parlement néerlandais)

Merci Président. L'article 14 est un peu trop limite et je pense, par rapport à la même disposition dans la Convention européenne. Et si on met l'article 14 à côté de l'article 9 de la Convention, ce qui frappe, c'est que la deuxième partie du paragraphe premier de l'article 9 n'a pas été reprise. Donc si vous voulez c'est une protection qui est inférieure à celle de la Convention européenne et lors de la réunion informelle, je l'ai déjà signalé, je voudrais plaider pour qu'on ne limite pas ce droit. La deuxième partie de ce paragraphe de l'article 9 a une valeur ajoutée réelle à côté de la première partie, première partie qui parle du droit individuel à la liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion, et la deuxième partie parle des manifestations sociales de cela. Donc le droit d'exercer cette liberté seule ou en public avec d'autres, etc. donc il est important de ne pas biffer cette deuxième partie parce que le terrain de travail de l'Union européenne peut influencer la possibilité d'utiliser ce droit dans des sociétés, des organisations et puis nous sommes partis du principe que nous ne descendrions pas en dessous du niveau de protection de l'article 9 de la Convention, d'où mon plaidoyer pour ne pas raccourcir cet article et pour maintenir la totalité de l'article 9.

21/03/2000 11:16:20 M. FRIEDRICH (Le Parlement européen)

Moi aussi je voudrais militer pour que nous procédions à un amendement de ce texte. Sans porter atteinte à la concision que je souhaiterais, je crois que les droits des églises sont à prendre en compte ici également. En Europe, pays de la chrétienté, les libertés des églises doivent pouvoir être garanties, la liberté de religion est de toute façon incontestée et incontestable, cela fait partie même de l'essence de la civilisation. Mais le fait que les églises jouent un rôle particulier dans ce contexte, je crois que cela devrait être exprimé d'une manière ou d'une autre ici.

21/03/2000 11:17:27 Lord GOLDSMITH (Le Parlement britannique)

La limitation à ce droit et la façon d'y parvenir. M. KORTHALS ALTES a dit quelque chose de très important : nous ne devons pas promettre plus à nos citoyens que ce que nous pouvons effectivement leur fournir et un certain nombre de choses ne sont pas absolues, par exemple la Convention européenne à l'article 9.2 établit une limite à la liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion. Mais ce ne devrait être soumis à de telles limitations que ce qui est prévu par la loi. Cette limite, à mon sens, devrait encore s'appliquer ici et je soutiens cela. Le problème repose sur la technique que l'on utilise. Mon explication, qui est contenue à la page 20, est que je rajouterai une phrase à l'article 14 sur lequel je suis tout à fait d'accord, et on dirait "les restrictions ne peuvent être apportées à ce droit..."

FIN DE LA BOBINE

...n'est pas absolu et qu'il est frappé de certaines exception, mais il doit y avoir des limites qui doivent être clairement délimitées. Ensuite, je voudrais établir un lien clair avec la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme qui explique ce qu'est ce droit et je propose une façon de faire dans la Convention, le texte du présidium, il n'y a qu'un seul article qui s'applique à l'ensemble et je pense que là il y a un problème certains de ces articles ne devraient pas être frappés de restriction en aucun cas. Le droit à la liberté, l'absence de torture, la protection du droit à la vie ne devraient pas être limités. Donc si on a une limite qui s'applique à tout ça eh bien on vise le principe. Il faudrait exprimer les limitations de manière légèrement différentes, je ne suis pas sûr qu'on ait la même signification donc plutôt que d'avoir un article de la, un seul article de la sorte, je ferais un renvoi explicite à l'article pertinent de la Convention qui parle des limites appropriées. Merci Monsieur le Président.

21/03/2000 11:20:41 PRESIDENT

Merci Lord GOLDSMITH. J'ai trois intervenants encore sur ma liste : M. TRIAS SAGNIER, M. DUFF et M. HAYES. M. TRIAS SAGNIER.

21/03/2000 11:20:57 M. TRIAS SAGNIER (Le Parlement espagnol)

M. le Président, je voudrais apporter une précision d'abord. M. FRIEDRICH, je pense ... ce sont les individus qui font partie des églises et des territoires qui ont des droits, ce ne sont pas les églises ou les territoires qui ont des droits, bon, ceci dit, j'ai quelques amendements proposés dans les pages 35, 36 et 37 du document et il s'agit d'un problème de cohésion. Il y a une question qui pourrait s'appliquer à tous "droits et liberté de conscience, de religion, liberté des parents de choisir l'éducation des enfants, etc." non pas avec une limite mais avec un cadre que je définirais ainsi l'exercice de ce droit ou de ces droits dans sa manifestation sociale (article 14) doit être soumis aux droits reconnus par cette Charte. Si l'on veut faire que les millions d'individus qui vivent sur le territoire de l'Union mais ne sont pas des citoyens communautaires, ne sont pas considérés comme des personnes constituant un ghetto, il ne faut pas prévoir de système d'éducation qui soit séparé, différent où l'on encouragerait l'inégalité par exemple entre les hommes et les femmes ou certaines punitions qui sont dépassées dans notre tradition culturelle. Je pense qu'il est important que tous ces droits même si cela apparaît évident, doivent dans leur manifestation sociale dépendre des autres reconnus, il ne faudrait pas que on utilise ces droits pour ignorer des évidences comme par exemple l'holocauste. C'est vrai la liberté de pensée, bon, chacun peut penser ce qu'il veut mais il faut que les autorités le reconnaissent et reconnaissent un amendement en ce sens.

21/03/2000 11:23:52 M. DUFF (Le Parlement européen)

Merci. Je suis d'accord avec Lord GOLDSMITH sur la clause de limitation mais je ne suis pas d'accord du tout avec M. FRIEDRICH sur une référence particulière à l'église chrétienne.

D'abord il y a une référence au droit collectif qui est bien reprise, il s'agit bien de droit de groupement collectif dans cette clause et puis il n'y a pas de référence au statut de l'église dans le traité de l'Union européenne. Cela ne fait pas non plus d'ailleurs partie des objectifs, les chrétiens n'occupent pas une position particulière donc il est extrêmement important que la Charte reflète la société moderne avec son caractère multiculturel et ses caractéristiques pluriculturelles et donc je pense que en l'occurrence, le libellé est parfaitement acceptable.

Merci

21/03/2000 11:26:15 M. HAYES (Le Parlement irlandais)

Merci Président, je serai bref. Je comprends la proposition faite par M. Haspelen, c'est vrai le paragraphe premier ajoute quelque chose, et c'est pourquoi je pense qu'il faudrait l'inclure et dans ce cas, il faudrait aussi inclure le paragraphe 2 ou si on ne l'inclut que là il faut tout au moins reprendre une disposition disant que cette clause ne devrait pas être privée de ses effets et M. GOLDSMITH a fait une proposition, et il y a peut-être d'autres possibilités comme je l'ai dit plus tôt si on se fonde sur l'article 6 du traité de l'Union, même avec une clause générale sur les limitations qui empêche que l'on réduise ce droit, mais qui n'empêche pas que l'on aille plus loin serait à cet égard tout à fait approprié.

21/03/2000 11:27:23 PRESIDENT

Merci M. HAYES, je pense que cela termine la liste d'orateurs sur cet article 14. Nous avons parlé du droit de l'église et nous avons même parlé des obligations militaires et des limitations. Le présidium prend note de ce qui a été dit. Oui, oui. Mes secrétaires font diligence mais nous prendrons tout le temps nécessaire. Article 15 : liberté d'expression. Même procédure donc vous avez la parole, M. BEREIJO.

21/03/2000 11:28:35 M. RODRIGUEZ-BEREIJO (Le Parlement espagnol)

Très rapidement, je voudrais revenir sur une question qui apparaît à plusieurs reprises dans le texte, il s'agit de la nécessité dans certains cas que en définissant le droit on définisse aussi de façon précise les limites de l'exercice de ce droit et là je réitère ce que j'ai déjà dit tout à l'heure dans certains articles précédents et là je partage d'ailleurs la dernière remarque qui a été faite sur l'article 14 faite par M. GOLDSMITH, à mon avis la référence faite à l'article 6 du traité n'est pas utile. C'est pourquoi nous ne pouvons imaginer un droit de liberté comme la liberté d'expression, d'information, de communication des idées ou des pensées sans préciser de façon soigneuse les limites de ce droit pour pouvoir respecter le droit des autres. Donc, je voudrais proposer que l'on ajoute, donc qu'on dise "toute personne a droit à liberté d'expression" ces droits, donc troisième paragraphe on dirait "ces droits ont leur limite dans le respect des droits reconnus par cette Charte et ceux établis par les lois qui les mettent en œuvre" nous l'avons vu dans le cadre de l'article sur la vie familiale que le texte ne définit pas la vie familiale mais qu'on renvoie aux législations nationales, donc établit par les lois qui les mettent en œuvre ceux qui découlent de la sécurité ou de l'ordre public et surtout le droit à l'honneur, et je regrette de dire que je suis d'accord avec les idées avancées par M. Brebant, le terme honneur n'est pas un concept étranger au texte de la Convention européenne, mais là on utilise le mot réputation, donc on n'invente pas un concept qui n'existe pas dans la Convention européenne, donc droit à l'honneur, à l'intimité et à la protection de la jeunesse et de l'enfance. Alors, on parle du droit à l'enfance dans le cadre du droit à la liberté d'expression, d'information, ce n'est pas incompatible avec le fait que l'on fasse un article particulier sur le droit des enfants parce que malheureusement certains des excès commis dans nos sociétés modernes fortement dominées par les moyens de communication sociale en matière de libertés et d'expression eh bien touchent la partie la plus faible de notre société à savoir les enfants. Donc, une mention spécifique devrait être faite : la protection particulière des droits des enfants sans préjudice de la possibilité de reprendre ensuite un article particulier sur le droit des enfants en tenant compte des autres conventions internationales.

21/03/2000 11:32:37 PRESIDENT

Le Présidium a décidé de consacrer un article séparé aux droits des enfants. Mme PACIOTTI.

21/03/2000 11:32:59 Mme PACIOTTI (Le Parlement européen)

Merci Président, je crois que pour ce qui est de cette question des limitations des droits le mérite d'être soigneusement examiné parce que cela touchait l'article 12, 14, 15, mais cela vaut être la peine de le faire tout à la fin, comme on l'a proposé, parce qu'il s'agit de savoir si dans son ensemble la Charte contient un équilibre approprié de façon à ce que un droit soit mis en équilibre ou balancé par un autre et dans ce cas il faut expliquer les limitations éventuelles, ce serait opportun de le faire à la fin, mais certains droits comme ceux figurant aux articles 12, 14, 15 requièrent qu'on explique leurs limites. Mais je voudrais introduire un autre argument dont on avait parlé au sein du groupe de travail. Le problème de liberté d'impression qui reprend tous les médias. On dit que la société est dominée par les moyens de communication, quant il s'agit de liberté d'expression, il y a une différence entre la liberté d'expression de chaque individu qui doit être la plus large possible, et celle des médias qui eux représentent un problème distinct. Alors, il y a d'une part la garantie de la liberté mais d'autre part la conscience d'un pouvoir fort qui requiert certaines garanties parce que justement les médias constituent un pouvoir, ce n'est pas simplement une liberté et donc je vous demanderais d'insérer cette exigence spécifique dans l'article 15 et puis à l'article 10 de la Convention, on parle de la possibilité de soumettre à une autorisation préalable et je vous renvoie à certains libellés figurant dans certaine constitution espagnole, hongroise, polonaise et qui parlent l'exigence d'assurer le pluralisme de l'information et la prévention des concentrations ou des monopoles dans les médias. Je peux vous proposer un paragraphe qui dise que les entreprises de radiodiffusion ou de télévision peuvent être soumis à une autorisation pour s'assurer le, du pluralisme de l'information et pour empêcher des concentrations, des monopoles. Enfin, je ne voudrais pas m'arrêter à ce stade sur une rédaction précise, je voudrais simplement attirer votre attention sur cet aspect particulier des médias en tant que pouvoir.

21/03/2000 11:36:44 M. MANZELLA (Le Parlement italien)

Merci Président, je voudrais expliquer un amendement au nom de M. RODOTA aussi, un amendement qui se trouve à la page 69 de notre document, il s'agit de compléter le premier paragraphe de l'article 15 avec le besoin d'assurer aussi, donc à côté de la liberté d'opinion de recevoir et de communiquer des informations, la liberté de rechercher des informations c'est une exigence que le traité d'Amsterdam aborde dans le cadre notamment de la liberté de transparence et pour le reste, pour ce qui est du problème des limitations, je m'associe à ce qui a été dit par M. BEREIJO et Mme PACIOTTI sur le besoin que au-delà d'une clause générale de limitation des droits eh bien dans cet article spécifique on reprenne aussi une limitation sur les concentrations, les monopoles et une défense du pluralisme de l'information, si il y a un article sur lequel la Convention européenne montre bien qu'elle a 50 ans, c'est justement cet article là parce que il y a de plus en plus de concentration dans les médias et désormais les médias ont atteint un niveau tel que décrit par Georges Orwell dans Big Brother. Donc, on ne peut pas négliger ce besoin d'insérer aussi des limitations aux concentrations de médias parce que cela préoccupe le citoyen européen.

21/03/2000 11:39:28 Mme KAUFMANN (Le Parlement européen)

Dans ce contexte, moi aussi je voudrais revenir sur la question des limitations. Pour moi c'est très important je crois qu'effectivement quand on voit quelles sont les idées fondatrices de l'Union, quand on voit également les évolutions de nos Etats et au niveau politique les réflexions qui sont menées et qui sont très importantes, qui nous touchent tous, j'ai une question à poser à mes collègues ici. Je crois qu'il faut d'une manière ou d'une autre explicitement rédiger une limitation ici pour tout ce qui est pensée nationaliste, raciste, antisémite, tout ce qui propagande de ces idéologies qui peut être interdite parce que ça serait un signal politique très important et au niveau de notre communauté des valeurs dans l'Union c'est indispensable quand on regard l'alinéa 2 de l'exposé des motifs, je trouve qu'on ne retrouve pas cette idée. Alors qu'il est indispensable selon moi de dire explicitement que tout ce qui est propagande raciste, antisémite, etc. nous n'en voulons pas et que la liberté d'expression peut être donc restreinte dans ce sens. Merci.

21/03/2000 11:40:59 M. TRIAS SAGNIER (Le Parlement espagnol)

Je crois que pour ce qui est de la limitation des droits il faut faire très attention mais il faut aussi que nous soyons très clairs si l'on veut qu'on nous comprenne. Moi, je ne le rédigerais pas de façon négative mais de façon positive. J'ai fait une proposition de rédaction à la page 35, conformément à une interprétation très particulière donnée par le tribunal espagnol dans un cas bien précis. L'Espagne a eu du mal à obtenir une condamnation formelle contre M. Degrelle de la WAF(?) et le tribunal constitutionnel espagnol a proposé une interprétation, la liberté d'expression doit également être une possibilité pour garantir la plénitude de la dignité de la personne et donc, tout ce qui porte atteinte à la dignité de l'Homme irait à l'encontre des dispositions de cette Charte. Et puis, cela nous éviterait de devoir parler de concentration des médias, parce qu'intrinsèquement elle n'est ni bonne, ni mauvaise, le seul problème c'est que cela risque de porter atteinte à la pluralité des médias. Donc rentrer dans ce type de détail cela ne me semble pas prudent si nous parlons de la protection du pluralisme en matière d'information.

21/03/2000 11:43:30 M. NEISSER (Le Parlement autrichien)

La version qui est proposée pour l'article 15 part du principe que tout ce qui est recherche, science et arts fait partie de la liberté d'expression. Cela peut se justifier du fait de la jurisprudence de Strasbourg qui nous dit que la liberté artistique fait partie effectivement de la liberté d'expression. La science par contre c'est moins clair. Ça n'a pas été en tout cas exprimé aussi clairement. Mais il y a un problème particulier donc de délimitation de ces droits, restriction en quelque sorte. Il y a certains ordres constitutionnels nationaux qui disent que l'art, la science et la recherche ont dans leur exercice des limites inhérentes. Alors je ne peux pas toujours comprendre ce qu'on dit dans l'exposé des motifs quand on parle de la Cour de Strasbourg qui pense que la liberté de l'art fait partie de la liberté d'expression etc. ça va encore, la liberté de la science et de la recherche est soumise comme les autres droits au respect des droits de l'Homme conformément à l'article 1 de la Charte. Qu'est-ce que ça veut dire? Ça veut dire que ça renvoie à d'autres limites qui peuvent exercer et quand on revoit le renvoi on s'aperçoit qu'en fait il n'y a aucune limite qui est citée dans l'article.

21/03/2000 11:44:58 PRESIDENT

C'est probablement un problème de traduction, dit le président, dans la traduction du texte. Mais pour tout ce qui est éducation et recherche, je crois qu'en fait la dignité humaine doit toujours effectivement être respectée.

21/03/2000 11:45:27 Lord GOLDSMITH (Le Parlement britannique)

J'ai été heureux d'entendre que M. BRAIBANT prendrait la parole après moi. J'ai lu ses observations sur le deuxième paragraphe: art, science et recherche qui doivent être libres de toute contrainte et je suis tout à fait d'accord avec lui. Je crois que je serais également tout à fait d'accord une fois qu'il aura parlé tout à l'heure donc je n'en dirai pas plus. Deux mots toutefois quant à la question des restrictions. Certains collègues l'ont évoquée. Je crois qu'ils ont tout à fait raison de souligner que ce droit comme d'autres, doit être délimité parce que sinon on risque de donner un accord à des expressions xénophobes, racistes, antisémites, comme l'a dit Mme KAUFFMANN. Cela pourrait porter préjudice au respect des individus comme d'autres collègues l'ont également dit, dont Mme PACIOTTI. Je crois qu'il y a là un cas où la Convention des droits de l'Homme a justement des limites naturelles qui ne sont pas tout à fait de la même nature que les autres cas. On reconnaît dans la Convention, je lis dans l'article 1 : "la protection de la réputation des droits des autres" et je crois qu'on peut dire que la réputation des autres et le fait d'y porter atteinte doit être une limite. Donc je crois que c'est effectivement quelque chose qu'il faudra traiter, je pense que la manière dont moi je le traiterai serait de mettre une petite déclaration d'un côté mais de l'autre, faire référence à la Convention. J'ai pas mal de sympathie avec les commentaires de Mme PACIOTTI et de M. MANZELLA quant à la concentration de la presse. Mais, j'ai l'impression qu'il n'est pas possible de traiter de cette question dans cet article parce que le problème de la liberté d'expression de la presse ne peut être traité de manière distincte par rapport à la liberté d'un individu d'exprimer ses opinions besoin étant à la presse également. Donc je crois qu'il faut faire très attention face aux méthodes de communication, à l'aspect du pluralisme qui devrait être mis dans un autre article.

21/03/2000 11:48:01 PRESIDENT

Merci Lord GOLDSMITH. Professeur BRAIBANT, je suis heureux de vous donner la parole, parce que de toute façon d'avance vous acceptez tout ce qu'il va dire, donc c'est très bien pour moi.

21/03/2000 11:48:19 M. BRAIBANT (Le Parlement français)

Je ne vais pas en profiter pour abuser de la complaisance de Lord GOLDSMITH avec son chèque en blanc. Je voudrais intervenir sur trois questions à propos de cet article. D'abord il y a la question des limites des restrictions. Nous l'avons déjà évoquée plusieurs fois et je crois qu'il vaudrait mieux ne pas perdre du temps à l'évoquer sur chaque article. Cela concerne cinq ou six articles, pas plus, à mon avis, et nous avons pensé, nous avons dit, je crois, et même décidé que ça serait renvoyé à la fin de nos travaux. Parce qu'il y a plusieurs techniques. La première c'est d'introduire dans la Charte elle-même les restrictions qui existent dans la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme. La deuxième c'est d'introduire ces restrictions dans ce qu'on appelle jusqu'à présent la partie B et la troisième c'est de faire une clause globale de limitation qui s'applique à tous ces articles. Je crois que c'est à la fin que nous pourrons voir mieux comment on peut résoudre le problème mais pas à propos de chacun de ces articles ce qui fait qu'on revient sur des discussions qui ont déjà eu lieu. Une deuxième question, c'est que je suis d'accord moi aussi avec le fait qu'il serait bon d'introduire des dispositions sur le pluralisme comme l'on proposé non collègues italiens, la troisième et je crois que c'est sur ce point que Lord GOLDSMITH a été par avance d'accord avec ce que j'allai dire, parce que je l'ai écrit, c'est que je ne suis toujours pas d'accord avec le deuxième paragraphe : l'art, la science et la recherche sont libres, pour plusieurs raisons. Pour l'art c'est inutile. l'art est une forme d'expression et la liberté de l'art est couverte par la liberté d'expression. Pour la science et la recherche c'est inexact. Nous ne pouvons pas admettre aujourd'hui que dans les progrès actuels de la génétique par exemple, ou des biotechnologies en général, ou des techniques de l'information, la science et la recherche soient libres et ce serait même contraire je pense à nos valeurs. Alors il vaut mieux ne pas le dire et là encore on se retrouvera devant les problèmes de limitation. J'ajoute que là il y a un glissement sémantique assez curieux. Jusqu'à présent nous avons parlé de la liberté des citoyens, de la liberté des personnes et là nous parlons de la liberté de concepts ou de la liberté de catégories abstraites et on dit la recherche est libre. Je ne sais pas très bien ce que ça veut dire. Donc je propose de retire simplement cet alinéa 2 qui a déjà été amputé à ma demande : l'enseignement est libre. Ce qui est également une expression qui n'avait pas beaucoup de sens.

21/03/2000 11:51:08 PRESIDENT

La deuxième partie de l'article 15 au bureau, nous avons déjà eu un débat. Comme c'est M. BRAIBANT qui fait partie du bureau nous y reviendrons, c'est un sujet qui nous a interpellé, nous y reviendrons encore.

21/03/2000 11:51:35 M. DUFF (Le Parlement européen)

Merci, Je crois qu'on ne pourra pas se mettre d'accord sur cet article complètement, avant d'avoir vu le champ d'application de la Charte parce qu'il y aura des articles sur la liberté d'information et certains articles sur la lutte contre la discrimination raciale qui seront affectés. Les restrictions, les limitations à apporter à cet article pourront être mieux exprimées lorsqu'on rédigera ces autres clauses et j'aurais préféré que, à un endroit ou à un autre, l'article 15 étant à un endroit tout à fait approprié où on prévoit une expression simple, claire et positive de la liberté de pensée et de liberté d'expression. C'est ce qu'on essaye de cerner par ce libellé et je dois dire à mon collègue espagnol, M. TRIAS SAGNIER, que je suis très intéressé par ce qu'il a à dire mais que je ne pourrai pas adhérer pleinement à son projet de libellé. Dans l'exposé des motifs, il conviendrait peut-être de mieux décrire ce qu'il en est des compétences de l'Union en ce qui concerne la science et la recherche par rapport à l'exercice de rédaction du programme actuel de recherche et de développement de l'Union, je crois que j'appelle l'attention des collègues aux difficultés que nous avons connues et ça permettra aussi de voir d'une autre manière ces dispositions sur la liberté d'expression.

21/03/2000 11:54:50 M. O'MALLEY (Le Parlement irlandais)

Merci Président. J'ai suivi le débat avec beaucoup d'intérêt et comme c'est la première fois que je suis ici, j'espère que ce ne sera pas la dernière, je sais qu'il y a beaucoup de juristes spécialistes du droit constitutionnel, qui sont très experts en nuances juridiques et je ne me contenterais de faire une contribution très brève en tant que néophyte, ma seule expérience étant d'avoir été membre du parlement de mon pays. Alors, comme l'ont dit plusieurs orateurs, je suis attaché à l'idée de la protection et la propriété des médias. Je crois que ceux qui travaillent sur ce sujet important connaissent peut-être le dossier. La propriété des médias, lorsqu'elle se concentre sur une personne ou sur un groupe, vu le pouvoir qui est exercé du fait de la concentration de ces pouvoirs, il peut y avoir, au niveau de l'information, des abus et au niveau de la liberté d'expression il est vrai qu'il est correct de ne pas vouloir la restreindre mais, dans ce contexte, il ne pourrait y avoir des infractions. Dans un exercice démocratique les citoyens ont le droit de voter pour des gouvernements que certains de leurs voisins ne souhaiteraient pas eux considérer comme démocratique, c'est le cas de l'Autriche, par exemple. Ces derniers temps, quel est le droit, où est-ce qu'il s'arrête ? Est-ce que les citoyens d'un pays peuvent avoir recours à une autorité plus large ? Toujours pour ce qui est de la concentration de la propriété des médias, une certaine enquête a été faite au Royaume-Uni parmi les femmes qui travaillent et on s'est aperçu qu'il y avait comme fondement à des attitudes antieuropéennes la lecture d'un quotidien qui est notoirement anti européen, un quotidien très largement répandu dans les classes populaires. Alors est-ce qu'on parle de liberté d'expression sans contrainte dans ce cas là et est-ce que quand on parle de recherche dire qu'il n'y a pas de contrainte s'il y a une menace à la vie des citoyen dans la recherche qui est menée, par exemple, dans certains éléments de la recherche en technologie génétique et en biogénétique. Tout ça est protégé, c'est l'article 1 qui le dit.

21/03/2000 11:57:36 M. GRIFFITHS (Le Parlement britannique)

Merci Président. Je crois qu'il y a deux éléments qu'il faut dire quant à l'article 15. D'abord on a besoin uniquement de la première phrase tout en ajoutant qu'il doit pouvoir y avoir certaines limites pour tenir compte à l'incitation au racisme, etc.. ça ça pourrait évidemment être dit séparément, mais l'alinéa 2 n'est pas nécessaire à l'article 15, parce que la liberté d'expression couvre ce qui est dit là et de toute manière à l'heure actuelle ça peut ouvrir trop largement la porte à d'autres suggestions. Quant à ce qui est restriction, on parlait du monopole de l'information à l'instant, je crois qu'il y a là des problèmes séparés à voir ailleurs qu'ici.

21/03/2000 11:58:44 Mme BERÈS (Le Parlement européen)

Merci M. le Président. C'est qu'en intervenant en dernier on a plus trop de choses à dire. Simplement, je crois qu'on est là sur un article tout à fait essentiel puisque la réaffirmation de la liberté d'expression peut apparaître comme quelque chose de presque évident et pourtant il me semble que la façon dont nous rédigerons cet article emportera des conséquences importantes par rapport au futur déficit que nous avons et par rapport à l'enjeu que nous nous sommes fixés en rédigeant cette charte qui est la défense d'un certain nombre de valeurs à l'intérieur de l'Union. C'est pour cela que je m'associe pleinement à tous ceux qui, s'agissant du premier paragraphe, on insisté pour la référence aux limitation de ce droit de liberté d'expression. Il ne s'agit pas de rétablir la censure à l'intérieur de l'Union mais il s'agit que cette liberté d'expression ne nuise pas aux valeurs de l'Union et ne permette pas, dans des conditions excessives ou inacceptables, une propagande raciste ou xénophobe. Alors, quant aux formes que doit prendre cette limitation, je comprend les trois propositions faites par Guy BRAIBANT et que nous aurons la discussion in fine. Ma préférence va pour une liaison assez directe avec cet article 15 parce que je crois que il doit être lu dans son concept global avec ses limitations. Sur la suppression du deuxième paragraphe, je ne peux que m'associer avec ce qu'a dit M. BRAIBANT et enfin un dernier point sur la question de la liberté de la presse et de l'interdiction des concentrations. Je soutiens pleinement ce qu'a pu dire Mme Elena PACIOTTI et je crois que l'on ne peut pas balayer cela d'un revers de main car, si l'on lit le premier paragraphe, et notamment la motion qui est fait à l'idée que, sans qu'il puisse y avoir d'ingérence d'autorité publique cela interdit toute intervention qui puisse permettre effectivement la liberté d'expression de la presse et l'interdiction des concentrations. Donc, je crois qu'il y a une véritable difficulté, qu'il faudra que le presidium prenne en compte lors de la réécriture de cet article. Merci.

21/03/2000 12:00:46 PRESIDENT

Vous étiez effectivement, Madame, le dernier orateur de ma liste, mais j'ai deux noms qui se sont ajoutés entre temps.

21/03/2000 12:01:09 M. HIRSCH BALLIN (Le Parlement néerlandais)

Je me demande comment mettre en oeuvre ces dispositions par rapport aux compétences de la Communauté, deux remarques : s'il y a une disposition qui est reprise, cela signifie qu'on met une limite à la réglementation de la science, par exemple, en cas de manipulation génétique. Moi je voudrais m'associer à ceux qui se sont prononcés contre. Deuxièmement, ce qu'on a laissé tomber par rapport à la convention c'est l'expression "... les médias peuvent être soumis à une réglementation", si on pouvait lier cela aux compétences de la Communauté, alors cette suppression serait considéré comme une impossibilité de réglementer le secteur. Mais je pense que ce n'est pas censé d'apporter cette modification par rapport à l'article 10 de la convention européenne parce que justement on risque de mal l'interpréter et je pense qu'il faut l'éviter parce que de toute façon nos objections par rapport aux médias sont connues. Merci, M. le Président.

21/03/2000 12:02:46 M. BACELAR de VASCONCELLOS (Le Parlement portugais)

Pour ce qui est de l'article 15, paragraphes premier et second, il me semble qu'ici il s'agit de valeurs fondamentales des libertés que nous voulons protéger sous l'expression symbolique et emblématique prêt à un processus de densification de la liberté individuelle, cela à avoir avec le mode de vie et la culture auxquels nous nous identifions. Les restrictions à la liberté d'expression sont essentiellement celles qui découlent des conflits dans l'application des droits fondamentaux et la protection de la dignité de la personne humaine, l'interdiction du clonage d'êtres humains, certaines questions qui ont été évoquées ici à l'introduction de restrictions ne sont pas nécessaires. Pour ce qui est du premier paragraphe, on admet une référence aux autorités publiques et il faut aussi reconnaître aujourd'hui que, fréquemment, les menaces ne proviennent pas de la sphère publique, on parle seulement de la sphère publique, mais aussi de la sphère privée et je suis donc totalement d'accord avec le fait que les préoccupations ici vont dans le sens d'une garantie ou d'une prévention des organes de médias. Pour ce qui est du deuxième point, l'art, la science et la recherche, on dit que dans la société, que vouloir limiter l'art, la recherche et la science, vouloir limiter cela à des protections de forme d'expression me semble un peu restrictif. Les expressions de la liberté à travers l'art, la science et la recherche ne me semblent pas susceptibles d'être soumises à des restrictions autres que celles qui découleraient d'autres articles ou d'autres libertés protégées ici. Enfin, pour terminer, nous ne conjurons pas les ports (?) en empêchant leur apparition, une phase critique et complexe d'évolution, une ouverture à ce qui est nouveau et avec l'espoir que ceci puisse apporter un renforcement de la dignité et du respect de la personne humaine, cela implique aussi une préservation scrupuleuse de la liberté d'expression artistique, scientifique et de la recherche. Merci.

21/03/2000 12:06:42 M. VOGGENHUBER (Le Parlement européen)

Merci de cette générosité, M. le Président. Je peux encore dire un petit mot effectivement parce que je suis quelque peu préoccupé de voir qu'on demande tant de limitations et qu'on parle de finalement politiquement correct ici. Alors, il y a un principe : les droits fondamentaux ne peuvent pas être limités, c'est un principe qu'on a évoqué. Dans l'article 1, c'est vrai, que si un principe qui est discriminé pour du sexisme ou du racisme à l'égard d'autre, c'est vrai qu'implicitement ce n'est pas, c'est effectivement au niveau de la dignité humaine quelque chose qui est considéré comme un non respect, on ne va pas le dire chaque fois. Maintenant je voudrais revenir sur cet aspect science et recherche. La distinction que nous devons faire, je crois que sur le fond on n'en est pas toujours conscients, c'est la distinction qu'il faut faire entre la science comme recherche de nouvelles connaissances et son application. Quand on parle de technologies nouvelles, ce n'est pas de la science, c'est l'application de la science et cette application n'est pas libre mais il y a de bonnes raisons aujourd'hui comme demain de continuer à essayer de laisser la recherche libre. Les connaissances, personne ne peut m'interdire de faire de la recherche sur de nouvelles connaissances. Personne ne peut m'interdire de dépenser ce que je veux sur des recherches et ça c'est tout à fait différent par exemple par rapport à la liberté d'expression, personne ne peut m'empêcher de dire ce que je pense mais je ne suis pas obligé de partager cette expression. On ne va pas, que ce soit idéaliste ou moral je n'en sais rien, mais personne n'a le droit de me forcer à ne pas vouloir savoir quelque chose ou ne pas connaître quelque chose ou à donner sur le plan scientifique quelque chose que je n'estime pas ne pas être une donnée scientifique. Je crois que c'est très important de bien faire la distinction avec la liberté d'expression, surtout dans la liberté artistique par exemple. Si quelqu'un accuse le pape aujourd'hui on peut dire qu'il y a attaque à la liberté d'expression, mais au niveau de la liberté d'expression artistique et la présentation du pape, si je le met en enfer et bien là cela va au-delà de cette liberté d'expression, c'est la liberté artistique que je trouve extrêmement importante.

21/03/2000 12:09:31 PRESIDENT

Bon, je crois que, comme le disait le collègue, nous avons là effectivement épuisé un sujet qui est très vaste. Nous allons continuer et essayer de voir ici que nous pourrions faire quand on parle des problèmes qui ont été évoqués, la majorité d'entre eux, nous voyons que il y a des partisans et des détracteurs de chacun de ces principes. Le droit à l'éducation maintenant.

21/03/2000 12:10:25 M. NIKULA (Le Parlement finlandais)

... cet article. C'est peut être commun aux européens, nous voulons éduquer chaque génération mieux que l'éducation à laquelle nous avons eu accès, à travers nos auteurs et la poésie, nous accédons à l'éducation c'est pourquoi nous nous finlandais apporté un amendement dans le sens que tout le monde, chaque individu a droit à l'éducation de base, l'éducation primaire. Les parents disent toujours à leurs enfants, vous allez à l'école parce que c'est bon pour vous, donc le droit à l'école primaire doit être garanti et il doit être gratuit. C'est article dit que les opposants aux droits fondamentaux sont essentiellement dans les ministères des finances parce que c'est un article qui va être très coûteux à mettre en œuvre, mais c'est onéreux pour toutes les sociétés, je crois que pour les institutions de l'Union européenne, c'est une question de subsidiarité et au niveau de l'Union il faut veiller à ce que l'obligation des Etats membres de mettre en œuvre l'éducation primaire soit garantie. Ce droit à une éducation primaire gratuite est due à la double nature des droits, nous garantissons aux citoyens le droit à une éducation gratuite, une éducation primaire gratuite, mais nous imposons aussi une obligation de fournir une éducation. Il y a quelques mois nous nous interrogeons sur les obligations de nos citoyens, c'est ici que la question devient un peu plus pertinente et je voulais souligner que les finlandais dans cet article et l'article 15 ont souligné le fait que dans l'éducation supérieure ou l'éducation universitaire, il ne devrait pas y avoir de frais, ce devrait être gratuit, c'est une tradition qui a à voir avec l'éducation et voilà pourquoi ceci a une nature vraiment spécifique. Merci.

21/03/2000 12:13:34 M. LEHMANN (Le Parlement danois)

Merci Monsieur le Président, pas de problème en ce qui concerne l'article 16, le droit à l'éducation paragraphe 1, pas de problème, mais au paragraphe 3, l'alinéa 3 plutôt, on se fonde sur la structure habituelle et classique selon laquelle les Institutions de l'Union qui doivent respecter les droits des parents d'assurer l'éducation à l'enseignement de leurs enfants. Bon nous savons que c'est un droit de citoyen, un droit politique et c'est vrai que les autorités doivent s'abstenir d'influencer d'une manière ou d'une autre le choix des individus, mais en ce qui concerne l'alinéa 2 où l'on parle de la création d'établissements d'enseignement, on dit que c'est libre, là c'est encore quelque chose que j'appellerais un objectif politique et cela ne correspond pas au droit ou à une atteinte au droit des individus et des personnes, je crois que c'est plutôt quelque chose qui relève du droit des Institutions européennes à contribuer à la création d'établissements de ce type. Alors je crois que ce paragraphe finalement ou cet alinéa, il aurait plus sa place ailleurs dans le document et je renvoie à ce que j'ai dit à l'article 13 lorsque nous avons parlé de la protection de la famille et des aspects juridiques, sociaux et économiques. Je crois que là il y a quelque chose de social qui doit apparaître ailleurs. Mais nous pouvons par ailleurs appuyer (?) l'alinéa 1 et 3 et je renvoie également à ce que disent les Nations Unies sur les droits économiques et sociaux avec des dispositions qui ont été acceptées par tous, l'éducation étant un principe "liberté, obligation etc...", liberté d'enseignement mais obligation scolaire. Donc là nous pensons que cet alinéa 2 n'a pas sa place.

21/03/2000 12:16:09 Mme BERÈS (Le Parlement européen)

Merci Monsieur le Président, plusieurs observations sur cet article. Tout d'abord en tout cas dans la version française, une petite contradiction entre le titre qui parle de droit à l'éducation et le premier alinéa qui parle de droit à l'instruction, j'imagine qu'il s'agit peut être d'un problème de traduction mais en tout cas il me semble que les deux termes devraient être harmonisés. Ensuite je ne suis pas certaine que nous ayons besoin dans cet alinéa du terme "notamment", je ne vois pas à quoi il peut ensuite renvoyer. Sur la formulation négative du droit, je comprends bien qu'il reprend la formulation telle qu'elle existe dans l'article 2 du protocole additionnel de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme, mais dans le mesure où nous parlons à la fin de l'alinéa de l'enseignement obligatoire, et je comprends qu'il faut distinguer entre l'enseignement primaire, secondaire et universitaire, mais compte tenu de l'enjeu de l'éducation, je me demande si nous n'avons pas intérêt à le mettre en positif et à indiquer que toute personne a le droit à l'éducation. Sur le deuxième paragraphe moi je serais tout à fait favorable à la suppression de ce deuxième paragraphe parce que je ne sais pas si cela relève de l'organisation de la société ou du droit des individus, mais je suis certaine que la formulation telle qu'elle figure dans le projet est source de beaucoup d'ambiguïté et ouvre la voie à beaucoup de difficultés en clair si nous laissons cet article tel qu'il est, rien n'interdit demain à telle ou telle secte de créer un établissement d'enseignement scolaire et pour ma part, je considérerais que cela serait contraire aux valeurs de l'Union.

21/03/2000 12:18:06 M. BERTHU (Le Parlement européen)

Merci Monsieur le Président. Je crois que cet article montre bien, est un de ceux qui montre le mieux les dilemmes politiques devant lesquels nous sommes parce que bien évidemment dans sa rédaction actuelle s'il devenait un article d'un traité européen, il violerait complètement la subsidiarité et la répartition des compétences entre l'Union et les Etats telles qu'elles existent aujourd'hui, je vous rappelle que l'Union n'a pas de compétence directe en matière d'éducation quand même. Alors je crois que si l'on part de cette idée que dans la rédaction actuelle la subsidiarité est violée, on est quand même obligé de se dire qu'il serait difficile d'imaginer une charte européenne sans qu'on parle quelque part de l'éducation et on est pris entre les deux impératifs, et c'est pour cela qu'à mon avis si on doit parler d'éducation il est préférable qu'on s'en tienne aux grands principes et donc que cette charte ne soit qu'une déclaration politique et non pas des articles d'un traité. Alors dans l'hypothèse où l'on voudrait que ce soit une déclaration politique énonçant des grands principes, je crois qu'il faudrait s'en tenir à deux phrases qui diraient : "Nul ne peut se voir refuser le droit à l'instruction. L'enseignement est libre de même que les choix des parents pour l'éducation de leurs enfants". Voilà une déclaration politique générale. Maintenant, admettons que la majorité de cette enceinte veuille violer la subsidiarité, alors à ce moment là je fais des remarques sur le texte tel que je le vois écrit et j'en ferais trois. Ma première remarque est exactement inverse à celle de Madame BERÈS. Je trouve que le point 2 la création d'établissement d'enseignement est libre, ce point 2 est bon mais incomplet parce qu'il faut aller jusqu'au bout de l'idée et dire que les Etats traitent également les différentes formes d'enseignement. Deuxième remarque, le droit des parents d'assurer l'éducation et l'enseignement de leurs enfants conformément à leurs convictions, on parle des convictions religieuses et philosophiques mais il y a bien d'autres critères de choix dans les établissements d'enseignement, et il y a notamment avant tout quand même ne l'oublions pas, des critères pédagogiques, donc il faudrait quand même parler un peu de pédagogie si on veut être complet et troisièmement je note quand même que Monsieur BRAIBANT faisait une remarque tout à fait justifiée et Madame BERÈS s'y était ralliée, et là je suis tout à fait d'accord, on ne peut pas écrire des choses qui permettraient à des sectes dangereuses d'ouvrir des établissements d'enseignement, donc il faut soit dire à la fin du point 3 que le droit des parents est respecté sous réserve des considérations d'ordre public ou bien alors, renvoyer à l'article transversal final qui dira que pour différents articles de la charte, les considérations d'ordre public permettent et d'autres considérations d'intérêt général, permettent d'apporter des réserves. Donc vous voyez bien le dilemme dans lequel nous sommes, je préférerais pour ma part une déclaration politique énonçant quelque principes très clairs,

FIN DE LA CASSETTE

... très simples et très généraux. Mais si on veut vraiment bouleverser les compétences entre l'Union et les Etats membres alors bouleversons les intelligemment et libéralement.

21/03/2000 12:22:29 Lord GOLDSMITH

Merci Monsieur le Président. Je me souviens qu'il y a plusieurs années, je me suis rendu en Afrique du Sud et un jeune avocat nous racontait qu'il avait grandi et vécu à Durban et il a dû aller dans une école à 200 kilomètres de là parce que il était noir et on lui avait nié le droit à l'éducation à l'endroit où il était né et où il avait vécu. C'est un droit politique et civil tout à fait sensible et je veux qu'il soit inclus là mais j'ai quelques remarques à faire sur le texte. En premier, sur le troisième paragraphe, qui dit les choses de manière trop forte. Il est important de respecter le droit des parents d'avoir les enfants éduqués en fonction de leurs convictions personnelles, mais ce n'est pas quelque chose qui peut être toujours garanti pour des raisons telles que ... l'enfant pourrait par exemple présenter un comportement particulier, ne peut pas être scolarisé dans un établissement normal ou pour des raisons financières... et qu'on ne peut pas trouver des écoles avec une approche religieuse ou philosophique d'un certain type partout dans le pays. L'article 2 du protocole CEDH(?) qui reconnaît ce droit reconnaît aussi que c'est une question de respect que de ne pas garantir, et je dois dire que le Royaume-Uni avait émis une réserve au sujet de ce droit particulier à cause justement des problèmes de fonctionnement efficace des écoles par rapport à des coûts financiers, et il nous faut reconnaître ce problème d'une certaine façon. Cela c'est ma première remarque. En deuxième lieu, je partage les interrogations de M. LEHMANN sur le deuxième article, que je ne comprends pas bien pour l'instant, deuxième sous-paragraphe. Les établissements d'éducation ne devront pas rencontrer de contraintes... Je me demande si ça doit être inclus ou pas. Pour l'instant, il me semble que ce ne soit pas le cas. Enfin, dernier commentaire, portant sur la reconnaissance de l'éducation primaire gratuite et obligatoire au premier paragraphe. Je crois que là on traite d'une question délicate. La question de fournir une éducation gratuite est une question sociale. Je ne pense pas que cela soit de la compétence de l'Union et je pense que c'est une erreur que de l'inclure au droit civil et politique. Les droits civil et politique doivent prévoir qu'on ne peut pas renier une telle éducation. Mais je ne suis pas en faveur d'inclure dans cet article les aspects sociaux et financiers quant à l'éducation. L'éducation est fournie et offerte dans mon pays. Donc moi je propose d'inclure cette référence ailleurs dans la charte.

21/03/2000 12:25:50 PRESIDENT

Merci, j'ai de bonnes nouvelles pour vous tous, si vous êtes préparés à rester. Nos interprètes peuvent aussi nous accompagner, mais pas au-delà de 13 heures. Cela signifie qu'il nous reste 30 ou 35 minutes. Pensez-vous pouvoir poursuivre jusqu'à 13 heures ou est-ce qu'il y a des personnes qui savent déjà qu'elles doivent nous quitter. Manifestez-vous je vous prie. Bien, voyons voir jusqu'à quel moment nous pouvons rester. Merci pour votre collaboration.

21/03/2000 12:26:31 M. HIRSCH BALLIN (Le Parlement néerlandais)

Monsieur le Président, je voudrais m'associer aux remarques du Lord GOLDSMITH.

21/03/2000 12:26:37 PRESIDENT

Excusez-moi. Un point d'ordre de la part de M. FRIEDRICH.

21/03/2000 12:26:41 M. FRIEDRICH (Le Parlement européen)

Cela aurait pu attendre, mais je voulais simplement qu'on respecte l'horaire qui avait été prévu. On a tous cru que c'était 9 h 00 à 12 h 30. On a prévu d'autres rendez-vous. Bon si c'était 13 h 00 au départ, on serait resté jusqu'à 13 h 00. Je voudrais qu'on s'en tienne au calendrier qui avait été prévu puisqu'on a tous essayé de s'organiser en conséquence.

21/03/2000 12:27:00 PRESIDENT

Oui, j'espère que vous êtes dans le vrai.

21/03/2000 12:27:14 M. HIRSCH BALLIN (Le Parlement néerlandais)

... cet enseignement. Aux Pays-Bas, l'enseignement réglementé est aussi gratuit, mais à partir du moment où ce n'est plus obligatoire d'aller à l'école, c'est un autre système qui prévaut. Alors, quand on travaille et qu'on est obligé de suivre certains cours, on ne peut être payé et dans la règle actuelle ce ne serait pas possible de le faire. C'est pourquoi je vous propose de ne pas reprendre ce concept et je pense que la remarque de M. GOLDSMITH est pertinente. Je ne vois pas comment on pourrait ici parler de droit fondamental pour ce qui est des compétences de l'Union européenne et donc je m'associe à la remarque que vient de faire M. GOLDSMITH en la matière.

21/03/2000 12:28:27 M. DUFF (Le Parlement européen)

Merci Monsieur le Président. Je crois que c'est un domaine extrêmement compliqué. Les différences entre les différents systèmes d'éducation dans les différents États membres sont assez importantes. En deuxième lieu, les compétences de l'Union européenne sont assez restreintes. Le traité dit que l'Union européenne contribue à l'éducation. Il est dit que l'Union européenne renforcera la dimension européenne dans l'éducation. Cela implique une influence sur les cursus fournis par les écoles et établissements. Mais cela restreint aussi la possibilité pour l'Union d'agir dans le domaine de l'éducation vis-à-vis des États membres. Le premier paragraphe de l'article 16 inclut en particulier le droit à suivre un enseignement obligatoire gratuit. Je crois qu'il est surprenant de trouver cela ici et je serais en faveur d'avoir une justification ou une explication plus étayée que ce que j'ai pu obtenir jusqu'à présent. Je préférerais une affirmation positive de ce droit à l'éducation et je suis tout à fait d'accord avec l'approche finlandaise. Pour ce qui est de la deuxième clause, création d'établissements d'enseignement qui soient libres, la mention quant à la liberté de création d'établissements est une bonne chose. Mais pour ce qui est des contraintes, là aussi, je vois quelques problèmes. Je vous remercie M. GRIFFITHS.

21/03/2000 12:32:20 M. GRIFFITHS (Le Parlement britannique)

Merci Monsieur le Président. Bon, j'ai juste une phrase à vous dire. Je pense que nul ne peut se voir refuser le droit à l'instruction. Et bien, il faudrait l'affirmer de manière positive. Beaucoup d'intervenants ont expliqué pourquoi les paragraphes 2 et 3 ne doivent pas nécessairement figurer dans la charte. Et je leur emboîte le pas. Merci.

21/03/2000 12:32:53 M. TRIAS SAGNIER (Le Parlement espagnol)

Merci Monsieur le Président. Sans dignité, une personne ne peut être reconnue comme telle et sans éducation, il n'est pas possible d'avoir des droits fondamentaux et ici nous traitons des droits fondamentaux de la personne. Et je pense que l'éducation est aussi essentielle que l'article 1er et à ce titre je suis tout à fait d'accord avec M. NIKULA et avec M. DUFF, représentant du Parlement européen. Je pense que le paragraphe premier doit être rédigé d'une manière complètement différente, de manière positive et obligatoire. Je proposais de dire que toute personne a droit à l'instruction et à l'éducation et cela inclut en particulier le droit de suivre gratuitement l'enseignement obligatoire, en fonction de ce que chaque État membre entend par "enseignement obligatoire". Mme BERÈS avait proposé un amendement au début des articles 14, 15 et 16 et cela résoudrait le problème. Tout ceci serait soumis au droit reconnu dans cette charte. En troisième lieu, je pense qu'il faudrait aussi modifier le paragraphe 3 et éliminer les termes "convictions religieuses et philosophiques" parce qu'il peut y avoir d'autres convictions. Je crois qu'au paragraphe 3 il serait aussi important d'apporter une précision. Le droit des parents n'est pas (..) et je pense qu'il faut inviter le praesidium à formuler un article séparé. Il est évident que les parents doivent assurer l'éducation des enfants, mais ce sont les enfants qui ont le droit de recevoir une éducation conformément aux principes que nous énonçons dans cette charte. On ne peut pas octroyer une éducation en fonction des principes des parents, quels que soient ces principes. Il faut que ce soit conforme aux principes que nous tentons de mettre en place ici dans cette charte. Voici
Merci Monsieur le Président.

21/03/2000 12:35:25 Lord BOWNESS (Le Parlement britannique)

Merci Monsieur le Président. Je serai très bref. Je suis totalement d'accord avec les arguments de Lord GOLDSMITH et je ne les répéterai pas. Je ferai simplement une remarque. Les questions traitées au paragraphe 3 soulignent le danger de rester dans le domaine politique. Un autre exemple est que nous pourrions peut-être traiter les problèmes de concurrence dans la presse à l'occasion d'une discussion sur un autre article, et je crois qu'il nous faut nous garder de cette tentation, parce que cela entraînerait de grosses difficultés, des problèmes de violation du principe de subsidiarité. Je vous remercie.

21/03/2000 12:36:08 PRESIDENT

Dernier intervenant, M. PATIJN. Il se retire de la liste. Bien merci. Nous en arrivons à la fin des commentaires et contributions à l'article 16. Et nous en sommes même à la fin du document Convention 13. Nous ne poursuivons pas conformément avec ce qu'a dit M. FRIEDRICH. Avant de conclure cette séance, j'ai encore deux informations à vous transmettre. Vous allez recevoir un nouveau document pour les réunions de la prochaine semaine, du lundi et du mardi, sur les droits des citoyens et vous devriez le recevoir par courrier électronique dès que possible. Cela devrait être disponible dans toutes les langues. Oui, dans toutes les langues. Onze langues donc. Deuxièmement, afin de pouvoir respecter notre ordre du jour, vu que nous avons encore six articles de la Convention 8 qui restent et qu'il nous faut traiter, afin de le faire, le Secrétariat vient de décider que nous allons poursuivre lors de notre réunion du mardi 28 mars, c'est-à-dire mardi prochain. Je demanderai donc aux membres de se préparer, de s'organiser de façon qu'après la pause du déjeuner, nous puissions poursuivre notre séance mais de manière informelle cette fois et nous pensons débiter à environ 14 h 15. Donc, nous voilà à la fin de notre réunion. Je vois qu'il y a des protestations. M. DUFF aussi.

[PAS ENREGISTRÉ EN LANGUES ORIGINALES]

21/03/2000 M. DUFF (Le Parlement européen)

Ce n'est pas une protestation. C'est une question. Hors micro. La structure de la charte dans sa version complète. On nous avait promis un synopsis émanant du praesidium nous présentant la charte dans sa totalité, avec toutes les propositions dans une forme télégraphique. Ce serait bien que nous puissions recevoir cela le plus tôt possible et, en deuxième lieu, si je puis me permettre, la question du lien entre l'exposé des motifs et les articles avec la structure et le style de l'exposé des motifs. Il faudrait que la convention ait la possibilité de délibérer avant que nous n'avancions trop loin. Donc, mardi prochain constituerait une bonne opportunité pour traiter de ces questions entre nous.

21/03/2000 Lord BOWNESS (Le Parlement britannique)

Merci Monsieur le Président. Une question, très rapidement, sur le calendrier d'origine. La prochaine réunion est prévue pour la semaine prochaine. Il y avait des auditions qui y étaient mentionnées. Ce n'est plus à l'ordre du jour ?

21/03/2000 PRESIDENT

Je vais essayer de répondre à deux questions, parce que la troisième est un commentaire. M. HERZOG, notre Président, avait promis effectivement ce synopsis et il y travaille. Je pense qu'il est sur le point d'être terminé et d'être diffusé. Pour ce qui est des auditions. Les auditions des ONG auront lieu le 27 avril, Lord BOWNESS, 27 avril, pour les auditions des ONG. Merci à vous tous. Je remercie aussi le Secrétariat, les secrétaires et le président remercie aimablement les interprètes. La séance est levée.

FIN DE LA REUNION

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

fundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 12 May 2000 (16.05)
(OR. fr)

CHARTE 4304/00

CONVENT 30

RECORD

Subject : Record of the fourth meeting, in working group formation, of the Convention to draw up a draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (Brussels, 3 and 4 April 2000)

1. The fourth meeting of the Convention, in working group formation, was held on Monday 3 and Tuesday 4 May 2000 in Brussels under the chairmanship of Mr Gunnar JANSSON, alternating with Mr MENDES de VIGO. The agenda included the examination of draft Articles I to XII and XIII to XV on the social rights set out in CHARTE 4192/00 CONVENT 18 and CHARTE 4193/00 CONVENT 19, respectively.
2. The Presidency informed the Convention of the appointment of Mr Bernard BOT, alternate to Mr KORTHALS ALTES.
3. The initial examination of social rights gave rise to a general discussion on the content and scope to be given to this third basket of rights, bearing in mind, in particular, the way in which the European Council in Cologne had incorporated them into the mandate of the Convention. The question arising here concerns the scope to be given to the exclusion of rights which are not part of the Union's objectives, and also the binding value to be assigned to Articles on social rights. A number of members of the Convention pointed out that this basket might constitute the real added value of the draft Charter being drawn up, in relation to the current situation, while others were concerned about the danger of the powers of each decision-making level being re-adjusted, even indirectly, by the possible inclusion of this basket in the Treaties. During the meeting, these concerns apart, the discussion made it possible to consider eight of the fifteen draft Articles submitted by the Praesidium. Examination of the remaining proposals was deferred until the following meeting of the Convention.

4. In conclusion, the Presidency pointed out that there would be time before the Feira European Council in June 2000 to discuss once more the Articles on social rights and to broach the draft Articles on horizontal matters.
5. The next meeting was set for 27 and 28 April 2000.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 12 May 2000 (16.05)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4305/00*CONVENT 31*REPORT

Subject : Seventh meeting of the Praesidium, Brussels, 17 April 2000
 – Outcome of proceedings

1. At its seventh meeting, the Praesidium, chaired by Mr Roman HERZOG, started its proceedings by hearing Mr Marc FISCHBACH and Mr Hans Christian KRUGER, representatives of the Council of Europe who are observers at the Convention.
2. In his statement, Mr Marc FISCHBACH laid particular emphasis on the need to obviate any risk of divergent interpretations of the fundamental rights in the two Courts, in Luxembourg and in Strasbourg. He therefore felt that it was necessary to pay particular attention to the drafting of the horizontal articles and to adopt a reference system which went well beyond a literal interpretation of the existing texts; in that respect, he considered it useful, in addition to referring to the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights, to mention the conclusions of the Committee of Independent Experts on the European Social Charter. He also raised the question of whether it would be desirable to insert an article equivalent to Article 17 of the Strasbourg Convention. In general, he stated that he was more concerned about the future than about the practical arrangements for taking over provisions already in existence, and for him the key question was the future relationship between the two Courts. While confirming that, in his view, the Union's accession to the Strasbourg Convention remained the best solution, he put forward some alternatives, such as mechanisms for prior reciprocal consultation. That question led to a thorough discussion between the representatives of the Council of Europe and the members of the Praesidium.

3. In support of his statement, the speakers handed over a written contribution to the Praesidium containing a drafting suggestion for Article X, "general clause on limitations" and Article Y, "level of protection", including the prohibition of abuse of rights. The chair thanked both speakers and undertook to study their contribution.
4. Following that discussion, the Praesidium resumed its proceedings as drafting committee and reviewed the social articles and the preliminary drafts for the horizontal clauses.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 12 May 2000 (16.05)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4306/00*CONVENT 32*RECORD

Subject : Record of the fifth meeting as a working party of the Convention to draw up a draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
(held in Brussels on 27 and 28 April 2000)

1. At this meeting the Convention, chaired by Mr Roman HERZOG, held a hearing of sixty-six NGOs specialising in the defence and promotion of fundamental rights. Each of those NGOs represented a whole range of national and local organisations. The rights they covered varied, some having a broad scope and others being more specialised, concentrating on a narrower range of rights.
2. The hearing was designed as an opportunity for civil society to have its voice heard by the Convention; each NGO had five minutes in which to make its suggestions or outline its ideas on the drafting of the Charter. On the whole the mood was a very open one and enabled a number of important points to be clarified, particularly with regard to social rights; strong concern was also expressed on the subject of non-discrimination and equality. The great majority of NGOs provided written submissions in support of their oral statements. As soon as they have been forwarded to the Convention secretariat they will be posted in their original language on the Convention's Internet site.

3. Following the hearing, the Convention resumed work at the point where it had left off at its previous meeting. It completed the first reading of the draft Articles relating to social rights (Articles 9 to 12 of CHARTE 4192/00 CONVENT 18, the three Articles in CHARTE 4193/00 convent 19, and the rights set out in CHARTE 4227/00 CONVENT 26).
4. The Chairman invited the Convention to reconvene on 3 and 4 May 2000.

=====

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

fundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 12 May 2000 (16.05)
(OR. fr)

CHARTE 4307/00

CONVENT 33

REPORT

Subject : Eighth meeting of the Praesidium, Brussels, 3 and 4 May 2000
– Outcome of proceedings

1. At its eighth meeting the Praesidium, chaired by Mr Roman HERZOG and subsequently by Mr MENDES de VIGO, carried out a re-reading of the draft Articles on the whole range of civil and political rights and citizens' rights.
2. The document emerging from the meeting should be distributed to the members of the Convention in all the languages around 12 May 2000.

PRESIDENCY CONCLUSIONS

SANTA MARIA DA FEIRA EUROPEAN COUNCIL

19 AND 20 JUNE 2000

1. The European Council met in Santa Maria da Feira on 19 and 20 June. At the start of proceedings, the European Council and the President of the European Parliament, Mrs Nicole Fontaine, exchanged views on the main items under discussion.

I. PREPARING THE FUTURE

2. Against the backdrop of renewed public debate about and interest in the future of the European Union, the European Council has taken a number of important steps aimed at addressing the challenges confronting it in the immediate future.

A. Intergovernmental Conference on institutional reform

3. The European Council notes and welcomes the Presidency report on the Intergovernmental Conference. The Presidency's report demonstrates the significant headway which has been achieved by the Conference in considering Treaty changes which will ensure that the Union continues to have properly functioning, efficient and legitimate institutions after enlargement. The European Council considers in particular that the provisions on closer cooperation introduced into the Treaty of Amsterdam should form part of the Conference's future work, while respecting the need for coherence and solidarity in an enlarged Union. The Conference can move forward on a sound footing so that an overall agreement can be reached in December in line with the timetable laid down by the Cologne and Helsinki European Councils.

B. Charter of Fundamental Rights

4. The European Council extended its heartfelt sympathy to Mr Roman Herzog and expressed its appreciation for his invaluable personal contribution to the Convention's work. Mr Ignacio Mendez de Vigo, Vice-Chair of the Convention entrusted with drawing up a draft Charter of fundamental rights of the European Union, briefed the European Council on work in hand.

5. The Convention is urged to continue its work in accordance with the timetable laid down in the mandate from the Cologne European Council so that a draft document is presented in advance of the European Council in October 2000.

C. Common European Security and Defence Policy

6. The European Council reaffirms its commitment to building a Common European Security and Defence Policy capable of reinforcing the Union's external action through the development of a military crisis management capability as well as a civilian one, in full respect of the principles of the United Nations Charter.

7. The European Council welcomes the Presidency report endorsed by the Council on "Strengthening the Common European Security and Defence Policy" and associated documents (see Annex I). Satisfactory progress has been made in fulfilment of the Helsinki mandate on both the military and the civilian aspects of crisis management. In this context, the European Council notes the progressive development of the interim Political and Security Committee and the interim military body established at Helsinki.

8.

Improving European military capabilities remains central to the credibility and effectiveness of the Common European Security and Defence Policy. The European Council is determined to meet the Headline Goal targets in 2003 as agreed in Helsinki. In this context, it looks forward to the Capabilities Commitment Conference later this year, where Member States will make initial national commitments, and to the creation of a review mechanism for measuring progress towards the achievement of those targets. The necessary transparency and dialogue between the Union and NATO will be ensured and NATO expertise will be sought on capability goal requirements.

9. Principles and modalities for arrangements have been identified to allow non-EU European NATO members and other EU accession candidates to contribute to EU military crisis management. Principles for consultation with NATO on military issues and modalities for developing EU-NATO relations have also been identified in four areas covering security issues, capability goals, the modalities for EU access to NATO assets, and the definition of permanent consultation arrangements.

10. Contributions are invited from all partner third states to the improvement of European capabilities. The European Council welcomes the offers made by Turkey, Norway, Poland and the Czech Republic, which will expand the range of capabilities available for EU-led operations.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 17 October 2000 (18.10)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4955/00*CONVENT 51*SECRETARIAT NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Informal Council meeting in Biarritz, 13 and 14 October 2000

The informal meeting of Heads of State or Government in Biarritz examined the draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union on Saturday 14 October 2000. The draft was presented by Mr Braibant, Vice-Chairman. The other two Vice-Chairmen, Mr Mendez de Vigo and Mr Jansson, gave their comments. Opening the discussion, President Chirac emphasised the quality of the draft, stating that the text was epoch-making and expressed the essential values recognisable to the fifteen peoples of the Member States.

At the end of the discussions the President recorded that the text was final and would not be amended. It would be submitted to the European Parliament, the Council and the Commission with a view to a solemn proclamation in Nice. The question of the legal nature of the Charter would be discussed in accordance with the Cologne conclusions.

Tribute was paid to President Roman Herzog, under whose authority the Convention was able to conclude its work successfully.

The Secretariat would like to thank all the members of the Convention for their cooperation and their understanding of the practical difficulties involved in carrying out work of such scope within short time-limits. It asks them to excuse the constraints and uncertainties which the unprecedented nature of the exercise entailed.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 19 October 2000 (20.10)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4957/00*CONVENT 52*LETTER*from the Vice-Chairman to the members of the Convention

Dear Sir/Madam,

At the informal meeting of Heads of State and of government in Biarritz, the three Vice-Chairmen of the Convention were invited, in the absence of President Herzog, to submit to the Heads of State and of government, the draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union as resulting from the Convention's deliberations.

We therefore intervened to highlight the main aspects of the draft and of the method followed. President Chirac has asked us to express his appreciation of the work performed by the Convention and to send President Herzog his best wishes for a speedy recovery.

It emerged from the discussions of the Heads of State and of government that the text submitted on behalf of the Convention is final and will be officially proclaimed in Nice. The issue of the legal nature of the Charter will be examined in the manner defined in the conclusions of the Cologne European Council.

Our proceedings have therefore come to an end and on this occasion we would like to thank you for your active involvement. Your participation, your sense of reality and your spirit of compromise have made it possible – despite our different origins and approaches or perhaps because of them – to reach agreement on a text of which we all wish to underline the quality and relevance as an expression of values common to the European peoples.

(Complimentary close).

Guy BRAIBANT

Inigo MENDEZ DE VIGO

Gunnar JANSSON

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 27 octobre 2000CHARTE 4958/00*CONVENT 53*NOTE D'INFORMATION DU SECRETARIAT

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne
 – Verbatim de la réunion de la Convention du 26 septembre 2000 ¹

PRESIDENT (Gunnar JANSSON)

Mesdames, Messieurs, chers collègues, bonjour et bienvenue à cette réunion plénière. Pour commencer, je ferai quatre annonces. Premièrement, après nos réunions de groupes hier, le præsidium s'est réuni en l'absence du président HERZOG. Le Convent 47 constitue la base de nos débats aujourd'hui ainsi qu'il a été amendé 4470/00 COR 1. Nous nous efforçons de l'avoir dans toutes les langues. Je crois que c'est déjà le cas. Si tel n'est pas le cas, il sera disponible prochainement dans toutes les langues. Deuxième remarque: le professeur BRAIBANT présentera ces documents dans l'ensemble après que j'aie fait ces annonces. Il présentera ce document tel qu'il a été amendé par le Praesidium. Troisième remarque: à l'issue de cette présentation par le professeur BRAIBANT, vous aurez la parole. Tout le monde pourra s'exprimer. Essayons de nous respecter les uns les autres et de ne pas parler plus de trois minutes si possible, mes chers collègues. Il ne s'agit pas d'une règle, il s'agit d'un principe. Nous avons le droit, bien sûr, conformément à l'article 12, de nous exprimer, mais il faut également se respecter et respecter le temps de parole de trois minutes. À l'issue de quoi, s'il y a suffisamment de temps, nous aurons les suppléants qui s'exprimeront, nous aurons une pause à 12 h 30 puis nous poursuivrons nos travaux à 14 h 00 en nous efforçant d'achever nos travaux vers 17 h 00 pour pouvoir laisser le temps au Praesidium de tirer les conclusions des débats. Quatrième commentaire, j'espère que chacun interviendra de manière à ce que nous, au Praesidium, puissions tirer les conclusions idoines afin d'informer le président pour qu'il puisse interpréter les avis de cette convention et tout cela conformément aux décisions prises à Cologne et à Tampere. Nous savons que c'est la tâche du président de tirer les conclusions de cette convention et, bien sûr, après consultation des vice-présidents. Et nous demandons également votre avis, vos recommandations sur ces textes. Je donne maintenant la parole à M. BRAIBANT. Commençons sur la base du doc. 47 tel qu'amendé.

¹ Ce verbatim sera diffusé uniquement en langue française.

M. BRABANT

J'ai l'honneur de vous présenter quelques explications sur les derniers amendements à la charte que le présidium a préparé hier soir après les séances des trois composantes de la convention. Nous étions naturellement et malheureusement sans le président HERZOG, mais pour reprendre une expression qu'il avait employée lui-même au début de nos travaux, nous avons fait "comme si" il était là. C'est à dire que nous avons essayé d'interpréter sa position personnelle et nous avons pu le faire plus facilement du fait de la présence de ses collaborateurs les plus proches. Mais naturellement, une fois ce texte examiné aujourd'hui, nous le lui enverrons pour qu'il en fasse l'usage qu'il voudra en faire. Nous avons préparé ces amendements avec à l'esprit deux principes, je dirais, puisqu'on a beaucoup employé ce mot dans cette convention. Le premier c'est de toucher le moins le possible à la charte, d'apporter le moins de modifications possibles et vous pourrez constater que le nombre d'amendements proposés est d'une vingtaine et que certains sont d'ailleurs des amendements de pure forme et la deuxième idée, le deuxième principe, c'est de ne pas porter atteinte à l'équilibre de la charte telle que nous l'avions obtenue et par conséquent de ne pas causer de difficultés ni d'un côté ni de l'autre pour approuver ces amendements. Dernier point, il y aura également mais ce n'est pas distribué aujourd'hui, des compléments aux explications. Et ces compléments permettront de donner des apaisements ou de permettre des adhésions à certains articles qui peuvent provoquer des controverses. Alors, je commence naturellement par le préambule, vous avez tous ce document sous les yeux et la première modification est particulièrement importante puisque vous le savez, elle avait donné lieu à des polémiques ou à des difficultés entre les composantes. Il s'agissait de remplacer le mot, l'expression "s'inspirant de son héritage culturel, humaniste et religieux" par une autre expression qui serait plus neutre parce que le mot religieux a une connotation qui aurait rendu son acceptation impossible par la France du point de vue constitutionnel et pas seulement par la France, je tiens à le dire, ce n'était pas un match

France contre reste de l'Europe, c'était un match de plusieurs pays contre plusieurs autres pays. Il fallait éviter donc des difficultés de ce côté-là et la solution que le présidium a adoptée et qui lui était d'ailleurs proposée par le groupe des parlementaires européens, qui était à l'origine du présent amendement, est la suivante: l'Union européenne, consciente de son patrimoine spirituel et moral, se fonde sur les valeurs indivisibles et universelles etc. Je voudrais donner deux ou trois précisions à ce sujet. D'abord ce texte s'inspire du préambule du traité du Conseil de l'Europe de 1949 dans lequel il y a une phrase analogue avec notamment les deux mots: valeurs spirituelles et morales. Deuxièmement, on a substitué le mot "patrimoine" au mot "héritage" parce que le patrimoine c'est le présent et l'avenir et l'héritage c'est plutôt le passé. Et troisièmement, cette expression ne peut choquer aucun pays, notamment pas la France. Il y a toutefois un petit problème de traduction que je vous signale, le texte allemand devrait comprendre au lieu de actuellement: "geistlich"- "geistlich-religiös" c'est paraît-il la traduction correcte de ce mot en allemand. Naturellement, ce n'est pas de mon ressort, je ne suis pas germanophone et je crois que là c'est un problème linguistique mais en tout cas dans les autres langues je pense qu'il n'y aura aucune difficulté pour traduire directement "spirituel" par des mots équivalents et en français c'est spirituel. Je continue avec le préambule, le deuxième amendement est beaucoup moins important mais significatif quand même, au troisième alinéa nous proposons de mettre au lieu de : l'Union contribue à la préservation" d'ajouter "et au développement" de ces valeurs communes. La préservation ayant un caractère un peu statique , le développement ayant un caractère plus dynamique. Au quatrième alinéa, je crois que c'est une modification de forme, la nouvelle formule c'est: "à cette fin, il est nécessaire, en les rendant plus visibles dans une charte, de renforcer la protection des droits fondamentaux". Le cinquième alinéa comporte un amendement beaucoup plus important et qui procède d'ailleurs d'amendements présentés par plusieurs membres des différentes composantes, c'est d'ajouter aux traditions constitutionnelles, les obligations internationales communes aux Etats membres. C'est une formule allégée, synthétique, mais qui couvre beaucoup de choses. Naturellement, la convention internationale des droits de l'enfant, les conventions de l'organisation internationale du travail, etc. Nous n'avons pas détaillé, mais je rappelle que ces obligations ou ces conventions internationales étaient déjà citées dans l'article 51 ou 52, je ne sais plus parce que la numérotation a un peu changé. Enfin, le septième alinéa comprend également l'ajout d'un mot, nous avons dit "les droits et libertés" et nous disons maintenant, les droits, libertés et principes" pour couvrir toutes les catégories essentielles de la charte. Voilà en ce qui concerne le préambule. Je vais vous faire un exposé global et ensuite vous pourrez discuter sur tel et tel point. Le paragraphe 2 de l'article 11 devient "la liberté des médias et leur pluralisme sont respectés" au lieu de "garantis" je ne crois pas que ça comporte beaucoup de difficultés. A l'article 12 il s'agit de plutôt d'une modification de forme pour répondre à certaines objections qui nous avaient été faites et fondées notamment sur l'idée que le mot "syndicat" revenait plus souvent que les autres. Personnellement je ne pense pas que cela avait beaucoup de signification mais pour donner satisfaction à ceux qui se plaignaient de cette inflation de vocabulaire, on a mis désormais: dans les domaines politique, syndical et civique, ce qui implique (il s'agit de la liberté d'association) le droit de toute personne de fonder avec d'autres des syndicats et de s'y affilier pour la défense de ses intérêts". La deuxième modification, au paragraphe 2 c'est de préciser les partis politiques au niveau de l'Union, il s'agit uniquement de cela. Au lieu de dire "au niveau européen" parce que le mot "européen" n'a pas de signification juridique et certains d'entre nous ont brandi la menace d'avoir de partis russes dans cette expression. Donc ce n'est pas l'Europe géographique, c'est l'Union européenne. L'article 14 c'est encore la substitution d'un mot à un autre, c'est "sont respectées" il s'agit des libertés annexes au droit à l'instruction au lieu de "sont garanties". A l'article 15 on a voulu préciser le titre et le compléter en disant "libertés professionnelles et droit de travailler". A l'article 16 on a introduit et on va le faire dans d'autres articles, ce que j'ai appelé "le refrain". Le refrain c'est: conformément au droit communautaire et aux législations nationales, et pratiques nationales". Nous l'avons introduit là à propos de la liberté d'entreprise, certains ayant pensé qu'il n'y avait pas de raisons de le limiter aux droits sociaux qui viennent ensuite. A l'article 17, c'est une modification qui est minime et à la fois importante, à la deuxième phrase on dit: l'usage des biens peut être réglementé par la loi, dans la mesure nécessaire.." et nous nous sommes inspirés là plus étroitement de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Et ici nous avons introduit un article qui pour l'instant s'appelle 24bis nouveau, c'est le seul article nouveau que nous avons introduit mais nous avons constaté qu'il était proposé unanimement par les trois composantes et moi-même, je dois dire que personnellement, je regrettais son absence jusqu'à présent. C'est un article sur les personnes âgées. Nous avons des articles sur des enfants, sur les handicapés, permettez-moi, je suis sans doute un des doyens de cette assemblée, de me féliciter personnellement que l'on ait pensé aux personnes âgées qui sont une des parties les plus importantes de la population de l'Europe maintenant et ça donne ceci: l'Union reconnaît et respecte le droit des personnes âgées à mener une vie digne et indépendante et à participer à la vie sociale et culturelle. Les articles 26 et 27 ont été modifiés dans le même sens pour donner satisfaction à des demandes très pressantes, au lieu de dire "à tous les niveaux" nous avons dit dans les deux textes "au niveau approprié". Il y a deux autres modifications. La première c'est qu'à l'article 26, à la demande de la Commission qui est comme on le sait la gardienne des traités et du droit dérivé, nous avons proposé de supprimer sur les questions qui les concernent au sein de l'entreprise car ce n'est pas conforme au droit européen. Les consultations ne sont pas limités aux questions qui les concernent et à l'article 27 nous avons rédigé d'une manière nouvelle la phrase de manière à bien montrer que les droits qui sont exprimés là ne sont pas couverts par l'expression ancienne qui avait l'air de dire que le droit de grève qui avait fait son introduction comme vous vous en souvenez la dernière fois, était un droit reconnu au niveau européen par la législation européenne. C'est la différence avec la première partie de la phrase, là il y a bien un droit qui est reconnu actuellement au niveau européen, le droit de négocier, de conclure des conventions collectives, en revanche, le droit de recours à des actions collectives, y compris la grève, n'est pas reconnu juridiquement au niveau européen et nous avons voulu ici éviter toute ambiguïté. L'article 29 comprend une addition, c'est le refrain qui avait été demandé, conformément, il s'agit du droit à une protection contre tout licenciement injustifié, conformément au droit communautaire et aux législations et pratiques nationales. A l'article 40 il a été proposé de supprimer une incise qui était selon le principe de neutralité de l'action publique parce qu'on a considéré qu'il était déjà couvert par le mot "impartialement". A l'article 46 il y avait un problème de rédaction car on pouvait penser que les trois alinéas n'étaient pas liés entre eux et que par conséquent les alinéas deux et trois ne s'appliquaient pas aux tribunaux visés à l'alinéa premier. Donc, nous avons voulu exprimer cette idée que, après avoir dit "toute personne dont le droit et libertés garantis par le droit de l'Union ont été violés, a droit à un recours effectif devant un tribunal dans le respect des conditions prévues au présent article". On renvoie donc aux alinéas deux et trois sur le tribunal indépendant et impartial et sur l'aide juridictionnelle. C'était ce que nous avons voulu dire depuis le début mais je crois que la rédaction était maladroite. A l'article 51 paragraphe 1 à la demande de plusieurs composantes nous avons supprimé la possibilité de limitation fondée sur d'autres intérêts légitimes dans une société démocratique. Donc nous ne parlons maintenant que des objectifs d'intérêt général poursuivis par l'Union ou de besoins de protection des droits et libertés d'autrui. L'alinéa 3, celui qui peut-être nous a retenus le plus longtemps dans la totalité de nos débats a fait l'objet d'un amendement qui peut-être ne plaira à personne ou peut-être avec de la chance plaira à tout le monde. Nous avons coupé la phrase. Je rappelle que la phrase se terminait par "... à moins que la présente Charte n'assure une protection plus élevée ou plus étendue". Et comme M. GEIGER nous l'avait fait remarquer hier, on avait essayé avec cette proposition subordonnée de résoudre plusieurs problèmes à la fois et ça n'était pas clair. Et à la fin j'avais dit que je ne comprenais pas le texte, et je ne comprenais pas le débat puisqu'à mon avis le texte revenait au même selon qu'on avait mis cette phrase ou qu'on ne l'avait pas mise. Grammaticalement et logiquement. Alors nous avons voulu être plus clairs, nous avons coupé la phrase, nous avons mis un point après "que leur confère ladite Convention" et ensuite nous avons ajouté "Cette disposition n'empêche pas le droit de l'Union d'accorder une protection plus étendue. Avec cette formule nous avons tenu compte en même temps d'un amendement de M. BEREIJRO qui voulait qu'on parle seulement de protection plus étendue et pas de protection plus élevée. Mais surtout ce que nous avons voulu c'est bien exprimer cette idée que le droit de l'Union est évolutif et que évidemment à mon avis ça allait sans dire mais peut-être que pour certains ça va mieux en le disant que évidemment on ne pouvait pas interdire aux droits de l'Union d'évoluer. Le dernier amendement est à l'article 52, il a moins de signification. Il s'agit de dire "par le droit de l'Union et le droit international ainsi que par les conventions internationales" pour être plus complets dans les références internationales. Voilà les amendements que nous vous proposons, je crois que la plupart ne posent aucune espèce de difficultés, que un ou deux pourront effectivement donner lieu à discussion et c'est maintenant au Président d'ouvrir cette discussion. Merci.

PRESIDENT

Merci M. BRAIBANT. Voilà à quoi nous avons abouti hier au Présidium. Une information, bien sûr les observateurs peuvent s'exprimer, je ne l'ai pas dit lors de mon exposé introductif. Mes chers collègues maintenant j'ai un certain nombre d'inscrits, une dizaine de personnes inscrites. Je vais les lire : MEYER, PACIOTTI, FRIEDRICH, BARROS MOURA, BONDE, CORNILLET, ..., ..., Et maintenant on en inscrit d'autres. Nous allons commencer avec M. MEYER.

M. MEYER

M. le Président, je pense m'exprimer au nom d'autres délégués si je dis que je remercie le Présidium pour ce nouveau travail qu'il vient de nous présenter et je remercie notre collègue BRABANT pour son excellent exposé. Nous avons maintenant sous les yeux une version de la Charte qui ne nous plaît peut-être pas à tous les niveaux, dans tous ses détails, mais dans l'ensemble nous pouvons nous déclarer fiers de ce résultat qui est le fruit d'un long travail qui pourra peut-être être amélioré à l'un ou l'autre point. Et je pense que les citoyens et les citoyennes pour lesquels nous avons travaillé ici pourront se réjouir que la protection de leur droit des citoyens et de l'homme contre tout éventuel abus soit renforcé. Parce qu'il s'agissait là d'une lacune dans la protection des droits de l'homme, notamment vis-à-vis des abus de l'Union européenne. Cette lacune a été comblée et je pense que cette Charte peut représenter un modèle européen qui signifie clairement que nous ne vivons pas seulement dans une communauté économique mais une communauté de valeurs. J'aimerais maintenant faire trois observations, trois propositions d'amendements, et la troisièmement c'est de loin la plus importante. Tout d'abord l'article 11 paragraphe 2, on parle de la liberté des médias et leur pluralisme que ne sont plus garantis mais respectés maintenant, la justification étant qu'il n'y aurait pas de compétence de l'Union européenne. Pourtant cette compétence on la retrouve dans d'autres articles alors nous estimons que cette Charte ne sert pas un nouveau droit, l'ancienne formulation nous semblait préférable à celle-ci parce que la liberté des médias est une des clés de voûte de démocratie comme l'avait déjà attesté la Cour constitutionnelle. Ensuite, à l'article 15 il s'agit d'une précision avec l'ajout du droit de travailler, ou plutôt le droit d'avoir un travail plutôt que le droit de travailler et puis il y a un autre article où l'on parle de la liberté d'entreprendre qui ne doit pas être restreinte mais qui doit être respectée en fonction des lois nationales. Deuxième proposition porte sur les articles 26 et 27. Notre collègue BRABANT nous a dit qu'il s'agissait des droits des travailleurs et des travailleuses qui ne sont pas garantis d'une manière générale au niveau de l'Union mais au niveau approprié, c'est l'ajout qui a été apporté ici, ceci me pose un problème, je pense qu'il faut maintenir le niveau européen pour des questions de compétences et notamment des références à l'article 11, ce qui me semble le plus important c'est l'article 2 et l'article 50. On fait référence à la charte sociale et je me souviens des longues discussions que nous avons eues au sein de la Convention et auprès des délégués nationaux et je me souviens qu'il y avait un grand consensus de plus de 2/3 des délégués pour dire que la Charte sociale devait être reprise à l'article 52. Certes on parle de la Charte sociale dans le préambule mais il faut souligner les droits dérivés de la Charte sociale et des documents du Conseil de l'Europe. La Charte sociale n'a pas été ratifiée dans sa forme révisée par tous les Etats membres. Dans le préambule il est dit qu'il faut respecter la Charte sociale dans sa version actuelle. Ensuite la Charte sociale on la retrouve dans les conclusions de Cologne et je pense qu'il ne faudrait pas qu'il y ait une contradiction puisque on retrouve cela dans le préambule et pas à l'article 52. L'article 52 n'est pas très convaincant notamment par rapport à ce qui avait été décidé à Cologne. Je pense qu'on pourrait avoir l'impression en lisant l'article 52 que les droits sociaux sont moins bien protégés. Nous étions d'accord, me semble-t-il pour faire prévaloir les principes de solidarité en Europe et à côté de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, l'autre document important sur lequel nous nous fondons c'est la Charte sociale. Alors nous n'avons pas encore procédé à vote et je sais d'ailleurs que ce vote d'ailleurs n'est pas souhaité au sein de notre composante, nous avons décidé de donner un vote indicatif. Je pense que ce serait une bonne chose parce que cela vous permettrait de constater qu'une grande majorité de la Convention souhaite que la Charte sociale apparaisse non seulement dans le préambule mais également dans l'article 52, d'où ma proposition, et j'aimerais que vous relayiez cette requête en faisant un vote à titre indicatif. Merci.

PRESIDENT

Merci Monsieur MEYER.

Ce que nous nous efforçons de faire c'est de trouver un consensus. Que pourront proposer les Vice-présidents à Roman HERZOG. Première remarque, nous n'avons ni le temps ni l'espace pour avoir des amendements supplémentaires bien sûr chacun peut exprimer son point de vue mais on ne peut intégrer les amendements supplémentaires. Deuxième remarque, j'ai trente personnes inscrites. Je voudrais vous demander de respecter le principe des trois minutes, efforcez-vous de le faire. Faisons de notre mieux. Madame PACIOTTI.

Mme PACIOTTI

Merci Président. J'aimerais remercier sincèrement et chaleureusement la présidence pour l'excellent travail effectué. Je vais vous expliquer quelle est mon évaluation générale de cette Charte. Comme beaucoup d'autres je ne retrouve pas mes souhaits dans cette Charte, les droits sociaux sont une partie importante du modèle de société européenne, du modèle de civilisation européenne, or on les retrouve de manière un peu diluée, en faisant référence aux législations nationales et les droits sociaux ne sont pas suffisamment mis en exergue comme les autres libertés. Pourtant c'est la première fois que dans un instrument international on trouve une liste des droits fondamentaux, droits d'égalité, droits de solidarité et de justice. Alors j'aurais aimé que certaines lacunes fussent comblées non seulement dans le domaine social, je ne trouve pas par exemple le droit à un salaire équitable le droit au revenu minimum, mais dans d'autres secteurs également, je ne retrouve pas le droit de chacun à bénéficier des résultats de la recherche scientifique notamment dans le domaine médical et Dieu sait que nous en avons besoin. Il y a également les imperfections, une de ces imperfections est due à la modification du troisième paragraphe de l'article 51. Il semble que l'on ne soit tourné que vers l'avenir et que l'on ne tienne pas compte de la plus grande protection qu'offre aujourd'hui la Charte par rapport à la Convention. Ceci dit, l'équilibre entre les différents points de vue me semble en fin de compte acceptable. Dans le préambule nous avons éliminé la référence ambiguë à l'héritage religieux et je pense que c'est une bonne chose que l'on ait repris la référence actuelle sans faire référence aux luttes de civilisation qui ont frappé l'Europe. Les droits des personnes âgées sont reconnus, je m'en félicite. Ce compromis me semble donc bon. Alors j'espère que cette conclusion sera partagée par ceux qui n'avaient pas le même point de vue que moi au départ, nous trouverons certainement des défauts là où je trouve des excès ou vice versa, mais j'espère que nous arriverons à un consensus et si c'est le cas nous aurons réalisé notre mandat qui nous avait été confié et nous aurons obtenu cette Charte, ce qui me semble un pas considérable en avant sur la voie de la construction européenne et je vais vous expliquer pourquoi ce pas est indispensable. L'Union européenne aujourd'hui ne se borne plus au marché. Elle est en train de construire un espace de sécurité, de liberté et de justice, et on intervient donc sur les droits et libertés des citoyens et l'Europe doit le faire en respectant leurs droits fondamentaux. L'article 6 du Traité le dit déjà mais il ne dresse pas la liste de ces droits. Cette Charte comble cette lacune.

Lacune qui avait été aggravée par la jurisprudence de la Cour de justice européenne. L'Union européenne demande aux pays candidats de respecter les droits fondamentaux et leur demande donc de dénoncer le non respect de ces droits, c'est à cela que sert cette Charte. La Charte, c'est la carte de visite de l'Union européenne, nous ne sommes pas un peuple unique, nous sommes composés de nations, de traditions, de cultures, de religions différentes et nous serons de plus en plus nombreux et nous devons dire clairement ce qui nous unit en insistant sur, à savoir le respect de l'état de droit des principes de la démocratie sur lesquels nous avons construit une communauté capable de vivre en paix et ce pour la première fois au cours des siècles de notre histoire. Ce qui nous unit c'est le respect des obligations de solidarité et nous essayons de fonder sur ces obligations une société où les citoyens n'auraient plus de besoin, n'auraient plus d'inquiétude. A partir du moment où nous reconnaissons des droits qui ont été reconnus par les chefs d'Etats des gouvernements de l'Union on fait un pas en avant sur la voie de démocratisation de l'Union. L'Union ne se compose pas seulement d'Etats, aujourd'hui les sujets ne sont plus les Etats mais les citoyens de l'Union. Evidemment il faudra compléter cette progression par l'adoption d'un statut contraignant pour cette Charte mais aujourd'hui nous sommes en trait de jeter les bases de ce succès et maintenant que nous avons rempli notre mandat, avant l'échéance, nous pouvons tous revendiquer une partie de ce succès et je pense que maintenant il revient à la présidence de formaliser ce succès et je lui rends hommage.

PRESIDENT

Très bien, j'espère que vous pouvez expliquer qu'en fait, accepter le fait que lorsqu'on sera à dix secondes des trois minutes du temps imparti, j'espère que vous accepterez que je vous fasse une remarque parce que aussi non nous risquons de perdre complètement tout notre après-midi.

M. FRIEDRICH

J'aimerais remercier le praesidium pour l'énorme travail abattu. Le texte que nous avons sous les yeux est un bon résultat, est acceptable et je dois dire que nous ne nous y attendions pas au début. Ce document est tourné vers le 21ème siècle et la Convention pourrait l'accepter me semble-t-il. On a trouvé un équilibre entre les droits fondamentaux classiques et les nouveaux droits. J'aimerais parler de ce vote indicatif. Je sais qu'il y a d'autres questions comme l'article 35 qui, s'il devait y avoir un vote indicatif aboutirait à un vote négatif. Alors je vous recommande de suivre la procédure actuelle, à savoir que la présidence de voir quelle est la tendance, l'orientation générale, et il faudra bien accepter ces résultats. Nous prenons connaissance officiellement de ce qu'a dit Monsieur BRAIBANT à propos de la traduction du mot "spirituel" en allemand. On allemand, spirituel ne sera pas traduit par "spirituel" mais par "geistlich-religiös", ce que l'on a en anglais "spiritual and moral" devrait se dire en allemand et aussi peut-être en néerlandais "religiös und moralisch", mes collègues me disent "geistlich-religiös" et "moralisch" donc il y a le mot "spirituel" qui doit être traduit de manière à ne soulever aucun abus, aucun excès parce que vous savez qu'on parle aussi de spiritisme. Nous sommes ravis de cette modification linguistique. Ceci dit nous sommes déçus de la formule selon laquelle les droits des médias sont respectés et non pas garantis. Je pense que nous devons éviter au niveau européen de nous lancer dans de grandes législations. Le droit au cartel, le droit des entreprises des médias relève du droit de la concurrence et ce droit doit être appliqué stricto sensu. Je crois que nous devrions reprendre le terme "garanti". Quelques détails notamment sur les recherches d'emploi, la possibilité de recourir à une agence de placement. Ceci dit, d'une manière globale, je serais tout à fait positif.

Monsieur BARROS MOURA

Merci Monsieur le Président, tout d'abord, je souhaite m'associer aux félicitations qui ont été adressées à la Présidence quant à la manière dont les travaux ont été menés et je vous félicite pour le travail réalisé. En effet, j'estime que nous sommes parvenus à achever notre travail avant la date butoir qui nous avait été fixée. Donc, je crois que nous avons appliqué une méthode qui doit constituer un modèle pour ce que nous pourrions appliquer à l'avenir pour ce qui est de la révision des traités. Voilà quelle est ma principale conclusion politique sur le travail réalisé. Deuxième point, ce que nous avons maintenant constitue un excellent compromis pour ce qui est de cette Charte des droits fondamentaux des citoyens de l'Union européenne et bien sûr c'est la première fois que nous établissons un distinguo entre les droits économiques et sociaux et d'autres garanties et je crois que à cet égard nous devons interpréter la Charte comme un principe d'indivisibilité de la liberté solidarité et citoyenneté des citoyens européens et donc il faut offrir plus de protection que ce n'était le cas par le biais des instruments internationaux tels que la Convention européenne des Droits de l'Homme de 1951 et il est bien que la Charte confirme la possibilité d'une protection supérieure à ce qui était stipulé dans les autres instruments et je dirais encore que nous voyons une amélioration de la protection morale et légitime de l'Union européenne qui se voit conférer des compétences qu'elle exercera au niveau politique et indépendamment du fait que je pense que cette Charte permet cependant certaines discriminations vis-à-vis des citoyens de pays tiers qui s'installent dans l'Union européenne et je crois que nous devrions clairement indiquer cela et peut-être essayer de corriger les choses. Alors, j'attire votre attention sur l'article 52 et ensuite l'article 29. Le 52 tout d'abord, il faut ajouter que tous les travailleurs ont un droit à la protection contre le licenciement notamment etc. etc. conformément aux pratiques nationales. Pourquoi parce que il y a toujours nécessité de protection des droits économiques et à l'article 50, je vous propose de dire lorsque les États membres appliquent le droit communautaire parce que il n'incombe pas aux États membres de décider quelles seront les dérogations au droit communautaire, ce n'est pas leur tâche.

Monsieur KORTHALS ALTES

Merci Monsieur le Président. Je souhaite moi aussi féliciter le præsidium pour la manière dont il a travaillé, résumé la teneur de nos discussions, je me limiterai à un certain nombre d'observations. Tout d'abord sur l'article 14. Ce n'est pas une proposition, il n'y a pas eu de proposition d'amendement mais la traduction en anglais c'est..... de l'anglais et si l'anglais devenait la version qui fait foi on dit "ce droit comporte la faculté de suivre gratuitement l'enseignement obligatoire" alors que, dans le français, on emploie "faculté", dans les versions linguistiques on a utilisé d'autres termes. Je crois qu'il faudrait dire "possibility" au lieu de ce qui y figure et que s'il y lieu de verser un droit, il faut également prévoir une compensation. Mais ce qui est important c'est l'article 51, troisième paragraphe où on propose un amendement, on a supprimé un élément mais là encore peut-être qu'il y a un problème de concordance des traductions. Enfin, il y a des problèmes de formulation mais ce qui est important c'est que cette dernière phrase ne parle plus de la Charte elle-même qui pourrait donner des droits plus vastes et je crois que c'est là que le bât blesse, il y a toujours une ambiguïté et je crois que il faut quand même tenir compte de cela. Merci.

PRESIDENT

Merci. Monsieur BONDE

M. BONDE

Merci. Je crois qu'il s'agit d'un excellent résultat dans l'ensemble et je crois que ce serait parfait s'il s'agissait de l'introduction à une constitution mais ceci va au-delà de la tâche qui était assignée et en même temps limite la compétence des Etats, restreint leur activité parce que nous sommes également liés à des tâches devant également respecter les droits au niveau international, donc il risque d'y avoir un conflit de compétences lorsque il y aura interprétation au niveau national et par rapport également au droit national, surtout par rapport aux arrêts également de la Cour de justice européenne. La Cour de Luxembourg est la cour suprême dans l'Union européenne et il y a également la Cour de Strasbourg et ceci est un fait voilà pourquoi il est difficile de dire quoique ce soit contre ce document qui paraît parfait qui est magnifique, mais il y a une forme de schizophrénie qui est impliquée dans ce document parce que parfois on veut développer l'accès par exemple l'accès aux documents nous avons un magnifique principe qui est inscrit noir sur blanc mais nous avons également quelque chose dans les traités qui n'a pas de de droit défini dans le traité et il y a 22 organisations qui sont actuellement impliquées dans des procédures de justice face à la Commission pour pouvoir avoir accès à des documents. Ce sont des faits, des réalités qu'il convient de prendre en compte et le droit d'accès aux documents doit être créé dans la réalité ou alors s'agit-il plutôt d'une déclaration d'intention pourrait-on dire. D'autre part, il s'agit également de droits sociaux, droit d'établissement dans l'article 33, sécurité sociale, tout cela est bel et bien de pouvoir accorder la sécurité sociale lorsque l'on change de pays, que l'on traverse la frontière, mais il existe des réalités et chaque modèle de sécurité sociale est fondé sur la fiscalité, des revenus fiscaux, et c'est notre modèle au Danemark donc nous avons le droit d'obtenir ce, d'avoir une couverture sociale, ceci est très beau mais qu'est-ce que cela veut dire. Ça voudrait dire que les Danois ont le droit de transposer leur assurance sociale inexistante dans d'autres pays et ceux qui n'ont pas de droits sociaux qu'en est-il? Et ceux par exemple qui sont couverts par une assurance sociale et qui se rendent au Danemark et bien ça veut dire qu'il y a, qu'il a droit à une protection sociale alors que ce sont les citoyens d'un pays qui financent par le biais de leur fiscalité cette couverture sociale. Donc, peut être que l'on pourrait ajouter un paragraphe que l'on mette aux voix ce paragraphe disant qu'effectivement ces textes lorsqu'il s'agit du financement d'un modèle social particulier qui a des implications sur le, le marché du travail, ne peuvent se référer à ce document qui semble magnifique, et ceci risque d'amener à une explosion mais avant que ça soit adopté. Je propose effectivement que l'on vote sur cet amendement, le 34 sur le document.

PRESIDENT

Merci Monsieur BONDE. M. CORNILLET

M. CORNILLET

Merci M. le Président, tout un mot rapide mais très sincère de félicitations pour le travail réalisé tant par les élus du Présidium que par leurs collaborateurs. Effectivement la journée d'aujourd'hui est peut-être celle qui suivra début octobre pourra être la litanie des frustrations parce que bien naturellement un travail de consensus ça génère des frustrations voir des insatisfactions, mais je pense qu'il faut quitter là ce domaine. Moi, personnellement, je ne manque pas non plus d'insatisfactions, mais cette charte je la voterai, je la voterai parce que je la considère comme très utile politiquement, parce que surtout je n'y trouve rien d'inacceptable eu égard à mes convictions et puis parce que je suis d'un tempérament optimiste, je la trouver perfectible et je ne manquerai pas d'essayer de la rendre meilleure et notamment plaider pour le concept de neutralité qui va largement au-delà de l'équité et de l'impartialité puisque cela recouvre ce que l'administration se doit de ne pas être partielle mais au-delà de ça de ne véhiculer aucune idéologie, ni aucune conviction dans ses actes mêmes, ça dépasse donc le comportement de l'agent public. Quittons le fond pour la forme si vous le permettez, la forme c'est naturellement l'écriture dont nous parlons, c'est aussi la procédure d'adoption, moi je suis très attaché à une solidité particulière d'adoption au sein du Parlement européen et puis surtout la forme ça va être les commentaires qui vont suivre et là nous sommes tous coauteurs de cette charte mais nous en sommes à partir de tout à l'heure coresponsables de l'image qu'elle va avoir et je n'ai naturellement aucun conseil à donner à aucun collègue, mais pour ma part, je vais m'astreindre à une autocensure, je vous assure et je parle sous le contrôle de mes collègues français, sur le thème de la défaite de la laïcité ou à tout le moins de l'isolement conceptuel français, la disparition des mots "humanisme" et "principe de neutralité" me ferait un certain succès dans la presse française, je résisterai à ce plaisir et comme j'aimerais bien que ma frustration passe parce qu'elle serait partagée par un grand nombre d'entre vous, je voudrais me faire l'avocat du fait que l'image positive de charte va aussi tenir au fait que nous devons quand même en être contents et pas sortir uniquement nos commentaires sur les frustrations ou les insatisfactions que nous avons eues à subir lors de cette rédaction. Merci mes chers collègues.

PRESIDENT

Merci M. CORNILLET. Voilà une déclaration fort claire et dans le temps imparti. Parfait..

M. MANZELLA

M. MANZELLA

Merci Monsieur le président, moi aussi au nom des collègues du Sénat italien je donne mon feu vert à cette charte et à son équilibre général. Je ne vous cacherais pas tout de même que certains des derniers amendements m'ont beaucoup préoccupé, notamment le troisième paragraphe de l'article 51. Qu'est-ce que cela signifie? Ca signifie que dès maintenant, la charte ne permet pas de protection plus étendue des droits, ou est-ce que cela signifie que le droit de l'Union y compris la charte existante fournit déjà une protection plus élargie? Il me semble que le présidium est arrivé à un consensus sur la deuxième interprétation, et cette interprétation est tout à fait conforme au mandat de Cologne. N'oublions pas que Cologne, on nous a dit qu'à travers la visibilité des droits nous pouvions les renforcer. Donc, en soit cette charte contient un principe évolutif et nous ne devons pas faire référence à d'autres mesures juridiques successives. En fait, cet amendement reflète la préoccupation que nous avons toujours exprimée au cours de notre travail à savoir que la charte n'affaiblisse la convention. La nouvelle charte se fonde sur le principe juridique d'une non-contradiction mais dans aucun point, à aucun article il n'y a affaiblissement de la convention précédente. La charte ne doit pas être une photocopie de la convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme. La construction européenne se base sur un principe dynamique, ce principe dynamique se fonde sur l'union étroite des peuples et ce que nous affirmons dans le préambule. En d'autres termes, sur le plan des droits fondamentaux, l'intégration des peuples de l'Union est plus étroite que l'intégration des pays qui siègent au Conseil de l'Europe. Donc, la nouvelle charte, sans affaiblir la convention européenne des droits de l'homme, doit exprimer une protection plus forte expression d'une intégration plus forte entre les peuples de l'Union et elle doit présenter une protection plus élevée parce que n'oublions pas que le Conseil européen, de l'Europe, n'a pas de pouvoirs européens et n'a pas de pouvoirs similaires aux pouvoirs nationaux et c'est pour cette raison que notre charte doit présenter une protection plus élevée. Le point 48 est assez approximatif, on fait une, on essaie de faire une liste, une comparaison entre les listes, des listes de droits qui reprennent des droits qui sont équivalents et d'autres qui ne le sont pas. Dans les droits équivalents, il y a tout le chapitre sur la citoyenneté européenne, notamment le droit à une bonne administration. Pour le Conseil de l'Europe, c'est inconcevable puisque le Conseil de l'Europe n'a pas d'administration. La citoyenneté européenne n'est pas une partie marginale de notre travail au contraire, cela se trouve au cœur de notre travail puisque nous disons dans notre préambule "l'Union met la personne au cœur de son action en instituant la citoyenneté européenne". Je conclus président, cette charte n'est ni une synthèse, ni une photocopie de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme, donc, aucune contradiction, aucun affaiblissement du régime des droits du Conseil de l'Europe, qui reste le cadre le plus large, le cercle le plus large au sein duquel s'insère cette carte, mais cela n'empêche pas non plus les droits fondamentaux d'évoluer. Il serait ridicule de vouloir fixer les droits à la situation de 1950, cette charte absorbe ces droits dans un cadre juridique plus stricte et plus intense. Merci Président.

PRESIDENT

Merci M. MANZELLA. MME CEDERSCHIÖLD.

MME CEDERSCHIÖLD

Merci beaucoup. J'aimerais également remercier le bureau pour cette immense tâche et pour leur excellent travail qu'ils ont réalisé. Je voudrais également bien transmettre nos vœux de prompt rétablissement au Président Herzog. Je crois que globalement il s'agit d'un excellent travail et d'une bonne base pour plus tard être élargi. Nous avons une certitude juridique, nous avons une base correcte, nous avons une très bonne protection de l'individu et une norme très élevée. Quand il s'agit des droits individuels, et des droits de la propriété, je crois que c'est très important surtout pour ceux qui ont très peu lorsque l'on peut considérer qu'il ne s'agit pas de quelque chose de très important, mais pour ceux qui possède ceci, je crois que c'est parfait. En suédois, je crois il faut et que la traduction suédoise en temps utile traduite en français soit équivalent à la traduction dans le texte anglais. Pour le 24, les textes anglais, français et suédois ne vont pas tout à fait dans le même sens, je crois que le texte anglais est bon et qu'il faut ajuster le texte suédois à ce texte anglais. Pour l'article 40, pour la neutralité, je crois que ceci devrait être maintenu. Effectivement, je crois que la traduction suédoise devrait être revue, je crois que de très nombreux suédois seraient d'accord que ce principe de neutralité soit maintenu en tant que tel dans le texte. Je me suis efforcée ici de trouver l'aspect de neutralité des sexes, neutralité des genres, je crois qu'il y a eu de grandes résistances à cet égard de diverses parties, mais je crois que les textes anglais et français sont neutres d'un point de vue des genres mais le texte suédois, ne l'est pas forcément. Nous avons une tradition de neutralité dans les textes juridiques chez nous et un certain nombre d'entre eux ne le sont pas et nous demandons des amendements à cet égard, nous espérons que le texte suédois soit amené dans le sens des textes anglais et français qui sont neutres du point de vue des genres. Il y a un certain nombre de lacunes qui sont importantes et qui doivent être comblées à cet égard. Je souhaiterais que cette convention soit plus courte et qu'elle se concentre plus sur le contenu des droits fondamentaux strictement, je crois qu'un certain nombre de droits ici ne doivent pas être entendus et compris comme des droits fondamentaux selon moi, mais notre rôle ici n'est pas de réfléchir en termes nationaux, mais de réfléchir en termes européens et dans cet esprit j'exprime mon soutien à cette convention.

PRESIDENT

Merci. Nous intégrons les remarques linguistiques l'égalité des chances bien entendu doit être entièrement appliquée et le secrétariat a promis que les articles qui ne sont pas clairs à cet égard seront améliorés et revus. Merci. M. VOGGENHUBER.

M. VOGGENHUBER

Merci Président, vous comprendrez qu'il est difficile de nous prononcer de manière globale après les modifications qui ont été apportées à cette Charte. J'aimerais tout de même essayer de vous présenter quelques remarques. Je sais parfaitement bien que cette charte représente le premier texte sur les droits des citoyens, les droits fondamentaux en Europe. Alors on voit en filigrane qu'il y a enchevêtrement des droits classiques, des droits nouveaux; et c'est important également de montrer que cette charte devrait être appliquée par les pays candidats et dans ce sens c'est un événement tout à fait historique dans le débat sur les droits fondamentaux. La proposition du présidium est équilibrée. Des droits économiques sont présentés de manière très claire sans restriction et l'article 16 est même un fait sans précédent puisque l'on parle de la liberté d'entreprise. Alors certains droits sont exprimés différemment qu'il avait été à Cologne comme des droits immédiats, des droits directs. J'aimerais m'associer à ce qu'a dit le professeur Mayer. (Nous voulons dire aux citoyens européens), qui voudrait dire aux citoyens que les droits fondamentaux ne seront pas reconnus au niveau européen. Le présidium ne le fera certainement pas et 80 % des composantes ne le feront pas non plus parce nous avons demandé que ces droits soient ancrés dans la charte et le présidium a négligé la majorité en disant que les représentants gouvernementaux bloquaient cela et la Commission également. Alors je me demande, et je demande au représentant de la Commission et aux représentants des gouvernements s'ils peuvent absolument défendre que le droit à un salaire équitable ne soit pas repris dans cette charte. Moi je ne pourrais pas le dire aux citoyens et je ne pourrais pas défendre cette position. Ce consensus nous ne pourrions pas vous le donner, il ne peut pas y avoir de consensus à l'égard du mandat de Cologne. Je pense que nous avons encore du temps pour améliorer ces erreurs de la charte en nous adaptant à l'opinion de la majorité qui souhaite que ces droits fondamentaux soient reconnus et nous pourrions mentionner la charte sociale à l'article 52, et d'ailleurs c'est ce qu'on a nous demandé à Cologne et nous devons insister sur l'introduction d'un droit à un salaire équitable, nous insistons absolument sur ces droits. Moi je n'entrerai pas dans le débat sur le déséquilibre entre les droits économiques et les autres droits notamment les droits dans le domaine d'environnement. On a affaibli le pluralisme des médias et il y a une chose en tout cas que je ne puis accepter c'est que la charte ne mentionne pas le droit fondamental à un salaire égal. Je ne le tolère pas, je ne l'accepte pas et j'en termine parce que en l'absence de ce droit la charte court le risque de ne pas être un progrès dans le débat européen plutôt une source d'érosion.

PRESIDENT

Merci c'est vrai nous allons nous arrêter et faire une pause à midi et demi. Nous avons encore deux orateurs puis ensuite nous reviendrons à 14h00 pile. (14.00 dit le président) afin de poursuivre nos travaux cet après-midi durant deux heures environ ce qui probablement suffira, nous l'espérons, pour que chacun puisse s'exprimer sur la liste, Mme MAIJ-WEGGEN d'abord puis LALLEMAND.

Mme MAIJ-WEGGEN

Merci Monsieur le Président. Tout d'abord je remercie le présidium du travail très intensif et excellent qu'il a réalisé. Ce ne faut pas un travail très aisé pour arriver aux solutions que vous nous avez soumises. Vous avez excellemment travaillé. C'est un document très important. Nous avons bien sûr, tout un chacun, nos points de vue, mais je crois il ne serait pas bon de procéder à un vote indicatif. Certains ont dit qu'ils pouvaient appuyer cette idée, mais un vote indicatif risque d'avoir pour effet d'arriver devant les ministres avec une attitude affaiblie. Je ne crois pas que ce soit une bonne idée. Quelques observations. Je suis très heureuse que le concept religion soit traduit par spirituel ou moral et je crois que cela revient pratiquement au même, mais du point de vue terminologique le terme "geestelijke" est bien meilleur que "spiritueel". Deuxièmement pour ce qui est de l'article relatif aux médias, à vrai dire j'eus préféré que le mot "garanti" ne soit pas remplacé par "respecté". Donc là c'est une observation quelque peu critique. Si l'on pouvait modifier cela je le préférerais. Troisièmement, je suis heureuse du nouvel article 24 bis, c'est un complément excellent qui compense une lacune. Quatrièmement, article 19. Là on parle du non renvoi de personnes lors de certaines conditions, je pense aux réfugiés, je ne sais pas si le présidium a pensé que dans ce domaine et par ce moyen on peut protéger certains délinquants même des délinquants politiques, et donc je me demande si cela n'offre pas une protection à des individus que nous ne voudrions pas protéger. Article 41. Le droit d'accès aux documents. Là on part du traité existant mais un règlement va être bientôt adopté sur la publicité des documents et cet accès, ce droit d'accès sera fortement modifié. Je suis un des rapporteurs sur ce dossier. Je me demande s'il ne faudrait pas non seulement parler du traité et l'article 255 mais également la législation européenne qui est fondée dessus et ce en raison du nouveau règlement qui a été adopté. Je crois que ce serait une bonne idée. Voilà mes mises en garde, Monsieur le Président, ce ne sont pas des points de rupture mais plutôt des suggestions d'amélioration et ce qui est important et ce sera ma dernière observation, il est important de clairement indiquer à quel endroit, sur quels éléments ce document constitue une amélioration; Si nous ne pouvons pas clairement indiquer cela aux citoyens européens nous avons raté une occasion de le faire, je crois qu'il faut vraiment indiquer quels sont les endroits où le document constitue un progrès et je vous remercie encore une fois de l'excellent travail réalisé.

PRESIDENT

Merci Mme MAIJ-WEGGEN, je crois que nous avons fait de notre mieux. Et c'est à vous d'en juger. Dernier orateur pour cette matinée, Monsieur LALLEMAND puis ensuite nous ferons une pause.

Monsieur LALLEMAND

Monsieur le Président, je vais essayer de me limiter essentiellement aux ajouts qui ont été proposés vu le manque de temps, mais d'abord dans le préambule. Je me réjouis certainement de la suppression de la partie de la phrase qui avait été retenue mais j'aurais préféré qu'on élimine le membre de phrase plutôt que de changer la référence comme on le fait. En vérité je crois qu'il faut le dire l'affirmation de la charte est indépendante de l'histoire particulière de l'Union européenne, elle n'implique pas des références à l'histoire, à une culture, à une religion, à une philosophie spécifique qui lui serait propre, car ces références accroissent l'ambiguïté des termes. Quelle est la portée en effet, l'étendue de ces mots, patrimoine, spirituel et moral. Quel est le lien nécessité de ce patrimoine des quinze avec l'affirmation de droits universels. Cela peut susciter débat, des sous-entendus notamment historiques sur le rôle de l'Europe dans l'histoire du monde. En tout cas je puis rappeler qu'aucune déclaration des droits universels à ma connaissance n'a été liée à l'affirmation d'une spécificité nationale ou plurinationale. Deuxième remarque sur l'article 29, on parle du droit du travailleur qui a droit à une protection. On a malheureusement pas reconnu de façon nette le droit au travail plutôt que le droit de travailler. Et je crois que cette insuffisance est importante, qu'elle est grave comme sont assez significatives l'absence de l'affirmation de droits sociaux, pas de droits au logement, pas de droit au regroupement familial et au-delà des droits sociaux il y a aussi les droits politiques, on peut regretter de ne pas trouver une ouverture au vote des non-européens installés depuis longtemps dans certaines communes des pays de l'Union. Je crois que là on ne marque pas une évolution, une évolution qui se caractérise par une affirmation de la citoyenneté au-delà de l'appartenance nationale. Et je crois qu'il serait important d'élargir la citoyenneté au niveau européen, nous le faisons, mais aussi dans certains cas dans certaines conditions, dans toute la mesure du possible, donner à cette notion une dimension universelle. Alors l'article 40, on supprime la référence au principe de neutralité de l'action publique. Sans doute il y a une ambiguïté du terme, je suis bien d'accord. Mais il est clair que le principe de neutralité de l'action publique visait aussi la laïcité de l'État, c'est-à-dire le respect, la séparation de l'ordre public, d'une idéologie, d'une religion, d'un passé particulier. Je crois qu'il est très important de rappeler que dans le passé européen, nous avons eu de longs débats. Puis-je rappeler que le Pape Pie XI avait notamment interdit la liberté d'expression, la liberté d'information, etc. Je crois que tout cela montre combien la référence du principe de neutralité est importante. La neutralité de l'action publique s'est fondée sur le droit à l'objection de conscience, le droit de ne pas adhérer à un ordre établi, qu'il soit public ou qu'il soit privé. Et enfin, pour conclure, je marquerai mon adhésion au projet de charte malgré ses insuffisances importantes, ses insuffisances graves, je crois que le débat devra continuer à ce sujet mais je pense que la charte est une affirmation idéologique et morale importante qui retentira dans des pays qui dégagent des droits fondamentaux d'une histoire dont il faut bien rappeler qu'elle fut oppressante et cynique. Comment ne pas le rappeler ici. Et le consensus qu'il s'est dégagé révèle une communauté profonde de valeurs de la démocratie et elle annonce peut-être un événement fondateur, du moins je l'espère. Elle annonce peut-être le fondement d'un rapprochement institutionnel entre les différents États et nations de l'Europe et elle annonce donc ce qu'on pourrait appeler une communauté de destins. Je vous remercie de votre attention.

PRESIDENT

Merci M. LALLEMAND. Mes chers collègues, il y a déjà douze personnes qui ne sont exprimées durant cette matinée et il reste encore 24 inscrits pour cet après-midi. Je voudrais tout d'abord corriger ce que j'ai dit: nous ne poursuivrons pas nos travaux à 14 h 00 piles, mais nous poursuivrons à 14 h 30 du fait de raisons techniques.

Après-midi

PRESIDENT (M. MENDEZ DE VIGO)

Chers collègues, nous allons poursuivre la réunion entamée ce matin et conformément à l'ordre du jour que m'a transmis M. JANSSON, et la liste des demandes d'intervention, je vais donner la parole pour trois minutes à M. KIRKHOPE.

M. KIRKHOPE

Monsieur le président, il y a beaucoup de bruit dans la salle. Je vais quand même essayer de respecter mon temps de parole. En commençant par le principe de la déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme de 1748, en passant par la Convention des droits de l'homme du Conseil de l'Europe et le protocole qui a suivi cette convention. Lorsque je suis venu dans cette convention, j'ai immédiatement été plein d'espoir en écoutant M. SÖDERMANN qui nous a dit que pour la première fois les citoyens européens seraient protégés dans leur relation avec les institutions tout puissantes. Un écart faussé qui ne pourrait être comblé que par nous depuis les efforts du Conseil de l'Europe. Nous avons progressé mais je crains que de nombreux de mes collègues, de nombreux États aient des problèmes de fond face à certains articles de la charte. L'emploi, les droits sociaux sont des domaines qui ne sont pas reflétés directement dans la convention sont des domaines qui posent des difficultés véritables pour plusieurs pays et pour plusieurs représentants politiques. Ils ne sont pas dans la convention mais ils sont quand même présents. Il y a la question de l'avenir des compétences de l'Union européenne, question que je vous pose en tant que juriste à propos des conflits entre tribunaux. Des conflits quant à l'interprétation du sens de la charte quant aux différentes interprétations entre la Convention des droits de l'homme et la charte. En tant que juriste, je devrais me féliciter qu'il y ait autant de querelles entre juristes mais la question est de savoir si les droits de l'homme seront véritablement protégés ou si au contraire ils seront moins protégés que par le passé. Moi, je pense qu'ils seront moins protégés. Au Royaume-Uni nous n'avons pas de constitution écrite, M. le président, à la différence de bon nombre de pays représentés ici. Nos législations remontent à des siècles. Notre conception des droits de l'homme remonte à la Magna Carta, nos procédures ont évolué et nous nous appuyons sur les procédures utilisées aujourd'hui à la Cour des droits de l'homme. Donc nous pensons que cette charte peut avoir des implications sur les procédures utilisées par nos tribunaux et sur la défense des droits de l'homme. Est-ce que cette charte sera une partie du traité, est-ce qu'elle sera une déclaration, est-ce que ce sera véritablement un document avec valeur juridique pouvant faire l'objet d'un recours devant les tribunaux? S'il ne s'agit que d'une déclaration, M. le président, et même s'il ne s'agit que d'une déclaration, les tribunaux britanniques devront quand même se pencher sur les détails de cette charte lorsqu'il s'agira des droits de l'homme et de la personne. Je n'ai pas besoin de passer en revue tous les articles, le droit à la vie, simplement, est différent entre la charte et la convention des droits de l'homme. Il y a également des difficultés, des confusions en matière d'interprétation de certaines notions religieuses. Ce sont des problèmes qui restent en suspens. Je ne voudrais pas être simplement négatif et critique, je vous donne l'opinion des conservateurs britanniques. Notre objectif est de défendre les droits de l'homme mais cela ne nous empêche pas de dénoncer les problèmes qui demeurent et qui doivent malheureusement être résolus M. le président.

M. HIRSCH BALLIN

Merci président. Mon avis définitif sur le texte qui nous a été présenté est positif. Ce qui ne veut pas dire que je n'ai pas quelques réserves sur certains points, cela ne vaut pas dire que ici ou là je voudrais bien que les choses soient un peu différentes mais je crois qu'il est très important vis-à-vis de tous les citoyens de l'Union européenne qu'il y ait quelque chose au niveau européen, que l'on donne un sens au développement constitutionnel. Ce texte définit les libertés que nous jugeons importantes, il montre qu'il ne s'agit pas seulement au sein de l'Union de développer la coopération économique, il s'agit aussi de défendre les droits sociaux et culturels et ce sont là des raisons qui nous incitent à apprécier ce texte également vis-à-vis de nos citoyens. Alors, que pouvons-nous faire aujourd'hui? Aujourd'hui nous pouvons peaufiner, finaliser nos contributions au développement juridique de ce texte mais il faudrait aller plus loin, il faut préparer bien sûr une cérémonie solennelle d'adoption de la charte mais cela ne suffit pas. Cela ne suffit pas pour mieux définir le cadre juridique de l'Union européenne. Je pense qu'il est essentiel du point de vue des parlementaires néerlandais avec lesquels j'ai été en permanence en contact, il est essentiel disais-je que tout soit bien clair sur le plan du statut juridique de la charte et sur le plan de ses relations avec d'autres conventions ou traités existants. À ce niveau-là, nous éprouvons encore quelques préoccupations et il faudra tout particulièrement définir le rapport avec la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Le Parlement néerlandais n'a cessé de défendre comme position que l'Union européenne et la Communauté européenne doivent adhérer à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. A mon avis, il s'agit là d'une condition sine qua non pour la poursuite de l'application de la charte. Il faut que la question de la relation avec la convention soit bien réglée. Il est évident qu'il va falloir bien réfléchir à l'ancrage de la charte dans un traité, des traités européens éventuellement révisés et je pense que l'inscription de la charte dans les traités de l'Union ne sera possible que si sa relation avec la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme est bien définie. A ce stade-ci, je crois que sur quelques points il y a encore des améliorations possibles. Je rappelle mon plaidoyer en faveur d'une classification de l'article 51. Je pense qu'il faut faire une référence à un tableau comparant les droits évoqués ici et ceux évoqués dans la Convention européenne. La dernière phrase telle qu'elle est là n'est pas claire. Je voudrais aussi faire référence à l'article 52 qui cite d'autres traités ou conventions très à juste titre d'ailleurs et je pense qu'il faut tout particulièrement faire référence aux conventions qui ont été conclues dans le cadre du Conseil de l'Europe. On pourrait dire peut-être "autres conventions du Conseil de l'Europe qui sont d'application dans les États membres, y compris la Charte sociale européenne". Je crois que cette façon de présenter les choses est très claire, elle fait référence aux différences conventions qui sont importantes par rapport à notre charte comme la convention sur la biomédecine et là j'établis le lien avec l'article 13. Voilà, je me contente de cette intervention, je garde aussi quelques réserves à propos de l'article 35 mais dans l'ensemble vous connaissez ma position. Merci.

M. APOSTOLIDIS

Je pense qu'à la fin de nos travaux, chacun d'entre nous devra s'interroger en se demandant si le texte actuel de la charte permet de répondre au mandat de Cologne et également si nous avons réussi à atteindre l'objectif que nous nous étions fixé au départ. Dans ce contexte, nous devons nous poser trois questions, des questions qui ont sans cesse été abordées déjà d'ailleurs. D'abord, est-ce que ce texte a une valeur ajoutée? Est-ce que via les dispositions concrètes qu'il contient nous avons réussi à mieux définir les droits des citoyens à les définir d'une manière claire et compréhensible et, troisième question, est-ce que ce texte renforce la protection des droits des citoyens européens? Dans un premier temps, je répondrai de façon positive à ces trois questions critiques. En ce qui concerne la valeur ajoutée de cette charte, je dirais qu'elle a un volet, une dimension culturelle, politique et sociale. Elle confère ces trois dimensions à l'Union européenne et c'est très important. C'est un nouveau point de départ pour l'Union. Alors, est-ce que ce texte doit être simplement déclaratoire ou est-ce qu'il doit être juridiquement contraignant ? Est-ce que, sur la base de cette charte, le citoyen pourra faire défendre ses droits ? C'est une autre question qui se pose et qui soulève un autre aspect très important. Le Parlement européen, les parlements nationaux se sont déjà prononcés sur ce texte et à l'écoute de ce qui a déjà été dit il faut s'interroger. Ce texte est-il contraignant ou est-il uniquement déclaratoire ? Est-ce qu'il est déterminant pour l'exécutif au sein de l'Union européenne ? Est-ce qu'il lie d'une quelconque manière ? La question est essentielle, elle soulève toute la question de la démocratie d'ailleurs. On ne peut pas se demander trop longtemps si ce texte est juridiquement contraignant. Nous avons déjà consacré des heures et des heures à sa préparation et donc maintenant il est temps de savoir si ce texte est contraignant ou pas. Il faut trancher ce nœud-là. Alors ajouter disais-je, d'après moi, le seul texte qui au niveau de l'Union réussit à combiner les droits classiques avec les droits économiques et sociaux devrait être celui-ci. C'est une contribution importante, donc à la "défense" des citoyens européens et des travailleurs et ce texte le sera certainement apprécié à sa juste valeur de ce fait-là. Je voudrais d'ailleurs féliciter le Présidium. D'excellentes suggestions ont été faites par le Présidium qui vraiment a fait considérablement progresser les choses. Je voudrais dire aussi malgré tout que je voudrais formuler une réserve importante qui va dans le sens de celle de Monsieur MEYER. A l'article 52 on ne parle pas du traité de l'Union. C'est quand même assez surprenant et c'est une lacune considérable.

PRESIDENT

Merci beaucoup. C'est M. VITORINO qui a la parole.

M. VITORINO

Merci Monsieur le Président

Je demande la parole pour préciser un point auquel la Commission attache beaucoup d'importance. Je pense à l'article 50 paragraphe 1. Le Présidium a proposé que dans l'article sur la limitation des droits, il faudrait dire "autres intérêts légitimes dans une société démocratique" et cette suggestion a été très critiquée parce que ça pouvait être considéré comme une expression un peu ambiguë, et nous sommes arrivés à la décision que cette expression devait être supprimée pour éviter tout malentendu. Cependant après lecture attentive du texte et étant conscient, sur lesquels plusieurs membres ont attiré notre attention, je crois qu'il faut bien se rendre compte que la première partie de la phrase nécessite une précision, une adaptation conformément à cette suppression. Donc, je pense très sincèrement que dans la première partie de cette phrase où nous disions que l'intérêt général recherché par l'Union comme base des droits fondamentaux, là il doit y avoir une petite modification rédactionnelle et on devrait dire que l'intérêt général reconnu par l'Union, les intérêts généraux reconnus par l'Union sont le fondement pour la limite des droits fondamentaux. Je vais vous donner un exemple. Comme vous le savez l'ordre public n'est pas un intérêt général poursuivi par l'Union, mais étant donné la Convention des droits, et bien c'est le cas, donc on ne pourrait pas comprendre que on ne reconnaît pas l'ordre public comme un fondement pour les droits fondamentaux C'est pas un objectif d'intérêt général poursuivi par l'Union, mais c'est quand même reconnu clairement. Donc je demande à mes collègues du Présidium de préciser que la suppression de cette phrase que je viens de mentionner nécessite une modification rédactionnelle de la phrase précédente qui devrait se lire "nécessaire" et bon vraiment dans le sens des objectifs reconnus par l'Union. Je crois que c'est nécessaire de préciser ce point à ce stade de nos débats.

PRESIDENT

Merci Monsieur VITORINO pour cette précision, M. TARCHYS

M. TARCHYS

Alors je voudrais me rallier à tous ceux qui ont félicité le présidium pour son travail. Je trouve que les conclusions auxquelles nous sommes parvenus sont excellentes. J'y retrouve certaines de mes suggestions, ce qui me fait très plaisir, il y a encore quelques articles, quelques paragraphes un peu préoccupants que nous devons analyser en particulier là où il y a des différences entre la charte et la législation suédoise. Mais d'une façon générale je pense pouvoir dire que la charte est une bonne charte, qu'elle a énormément de qualités. La charte présente à mon avis trois avantages. D'abord, du point de vue symbolique, elle représente un jalon important pour l'Union européenne qui n'est pas seulement une union économique mais qui est également une union de valeur acceptée par les hommes qui peuplent cette union et un engagement en faveur des droits de l'homme. Nous avons réussi à tenir compte des valeurs qui sous-tendent nos législations quelles que soient les différences que nous avons réussies petit à petit à réduire depuis 50 ans, effort qui avait déjà été accompli par le Conseil de l'Europe pour élaborer sa convention des droits de l'homme dont de nombreux éléments se retrouvent également dans notre Charte. Tout ceci a influencé la justice de nos pays respectifs. D'où l'importance de ce texte. Nous avons discuté du caractère contraignant ou pas de ce texte. Sera-t-il contraignant du point de vue juridique ou sera-t-il une déclaration politique. De toute évidence, il s'agit pour moi d'une déclaration politique même si nous savons très bien que la plupart des droits qui figurent dans cette Charte sont déjà considérés comme des droits contraignants dans beaucoup de nos pays. Donc, la législation de nos pays ne va pas être transformée du jour au lendemain. Au contraire, ce que représente cette Charte, c'est une compréhension plus claire de ce que l'Union européenne ne peut pas faire. C'est une possibilité de se défendre pour les Etats membres et pour les citoyens. Cela c'est une fonction importante de la Charte qu'il ne faut pas négliger. Dans la présentation de la Charte, il est indispensable de ne pas tout mélanger. Il faut savoir précisément à qui s'adresse cette Charte. Elle s'adresse aux organes de l'Union européenne, elle doit être conçue d'une façon globale pour les relations entre l'Union européenne et ses citoyens dans la mesure où les Etats membres appliquent les dispositions communautaires. Je ne voudrais pas entrer davantage dans les détails mais je voudrais simplement réagir à une des remarques du présidium à propos de l'article 51 là où il est question d'autres intérêts légitimes. Je pense qu'il faut encore y réfléchir. Les droits inscrits dans la Charte d'une façon générale sont des droits qui dépendent également des compétences des Etats membres, il ne s'agit pas simplement de l'Union européenne, il s'agit également de droits garantis par les législations de nos états respectifs. Donc, si l'on supprime cette partie du texte, une idée importante disparaît. Voilà encore une fois mes félicitations, M. le président, félicitations générales à l'adresse du présidium.

Merci.

M. OFNER

Merci M. le président. Je serai bref puisque le présidium nous a déjà exprimé que la porte était presque fermée déjà. Donc, on ne pouvait pratiquement plus rien ajouter au document, à moins qu'il y ait des erreurs de traduction ou des petites modifications d'ordre linguistique. Pour ceux qui s'intéressent à nos travaux, pour les responsables politiques qui ont suivi nos travaux, il est difficile de comprendre que les droits des minorités ne soient pratiquement pas évoqués dans le document. Alors que nous savons qu'au sein de l'Union européenne, il y a des normes très différentes en matière de droits des minorités. Cette Charte a choisi le plus petit dénominateur commun. Il n'y a même pas une petite interdiction de discrimination, ce qui pourrait déjà être une ébauche de protection des minorités, pas de droit des groupes, pas de protection des minorités, sans même penser à des mesures permettant d'encourager les cultures minoritaires. Donc, je pense qu'il s'agit certes d'un sujet d'actualité, qu'il convient de le traiter avec prudence mais même si je m'expose à des reproches, je pense qu'il aurait quand même fallu être plus explicite. C'est un message négatif que nous lançons parce que dans les pays où les minorités ne sont pas considérées comme groupe, dans les pays où l'existence même de certaines minorités est nié, où ces minorités n'ont pas de droits ni en tant que groupes ni en tant que minorités, le fait que l'on ne parle pas du droit des minorités dans la Charte est extrêmement regrettable. Nous avons recherché un texte équilibré mais malheureusement je ne peux pas me rallier à cette opinion.

M. DEHAENE

Merci président,

A mon tour, je voudrais féliciter le présidium pour le résultat équilibré qu'il nous présente aujourd'hui. Mes affirmations seront succinctes. Je me contente de faire référence à un document plus exhaustif que je déposerai sur la table du présidium et je ne vais pas l'exposer ici dans les détails. Je pense que nous en sommes arrivés à une synthèse importante et nous avons bien sûr tenu compte des limitations qui nous ont été imposées par le mandat de Cologne. Je dois dire que sur certains points, nous aurions aimé aller plus loin mais nous avons été limités par les contraintes du mandat qui nous avait été donné. Je pense qu'il est important de constater que nous avons ici un texte dans lequel la distinction traditionnelle entre les droits de base et les droits économiques et sociaux dans lequel donc cette distinction a été balayée. Ce texte est un texte de synthèse entre tous ces droits et je pense que c'est un pas important en avant sur le plan de la définition de tous ces droits. Je voudrais me limiter à trois remarques. D'abord, je partage les préoccupations qui ont été exprimées à plusieurs reprises, c'est-à-dire qu'il faut éviter toute divergence d'interprétation entre la Charte et la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Personnellement, j'aurais préféré qu'à l'article 51, point 3, on fasse une référence explicite à la jurisprudence. J'accepte toutefois que l'on fasse référence au préambule, c'est une bonne chose, on le fait dans le point 1 de l'article 51, mais dans le texte du 31 juillet, dans les commentaires relatifs à l'article 51, on faisait référence d'une façon beaucoup plus claire à la jurisprudence de la Cour. Donc, le texte de l'époque était plus clair et je voudrais bien que le texte du 31 juillet qui fait mieux référence à la jurisprudence soit repris dans ce texte-ci. En deuxième lieu, il est très important de constater que cette Charte parle des droits sociaux économiques: on le fait d'une façon encore trop timide à mon goût mais cette timidité est en partie liée aux contraintes du mandat qui nous a été donné dont je vous parlais tout à l'heure. Je crois que nous devrions faire encore un pas en avant pour éviter qu'on ne nous reproche d'avoir été trop timorés à l'article 52, il faudrait faire une référence spécifique à la Charte sociale européenne, je crois que cela permettrait de balayer pas mal de malentendus. Alors troisième remarque, à propos de la portée juridique de ce texte, je crois que ce n'est pas à nous qu'il incombe de définir la portée juridique de ce texte. Nous avons reçu pour tâche, du sommet de Cologne, d'élaborer une Charte, je crois que nous nous sommes bien acquittés de cette tâche. Le sommet de Cologne a dit lui-même qu'après la proclamation de la Charte, il se chargera lui-même de vérifier comment cette Charte pourrait être intégrée dans le traité. Je crois que le sommet de Biarritz n'oubliera pas cette tâche qu'il s'est lui-même attribuée. Je crois que cette Charte n'acquerra toute son importance qu'à partir du moment où elle sera intégrée dans le traité de l'Union mais ce n'est pas à nous qu'il incombe de le faire, c'est une tâche qui incombe au sommet.

PRESIDENT

Merci M. DEHAENE

Il est exact, c'est au Conseil européen de le faire. Mon prochain orateur est M. Martin, Hans Peter MARTIN.

M. MARTIN

Merci M. le président, moi aussi je vous remercie pour tout le travail que vous avez accompli mais je fais partie moi aussi du petit groupe de ceux qui ne sont pas particulièrement heureux du résultat. Lorsque nous sommes devant nos électeurs, et que nous parlons du modèle européen, nombreux sont ceux qui pensent au modèle social européen alors la Charte comme l'a dit le président PRODI, devrait devenir l'expression de l'âme européenne, c'était un beau discours, certes, mais moi j'ai l'impression que nous avons affaire aujourd'hui à un cœur très froid dans l'article 51 et à d'autres endroits du préambule, nous n'avons pas de référence à la Charte sociale européenne alors je vous demande directement, M. le président, s'il est vrai que dans votre groupe, la majorité des parlementaires étaient pour une référence à la Charte sociale européenne et que vous ensuite au présidium, vous avez refusé cette référence. Cela m'intéresse de le savoir parce que cela m'amène au point suivant, un point de procédure. Il me semble très problématique d'élaborer une Charte comme nous l'avons fait sans règlement, un petit peu à la va-vite, pressés par le temps, d'abord en slalom et puis ensuite à toute vitesse sur une pente très raide. On avait même plus le droit de se réunir en plénière alors que c'était la dernière possibilité pour nous, il ne s'agit même pas d'amendements, on nous a dit: ce n'est même pas la peine de déposer des amendements, cela ne sert plus à rien, c'est trop tard. Alors vis-à-vis des citoyens européens, vis-à-vis des contribuables, je ne trouve pas cela très correct. D'une façon générale, lorsqu'il s'agit des affaires européennes, si nous regardons l'article 11, paragraphe 2, nous n'arrêtons pas de réduire, de rogner les différents droits. Je pense en particulier à la liberté d'expression et d'information. On a d'abord commencé à parler de liberté d'expression, liberté d'information, alors que nous savons très bien que c'est extrêmement important dans les sociétés modernes. Pour les citoyens, il est essentiel de savoir ce que fait l'Union et petit à petit ce texte a été rogné morceau par morceau, ce que je trouve déplorable. Alors, est-ce que les journalistes de l'Union européenne vont rester muets, moi j'espère qu'ils vont réagir et réagir de façon extrême parce que l'Union là est en train de se fermer, de s'entourer d'un rempart au lieu de s'ouvrir vers l'extérieur. Dix secondes encore M. le président. Nous avons en Autriche une constitution en 1848, nous n'avons pas voulu agir de la même façon aujourd'hui car elle ne nous a pas laissé de bons souvenirs !

PRESIDENT

Merci M. MARTIN.

Il y a eu de fortes critiques en ce qui concerne le 11, 2 en son état. Et ce que nous avons maintenant, c'est un compromis. Je vous remercie. M. HAEANEL

M. HAENEL

Merci, M. le président, je crois mes chers collègues que nous pouvons globalement être satisfaits du travail accompli. Nous sommes arrivés à un bon équilibre entre les préoccupations et les sensibilités diverses. Je souscris donc à ce texte sans réserve. Il était en effet indispensable avant même l'approfondissement, l'élargissement, la réforme institutionnelle de faire le point et de retrouver en quelques sortes les fondations de la construction européenne, de redonner tout son sens à l'Europe afin d'éviter de réduire l'Europe à un grand marché, à un budget ou à des institutions. Avec la Charte, nous définissons en quelques sortes le bien commun européen. Avec le sourire, je vous dirais peut-être pour l'anecdote ou pour la petite histoire, à la dernière minute, nous avons évité de justesse une nouvelle guerre de religion notamment franco-française, OUF, l'arbre n'a pas caché la forêt. Je pense cependant, qu'il sera nécessaire dans la rédaction définitive des compléments aux explications qu'a annoncé ce matin, M. BRAIBANT pour apaiser les uns et les autres mais surtout pour entraîner l'adhésion de tous qu'un commentaire objectif et exhaustif soit fait pour expliquer la suppression du terme religieux pour qu'il n'y ait pas par la suite d'équivoque ou d'ambiguïté d'interprétation. Je vous dis tout de suite que la rédaction retenue me convient tout à fait. Le terme patrimoine substitué à celui d'héritage implique nous seulement le passé, mais on nous l'a dit encore ce matin, mais l'avenir et les mots spirituel et moral ainsi que valeurs sont peut-être même plus forts, ont plus de sens que le mot religieux qui pouvait apparaître réducteur. Je suis aussi bien entendu satisfait que la proposition que j'avais formulée dès le départ sur la nécessité d'introduire dans le préambule la notion de devoirs et de responsabilités ait été retenue. Ma dernière observation concerne l'amendement apporté à l'article 51, alinéa 3, la rédaction antérieure pouvait effrayer ceux d'entre nous qui craignaient que l'entrée en vigueur de la Charte ne provoque un conflit de jurisprudence entre les Cours de Luxembourg et de Strasbourg pour les droits garantis à la fois par la convention et par la Charte. D'un autre côté, il aurait été regrettable, je crois, de figer la jurisprudence fondée sur la Charte en l'alignant purement et simplement sur cette qui découle de la convention. La solution retenue, me semble-t-il ouvre la porte à l'avenir en appelant à une protection plus dynamique de l'Union mais elle n'annonce pas un conflit de jurisprudence du fait même de la simple entrée en vigueur de la Charte. Je crois que là encore, nous arrivons à un bon équilibre. Au total, mais si je pourrais comme certains collègues nuancer ce texte qui est évolutif et perfectible me paraît répondre aux attentes de nos concitoyens comme à celles du Conseil européen et qu'on le veuille ou non sera à marquer d'une pierre blanche dans la construction européenne.

PRESIDENT

Merci M. HAENEL

Pour aussi vous en être tenu aux trois minutes deux secondes.

Mme KAUFMANN

Mme KAUFMANN

Merci M. le président, à mon avis la Charte des droits fondamentaux est un projet politique très important qui va influencer l'évolution future de l'Union européenne et en particulier ses relations avec les citoyennes et les citoyens. Elle rend les droits des citoyennes et des citoyens plus transparents, leurs droits vis-à-vis des institutions et elle comble une lacune en matière de protection des droits fondamentaux. Donc, je pense que nous seulement nous avons travaillé de façon intense ces derniers mois mais nous avons atteint l'objectif que nous nous étions fixé. Donc, pour nous tous membres de cette convention, une chose est claire, ce texte est un compromis politique extrêmement délicat. Un compromis implique toujours un compromis entre différents intérêts, entre différents textes juridiques, entre différents concepts politiques et sociaux et entre différentes conceptions. A mon avis, il y a un décalage entre les droits sociaux et les autres droits garantis, le droit au travail, le droit au logement, le droit au revenu minimum, le droit à une allocation, à une rémunération équitable, donc dans les clauses horizontales dont le professeur MEYER a parlé dès le début, il aurait fallu faire une référence à la Charte sociale européenne. Je regrette énormément que le droit d'asile ne soit pas considéré comme un droit individuel pour les ressortissants de pays tiers comme ça l'était dans le texte de départ et que l'environnement et la protection des consommateurs ne soient pas traités à fond non plus. Il y a encore deux choses très importantes pour moi. Nous avons reçu le texte de la convention 48 hier avec une explication du texte de la Charte, je pense que ceci ne représente qu'un document du présidium, de la responsabilité du présidium et pas de la convention. C'est la raison pour laquelle, je pense que ce texte, le texte de l'explication n'a aucune valeur juridique. Dans la contribution 328, paragraphe 17, il est dit que ce serait un point d'appui important pour l'interprétation de la Charte. Je ne suis pas d'accord. L'article 2, paragraphe 2, de la Charte m'amène à dire que la convention est formulée ici très clairement, la peine de mort dans l'Union européenne ne doit absolument pas être appliquée et exécutée. Nous devons rechercher le niveau le plus élevé possible comme c'est prévu par le protocole additionnel de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Vous savez que les femmes, membres de la convention ont déposé une motion commune qui a été acceptée par une large majorité de la convention, par le présidium également. Hier lors de la réunion de la notre délégation, j'ai fait remarqué que dans le texte allemand, comme par le passé nous n'avions pas une référence à ce que nous avons demandé. Dans le texte allemand, il n'est question que d'égalité entre les hommes et les femmes alors que nous nous voulions la formulation des articles 2 et 3 du traité de l'Union européenne qui vont beaucoup plus loin que le simple terme d'égalité. Donc, je vous demande de vérifier ce point de rédaction. Le collègue FRIEDRICH en a parlé également tout à l'heure à propos d'une autre remarque linguistique et du terme spirituel, moi j'ai remarqué dans le Duden, dans notre dictionnaire, le dictionnaire qui fait autorité: spirituel en français, c'est traduit par "geistig" en allemand. C'est tout ce qui concerne l'activité de l'esprit, donc avec la meilleure volonté possible, si nous ne voulons pas faire dire à la langue ce qu'elle ne dit pas, il n'est pas possible de concevoir une interprétation religieuse de ce terme.

PRESIDENT

Merci Mme KAUFMANN.

Mme BENAÏ

Merci président. Incontestablement, le texte qui est là représente le meilleur des résultats possibles. Et dans cet esprit, je dirais que ce résultat est positif même si certains auraient voulu aller un tout petit peu plus loin. Quoiqu'il en soit, ce texte n'est évidemment qu'un reflet, un miroir des concepts politiques et sociaux qui règnent actuellement en Europe globalement et pour ma part je voudrais encore une fois féliciter le présidium qui a fait de très gros efforts pour en arriver à partir d'un tel nombre de divergences de vues pour en arriver à trouver une voie médiane, la voie royale, une formulation qui est quand même satisfaisante pour la plupart d'entre nous. Je souhaite et le parlement grec souhaite également que malgré les imperfections, les faiblesses du texte, ce texte acquiert quand même un caractère contraignant de manière à ce qu'il devienne vraiment quelque chose d'important pour l'Union européenne dans ses efforts de protection des libertés individuelles et plus particulièrement des droits sociaux. Bien sûr, je le disais, il y a encore certaines insuffisances que je regrette. Néanmoins, je voudrais dire quelque chose de positif à propos de l'article 52. On y parle de droits de l'Union européenne. Je trouve cela beaucoup plus positif, beaucoup plus constructif comme rédaction que la simple référence à la Charte sociale européenne. Le droit de l'Union européenne, c'est quelque chose qui va beaucoup plus loin. A côté de la Charte sociale, il couvre d'autres textes, ce droit européen, ce droit de l'Union. Des textes qui ont pour but de garantir la poursuite du développement. Moi je trouve que cette adaptation du texte est tout à fait réussie. Je regrette un peu qu'on ait pas pu progresser à propos de l'article 15, point 3, surtout à propos de ce point que nous avons abordé à plusieurs reprises. A propos des droits des ressortissants des pays tiers qui sont autorisés à travailler sur le territoire des Etats membres. Dans l'explication, je crois que nous devrions mieux expliquer ce que nous avons voulu faire, c'est-à-dire mieux expliqué le sens de notre démarche. Et à l'article 32 point 2 il n'y a pas l'explication dans le sens de ce que j'avais demandé. Il n'y a pas non plus de paragraphe séparé au sein de l'article 32 qui me permettrait de prévoir la protection de la maternité. En l'occurrence il ne s'agit pas seulement des droits sociaux des deux parents, des droits qui sont ancrés. A l'article 32 le congé parental par exemple. Il y a d'autres droits spécifiques liés à la maternité et j'aurais voulu qu'on fasse un point pour en parler. Mais bon cela n'enlève rien à la valeur du texte qui a ici été présenté et je félicite encore une fois chaleureusement le présidium.

PRESIDENT

Merci d'avoir été brève. 15.3

Oui cela pose problème. Au présidium nous avons essayé de l'expliquer dans les explications de la dernière partie. En ce qui concerne les navires marchands je ne sais pas s'il y a des problèmes dans la pratique mais le texte pourrait poser problème. Je partage votre avis. Comme je l'ai dit au présidium, nous sommes des démocrates.

M. MAGNUSSON

Merci Monsieur le Président, je n'ai que quelques remarques de plus. La proposition que nous examinons maintenant. Ce projet de charte pour l'Union européenne est acceptable. C'est un bon projet qui n'appelle de ma part aucune objection. Ces derniers jours, nous avons beaucoup travaillé et en particulier au présidium ce travail a porté ses fruits et nous a permis d'aboutir à un texte de grande qualité. Je voudrais faire une remarque à propos du préambule. Nous avons cinq libertés, maintenant, liberté d'établissement, également et je pense que ce n'était peut-être pas l'intention au départ d'ajouter une cinquième liberté pour les droits syndicaux il aurait été possible d'en parler dans le corps même, dans le dispositif de la Charte. La liberté d'établissement pourrait être supprimée du préambule et à ce moment-là nous pourrions retomber sur les quatre libertés qui fondent l'Union européenne. Nous avons beaucoup travaillé. Le Conseil de l'Europe également. La Convention des Droits de l'Homme a souvent été citée. Nous nous sommes demandé s'il s'agissait d'une déclaration politique, s'il s'agissait d'une déclaration purement et simplement ou s'il s'agissait d'un texte contraignant. En tant que rapporteur pour le Conseil de l'Europe je peux dire que je me félicite de l'attitude du Parlement européen en particulier suite à la dernière communication de la Commission. La Commission fait une référence très claire aux relations entre la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme et la charte des droits fondamentaux, relations qui doivent encore être précisées. Je me félicite du bon esprit de coopération qui a présidé à nos travaux, même si sur tel ou tel point de détail nous avons entendu parfois des relents de politique politicienne de politique partisane mais qui ne nuisent pas à la qualité de ce texte.

Merci beaucoup.

LORD GOLDSMITH

Au cours de la première, la toute première réunion de la Convention au début de l'année, j'avais exprimé un espoir très fort, espoir d'arriver à mettre au point une charte pour les peuples d'Europe. J'avais dit à l'époque que cette charte devait être une claire déclaration des droits que les Institutions de l'Union devaient respecter. La plupart des Etats membres ont des limites claires à ce que les gouvernements peuvent ou ne peuvent pas faire. Les droits fondamentaux de chacun d'entre nous ne doivent pas être violés ou piétinés par le législateur. Ces restrictions, ces limites devraient s'appliquer également aux Institutions européennes. Et la charte, j'avais dit à l'époque, la charte devrait pourrir le faire. Encourager la culture des droits des responsabilités que peut faire une charte, c'est aussi un objectif clé du gouvernement britannique, et d'ailleurs la semaine prochaine, le jour même où cette convention va se réunir pour la dernière fois la loi sur les droits de l'homme entrera en vigueur au Royaume-Uni. Notre tâche a été de rédiger un document qui rencontrerait ces objectifs, comme d'autres l'ont fait, je reconnais qu'il a fallu qu'il y ait vraiment un désir très fort de compromis pour arriver à cette fin. Mais des compromis de tous côtés qui ont permis à la présidence, au présidium, auquel j'exprime d'ailleurs mes remerciements, qui leur aura permis d'arriver à la rédaction actuelle. Après avoir entendu les explications données aujourd'hui et précédemment sur le texte, je pense qu'il a maintenant atteint l'objectif que nous nous étions fixés. Le texte définitif bien entendu devra être examiné et il est entendu que pour des raisons constitutionnelles et autres il devra être vu par les gouvernements membres, mais je ferai un rapport extrêmement positif au premier ministre qui s'est tenu au courant d'ailleurs des travaux de près, jusqu'à maintenant et j'espère vivement qu'il sera ensuite en mesure de donner l'accord du Royaume-Uni à ce texte.

(Applaudissements)

C'est la première fois que cela m'arrive je dois dire.

Il y a une modification rédactionnelle que je voudrais mentionner en note.

Le 51.3 compte une nouvelle phrase, je crois en anglais il vaudrait mieux dire "à condition, providing" parce que c'est ce qu'on nous a demandé de faire, et je demande au présidium de suivre cette proposition. Je vous remercie.

PRESIDENT

Merci Lord GOLDSMITH. D'être très constructif. Je crois qu'un grand nombre de membres attendaient avec impatience ce que vous nous avez dit. M BERTHU.

M. BERTHU

Je voudrais tout d'abord comme tous mes collègues, féliciter le présidium et le secrétariat pour leur travail, parce que je crois qu'ils sont arrivés à un texte relativement cohérent et assez lisible à partir des demandes d'une assemblée qui est très hétérogène, quelque soit ses immenses qualités par ailleurs. Alors on nous demande aujourd'hui de prendre une position, d'accord ou de désaccord, sur ce texte. Je dirais que c'est très difficile sans savoir ce qu'il va devenir. Il faut distinguer deux hypothèses. Soit ce texte devient contraignant, soit il est non contraignant. S'il devait être non contraignant je crois que je ne pourrais pas y donner mon accord dans la mesure où je pense qu'il mettrait en place une machine à uniformiser les droits nationaux en Europe et où il donnerait dans son uniformisation un pouvoir d'appréciation très grand, disproportionné à la Cour de justice des Communautés. Par conséquent je ne serais pas d'accord pour cette hypothèse là et d'ailleurs je pense sincèrement que la plupart des responsables politiques qui ont demandé la rédaction de la Charte ne seraient pas non plus d'accord pour mettre en place un instrument conduisant vers une Europe très uniformisée. En revanche si ce texte était non contraignant, alors là je crois que mon avis serait plus nuancé. Si c'était une simple déclaration politique. Il comporte de nombreux avantages. Il permet de réaffirmer des valeurs communes qui sont très importantes notamment dans la perspective de l'adhésion des pays de l'Est candidats. Et cela pourrait être un document positif. Néanmoins je réserverais quand même mon avis même dans cette hypothèse, parce que je crois qu'il manque un volet essentiel; On ne peut pas faire une déclaration politique sur les droits fondamentaux des citoyens en Europe sans dire un mot sur les Nations. Alors, bien évidemment dans le préambule il y a le respect de l'identité, le respect de l'organisation des services publics, tout cela est très bien. IL faut effectivement respecter l'identité, mais il y a des choses qui sont aussi très importantes, c'est le respect juridique du droit d'expression des citoyens dans le cadre national et la reconnaissance que ce cadre national est très important en Europe, et la reconnaissance du fait que ce cadre national influe sur la nature même de l'Europe qui est une association de nations. Voilà pourquoi il me semble que si le texte de la Charte devait être une déclaration politique il lui manquerait encore une partie, à mon avis, sans changer ce qui existe. Enfin quelques remarques particulières sur des amendements, Monsieur le Président, j'en ai fait plusieurs avec des bonheurs divers qui ont été retenues ou pas retenues. J'énumérerai simplement qu'à mon avis sur l'article 44 on ne peut pas mentionner des droits qui ne sont pas encore en vigueur dans l'Union, il faut se maintenir au mandat de Cologne qui demande les droits existants, sur l'article 2 il est difficile de mentionner une compétence qui est purement nationale et sur l'article 3 je crois que cela pose un problème juridique de dire, d'interdire simplement le clonage reproductif des êtres humains et de dire dans les explications que rien n'interdit que le législateur interdise d'autres formes de clonage. Pourquoi, parce que si cette Charte devait être contraignante et seulement dans cette hypothèse là si elle devait être contraignante et bien je ne vois pas comment des personnes ne pourraient pas considérer qu'elles ont un droit à pratiquer le clonage thérapeutique sur la base du texte actuel. Par conséquent, si vraiment on veut laisser le droit aux nations d'interdire ou de ne pas interdire le clonage thérapeutique, et bien à mon avis il faut le dire dans le corps de l'article 3, il faut faire remonter cette phrase de l'explication au niveau du corps de l'article 3.

PRESIDENT

Merci Monsieur BERTU.

L'article 50 paragraphe 2 explique le champ d'application de la Charte. Je ne pense pas qu'on puisse dire que ce soit un problème, c'est une définition de ce qui peut être couvert par la Charte.

M. FAYOT

Oui M. le Président, quand on dit d'un texte qu'il est globalement positif, cela veut dire qu'il comporte beaucoup d'aspects positifs, mais qu'il y a aussi un certain nombre d'ombres au tableau. Pour moi une des ombres principales c'est le fait que les droits sociaux ont été assez dilués, ce qui pourrait être rattrapé si au moins on pouvait avoir une mention de la charte sociale à l'article 52. C'est donc une demande que je formule expressément. Une autre ombre au tableau pour moi c'est la disparition dans l'article 11.2 de la garantie du pluralisme. J'ai entendu à cet égard une argumentation qui ne me convainc pas. En effet, le pluralisme comment est-ce qu'on l'obtient? On l'obtient par la concurrence et la concurrence c'est une question de marché intérieur et cette concurrence ne peut se faire que s'il y a vraiment une limitation de la concentration des médias. Et c'est pour cela d'ailleurs que le commissaire MONTI dans la Commission de Monsieur SANTER avait élaboré une proposition pour le pluralisme et contre la concentration qui a été mis dans les tiroirs pour un certain nombre de raisons. Je voulais le dire parce que je ne comprends pas que l'on puisse avec l'argumentation que le pluralisme ne soit pas du ressort de l'Union européenne remplacé, garanti pas respecté et j'insiste vraiment sur le fait que la liberté et le pluralisme devraient être garantis, c'est dans la législation même du marché intérieur. En ce qui concerne la querelle sur le préambule, je voudrais encore une fois relever, puisque pas mal de gens ici ont toujours dit qu'il faut se rapprocher dans la mesure du possible de la Convention des droits de l'homme, je voudrais donner encore une fois lecture du texte du préambule de la Convention des droits de l'homme qui comprend une formulation que si on l'avait prise, on aurait épargné pas mal de débats un peu acrimonieux. En effet on dit dans cet alinéa 6 que l'Europe a un patrimoine commun d'idéal et de traditions politiques de respect de la liberté et de prééminence du droit. C'est parfait comme expression et je pense que c'est beaucoup mieux que ce que nous avons mis là. Enfin, dernière remarque M. le président, je suis pour une charte contraignante et justiciable. Je pense que, évidemment c'est une discussion politique qui ne va pas se faire ici dans cette Convention, mais évidemment le Conseil dans cette optique devrait se préoccuper de la façon dont les deux cours à l'avenir dans l'optique d'une charte justiciable devraient se comporter l'une par rapport à l'autre pour éviter évidemment la sécurité juridique et pour étudier d'abord les problèmes qui pourraient naître de l'existence des deux cours. Cela étant, pour moi en tout cas, le travail de cette Convention, ensemble avec le Secrétariat et le Présidium, a été un travail intéressant, parce que pour la première fois, je voudrais le souligner quand même, 46 parlementaires, 15 représentants d'Etats membres, un représentant de la Commission, ont fait ensemble un texte et je pense que c'est modèle pour l'avenir. Merci.

PRESIDENT

Je vous remercie M. FAYOT et excusez-nous de vous avoir fait attendre mais c'est malheureusement une situation à laquelle nous sommes confrontés. Nous essayons d'être aussi équitables que possible. Le prochain orateur, qui ne parlera pas plus de 3 minutes, c'est M. MELOGRANI.

M. MELOGRANI

Merci monsieur le président. La charte est un compromis que j'accepte et comme tous les compromis je l'accepte en étant à moitié satisfaisant et à moitié insatisfait de choses et d'autres. Donc je ne me limiterai que à deux brèves considérations. Une concerne l'article 19. Concerne l'extradition. Au point 2, on dit "nul ne peut être éloigné, expulsé ou extradé vers un Etat où il existe un risque sérieux d'être soumis à la peine de mort, à la torture ou à d'autres peines humaines. Alors mon observation touche à l'adjectif sérieux. Je me suis demandé longuement si fallait le laisser ou pas et j'ai des doutes. Je suis certain que mon peuple en lisant ça dira, un risque léger d'être soumis à la torture, ça suffit pas. Bon, il est exact qu'il y a toujours dans les prisons une tradition de mauvais traitements que les Français, M. BRAIBANT ont appelé "passage à tabac" mais entre ça et la torture, il y a un pas, donc je propose d'enlever cet adjectif sérieux. Enfin, et pour être bref, je voudrais me référer à l'observation du commissaire VITORINO. Moi aussi je pense que l'article 51.1 dans sa rédaction actuelle n'est pas satisfaisant. Si j'ai bien compris ce qu'il a dit, non seulement pour les raisons qu'il a invoquées, mais aussi parce que ça pourrait permettre à l'Union européenne certains abus, il faudrait limiter avec la nouvelle formule, l'éventualité très éloignée d'abus de la part de l'Union européenne. Merci.

PRESIDENT

Merci MELOGRANI. Le 51.1 tel qu'il a été amendé pose problème. Je partage tout à fait votre point de vue. Mme BRAX.

Mme BRAX

Le texte est acceptable mais il y a toujours un mais, nous avons tous ici certains points qui nous déçoivent un peu et j'en mentionnerai deux. Les droits des minorités par exemple a été totalement oublié dans la Charte. Lorsqu'on pense aux droits de l'homme et bien le point fondamental c'est de s'assurer qu'un traitement égal soit appliqué à tous et là tout particulièrement il faut prêter attention aux droits des minorités, que ce soit des minorités culturelles, ethniques ou autres. Encourager la stabilité de nos sociétés, donc tout le monde devrait pouvoir bénéficier de ces droits dans une société démocratique et là le Conseil de l'Europe récemment a adopté deux textes récemment concernent les minorités et c'est la voie à suivre. Les membres finlandais auraient voulu définir dans la Charte des droits fondamentaux aussi les droits des minorités. Les minorités ne sont mentionnées qu'en passant dans l'article antidiscrimination. Nous aurions souhaité préciser, parler de minorités ethniques, linguistiques et religieuses. C'est la procédure normale dans un grand nombre d'autres documents internationaux. Normalement, il y a des références de ce type dans les autres documents internationaux. Si non, le reste du texte est tout à fait acceptable. Nous en parlerons certainement au présidium mais, j'espère que l'on prendra cette observation en considération. Autre observation, à l'article 27, il y a une nouvelle rédaction se référant au droit des travailleurs et de leur syndicat et leurs droits en cas de conflit d'intérêt, de recourir à des actions collectives. On mentionne même la grève, le droit de grève parce que le droit de grève fait partie du droit d'association et c'est dit clairement à l'article 6 de la charte sociale. Donc, selon le texte que nous avons maintenant, le droit de grève est pris en considération et cette nouvelle formule ne garantit peut être pas le droit de grève aussi clairement que les conventions collectives. Est-ce-que cela veut dire que les gens ont le droit de grève au niveau des syndicats, parce que sinon le texte devrait être amendé dans ce texte. Merci.

PRESIDENT

Oui, le 27 c'est un compromis, comme la question des minorités jusqu'à maintenant. On y retournera, je ne sais pas qui. Mais, je prévois un avenir en Europe où cela sera nécessaire de le faire.

M.FISCHBACH, observateur du Conseil de l'Europe

Je serai très bref, et d'ailleurs qu'est-ce-que vous voulez que je vous dise après que Lord GOLDSMITH le gardien suprême de la Convention européenne des droits de l'Homme ait donné son accord au texte qui nous a été proposé, je crois que Lord GOLDSMITH a dit des choses qu'il fallait dire, je voudrais tout simplement ajouter que notre souci ayant toujours été celui de veiller à la cohérence et à l'harmonie entre les instruments existants en matière des droits de l'Homme. Evidemment, en premier lieu entre la Charte et la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, le texte tel qu'il nous est soumis rencontre largement cette préoccupation et le texte nous donne satisfaction du point de vue de la sécurité juridique. Ceci est vrai tant pour l'article 50 alinéa 3 qui a le mérite de dissiper tout malentendu pour ce qui est du sens et de la portée des droits correspondants garantis par la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, ceci est vrai également pour l'article 52 qui fixe donc le niveau minimum de protection. Ceci dit M. le Président. et sans vouloir me répéter, et sans me tromper sur le mandat de cette convention, il importera le moment venu où l'on envisagera d'intégrer la charte dans le traité de l'Union européenne de songer à des mécanismes complémentaires indispensables et propres à écarter tout dérapage dans l'interaction entre la Charte et la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Merci.

Mme AZEVEDO

Merci M. le Président. Je voudrais faire quelques remarques en commençant par féliciter le Présidium et le Secrétariat pour la qualité de leur travail. En effet, ils ont vraiment travaillé en temps record, les délais étant très courts, plus courts que ceux prévus à Cologne. Nous sommes tous conscients du fait que la portée politique et la composition de la Convention nous ont permis vraiment de représenter un modèle, dont il est même question à la conférence intergouvernementale. Après de nombreuses discussions, de nombreux débats, nous avons maintenant le projet complet de charte des droits fondamentaux. Nous avons donc rempli le mandat de Cologne. Ce projet me semble relativement équilibré. Les droits figurant dans ce projet représentent une solution de compromis politique qui permettra de renforcer la position de l'Union européenne face aux défis que nous devons relever dans un avenir proche donc, c'est une contribution tout à fait positive. Pour les citoyens européens cette charte représente une chance. Une chance pour renforcer le sens de la citoyenneté européenne. Cette charte, comme nous l'avons déjà dit, n'apparaît pas ex nihilo de nombreux droits existent déjà dans d'autres textes. Nous nous sommes souvent posé la question de l'adhésion de l'Union à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Donc, là nous avons encore beaucoup de chemin à parcourir, mais la Charte selon moi est un pas sur la bonne voie. Et, nous devons donc évaluer ce progrès comme un progrès modéré mais un progrès tout à fait remarquable.

PRESIDENT

Merci. M. O'MALLEY est le prochain sur ma liste mais, M. KORTHALS a demandé la parole pour une minute.

M. KORTHALS ALTES

Ce matin, je voulais ajouter un commentaire que M. DEHAENE a fait d'ailleurs. Qu'il faudrait qu'il y ait une référence dans la Charte à l'article 52 aux instruments qu'il a mentionnés. Mais, je voudrais ajouter quelque chose. Nous sommes déçus que, au cours des débats, le paragraphe environnement a été un peu négligé. Et, je voudrais savoir si c'est pas possible de parler non seulement de la politique de l'Union mais des institutions de l'Union. Parce que la protection de l'environnement c'est une question d'application et, ni on ne dit pas clairement comment on applique la politique de l'environnement, le citoyen européen ne va pas y comprendre....en ce qui concerne ce qu'a dit M. FISCHBACH, je peux me rallier absolument à tout ce qu'il a dit, si les chefs de gouvernement décident que il faudrait que la charte soit contraignante et force de loi alors, le texte sur les compétences devra être introduit dans le traité. Merci .

PRESIDENT

Merci pour ces commentaires.

O'MALLEY ou O'KENNEDY- O'MALLEY d'abord, d'accord

M. O'MALLEY

Je croyais devoir parler plus tard. C'est pour cela que j'ai été surpris. Bien. Je dois dire que malgré ce qui me semble être un consensus très fort vis-à-vis de la Charte, que moi j'ai des réserves très fortes, je regarde cela du point de vue de l'Etat membre qui a une constitution qui traite des droits fondamentaux et une jurisprudence très approfondie dans ce domaine et, les dispositions de l'article 50 me gênent beaucoup, parce qu'il me semble qu'en dernière analyse les droits fondamentaux décidés et appliqués par la Cour suprême irlandaise et comme dans les autres Etats membres par les corps constitutionnels, et bien ce trouveraient peut être dans une situation où l'arbitre en dernier ressort de ces droits fondamentaux, dans l'avenir, ce sera la Cour de Justice à Luxembourg. Alors, s'il y a des doutes quant au champ d'application de la charte, alors ce point sera déterminé par la Cour européenne et pas par la Haute Cour des Etats membres. Je ne suis pas sûr que les citoyens d'un grand nombre de nos Etats membres soient conscients de la signification de cela et que, leurs droits constitutionnels fondamentaux seront exercés en dehors de leur Etat membre. Je crois que l'Union va peut être trop loin dans ce domaine, et que il faut réfléchir aux conséquences de tout cela. Dans toute constitution on fait une distinction entre les droits civiques et politiques d'une part qui doivent toujours être couverts par les tribunaux et les droits économiques et sociaux qui sont dans les démocraties les plus évoluées considérés comme du ressort de la législature et mélanger les deux à mon avis c'est ignorer des politiques très anciennes qui donnent au judiciaire le droit de déterminer dans le contexte judiciaire et que les problèmes économiques découlent de la société. Je crois qu'avec le plus grand respect pour mes collègues ici présents, c'est un problème grave et, en tant qu'homme politique, et vieux membre du Parlement, depuis 30 ans, je ne suis pas sûr du tout que, il soit juste que l'arbitre en dernier ressort de politique économique et sociale incombe au judiciaire plutôt qu'aux élus de la Nation. Je crois que c'est pour cela que nous sommes élus, et ne pense pas qu'il faille transférer ce rôle et je pense que, à long terme, les citoyens européens ne seront pas d'accord, parce qu'ils perdront le contrôle de ces politiques. Si leurs élus, ceux qu'ils choisissent ont perdu eux-mêmes le droit de formuler ces politiques. Je crois que c'est là un domaine dangereux dans lequel s'aventurer et, je crains que le citoyen n'apprécie pas le sens profond de ce que l'on propose ici. Si, cela devient juridiquement applicable, obligatoire, cela sera une des modifications les plus fondamentales jamais accomplie dans l'Union. Je crois qu'il faut se hâter lentement dans ce domaine. Je sais qu'un travail énorme a été fait pour arriver à ce texte et, je ne veux absolument pas diminuer le mérite de ceux qui ont travaillé sans relâche et rapidement pour essayer d'arriver à ce texte mais, c'est pas une question de rédaction, simplement, il y a des questions fondamentales impliquées ici, et c'est pas simplement le Conseil européen qui doit examiner tout ça, je crois qu'un avertissement quand même devrait être lancé pour savoir où on va dans cet exercice, car cela peut avoir des conséquences très importantes et à très long terme. Merci.

M. PATIJN

Merci M. le Président. D'abord, des amendements ont été proposés qui ont été discutés par le Présidium hier. Alors, globalement, je le félicite de son débat et de ses amendements qui pour moi précisent le texte. Pour être complet, je voudrais m'associer à la remarque qui a été faite par M.(?) à propos du 51 point 3 et je m'associe à M.(?) à propos de l'article 52 et de ce qu'il faut lui apporter comme élément complémentaire. C'est probablement la dernière fois que nous nous retrouvons et, je voudrais vous donner mon avis, mon appréciation politique de l'exercice auquel nous nous sommes livré. Je pense essentiellement qu'il s'agit d'un exercice très intéressant qui en a vraiment valu la peine. Quelque chose qui a permis de clarifier où nous en sommes dans le débat politique au sein de l'Union. Et, il y a eu des points marquant dans le débat. D'abord, je constate auprès de mes collègues qu'ils sont très largement favorables à la mise en place d'une charte à peu près dans la forme que nous avons là sur la table. Deuxième constatation, je constate qu'il y a un large consensus à propos de la place de cette charte dans l'ordre institutionnel et juridique de l'Union européenne, donc, nous sommes bien d'accord sur les groupes cibles, sur les instances visées, il ne s'agit pas en l'occurrence de procéder à un nouveau transfert de compétences et il s'agit, avant tout, d'assurer une bonne mise en application du principe de subsidiarité par le biais de cette charte et de son esprit. Alors, je crois, qu'il y a unanimité pour dire que cette charte ne remplace pas la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme et, ne remplace pas non plus le rôle central joué par les institutions de Strasbourg, sur le plan de la protection des droits de l'homme. Si, je vous dis tout cela, ce n'est parce que je m'inquiète à propos du respect des droits de l'homme dans les différentes capitales de l'Union européenne, je m'inquiéterais plutôt du côté de Kief ou Ankara. Je constate que le travail n'est pas encore tout à fait terminé, ce qui ne me surprend pas, parce que le temps qui nous a été imparti pour un exercice aussi délicat a quand même été très court. Je donne quelques exemples. Certains articles, ne sont pas suffisamment mûrs, je citerai l'article 15 "droit au travail" par facilité, nous nous sommes limités aux citoyens de l'Union européenne, nous ne précisons pas suffisamment bien la position des gens dans l'Union, qui n'ont pas nécessairement la nationalité d'un des pays de l'Union mais qui y vivent pourtant depuis peut être deux ou trois générations, nous n'en n'avons pas suffisamment parlé de ce cas là. Deuxième point, que l'on a évoqué à plusieurs reprises, l'article 51 point 1 "clause de limitation". Elle est formulée d'après moi de façon beaucoup trop laxiste et je ne suis pas satisfait non plus de ce qu'à expliqué le commissaire ???? à propos de l'objectif d'intérêt général. Supposons que le Conseil des Ministres des Affaires étrangères, instaure un boycott, un embargo contre le pays X, dans un but d'intérêt général certainement, est-ce-que c'est le genre de chose qui doit être prévue ici et, est-ce-que cela donne le droit de limiter les droits de l'homme, je ne crois pas, ce n'est pas ce que l'on veut dire, donc, pour moi, l'article tel qu'il existe dans sa forme actuelle n'est pas suffisamment explicite. Point suivant. Je crois qu'il est irresponsable d'offrir le texte tel quel à nos citoyens, plus particulièrement à nos avocats, je crois que ce texte réécrit en fait des sources de droit déjà existantes et donc, le texte n'est pas simple du tout, et doit être expliqué. Le Secrétariat avait préparé quelque chose, qui sur le plan technique était tout à fait raisonnable et pertinent. Je crois que la Convention elle-même, ou le Sommet, ou une autre instance de l'Union européenne doit se charger d'une tâche d'explication. Enfin, je dirai qu'il y a quelques articles qui ne sont pas à leur place. L'article 35, par exemple, "les services d'intérêt général" cela n'a rien avoir avec des droits fondamentaux. Président, en conclusion, quel est le travail qui nous attend encore. Si nous présentons ce texte au Sommet, dans l'espoir de voir transformer cette charte en quelque chose de contraignant, c'est-à-dire qu'il faudra veiller alors à lui donner une forme qui lui donne le même statut que les traités. Si nous voulons cela, il y a encore pas mal de choses à faire. Parce que d'abord, nous devons bien comprendre ce que cela signifie. L'accès de l'individu aux tribunaux européens, comment allons nous régler cela. Comment allons nous régler la répartition des pouvoirs entre les tribunaux et la Cour de Luxembourg. Alors, il y a toute la question de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme et de cette charte par rapport à cette Convention. En deux mots comme en cent, si nous voulons vraiment transmettre un message valable au sommet, ce message doit être le suivant. Voilà, nous avons ici un projet, nous sommes très avancés sur la bonne voie, mais il y a encore du travail à faire, et enfin, le Sommet doit prendre lui même ses propres responsabilités. S'il pense qu'il y a encore du travail à faire, il doit donner un mandat très clair en précisant qui doit faire le travail et sur quel point. Il n'est pas possible de rester simplement dans le vague, et de tirer quelques conclusions un peu au hasard à Biarritz. Enfin, je voulais remercier très chaleureusement le Présidium et le Secrétariat pour tous les efforts qui ont été faits, pour toute la patience aussi dont ils ont fait preuve dans le cadre des réunions des groupes de travail, des rencontres avec les Parlements internationaux dont je fais partie, etc... et je voudrais aussi que vous transmettiez tout notre respect à M. HERZOG.

M. LEINEN

La charte représente certainement une étape sur la voie d'une identité commune européenne, je pense que le sens, l'importance de tout ce projet sera visible lorsque la Charte sera proclamée solennellement lorsque les citoyens seront informés de tout notre travail. C'est une charte correspondant au modèle de société que nous choisissons en Europe, un modèle pour l'intérieur et que nous voulons montrer à l'extérieur également. Mais, je pense que l'expérience de cette convention est une expérience tout à fait réussie. Au bout de neuf mois, nous avons obtenu un résultat, alors que la conférence intergouvernementale qui travaille aussi depuis 9 mois pratiquement et qui traite pour la 3ème fois de sujets qu'elle avait commencé à traiter à Maastricht et puis ensuite à Amsterdam, ... on ne sait toujours pas si au mois de décembre, ils seront capables de boucler leurs travaux. Donc, notre méthode, la méthode de la Convention, cette méthode parlementaire a vraiment fait la preuve de son efficacité et elle devrait servir de modèle pour d'autres projets. Je voudrais m'exprimer à propos de trois ou quatre sujets. La question du terme "spirituel" en allemand. Moi aussi j'ai regardé mon dictionnaire et en allemande cela se traduit par "geistig" En allemand, on parle des bases morales et spirituels "Geistig und moralisch". Au départ, quand Helmut KOHL est arrivé au pouvoir son programme s'intitulait "le tournant spirituel et moral" à ne pas confondre avec spiritueux naturellement. Mais, je ne vois pas comment on peut traduire "spirituel" en allemand par "religieux". Il y a naturellement les croyances religieuses et puis il y a des croyances qui ne sont pas religieuses mais je trouve que c'est une façon de limiter le concept de "geistig" de "spirituel". Encore un mot à propos de la liberté des médias. Nous avons parlé de l'affaiblissement que représentait le terme "respecté" plutôt que "garanti". Je pense que là vraiment, nous avons affaire à une véritable dramatisation. Nous avons aujourd'hui la société de l'informatique, du téléphone, de la télévision tout cela sera intégré avec donc des médias radicalement nouveaux, des phénomènes de concentration que nous n'avions jamais connus jusqu'à présent donc, là il aurait peut être été nécessaire d'avoir une prise de position plus claire. A l'article 12, il serait bon de prévoir des syndicats au niveau européen. Cela c'est quelque chose qui devrait être précisé et à propos de l'article 52, je pense que les représentants des gouvernements se sont prononcés en faveur d'une référence à la Charte sociale européenne alors que les parlementaires nationaux et les parlementaires européens ne se sont jamais exprimés contre. La Convention européenne des droits de l'homme et la Charte sociale européenne représentent une norme minimale de protection. Donc puisse nous en sommes à la dernière réunion et que vous aurez votre dernière réunion du présidium ce soir, essayez de tenir compte de cette référence symbolique à la Charte sociale européenne. Nous avons à faire ici à une charte de droit, une charte de droit selon moi n'a de sens que si elle est contraignante, donc la proclamation solennelle ne sera qu'un premier pas et le Sommet de Nice devra prévoir une procédure et un calendrier permettant à cette charte d'être intégrée dans les juridictions des Etats membres. Encore un mot de remerciement au Secrétariat et au présidium pour leur excellent travail.

PRESIDENT

Merci M. LEINEN.

M. GRIFFITHS

Merci monsieur le président. Alors, je crois que la Convention a toutes les raisons d'être satisfaite de la Charte que nous avons sous les yeux, étant donné que le mandat de Cologne pouvait être interprété de différentes façons et que au cours de nos réunions nous avons vu que ça a été examiné sous des angles différents, mais maintenant nous avons une Charte qui maintient l'essentiel de ce que nous voulons pour le citoyen européen et il y a une déclaration claire des droits fondamentaux dans le contexte des compétences de l'Union européenne et fondée sur le droit européen et son application par le biais de directives et de la législation dans les Etats membres et je crois que la Convention et le présidium en rassemblant tous les fils conducteurs sont arrivés à mettre au point une charte où l'essentiel est préservé. J'ai été heureux d'entendre M. FISCHBACH parce que je voulais entendre ce que la Cour européenne avait à dire au sujet de la Charte et je crois que nous sommes maintenant en mesure de, bon on a peut-être tous nos petites hésitations, moi j'aurais voulu que l'on mentionne les minorités et malheureusement ça n'a pas été possible mais quand à la Charte dans son ensemble, je crois que nous pouvons vraiment nous dire que nous avons vraiment fait un pas en avant. Il y a toute série de droits fondamentaux et qui s'accompagnent de responsabilités pour le citoyen et le résident européen qu'ils devront accepter à l'avenir. Bon ce qui se passera dans l'avenir, ce n'est plus de notre ressort, mais nous avons je crois bien accompli le mandat très difficile qu'on nous avez donné à Cologne.

M. O' KENNEDY

Merci monsieur le président. D'abord je dirai que, à mon avis, le présidium accomplit une tâche énorme en nous présentant un texte, avec ses amendements dans les délais et la procédure prévue. Bon, dès la première réunion je m'étais demandé si une convention content plus de 62 ou 63, 64 membres pouvait vraiment travailler valablement pour arriver à sortir une charte du type de celle que nous pouvons accepter aujourd'hui. Je crois que les procédures que nous avons dû suivre de toute évidence ont créé des problèmes, pas simplement en ce qui concerne notre travail, ensemble nous étions nous animés du même esprit, mais vis-à-vis de la situation dans laquelle nous sommes aujourd'hui votre coprésident était un homme extrêmement courtois et ils nous a dit, je ne dis pas que ce n'est pas exact pour vous aussi, je parlais de lui, donc il m'a surpris ce matin quand il a dit que maintenant il n'y avait plus de temps à perdre avec les amendements, qu'on avait dépassé ce stade. Alors à quoi sert, je voudrais le savoir, cette réunion d'aujourd'hui. On nous dit que la prochaine sera la conclusion officielle, alors j'ai de grandes réserves sur la procédure que nous avons dû suivre et je crois que cette charte en souffre, souffre d'un manque de clarté, d'un manque de précision, ça c'était mes observations générales, je passerai aux points de détail aussi. Mon gouvernement qui m'a mandaté ici, comme d'autres est tout à fait favorable au développement de tous les principes qui sont à la base des droits fondamentaux dans l'Union. Tout à fait, nous avons dans mon pays une histoire qui nous a obligés à fixer en détail dans la constitution ces droits fondamentaux et donc je veux me rallier à tout effort pour renforcer ces droits pour les citoyens que nous avons depuis si longtemps et mes préoccupations concernent ... mes réserves, je les ai exprimées à plusieurs reprises mais je vais les répéter ici. Je les ai exprimées d'abord au président en ce qui concerne ce qui, à notre avis, était un manque de clarté par rapport à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. En ce qui concerne l'article 51, je voudrais dire quel est mon avis et celui du gouvernement que je représente. Il faut examiner ça de près pour voir si à ce stade - on n'a pas eu l'occasion, on aurait dû - si à ce stade on peut dissiper l'impression qu'on pourrait avoir un conflit ici avec la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Il faut que je dise à mon gouvernement ce qu'il en est et vraiment je ne suis pas sûr que ça ne crée pas un conflit avec la convention à ce stade. Dans ce contexte, en passant, je dirai, toujours en ce qui concerne l'article 51, - c'est un amendement linguistique, là - j'appuie ce que mon collègue britannique a dit au sujet de l'amendement rédactionnel pour changer "forwarding" par "providing" parce que providing est plus efficace. Deuxièmement, à l'article 51, je suis surpris de la proposition du Praesidium d'ouvrir les mots "autres intérêts légitimes" dans une société démocratique parce que c'est une notion qui existe non seulement dans la Convention des droits de l'homme mais aussi dans la constitution des États membres et autres démocraties et j'espère que la Commission ou le Praesidium pourront revoir leur position. En ce qui concerne les dispositions économiques et sociales, là aussi nous avons encore de grands doutes. Bien sûr, je parle des droits économiques et sociaux que j'ai mentionnés ici à plusieurs reprises, qui sont à la base de notre constitution et alors là nous avons des problèmes parce que bien sûr, ces droits-là ne sont pas inférieurs aux autres, mais ils sont différents. Ils ne sont pas applicables de façon judiciaire, sauf dans la mesure où les législations nationales le disent. Je vais conclure, etc je suis conscient du fait que durant des mois j'ai répété que ces dispositions selon les législations nationales devraient apaiser la plupart de mes préoccupations. Ça, ce n'est pas reflété dans le texte de la façon horizontale que nous souhaiterions. Donc je me félicite du travail qui a été accompli, des progrès réalisés mais je dois dire au nom d'un petit pays qui est vraiment engagé dans la protection des droits fondamentaux, nous sommes préoccupés du manque de clarté et du risque de double emploi. Je ferai rapport dans ce sens à mon gouvernement et j'espère que j'aurai une réponse claire au cours de notre dernière réunion. Je vous remercie.

PRESIDENT

Nous partageons tous vos doutes, mais cela pourra peut-être aider votre gouvernement de connaître la lettre très claire qui a été envoyée à votre gouvernement par les représentants européens.

M. CISNEROS

Merci M. le président. Suite à la dernière intervention, je pense pouvoir dire malgré ce que je viens d'entendre que nous avons fait du bon travail et que nous sommes parvenus à un bon texte. Bon, je ne vais pas essayer d'atteindre le niveau d'éloquence de mes collègues qui ont félicité le secrétariat, la présidence, les conseillers techniques pour leur excellent travail, qui nous ont permis de parvenir à un si bon résultat. Je pense que pour une charte des droits fondamentaux, c'est vraiment le meilleur texte que nous puissions obtenir. Je suis d'accord avec certains de mes collègues estimant que c'est le meilleur texte possible. Nous avons rencontré différentes difficultés qui ne découlaient pas seulement du mandat de Cologne mais qui découlaient de l'hétérogénéité de nos positions, de nos différences idéologiques, des différentes situations institutionnelles de certains rédacteurs qui dépendaient de leur gouvernement, d'autres représentant leur peuple aux Parlements nationaux, d'autres représentant leur peuple au Parlement européen, donc nous avons vraiment rassemblé différentes perspectives, pas seulement des perspectives idéologiques mais, j'insiste, sur nos différences institutionnelles également. Ce qui a abouti à un texte dans lequel naturellement chacun d'entre nous pourrait faire une longue liste d'insuffisances, de limites, de frustrations mais au bout du compte, c'est un compromis, c'est le résultat d'une transaction et ça, ce sont les grandeurs et les servitudes de toutes les démocraties. Donc, je pense que ce sur quoi nous avons dû céder permet à d'autres d'accepter le texte et je pense pouvoir dire que le texte dans son ensemble ne présente aucune difficulté du point de vue de l'acquis institutionnel espagnol et je pense pouvoir dire que le congrès des députés espagnol pourra l'accepter sans difficultés. En écoutant M. JANSSON ce matin j'ai cru comprendre que l'heure n'était plus de déposer des amendements. À part sur les textes que nous avons reçus ce matin qui représentent une modification des textes qui nous avaient servi de bases auparavant. Alors je voudrais me rallier à tous ceux qui sont intervenus avant moi pour dire que la modification à l'article 11, paragraphe 2 n'est pas bienvenue. Elle fera l'objet d'une interprétation restrictive en matière de garantie et de protection puisque la garantie était nettement supérieure dans la rédaction précédente. Garantir, ce n'est pas la même chose que respecter. Il ne s'agit pas de flatter les médias, il ne s'agit pas non plus d'avoir peur de leur censure, la liberté d'expression, le droit à l'information n'appartiennent pas aux médias, ce n'est pas leur propriété, c'est la propriété des citoyens. Au jour le jour, dans l'application effective naturellement, ce sont les médias qui administrent ce droit d'information et d'expression. Mais la garantie de la liberté d'expression et du pluralisme, en évitant trop de concentration, trop d'hégémonie qui aboutiraient à la perte du pluralisme, tout ceci à mon avis trouvait une formulation beaucoup plus heureuse dans le texte précédent. Alors je voudrais demander au praesidium de bien vouloir revenir sur cet article. Et à propos de l'article 51, paragraphe 1, là aussi j'interviens avec peut-être encore davantage de conviction et davantage de véhémence après avoir entendu le Commissaire VITORINO.

Naturellement, nous avons des droits fondamentaux garantis pour les citoyens. Tout ce qui est prévu ici dans cette charte, si nous voulions tout couvrir des concepts politiques indéterminés n'ont pas leur place dans un texte comme celui-ci. On aurait un catalogue sans fin puisque nous avons là affaire à un texte au-delà de la constitution, un texte meta-constitutionnel en quelque sorte. Je pense que cette réflexion était intéressante lorsqu'il est question d'intérêts généraux, nous n'avons pas trouvé une formulation suffisante et je me permettrai encore une fois de vous demander de bien vouloir réfléchir à la possibilité de revenir au texte précédent. Merci Monsieur le président.

M. ROGRIGUEZ BEREIJO

M. le président, puisque nous arrivons à la fin de nos travaux, des travaux longs, difficiles, j'ai examiné en détail le résultat auquel nous aboutissons, nous pouvons tous trouver des motifs d'insatisfaction sur certains points, suite en particulier aux dernières modifications concernant le document 47, convent 47. Moi, j'aurais souhaité une discussion plus rigoureuse du point de vue juridique du contenu de certains droits et des libertés prévus au chapitre 2 avec une référence aux limites intrinsèques aux droits, à savoir qu'il y a des éléments qui ne sont pas couverts, qui ne sont pas compris par un droit, alors que lorsqu'il est question du droit à l'information et à la garantie du pluralisme pour les médias, lorsqu'il est question de la garantie des intérêts légitimes dans une société démocratique, la qualité du législateur en matière de droits fondamentaux est essentielle. Nous n'avons pas énormément de précisions également dans la définition des droits économiques et sociaux selon leur nature en tant que normes juridiques, article 51. L'autonomie de la charte n'est pas suffisamment affirmée à l'article 51, paragraphe 3. La formule de compromis offerte par le praesidium ce matin est acceptable par tous. Du moins c'est ce qui est dit dans l'explication. Il s'agit de l'autonomie juridique de la charte. Le sens juridique des droits de cette charte sont ceux qui sont cités ici. Et pas les droits qui sont cités dans d'autres textes juridiques étrangers au droit communautaire. Je conclurai, Monsieur le président, en disant qu'un point de vue juridique et d'un point de vue politique, cette charte me semble satisfaisante. Je pense pouvoir formuler un jugement positif. Je pense que nous sommes parvenus à un texte de consensus conformément au mandat de Cologne respectant les compétences et les traités sans modifier les constitutions nationales et sans créer des obligations financières nouvelles pour les Etats membres. Je pense que nous avons ainsi respecté le mandat du Conseil européen. Le point de départ méthodologique cité au mois de décembre dernier par le président Roman Herzog ; je pense d'ailleurs qu'en notre nom à tous vous devez lui transmettre notre affection, notre admiration et notre profond respect. Ce principe méthodologique qu'ancien comme si nous allions établir un texte contraignant du point de vue juridique, nous avons comme si, depuis le départ grâce à ce principe posé par le président Herzog et je pense que cela a été une très bonne chose parce que cela nous a permis de trouver une solution de compromis, équilibrée, réaliste et prudente. Si vous me permettez une comparaison, j'irais jusqu'à dire que ce résultat c'est un petit peu ce qu'on demande à la jeune fille qui va se marier d'offrir quelque chose de neuf, quelque chose d'ancien et quelque chose de bleu. Alors nous avons quelque chose d'ancien, les libertés, les droits politiques classiques, nous avons quelque chose de nouveau : le droit à la bonne gestion des ressources publiques, le droit au respect de la confidentialité des données concernant la vie privée, la bioéthique et nous avons quelque chose de bleu également : l'âme de cette charte des droits. Les droits économiques et sociaux. Un ajout, un apport, une nouveauté par rapport au droit communautaire. La valeur de la charte dépasse toute discussion. Je pense que nous avons eu raison de laisser de côté des préoccupations de principe. Est-ce que c'est simplement une déclaration politique, est-ce que c'est un document contraignant juridiquement. Tout dépendra du Conseil européen de Biarritz et de Nice. Mais ce texte, de toutes les façons, a une valeur juridique indéniable parce qu'il comble une lacune, une lacune dans le droit communautaire. Nous n'avions pas de charte des droits. Le citoyen européen, aujourd'hui, se retrouve au cœur de la construction européenne avec des droits fondamentaux.

PRESIDENT

Merci, pendant neuf mois nous avons eu la possibilité d'écouter le professeur Rodriguez. Aujourd'hui, nous écoutons le poète Rodriguez. C'est parfait. Peter Bowness.

LORD BOWNESS

Merci, Monsieur le président. Je voudrais ajouter mes remerciements au présidium en particulier pour les amendements soumis aujourd'hui parce que ces amendements ont facilité ensuite l'adoption du texte que nous avons sous les yeux. Au début de la convention nous nous sommes beaucoup préoccupés des conflits entre la convention européenne des droits de l'homme et cette charte et des heurts possibles entre les deux. Et j'ai été rassuré parce que nos observateurs nous ont dit aujourd'hui et étant donné qu'on peut jamais être sûr de ce que les juges ou les tribunaux vont faire, on avait donné au maximum. On ne peut pas nous demander d'en faire plus. Et au cours du processus, en particulier en ce qui concerne les droits économiques et sociaux, nous avons pu arriver à un équilibre et cet équilibre a pu être à temps grâce à la rédaction des articles horizontaux et à la sauvegarde des différents articles nationaux. L'équilibre aussi en ce qui concerne la référence aux entreprises, à la propriété. Comme d'autres, j'ai mes doutes en ce qui concerne certains aspects qui figurent encore. Est-ce que le deuxième paragraphe de l'article 12 devrait figurer ; c'est une déclaration pas un droit. Je ne suis pas en désaccord mais j'ai mes doutes en ce qui concerne le 28, 25 mais enfin je n'insiste pas. Et j'espère que ceux qui veulent un amendement à 52 en incluant une référence à la charte sociale, reconnaîtront qu'il s'agit là d'un texte, d'un équilibre très délicat et je crois que la convention sur les droits de l'homme il faut reconnaître que c'est quelque chose de très spécial qui justifie une mention. Moi, je suis heureux que les observations des Parlements nationaux, des groupes nationaux aient été soumis au bureau et au vu des commentaires faits cet après-midi, et bien nous voyons que les présidents nationaux n'avaient pas reçu de mandat particulier. Bon, j'espère que on ne va pas nous pousser à voter la charte dans son ensemble. Le mandat de Cologne dit clairement que la responsabilité ultime incombe au président en consultation avec le présidium. Un vote aujourd'hui en fait, ne ferait que refléter le point de vue de ceux qui sont ici dans la salle. Nous avons évité cela jusqu'à maintenant nous devons continuer de le faire. Nous aurons une procédure sur la base d'un consensus. Pas simplement un consensus parmi ceux qui se trouvent ici mais entre les différentes positions politiques nationales et c'est ce que ce devrait être. Je pense que cet après-midi a un sens, cela permettra au présidium de comprendre l'appui qu'il y a au texte. Pour moi, je pense que la convention a accompli son mandat et quoiqu'il se passera après, c'est aux chefs de gouvernement et d'État d'en décider. Je pense que mes collègues, mon parti et même dans l'opposition, même si ils ne sont pas tout à fait d'accord, ne pourront que reconnaître qu'il s'agit là d'un équilibre très délicat qui respecte le mandat et qui fait clairement comprendre à tous, y compris aux candidats à l'Union, que l'Union a des valeurs, des objectifs qui vont au-delà de simples valeurs du marché quelles qu'elles puissent être. Merci.

M. RODOTÀ

Monsieur le Président, cette charte aurait pu utiliser une langue plus directe. Faire des déclarations plus explicites qui parlent directement à l'esprit et au cœur des citoyens européens. Sur notre continent nous avons eu deux guerres parmi les plus graves et les plus tragiques de l'humanité. Nous aurions pu attendre de ce continent une contribution plus grande à la recherche de la paix à une époque où les discriminations, où l'intolérance sont de plus en plus grandes. Les actions publiques et privées ne doivent pas faire preuve d'irresponsabilité. Nous devons toujours lutter contre les inégalités. Je crains que nous n'ayons été trop prudents. Nous n'avons pas voulu parler du droit à l'autodétermination. Nous n'avons pas voulu parler du droit de choisir pour chaque femme et chaque homme. Le droit au travail, le droit à la santé, le droit à l'instruction, le droit à un revenu minimum, le droit au logement. Ne sont-ce pas là des droits évidents. Ce ne sont plus des droits au sens classique aujourd'hui. Ce sont les véritables conditions préalables de la démocratie. J'ai été surpris que nous soyons si timides. Au cours de sa longue histoire, l'Europe n'a jamais souffert parce qu'il y avait un excès de droits. Au contraire. L'Europe a souffert lorsque les droits étaient limités, violés, niés. Cependant, je ne pense pas que nous ayons raté une occasion précieuse. Au contraire. En dépit de ses limites, la charte selon moi représente une étape historique. C'est la première fois que nous avons une déclaration des droits au cours du nouveau millénaire. Grâce à cette déclaration, l'Europe n'est plus simplement une union économique et financière comme elle l'était jusqu'à présent. Elle devient aujourd'hui, le plus large espace de droit transnational. Alors que nous avons l'impression que c'est la logique du marché qui devenait la seule valeur de référence. La charte aujourd'hui réaffirme avec force et avec originalité les valeurs de solidarité et les liens sociaux. La charte essaie de renforcer les pouvoirs individuels et collectifs des citoyens. Elle réaffirme les droits traditionnels en les liant aux droits naissant de nouvelles sensibilités morales de la force des innovations scientifiques et technologiques, des responsabilités vis-à-vis de l'environnement et vis-à-vis des générations futures. La structure de la charte abat la distinction entre différentes sortes de droits. Elle en proclame le caractère indivisible. Ce cadre est donc un cadre riche. Et il serait incompréhensible d'affaiblir la charte, de ne pas respecter le mandat de Cologne en ne faisant pas référence à la charte sociale européenne révisée. Il n'y a pas de référence à une rémunération juste pour les travailleurs. Alors que c'est quand même un droit social fondamental. Dans le mandat de Cologne, c'est uniquement par l'intermédiaire de la charte que l'Union européenne acquiert sa pleine légitimité. C'est véritablement avec cette charte que l'on pourra parler d'acte de naissance de la citoyenneté européenne. Pour que les choses soient claires, il est indispensable que l'article 51 paragraphe 3 comprenne une formulation plus claire. Ou au moins qu'il n'y ait aucune hésitation entre nous. Dès aujourd'hui, la charte représente pour le citoyen européen la garantie de droits qui vont plus loin que ceux contenus dans la convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Cela doit être tout à fait clair. J'ai entendu des réserves au cours des réunions précédentes selon lesquelles les explications n'ont pas de valeur juridique ; cela c'est dit dans le document également. Mais ces explications nous n'en n'avons jamais discuté. Ces explications dans leur rédaction actuelle ne sont pas le reflet de nos discussions. Par conséquent, elles représentent un instrument de travail. Un point c'est tout. D'où ma réserve explicite à propos de ces explications. Maintenant quelle que soit la valeur qui leur sera attribuée, je souhaite que cette charte soit contraignante juridiquement. De toutes les façons, la charte modifiera immédiatement le cadre institutionnel européen. Aucun pas ne sera possible à l'avenir, dorénavant, sans tenir compte de cette charte et des droits fondamentaux qu'elle proclame. Il n'y a plus seulement les marchés et les relations commerciales aujourd'hui, les réseaux électroniques pour constituer les forces d'intégration ou d'unification du monde. L'Europe peut se lancer dans l'aventure de l'intégration grâce aux droits. Merci à la présidence pour le travail accompli. Et je voudrais dire, comme l'ont dit d'autres collègues, que ce travail n'aurait pas été possible sans la nouveauté institutionnelle représentée par notre convention même. Les rythmes des réformes constitutionnelles sont extrêmement lents. Or, nous, nous avons travaillé en neuf mois et cela je trouve que c'est déjà un miracle. Et j'espère qu'à l'avenir des miracles comme celui-ci se répéteront.

PRESIDENT

Merci Monsieur. J'ai encore quatre noms sur la liste des intervenants. Cinq pardon. Cinq membres titulaires et quatre suppléants. Olsen, ..., Nikula, Einem. Suppléants, Mme Lalumière, Rack, Van den Burg et M. Van Dam. Monsieur Olsen.

M. OLSEN

Ce document se base sur un grand principe, à savoir faire comprendre aux citoyens via cette charte que l'Union européenne est également une communauté des valeurs. Des valeurs qui ne peuvent pas être exprimées en termes d'argent. Première constatation. Une deuxième constatation : l'Union a des droits et des obligations vis-à-vis des citoyens et inversement les citoyens ont aussi des droits vis-à-vis des organes de l'Union. Je pense que le texte actuel arrive à se montrer à la hauteur de ces objectifs. C'est pourquoi, j'aimerais remercier le présidium. Je voudrais toutefois dire une chose encore. Des explications ont été préparées à propos des différents articles. Elles sont très utiles, ces explications. Elles permettent en effet de clarifier que la convention poursuit des objectifs bien précis qu'elle explique dans des commentaires à chacun des articles. On s'est beaucoup interrogé sur la question de savoir si ce texte doit être juridiquement contraignant au même titre que la convention de 48. Je crois qu'il faut commencer par définir quels sont les droits fondamentaux et quel est l'objectif qui a été poursuivi et atteint ici.

M. NEISSER

Merci président. Le sommet de Cologne nous a donné deux tâches à mener à bien. D'abord, faire un inventaire systématique des droits fondamentaux et d'autre part, l'obligation de rendre les droits fondamentaux transparents. Je crois que le document qui a été préparé est un très bon inventaire systématique de la situation. Et il a même une valeur ajoutée. J'aurais aimé un peu de valeur ajoutée mais bon. Néanmoins, est-ce que le document sera visible pour les citoyens ? La question se pose.

C'est le citoyen qui va devoir y répondre. Je crois que la situation varie d'un cas à l'autre, dans ce sens que il y a des parties claires dans le texte, il y en a d'autres qui sont moins claires et nous avons tous, pour tâche d'entreprendre pour le citoyen un traitement de ce texte pour qu'il devienne aussi transparent que possible. Je voudrais remercier, en tout cas, le présidium qui nous a permis d'arriver où nous en sommes. J'aurais encore une remarque concrète à faire qui a trait à l'article 11 point 2 dont on a parlé à plusieurs reprises. Je crois donc la liberté d'expression et d'information. Je crois que la pluralité c'est quelque chose de très important mais elle ne peut pas non plus servir de prétexte pour les Etats qui pourraient s'en servir pour restreindre la liberté des médias. Et c'est pourquoi j'ai adopté une position critique à cet égard. Hier, à la réunion qui a eu lieu, nous avons discuté de la question avec les représentants des gouvernements et Monsieur JACQUÉ a fait remarquer que le concept de la pluralité est déjà inscrit dans un protocole complémentaire au traité d'Amsterdam. Je voudrais que les explications relatives à l'article 11 point 2 soient complétées en faisant référence à ce protocole qui pourrait d'ailleurs être carrément inscrit dans l'explication. Je pose une question au présidium et je m'associe en ce faisant à ce qu'a dit Mme KAUFMANN. C'est l'explication. Quel est leur but exactement. Est-ce qu'elles sont un ajout, un complément d'informations, quel est leur but exactement ? En conclusion, je crois que nous avons fait un premier pas important mais d'autres pas doivent encore être faits. La question par exemple de caractère contraignant de la charte et dans ce contexte il y a la question de l'adhésion à la convention européenne des droits de l'homme. C'est une idée qui est importante pour le gouvernement de mon pays.

M. DUFF

Merci Monsieur le président. Nonobstant les remarques assez surprenantes des représentants irlandais, je crains de plus en plus que, non je pense, je suis convaincue de plus en plus, que nous avons à faire ici un grand succès et cette idée est largement confirmée par les remarques de M. FISCHBACH et par les remarques de Lord GOLDSMITH. Je me félicite tout particulièrement de l'intervention positive qui a été faite par le gouvernement britannique cet après-midi. Quatre de nos amis, plus particulièrement du parti socialiste, présentent une certaine frustration en ce qui concerne les droits sociaux. Je voudrais leur demander d'analyser avec soin le mandat de Cologne. Ce mandat limite, nous a limité dans ce que nous avons essayé de faire. Nos propres sentiments et ce que nous avons extraordinairement bien réussi à trouver un commun dénominateur entre des mouvances politiques fortes opposées, plus particulièrement entre ce qu'on pourrait appeler le germanisme et le blairisme ; trouver un compromis entre les deux, jeter un pont entre ces deux positions contrastées, c'est loin d'être aisé. Nous avons aussi réussi à rapprocher les tendances d'une part laïc et d'autre part confessionnel. Des mouvances qui sont issues du droit romain, d'une part, et du droit coutumier, d'autre part. Ma conclusion est que nous avons réussi à refléter la société européenne moderne avec toutes ses complexités et nous avons réussi à protéger le citoyen contre tout abus de pouvoir de la part de l'Union européenne. Nous avons largement contribué à la qualité de l'unité européenne. Alors quelques articles spécifiques : d'abord le 51 point 1, je m'associe ici à la Commission. Si nous pensons devoir faire référence à d'autres intérêts légitimes, nous devrions peut-être préciser ces autres intérêts légitimes, ils ne sont pas toujours bien décrits dans les législations. Nous avons voulu créer une charte vivante qui doit pouvoir être améliorée et revue au fur et à mesure de l'intégration européenne. Et au fur et à mesure de l'approfondissement de la citoyenneté européenne. Nous voulons par cette charte intégrer les droits fondamentaux dans l'évolution de l'Union européenne. Notre tâche maintenant consiste à vendre cette charte, à la faire connaître aux citoyens, à leur faire savoir qu'il s'agit là d'un grand projet. Nous souhaitons que l'ambiance à Nice permet à cette charte de finalement trouver sa place dans nos traités.

PRESIDENT

Je crois que nous devons clore à 17H00. Essayons de le faire.

M. NIKULA

Je voudrais tout d'abord me joindre à tous ceux qui ont remercié le présidium, le Secrétariat, les assistants. Je les remercie tous et je voudrais moi aussi envoyer un salut au président Kar.... De nombreuses critiques ont été émises concernant la situation des minorités dans cette charte. Nos articles concernant l'environnement aussi ont fait objet de critiques ainsi qu'en ce qui concerne les médias. Je suis d'accord avec ces critiques et je ne veux pas répéter donc tout ce qui a été dit mais le lien avec la convention européenne des droits de l'homme c'est quelque chose qui a été bien traité dans la charte et surtout en ce qui concerne la liste qui figure dans les explications et j'espère que ces explications seront publiées. Le CONVENT 48 commence par des mots "concernent le fait que les explications n'ont pas de valeur juridique". J'espère que le présidium pourra supprimer cette phrase parce que les explications ont valeur juridique. Elles montrent où ces droits se trouvent, ces droits écrits dans la charte et pour terminer M. le président, maintenant qu'il y a un lien vers la convention, on obstacle ultérieur a été supprimé qui empêchait l'Union d'accéder à cette convention et maintenant mon gouvernement a fait des propositions.

PRESIDENT

Merci. Ce que nous voulions c'est que le présidium examine encore une fois la première page de ce Convent 48. Donc c'est fait.

Le dernier orateur c'est M. EINEM

M. EINEM

Merci M. le Président. Je suis un peu étonné de prendre la parole maintenant, mais enfin j'en suis très content. Alors je voudrais vous dire plusieurs choses. D'abord, nous devons résoudre deux problèmes, nous devons relever deux défis. Premièrement, une base solide pour la protection des droits des citoyens européens. Ca c'est le premier défi. Deuxième défi : parvenir à un équilibre dans cette tentative et je pense que nous sommes parvenus tant à jeter les bases pour la protection des droits qu'à assurer un équilibre. Et je remercie également ceux qui ne partageait pas toujours mon point de vue par ce que nous avons vraiment une bonne discussion. Ce qui n'empêche pas d'avoir quelques réserves. J'aurais souhaité qu'à l'article 52 une référence à la charte sociale européenne dans sa version actuelle soit acceptée. Deuxièmement à l'article 19 je voudrais vraiment instamment vous demander de réviser le texte : à mon avis la question des risques graves, des risques sérieux représentent une limite considérable, il faudrait parler de risques, un point c'est tout sans ajouter de qualificatifs. A propos des droits de minorité, moi aussi j'aurais souhaité quelque chose. La reconnaissance au moins, le droit à parler sa propre langue, au respect de sa propre culture, ça c'est quand même le minimum que nous puissions demander. L'objectif maintenant c'est d'obtenir une décision aussi claire que possible à Nice. Notre objectif doit être tout à fait clair mais ce ne sera que le début d'une procédure qui doit amener au caractère contraignant et à la justiciabilité de ces droits de citoyens européens et des personnes qui résident dans l'Union européenne. Et je conclurai en vous remerciant pour vos efforts.

PRESIDENT

Merci M. EINEM.

Chers collègues, nous en arrivons à la fin de la liste des orateurs est-ce que je peux donner maintenant la parole à Madame LALUMIERE, M. RACK, Madame VAN DEN BURG et M. VAN DAM.

Il nous reste cinq minutes, pourriez-vous les partager ?

Mme LALUMIERE

Je parle d'ailleurs au nom de Madame BERES absente et qui m'avait demandé de la remplacer. Moi aussi évidemment, je constate que le résultat de nos travaux est positif, globalement positif, en tout cas bien meilleur de ce que l'on pouvait craindre après Cologne, car le mandat qui était donné à la convention était très restrictif et constituait des contraintes et beaucoup de critiques qui sont faites à notre travail visent en réalité le mandat et nous avons je crois été au maximum des possibilités sans violer expressément le mandat. Ces résultats en particuliers, ce résultat positif concerne le fait de montrer clairement au monde entier que l'Union européenne ce n'est pas simplement un marché qui s'occupe d'économie mais que sort des gens, le droit des personnes comptent également beaucoup. Evidemment il y a des insuffisances, moi aussi je regrette que la charte sociale révisée n'ait pas été mentionnée expressément dans l'article 52. J'aurais souhaité aussi que l'on parle d'un droit à une rémunération équitable, c'est quand même le minimum de ce que l'on peut demander. Et un certain nombre de points. Je constate aussi qu'il y a des ambiguïté dans ce texte, par exemple à propos de l'articulation de la charte avec le système du Conseil de l'Europe, autour de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Les articles horizontaux que vous avez proposés sont très habiles, ils sont sans doute les meilleurs que l'on pouvait avoir mais on verra dans les années qui viennent, il y a probablement des ambiguïtés et des difficultés qu'il faudra surmonter. Donc au total c'est un texte équilibré. Maintenant quelle doit être notre attitude. Il y a ceux qui voudraient insister sur les insuffisances, au point parfois de dénigrer le texte, parce qu'ils considèrent que ce texte ne va pas assez loin. Je crois que cette position maximaliste et je m'adresse à certains collègues en particulier, cette position maximaliste serait une grave erreur car nous devons au contraire donner toute la crédibilité possible à ce texte qui est le juste contrepoids à l'action jusqu'à présent essentiellement économique de l'Union européenne. Donc au lieu de dénigrer le texte je crois au contraire qu'il faut valoriser ce texte sans dissimuler quelques insuffisances, mais valoriser ce texte. Quant aux collègues qui redoutaient que ce texte conduise l'Union à sortir de son champ de compétence je n'ai plus rien à dire après avoir entendu Lord GOLDSMITH, je pense en réalité nous sommes restés dans des limites extrêmement raisonnables au demeurant ceux qui craignent que ce texte ne conduise l'Union à sortir de son champ de compétence sont aussi les mêmes qui déplorent les dysfonctionnements de cette Union avec une charte garde-fou qu'on peut penser que les dysfonctionnements de l'Union seront moins nombreux et moins graves pour le grand bien des citoyens de l'Union. Aujourd'hui doit-on militer pour que ce texte aie une force juridique. La question déborde le champ de notre convention, pour ma part je serai partisan que l'on continue à souhaiter que les chefs d'État et de gouvernement donnent une force juridique à ce texte ce ne sera peut-être pas à Nice, ce sera plus tard, je crois que c'est important d'aller dans ce sens, de même en ce qui concerne l'inclusion de ce texte dans le traité et de même en ce qui concerne l'éventuelle adhésion de l'Union européenne à la convention européenne des droits de l'homme, je crois que ce sujet ne doit pas être enterré il reste important pour les années futures. Quelque soit la valeur juridique de ce texte, en tout cas, je crois que politiquement il peut avoir un influence extrêmement bénéfique et ça va beaucoup dépendre de la conviction avec laquelle nous allons la présenter à l'opinion publique, ça va aussi dépendre de la conviction des chefs d'État et de gouvernement face à ce texte. C'est un texte aujourd'hui qui est en fait déclaratoire mais qui est bien rédigé et on peut très bien en pratique lui donner une force réelle mais ça va dépendre de la volonté des uns et des autres et de la manière avec laquelle on va donner la bonne image de ce texte. En fait tout est ouvert et je voudrais en un mot en terminer Monsieur le président, pour dire aussi à quel point la procédure très nouvelle, très originale de cette convention a bien fonctionné grâce au présidium, grâce aussi il faut bien le dire au sérieux, à la sécurité des membres qui ont travaillé vite dans des conditions pas toujours faciles, je remercie aussi ceux qui travaillaient dans la coulisse, je pense au Secrétariat, sans lequel on n'aurait certainement pas pu trouver les formules auxquelles nous sommes arrivés. Cette procédure mérite d'être connue, diffusée et peut-être de servir d'exemple dans les années futures quand on voit d'autres procédures qui aujourd'hui patinent et ne vont pas très bien dans l'Union. Merci.

PRESIDENT

Merci Madame LALUMIERE.

M. RACK

Merci Monsieur le Président. Notre projet est un catalogue qui comprend à peu près cinquante droits, droit des personnes âgées comprises, ce dont je me félicite tout particulièrement. C'est plus qu'un concept minimum même si ce n'est pas parfait. Mais je suis d'accord avec nos collègues, Cognez ? et d'autres qui ont estimé que l'heure n'était pas voulue de faire état de toutes nos frustrations dans une litanie très ennuyeuse dont je ne me plains pas de l'absence d'une réglementation concernant les minorités, mais ce que je demande c'est que ce texte qui fera l'objet d'une proclamation solennelle soit mis en œuvre dans le sens d'une véritable constitution européenne. Cette convention et nos successeurs, devront accomplir un travail qui va au-delà d'une conférence intergouvernementale classique. La collègue KAUFMANN a cité la bible, ce qui m'a surpris, ensuite elle a cité un autre bible Duden. Et la je pense qu'elle a fait une erreur sémantique volontaire ou involontaire. Il ne s'agit pas de ce que dit le "Duden" le dictionnaire allemand de ce que veut dire le terme spirituel. Regardez dans le Larousse ou dans le Langenscheidt les traductions en allemand du terme spirituel geistig ou religieuses cela apparaît également dans la traduction du terme spirituel. Nous avons beaucoup entendu de remerciements à l'adresse du présidium, et bien je voudrais moi aussi réitérer ces remerciements. Depuis le début le présidium a donné la possibilité aux suppléants de participer pleinement aux travaux de la convention et dans cette mesure là le présidium a vraiment garanti le pluralisme pas seulement respecté mais garanti. Merci.

Mme VAN DEN BURG

Etant donné l'heure qu'il est je mettrais les compliments entre parenthèse et je les réserverais pour lundi prochain où l'on pourra peut-être nous ménager un temps de parole en tant que membre suppléant actif de cette convention. Je me limiterai à deux points qui ne sont pas seulement deux points d'information je voudrais que le présidium fasse quelque chose de concret. Le premier point a été évoqué par plusieurs autres intervenants faisant la référence à la charte sociale. J'ai constaté que les parlementaires nationaux à l'exception d'un ou deux membres, peut-être, le Parlement européen ont évoqué le problème, la Commission ne s'est pas opposée à la référence à la charte sociale dont je dois en conclure que ce n'est qu'au niveau des groupes gouvernementaux qu'il y a eut quelques problèmes. J'ai maintenant entendu plusieurs gouvernements dire très clairement qu'ils sont eux aussi très favorables à cette référence à la charte sociale, donc je crois qu'il faut absolument tenir compte de ces interventions et trouver une solution puisque cela prouve qu'une large majorité en faveur de cette insertion. Ce n'est pas la peine de posséder un vote indicatif pour le constater. Mon deuxième point a trait au changement que vous avez apporté aux articles 26 et 27. Je crois qu'il y a un malentendu à propos de l'article 27 où l'on parle de niveaux appropriés qui ont été modifiés, on est passé de un niveau européen à tous les niveaux, et puis maintenant au niveau approprié, donc on a changé les termes. C'est imparfait, puisque cela se retrouve dans les textes de droits nationaux et de l'Union européenne. Il y a une explication qui a été donnée par M. BRAIBANT je crois qu'il y a eu un gros malentendu à propos de la reconnaissance des droits de grève au niveau européen. On ne peut pas dire que le droit de grève n'est pas reconnu au niveau européen, je suis d'accord pour dire qu'il n'y a pas de législation européenne en la matière mais il y a l'article 137 du chapitre social qui donne à l'Union certaines possibilités d'agir dans le domaine social. Le paragraphe 6 de cet article parle de la possibilité de faire des compositions actives en ce qui concerne les droits de grève, les questions de rémunération etc.. et ne dit en tout cas pas que l'Union européenne ne respecte pas le droit de grève. Je pense qu'il faut étendre le concept de niveau approprié aux droits de négociations collectives et aux droits d'action collectives et je voudrais demander à M. VITORINO, donc gardien du traité, de bien vouloir confirmer mon interprétation de la chose et il faudra probablement procéder à une adaptation rédactionnelle comme on l'a fait à d'autres endroits d'ailleurs.

PRESIDENT

Merci, le dernier intervenant M. Van DAM.

M. VAN DAM

M. Le président; le texte qui est là contient indubitablement des éléments très importants à droit de la vie, à propos de la médecine, de l'intégration des handicapés, de la protection des personnes âgées que ça mérite d'être protégées. La dignité humaine est en jeu. Il est dommage que dans le préambule on se contente de parler des patrimoines culturel et spirituel. Dans l'Union européenne; les valeurs chrétiennes ne sont quand même pas à la base de la reconnaissance de la dignité humaine, mais malheureusement dans le préambule on n'en parle pas. La dignité de l'être humain dérive du fait que nous sommes des créatures de Dieu et je serais très heureux si en avenir le texte pourrait être complété à l'aide de cette notion. Je suis convaincu que ce texte aurait des conséquences négatives si on ne réfléchissait pas bien à son caractère contraignant. Je pense que les conséquence pourrait être une espèce de scission au sein de l'Union européenne. Etant donné cette argumentation mais il est certain que la convention passe à côté de certains grands dangers ce qui ne rend certainement pas service à l'Union européenne.

PRESIDENT

Merci M. Van DAM, voilà ce qui conclut le débat général.

Il y a quelques questions de procédure à régler.

Le Commissaire VITORINO va répondre, Monsieur BRAIBANT, va conclure et moi j'ai un résumé à faire, donc une déclaration, pas plus de vingt-cinq minutes et j'espère que vous pourrez rester parmi nous.

M. VITORINO

Merci M. le Président, je ne voudrais pas vous faire une réponse dans les détails, je crois que la position de la Commission a été claire sur l'article 27 dans le sens qu'il y a des législations européennes en ce qui concerne le droit des négociations collectives. Il y a des règles communautaires qui s'appliquent, il n'y a pas des règles communautaires qui s'appliquent aux droits de grève au niveau européen et cela ne signifie pas que le droit de grève ne soit pas reconnu, tout au contraire et cela ne signifie pas qu'on ne puisse pas avoir des grèves simultanées dans plusieurs pays européens. Mais ces grèves doivent être décrétées en accord avec des législations nationales et je crois que c'est cette approche qu'on a essayé de trouver dans l'article 27 pour bien distinguer quel est l'encadrement juridique au niveau communautaire du droit à la négociation collective et quel est l'encadrement juridique différent du droit à la grève, du droit à l'action politique, y compris le poids de la grève, on a essayé d'adresser, dans des positions assez différentes ces deux éléments avec la rédaction qu'on a proposée.

PRESIDENT

Merci M. VITORINO.

Chers collègues, le présidium informera le président HERZOG bien sûr de ce débat, des discussions hier; de l'atmosphère générale de vos contributions, de tout ce qui a été dit. Il l'informerait aussi du contenu de ces débats et c'est la seule façon de lui donner l'occasion de prendre sa décision. Ce n'est pas secret, ici tout est public et je pense que c'est notre devoir selon les décisions de Tampere de le faire pour faciliter la décision du président qui malheureusement n'a pas pu venir. C'est ce que nous ferons ce soir. Alors, pour lundi, chers collègues, nous avons une convention officielle lundi qui commence à 11h00, de 11h00 à midi et demi. Il y aura des discours des vice-présidents et sur la base de ce qu'on a fait le 17 décembre. Il y aura un discours du président quand il nous fera part de sa décision. Son discours sera lu. Ensuite, il y aura l'accord formel de nos conclusions, entre nous à la convention, la photo de famille et pour fêter cela, il sera plus de midi, nous boirons une coupe de champagne offerte par la présidence française, bien sûr. A midi, c'est très important d'avoir du champagne. Cela dit, je vais donner la parole au professeur BRAIBANT.

Question d'un membre de la Convention

Oui, en ce qui concerne lundi, en ce qui concerne l'ordre des travaux, vous dites que à la fin de cette réunion d'une heure et demi, on aura l'adoption formelle, un accord formel, comment je dois interpréter cela ? On va signer un texte ? Comme vous le savez, je suis d'accord avec la plus grande partie du texte mais pas tout. Alors, il faudrait que je sache si le texte doit être soumis au Conseil européen, au président, plutôt qu'à nous.

PRESIDENT

Il n'y aura rien à signer. Nous nous réunirons avec une couverture importante des médias pour clore nos travaux et pour attendre l'accord formel du président HERZOG qui nous fera part de sa décision afin de pouvoir conclure nos travaux. Oui excusez-moi de ne pas avoir été assez précis. Professeur BRAIBANT, je vous donne la parole. Un résumé en deux minutes et quelques secondes ?

M. BRAIBANT

Je vais essayer. M. le président, je peux essayer mais je n'y arriverai pas et je crois qu'il vaut mieux que je respecte les deux minutes plutôt que j'essaie de résumer. Je pense que vous serez tous d'accord avec cette approche. C'est un fait que la séance d'aujourd'hui a été passionnante. Nous avons pu constater un très large accord. Il ne faut pas exagérer ce n'est pas un accord complet sur tous les points. Personne n'est obligé d'être d'accord avec les 50, plus que 50 articles, de la charte. Moi-même, je ne suis pas d'accord avec tous ces articles. Mais le problème était de savoir si nous arriverions à un accord global et souvent le mot "global" a été employé globalement positif. Je dois dire que un des grands moments de cette séance pour moi, était l'intervention de Peter GOLDSMITH, nous avons assez polémique pour que maintenant je lui rende hommage car à certains moments, j'arrivais à du découragement et encore assez récemment. Je peux vous préciser que l'invitation pour le champagne de l'ambassade de France, elle date d'avant-hier et encore j'étais peut-être imprudent parce que je ne pouvais pas inviter s'il n'y avait pas une fête à faire ! Or, je n'ai jamais été sûr, et chaque fois qu'on me demandait: "est-ce que vous allez aboutir ?", je disais : nous en sommes très près, nous n'avons jamais été aussi près mais je ne peux pas vous garantir que nous allons aboutir. Je crois que maintenant on peut penser que nous allons réussir cette opération qui comme on l'a dit est très importante pour l'Europe et très importante aussi pour l'avenir de cette formule nouvelle à laquelle beaucoup d'hommes politiques s'intéressent maintenant qui est la formule de la convention. Il faudra que peut-être la semaine prochaine, nous essayons d'en tirer les leçons, ce que je voudrais dire aussi, c'est que vous nous avez tous, presque tous, gentiment félicités et que les félicitations sont réciproques. Nous n'avons pas tout fait, tout ne revient pas au présidium qui pourtant, je pense, a bien fonctionné mais à la convention également et nous avons eu des aller-retour, que nous appelons en français, politique des navettes qui ont permis à chaque fois d'enrichir le texte. Je ne crois pas que le texte soit sorti appauvri par nos débats. Il a toujours été enrichi, parfois des débats difficiles mais l'obligation de chercher des compromis nous a stimulé et nous a obligés à faire progresser notre pensée. De ce point de vue, je pense que c'est un succès collectif qui ne revient pas à tel ou tel ou à tel ou tel groupe de personnes ou à telle ou telle personne mais qui nous appartient à tous et personnellement je vous remercie tous pour le concours que vous nous avez apporté qui a été vraiment très riche. Après une de nos premières séances difficiles, je suis allé trouver Peter GOLDSMITH et je lui dit: on peut se serrer la main comme des joueurs de tennis après un match, il m'a répondu: j'espère que nous sommes du même côté du filet et je lui ai répondu: je n'en suis pas sûr ! A l'époque, je n'en étais pas sûr, maintenant j'en suis sûr et j'en suis ravi. Et je voudrais terminer sur cette note d'optimisme. Merci.

Je vous remercie et je remercie les interprètes, la séance est levée.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 20 octobre 2000CHARTE 4959/00*CONVENT 54*NOTE D'INFORMATION DU SECRETARIAT

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

- Verbatim de la séance solennelle de clôture de la Convention du 2 octobre 2000
 - Discours de M. Guy Braibant, vice-président, lors de la session du Conseil informel à Biarritz, le 14 octobre 2000 ¹
-

PRESIDENT (M. BRAIBANT):

J'ai le plaisir d'ouvrir cette séance qui je le rappelle est une sorte de cérémonie de clôture de nos travaux. Un certain nombre d'entre nous vont prendre la parole au nom des différentes composantes de la Convention. Mais je donne la parole d'abord au représentant de la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes, M Alber ² qui va parler de sa place.

M. ALBERT

Monsieur le Président, Mesdames et Messieurs, en l'espace de moins d'un an notre Convention est parvenue à rédiger un projet admirable de Charte des droits fondamentaux. Nous devons remercier et féliciter la Convention pour ce travail. La Cour de justice des Communautés européennes n'a été

¹ Le verbatim ainsi que le discours de M. Braibant à Biarritz seront diffusés uniquement en langue française.

² Vous trouverez en annexe la version allemande du discours de M. Alber, telle qu'elle nous a été transmise par la Cour de justice.

qu'un observateur, donc pas membre à part entière et dès lors les félicitations que j'adresse, ne s'adressent pas à nous-mêmes, il s'agit bien plutôt de félicitations dûment motivées vues de l'extérieur. Je souhaiterais remercier en particulier le Présidium et le Comité de rédaction qui a effectué un travail d'excellente facture, tant sur le plan sémantique que sur le plan de la compétence juridique. Je crois que le Présidium mériterait pour cette performance une médaille d'or et je souhaite également adresser mes plus chaleureux remerciements à notre Président, le Professeur HERZOG, qui aujourd'hui pour des raisons de santé ne peut malheureusement pas être présent parmi nous, et dont l'expérience constitutionnelle qui s'étend sur plusieurs décennies a été je crois très enrichissante pour notre Convention et je lui souhaite, d'ici, de ma place, un prompt rétablissement même si dans la Charte nous n'avons pas enchâssé de droit à la bonne santé. La Convention est parvenue à réussir son exercice d'équilibrisme sur le fil du rasoir entre d'une part les souhaits et d'autre part de ce qui était faisable. Tout ce que l'opinion publique eut souhaité n'était pas forcément faisable étant donné les limites des compétences communautaires. Toute une série d'autres choses en dépit des souhaits des citoyens, les amendements l'ont montré, toute une série d'autres choses n'ont pas été possible. La Convention des droits de l'homme des Nations Unies compte 52 ans, la Convention européenne 50 ans, et le citoyen a estimé que le moment était venu d'enfin tenir compte des évolutions du progrès technique, scientifique, d'élaborer une Charte qui soit le reflet de l'état de l'art et je puis comprendre ce souhait. Mais je crois que le moment serait tout aussi venu pour que les législateurs nationaux adaptent leur ordre constitutionnel respectif à cette situation. Ce que le Conseil européen va décider lors du Sommet de Nice sera décisif. Je pars du principe qu'on va conférer à la Charte, et c'est indispensable, un caractère contraignant, car après tout c'est le Conseil lui-même qui a pris cette initiative lors du Sommet de Cologne. En vérité lorsque le Conseil européen lance une idée pro-européenne, il faudrait parfois se montrer quelque peu méfiant, je crois que s'applique ici ce que Talleyrand avait déjà dit à l'époque lorsqu'on lui communiquait la mort d'un autre diplomate particulièrement honoré, il s'est interrogé "mais qu'est ce qu'il a bien pu vouloir faire en mourant ainsi, quelles étaient ses intentions" et on serait en droit de s'interroger sur les intentions du Conseil européen en nous confiant la rédaction de cette Charte. J'espère que ce n'était pas une manœuvre de diversion pour détourner l'attention des problèmes institutionnels, j'espère que, dans l'intérêt de l'Europe et des citoyens, le Conseil européen lui confèrera un caractère contraignant, car si la Charte venait à recevoir un seul effet déclaratoire, le travail de la Convention eut été inutile voir contreproductif. Certaines dispositions des Traités de Rome devront être complétées, adaptées, je cite pour exemple l'article 6 dans lequel il est stipulé "que les droits fondamentaux doivent être respectés tels qu'ils sont ancrés dans la Convention des droits de l'homme et tels qu'ils ressortent des traditions des États membres", il va évidemment falloir tenir compte ici de la Charte que nous allons adopter, l'associer étroitement aux Traités de Rome, particulièrement si cette Charte doit recevoir un caractère contraignant, mais en dehors de la structure des traités, si elle reste un document indépendant. La Cour de justice des Communautés européennes respecte d'ores et déjà les droits de l'homme, donc ce document ne constitue rien de nouveau, il ne fait que souligner et appuyer la jurisprudence actuelle ce qui est juste et bon. Au sein de la Convention; l'un de mes collègues a à l'occasion dit que "la Charte servirait à ce que la Cour de justice fasse respecter les droits de l'homme" je crois que celui qui utilise de tels arguments ignore la jurisprudence de la CJE, car cela fait depuis les années 60 qu'elle respecte ces droits de l'homme et qu'elle leur confère même une importance essentielle puisqu'elle considère qu'il s'agit là d'un principe fondateur. Nous disposons de 2 voies juridiques. La Charte sera contraignante pour les institutions de la Communauté mais également les États membres dans leur transposition du droit communautaire, cela signifie que dans le premier cas la Cour de justice à Luxembourg sera exclusivement compétente, tandis que dans le deuxième cas, s'agissant des États membres transposant le droit européen, ce seront les tribunaux nationaux qui seront compétents pour trancher à la suite de quoi on pourra ester devant la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme à Strasbourg. C'était déjà le cas dans la situation actuelle, mais ce qui s'imposera à l'avenir ce sera une coopération encore bien plus étroite entre ces deux cours. Il a été dit que la Cour européenne de justice aurait dans certains de ces arrêts pris ses distances par rapport à la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme à Strasbourg, et c'est vrai qu'il y a une poignée d'arrêts dans lesquels des divergences peuvent être débusquées. Toutefois, il faut rappeler ici que les arrêts de la CJE à Luxembourg ont souvent été prononcés concomitamment ou avant les arrêts de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme, notre Président M. IGLESIAS a rappelé à maintes reprises que, évidemment, la CJE tiendrait compte de la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme et que donc les divergences qui pourraient se produire n'étaient que des divergences de façade et non pas de principe. Nous venons donc en vérité d'élaborer une Charte pour l'Union qui prouve que la Communauté est bien plus qu'une communauté économique, c'est une communauté de droit et une communauté de valeurs. Cette double combinaison fait de l'Union européenne une communauté de droit non pas au sens formel mais également au sens matériel, une communauté de droits au pluriel. Les droits fondamentaux des citoyens constituent les pierres angulaires de la démocratie et sans ces clés de voûte, sans ces piliers, l'Union européenne n'aurait aucune stabilité intérieure. Partant la Charte des droits fondamentaux constitue un jalon capital sur la voie de l'intégration européenne future et pour le citoyen en sa qualité de citoyen européen. Une fois de plus j'adresse mes plus chaleureuses remerciements et mes meilleurs vœux de succès pour l'avenir. Je crois que l'histoire prouvera que cette Charte va constituer un grand pas pour l'Union européenne.

PRESIDENT

Merci de nous avoir apporté ce soutien venant d'une des plus hautes juridictions de l'Europe, il est particulièrement précieux. Je donne la parole maintenant au Commissaire VITORINO qui a beaucoup travaillé avec nous, qui est vraiment l'un des auteurs de la Charte et qui va s'exprimer au nom de la Commission.

M. VITORINO

C'est certainement avec émotion et fierté d'avoir participé à l'élaboration du projet de Charte, que je prends la parole aujourd'hui devant la Convention.

Mais, au-delà des sentiments personnels, ma tâche, pour importante qu'elle soit, est assez aisée et agréable : elle consiste, Monsieur le Président, à vous apporter le soutien sans réserve de la Commission européenne sur le projet de Charte pour lequel vous vous apprêtez à constater le consensus, selon les règles posées par le Conseil européen de Cologne.

Dans une Communication adoptée le 13 septembre, rendue publique et adressée à la Convention, le Collège a marqué son accord de principe sur l'avant-projet tel qu'il était alors formalisé dans le document CONVENT 45, tout en suggérant quelques formulations plus explicites en ce qui concerne certains droits sociaux et la protection de l'environnement en particulier. Ces suggestions ont été prises en compte dans le projet définitif et je ne peux donc que vous redire l'accord de la Commission sur le projet.

Avant d'explicitier brièvement la position de la Commission, je voudrais aussi souligner ma satisfaction concernant le fonctionnement de la Convention, nouvel instrument inconnu jusque là. Nul doute que cette expérience pourra nourrir les réflexions des constitutionnalistes et sera susceptible de recevoir d'autres applications. Mais, il est clair, en tout cas, que - ainsi que je le pronostiquais au début de nos travaux en décembre dernier - le judicieux mélange entre les sources de légitimité nationale et européenne et les représentations des exécutifs nationaux et européen, a certainement été une garantie du succès de nos travaux.

La Commission se félicite d'avoir pu activement participer à cette entreprise en tant que composante à part entière, tant au sein de la Convention qu'au niveau du Présidium, aux côtés du Parlement européen, des représentants des gouvernements et des Parlements nationaux. Comme dans le roman d'Alexandre Dumas, l'histoire retiendra, je l'espère, que les trois mousquetaires étaient quatre !

Mais, si escarmouches il y eut entre les composantes et les membres de la Convention au cours des travaux, les blessures furent légères et les épées ont pu être baissées avec honneur et fierté. Ces escarmouches se sont sans doute soldées par des compromis qui pourront nous être reprochés par les lecteurs et utilisateurs futurs de la Charte, mais aussi et surtout par un texte final marqué par l'exigence et la rigueur intellectuelles. Elles ont permis des synthèses difficiles à établir entre les différentes composantes politiques de la convention et entre les différentes traditions juridiques européennes.

Je voudrais ainsi rendre hommage à l'engagement et à la ténacité de tous les membres de la Convention, titulaires ou suppléants, pour leurs contributions aux travaux de la Convention et pour la bonne disposition dont ils ont fait preuve à mon égard en tant que représentant de la Commission. Mais j'aimerais tout particulièrement remercier notre Président Roman HERZOG, à qui je souhaite un prompt rétablissement, ainsi que les Vice-Présidents.

La Commission salue tout d'abord la forme du texte et ceci à deux égards bien différents :

- comme voulu au départ, le texte est concis et percutant ; c'était bien la condition de sa lisibilité par les citoyens et citoyennes de l'Union qui en sont les vrais destinataires ;
- comme voulu au départ aussi le texte est rédigé « comme si » il devait être intégré dans les traités, sauvegardant ainsi le choix que le Conseil européen devra faire, le moment venu, entre une Charte déclaration politique solennelle ou une Charte intégrée dans les traités.

Cette doctrine du « comme si », mise en avant par le Président HERZOG et que j'avais également soutenue dès le mois de décembre, a certes alourdi nos travaux, puisque, sans cette doctrine, les clauses horizontales, les plus importantes et les plus difficiles du projet, eussent été superflues. Mais c'est une garantie du succès futur de la Charte, puisqu'elles ont permis de préciser ce qu'est la Charte, à savoir l'instrument du contrôle du respect des droits fondamentaux par les institutions et les Etats membres quand ils appliquent le droit de l'Union. Ces clauses ont aussi permis de préciser ce que la Charte ne peut pas être, à savoir un véhicule de transfert de nouvelles compétences à l'Union ou un moyen déguisé d'adhésion à la convention européenne ou encore celui d'abaisser le niveau de protection d'ores et déjà existant dans l'Union.

Mais, c'est bien entendu au contenu même de la Charte que la Commission apporte en premier lieu son complet soutien.

Au-delà des regrets ou frustrations que chacun peut encore avoir sur le libellé de tel ou tel droit, de sa présence ou de son absence dans le projet, je n'hésite pas à répondre positivement à la question de savoir si le mandat de Cologne a été rempli.

Oui, nous avons rempli le mandat qui nous avait été imparti. Mandat consistant – par une sorte de maïeutique socratienne des droits fondamentaux – à rendre visibles les droits déjà existants et consistant donc à travailler à droit constant. Peut-être y a-t-il eu là un certain malentendu avec certains représentants de la société civile, volontiers portés à la critique du projet, en raison même de l'importance et de la légitimité des intérêts que ces associations et syndicats ont à défendre. Ces intérêts dicteront l'évolution future des droits fondamentaux.

Travailler à droit constant ne signifie pas que la Charte soit dépourvue d'une réelle valeur ajoutée. Tout au contraire ! Plusieurs points peuvent être énumérés, sans vouloir être exhaustif :

- je rangerai volontiers parmi ces points, la rédaction neutre du texte qui va bien au-delà du seul aspect formel. Contrairement à « la déclaration des droits de l'homme et du citoyen » qui, en son temps, avait dû faire l'objet d'une traduction féminine par une citoyenne avisée de l'époque, la Charte s'adresse directement aux deux sexes. Il était temps en effet d'éliminer des textes juridiques, la prééminence d'un sexe sur l'autre. Parions que ce sera le langage du prochain siècle !

- il était temps aussi qu'un texte fondateur, comme la Charte, rassemble – au nom de l'indivisibilité des droits – les droits civils, politiques, économiques et sociaux. C'est une innovation – qui a déjà été largement soulignée – mais qui met bien en évidence notre modèle social européen contemporain. Je n'ignore pas que certains, dans cette salle et parmi la société civile, restent insatisfaits quant aux droits sociaux énumérés dans le catalogue de la Charte. Mais celle-ci doit être vue comme un instrument dynamique, susceptible d'évolution : le droit de l'Union pourra et devra continuer à progresser.

- la Charte est par ailleurs bien contemporaine lorsqu'elle exprime des droits, qui, sans être véritablement nouveaux comme la protection des données personnelles ou les droits liés à la bioéthique, visent à répondre aux préoccupations liées au développement actuel et futur des technologies de l'information ou du génie génétique.

- la Charte répond bien aussi aux fortes et légitimes demandes actuelles de transparence et d'impartialité dans le fonctionnement de l'administration communautaire en exprimant des droits qui pour certains sont certes simplement repris des traités, mais qui, pour d'autres, étaient enfouis dans l'abondante jurisprudence de la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes.

- Enfin, la Charte a un champ d'application respectueux du principe de la subsidiarité et, de ce point de vue, elle ne remplace pas les Constitutions nationales pour ce qui est du respect des droits fondamentaux au niveau national.

Bref, la valeur ajoutée du projet de Charte est bien réelle. C'est là le gage de son succès pour le futur, au-delà même de la valeur qui lui sera finalement octroyée.

Valeur juridique contraignante ou valeur de déclaration politique solennelle, là aussi les escarmouches semblent se préparer pour un avenir relativement proche, en dehors cette fois de l'enceinte de la Convention. Ma propre évaluation me porte au contraire à envisager la question avec une grande sérénité !

Sans grand risque, on peut faire le pari que la Charte déploiera en tout cas des effets y compris sur le plan juridique. Il est clair que les institutions de l'Union appelées à la proclamer solennellement, pourront difficilement ignorer dans le futur un texte préparé à la demande du Conseil européen par toutes les sources de légitimité nationale et européenne réunies au sein de la même enceinte. Il est vraisemblable qu'à son tour la Cour de justice s'en inspirera dans son contrôle du législateur, comme elle le fait déjà avec d'autres textes concernant les droits fondamentaux.

Il est de bon ton d'ailleurs de relever que, dans le passé, les déclarations de droits dans les pays européens ne sont longtemps restés que de simples proclamations, sans que personne ne s'inquiète de les revêtir d'un quelconque costume juridique contraignant.

Dans le contexte européen actuel, ma conviction personnelle me porte cependant à aller plus loin. Mon pronostic est que la vocation de la Charte, par son contenu, par sa formulation rigoureuse et par sa valeur politique, est d'être intégrée dans les traités. Il s'agit surtout de répondre aux questions du « comment » et du « quand » qui débordent largement les compétences de notre Convention.

Nous devons tout faire de notre part pour mettre le citoyen au centre de la construction européenne – ce qui me semble la condition sine qua non pour l'espace de liberté, de sécurité et de justice dont je suis particulièrement responsable au sein de la Commission – il faudra tirer toutes les conséquences qui s'imposent et exprimer clairement le catalogue des droits fondamentaux au sein du droit primaire de l'Union.

Bien entendu, une éventuelle intégration de la Charte dans les traités, se traduirait par une sécurité juridique accrue par rapport au droit positif actuel, caractérisé à l'article 6 du TUE par la plus profonde obscurité – à l'avantage bien entendu des juristes professionnels -, obscurité qui domine là où la clarté serait au contraire nécessaire. Je veux bien admettre que le renvoi fait au paragraphe 2 de cet article est encore clair s'agissant de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme, mais qui peut extraire ce que recouvre précisément le renvoi aux traditions constitutionnelles communes ?

Ayant cité la Convention européenne, je voudrais revenir, avant de conclure, sur un des motifs de satisfaction de la Commission, à savoir l'assurance d'une homogénéité satisfaisante entre la Convention européenne de protection des droits de l'homme et de sauvegarde des libertés fondamentales, riche de cinquante ans d'expériences, et la Charte. Cette homogénéité est nécessaire pour éviter que ne se développent en Europe deux corps législatifs tout à fait distincts en matière de droits de l'homme, perspective qui serait en effet la négation même de l'universalité des droits que proclament les deux textes.

Ceci n'empêche évidemment pas – pour utiliser la formule désormais reprise sous l'article 52 paragraphe 3, dernière phrase – que le droit de l'Union – et en premier lieu la Charte elle-même dont elle fera partie- puisse aller au-delà dans la protection, comme la Convention l'autorise d'ailleurs pour ses parties contractantes. Chacun sait bien que le droit au mariage et le droit de fonder une famille tels que formulés dans la Charte sont plus étendus que le droit correspondant de la Convention. Il en est de même pour l'interdiction de discrimination et le droit à un recours effectif. Il s'agit d'une reconnaissance essentielle du principe de l'autonomie du droit communautaire et de la Charte elle-même.

La Commission reste, cependant, très favorable, comme elle le fut dans le passé, à mettre en place les moyens nécessaires à la convergence des jurisprudences européennes. La voie la plus efficace reste bien sûr l'adhésion de l'union à la Convention. A cet égard, on peut se réjouir de certaines évolutions récentes que l'on a pu noter dans le cadre de la CIG, pour ce qui concerne la position de quelques Etats membres du moins.

Les travaux de la Convention ont en tout cas bien montré, à mon avis, que, contrairement à l'interrogation que l'on pouvait encore se poser au départ de nos travaux, Charte et adhésion ne s'excluent pas, mais peuvent au contraire se faire parallèlement, à l'image de l'approche retenue par les Etats membres qui, à la fois, se sont dotés de leur propre catalogue de droits fondamentaux dans leur constitution et ont adhéré à la Convention européenne.

Pour conclure, je voudrais faire mienne une idée qui a déjà été clairement émise dans cette enceinte la semaine dernière : la bonne réception de la Charte dans l'opinion publique et au sein des instances politiques dépendra en grande mesure de la bonne image que chacun de nous, les membres de la Convention voudront bien lui donner. Pour ma part, et étant pour une fois biblique, je peux vous assurer que je m'emploierai autant que je le pourrai dans cette mission de prêcher la bonne parole.

PRESIDENT

Merci M. le Commissaire, vous nous avez beaucoup aidé pendant tous ces travaux par votre sens politique, par votre compétence juridique et aussi je dois dire par votre sens de l'humour. Vous venez encore de nous donner quelques exemples. Je donne la parole maintenant à M. MENDEZ DE VIGO, mon voisin, qui est le Vice-Président pour les représentants du Parlement européen.

M. MENDEZ DE VIGO

Merci M. le Président. Il y a neuf mois, au Conseil, nous nous sommes rencontrés pour la première fois et à ce moment-là, il faut bien le reconnaître, nous avions tous de sérieux doutes quant au résultat définitif de nos travaux. Nous avions des doutes parce que nous étions face à quelque chose d'inédit. Nous étions face à un exercice politique certes mais avec des conséquences juridiques très claires. C'est-à-dire que dans un même exercice on allait réunir deux logiques différentes, la logique intergouvernementale et la logique parlementaire. Et c'était la première fois qu'allaient participer à un exercice conjoint les gouvernements, le Parlement européen et les parlements nationaux avec une très large représentation. Par conséquent, M. le Président, on ne pouvait imaginer quel allait être le résultat de nos travaux. Et si ce résultat est satisfaisant c'est sans aucun doute grâce l'autorité du Président HERZOG à qui je rends hommage ici aujourd'hui. Il n'est pas parmi nous aujourd'hui pour des raisons de santé, vous le savez tous. Le Président HERZOG a imposé son empreinte dès le début aux travaux en indiquant que nous allions travailler comme si la charte devait être incluse dans les traités. Il fallait donc avoir à l'esprit à chaque instant quelles étaient les conséquences juridiques de nos travaux. Si cette charte devait figurer dans le traité, il fallait en peser toutes les conséquences juridiques. M. HERZOG a également insisté sur l'article 51.2, c'est-à-dire sur le champs d'application de la charte. On dit que la charte actuelle ne crée aucune nouvelle compétence pour l'Union européenne. C'est un article qui est apparu dès le début de nos travaux. Je crois que c'est un des seuls articles qui n'a pas été modifié. Autre élément mentionné par le Président HERZOG avec son sens de l'humour caractéristique, il ne faut rien promettre dans la charte qui ne serait pas tenu par la suite. Et je crois que sur ce troisième élément, nous nous en sommes tenus à cette ligne de conduite. La charte que nous avons rédigée n'est pas un document minimaliste comme certains peuvent le penser. Ce n'est pas non plus un document des "rois mages" comme on dit, c'est-à-dire un document dans lequel on demande tout et n'importe quoi. Il s'agit en fait d'un engagement, notre charte est quelque chose d'autonome, c'est un document juridique et, c'est très important, c'est un document qui n'interfère pas dans les systèmes nationaux des différents États membres, il n'y a pas d'interférence dans les constitution des États membres. J'espère que par ce travail on connaîtra mieux les droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne et j'espère que, par là même, ces droits seront mieux respectés aussi bien auprès des institutions européennes à qui s'adresse cette charte mais également auprès des citoyens qui auront quelque chose de bien clair à l'esprit. Nous n'avons pas seulement considéré les droits existants, nous sommes allés au-delà pour démontrer que l'Europe n'est pas seulement un marché. L'Europe, comme cela a été dit ici, est une communauté de droits, et de valeurs également. Dans l'article premier, justement, on fait référence à la dignité humaine, et on proclame l'inviolabilité de la dignité humaine. Je crois que c'est une preuve de ce que je viens de vous dire. C'est une charte également progressiste sur bon nombre d'éléments. Je pense en particulier à l'égalité. Dans ce chapitre l'égalité existe des potentiels inexploités en particulier l'égalité hommes-femmes, la protection des personnes âgées, etc. Nous avons également élaboré des droits nouveaux qui sont le fruit de tous ces éléments juridiques. Dans le chapitre solidarité nous avons repris une série de droits économiques et sociaux. Ils représentent le cadre fondamental du modèle social européen. Nous avons réalisé cet exercice dans la rigueur comme l'avait suggéré M. HERZOG et bien évidemment en tenant à l'esprit la subsidiarité c'est-à-dire d'avancer des choses que l'on pourrait tenir. Voilà neuf mois sont passés. Ce matin en relisant la charte je me souviens que M. JANSSON nous avait dit qu'à un moment ou à un autre, au moment de l'élaboration de la constitution finlandaise, les parlementaires finlandais avaient dit: faisons en sorte que aucun article de notre constitution n'ait plus de trois paragraphes. Je crois que nous nous avons respecté cette rigueur. Nous avons parfois certes quatre paragraphes mais nous nous en sommes généralement tenus à ces trois paragraphes, nous avons donc cette rigueur finlandaise dans notre charte. Le 52.3 maintenant est particulièrement important, il y a cette clause d'évolution, c'est-à-dire qu'on ne considère plus cette charte comme quelque chose de statique, de rigide mais comme quelque chose qui évoluera. M. le Président, permettez-moi de revenir très brièvement sur la méthode. J'ai mentionné tout à l'heure quelle était la logique de notre exercice. D'ailleurs c'est la première fois qu'on utilise cette méthode dans l'Union européenne et cela a fonctionné, à la surprise de bon nombre de personnes. Cette convention a démontré que nous européens sommes en mesure de nous entendre. Nous sommes en mesure de répondre à la légitimité des deux institutions européennes, le Conseil et le Parlement mais également à la légitimité des différents États membres par le biais des parlements nationaux. Nous sommes arrivés à une entente et à un texte qui satisfait tout le monde. Ceci démontre que quand les hommes politiques agissent, ils sont en mesure de s'entendre. Pour tous ces motifs la délégation du Parlement européen, au sein duquel je voudrais insister sur le rôle des titulaires mais également des remplaçants, a agi pendant les neuf mois, a fait des propositions, des contre-propositions etc. Et c'est seulement après avoir combattu jusqu'au bout que nous avons décidé que ce texte pouvait faire l'objet d'un accord de notre délégation. Ceux qui étaient contre son consensus d'ailleurs ont participé activement à l'élaboration de ce texte également. Donc M. le Président, pour la délégation du Parlement européen ça a été une expérience très positive. La charte est de bonne facture, nous sommes d'accord avec le commissaire Vitorino pour propager la bonne parole, nous avons accompli notre tâche. Il y a neuf mois nous ne savions pas quel allait être le résultat de ces travaux, maintenant au Parlement européen nous savons qu'il s'agit d'une bonne charte. Au Conseil de Feira, le Premier ministre GUTERRES, après les interventions des différents premiers ministres a dit quelque chose que j'ai répété à maintes reprises. Il a dit: dites à la convention que pour le moment il faut se concentrer sur le contenu de la charte, pour ce qui est de la valeur juridique on en parlera par la suite. Ce que nous a dit GUTERRES en fait c'est: faites en sorte que la charte soit bonne, parce que si elle est bonne elle pourra servir. Notre délégation et moi-même nous sommes intimement convaincus qu'il s'agit d'une bonne charte. Et comme il s'agit d'une bonne charte nous espérons que les effets se feront sentir au bénéfice des citoyens européens.

Merci.

PRESIDENT

Merci beaucoup. Donc à partir de maintenant et de tout à l'heure nous serons tous des pèlerins de la charte et la dernière fois que je vous ai appelé au téléphone, vous étiez en voiture pour aller à St-Jacques de Compostelle. Je donne la parole maintenant à M. JANSSON qui est le Vice-Président pour les représentants des parlements nationaux.

M. JANSSON

Merci M. le Président, très chers collègues, membres de la convention. Je remercie tout d'abord M. MENDEZ DE VIGO des paroles aimables qu'il a eues à mon rencontre et je puis confirmer l'influence que lui et ses troupes du Parlement européen ont eue, une influence considérable. Évidemment nous avons travaillé en troïka conformément au souhait de notre Président, M. HERZOG. Très chers collègues, en tant qu'europpéen convaincu, je m'exprimerai en trois langues et je commencerai par le suédois, ensuite j'enchaînerai par le finnois et je terminerai en anglais. Je le ferai lentement car je sais qu'il se pourrait bien que nous rencontrions quelques petites difficultés de traduction en cours de route. Mesdames et Messieurs, l'organe a reçu un nom, il a été baptisé convention. La convention a travaillé pendant neuf mois et l'enfant devait naître après un terme normal de neuf mois. M. MENDEZ DE VIGO a parlé de douze mois, c'est peut-être exagéré pour une gestation. Aujourd'hui 2 octobre, notre enfant est enfin né. Nous ignorons encore s'il s'agit là d'une fille ou d'un fils. Notre enfant, cette charte, espérons-le, recevra sa personnalité le 13 octobre à Biarritz ou bien au plus tard lors du sommet de Nice. Ce que nous savons par contre d'ores et déjà c'est que les enfants, les garçons, les filles, les hommes et les femmes devront être traités de manière égale dans toutes les circonstances aux termes de l'article 23 de la charte. La diversité culturelle aux termes de l'article 22 me pousse à présent à passer au finnois.

Mesdames et Messieurs, chers membres de la convention, cela a été un grand honneur pour moi de vous représenter personnellement en tant que représentant parlementaire national dans ces travaux. J'ai été un des vôtres. Nous avons travaillé coude à coude pour faire en sorte d'imposer notre empreinte pour le bien de l'Europe. Je vous suis très reconnaissant pour le développement des travaux ici qui s'est fait conformément aux besoins et aux exigences des parlements nationaux c'est-à-dire, pour reprendre par exemple, le droit des enfants. Les parlementaires nationaux acceptent ces 54 articles, nous ferons en sorte que les parlements nationaux de tous les États membres propagent la bonne parole.

Mesdames et Messieurs, nous nous reportons à l'article 22. Je vais exploiter la diversité culturelle linguistique en poursuivant mon discours en anglais. Je voudrais tout d'abord adresser mes félicitations au Royaume-Uni et à son peuple. Aujourd'hui, le 2 octobre 2000, la Convention européenne des Droits de l'Homme entre en vigueur au Royaume-Uni. Voilà donc un jalon qui a été posé par un des membres fondateurs du Conseil de l'Europe. Notre charte compile cinquante années d'histoire des droits de l'homme en Europe. C'est une compilation et une fusion en un document unique qui a été réalisé et qui nous donne aujourd'hui notre charte. La question-clé qui se pose est la suivante : comment combiner l'intégration économique à l'intégration politique? Nous le savons, et M. le commissaire l'a dit dans son discours: l'intégration économique cela signifie la compétitivité dans un marché libre, cela signifie la levée de toutes les entraves et cela signifie que le marché décide de qui pourra opérer. Les autorités qualifiées de monopoles n'agissent plus, il y a contrôle de la population. Y a-t-il compétitivité au sein de mondes politiques? Ça c'est ma deuxième question et j'aurais tendance à y répondre "oui". Oui, la compétitivité existe, il y a concurrence entre l'Union et ses États membres et même entre l'Union et les autorités législatives locales et régionales. C'est la raison pour laquelle l'intégration économique peut être combinée à l'intégration politique mais à cela il y a deux conditions préalables: il faut tout d'abord que l'on établisse un, distinguo clair entre les deux sphères de compétences. On pourrait appeler cela une liste de compétences. Or, tout cela n'est pas du ressort de notre mandat. Chers collègues, nous comprenons fort bien qu'au titre de cette charge, comme M. Mendes de Vigo l'a dit, il ne peut pas y avoir de période transitoire en termes d'application des pouvoirs. L'autre condition préalable est très claire et la suivante: il faut fixer qui peut faire quoi et comment. En d'autres termes, il faut être au clair quant à la façon dont on va appliquer ces compétences. En fait, c'est cette question que vise mon intervention: la charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne a pour tâche en fait de fixer qui fait quoi et de quelle façon. De mon point de vue, c'est le but principal de ce document. Chers collègues, comme nous l'avons déjà dit, voilà un projet unique qui découle d'un mandat unique allant de pair avec une composition très particulière. Je voudrais également adresser mes remerciements à tous les participants, à tous nos collègues des parlements nationaux. Croyez-le bien, la tâche n'a guère été aisée mais cela a été un plaisir de travailler avec vous. Nous avons œuvré dans une atmosphère très constructive tout au cours de ces neuf mois de labeur et je souhaite qu'à l'avenir les parlementaires nationaux aient leur rôle à jouer lors des amendements à apporter au traité, amendements qui devraient découler de décisions qui seront prises, nous l'espérons, à Nice. Je suis très profondément reconnaissant également à notre Président, M. HERZOG. Après les événements du mois de juin, nous nous souvenons tous de ce qu'il nous avait demandé au Praesidium. Il nous avait demandé de poursuivre les travaux en tant que troïka, une troïka élargie, une troïka d'humains. Nous nous sommes efforcés de respecter son vœu et nous avons essayé de prendre en compte les messages des parlements nationaux. D'autres jugeront si nous avons vu nos efforts couronnés de succès. Tout ce que je puis vous dire, c'est que nous avons fait de notre mieux. Merci.

M. BRAIBANT: Vice-président, président des représentants des Chefs d'État et de Gouvernement:

Chers collègues et amis, la première parole que j'ai entendue quand je me suis intéressé à la charte, c'était "Nous sommes à un tournant de l'Europe". C'est une phrase un peu banale, souvent répétée, mais je crois qu'actuellement elle est particulièrement vraie. Une évolution double: l'élargissement géographique et l'extension des compétences. Et ce sont deux des raisons fondamentales pour lesquelles, je pense, les dirigeants européens ont voulu que nous rédigiions cette charte pour la présenter aux pays candidats et pour couvrir les nouvelles compétences de l'Europe qui n'est plus seulement un marché économique. La charte est achevée, sa rédaction par la convention est finie, la convention elle-même va disparaître. C'est peut-être le moment pour faire le point et je vous propose de le faire en retenant douze mots clés qui me paraissent expliquer et faciliter la compréhension de la charte, mais d'abord de la convention. La convention, on l'a déjà dit, c'est en elle-même une originalité. C'est une innovation, c'est sans précédent. Et nous avons dû inventer une procédure alors que nous n'avions ni précédent, ni règlement. Quelques mots clés sur la convention: d'abord, je pense que le principal c'est la collégialité. Cette charte, c'est une œuvre collective. Personne ne peut en invoquer la paternité.

Tous ont participé à son élaboration, et à plusieurs niveaux. Au niveau de ce qu'on appelle dans le jargon bruxellois la Task Force, c'est-à-dire un petit groupe de travail qui, autour du Professeur Jacqué, préparait les textes, ensuite au niveau du présidium, les fameux mousquetaires à la Dumas, puisqu'on a lancé aujourd'hui ce nouveau concept, ensuite les composantes, les trois composantes, parlementaires européens, parlementaires nationaux et représentants personnels des Chefs d'État et de Gouvernement, et enfin la Convention elle-même. Et cette collégialité s'est exercée à tous les niveaux, c'est-à-dire que tous ces niveaux, toute cette structure complexe a travaillé sous la direction d'un chef d'orchestre auquel on a déjà rendu hommage, qui est le Président Roman HERZOG et qui a réussi à combiner le travail de toutes ces composantes. Nous avons ici pour la première fois donc une collaboration de travail - et pas seulement de forme ou de discours - entre des représentants des exécutifs et des représentants des législatifs et entre des représentants nationaux et européens. Deuxième mot-clé de la procédure : la transparence. Nous l'avons mise dans la Charte, il y a plusieurs articles qui se réfèrent à la transparence, mais nous l'avons déjà, pour notre part, appliquée, et je crois que c'est une des premières fois où c'est fait à ce niveau, avec cette intensité. Transparence qui a pris plusieurs formes : publicité, diffusion, envoi de tous les textes au fur et à mesure de leur rédaction sur Internet, diffusion très large, et ce qui a lancé un débat national et européen. Le troisième mot-clé, c'est à mon avis la concertation. Le rôle actif de la société civile dans toute cette opération est à mon avis quelque chose qu'il faut souligner. Je dis parfois "c'est un Seattle pacifique". C'est peut-être un peu exagéré, et puis pour l'instant il est pacifique, espérons qu'il le restera. Mais cette relation que nous avons eue avec la société civile qui a participé par des entretiens avec nous ou avec certains d'entre nous par des colloques, par des contributions, est un élément très important de la fabrication de la Charte. Et parfois ces interventions de la société civile étaient irritantes, parce qu'elle voulait la lune ou quelque chose comme cela, mais souvent elle a été très utile et je peux dire que la Charte, si je prends simplement deux thèmes comme les droits des femmes et les droits sociaux, a été fortement influencée par une intervention active de la société civile et je crois que c'est un exemple qu'il faudra suivre et une leçon qu'il faudra tirer de notre exercice. Le quatrième mot-clé, c'est le consensus. Nous avons fonctionné par consensus, pas par vote. Nous n'avons jamais voté. Nous avons essayé une fois de voter, ça n'a pas été un succès, et on n'a pas recommencé parce qu'il y avait de la confusion sur le sens du vote et l'objet du vote. Mais nous avons eu des débats difficiles, il ne faut pas croire que cette charte telle qu'elle apparaît, qui a l'air assez élégante et assez organisée, s'est faite facilement. Il y a eu dans cette salle et dans d'autres des débats très difficiles, parfois houleux, en tout cas toujours courtois, mais parfois vraiment on se heurtait, c'étaient des batailles. C'était simplement le reflet des diversités que nous soulignons également dans la Charte, diversités culturelles, des cultures juridiques tellement différentes des pays anglo-saxons ou des pays continentaux, diversités politiques et diversités juridiques également. Il y a eu des affrontements sur les droits sociaux, sur certains droits nouveaux, sur les rapports avec la Convention et la Cour européenne des Droits de l'Homme et tous ces problèmes ont été surmontés par un consensus qui - je le signale et je le souligne - n'a été atteint que la semaine dernière. Et jusque-là, quand on me demandait "Est-ce que la Charte va aboutir ?", j'étais incapable de répondre, je disais d'une façon un peu sottise "Nous sommes de plus en plus près de l'aboutissement, mais nous n'y sommes pas encore et il peut y avoir encore des difficultés de dernière heure". Il y en a eu, d'ailleurs. Cela dit, on peut considérer que cette Charte a été adoptée ou approuvée par la Convention et par ses composantes, je dirais à la quasi-unanimité, avec quelques exceptions incontestablement, mais nous sommes maintenant dans une sorte de quasi-unanimité, c'est-à-dire un vrai consensus. Alors maintenant quelques mots-clés sur la Charte elle-même, sur le résultat de nos travaux. Je crois que le premier mot-clé, et c'est un peu la conséquence, mais c'était aussi la condition du consensus, c'est le mot "équilibre". Nous avons recherché plusieurs équilibres. L'équilibre entre si je puis dire d'un raccourci historique, les droits du 19ème siècle et les droits du 20ème siècle, l'équilibre entre le modèle européen - qui existe - des droits de l'homme et leur caractère universel également des droits de l'homme. L'équilibre entre les droits de la personne et les droits du citoyen. Enfin l'équilibre entre les droits politiques et les droits sociaux et à la fin je pense que nous avons réussi ces équilibres. Nous sommes arrivés à ce qu'on appelle un point d'équilibre tel que si l'on avait continué à travailler et c'est ce qui c'est passé dans la dernière semaine, chaque fois qu'on touchait à un droit il fallait toucher à un autre pour que l'équilibre soit maintenu. Alors maintenant qu'est-ce qu'il y a dans cette Charte et là j'ai six mots-clés, ce sont les six chapitres. Ils sont à mon avis fondamentaux aussi, parce que nous avons cassé la vieille dichotomie entre droit civil et politique, droits économiques et sociaux. Le premier mot s'est la dignité. On aurait pu se contenter de celui-là parce que c'est la matrice de tous les autres droits mais il y a quelques droits particulièrement fondamentaux comme l'interdiction de la peine de mort, comme l'interdiction de la torture, comme le droit à la vie qui sont rassemblés sous ce titre de dignité. Ensuite des libertés, ça c'est un chapitre plus classique qui a été fortement inspiré naturellement par la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, mais enrichi de plusieurs droits, le droit de travailler, la liberté d'entreprise et le droit d'asile. Egalité, nous avons fait je crois de grands progrès en donnant une définition élargie de la non-discrimination qui est interdite, en parlant pour la première fois de la diversité culturelle, religieuse et politique et enfin en proclamant l'égalité des hommes et des femmes dans tous les domaines. On ne peut pas être plus large. Le quatrième chapitre de la Charte, c'est la solidarité. J'attire votre attention sur ce thème qui n'a pas fait tout de suite l'unanimité parmi nous mais qui me paraît très important comme étant l'avènement d'un concept nouveau, pas tout à fait nouveau mais nouveau par rapport aux déclarations de droit antérieur et qui contient la plupart des droits sociaux, pas tous, il y en a dans d'autres chapitres mais la plupart des droits sociaux sont rassemblés là et c'est là qui est la plus grande valeur ajoutée de la Charte. Ces droits existaient déjà. Nous ne pouvions pas inventer de nouveaux droits, mais ce qui est nouveau, c'est le rassemblement qui entraîne une plus grande lisibilité et c'est le fait qu'ils rassemblés dans un document unique qui comprend aussi les droits politiques classiques. C'est pour moi ce que j'appellerai une promotion des droits sociaux. Ce ne sont plus des droits de seconde zone. Ce ne sont plus des droits au rabais, si je puis dire. Ce sont des droits qui seront dans le même document et qui auront la même valeur juridique quelle qu'elle soit que les droits politiques classiques. Ce sont des droits comme on dirait en français, à part entière. Ensuite la citoyenneté et la citoyenneté nous nous sommes aperçus qu'elle n'avait pas si je puis dire tellement d'importance que cela, c'est-à-dire qu'elle ne donne pas lieu à de nombreux droits. C'était une des trois corbeilles comme on disait du mandat de Cologne. En réalité les droits réservés aux citoyens de l'Union européenne sont très peu nombreux, ce sont uniquement des droits très politiques, comme le droit de vote ou le droit d'éligibilité. La plupart des autres droits que nous avons rassemblés sous ce terme de citoyenneté sont ouverts à tous les résidents et en particulier je signale qu'on a joint à cela un droit qui lui est vraiment nouveau dans cette formulation, c'est le droit à une bonne administration. Vaste programme. J'étais au début sceptique en appliquant le principe de M. HERZOG "ne promettons que ce que nous pouvons tenir" et la bonne administration, je ne sais pas si elle est pour demain, mais c'est bien d'avoir au moins fixé un objectif qui comporte une série de droits précis. Enfin le dernier chapitre, c'est la justice. C'est là encore inspiré très près de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme et finalement ce fameux chapitre des clauses horizontales. C'est un terme barbare. Ce n'est pas un terme d'ailleurs juridique et nous ne l'avons pas mis dans la Charte, nous l'avons traduit par dispositions générales, mais elles sont très importantes et elles ont été très difficiles à négocier et à rédiger. Nous avons là quelques principes. Pas d'extension des compétences de l'Union européenne. Limitation des limites que l'on peut apporter à la Charte. Un article d'articulation avec la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme et enfin un dernier principe, pas d'abaissement des protections existantes, soit dans les constitutions nationales, soit dans les traités internationaux. Un dernier mot maintenant sur l'avenir et je distinguerai dans l'avenir, si vous me le permettez, la Charte après la Convention et la Convention après la Charte. La Charte après la Convention, mais cette Convention va se dissoudre aujourd'hui et la Charte va maintenant suivre son cours. Nous allons l'envoyer au Président du Conseil européen, M. Jacques CHIRAC et ces jours-ci, peut-être aujourd'hui même et ça n'est plus maintenant l'affaire de la Convention. Il restera deux questions évidemment. Le caractère contraignant de la Charte, mais ça n'a n'était pas dans notre compétence et l'adhésion à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, mais ça n'était pas non plus dans notre compétence. C'est l'affaire des gouvernements et puis la Convention après la Charte, on peut se demander, ce que je veux dire par là, on y a déjà fait allusion, notamment M. Vitorino c'est que c'était une expérience qui aurait pu échouer, qui aurait pu se terminer lamentablement et c'est une expérience qui a réussi. Je rends hommage à ceux qui ont inventé cette formule et que je ne connais pas. En tout cas je n'en suis pas. Mais c'était une formule vraiment géniale c'est peut-être exagéré mais très intéressante. Cette formule de combinaison Europe-nation et Parlement-gouvernement. Et c'est ce qui nous a permis d'aboutir. Je me dis parfois en souriant si nous avons fait la Charte par une conférence intergouvernementale nous serions avec beaucoup d'optimisme à l'article 3 peut-être. Là nous avons réussi en 9 mois à faire cette charte malgré toutes les difficultés. Et je constate que déjà plusieurs hommes politiques européens et non des moindres ont envisagé cette formule de la charte pour d'autres exercices, pour d'autres chantiers. Alors je voudrais terminer cette intervention en rendant hommage d'abord à la Task force, à l'équipe dirigée par le Pr. Jacqué, qui a fait vraiment le gros du travail au départ, qui a abattu un travail considérable et je me demandais comment ils ont tenu le coup comme on dit, je trouve qu'ils ont une bonne santé. Je la leur souhaite encore pendant longtemps.

Deuxièmement aux interprètes, sans qui évidemment nous n'aurions pas pu nous comprendre, nous entendre, et qui ont dû manier un langage juridique souvent difficile, quand on songe au temps que nous avons passé à discuter de certains mots on s'imagine que la traduction n'était pas facile.

Rendre hommage enfin comme l'ont fait mes collègues au Président HERZOG. Avec une autorité souriante, pleine d'humour mais ferme il a réussi à diriger cette opération encore une fois sans précédent et il a réussi à nous mener à bon port. Il a eu des troubles, des perturbations très graves dans sa vie, et malheureusement il n'est pas parmi nous aujourd'hui, mais je crois que la moindre des choses c'est de lui rendre un hommage très chaleureux, très amical, très fraternel. Je dois dire qu'en ce qui me concerne j'ai été très heureux de travailler avec lui, auprès de lui.

Maintenant un dernier mot pour clore. Nous allons envoyer tout à l'heure je crois aujourd'hui même la Charte au Président de la République française, c'est-à-dire au Président du Conseil européen et c'est M. Mendez de Vigo qui va vous en lire le texte.

M. MENDEZ DE VIGO

Merci M. le Président. Je vais vous lire le texte que le Président HERZOG m'a fait parvenir. Je vais le lire en allemand. C'est une lettre adressée au Président de la République, Président du Conseil européen.

"Monsieur le Président,

Conformément aux conclusions du Conseil européen de Tampere, permettez-moi de vous faire tenir le projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne que les membres de la

Convention ont adopté lors de leur réunion du 26 septembre 2000. En conséquence, en concertation étroite avec les Vice-Présidents de la Convention chargés d'élaborer cette Charte, j'ai constaté que le texte avait obtenu l'aval définitif de toutes les parties. Veuillez croire M. le Président l'expression de mes sentiments distingués.

Roman HERZOG, ancien Président fédéral allemand, Président de la Convention."

(applaudissements)

Nous allons entendre l'hymne européen et je vous invite à cette occasion à vous lever. Ensuite nous aurons une photo et nous serons rassemblés là et ensuite un cocktail offert par la présidence française à tous les membres de la Convention.

Nous vous remercions.

FIN DE LA REUNION

CHARTRE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPENNE

INTERVENTION DU VICE-PRESIDENT GUY BRAIBANT AU CONSEIL EUROPEEN DE BIARRITZ

(14 octobre 2000)

Monsieur le Président,

Mesdames et Messieurs les membres du Conseil européen,

J'ai l'honneur de vous présenter le projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne, élaboré par la Convention qui en a été chargée par les réunions du Conseil européen de Cologne et de Tampere.

Je le fais à la place du Président Roman Herzog, qui en est empêché pour des raisons de santé, après avoir présidé la Convention depuis sa première réunion, le 17 décembre dernier. Je tiens à cette occasion à lui rendre au nom de tous les membres de la Convention un hommage très sincère et affectueux pour l'autorité, la compétence et la bienveillance dont il a fait preuve durant cette période, malgré des circonstances douloureuses sur le plan personnel. Le rôle qu'il a joué a été décisif dans l'heureux aboutissement de nos travaux.

Président de la délégation des représentants des Chefs d'État et de gouvernement depuis le 1^{er} juillet, après MM. Nikula et Vasconcellos, je m'adresse à vous également en compagnie et au nom des deux autres vice-présidents, MM. Mendez de Vigo et Jansson, qui représentent respectivement le Parlement européen et les Parlements nationaux. Je remercie enfin le Commissaire Antonio Vitorino pour la contribution très importante qu'il n'a cessé d'apporter à nos travaux.

*

* *

Il nous a semblé utile de traiter, en premier lieu, de la procédure suivie, que le Conseil européen avait défini en 1999 et qui a fait la preuve de son efficacité. C'est une procédure inédite et complexe. Elle a mêlé en effet dans un même organisme des représentants du Parlement européen, des Parlements nationaux, des exécutifs nationaux et de la Commission européenne. Elle a ainsi mis en œuvre, si l'on peut dire, une " mixité plurielle ", parlementaire et gouvernementale, nationale et européenne, juridique et politique, avec des personnalités élues et nommées.

Le caractère collégial de la Convention s'est exprimé lui-même à plusieurs niveaux : la Convention elle-même, ses trois composantes et le Présidium. Des échanges constants entre ces différents groupes ont permis de rechercher et finalement d'obtenir un consensus.

Cette collégialité s'est accompagnée d'une transparence et d'une concertation très exceptionnelles : tous les textes élaborés ou reçus par la Convention ont été diffusés et rendus accessibles sur Internet et les séances étaient publiques. La société civile est intervenue activement, à tous les stades de la procédure, par des textes et des auditions. La Convention a reçu près de quatre cent contributions écrites, émanant soit de ses membres soit d'organismes extérieurs tels que des syndicats, des associations, des Eglises, des organisations non gouvernementales représentant tous les courants de pensée et toutes les catégories sociales. On peut affirmer sans exagérer que la Charte a été en grande partie directement inspirée et influencée par ces interventions.

De même, la Convention a entendu les représentants du Conseil de l'Europe et de la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes qui y siégeaient comme observateurs, ainsi que le Comité économique et social, le Comité des régions et le Médiateur. Elle a également reçu des représentants de tous les pays candidats à l'Union européenne, pour les informer sur les travaux d'élaboration de la Charte et recueillir leurs observations, qui ont été dans l'ensemble favorables.

La Charte est ainsi une œuvre collective à laquelle, au-delà de la Convention elle-même et des Parlements et gouvernements qui y étaient représentés, ont été associées des milliers de personnes et institutions.

*

* *

Le nombre et la diversité des participants a rendu l'accord final à la fois plus difficile et plus solide. Le consensus n'a été obtenu qu'à la suite de débats animés, parfois tendus, bien que toujours courtois, qui ont porté surtout sur trois problèmes.

Le premier concerne la place et la nature des droits sociaux. Certains voulaient en limiter l'importance ; d'autres souhaitaient au contraire l'étendre afin de refléter dans la Charte le " modèle social européen ". La nature de ces droits a fait également l'objet de discussions et de compromis. Certains sont des droits d'effet direct, immédiatement justiciables, comme la liberté syndicale, d'autres sont des principes qui doivent être mis en œuvre en général par les Etats membres et qui ne peuvent plus ensuite être remis en cause. Nous avons tenté d'atteindre dans ce domaine difficile un point d'équilibre, avec le double souci de ne pas décevoir les attentes des citoyens et de ne pas leur faire de promesses qui ne pourraient être tenues.

Le deuxième sujet de discussion a porté sur l'opportunité d'introduire dans la Charte des droits modernes, résultant de l'évolution des techniques et des idées. En principe, les mandats de Cologne et de Tampere limitaient notre compétence à la codification de droits existants. Nous avons interprété cette notion avec une certaine souplesse. Nous n'avons pas introduit dans la Charte des droits nouveaux à proprement parler, mais certains droits qui figuraient déjà dans des instruments internationaux, sans avoir été inscrits dans des textes généraux relatifs aux droits fondamentaux : tel est le cas des droits liés à la bioéthique, à l'informatique, à l'environnement, à la consommation, à l'administration, ou encore des droits des enfants.

Le troisième thème de nos débats, qui nous a occupé longuement en raison de son importance pratique et de sa difficulté technique, a été l'articulation de la nouvelle Charte avec la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Nous sommes parvenus à un compromis qui permet de respecter l'autonomie du droit communautaire sans remettre en cause l'acquis de cette Convention et de la jurisprudence de la Cour de Strasbourg qui l'a interprétée ; nous avons également cherché à éviter les conflits de compétences et les contrariétés de jurisprudences entre cette Cour et celle de Luxembourg. Nous sommes parvenus à un accord qui a recueilli l'approbation des représentants du Conseil de l'Europe à la Convention : les droits inscrits dans la Charte qui correspondent à des droits figurant dans la Convention ont le même sens et la même portée ; il est en outre précisé que le droit de l'Union peut accorder une protection plus étendue, ce qui est déjà le cas dans la Charte elle-même, par exemple en matière de recours juridictionnels ; enfin la Charte ne peut porter atteinte aux droits déjà reconnus dans les textes constitutionnels et internationaux, notamment la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Ainsi les relations entre les deux documents sont-elles précisées dans l'intérêt des citoyens, de manière à éviter toute interférence, ambiguïté ou recul.

*

* *

Permettez-moi, de vous donner maintenant quelques indications sur des points qui ont rencontré rapidement un accord au sein de la Convention.

D'abord le style.

Nous nous sommes donné comme objectif de rédiger la Charte pour les citoyens, et non pas seulement pour les techniciens du droit, dans un style clair, concis et percutant, à l'image de nos grands ancêtres en matière juridique, les Romains. Nous n'avons peut-être pas toujours réussi, parce que les compromis sont parfois difficiles à résumer en quelques mots. Mais il nous a semblé que nous nous étions approchés de cet objectif et que le texte améliore la visibilité des droits fondamentaux, conformément au mandat que vous nous avez donné.

Ensuite, la structure de la Charte.

Son plan est par lui-même original et c'est peut-être là une de ses innovations les plus spectaculaires. Nous avons voulu abandonner la séparation des droits civils et politiques et des droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, qui date de l'après-guerre, qui s'est exprimée par les deux pactes des Nations Unies et qui se retrouve en Europe avec la distinction de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme et de la Charte sociale européenne. Nous avons préféré regrouper les droits en six chapitres : dignité ; libertés ; égalité ; solidarité ; citoyenneté ; justice. Ces termes correspondent à des valeurs communes de l'Europe. La Charte apparaît ainsi comme un recueil de valeurs autant que de droits et elle n'en prend que plus d'importance dans la perspective de l'élargissement de l'Union européenne.

C'est dans ces six chapitres et leurs 50 articles que sont énoncés les droits que nous avons retenus.

Le premier, celui qui domine tous les autres et dont tous les autres découlent, c'est la dignité humaine. Il est suivi de droits et de protections aussi essentielles que les droits à la vie, à l'intégrité physique et mentale, et c'est ici que sont insérées les dispositions sur la bioéthique, ainsi que l'interdiction de la traite des êtres humains.

Les libertés comprennent les grandes libertés classiques et le droit de propriété, auxquels nous avons ajouté la protection des données à caractère personnel, le pluralisme des médias, le droit de travailler et la liberté d'entreprise, le droit d'asile.

Les droits sociaux sont répartis entre les chapitres sur l'égalité et la solidarité. Ils comprennent en particulier l'égalité entre hommes et femmes, qui est renforcée et s'applique " dans tous les domaines " ; le principe d'égalité entraîne également la reconnaissance de droits à des catégories faibles ou défavorisées comme les enfants, les personnes âgées, les handicapés. Le principe de solidarité comprend d'une part les droits des travailleurs et d'autre part ceux des personnes qui se trouvent dans une situation de faiblesse ou de besoin qui doit être compensée par l'attribution d'avantages ou de prestations, tels que la sécurité sociale ou l'aide au logement. Cet ensemble n'entraînera pas par lui-même de dépenses supplémentaires, car les droits et principes qu'il reconnaît existent déjà au niveau des Etats membres ou de l'Union ; mais ils constituent probablement la principale valeur ajoutée de la Charte par leur réunion avec les autres droits, pour la première fois, dans un même texte européen sur les droits fondamentaux.

Les chapitres sur la citoyenneté et la justice, qui s'inspirent étroitement d'une part du traité sur l'Union européenne et d'autre part de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, appellent moins de commentaires. Il faut seulement noter la consécration de la notion si importante aujourd'hui de " droit à une bonne administration ", complété par le droit d'accès aux documents, le recours au Médiateur européen et le droit de pétition.

La Charte, contrairement à ce qui avait été envisagé au début des travaux de la Convention, ne comporte pas une deuxième partie composée de commentaires ayant le même statut que la Charte elle-même, afin d'éviter toute confusion. Mais elle sera accompagnée " d'explications ", comprenant surtout des références juridiques et des interprétations qui serviront à l'éclairer et à faciliter son application. Elles ont été établies sous la responsabilité du Présidium.

Les droits reconnus dans la Charte s'inscrivent dans le cadre de principes généraux qui figurent dans les dispositions finales et qui sont essentielles pour en comprendre la portée. Elles ont notamment pour objet la mise en œuvre d'une double règle que la Convention a adoptée dès le début de ses travaux : ne pas se prononcer sur l'introduction de la Charte dans les traités, conformément au mandat de Cologne ; mais, suivant la proposition du Président Herzog, rédiger la Charte " comme si " elle devait être un jour contraignante.

Ces dispositions concernent, comme on l'a vu, les rapports de la Charte avec les autres instruments nationaux et internationaux qui définissent des droits fondamentaux. Elles rappellent que la Charte n'affecte en aucune façon les compétences de l'Union et de la communauté et qu'elle respecte le principe de subsidiarité ; elle s'applique seulement aux institutions et organes de l'Union et aux Etats membres lorsqu'ils mettent en œuvre le droit de l'Union.

Loin d'étendre les pouvoirs de l'Union, la Charte a pour objet de les soumettre plus fortement et plus clairement au respect des droits fondamentaux ; compte tenu de l'extension de ses compétences à des domaines nouveaux tels que la justice, la police ou la diplomatie, ce renforcement au niveau européen de la notion d'Etat de droit, déjà affirmée en principe dans les Traités, est devenu une nécessité.

*

* *

Les auteurs de la Charte, que nous représentons ici, ne prétendent naturellement pas qu'elle soit parfaite. Chacun des membres de la Convention a éprouvé des regrets, des remords, des frustrations. C'est la contrepartie de la recherche du consensus par des compromis. Il nous a semblé que le projet de Charte dans son état actuel est acceptable. Mais même si nous avons essayé de la bâtir pour qu'elle dure, elle n'est évidemment pas éternelle ; elle pourra et elle devra évoluer comme tout texte du même genre. Correspondant aux besoins et à l'état de l'Europe de l'an 2000, elle pourra assurer une protection meilleure de ses citoyens et un contrôle plus efficace de ses institutions.

Peut-être sera-t-elle considérée, si elle est proclamée, comme "l'âme de l'Europe".

Rede von Herrn Siegbert Alber
Generalanwalt am
Gerichtshof der Europäischen Gemeinschaften
(in der vom Gerichtshof übermittelten Fassung)

Herr Präsident,
sehr verehrte Damen,
meine Herren,

In weniger als einem Jahr hat der Konvent einen sehr ausgewogenen und überzeugenden Entwurf einer Charta der Grundrechte ausgearbeitet. Angesichts der Kürze der Zeit und der Schwierigkeit der Materie ist dies eine beachtenswerte Leistung, die Dank und Anerkennung verdient. Wenn ich den Konvent - und die Task Force mit dem Sekretariat eingeschlossen - zu Recht lobe, dann ist dies kein Eigenlob, denn der EuGH war im Konvent ja "nur" durch Beobachter vertreten. Das dadurch dennoch gewonnene Insider-Wissen rechtfertigt jedoch dieses Lob in jedem Falle.

Großer Dank gebührt dem Präsidium auch zugleich in seiner Eigenschaft als Redaktionskomitee. Wegen der souveränen Sitzungsleitung und der gelungenen Verbindung von fast raffinierter Semantik mit fundierter Rechtsetzung gebührt ihm eine Goldmedaille.

Besonders möchte ich natürlich dem Präsidenten des Konvents, Herrn Professor Roman Herzog, danken, der heute aus gesundheitlichen Gründen leider nicht anwesend sein kann. Seine langjährige verfassungsrechtliche Erfahrung war für die Arbeiten ein großer Gewinn und Vorteil. Er hat den Inhalt der Charta wesentlich mitgeprägt. Ich möchte ihm von dieser Stelle aus gute Besserung wünschen, auch wenn wir kein Grundrecht auf Gesundheit und Wohlbefinden sondern nur auf ärztliche Versorgung in die Charta aufgenommen haben.

Die Öffentlichkeit hat die Arbeiten des Konvents mit lebhaftem Interesse verfolgt. Die Fülle der Anregungen und Änderungswünsche aber auch die Vielzahl der Tagungen, Diskussionsrunden und Seminare zu diesem Thema beweisen dies. Es ist verständlich, dass die Bürger einen Grundrechtskatalog begrüßen würden, der allen gesellschaftlichen, ethischen und sozialen Entwicklungen einerseits, wie auch den naturwissenschaftlichen und technischen Errungenschaften andererseits - vor allem im biologischen und medizinischen Bereich - Rechnung tragen würde. Es ist verständlich, dass die Bürger eine Charta gewissermaßen auf dem "neuesten Stand" fordern, da sie sagen, die Europäische Menschenrechtskonvention ist inzwischen 50 Jahre alt und die Menschenrechtserklärung der Vereinten Nationen sogar noch zwei Jahre älter. Doch angesichts der begrenzten Kompetenzen der Union konnte diesen Wünschen nicht voll entsprochen werden. Es wäre nun Sache der Mitgliedstaaten, die Arbeiten des Konvents auszuwerten und den berechtigten Forderungen der Bürger durch die Anpassung und Ergänzung der nationalen Grundrechtskataloge zu entsprechen. All denen, die die Charta für unzureichend halten, sei gesagt: Im Hinblick auf die limitierten Zuständigkeiten auf europäischer Ebene ist dem Konvent die Gratwanderung zwischen Wünschenswertem und Machbarem exzellent gelungen.

Der Konvent schließt heute seine Arbeiten ab. Jetzt ist es am Europäischen Rat, die Charta anzunehmen und für verbindlich zu erklären. Damit kann er zeigen, dass er es mit der Charta ernst meint, denn es war ja der Europäische Rat selbst, der vor eineinhalb Jahren ihre Erstellung anregte und der auf eine schnelle Ausarbeitung drängte. Manche waren darüber erstaunt und meinten, wenn eine pro-europäische Initiative vom Europäischen Rat selbst ausgehe, müsse man misstrauisch werden. Etwa in dem Sinne wie Talleyrand damals sinnierte, als man ihm dem Tod eines ebenfalls trickreichen Diplomaten mitteilte. Er fragte: Was wollte der damit jetzt wieder bezwecken?

Also, was wollte der Europäische Rat mit der Charta bezwecken? Hoffentlich nicht eine bloße Ablenkung von ungelösten institutionellen Problemen, sondern - wie es in der Präambel der Charta heißt - das Sichtbarmachen des Schutzes und der Stärkung der Grundrechte. Dies kann jedoch nur erreicht werden, wenn die Charta verbindlich wird und die Grundrechte einklagbar sein werden. Eine bloß deklaratorische Bedeutung würde die Arbeit des Konvents nicht nur vergeblich machen, sondern sich auch auf die europäische Idee geradezu kontraproduktiv auswirken. Durch die Verbindlicherklärung kann der Europäische Rat also beweisen, dass er es mit der Charta und den Grundrechten ernst meint.

Es wird nun auch weiter darauf ankommen, ob die Charta Teil der Römischen Verträge wird oder ob sie eine eigenständige Rechtsquelle bleibt. Dies ist zwar letztlich nur ein formaler Gesichtspunkt aber doch für die gerichtliche Zuständigkeit wichtig. Im letzteren Fall müsste in die Charta noch eine dem Artikel 46 d des Unionsvertrags vergleichbare Vorschrift aufgenommen werden, die die Zuständigkeit des Gerichtshofes begründet. In jedem Fall müssen auch einige Bestimmungen der Römischen Verträge ergänzt werden. Beispielsweise verweist Artikel 6 Absatz 2 des Unionsvertrages bislang nur auf die Europäische Menschenrechtskonvention und die Grundfreiheiten, wie sie sich als allgemeine Grundsätze des Gemeinschaftsrechts aus den gemeinsamen Verfassungsüberlieferungen der Mitgliedstaaten ergeben. Auch in andere Vertragsartikel ist die Charta aufzunehmen und so mit den Verträgen zu verklammern.

Mitunter ist geäußert worden, die Charta sei auch deshalb notwendig, damit sich der Gerichtshof an sie halte. Wer so argumentiert kennt die Rechtsprechung des Europäischen Gerichtshofes nicht. Schon Ende der 60er Jahre hat dieser die Bedeutung der Grundrechte unterstrichen und ihre Beachtung als ein Grundprinzip der europäischen Rechtsordnung bezeichnet. Letztlich geht sogar die Formulierung des bereits genannten Artikels 6 des Unionsvertrages auf die Rechtsprechung des EuGH zurück. Ebenso beachtet der Gerichtshof die Urteile des Europäischen Gerichtshofes für Menschenrechte, wie unser Präsident Rodríguez Iglesias wiederholt ausgeführt hat. Es gab in der Tat einige wenige Fälle eines vermeintlichen Dissenses, doch ist dazu zu bemerken, dass die fraglichen Urteile des Europäischen Gerichtshofes jeweils zeitlich vor vergleichbaren Entscheidungen des Europäischen Gerichtshofes für Menschenrechte lagen. Im Grundsätzlichen gibt es also keinen Dissens und keine Divergenzen. Dies ist wichtig, weil die Zusammenarbeit der beiden Gerichtshöfe nach Verabschiedung der Charta eine neue Qualität erhalten wird. Die Charta gilt nach ihrem Artikel 51 einerseits für die Organe der Union und andererseits für die Mitgliedstaaten, allerdings insoweit limitiert auf die Durchführung des Unionsrechts durch die Mitgliedstaaten. Dies eröffnet einen getrennten Rechtsweg: Im ersten Fall ist - ohne Beitritt der Union zur Europäischen Menschenrechtskonvention - ausschließlich der EuGH zuständig; im zweiten Fall kann nach Erschöpfung des nationalen Rechtswegs auch noch der Europäische Gerichtshof für Menschenrechte angerufen werden. Zwar gibt es diesen "gesplitteten" Rechtsweg auch heute schon, er wird jedoch künftig mehr an Bedeutung gewinnen. Doch auch hierzu ist zu sagen, dass die Zusammenarbeit zwischen dem Gerichtshof der Europäischen Gemeinschaften und dem Europäischen Gerichtshof für Menschenrechte eine gute ist. Selbst wenn sich für eine institutionalisierte Kooperation keine Modelle finden lassen, kann auch auf informelle Weise vieles an Übereinstimmung erreicht werden.

Was macht nun den Wert der Charta aus? Es ist der Beweis, dass die Union nicht nur eine Wirtschaftsgemeinschaft, sondern auch und besonders eine Rechtsgemeinschaft ist. Die Charta zeigt Werte auf. So wird aus dieser Rechtsgemeinschaft eine Rechte-Gemeinschaft. Die Grundrechte der Bürger sind die Grundmauern der Demokratie. Ohne diese Grundpfeiler gibt es auch keine innere Stabilität für die Union. Auch wenn die Charta vielleicht gegenüber dem Bisherigen nicht viel neues oder zusätzliches bringt, so macht sie doch erstmals nach außen deutlich, dass es der Mensch ist, der im Mittelpunkt auch der Europäischen Politik steht. Nicht von ungefähr beginnt die Charta mit der Würde des Menschen, aus der sich viele der weiteren Rechte ableiten. Ähnliches gilt für die Solidarität. Es ist nun zu hoffen, dass die Gewährung dieser Rechte für alle Verpflichteten eine Selbstverständlichkeit ist, so dass der Bürger sie gar nicht erst einklagen muss. Dies würde zudem die Zahl der Prozesse beim EuGH verringern, was für alle ein großer Gewinn wäre. Auch wenn die Charta noch nicht der Schlussstein für das gemeinsame Haus Europa ist, so ist sie doch ein entscheidender Eckstein und ein wichtiger Meilenstein für die europäische Integration. Sie ist ein Beweis dafür, dass die Europäische Gemeinschaft nicht nur eine Friedensgemeinschaft nach außen, sondern auch eine solche nach innen ist.

III.3. Drafts, and Members' Amendments and Contributions

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 6 January 2000 (13.01)
(OR. f)*CHARTE 4102/00*CONTRIB 2*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find enclosed a discussion draft, submitted by Prof. Jürgen Meyer of the German Bundestag, based on the European Parliament's Declaration of fundamental rights and freedoms of 12 April 1989 ¹.

¹ This text has been submitted in French, German, Italian, English and Spanish.

EUROPEAN CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS

Discussion draft, based on the European Parliament's Declaration of fundamental rights and freedoms' of 12 April 1989

PREAMBLE

In recognition of the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, the other international declarations and treaties providing for the protection of fundamental rights within the Union and the fundamental rights developed in the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities and as a further step towards its primary objective of economic integration leading on to the political union of its citizens, the European Union adopts the following European Charter of Fundamental Rights on the basis of its declaration of belief in parliamentary democracy, the rule of law and welfare statism.

Article 1

Human dignity

Human dignity is inviolable.

Article 2

Civil rights and liberties

1. Everyone shall have the right to life, physical integrity and respect for his dignity in death. Human liberty shall be inviolable. Any intrusion upon this guarantee shall be possible only for the duration and under the conditions specified by law.
2. No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, degrading or inhuman treatment or punishment.
3. Everyone shall have the right to develop his personality freely provided that he does not infringe the rights of others and does not violate the principles set out in this charter.

Article 4

Freedom of conscience and religion

1. The freedom of conscience, religious belief and worship shall be inviolable.
2. If a citizen of the Union is unable to fulfil his civil obligations because they are inconsistent with his conscience, the state shall, wherever possible, enable him to fulfil equivalent obligations. This shall not apply to taxes and other charges.

Article 5

Freedom of opinion and information

1. Everyone shall have the right to express and disseminate his opinion in words or images or by other means and to receive and impart information.
The freedom of the press and reporting by other means of mass communication shall be guaranteed.
There shall be no censorship.
2. Access to cultural events and facilities shall be guaranteed.
3. These rights may be restricted only by laws intended to protect public safety or order, health, the personality and honour or to prevent crime.
4. Intellectual, artistic and scientific development and teaching shall be free.

Article 6

Data protection

1. Everyone shall have the right to determine for himself the disclosure and use of his personal data and to obtain information on their storage provided that this right does not conflict with the rights of third persons.
2. Restrictions shall be admissible by law only in the dominant general interest.

Article 7

Privacy

1. Everyone shall have the right to respect for and the protection of his identity.
2. Respect for privacy and family life, reputation, the home and private correspondence by mail and telecommunications shall be guaranteed.
3. Restrictions of the inviolability of the home shall be admissible only in cases for which the law provides, especially to avert serious threats to public safety or to solve particularly serious crimes. Interference with correspondence by mail and telecommunications shall be permissible only under the conditions for which the criminal law provides.

Article 8

Marriage and family

1. Marriage and the family shall enjoy particular protection. Single-parent families, large families and families that include one or more disabled persons shall be entitled to special care from the authorities.
2. Other long-term relationships shall have the right to be protected against discrimination.
3. Housework, bringing up children, the care of the needy at home and employment shall be deemed equal.

Article 9

Asylum

Anyone who is persecuted for his political views or is exposed to inhuman or degrading treatment shall have the right of asylum.

Article 10

Right of ownership

The right of ownership and the owner's right to transfer property during his lifetime and following his death shall be guaranteed. Property acquired by criminal act shall not be protected.

No one shall be deprived of his property except where deemed necessary in the public interest and only subject to the conditions provided for by law and in return for fair compensation.

Article 11

Freedom of assembly

Everyone shall have the right to take part in peaceful meetings unarmed.

Article 12

Freedom of association

1. Everyone shall have the right freely to form associations with others.
2. Employees and employers shall have the right freely to form professional associations or trade unions of their choice.
The right of such associations to negotiate and conclude collective agreements shall be guaranteed.

Article 13

Work and working conditions

1. The right to work shall be guaranteed through the Member States' attachment of particular importance to the goal of full employment in their economic policies. They shall take measures to promote employment.
2. Employees shall have the right to safe, healthy and decent working conditions.

Article 14

Right to education

Everyone shall have the right to education.

Article 15

Natural foundations of life

Everyone shall have the right to the protection and care of the natural foundations of life and shall be equally required to preserve them.

Article 16

Right of petition

Everyone shall have the right to address written requests or complaints to the European Parliament. The detailed provisions governing the exercise of this right shall be laid down by the European Parliament.

Article 17

Ne bis in idem

No one shall be tried or convicted for offences for which he has already been acquitted or convicted.

Article 18

Nulla poena sine lege

No one shall be punished for an act or omission which did not constitute a penal offence at the time when it occurred.

Article 19

Freedom of movement

1. All citizens of the Union shall have the right to move and reside freely in the territory of the Member States. All citizens of the Union shall be free to leave and return to the territory of the Member States unhindered.
2. All citizens of third countries shall enjoy these rights to the same extent if they have been lawfully resident in the territory of the Member States for five years.
3. The rights referred to in paragraphs 1 and 2 may be restricted only by provisions which are consistent with the foundations of the Union.

Article 20

Freedom to choose an occupation

1. All citizens of the Union shall have the right to equality of opportunity, freely to choose their occupation and place of work and freely to pursue their occupation.
2. The freedom of choice of a place of training shall be guaranteed.
3. All citizens of third countries shall have the rights referred to in paragraphs 1 and 2 to the same extent if they have been lawfully resident in the territory of the Member States for five years.
4. These rights may be restricted only by a law which serves the public good.

Article 21

Right to housing

The right to adequate housing shall be guaranteed by a policy of the Member States which promotes the creation and maintenance of housing for all citizens of the Union.

Article 22

Social security

1. The right to adequate social protection shall be guaranteed.
2. All citizens of the Union shall have the right to measures that guarantee them the best possible state of health.

Article 23

Right to vote and to stand for election

1. All citizens of the Union aged at least 18 years shall have the right to vote and to stand for election to the European Parliament and to the local parliaments in the area where they live.
2. All citizens of third countries shall have the rights referred to in paragraph 1 to the same extent if they have been lawfully resident in the territory of the Member States for five years.

Article 24

Limits

The rights, freedoms and guarantees set out in this Charter may be restricted by law solely for the purpose of upholding other rights or interests protected by this Charter. Such restriction shall be limited to what is absolutely essential.

The substance of the rights and freedoms shall remain unaffected in any event.

Article 25

Access to the courts

Anyone whose rights and freedoms have been infringed shall have the right to bring an action in a court or tribunal specified by law.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNE
fundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 7 janvier 2000

CHARTE 4103/00

CONTRIB 3

NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-après une proposition de Charte Européenne des droits fondamentaux, soumise à l'enceinte instituée par le Conseil de Cologne. Ce texte est soumis par M. Georges Berthu, Député au Parlement européen. ¹

¹ Ce texte n'a été soumis qu'en langue française.

GEORGES BERTHU

GROUPE UNION POUR L'EUROPE DES NATIONS
MEMBRE DE LA DÉLÉGATION CONJOINTE
CHARGÉE DE L'ÉLABORATION DE LA CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX

PROPOSITION

de Charte Européenne des droits fondamentaux soumise à la délégation conjointe Conseil - Parlements - Commission instituée par le Conseil de Cologne

Paris, le 17 décembre 1999

Le Conseil de Tampere a prévu, dans ses conclusions concernant les méthodes de travail de "l'enceinte" chargée de l'élaboration de la Charte des droits fondamentaux, qu'un "comité de rédaction" préparerait un avant-projet "en tenant compte des propositions de texte soumises par tout membre de l'enceinte".

En application de cette disposition, Georges Berthu, député européen membre de la délégation du PE à la délégation conjointe ("l'enceinte"), présente ci-après une proposition de charte reflétant la conception d'une Europe fondée sur ses démocraties nationales.

SOMMAIRE

	Pages
Résumé	3
Exposé des motifs	4
Projet de charte	9
Annexes	14

Résumé de la proposition

Le Conseil de Cologne a décidé, le 4 juin 1999 que "à ce stade du développement de l'Union européenne, il conviendrait de réunir les droits fondamentaux en vigueur au niveau de l'Union dans une charte, de manière à leur donner une plus grande visibilité"¹.

Cette décision, telle qu'elle est couramment interprétée - c'est-à-dire impliquant la rédaction d'un catalogue assez complet de droits des citoyens unifiés au niveau européen - ne peut être appliquée qu'au prix de travaux ardues, et néanmoins largement inutiles, car ces droits sont déjà bien protégés. Surtout, la finalité constitutionnelle à laquelle obéit implicitement à la charte conduirait à déposséder chaque démocratie nationale de la définition autonome des droits de ses citoyens. Ce résultat serait tout à fait contraire à la conception d'une Europe où chaque peuple doit rester maître de son destin.

On trouvera dans le présent document la proposition des éléments principaux d'une autre charte qui, elle, aurait le mérite d'être plus simple et utile. Elle pourrait certes se référer aux droits fondamentaux des citoyens, mais en laissant leur définition au niveau des Constitutions nationales et des conventions internationales pertinentes². Son objet premier serait plutôt de donner une approche commune des valeurs des pays membres, et de définir la philosophie institutionnelle sur laquelle repose l'Union. Cette charte serait ouverte à la signature des membres actuels et des pays de l'Est candidats. Par ces caractères, elle répondrait à deux questions actuelles et urgentes :

- le rôle-pivot des démocraties nationales, et les principes qui doivent sous-tendre la prise de décision dans une Europe élargie,
- l'établissement immédiat d'un lien visible entre tous les pays membres et les pays candidats à l'Union.

Pour résumer, il faut faire un choix entre une charte de haut niveau politique, aidant à traiter vraiment les problèmes actuels de l'Europe, ou bien une charte énumérant dans le détail des droits individuels et sociaux, qui créera autant de problèmes qu'elle en résoudra, et apportera surtout des satisfactions aux théoriciens de l'intégration.

Σ

¹ Point 44 des conclusions - Voir annexe 1.

² Voir annexe 4.

Première partie

Exposé des motifs

I- La décision de Cologne

1- Une procédure anormale

L'idée de rédiger une charte européenne des droits fondamentaux n'est pas nouvelle : le Parlement européen, dans ses résolutions du 12 avril 1989 et du 10 février 1994, avait déjà demandé l'adoption d'une telle déclaration, à insérer dans le cadre d'une "Constitution" européenne. Plus récemment, le Parlement et la Commission avaient lancé plusieurs travaux d'experts sur le sujet¹. Cependant, ces réflexions n'avaient pas dépassé des cercles restreints et, à la veille du Conseil de Cologne, ne semblaient guère d'actualité.

Pourtant, la décision de lancer la préparation d'une charte des droits fondamentaux apparaît dans les conclusions du Conseil de Cologne, brusquement, et en apparence à contretemps :

- au moment même où le Conseil ouvrait ainsi le débat, par le biais de la charte, sur des perspectives constitutionnelles à terme, il déployait de grands efforts, sur un autre front, pour obtenir l'effet inverse : il essayait en effet d'éviter l'élargissement de la future CIG vers un ordre du jour de type constitutionnel ;
- les gouvernements nationaux qui ont ainsi lancé la préparation de la charte n'ont pas procédé préalablement à des consultations minima, et n'ont pas cherché à recueillir un feu vert, au moins sur le principe, de la part des Parlements nationaux, traditionnellement décideurs principaux en matière de droits des citoyens.

Il ressort de ces éléments une double impression : l'irrégularité de la procédure suivie, qui n'est pas conforme à la répartition des compétences prévue par les traités ; l'impréparation profonde du Conseil, dont on retrouve les conséquences dans les graves imperfections de la décision de Cologne.

¹ Voir notamment le rapport du groupe d'experts publié en février 1999 par la Commission : "Affirmation des droits fondamentaux dans l'Union européenne", ou la "Charte des citoyennes et des citoyens européens" publiée en décembre 1997 par l'association "Forum permanent de la société civile" avec le soutien de la Commission ; voir aussi, par exemple, le rapport commandé par les services du Parlement européen à l'Institut Universitaire Européen "Quelle Charte constitutionnelle pour l'Union européenne ?" (Mai 1999).

2- Une rédaction ambiguë

Sur le fond, la décision de Cologne est entachée de nombreuses ambiguïtés, provenant soit de l'impréparation du texte, soit au contraire d'une volonté de brouiller les cartes.

- Sur l'étendue des droits : à première vue, l'étendue des droits visés aurait pu être assez restreinte. Il s'agit en effet des droits "fondamentaux" (donc les principes essentiels), déjà "en vigueur" (donc en excluant la création de nouveaux droits), "au niveau de l'Union" (donc sans les droits nationaux non déjà inclus dans les traités) et enfin pour les "citoyens de l'Union" (donc sans traiter la question des ressortissants de pays tiers). Toutefois, les premières discussions ont montré que ces barrières sont fragiles, et que les rédacteurs vont sombrer dans l'inflation des textes. Les nombreuses propositions déjà évoquées montrent que la limite entre le droit "fondamental" et le droit "moins fondamental" ou "normal" est totalement subjective. De même les définitions de droits au niveau européen et au niveau national se recoupent et se chevauchent. Enfin, il est clair qu'une forte pression va s'exercer en faveur de la proclamation de nouveaux droits européens, ne serait-ce que pour contourner, sur tel ou tel point précis, telle ou telle réticence nationale.
- Sur la méthode de travail : les Parlements nationaux, en théorie décideurs principaux, comme on l'a vu, se trouvent embrigadés, parmi d'autres, dans la mise en oeuvre d'une décision sur le principe de laquelle ils n'ont jamais eu à se prononcer ; pis encore, ils disparaissent complètement au moment de la proclamation de la Charte.
- Sur l'objectif même de l'exercice : le texte de Cologne apparaît extraordinairement discret sur les raisons profondes qui ont motivé le lancement de l'initiative. Il s'agirait seulement, est-il affirmé, d'un exercice formel destiné à donner aux droits concernés "une plus grande visibilité". Si tel était le cas, la disproportion serait flagrante entre d'une part l'ampleur du travail à réaliser et des moyens mis en oeuvre, d'autre part la minceur de l'utilité invoquée. En réalité, le "profil bas" adopté à Cologne est parfaitement hypocrite. Michel Barnier, lors de l'audition préalable à sa nomination comme membre de la Commission, le 8 septembre suivant, a été plus franc lorsqu'il a déclaré que le processus d'élaboration de la Charte devait "rejoindre, au bon moment", le "processus de constitutionnalisation des traités"¹.

¹ Compte-rendu, p. 6.

Le véritable objectif de l'exercice s'éclaire alors : poser les fondements d'une Constitution européenne supranationale, banalisant le lien direct entre l'Union et les citoyens des pays membres, par dessus la tête des gouvernements nationaux.

3- Une ambition contreproductive

La Charte serait destinée, selon ses promoteurs, à prendre place en tête d'une première partie du traité, à valeur "constitutionnelle", par opposition à une seconde partie qui aurait simple valeur "législative". Cette idée de séparation du traité en deux parties a d'ailleurs été reprise par le rapport Dehaene, et par la communication de la Commission sur la réforme des institutions¹. Ce processus de "constitutionnalisation" serait alimenté par l'apport spécifique du traité d'Amsterdam, qui avalise la supériorité du droit communautaire sur les droits nationaux, même constitutionnels².

Malheureusement pour ce projet, il n'y a pas d'indice aujourd'hui que les peuples européens seraient demandeurs d'une Constitution européenne supérieure aux Constitutions nationales, et témoignant de l'existence d'un super-Etat, qu'il soit fédéral ou non. Surtout, on peut se demander si une Charte européenne des droits des citoyens ne serait pas inutile, et même contreproductive.

- Inutile, parce que le traité reconnaît déjà, de manière très simple, les droits fondamentaux tels qu'ils sont garantis à la fois par la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales et par les traditions constitutionnelles communes aux Etats membres³ ; l'addition dans le traité d'une Charte des droits fondamentaux - si elle était contraignante et contrôlée par la Cour de Justice des Communautés, comme le souhaitent ses promoteurs - pourrait même compliquer terriblement la défense de ces droits en instituant deux ordres de juridictions concurrents, celui de Strasbourg et celui de Luxembourg⁴.

¹ Communication du 10 novembre 1999, p. 6.

² Protocole sur la subsidiarité, article 2.

³ Préambule et article 6 du TUE - Voir annexe 3.

⁴ Pour certains défenseurs des droits de l'homme, la réalité serait pire encore : la charte aurait pour fonction de procurer un "parapluie" au droit communautaire, après qu'un récent arrêt de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme ait fortement inquiété Bruxelles. La Cour présentait en effet le droit communautaire comme un simple démembrement du droit national, et condamnait le Royaume-Uni pour avoir appliqué une disposition de ce même droit communautaire contraire à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme (Arrêt du 18 février 1999 - Matthews c. Royaume-Uni - Requête n° 24833/94). Selon cette interprétation, la Charte, contrairement aux intentions affichées, aurait plutôt pour effet de restreindre l'influence de la Cour de Strasbourg, et de son système de défense des droits de l'homme. D'autres soulignent que cet inconvénient, effectivement possible, serait atténué si l'Union se voyait accorder le droit d'adhérer en tant que telle à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. C'est douteux. Et en tout cas s'ajouteraient alors d'autres problèmes, liés à la complexité du nouveau système et à la longueur accrue des procédures induite par l'insertion d'un niveau judiciaire supplémentaire.

- Contreproductive, parce que la Constitution européenne cristalliserait un catalogue de droits, probablement sur la base d'un plus petit dénominateur commun, ce qui ne serait guère profitable. En tout cas, ces droits ne pourraient plus être modifiés que par l'ensemble des Etats ou/et des peuples d'Europe, ce qui imposerait désormais une rigidité considérable. Corollairement, chaque peuple pris séparément perdrait la capacité de définir seul ses propres droits. Un système de concurrence juridique souple, évolutif, soumis aux demandes de chaque démocratie nationale, serait remplacé par un système de définition uniformisée, extrêmement lourd, incapacitant pour les démocraties nationales et très frustrant pour elles.

II- Pour une autre charte

La Charte des droits des citoyens qui vient d'être décrite ne rendrait aucun service à l'Europe. Elle a été imaginée pour répondre à des impératifs idéologiques de construction cohérente d'un super-Etat, mais elle ne répond pas aux problèmes très immédiats de l'Europe d'aujourd'hui.

Ces problèmes peuvent être suggérés en quelques questions : qu'est-ce que l'Europe ? Qu'est-ce qui nous rassemble ? Comment associer sans tarder les pays candidats, en tenant compte de leurs différences ? Comment prendre les décisions dans une Union élargie ? Comment faire progresser un contrôle démocratique, effectif et proche des citoyens ?

Ces questions peuvent au premier regard apparaître comme très différentes. Il n'en est rien.

Tout d'abord, elles ont un point commun "négatif" : elles ne peuvent pas être résolues par le type de charte des droits fondamentaux couramment proposé, qui décrirait par le menu les droits juridiques des citoyens.

Surtout, elles ont un point commun "positif" : on ne peut les résoudre toutes ensemble qu'en utilisant une approche globale, intégrant les aspects politiques, économiques et sociaux, et conduisant à une conclusion résolument innovatrice : les problèmes de gestion d'une Europe élargie ne pourront être résolus que par une plus grande flexibilité, qui implique l'abandon du système monolithique et une nouvelle confiance envers les souverainetés nationales ; de même, le renforcement du contrôle démocratique implique le retour à la primauté des démocraties nationales, qui suscitent auprès des citoyens une adhésion et une participation sans commune mesure avec toute autre formule. Tout concourt donc à conclure que l'urgence du moment, c'est de placer en tête des traités une charte dont l'objet premier serait de redonner aux nations la première place dans la définition de l'Europe.

Accessoirement, on signalera que la charte ainsi définie rejoindra à sa manière le processus de la Conférence Intergouvernementale qui va s'ouvrir, et qui devrait être centrée sur la question de la prise de décision dans une Europe élargie. En effet, la prise de décision dans un espace aussi hétérogène ne pourra nullement s'effectuer à la majorité qualifiée, contrairement aux espoirs des fédéralistes : il faudra y ajouter le compromis de Luxembourg et la légitimité de coopérations différenciées allant jusqu'à la géométrie variable. Dans l'esprit de l'Europe des nations, le processus de la charte et celui de la CIG se rejoignent donc naturellement.

Σ

Le projet qui figure ci-après présente les orientations principales d'une telle charte, fondée sur le respect des démocraties nationales.

- En préambule, il introduit l'idée que la Charte a une portée plus large que l'Union actuelle, puisqu'elle est ouverte à la signature des pays candidats, qui seront concernés immédiatement par la première partie (valeurs) et à terme par la seconde (principes d'organisation de l'Union).
- Dans une première partie, le projet rappelle brièvement les principales valeurs auxquelles les pays d'Europe sont attachés, centrées sur le respect de la personne ; il s'agit, à cet endroit, d'une déclaration politique.
- Dans une seconde partie, le projet développe les principes d'organisation essentiels d'une Europe respectant non seulement les droits de l'homme et du citoyen, mais aussi les droits des démocraties nationales.

Cette partie s'ouvre elle-même sur une introduction qui renvoie, pour ce qui concerne les droits de l'homme, aux systèmes de protection existants, puisque ces derniers ne révèlent pas de failles majeures.

L'essentiel de la seconde partie est ensuite consacré aux principes d'organisation d'une Union qui serait fondée sur la liberté de ses peuples. Ces principes sont eux-mêmes regroupés par thèmes, qu'une rédaction définitive de la Charte pourrait évidemment perfectionner : nature de l'Union (association d'Etats), coopérations différenciées, respect des identités nationales, liberté des préférences, supériorité des Constitutions nationales, compromis de Luxembourg, évolution démocratique du droit communautaire, autonomie d'organisation des services publics, droit d'édicter des normes supérieures à celles de l'Union, maîtrise des frontières, droit de sauvegarde, légitimité principale des Parlements nationaux, support national de la citoyenneté.

Ainsi sont dessinés les traits d'une Europe plus démocratique et ouverte à l'élargissement.

Σ

Ce document représente une première approche, qui sera complétée si nécessaire au fil des travaux de "l'enceinte".

Deuxième partie

Orientations principales pour un projet de Charte

Les Etats d'Europe,

Membres de l'Union européenne, ou participant au processus qui doit mener à leur adhésion,

Ont adopté cette Charte pour affirmer leurs valeurs, ainsi que les principes d'organisation qu'ils entendent établir pour les faire respecter.

NOS VALEURS

Les Etats signataires

- Sont convaincus que les sociétés pacifiques et heureuses reposent sur le respect des droits fondamentaux de la personne, découlant de son caractère sacré ; ils rejettent toute forme de mépris de l'être humain.
- Affirment que cette valeur centrale du respect de la personne implique nécessairement :
 - la protection de la vie et de la dignité de tout être humain ;
 - l'égalité pour tous des droits de liberté, propriété, sécurité, résistance à l'oppression, traditionnellement garantis en Europe par l'association politique, ainsi que le soutien mutuel face aux aléas de l'existence ;
 - le droit de chaque personne de se gouverner elle-même ; de participer pleinement, en tant que citoyen, à la vie de ses communautés, pour mieux défendre sa famille et protéger ses biens, matériels et spirituels ; d'exercer librement ses droits souverains par la démocratie politique et l'économie de marché ;
 - le respect des affections et des solidarités ressenties par chacun, et donc du sentiment d'appartenance fondé sur une culture transmise, une histoire apprise, une langue pratiquée en commun ;
 - le droit imprescriptible de chaque citoyen, d'exercer un contrôle effectif sur ses représentants ; de ne consentir de délégations de pouvoirs que proches, contrôlables, et toujours révocables ; de ne jamais accorder aux institutions que des compétences subsidiaires et subordonnées.

- Reconnaissent que les citoyens des pays d'Europe expriment leurs solidarités volontaires par des associations ponctuelles, mais aussi par des communautés, notamment familiales ou locales, communes, cantons, lander, comtés, régions, provinces ; que ces solidarités s'expriment de la manière la plus large et la plus solide dans le cercle de valeurs de la nation; que ce cercle est celui où la démocratie s'exerce de la manière la plus complète, et que c'est donc là qu'il faut placer le niveau principal de l'association politique.
- Estiment que le mépris envers les nations a constitué une des grandes causes des guerres qui ont ravagé l'Europe ; qu'au contraire, le respect de la diversité des nations et de leurs peuples sera bénéfique à l'Europe, puisqu'il favorisera la liberté, l'émulation et le pluralisme, sources de la richesse la plus ancienne et la plus constante de la civilisation européenne.
- Sont persuadés que l'ignorance, l'oubli ou le mépris des droits de la personne, comme des familles, des communautés ou des nations, sont les seules causes des malheurs publics et de la corruption des gouvernements ;
- Déclarent dans ces conditions que l'Union européenne est une union de nations qui, tout en se respectant mutuellement, et en respectant l'expression démocratique de chaque peuple, devra poursuivre les objectifs suivants :
 - encourager une défense en commun des peuples d'Europe, afin de protéger ensemble leurs valeurs, leurs droits, leurs langues, leurs modèles de société, leurs territoires et leurs frontières ;
 - contribuer à établir les bases d'un développement durable, par le respect de la vie et la recherche de l'équilibre le plus épanouissant entre l'homme et son milieu naturel;
 - favoriser la prospérité des peuples d'Europe par le libre échange et la concurrence intérieurs, et par la négociation d'accords commerciaux extérieurs permettant un commerce équitable entre zones aux règles différentes.

NOS PRINCIPES D'ORGANISATION

Les Etats signataires

S'engagent à promouvoir les valeurs de la Charte, et à respecter les droits fondamentaux qui en découlent, tels qu'ils sont garantis par les Constitutions nationales, par la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, et par les autres conventions internationales pertinentes, conclues notamment sous l'égide du Conseil de l'Europe, de l'Organisation des Nations Unies ou de l'Organisation Internationale du Travail¹ ; ils s'engagent de même à ce que leur organisation commune, l'Union européenne, comme ses cercles de coopération différenciés, respectent ces droits, tels qu'ils résultent des textes précités, en tant que principes supérieurs de leurs activités.

Ils déclarent adopter les principes d'organisation suivants :

Nature de l'Union

1. L'Union européenne est une association libre de nations souveraines : en tant qu'association de nations, elle est contrôlée en premier lieu par les Etats qui lui ont délégué des compétences subsidiaires, et qui sont eux-mêmes placés sous le contrôle démocratique de leurs citoyens; en tant qu'association libre, elle admet le droit de sécession.

Coopérations différenciées

2. L'Union admet des formes de coopérations différenciées, c'est-à-dire n'incluant pas tous les pays membres, dès lors qu'elles sont librement choisies par les peuples concernés.
3. Les différentes coopérations européennes reposent essentiellement sur des prises de décision par consensus ; elles respectent ainsi le droit des peuples de décider les lois qui s'appliquent sur leurs territoires.
4. Les coopérations différenciées peuvent s'ouvrir à des pays extérieurs à l'Union, afin de favoriser sur une base plus large la promotion des valeurs et des intérêts communs.

Respect des identités nationales

5. L'Union respecte les identités nationales de ses membres, et les défend à l'extérieur.

Liberté des préférences

6. L'Union s'attache à faire prévaloir sur la scène internationale le principe général du libre choix, par chaque peuple, de son mode de vie, et la légitimité des coopérations qui établissent une préférence mutuelle librement décidée.

Supériorité des Constitutions nationales

7. L'Union rassemblant des nations souveraines, les Constitutions nationales demeurent sa norme supérieure ; il n'est pas procédé à des transferts de souveraineté - laquelle appartient irrévocablement à chaque peuple - mais seulement à des délégations de compétences qui sont toujours révocables.

¹ Voir annexe 4.

Compromis de Luxembourg

8. Chaque pays membre possède le droit imprescriptible de ne pas s'associer à une décision qu'il estimerait contraire à des intérêts très importants pour lui ; dans ce cas, la décision éventuellement prise ne peut s'appliquer au pays qui l'a refusée ; celui-ci ne peut toutefois empêcher ses partenaires de poursuivre ensemble les buts qu'ils estiment souhaitables, dans la mesure où ils ne lèsent pas ses intérêts vitaux.

Evolution démocratique du droit communautaire

9. Les délégations de compétences ne peuvent être accordées, modifiées, ou retirées que par les peuples concernés, dans les formes prévues par leurs Constitutions respectives. Si un peuple conteste une règle commune par la forme solennelle d'un référendum, cette règle doit être obligatoirement renégociée.
10. Si une décision de justice aboutit à interpréter un des traités dans un sens extensif, cette décision pourra faire l'objet d'un appel, pour ratification, devant les Parlements nationaux, qui pourront à leur tour en référer à leurs peuples.

Services publics

11. Sans préjudice des règles communes, les Etats membres ont le droit de décider librement l'organisation et les limites de leurs services publics.

Normes nationales

12. Sans préjudice des règles communes, les Etats membres ont le droit de décider pour eux des normes d'un niveau supérieur à celles de l'Union dans les domaines de la moralité publique, de l'ordre public, de la sécurité publique, de la protection de la vie et de la santé des personnes et des animaux, de la protection sociale, de la défense de l'environnement, de la sauvegarde de l'identité ou du patrimoine naturel, artistique, historique ou archéologique. Ils ont aussi le droit de se donner les moyens de contrôler le respect de ces règles.

Maîtrise des frontières

13. Les Etats membres conservent la maîtrise de leurs frontières et de leurs territoires. La libre circulation des personnes, des biens, des services ou des capitaux, telle que prévue par les traités, n'implique pas nécessairement l'absence de contrôles nationaux. La libre circulation des personnes n'implique pas non plus le droit d'établissement.

Droit de sauvegarde

14. Dans les domaines mentionnés aux points 11 et 12, les Etats membres peuvent prendre, en cas de nécessité, des mesures de sauvegarde nationales, dont ils informent aussitôt leurs partenaires.

Légitimité principale des Parlements nationaux

15. Conformément à l'article 1, l'échelon démocratique le plus important de l'Union est celui des Parlements nationaux, qui détiennent la légitimité principale. Le Parlement européen joue un rôle complémentaire pour le contrôle des activités européennes, et dans des formations variables selon les coopérations concernées.
16. Les Parlements nationaux interviennent dans les activités de l'Union soit indirectement, par le contrôle des gouvernements siégeant au Conseil, soit directement par une organisation en réseau qui leur permet de prendre des décisions applicables immédiatement dans leurs pays respectifs. Ils détiennent un droit de veto sur les questions de subsidiarité. Un comité formé des représentants parlementaires des pays participants assure le suivi permanent des questions les plus importantes, comme la sécurité ou la monnaie.

Citoyenneté

17. La citoyenneté, comme le droit de vote, reste de compétence nationale. Par "citoyenneté européenne", on désigne l'ensemble des avantages que les Etats membres se consentent réciproquement pour leurs citoyens respectifs. Nul ne peut y accéder s'il ne possède la nationalité d'un Etat membre.

ANNEXES

	Pages
1- Conclusions du Conseil européen de Cologne.....	15
2- Conclusions du Conseil européen de Tampere.....	17
3- Les droits fondamentaux dans les traités européens.....	20
4- Liste des traités ONU et Conseil de l'Europe relatifs aux droits de l'homme.....	22
5- Principaux droits de l'homme mentionnés par la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales.....	25

ANNEXE 1

Décision d'ouvrir
la rédaction d'une Charte
des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Conclusions du Conseil européen de Cologne
(4 juin 1999)

--

Une Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'UE

44. Le Conseil européen estime qu'à ce stade du développement de l'Union européenne il conviendrait de réunir les droits fondamentaux en vigueur au niveau de l'Union dans une charte de manière à leur donner une plus grande visibilité.
45. Il a arrêté à ce sujet la décision jointe à l'annexe IV. La future présidence est invitée à faire en sorte que les conditions préalables à la mise en oeuvre de cette décision soient réalisées d'ici la réunion spéciale du Conseil européen à Tampere les 15 et 16 octobre 1999.

--

ANNEXE IV des conclusions de Cologne

Décision du Conseil européen concernant l'élaboration d'une Charte
des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Le respect des droits fondamentaux est l'un des principes fondateurs de l'Union européenne et la condition indispensable pour sa légitimité. La Cour de Justice européenne a confirmé et défini dans sa jurisprudence l'obligation de l'Union de respecter les droits fondamentaux. Au stade actuel du développement de l'Union, il est nécessaire d'établir une charte de ces droits afin d'ancrer leur importance exceptionnelle et leur portée de manière visible pour les citoyens de l'Union.

Le Conseil européen est d'avis que cette charte doit contenir les droits de liberté et d'égalité, ainsi que les droits de procédure tels que garantis par la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales et tels qu'ils résultent des traditions constitutionnelles communes des Etats membres, en tant que principes généraux du droit communautaire. La charte doit en outre contenir les droits fondamentaux réservés aux citoyens de l'Union. Dans l'élaboration de la charte, il faudra par ailleurs prendre en considération des droits économiques et sociaux tels qu'énoncés dans la Charte sociale européenne et dans la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs (article 136 TCE) dans la mesure où ils ne justifient pas uniquement des objectifs pour l'action de l'Union.

Le Conseil européen est d'avis qu'une enceinte composée de représentants des Chefs d'Etat et de Gouvernement et du Président de la Commission européenne ainsi que des membres du Parlement européen et des parlements nationaux devrait élaborer un projet d'une telle charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne. Des représentants de la Cour de justice devraient y participer à titre d'observateurs. Des représentants du Comité économique et social et du Comité des régions ainsi que des groupes sociaux et des experts devraient être entendus. Le secrétariat devrait être assuré par le Secrétariat général du Conseil.

Cette enceinte doit présenter un projet en temps utile avant le Conseil européen en décembre de l'an 2000. Le Conseil européen proposera au Parlement européen et à la Commission de proclamer solennellement, conjointement avec le Conseil, une charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne sur la base dudit projet. Ensuite il faudra examiner si et, le cas échéant, la manière dont la charte pourrait être intégrée dans les traités. Le Conseil européen donne mandat au Conseil "Affaires générales" d'engager les mesures nécessaires avant le Conseil européen de Tampere.

ANNEXE 2

Composition, méthodes de travail et modalités pratiques de l'enceinte pour l'élaboration du projet de charte des droits fondamentaux de l'UE

Annexe aux conclusions du Conseil européen de Tampere
(16 octobre 1999)

A. COMPOSITION DE L'ENCEINTE

i) Membres

a) Chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des Etats membres

Quinze représentants des chefs d'Etat ou de gouvernement des Etats membres.

b) Commission

Un représentant du président de la Commission européenne

c) Parlement européen

Seize membres du Parlement européen désignés par celui-ci.

d) Parlements nationaux

Trente membres des parlements nationaux (deux par parlement) désignés par ceux-ci.

Les membres de l'enceinte peuvent être remplacés par des suppléants en cas d'empêchement.

ii) Président et vice-présidents de l'enceinte

L'enceinte élit son président. Un membre du Parlement européen, un membre d'un parlement national et le représentant du président du Conseil européen exercent les vice-présidences de l'enceinte, s'ils n'ont pas été élus à la présidence.

Le membre du Parlement européen exerçant la vice-présidence est élu par les membres du Parlement européen faisant partie de l'enceinte. Le membre du parlement national exerçant la vice-présidence est élu par les membres des parlements nationaux faisant partie de l'enceinte.

iii) Observateurs

Deux représentants de la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes désignés par la Cour.

Deux représentants du Conseil de l'Europe, dont un représentant de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme.

iv) Instances de l'Union européenne devant être entendues

Le Comité économique et social

Le Comité des régions

Le médiateur

v) Echange de vues avec les pays candidats

Il convient d'organiser un échange de vues approprié entre l'enceinte ou son président et les pays candidats.

vi) Autres instances, groupes sociaux ou experts devant être entendus

D'autres instances, groupes sociaux et experts peuvent être entendus par l'enceinte.

vii) Secrétariat

Le Secrétariat général du Conseil assure le secrétariat de l'enceinte. Afin de garantir une bonne coordination, des contacts étroits seront établis avec le Secrétariat général du Parlement européen, avec la Commission, et, dans la mesure nécessaire, avec les secrétariats des parlements nationaux.

B. METHODES DE TRAVAIL DE L'ENCEINTEi) Travaux préparatoires

Le président de l'enceinte propose, en étroite concertation avec les vice-présidents, un programme de travail pour l'enceinte et effectue les autres travaux préparatoires nécessaires.

ii) Transparence des délibérations

En principe, les débats de l'enceinte et les documents présentés au cours de ces débats devraient être rendus publics.

iii) Groupes de travail

L'enceinte peut constituer des groupes de travail ad hoc, qui sont ouverts à tous ses membres.

iv) Rédaction

Sur la base du programme de travail établi par l'enceinte, un comité de rédaction, composé du président, des vice-présidents et du représentant de la Commission et assisté par le Secrétariat général du Conseil, élabore un avant-projet de charte en tenant compte des propositions de texte soumises par tout membre de l'enceinte.

Chacun des trois vice-présidents procède régulièrement à des consultations avec les composantes respectives de l'enceinte dont il est issu.

v) Elaboration du projet de charte par l'enceinte

Lorsque le président de l'enceinte, en concertation étroite avec les vice-présidents, estime que le texte du projet de charte élaboré par l'enceinte peut être en définitive adopté par toutes les parties, celui-ci peut être transmis au Conseil européen conformément à la procédure préparatoire habituelle.

C. MODALITES PRATIQUES

L'enceinte se réunit à Bruxelles, alternativement dans les locaux du Conseil et dans ceux du Parlement européen.

Le régime linguistique intégral s'applique aux réunions de l'enceinte.

ANNEXE 3

Les droits fondamentaux dans les traités européens

PREAMBULE TUE

(...)

CONFIRMANT leur attachement aux principes de la liberté, de la démocratie et du respect des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales et de l'état de droit,

CONFIRMANT leur attachement aux droits sociaux fondamentaux tels qu'ils sont définis dans la Charte sociale européenne, signée à Turin le 18 octobre 1961, et dans la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs de 1989,

(...)

ARTICLE 6 TUE

1. L'Union est fondée sur les principes de la liberté, de la démocratie, du respect des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, ainsi que de l'état de droit, principes qui sont communs aux Etats membres.
 2. L'Union respecte les droits fondamentaux, tels qu'ils sont garantis par la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, signée à Rome le 4 novembre 1950, et tels qu'ils résultent des traditions constitutionnelles communes aux Etats membres, en tant que principes généraux du droit communautaire.
 3. L'Union respecte l'identité nationale de ses Etats membres.
- (...)

ARTICLE 136 TCE

La Communauté et les Etats membres, conscients des droits sociaux fondamentaux, tels que ceux énoncés dans la Charte sociale européenne signée à Turin le 18 octobre 1961 et dans la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs de 1989, ont pour objectifs la promotion de l'emploi, l'amélioration des conditions de vie et de travail, permettant leur égalisation dans le progrès, une protection sociale adéquate, le dialogue social, le développement des ressources humaines permettant un niveau d'emploi élevé et durable et la lutte contre les exclusions.

A cette fin, la Communauté et les Etats membres mettent en oeuvre des mesures qui tiennent compte de la diversité des pratiques nationales, en particulier dans le domaine des relations conventionnelles, ainsi que de la nécessité de maintenir la compétitivité de l'économie de la Communauté.

Ils estiment qu'une telle évolution résultera tant du fonctionnement du marché commun, qui favorisera l'harmonisation des systèmes sociaux, que des procédures prévues par le présent traité et du rapprochement des dispositions législatives, réglementaires et administratives.

ANNEXE 4

Liste des traités ONU et Conseil de l'Europe relatifs à la protection des droits de l'homme ratifiés par les Etats membres de l'Union européenne

Traités conclus sous l'égide du Conseil de l'Europe

- Convention de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales (1950)
- Protocole n° 1 à la CSDH ajoutant de nouveaux droits à ceux déjà protégés par la Convention: propriété droit à l'éducation, droit à des élections libres au scrutin secret... (1952)
- Protocole n° 2 à la CSDH donnant à la Cour européenne de Justice la compétence de donner des avis (1963)
- Protocole n° 3 à la CSDH amendant les articles 29, 30 et 34 de la Convention (1963)
- Protocole n° 4 à la CSDH ajoutant certains droits et libertés à ceux déjà inclus dans la Convention et le protocole n° 1 (1963)¹
- Protocole n° 5 à la CSDH amendant les articles 22 et 40 (1966)
- Protocole n° 6 à la CSDH relatif à l'abolition de la peine de mort (1983)
- Protocole n° 7 à la CSDH étendant la liste des droits protégés, et notamment le droit des étrangers à des garanties procédurales en cas d'expulsion (1984)²
- Protocole n° 8 à la CSDH amendant certaines dispositions de procédure relatives à la commission européenne des droits de l'homme et à la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme (1985)
- Protocole n° 11 à la CSDH relative au contrôle (1994)
- Accord européen relatif aux procédures de la Commission et de la Cour européennes des droits de l'homme (1969)¹

¹ Non signé par la Grèce, signé mais non encore ratifié par l'Espagne et le Royaume-Uni.

² Non signé par la Belgique et le Royaume-Uni, signé mais non ratifié par l'Allemagne, l'Espagne, l'Irlande, les Pays-Bas, le Portugal.

- Accord européen relatif aux procédures de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme (1996)²
- Convention européenne pour le bannissement de la torture et des punitions ou traitements inhumains ou dégradants (1987)
- Protocole n° 1 à la Convention européenne pour le bannissement de la torture, concernant la possibilité d'adhésion à la Convention de pays non membres du Conseil de l'Europe (1993)
- Protocole n° 2 à la Convention européenne pour le bannissement de la torture, concernant le renouvellement du Comité européen pour le bannissement de la torture et des punitions ou traitements inhumains ou dégradants (1993)³
- Convention cadre pour la protection des minorités nationales (1995)⁴
- Charte européenne sur les langues minoritaires ou régionales (1992)⁵
- Charte sociale européenne (1961)
- Protocole additionnel à la Charte sociale européenne, étendant la protection des droits économiques et sociaux (1988)⁶
- Protocole additionnel à la Charte sociale européenne relatif à un système de plaintes collectives (1995)⁷

¹ Non signé par la Grèce.

² Non signé par l'Espagne ; signé mais non ratifié par la Belgique, l'Allemagne, la Grèce, l'Autriche, le Portugal, le Royaume-Uni.

³ Signé mais non ratifié par le Portugal.

⁴ Non signée par la Belgique et la France ; signée mais non ratifiée par la Grèce, le Luxembourg, les Pays-Bas, le Portugal et la Suède.

⁵ Non signée par la Belgique, la Grèce, l'Irlande, l'Italie, le Portugal, la Suède et le Royaume-Uni ; signée mais non ratifiée par le Danemark, l'Espagne, la France, le Luxembourg et l'Autriche (seuls l'Allemagne, les Pays-Bas et la Finlande ont ratifié cette Charte).

⁶ Non signé par l'Irlande, le Portugal et le Royaume-Uni ; signé mais non ratifié par la Belgique, l'Allemagne, l'Espagne, la France, le Luxembourg, et l'Autriche.

⁷ Non signé par l'Allemagne, l'Espagne, l'Irlande, le Luxembourg, les Pays-Bas, le Royaume-Uni ; signé mais non ratifié par la Belgique, le Danemark et l'Autriche.

- Charte sociale européenne révisée (1996)¹
- Convention européenne sur le statut légal des travailleurs migrants (1977)²
- Convention européenne sur les droits de l'enfant (1996)³
- Convention sur la protection des droits de l'homme et de la dignité de l'être humain en ce qui concerne les applications de la biologie et de la médecine (1997)⁴
- Protocole additionnel à la Convention précédente, relatif à l'interdiction du clonage humain (1998)⁵
- Convention sur la protection des individus à l'égard des traitements automatiques de données personnelles (1981)

Traités conclus sous l'égide de l'organisation des Nations-Unies ou de ses agences spécialisées

- Convention internationale sur les droits économiques, sociaux et culturels (1966)
- Convention internationale sur les droits civils et politiques (1966)
- Protocole facultatif à la Convention internationale sur les droits civils et politiques (1966)⁶
- Second protocole facultatif à la Convention internationale sur les droits civils et politiques, tendant à l'abolition de la peine de mort (1989)⁷

¹ Non signée par l'Allemagne, l'Espagne, l'Irlande, les Pays-Bas ; signée mais non ratifiée par la Belgique, le Danemark, la Grèce, le Luxembourg, l'Autriche, le Portugal, la Finlande, le Royaume-Uni.

² Non signée par le Danemark, l'Irlande, l'Autriche, la Finlande, le Royaume-Uni ; signée mais non ratifiée par la Belgique, l'Allemagne, la Grèce, le Luxembourg.

³ Ratifiée seulement par la Grèce ; signée, mais non ratifiée par l'Espagne, la France, l'Irlande, l'Italie, le Luxembourg, l'Autriche, le Portugal, la Finlande, la Suède.

⁴ Non signée par la Belgique, l'Allemagne, l'Irlande, l'Autriche, le Royaume-Uni ; signée mais non ratifiée par la France, l'Italie, le Luxembourg, les Pays-Bas, le Portugal, la Finlande, la Suède.

⁵ N'a été signé et ratifié que par la Grèce ; signé seulement, pour le moment, par le Danemark, l'Espagne, la France, l'Italie, le Luxembourg, les Pays-Bas, le Portugal, la Finlande et la Suède.

⁶ Non signé par le Royaume-Uni.

⁷ Signé mais non ratifié par le Royaume-Uni, non signé par la France.

- Convention internationale sur l'élimination de toutes les formes de discrimination raciale (1965)¹
- Convention sur la prévention et la sanction du crime de génocide (1948)
- Convention sur l'élimination de toutes formes de discrimination contre les femmes (1979)

¹ Signée mais non ratifiée par l'Irlande.

ANNEXE 5

Principaux droits fondamentaux mentionnés par la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales

Le droit à la vie
L'interdiction de la torture ou des traitements inhumains et dégradants
L'interdiction de l'esclavage et du travail forcé ou obligatoire
Le droit à la liberté et à la sûreté
Le droit à la liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion
Le droit de se marier et de fonder une famille
Le droit au respect de la vie privée et familiale
Le droit de propriété
Le droit de vote dans le cadre d'élections libres
Le droit à la liberté d'expression
Le droit à la liberté de réunion pacifique et à la liberté d'association
En cas de procès, le droit à une audition équitable et publique par un tribunal indépendant et impartial
La non rétroactivité des lois
Le droit à un recours effectif en cas de violation de l'un des droits ou libertés ci-dessus.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION
fundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 20 January 2000 (25.01)
(OR. f)

CHARTE 4111/00

BODY 3

INFORMATION NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
 – Horizontal questions

In preparation for the general debate on the Charter on 2 February, the Chairman has asked the Secretariat of the Body to set out in brief certain "horizontal" questions which the Body may have to look into. This paper is being sent to Members of the Body for information.

I. Political declaration or legal text

1. The mandate given by the Cologne European Council gave no indication as to what form the draft Charter resulting from the Body's proceedings should take. It simply stated that it would serve as a basis for an interinstitutional declaration and that its possible inclusion in the Treaties would be examined at a later stage.

2. The outcome of the Body's proceedings may be entirely different, depending on how much importance is attached to any one of the draft Charter's aims. It may take the form of a political declaration, in which case further discussions will be vital if the declaration is to be converted into a text capable of being incorporated into the Treaties. It may take the form of a legal text, but if so, special care will be needed to ensure that it is properly worded and in particular that it is consistent with the Treaties, since by definition it must be incorporated into the Treaties without amending them.
3. The choice between the two options is a political one, but it will have a significant bearing on the Body's future proceedings.

II. A Charter of Rights of the European Union

4. The Charter is intended to apply to the Union's institutions and not to activities of Member States which fall outside the scope of EC or EU legislation. This would be consistent with Court of Justice case-law, whereby Member States are bound to respect fundamental rights whenever they act within the scope of the Treaties for the purposes either of implementing Community (or EU) legislation or derogating from it (Judgment of 18 June 1991 in Case C-260/89, Elliniki Radiophonia Tiléorassi AE, ECR I-2925, par. 43).
5. The fact remains that the Charter cannot of itself impose obligations on Member States outside the scope of EU legislation in its broadest sense. One of the Charter's provisions should therefore make this clear.
6. The aim of the Charter is to establish a bill of rights, rather than to confer new powers on the Union to legislate in the field of fundamental rights. In its Opinion 2/94 of 28 March 1996 (ECR I-1759), the Court of Justice made a clear distinction between the obligation to respect fundamental rights and the power to legislate with regard to fundamental rights. The Charter must operate solely within the framework of existing powers. Should these be extended as a result of the Treaties being amended, the Charter would naturally apply to the new powers created.

7. The Charter applies to the institutions of the Union, and the Cologne European Council does not refer to the Community alone. The Charter should therefore be drafted in such a way as to apply within the framework not only of the Treaty on European Union but also of the EC Treaties. In other words, the Charter also applies to Titles V (CFSP) and VI (JHA) of the Treaty on European Union.

III. Holders of guaranteed rights

8. This is an extremely complex legal issue. If the terms of the European Convention on Human Rights are adopted, then this Convention applies to any person within the jurisdiction of a Contracting State. Mutatis mutandis, the Charter would thus apply to anyone within the jurisdiction of the Union.
9. A solution of this kind raises difficulties, particularly with regard to certain social rights which may not be applied systematically to workers from third countries and the scope of which is also likely to vary in accordance with the agreements concluded between the Union and the third countries. The same holds true, of course, with regard to freedom of movement.
10. Finally, rights linked to Community citizenship, which are political rights, may be granted solely to persons holding the nationality of one of the Member States. No discrimination based on nationality may occur in the enjoyment of such rights.
11. This distinction becomes further complicated with the inclusion of a general clause on non-discrimination which might conflict with the existence of specific rights reserved for EC nationals or persons treated as such.
12. This is a problem which can be solved. The European Court of Human Rights stated in its Chorfi judgment of 7 August 1996 that the preferential treatment granted to EC nationals in the matter of expulsion was dependent on a case being made on objective and reasonable grounds. It is thus possible to justify differing forms of treatment.

13. Under these circumstances, would it not be possible to work on the basis that the Charter should apply to any person falling within the scope of EU legislation, with a proviso covering the specific rights enjoyed by citizens of the Union? An example may be found in Article 25 of the European Parliament declaration which attempted to solve this problem, but which was not entirely successful in doing so.
14. Given the aim of incorporation into the Treaties, this is a significant problem which needs to be handled with great care. It should be noted that, strictly speaking, Article 13 TEC itself contains no general clause on non-discrimination, but does empower the Community to combat discrimination within the sphere of its competence. On the other hand, Article 6 TEU refers back to the European Convention on Human Rights and thus to Article 14 thereof which prohibits discrimination in the enjoyment of rights guaranteed under the said Convention. It should further be noted that an additional Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights prohibiting discrimination of any kind is currently under negotiation within the Council of Europe.

IV. Relationship with international instruments for the protection of human rights and common constitutional traditions

15. The question of the relationship between the Charter and the European Convention on Human Rights is frequently raised. The drafting of the Charter has no direct impact on the question of the Community's accession to the European Convention on Human Rights. The problem of accession may arise, irrespective of whether the Community has a Charter or not. The Charter constitutes a bill of rights which the Union imposes on itself, just as each State party to the Convention has its own charter of fundamental rights. This does not dispense the Union from observing the Convention. Accession would establish an external check on the way in which the Community observes the Convention. According to the Court of Justice of the Communities, such accession will require a revision of the Treaty.

16. Article 6 TEU requires the Union to respect the Convention. Consequently, the Convention constitutes a minimum standard and the Charter cannot take a step backwards in relation to the Convention as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights. This point is particularly important since there is always a risk of a private individual referring to the European Court of Human Rights a national measure implementing Community law and of that Community law being declared contrary to the Convention, although the Court of Justice of the Communities would perhaps not have delivered the same judgment (see ECHR, Judgment Matthews v. United Kingdom of 18 February 1999 concerning the European elections and Gibraltar).
17. The same consideration applies with regard to common constitutional traditions.
18. Under these circumstances, it would perhaps be useful to consider a clause that would establish that there is nothing in the Charter to restrict the protection offered by the European Convention on Human Rights and the common constitutional traditions and by other instruments which would have to be identified (United Nations Covenant, European Social Charter, etc.).

V. The question of limitation of guaranteed rights

19. Guaranteed rights are not guaranteed without limit. The European Convention authorises the limitations which are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society. Other arrangements exist which preserve the actual core of the guaranteed right. It will probably be necessary to give thought to the limitation formula. For example, Article G (Part V) of the European Social Charter could be taken as a basis.

VI. The different categories of rights

20. The rights to be guaranteed are not of the same kind. There are rights which are clearly amenable to the law. Others require action by the European Union for them to be implemented, and the legislator has broad discretionary powers as regards such action.

21. Contrary to what certain parties claim, this distinction does not conceal any opposition between civil and political rights and social rights. Certain social rights, such as the right of association, may be amenable to the law, whilst others, such as the right to employment, are less so.
22. Consideration must therefore be given to each right to determine whether it is amenable to the law or whether it can be worded in such a way as to make it so. Could not certain rights be defined as political principles for Union action which need to be realised through action by the legislator? That is what was adopted in the Parliament declaration for the right to the environment (Article 24) or working conditions (Article 13).

VII. Judicial control

23. If the Charter is inserted into the Treaty, observance thereof will be ensured through the provisions on judicial control contained in the Treaties. The control will be effected by the Court of Justice either by direct referral thereto or via a preliminary ruling by the national judge. The system of control will differ according to the pillars.
24. Is there a contradiction between the right to a judge as set out in the European Convention on Human Rights and the system of the Treaties? The system of appeal provided for by the Treaties is a comprehensive system since, when referral cannot be made direct to the Court, the national courts may be called upon to rule on national acts implementing Community law.
25. Nevertheless, there are cases in which no national implementing act is necessary as the Community legislation simply lays down a prohibition. The only possibility remaining for the private individual is to appeal against the penalty which might be imposed upon him by the national courts in the event of an infringement of the Community legislation. Some thought it was not normal for a private individual to be induced to commit an infringement in order to be able to appeal, since he had no right to appeal directly against the Community act concerned. However, it is not clear whether the Court's case law on this matter has been established and the Court will shortly be required to state its position.

26. In its preparatory report for the last Intergovernmental Conference, the Court mentioned the idea of introducing a special appeal ("Verfassungsbeschwerde"; complaint of unconstitutionality). The Intergovernmental Conference did not adopt this suggestion.

CONCLUSION

27. This note is not exhaustive and simply presents certain horizontal problems without examining them in depth. On the basis of the Body's discussions, they will require a detailed legal examination.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 26 January 2000
(OR. f)*CHARTE 4112/00*BODY 4*PRESIDENCY NOTE

Subject : Draft list on fundamental rights

This list has been drawn up on the basis of the Community Treaties, International Conventions on Human Rights including the European Convention on Human Rights, texts of national Constitutions and various Community texts including several Declarations by the European Parliament. It merely aims to serve as a basis for discussions at the first working meeting called upon to draw up such a list. Once the forum has decided on that list, work on drafting the various rights may begin.

This list groups together rights granted to individuals, natural and legal persons, which may be invoked by them within the scope of the Union's powers and also rights which can be presented as political objectives of Union action. Sometimes, by way of illustration, the contents of a right have been spelt out.

No distinction has been drawn between civil and political rights on one hand and social and economic rights on the other. The only matters that have specifically been highlighted are the rights of citizens of the Union and horizontal questions. The document does not claim either to constitute a blueprint for the presentation of the Charter and the position of each right on the list should be subject to discussion.

The references that have been entered in brackets only have an explanatory value. They refer to texts of different natures, some having a binding value, and others not. Sometimes, the rights are formulated as such, sometimes there is merely a reference to a Union or Community objective. In addition, references to secondary legislation have been excluded

The forum is called upon to discuss and amend this list, either by cutting back certain rights, or by amplifying the list.

Abbreviations:

EC : Treaty establishing the European Community

ECHR: European Convention on Human Rights

Social Charter: European Social Charter

Community Charter of Social Rights : Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers

EP Decl. 1989 : Declaration of fundamental rights and freedoms adopted by the Parliament on 12 April 1989.

*

* *

LIST OF RIGHTS

1. Right of respect of the dignity of the human person: this right covers in particular, but not exclusively questions of bioethics, prohibition of slavery and forced labour.(Article 4 ECHR, Article 1 EP Decl.1989)
2. Right to life, prohibition of inhuman or degrading treatment, torture, problem of the death penalty.(Article 2 ECHR, Article 2 EP Decl. 1989)
3. Liberty and security: protection in the case of deprivation of liberty, habeas corpus.(Article 5 ECHR, Article 2 EP Decl. 1989)
4. Right to a fair trial: public hearing, impartial tribunal, reasonable time, principle of right to be heard (audi alteram partem) and of equality of arms, presumption of innocence and the rights of the accused in criminal proceedings...(Article 6 ECHR, Article 19 EP Decl. 1989)
5. Access to the courts: right to appear before a judge.(Articles 6 and 13 ECHR, Article 19 EP Decl. 1989)
6. Nullum crimen sine lege et nulla poena sine lege (no crime without law and no punishment without law) and non-retroactive criminal law.(Article 7 ECHR, Article 21 EP Decl. 1989)
7. Non bis in idem(double jeopardy).(Article 4 Protocol No 7 ECHR, Article 20 EP Decl. 1989)
8. Respect for private and family life: right to privacy, home, correspondence, data protection.(Article 8 ECHR, Article 6 EP Decl. 1989)
9. Right to found a family.(Article 12 ECHR, implicitly in Article 6 EP Decl. 1989)
10. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion.(Article 9 ECHR, Article 4 EP Decl. 1989)
11. Freedom of expression : including the freedom to receive and impart information and freedom of the press.(Article 10 ECHR, Article 5 EP Decl. 1989)
12. Right to free elections.(Article 3 Protocol ECHR, Article 17 EP Decl. 1989)
13. Right to education and vocational training.(Article 2 Protocol ECHR, Article 150 EC, Article 10 Social Charter, Point 15 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 16 EP Decl. 1989)
14. Freedom of association and assembly, including the right to organise.(Article 11 ECHR, Article 15 Social Charter, Point 11 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 11 EP Decl. 1989)
15. Access to information, transparency.(Article 255 EC, Article 18 EP Decl. 1989)
16. Data protection (Article 286 EC, Article 18 EP Decl. 1989)

17. Freedom of movement and of residence: problem of beneficiary, relationship with citizens' rights.(Article 2 Protocol No. 4 ECHR, Title III of the EC Treaty for workers, Article 8 EP Decl. 1989)
18. Property rights.(Article 1 Protocol ECHR, Article 9 EP Decl. 1989)
19. Conservation of the environment, right to a healthy environment: right or political objective ?(Article 6 EC, Article 24 EP Decl. 1989)
20. Rights of aliens: asylum, prohibition of collective expulsion, procedural guarantees in the case of expulsion.(Article 63 EC, Article 4 Protocol No. 4 and Article 1 Protocol No. 7 ECHR)
21. Right to work: objective of a high level of employment, freedom to choose and engage in an occupation.(Article 127 EC, Article 1 Social Charter, Point 4 Community Charter of Social Rights)
22. Right to safe and healthy working conditions.(Article 140 EC, Article 3 Social Charter, Point 19 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 13 EP Decl. 1989)
23. Fair remuneration and minimum wage: distinguish between what falls under a right and what constitutes a political objective.(Article 4 Social Charter, Article 4 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 13 EP Decl. 1989)
24. Right to weekly rest period and paid holidays.(Article 2 Social Charter, Point 8 Community Charter of Social Rights)
25. Pensions.(Article 23 Social Charter, Points 24 and 25 Community Charter of Social Rights)
26. Free access to placement services.(Article 1 Social Charter, Point 6 Community Charter of Social Rights)
27. Vocational guidance and continuing vocational training.(Articles 9 and 10 Social Charter, Point 15 Community Charter of Social Rights)
28. Right of information and consultation of workers.(Article 137 EC,Article 6 Social Charter, Point 17 Community Charter of Social Rights)
29. Right to collective bargaining.(Article 137 EC, Article 6 Social Charter, Point 12 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 14 EP Decl. 1989)
30. Right to strike.(Article 6 Social Charter, Point 13 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 14 EP Decl. 1989)
31. Right to health: right or political objective.(Article 152 EC, Article 11 Social Charter, Point 19 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 15 EP Decl. 1989)
32. Right to social security, right to social and medical assistance.(Article 13 Social Charter, Point 10 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 15 EP Decl. 1989)
33. Protection of maternity.(Article 8 Social Charter)

34. Protection of children and young persons.(Article 17 Social Charter, Points 20 and following Community Charter of Social Rights)
35. Integration of disabled persons.(Article 15 Social Charter, Point 26 Community Charter of Social Rights)

Rights of citizens of the Union

1. Freedom of movement and residence(Article 18 EC)
2. Right to vote and stand as a candidate at European and municipal elections(Article 19 EC)
3. Diplomatic and consular protection(Article 20 EC)
4. Right to petition the European Parliament(Article 21 EC)
5. Right to apply to the Ombudsman(Article 21 EC)
6. Non-discrimination between citizens of the Union(Article 12 EC)
7. Equality in access to the Community civil service(principle of non-discrimination on the basis of nationality and status)
8. Right to write to the Union in one of the official languages and to have an answer in the same language.(Article 21 EC)

NB. The rights referred to under points 4 and 5 also apply to persons residing in the territory of a Member State.

Horizontal questions

1. Holders of rights guaranteed by the Charter
 2. Non-discrimination : between Community nationals (Article 12 EC), between men and women (Articles 137 and 141 EC), general non-discrimination clause (Article 13 EC and Article 14 ECHR)
 3. Limitation of guaranteed rights (incorporated in various Articles of ECHR and Article 26 EP Decl 1989)
 4. Derogation in cases of exceptional situations (Article 15 ECHR and Protocol on right of asylum EC)
 5. Abuse of rights (Article 17 ECHR, Article 28 EP Decl. 1989)
 6. Relationship with other instruments of protection of fundamental rights (Article 27 EP Decl. 1989)
-

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 27 janvier 2000CHARTE 4112/1/00 REV 1*BODY 4*NOTE DE LA PRESIDENCE

Objet : Projet de liste des droits fondamentaux

La présente liste a été établie sur la base des traités communautaires, des conventions internationales relatives aux droits de l'homme dont la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, des textes des constitutions nationales ainsi que divers textes communautaires dont les différentes déclarations du Parlement européen. Elle vise simplement à servir de base aux discussions de la première réunion de travail appelée à établir une telle liste. Une fois que l'enceinte se sera prononcée sur cette liste, le travail de rédaction des différents droits pourra commencer.

Cette liste regroupe des droits accordés aux individus, personnes physiques et morales, que ceux-ci peuvent faire valoir dans le champ des compétences de l'Union et des droits qui peuvent être présentés comme des objectifs politiques de l'action de l'Union. Parfois, à titre d'illustration, le contenu d'un droit a été détaillé.

La distinction entre les droits civils et politiques d'une part et les droits économiques et sociaux d'autre part a été établie uniquement à des fins de clarté. Ont été isolés les droits des citoyens de l'Union et les questions horizontales. Le document ne constitue pas un plan de présentation de la Charte et la place de chaque droit dans la liste devra faire l'objet d'une discussion.

Les références qui ont été indiquées entre parenthèses n'ont qu'une valeur explicative. Elles se rapportent à des textes de nature différente, les uns ayant une valeur contraignante, les autres non. Parfois, les droits sont formulés comme tels, parfois il s'agit simplement d'une référence à un objectif de l'Union ou de la Communauté. De plus, ont été exclues les références au droit dérivé.

L'enceinte est appelée à discuter et à amender cette liste, soit en retranchant certains droits, soit en complétant la liste.

Abréviations:

CE: Traité instituant la Communauté européenne

CEDH: Convention européenne des droits de l'homme

Charte sociale : Charte sociale européenne

Charte communautaire des droits sociaux : Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs

Décl. PE 1989 : Déclaration des droits et libertés fondamentaux adoptée par le Parlement européen le 12 avril 1989.

LISTE DES DROITS

Dignité

1. Droit au respect de la dignité de la personne humaine : ce droit couvre notamment, mais pas exclusivement les questions de bioéthique, interdiction de l'esclavage et du travail forcé (article 4 CEDH, article 1 décl. PE 1989).

Droit à la vie

2. Droit à la vie, interdiction des traitements inhumains et dégradants, de la torture, problème de la peine de mort (article 2 CEDH, article 2 décl. PE 1989)

Liberté et sûreté

3. Liberté et sûreté : protection en cas de privation de liberté, habeas corpus (article 5 CEDH, article 2 décl. PE 1989)

Accès à la justice et droits de procédure

4. Droit à un procès équitable : procès public, tribunal impartial, délai raisonnable, principe du contradictoire et égalité des armes, présomption d'innocence et droits de l'accusé en matière pénale...(article 6 CEDH, article 19 décl. PE 1989)
5. Accès à la justice : droit au juge, assistance judiciaire (articles 6 et 13 CEDH, article 19 décl. PE 1989)

Non rétroactivité

6. Nullum crimen sine lege, nulla poena sine lege et non-rétroactivité de la loi pénale (article 7 CEDH, article 21 décl. PE 1989)

Ne bis in idem

7. Ne bis in idem (article 4 protocole n°7 CEDH, article 20 décl. PE 1989)

Vie privée et familiale

8. Respect de la vie privée et familiale ; droit à l'intimité, domicile, correspondance (article 8 CEDH, article 6 décl. PE 1989)
9. Liberté de fonder une famille, protection de la famille (article 12 CEDH, implicitement in article 6 décl. PE 1989)

Liberté de conscience

10. Liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion, liberté académique (article 9 CEDH, article 4 décl. PE 1989)

Liberté d'expression

11. Liberté d'expression : y compris la liberté de recevoir et de communiquer des informations et la liberté de la presse (article 10 CEDH, article 5 decl. PE 1989)

Principe de démocratie

12. Droit à des élections libres, principe de démocratie (article 3 protocole additionnel CEDH, article 17 décl. PE 1989)

Droit à l'éducation

13. Droit à l'instruction et à la formation professionnelle, liberté de choix du mode d'éducation (article 2 protocole additionnel CEDH, article 150 TCE, article 10 Charte sociale, Pt 15 charte communautaire des droits sociaux, article 16 décl. PE 1989)

Liberté d'association et de manifestation

14. Liberté d'association et de réunion, y compris la liberté de manifestation, la liberté syndicale et la liberté d'affiliation à un parti politique (article 11 CEDH, article 15 Charte sociale, pt. 11 Charte communautaire des droits sociaux, article 11 décl. PE 1989)

Droit d'accès aux informations et protection des données

15. Droit d'accès aux informations, transparence (article 255 CE, article 18 décl. PE 1989)
16. Protection des données (article 286 CE, article 18 décl. PE 1989)

Liberté de mouvement

17. Liberté de circulation et de séjour : problème du bénéficiaire, rapport avec les droits du citoyen (article 2 protocole n°4 CEDH, Titre III du traité pour les travailleurs, article 8 décl. PE 1989)

Droit de propriété

18. Droit de propriété (article 1 protocole additionnel CEDH, article 9 décl. PE 1989)

Environnement et protection des consommateurs

19. Préservation de l'environnement, droit à un environnement sain : droit ou objectif politique ? (article 6 CE, article 24 décl. PE 1989), protection des consommateurs (article 153 CE, article 24 déc. PE 1989)

Droit des étrangers

20. droit des étrangers: asile, prohibition des expulsions collectives, garanties procédurales en cas d'expulsion (article 63 CE, article 4 protocole n° 4 et article 1 protocole n° 7 CEDH,)

Non-discrimination

21. Clause générale de non-discrimination (article 13 CE, article 14 CEDH)

Droits du citoyen de l'Union

1. Liberté de circulation et de séjour (article 18 CE)
2. Droit de voter et d'être élu aux élections européennes et municipales (article 19 CE)
3. Protection diplomatique et consulaire (article 20 CE)
4. Droit de pétition au Parlement européen (article 21CE)
5. Droit de s'adresser au médiateur(article 21)
6. Non discrimination entre les citoyens de l'Union (article 12 CE)
7. Egalité dans l'accès à la fonction publique communautaire (principe de non discrimination sur la base de la nationalité et statut)
8. Droit de s'adresser à l'Union et d'obtenir une réponse dans l'une des langues officielles (article 21 CE)

NB Les droits visés sous 4 et 5 s'appliquent également aux personnes ayant leur résidence sur le territoire d'un Etat membre

Droits/objectifs économiques et sociaux

Droit au travail et liberté professionnelle

- 1 Droit au travail : objectif d'un niveau d'emploi élevé, libre choix et exercice d'une profession (article 127 CE, article 1 charte sociale, pt 4 charte communautaire des droits sociaux)

Conditions de travail

- 2 Droit à la sécurité et à l'hygiène dans le travail: droit ou objectif politique ? (article 140 CE, article 3 charte sociale, pt 19 charte communautaire des droits sociaux, article 13 décl. PE 1989)
- 3 Rémunération équitable et salaire minimal : distinguer ce qui relève d'un droit et ce qui constitue un objectif politique (article 4 charte sociale, article 4 charte communautaire des droits sociaux, article 13 décl. PE 1989)
- 4 Droit au repos hebdomadaire et aux congés payés: droit ou objectif politique ? (article 2 charte sociale, pt 8 charte communautaire des droits sociaux)
- 5 Pension: droit ou objectif politique ? (article 23 charte sociale, pt 24 et 25 charte communautaire des droits sociaux)
- 6 Accès gratuit aux services de placement: droit ou objectif politique (article 1 charte sociale, pt 6 charte communautaire des droits sociaux)

Formation

- 7 Orientation professionnelle et formation continue: droit ou objectif politique (article 9 et 10 charte sociale, pt 15 charte communautaire des droits sociaux)

Droits sociaux collectifs

- 8 Droit à l'information et à la consultation des travailleurs (article 137 CE, article 6 charte sociale, pt 17 charte communautaire des droits sociaux)
- 9 Droit à la négociation collective article 137 CE, article 6 charte sociale, pt 12 charte communautaire des droits sociaux, article 14 décl. PE 1989)
- 10 Droit de grève (article 6 charte sociale, pt 13 charte communautaire des droits sociaux, article 14 décl. PE 1989)

Protection sociale

- 11 Droit à la santé : droit ou objectif politique (article 152 CE, article 11 charte sociale, pt 19 charte communautaire des droits sociaux, article 15 décl. PE 1989)
- 12 Droit à la sécurité sociale, droit à l'aide sociale et médicale : droit ou objectif politique ? (article 13 charte sociale, pt 10 charte communautaire des droits sociaux, article 15 décl. PE 1989)
- 13 Protection de la maternité (article 8 charte sociale)
- 14 Protection des enfants et des adolescents (article 17 charte sociale, pts 20 et svts charte communautaire des droits sociaux)
- 15 Insertion des handicapés (article 15 charte sociale, pt 26 charte communautaire des droits sociaux)

Questions horizontales

1. Titulaires des droits garantis par la Charte
 2. Non discrimination : entre les ressortissants communautaires (article 12 CE), entre homme et femme (article 137 et 141 CE), clause générale de non discrimination (article 13 CE et article 14 CEDH)
 3. Limitation des droits garantis (incorporée dans différents articles CEDH et article 26 décl. PE 1989)
 4. Dérogation en cas de situation exceptionnelle (article 15 CEDH et protocole droit d'asile CE)
 5. Abus de droit (article 17 CEDH, article 28 décl. PE 1989)
 6. Niveau de protection : Rapport avec les autres instruments de protection des droits fondamentaux (article 27 décl. PE 1989)
-

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

fundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 27 January 2000 (31.01)
(OR. f)

CHARTE 4112/2/00 REV 2

BODY 4

PRESIDENCY NOTE

Subject : Draft list of fundamental rights

This list has been drawn up on the basis of the Community Treaties, international human rights conventions including the European Convention on Human Rights, the texts of national constitutions and various Community texts, including several declarations by the European Parliament. It merely aims to serve as a basis for discussions at the first working meeting called upon to draw up such a list. Once the Body has decided on that list, work on drafting the various rights may begin.

This list groups together rights granted to individuals, natural and legal persons, which may be invoked by them within the scope of the Union's powers, and also rights which can be presented as political objectives of Union action. Sometimes, by way of illustration, the contents of a right have been spelt out.

The distinction between civil and political rights on the one hand and economic and social rights on the other has been drawn purely for the sake of clarity. The only matters that have specifically been highlighted are the rights of citizens of the Union and horizontal questions. The document does not claim to constitute a blueprint for the presentation of the Charter and the position of each right on the list will need to be discussed.

The references in brackets have an explanatory value only. They refer to texts of different natures, some having a binding value, and others not. Sometimes, the rights are formulated as such, sometimes there is merely a reference to a Union or Community objective. In addition, references to secondary legislation have been excluded.

The Body is called upon to discuss and amend this list, either by cutting back certain rights, or by amplifying the list.

Abbreviations:

EC: Treaty establishing the European Community

ECHR: European Convention on Human Rights

Social Charter: European Social Charter

Community Charter of Social Rights: Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers

EP Decl. 1989: Declaration of fundamental rights and freedoms adopted by the European Parliament on 12 April 1989.

LIST OF RIGHTS

Dignity

1. Right to respect for the dignity of the human person: this right covers in particular, but not exclusively, questions of bioethics, prohibition of slavery and forced labour (Article 4 ECHR, Article 1 EP Decl. 1989).

Right to life

2. Right to life, prohibition of inhuman or degrading treatment, torture, problem of the death penalty (Article 2 ECHR, Article 22 EP Decl. 1989).

Liberty and security

3. Liberty and security: protection in the event of deprivation of liberty, habeas corpus (Article 5 ECHR, Article 2 EP Decl. 1989).

Access to justice and procedural rights

4. Right to a fair trial: public hearing, impartial tribunal, reasonable time, principle of right to be heard (audi alteram partem) and of equality of arms, presumption of innocence and the rights of the accused in criminal proceedings...(Article 6 ECHR, Article 19 EP Decl. 1989).
5. Access to justice: right to appear before a judge, legal assistance (Articles 6 and 13 ECHR, Article 19 EP Decl. 1989).

Non-retroactivity

6. Nullum crimen sine lege et nulla poena sine lege (no crime without law and no punishment without law) and non-retroactive criminal law (Article 7 ECHR, Article 21 EP Decl. 1989).

Non bis in idem

7. Non bis in idem (double jeopardy) (Article 4, Protocol No 7 ECHR, Article 20 EP Decl. 1989).

Private and family life

8. Respect for private and family life: right to privacy, home, correspondence (Article 8 ECHR, Article 6 EP Decl. 1989).

Right to found a family

- 9. Freedom to found a family (Article 12 ECHR), protection of the family (Article 7 EP Decl. 1989)

Freedom of conscience

10. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion, academic freedom (Article 9 ECHR, Article 4 EP Decl. 1989).

Freedom of expression

11. Freedom of expression: including the freedom to receive and impart information and freedom of the press (Article 10 ECHR, Article 5 EP Decl. 1989).

Principle of democracy

12. Right to free elections, principle of democracy (Article 3 Additional Protocol ECHR, Article 17 EP Decl. 1989).

Right to education

13. Right to education and vocational training, freedom of choice of method of education (Article 2 Additional Protocol ECHR, Article 150 EC, Article 10 Social Charter, Point 15 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 16 EP Decl. 1989).

Freedom of association and demonstration

14. Freedom of association and assembly, including freedom to demonstrate, freedom to form trade unions and freedom to join a political party (Article 11 ECHR, Article 15 Social Charter, Point 11 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 11 EP Decl. 1989).

Right of access to information and data protection

15. Right of access to information, transparency (Article 255 EC, Article 18 EP Decl. 1989).
16. Data protection (Article 286 EC, Article 18 EP Decl. 1989).

Freedom of movement

17. Freedom of movement and of residence: problem of beneficiary, relationship with citizens' rights (Article 2 Protocol No 4 ECHR, Title III of the Treaty for workers, Article 8 EP Decl. 1989).

Right to property

18. Property rights (Article 1 Additional Protocol ECHR, Article 9 EP Decl. 1989).

Environment and consumer protection

19. Conservation of the environment, right to a healthy environment: right or political objective? (Article 6 EC, Article 24 EP Decl. 1989), consumer protection (Article 153 EC, Article 24 EP Decl. 1989).

Rights of aliens

20. Rights of aliens: asylum, prohibition of collective expulsion, procedural guarantees in the event of expulsion (Article 63 EC, Article 4 Protocol No. 4 and Article 1 Protocol No. 7 ECHR).

Non-discrimination

21. General non-discrimination clause (Article 13 EC, Article 14 ECHR).

Rights of citizens of the Union

1. Freedom of movement and residence (Article 18 EC)
2. Right to vote and stand as a candidate at European and municipal elections (Article 19 EC)
3. Diplomatic and consular protection (Article 20 EC)
4. Right to petition the European Parliament (Article 21 EC)
5. Right to apply to the Ombudsman (Article 21 EC)
6. Non-discrimination between citizens of the Union (Article 12 EC)
7. Equal access to the Community civil service (principle of non-discrimination on the basis of nationality and status)
8. Right to write to the Union in one of the official languages and to have an answer in the same official language (Article 21 EC)

NB. The rights referred to under points 4 and 5 also apply to persons residing in the territory of a Member State.

Economic and social rights/objectives

Right to work and choose an occupation

1. Right to work: objective of a high level of employment, freedom to choose and engage in an occupation (Article 127 EC, Article 1 Social Charter, Point 4 Community Charter of Social Rights).

Working conditions

2. Right to safety and health at work: right or political objective? (Article 140 EC, Article 3 Social Charter, Point 19 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 13 EP Decl. 1989).
3. Fair remuneration and minimum wage: distinguish between what falls under a right and what constitutes a political objective (Article 4 Social Charter, Article 4 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 13 EP Decl. 1989).

4. Right to weekly rest period and paid holidays: right or political objective? (Article 2 Social Charter, Point 8 Community Charter of Social Rights).
5. Pensions: right or political objective? (Article 23 Social Charter, Points 24 and 25 Community Charter of Social Rights).
6. Free access to placement services: right or political objective (Article 1 Social Charter, Point 6 Community Charter of Social Rights).

Training

7. Vocational guidance and continuing training: right or political objective (Articles 9 and 10 Social Charter, Point 15 Community Charter of Social Rights).

Collective labour rights

8. Workers' right to information and consultation of workers (Article 137 EC, Article 6 Social Charter, Point 17 Community Charter of Social Rights).
9. Right to collective bargaining (Article 137 EC, Article 6 Social Charter, Point 12 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 14 EP Decl. 1989).
10. Right to strike (Article 6 Social Charter, Point 13 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 14 EP Decl. 1989).

Social protection

11. Right to health: right or political objective (Article 152 EC, Article 11 Social Charter, Point 19 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 15 EP Decl. 1989).
12. Right to social security, right to social and medical assistance: right or political objective? (Article 13 Social Charter, Point 10 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 15 EP Decl. 1989).
13. Protection of maternity (Article 8 Social Charter).
14. Protection of children and young persons (Article 17 Social Charter, Points 20 et seq. Community Charter of Social Rights).
15. Integration of disabled persons (Article 15 Social Charter, Point 26 Community Charter of Social Rights).

Horizontal questions

1. Holders of rights guaranteed by the Charter
2. Non-discrimination: between Community nationals (Article 12 EC), between men and women (Articles 137 and 141 EC), general non-discrimination clause (Article 13 EC and Article 14 ECHR)
3. Limitation of guaranteed rights (incorporated in various Articles of ECHR and Article 26 EP Decl. 1989)
4. Derogation in exceptional situations (Article 15 ECHR and Protocol on right of asylum EC)
5. Abuse of rights (Article 17 ECHR, Article 28 EP Decl. 1989)
6. Level of protection: Relationship with other instruments for the protection of fundamental rights (Article 27 EP Decl. 1989)

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 28 January 2000CHARTE 4117/00*CONTRIB 13*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution submitted by Mr. Paavo Nikula, personal representative of Finland.

The Chancellor of Justice of the Finnish Council of State

CONSIDERATIONS ON THE DRAFTING OF THE EUROPEAN CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS

1. It might be most natural to start by making an inventory of the fundamental rights that already exist at the European level. Available legal sources are, in the first place, the European Convention for the protection of Human Rights, mentioned in Article 6(2) of the Treaty on European Union, and the practice of applying the Convention. But it is also appropriate to go through the European Social Charter and the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers (Article 136 TEU), both mentioned in the Cologne Conclusions. Further, the decisions of the EC Court of Justice contain some statements of the Court's position on fundamental rights that are worth noticing. Also the UN human rights conventions (including the Conventions on the Rights of Women and the Rights of the Child) and the ILO conventions ratified or signed by the EU Member States should be examined and taken into account in the work of the Body.

Such a basic inventory is necessary for establishing the prevailing situation. It is also necessary in order that we can, firstly, avoid ending up in a draft Charter of Fundamental Rights that is below the current standard and, secondly, assess our opportunities to further develop the European fundamental rights.

2. From the Finnish point of view, it would also be useful to examine how the possible accession of the EU to the European Convention for the protection of Human Rights and perhaps other international human rights instruments could take place in practice. This examination would mainly include technical work to find out what amendments to the Treaties would be needed and what corresponding measures would be necessary in the Council of Europe and possibly other international organisations. In this connection, it would probably be necessary to deal with the division of competence between the Courts in Strasbourg and Luxembourg. — When examining the accession to the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and the project on the EU's Charter of Fundamental Rights, Finnish specialists have concluded that these two are not mutually exclusive alternatives.
3. In Article 6(2) of the Treaty on European Union, reference is made to the constitutional traditions common to the Member States. In my view it is appropriate to examine this issue, as well, because also the EC Court of Justice has used these traditions as an argument for some of its decisions. The national constitutions of the Member States may also stimulate further development of fundamental rights at the European level. In this respect, I wish to briefly describe the past developments in Finland.

In Finland, fundamental rights were originally (in the Constitution Act of 1919) prescribed as rights of Finnish citizens. During the decades to follow, however, the application practice gradually changed in a universal direction. The fundamental rights of 1919 were mainly classical freedom rights. In the constitutional reform carried out in 1995, these fundamental rights were supplemented with considerably increased and extended economic, social, educational and political rights.

Moreover, the so-called third generation fundamental rights were introduced by including in the Constitution a provision on responsibility for the environment. This provision also represents a new writing technique: "The nature, biodiversity, the environment and the cultural heritage shall be the responsibility of everyone". Protection of work force, which has traditionally been included in the fundamental rights in Finland, is also covered by the new provisions on fundamental rights by prescribing that the public authorities are responsible for promoting employment. At the same time, the right to pursue a business is safeguarded as a fundamental right.

On the one hand, the new Finnish provisions on fundamental rights aim at safeguarding citizens' rights of participation. On the other, they obligate the public authorities to ensure that the fundamental and human rights are implemented. This obligation also contributes to the supervision of fundamental and human rights. The fundamental rights provisions concerning a fair trial and proper public administration have the same contributory effect, but in addition they have a great independent significance as legal rules that strengthen the individual rights and obligations in the application of the law by courts and the decision-making of different administrative authorities.

The new Finnish Constitution, which will enter into force on 1 March 2000, will include the fundamental rights provisions of 1995 unamended.

4. The Finnish example for its part probably shows that, in addition to the classical fundamental rights, it is necessary to examine, inter alia, the rights of linguistic and cultural minorities as well as prohibitions of discrimination, rights of participation and access to information, the principle of publicity etc. In my view, the new Finnish provisions on fundamental rights, for their part, do not only reflect the national constitutional tradition but also a tradition that is common to the Member States. I enclose the Finnish and Swedish language versions and a translation into English of the chapter on fundamental rights ("Basic rights and liberties") of the Finnish Constitution, which will enter into force on 1 March 2000.

The Union's fundamental rights should not be limited so that they concern exclusively EU citizens or economic operators, such as employees, except for particularly well-founded and weighty reasons.

Paavo Nikula
January 2000

The Constitution of Finland

(731/1999)

Chapter 2

Basic rights and liberties

Section 6 - Equality

Everyone is equal before the law.

No one shall, without an acceptable reason, be treated differently from other persons on the ground of sex, age, origin, language, religion, conviction, opinion, health, disability or other reason that concerns his or her person.

Children shall be treated equally and as individuals and they shall be allowed to influence matters pertaining to themselves to a degree corresponding to their level of development.

Equality of the sexes is promoted in societal activity and working life, especially in the determination of pay and the other terms of employment, as provided in more detail by an Act.

Section 7 – The right to life, personal liberty and integrity

Everyone has the right to life, personal liberty, integrity and security.

No one shall be sentenced to death, tortured or otherwise treated in a manner violating human dignity.

The personal integrity of the individual shall not be violated, nor shall anyone be deprived of liberty arbitrarily or without a reason prescribed by an Act. A penalty involving deprivation of liberty may be imposed only by a court of law. The lawfulness of other cases of deprivation of liberty may be submitted for review by a court of law. The rights of individuals deprived of their liberty shall be guaranteed by an Act.

Section 8 – The principle of legality in criminal cases

No one shall be found guilty of a criminal offence or be sentenced to a punishment on the basis of a deed, which has not been determined punishable by an Act at the time of its commission. The penalty imposed for an offence shall not be more severe than that provided by an Act at the time of commission of the offence.

Section 9 - Freedom of movement

Finnish citizens and foreigners legally resident in Finland have the right to freely move within the country and to choose their place of residence.

Everyone has the right to leave the country. Limitations on this right may be provided by an Act, if they are necessary for the purpose of safeguarding legal proceedings or for the enforcement of penalties or for the fulfilment of the duty of national defence.

Finnish citizens shall not be prevented from entering Finland or deported or extradited or transferred from Finland to another country against their will.

The right of foreigners to enter Finland and to remain in the country is regulated by an Act. A foreigner shall not be deported, extradited or returned to another country, if in consequence he or she is in danger of a death sentence, torture or other treatment violating human dignity.

Section 10 – The right to privacy

Everyone's private life, honour and the sanctity of the home are guaranteed. More detailed provisions on the protection of personal data are laid down by an Act.

The secrecy of correspondence, telephony and other confidential communications is inviolable.

Measures encroaching on the sanctity of the home, and which are necessary for the purpose of guaranteeing basic rights and liberties or for the investigation of crime, may be laid down by an Act. In addition, provisions concerning limitations of the secrecy of communications which are necessary in the investigation of crimes that jeopardise the security of the individual or society or the sanctity of the home, at trials and security checks, as well as during the deprivation of liberty may be laid down by an Act.

Section 11 - Freedom of religion and conscience

Everyone has the freedom of religion and conscience.

Freedom of religion and conscience entails the right to profess and practice a religion, the right to express one's convictions and the right to be a member of or decline to be a member of a religious community. No one is under the obligation, against his or her conscience, to participate in the practice of a religion.

Section 12 - Freedom of expression and right of access to information

Everyone has the freedom of expression. Freedom of expression entails the right to express, disseminate and receive information, opinions and other communications without prior prevention by anyone. More detailed provisions on the exercise of the freedom of expression are laid down by an Act. Provisions on restrictions relating to pictorial programmes that are necessary for the protection of children may be laid down by an Act.

Documents and recordings in the possession of the authorities are public, unless their publication has for compelling reasons been specifically restricted by an Act. Everyone has the right of access to public documents and recordings.

Section 13 - Freedom of assembly and freedom of association

Everyone has the right to arrange meetings and demonstrations without a permit, as well as the right to participate in them.

Everyone has the freedom of association. Freedom of association entails the right to form an association without a permit, to be a member or not to be a member of an association and to participate in the activities of an association. The freedom to form trade unions and to organise in order to look after other interests is likewise guaranteed.

More detailed provisions on the exercise of the freedom of assembly and the freedom of association are laid down by an Act.

Section 14 - Electoral and participatory rights

Every Finnish citizen who has reached eighteen years of age has the right to vote in national elections and referendums. Specific provisions in this Constitution shall govern the eligibility to stand for office in national elections.

Every Finnish citizen and every foreigner permanently resident in Finland, having attained eighteen years of age, has the right to vote in municipal elections and municipal referendums, as provided by an Act. Provisions on the right to otherwise participate in municipal government are laid down by an Act.

The public authorities shall promote the opportunities for the individual to participate in societal activity and to influence the decisions that concern him or her.

Section 15 - Protection of property

The property of everyone is protected.

Provisions on the expropriation of property, for public needs and against full compensation, are laid down by an Act.

Section 16 – Educational rights

Everyone has the right to basic education free of charge. Provisions on the duty to receive education are laid down by an Act.

The public authorities shall, as provided in more detail by an Act, guarantee for everyone equal opportunity to receive other educational services in accordance with their ability and special needs, as well as the opportunity to develop themselves without being prevented by economic hardship.

The freedom of science, the arts and higher education is guaranteed.

Section 17 – Right to one's language and culture

The national languages of Finland are Finnish and Swedish.

The right of everyone to use his or her own language, either Finnish or Swedish, before courts of law and other authorities, and to receive official documents in that language, shall be guaranteed by an Act. The public authorities shall provide for the cultural and societal needs of the Finnish-speaking and Swedish-speaking populations of the country on an equal basis.

The Sami, as an indigenous people, as well as the Roma and other groups, have the right to maintain and develop their own language and culture. Provisions on the right of the Sami to use the Sami language before the authorities are laid down by an Act. The rights of persons using sign language and of persons in need of interpretation or translation aid owing to disability shall be guaranteed by an Act.

Section 18 – The right to work and the freedom to engage in commercial activity

Everyone has the right, as provided by an Act, to earn his or her livelihood by the employment, occupation or commercial activity of his or her choice. The public authorities shall take responsibility for the protection of the labour force.

The public authorities shall promote employment and work towards guaranteeing for everyone the right to work. Provisions on the right to receive training that promotes employability are laid down by an Act.

No one shall be dismissed from employment without a lawful reason.

Section 19 – The right to social security

Those who cannot obtain the means necessary for a life of dignity have the right to receive indispensable subsistence and care.

Everyone shall be guaranteed by an Act the right to basic subsistence in the event of unemployment, illness, and disability and during old age as well as at the birth of a child or the loss of a provider.

The public authorities shall guarantee for everyone, as provided in more detail by an Act, adequate social, health and medical services and promote the health of the population. Moreover, the public authorities shall support families and others responsible for providing for children so that they have the ability to ensure the wellbeing and personal development of the children.

The public authorities shall promote the right of everyone to housing and the opportunity to arrange their own housing.

Section 20 - Responsibility for the environment

Nature and its biodiversity, the environment and the national heritage are the responsibility of everyone.

The public authorities shall endeavour to guarantee for everyone the right to a healthy environment and for everyone the possibility to influence the decisions that concern their own living environment.

Section 21 – Protection under the law

Everyone has the right to have his or her case dealt with appropriately and without undue delay by a legally competent court of law or other authority, as well as to have a decision pertaining to his or her rights or obligations reviewed by a court of law or other independent organ for the administration of justice.

Provisions concerning the publicity of proceedings, the right to be heard, the right to receive a reasoned decision and the right of appeal, as well as the other guarantees of a fair trial and good governance shall be laid down by an Act.

Section 22 – Protection of basic rights and liberties

The public authorities shall guarantee the observance of basic rights and liberties and human rights.

Section 23 - Basic rights and liberties in situations of emergency

Such provisional exceptions to basic rights and liberties that are compatible with Finland's international obligations concerning human rights and that are deemed necessary in the case of an armed attack against Finland or if there exists an emergency that threatens the nation and which according to an Act is so serious that it can be compared with an armed attack may be provided by an Act.

Editors' note to CHARTE 4118/1/00 REV 1,
Letter from Mr. Buttiglione to Mr. Mendez de Vigo, Chairman of the European Parliament delegation
(dated 26/01/00):

The INIT version is identical to the REV 1 one save for formatting changes and is therefore excluded.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

TRANSLATION SUPPLIED BY THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT DELEGATION*Brussels, 2 February 2000
(OR. IT)*CHARTE 4118/1/00
REV 1*CONTRIB 14*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a letter sent by Mr. Buttiglione to Mr. Mendez de Vigo, Chairman of the European Parliament delegation. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English and Italian language.

Bruxelles, 26 January 2000

Dear Mr. President,

the decision to prepare a charter of man's and citizen's rights marks a fundamental step forward towards the construction of a common european citizenship and sovereignty. It is therefore mandatory that this Charter be included in the Treaty and become the cornerstone of the new european constitutional law. This is the only path leading from the Europe of the States towards a Europe of Citizens and of Nations.

Striving towards this goal I take the liberty of proposing to your attention the following considerations.

1. The Culture of Rights diffused in the cultural context of our democracies has to undergo a critical examination in the writing of our charter.

We run the danger of forgetting through a generic affirmation of rights the hard fact that to each right corresponds a duty.

The Charter of Rights must be therefore at the same time a Charter of Rights and Duties of men and of citizens.

If we don't affirm clearly this truth we shall be exposed to two great risks:

- a. on the one hand we run the risk of writing a charter containing a broad and vague catalogue of rights with a mere rhetorical and declamatory effect but that will not be able to offer precise judgement criteria to the judiciary and a clear orientation to the lawgivers.

- b. on the other hand we run the risk, explicitly or implicitly, of attributing to the state or, even worse, to the European Union the task of enforcing all rights, making of the state the bearer of all corresponding obligations. It is apparent that in order to enforce all rights the state must control all powers, and the emphasis on the rights may easily lead to an abnormal extension of state's powers, to that omnipotence of the state that is today the greatest obstacle to the real empowerment of the liberty rights of the citizens.

Don't forget that modern totalitarianism was, to a certain extent, a consequence of the affirmation of unconditional rights whose enforcement has been entrusted to omnipotent states.

2. The problem I have pointed out is particularly important in the field of social rights or, more precisely, in the field of rights with a positive content.

There are some rights whose content is just the demand of a negative behaviour of the state or of all members of the human community. The right to life, for instance, in a narrower definition, consists in the demand of not being killed; the right to property (in its narrower definition) consists in the demand of not being deprived of one's own property and so on. Liberty rights, in the form in which they are contained in liberal Bills of Rights and Constitutions of the XIX Century, have as a rule a negative content. The right consists in a universal demand, addressed to the generality of men, that they should maintain a negative behaviour in relation to this or that kind of action; it demands that they should not interfere with the exercise of the free action of a given subject. Its form is "Thou shall not".

Social rights, affirmed in the Constitutions and in the Declarations of Rights of the XX Century, are of a different sort. Social rights or, more in general, rights with a positive content, consist in the demand of a positive behaviour that brings about a state of affairs favourable to the subject of that right.

A classical example is the right to work, understood as the right to have a job.

The affirmation of this right runs of course the risk of remaining purely rhetorical if the bearer of the corresponding duty is not clearly identified; if it is not determined who has the duty of creating the corresponding job.

But if we assume, explicitly or implicitly, that the carrier of this obligation is the state, then we must accept that the state has the right and the duty of creating all the needed jobs. To this duty corresponds necessarily the right of the state to command all the resources needed to attain this goal and the consequence is a totalitarian state's control of the economy.

If we consider the whole of social rights (to work, to health care, to education, to pensions and so on) it is apparent that an inadequate formulation of these rights may open a free inroad toward a complete social control or, at least, may be seen as a support to the bureaucratic degeneration of the social state against which we are struggling today both in the European Union and in each particular state.

3. It is important to observe that, really, the distinction we have drawn in not between individual liberty rights an social rights but between rights with a positive and rights with a negative content. Even traditional liberty rights may be interpreted in a broader sense as rights with a positive content. The rights to life, for instance, may be interpreted as a right not only not to be killed but also as a right to all what maintains, implements and enhances life and, in this interpretation, it would include all social rights. It could even be interpreted as a right not to die, a right to immortality, but in this sense it would trespass the capacity of any political community to guarantee it. The example explains how absurd the talk about rights may easily become, if we don't keep a sober mind.

The socialist tradition of thought has insisted and insists upon a culture of rights and on a culture of social rights.

The liberal tradition has expressed an increasing diffidence towards unconditional social rights, after having been the first to support a culture of rights.

It is possible to find a sound compromise or even a working synthesis of these two traditions? I think that this is possible and that the leading concept of this correct synthesis is already contained in the guidelines of the European Union and it is the principle of subsidiarity that must be reaffirmed in the Charter of Rights and must be used as a criterium to order rights and duties.

The principle of subsidiarity says that a society of a higher order should not interfere with the functioning of a society of a lower order, unless the latter is not able through its own efforts to cope with its own tasks. Each society has a sphere of action and competence entrusted to its responsibility. In this sphere it may not and should not be substituted. It may be supported in case of need and has moreover to be co-ordinated by the higher society so that it may cooperate harmonically for general or higher level purposes.

If we consider the social rights and the rights with a positive content we see that they demand for their enforcement the co-operation of a plurality of societies and subjects of different orders, each one carrying a specific responsibility.

Let us consider for instance the right to work, understood in the light of the principle of subsidiarity. The enforcement of this right demands the fulfilment of corresponding duties falling upon a whole series of different subjects. The first subject is the worker himself, who has to acquire the skills that allow him to find a useful occupation and has to be engaged in looking for it and/or in building it up, participating in business initiatives aimed to create jobs and opportunities for work. There is also a role of the family to help and support the person in her/his education and in the search for a job. There is a fundamental role of the business community, with the support of local communities, and there is a task of the educational system and of public and private agencies that are active in it. There is of course a subsidiary responsibility of the state and of the public authorities that must take care that in a general condition of ordinate economic development there is a reasonable abundance of opportunities for work, so that all of those who want to work, and stand in need of working, can work.

Dear President, I hope you will excuse me for this long letter. It is perhaps justified because of the importance of the subject, decisive for the structure of the Charter of Rights and for the choices of principle we will be confronted with in the next years. It is appropriate to solicitate on these subjects a broad debate, with the involvement of the cultural, business and labour communities as well as of european society at large.

I take this occasion to express you my best wishes for a fruitful work and to thank you for the authority and style with which you comply with your delicate function.

Yours truly

Rocco Buttiglione

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 7 février 2000CHARTE 4121/00*CONTRIB 17*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-joint une contribution de M. Guy Braibant, Représentant personnel de la France. ¹

¹ Ce texte a déjà été diffusé lors de la réunion des 1er/2 février 2000. Il existe uniquement en français.

Paris, le 31 janvier 2000

CHARTRE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX
DE L'UNION EUROPEENNE*Contribution aux débats*(Réunions des 1^{er} et 2 février 2000)*N° 7 de l'ordre du jour : Thèmes horizontaux

Je pense que, pour mener à bien notre tâche qui est importante et difficile, nous ne devons être ni trop ambitieux ni trop modestes.

Pas trop ambitieux

Je propose, en premier lieu, de ne pas nous attarder sur trois questions qui sont certes très importantes, mais que pour des raisons politiques et techniques, nous ne serons sans doute pas en mesure de régler « en temps utile ».

C'est d'abord la question de la Constitution. Certains considèrent que la Charte peut ou doit être le préambule d'une Constitution qui serait, par hypothèse, fédérale. C'est peut-être une vue d'avenir et chacun peut conserver son opinion sur l'opportunité d'une telle solution. Mais ce n'est pas à mon avis une question d'actualité. Nous n'avons pas de mandat pour établir une Constitution, dont le principe même n'a pas encore été décidé. Il n'y a pas de lien nécessaire entre les deux questions, comme le montre entre autres l'exemple de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Il ne faudrait pas renoncer à la Charte sous prétexte qu'elle n'est pas assortie d'une Constitution.

La question des traités est du même ordre. Elle est double. En premier lieu, l'insertion de la Charte dans les traités n'est pas de notre compétence, mais de celle des autorités européennes, comme l'ont rappelé les conclusions de Cologne. Nous pourrions sans doute émettre un vœu à ce sujet. Mais, là encore, ce serait peut-être un facteur d'affaiblissement des chances du projet que de subordonner son approbation à une incorporation dans les traités. En second lieu nous devons également éviter de subordonner l'adoption de la Charte à des modifications des traités sur d'autres points.

Nous en venons ainsi à une troisième question, celle des juridictions. L'Europe dispose actuellement de deux juridictions anciennes et prestigieuses, qui ont fait leurs preuves : la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes et la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme. Il ne serait pas raisonnable de modifier dès maintenant le statut des Cours existantes en portant atteinte à leurs compétences ou à leur composition, en particulier en subordonnant l'une à l'autre.

Nous devons travailler, me semble-t-il, à « organisation juridictionnelle constante ». Il pourra en résulter des inconvénients, en particulier si comme il est probable et comme les conclusions de Cologne d'ailleurs nous y incitent, la Charte se réfère à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme : les deux Cours pourront être conduites à interpréter le même texte de manière différente. Mais ce risque existe déjà, compte tenu de la rédaction actuelle des traités et de la jurisprudence de la Cour de Luxembourg, et il n'a pas soulevé jusqu'à présent de difficultés majeures ; il faut espérer que les deux juridictions sauront harmoniser spontanément leurs jurisprudences, sans se livrer à une « guerre des juges ». C'est ainsi que pourrait être réglé un problème souvent évoqué dans les débats actuels, celui du caractère contraignant de la Charte. A la différence du précédent, ce point relève, me semble-t-il, de notre compétence. Il ne suffira pas de proclamer ou de reconnaître les droits il faudra trouver les moyens juridiques de les faire valoir, notamment en justice, qui ne nécessitent peut-être pas d'innovations ni de modifications des traités. La question devra être examinée à propos des différents droits. Sur ce point, j'approuve la position exprimée par le Président Herzog lors de notre première séance : « Nous allons élaborer un texte qui n'aura pas immédiatement la force obligatoire attachée à la législation européenne et communautaire. Malgré tout, nous devrions toujours garder à l'esprit l'idée que la charte que nous rédigeons doit acquérir un jour, dans un avenir relativement proche, un caractère contraignant ».

Pas trop modestes non plus

Pour l'essentiel, notre travail devrait consister à établir des listes de droits, en définissant leur champ d'application aux institutions (institutions communautaires seulement, ou également institutions nationales lorsqu'elles appliquent le droit communautaire) et aux personnes (citoyens, résidents, étrangers de passage). Ces droits peuvent être classés en trois catégories comme l'ont fait les conclusions de Cologne, mais en suivant peut-être un ordre différent. Je pense en effet qu'il n'est ni logique ni opportun de placer les droits « réservés aux citoyens de l'Union européenne » entre les deux autres catégories, qui ne doivent pas subir la même limitation ; on peut les placer en tête ou à la fin.

Cette catégorie « des droits de citoyenneté » est sans doute la plus facile à définir dans son contenu comme dans son champ d'application, car elle est inscrite pour l'essentiel, dans le traité de l'Union européenne ; elle comprend notamment les droits de vote, d'éligibilité, de pétition, et avec certaines extensions à d'autres catégories de personnes, le droit de pétition au Parlement, le droit de saisine du Médiateur et la liberté de circulation.

Une deuxième catégorie, qui figure actuellement au premier rang, des conclusions de Cologne, est constituée par « les droits de liberté, d'égalité et de procédure ». A la différence des précédents, ces droits sont universels. Ils sont difficiles à qualifier ; on ne peut plus parler de « droits civils et politiques », comme dans les documents des Nations-Unis, car les droits de citoyenneté sont aussi des droits politiques ; il faudrait peut-être adopter soit l'expression de « droits de la personne », soit celle de « droits et libertés ». Elle comprendrait notamment, ceux qui sont énumérés dans la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme ; mais pas seulement. Il faudrait y ajouter des droits apparus depuis la signature de la Convention, dans des protocoles, dans des conventions antérieures ou dans des directives et des règlements communautaires en matière par exemple, d'informatique et de bioéthique ; le premier cas est typique car il a fait l'objet d'une directive européenne et d'une convention du Conseil de l'Europe ; il ne s'agit donc pas de « droits nouveaux » ; le second est plus complexe, car il existe des divergences sensibles entre les Etats et une convention européenne, la convention d'Oviedo, certes signée mais non ratifiée ; il serait toutefois possible de trouver une formulation générale et consensuelle, qui sans entrer dans les détails, montrerait que ce secteur important a été pris en compte. Outre les instruments européens déjà existants, il faudrait se référer aux instruments internationaux ratifiés par tous les Etats membres de l'Union.

En ce qui concerne les dispositions qui figurent déjà dans des textes, plusieurs méthodes peuvent être utilisées : soit un simple renvoi, mais le lecteur ne connaîtrait pas ses droits par la seule lecture de la Charte ; soit une réécriture, mais ce système est dangereux parce qu'il risque d'entraîner des discussions inutiles au moment de la rédaction et des divergences d'interprétation dans l'application ; soit enfin une reproduction intégrale ou bien en annexe, ou bien dans le corps de la Charte.

Ces techniques peuvent également être utilisées pour la troisième catégorie de droits, les droits économiques et sociaux. C'est sans doute la plus importante pour nous, parce que c'est celle qui est la moins perfectionnée actuellement et qui provoque le plus d'attentes sociales. Mais c'est aussi la plus difficile. D'abord le texte des conclusions de Cologne dit des et non pas les droits économiques et sociaux, ce qui nous invite à procéder à une sélection. En outre ces mêmes conclusions nous incitent à éviter les droits qui ne sont que des « objectifs » ; mais nous ne devons pas accepter une régression par rapport au droit actuel tel qu'il est écrit, en particulier, dans les Chartes européennes auxquelles renvoient ces conclusions ou dans d'autres conventions internationales comme celles de l'organisation internationale du travail. Nous devons au contraire le renforcer par des formules plus précises et plus contraignantes. Les droits liés à la protection de l'environnement devraient également être inscrits dans cette catégorie.

C'est là certes un vaste programme. Si nous commençons rapidement à le mettre en œuvre, nous pourrions achever sa réalisation dans les brefs délais qui nous sont impartis.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 7 February 2000CHARTE 4122/00*CONTRIB 18*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter the contribution and the intervention made by Lord Goldsmith, QC at the meeting of 1 and 2 February 2000. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted only in English language.

EU CHARTER OF RIGHTS CONVENTION

NOTE ON STRUCTURE - LORD GOLDSMITH (UK REPRESENTATIVE)

At its meeting on 1-2 February the Charter drafting body will have an initial discussion of the scope and content of the Charter of Rights, following which the Praesidium will be turning its attention to preparing initial drafts. How the Charter is structured will be an important element in its success and it may be helpful if I set out some thoughts on a possible approach.

Purpose of our Work

As the Cologne Conclusions make clear, the challenge is to make existing fundamental rights more visible. The Charter exercise is a real opportunity. Properly constructed and presented, the Charter could deepen and strengthen the culture of rights and responsibilities at all levels across the EU and express our underlying unity of moral purpose. Bringing together into a single document endorsed by Member States and Community institutions, a proclamation of existing rights would have a powerful effect in reinforcing in the minds of administrators, governments, legislators, judges, lawyers and all other citizens the rights they possess and the need to respect them.

The Cologne and Tampere European Council Conclusions set the scope and timescale for this project. At Cologne, Heads of Government created this Body to produce a draft Charter of fundamental rights existing at Union level ‘in order to make their overriding importance and relevance more visible to the Union’s citizens.’ In this way ‘the fundamental rights applicable at Union level’ can be ‘consolidated in a Charter and thereby made more evident’ (Cologne Conclusions, paragraph 44).

This is a clear steer towards a political statement limited to existing rights. The Cologne Conclusions set out the sequence. Only after this Body has done its work will the question be considered of ‘whether and, if so, how the Charter should be integrated into the treaties’. This has important implications for our work. We should be seeking to keep the draft clear and simple for maximum public impact. There is no time to do anything else in the few months we have available.

The drafting body cannot decide on legal status, so we must ensure that we respect and complement the existing European human rights architecture and existing competences, and preserve legal certainty. We should aim to agree from the outset a clear and straightforward structure for the document which will make our work easier and facilitate the subsequent endorsement process.

Proposal

I propose a simple document comprising of two interrelated parts designed to meet these criteria. Part A would contain a succinct and user-friendly statement of rights and responsibilities, while Part B would complement and build on Part A by explaining the nature and scope of those rights and pointing to the appropriate source instrument and how they are justiciable. The two parts would be clearly linked through mutual cross-references though the first could perhaps be made available separately for promotional purposes, but keeping the signpost to Part B. This approach would allow visibility and accessibility through Part A while retaining legal certainty through Part B. Part B would also contain any applicable national derogation.

I attach an annex which sets out how such a document might look, taking as examples rights under four headings identified by Cologne. (The examples and wording used in the annex are for illustrative purposes; the detailed content and wording would, of course, be for the drafting body):

- civil and political rights;
- EU citizens' rights;
- economic and social rights; and
- rights emanating from the constitutional traditions common to all Member States.

[signed]

Lord Goldsmith QC

January 2000

Annex

DRAFT STRUCTURE

PART A

Introduction: an opening paragraph on, for example, Europe's common human rights heritage; the importance of that common heritage to e.g. the fight against xenophobia; identifying fundamental ethical unity of purpose amidst the diversity of races and religions; acting as an international beacon for human rights etc. Explanation of the interdependence of rights and responsibilities (c.f. EC Treaty Article 17(2) and ECHR Article 17) and corresponding need for citizens as well as public authorities to respect the rights of others and reaffirming a commitment to the protection and promotion of fundamental rights throughout the EU.

- A list of rights enjoyed within the EU, with a statement that their legal source is set out in Part B and that they are subject to the conditions set out in Part B and to be enforced in the way set out in Part B. Illustrative examples:

Example 1: Every citizen has the right to liberty and security and cannot be deprived of it except in limited cases and in accordance with the law;

Example 2: Every citizen has the right to vote and stand for election in EP and local elections;

Example 3: Every citizen has the right as an EU national to set up a business anywhere in the EU;

Example 4: Every citizen has the right to keep communications with his lawyers private.

It is for discussion whether there could be included also a statement: "In simple terms this means that ..."

PART B

This section will set out and explain the nature and conditions of the fundamental rights included in Part A.

A short passage stating that an individual in a Member State will enjoy the rights contained in the provisions referred to in Part B in so far as the provisions conferring the rights have been accepted and brought into effect by that Member State and are in accordance with that Member State's national law and practice.

The source instrument for each right will be indicated separately; and guidance will be given on justiciability, and about general provisions of the individual treaties which are essential for understanding their nature and extent.

Civil and Political Example 1: Right to liberty and security – This right is guaranteed by European Convention on Human Rights, Article 5 and is enforceable through national courts and by the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg. Article 5 provides as follows:

1. Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in the following cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law:
 - (a) the lawful detention of a person after conviction by a competent court;
 - (b) the lawful arrest or detention of a person for non-compliance with the lawful order of a court or in order to secure the fulfilment of any obligation prescribed by law;
 - (c) the lawful arrest or detention of a person effected for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority on reasonable suspicion of having committed an offence or when it is reasonably considered necessary to prevent his committing an offence or fleeing after having done so;
 - (d) the detention of a minor by lawful order for the purpose of educational supervision or his lawful detention for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority;
 - (e) the lawful detention of persons for the prevention of the spreading of infectious diseases, of persons of unsound minds, alcoholics or drug addicts or vagrants;

- (f) the lawful arrest or detention of a person to prevent his effecting an unauthorised entry into the country or of a person against whom action is being taken with a view to deportation or extradition.
2. Everyone who is arrested shall be informed promptly, in a language which he understands, of the reasons for his arrest and of any charge against him.
 3. Everyone arrested or detained in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1(c) of this article shall be brought promptly before a judge or other officer authorised by law to exercise judicial power and shall be entitled to trial within a reasonable time or to release pending trial. Release may be conditioned by guarantees to appear for trial.
 4. Everyone who is deprived of his liberty by arrest or detention shall be entitled to take proceedings by which the lawfulness of his detention shall be decided speedily by a court and his release ordered if the detention is not lawful.
 5. Everyone who has been the victim of arrest or detention in contravention of the provisions of this article shall have an enforceable right to compensation.

For discussion: There would be a cross reference to later section of Part B which will need to outline the enforcement mechanisms for each Treaty referred to and capture general provisions of the Treaty referred to which are essential for understanding the nature and extent of the rights. For the ECHR the relevant general provisions would be Articles 15 (the power to derogate in future; 16, 17 (which would benefit from prominent treatment) and 18). They would not include Art 13 (right to an effective remedy).

Citizens' rights

- Short indication that citizens of the Union will enjoy the following rights (and will be subject to the duties imposed thereby), in so far as they have been conferred upon them by provisions of the Treaty establishing the European Community or of legislation brought forward under the Treaty, in accordance with those provisions. Followed by::

Example 2: Every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he is not a national shall have the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State. Without prejudice to Article 190(4) EC Treaty and to the provisions adopted for its implementation, every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he is not a national shall have the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State. These rights shall be exercised subject to detailed arrangements adopted by the Council, acting unanimously on a proposal from the Commission and after consulting the European Parliament; these arrangements may provide for derogations where warranted by problems specific to a Member State. (Article 19 (1) and (2), EC Treaty)

Economic and Social

Example 3: EU nationals have the right to pursue economic activities and to set up and manage undertakings in another Member State under the same conditions as those imposed on its own nationals (Article 43 EC Treaty). Within the framework of the EC Treaty, restrictions on the freedom of establishment of nationals of a Member State in the territory of another Member State shall be prohibited.

Constitutional traditions of Member States

- Short indication that these rights are common to the constitutional traditions of the Member States and, consistent with the principle of subsidiarity, enforced in accordance with national conditions. Followed by:

Example 4: The right of legal professional privilege enabling client-lawyer communications to be treated in confidence helps ensure confidence in the judicial systems of each Member State. [In the UK, this right and its limitations are recognised in section 10 of the Police and Criminal Act 1984 and other statutes.]

SECOND PLENARY MEETING OF THE CHARTER OF RIGHTS CONVENTION INTERVENTION BY LORD GOLDSMITH

I would like to set out a proposal as to how we should proceed.

It is contained in my written paper. Allow me to summarise and elaborate a little.

I suggest we be guided by 3 fundamental considerations.

The first is that our mandate is to make existing fundamental rights more visible.

That is very clear from the Cologne conclusions. See especially the passages set out in my written paper:

The body was created to produce a draft Charter of fundamental rights “in order to make their overriding importance and relevance more visible to the Union’s citizens”

In this way “the fundamental rights applicable at Union level” can be “consolidated in a Charter and thereby made more evident”

That is a very important and valuable task. It is essential to promote a culture of rights and responsibilities.

It will have powerful effect in reinforcing in the minds of administrators, lawyers, governments, legislators, judges, companies as well as citizens the rights citizens possess and which must be respected.

The problem is not at the moment that there are not such rights. The problem is the need to reinforce the culture of respect. Legislators, companies, individuals may stumble into infringement of fundamental rights because their existence is not recognized enough. We need the alarm bells to sound when a right of this kind is about to be infringed so that the transgressor steps back.

Such a document would also have a very powerful effect in showing our common unity of moral purpose as Europeans. And what Europe brings to the citizen.

To achieve this end the document we produce must be clear and simple for maximum public impact.

It should be capable of being read and understood by everyone. It should be capable even of being pinned to the wall in every government office and company headquarter to remind everyone of the rights which must be respected.

The second consideration is that there are major problems in trying to rewrite existing rights.

Some of these are referred to in the Horizontal Issues paper. Let me simply identify a few.

- We risk a different interpretation of fundamental rights because they are expressed in different terms or interpreted in different terms. This would damage legal certainty. It would damage respect for human rights not reinforce them. We should not attempt to rewrite existing rights.
- We will have great difficulty agreeing a common list of rights to be enforced as a separate document. Member States recognize rights differently. It would be difficult for a Member State, having recognized one of these rights at the national level, perhaps in its constitution, to see it omitted in the EU Charter. And vice versa.
- The ways rights are recognized are also subject to differences. Differences of content – there are derogations or different content of the same basic right. Differences of enforcement which can have a major impact eg on the financial consequences of a particular right. In one State it may not appear to entail significant cost but it does in another.
- There are serious issues of conflict between different courts.

The implications are two. We will not achieve a text of the precision which we can all accept in the time allowed.

Perhaps even more important it will not be a document which would have the impact I have referred to. A detailed legal document of closely defined rights will not be accessible and transparent to all. We will severely limit the vision and the social utility of the Charter.

The third consideration is that we cannot decide if this should have legal status. That is not a decision for us.

Therefore we must work to respect and complement the existing human rights regime and preserve its legal certainty.

MY PROPOSAL therefore is set out in the document: to produce a two part document. Part A identifies the existing rights in clear and simple language for maximum impact. They are anchored in Part B to the existing rights with their legal source and existing enforcement mechanism. Be that ECHR, or ECJ or national courts.

That would allow legal certainty. It would avoid the risk of contrary interpretations. It would enable us to allow for national differences where applicable; because Part B would make it clear that the basic right was subject, in some cases, to national conditions and national legislation.

I strongly suggest that this is a feasible and worthwhile approach. If we do not go down this route we will be missing an opportunity and letting down the citizens of Europe.

[signed]

Lord Goldsmith QC

Perhaps even more important it will not be a document which would have the impact I have referred to. A detailed legal document of closely defined rights will not be accessible and transparent to all. We will severely limit the vision and the social utility of the Charter.

The third consideration is that we cannot decide if this should have legal status. That is not a decision for us.

Therefore we must work to respect and complement the existing human rights regime and preserve its legal certainty.

MY PROPOSAL therefore is set out in the document: to produce a two part document. Part A identifies the existing rights in clear and simple language for maximum impact. They are anchored in Part B to the existing rights with their legal source and existing enforcement mechanism. Be that ECHR, or ECJ or national courts.

That would allow legal certainty. It would avoid the risk of contrary interpretations. It would enable us to allow for national differences where applicable; because Part B would make it clear that the basic right was subject, in some cases, to national conditions and national legislation.

I strongly suggest that this is a feasible and worthwhile approach. If we do not go down this route we will be missing an opportunity and letting down the citizens of Europe.

[signed]

Lord Goldsmith QC

Editors' note to CHARTE 4123/1/00 REV 1,
Praesidium Note: Draft articles:

The INIT version was cancelled and replaced by REV 1.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 15 February 2000 (16.02)
(OR. f)*CHARTE 4123/1/00
REV 1*CONVENT 5*NOTE FROM THE PRAESIDIUM

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Draft articles

In accordance with the method of work agreed by the Convention, this document proposes draft wording for certain rights. The rights described in Part I of the document are those which featured at the head of the list submitted to the Convention at its last meeting. It should be considered whether these rights should feature in the Charter. If so, the Convention will examine the proposed wording. Each right is the subject of a commentary, which indicates sources and highlights certain editorial questions. The articles set out in Part II of the document relate to horizontal aspects. They give examples of solutions to some of the horizontal problems which might be raised by an examination of Part I.

I. Articles submitted for the Convention to consider

Article 1. Dignity of the human person

- 1. Human dignity shall be inviolable.
- 2. No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.
- 3. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.

Commentary

Paragraph 1 is inspired by the principles common to the constitutional traditions of Member States and by Article 1 of the 1989 Declaration of the European Parliament.

Paragraph 2 is taken from Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Paragraph 3 is the same as Article 4(2) of the European Convention on Human Rights. It did not seem useful to repeat the definition of forced labour which is contained in paragraph 3 of the Article, as that definition is in any case brought in by Article 6 of the TEU and would lead to over-lengthy wording. That was also the solution used by the European Parliament in 1989. Is it still necessary today to include the prohibition on slavery and servitude ("No one shall be held in slavery or servitude") in an explicit fashion as in the European Convention, since this is in any case covered by paragraph 1? Must the ban on forced and compulsory labour be retained here?

Article 2. Right to life

- 1. Everyone shall have the right to life.
- 2. Everyone shall have the right to the respect of his physical, psychological and genetic integrity.
- 3. The death penalty shall be abolished.

Alternative wording for paragraph 2:

2. Everyone shall have the right to the respect of his physical, psychological and genetic integrity. In the field of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected:
- An intervention in the health field may only be carried out after the person concerned has given free and informed consent to it.
 - Any form of discrimination against a person on grounds of his or her genetic heritage is prohibited.
 - Predictive genetic tests may only be carried out for medical purposes or for medical research, subject to appropriate genetic counselling. An intervention to modify the human genome may only be undertaken for preventive, diagnostic or therapeutic purposes and only if its aim is not to introduce modifications in the genome of any descendants.
 - Medical research must respect the dignity of the human person and the principle of free and informed consent.
 - The human body and its parts shall not, as such, give rise to financial gain.
 - The removal of organs from a living donor for transplantation purposes may be carried out solely with the free and informed consent of the donor and for therapeutic benefit where there is no other alternative therapeutic method.
 - The cloning of human beings is forbidden.

Commentary

Paragraph 1 reproduces Article 2 of the European Convention on Human Rights using other wording, namely that of Article 2 of the 1989 Declaration of the European Parliament.

Paragraph 2 deals with bioethical questions. It would be possible to mention other points, in particular consent to medical treatment, a prohibition on cloning etc. – but would not a general text which could always be adapted to technical progress, be better? Alternative 2 illustrates what a list of rights in this area might be. This list is inspired by the Council of Europe Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. This Convention is not in force and will be supplemented by protocols as technical progress is made. The disadvantage is that this considerably lengthens the text and that the list will never be complete because of technical developments in the bioethics field.

The wording of paragraph 3 poses a delicate question. On the one hand, all Member States have ratified Protocol No 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights, and as Declaration No 1 adopted by the conference and attached to the Final Act of the Amsterdam Treaty indicates, they do not apply the death penalty. However, currently, the legal systems of the Union cannot of course condemn anyone to the death penalty. The abolition of the death penalty therefore seems rather to be an objective of the Union to be realised through CFSP, but may also have a role to play with regard to cooperation in criminal matters (Title VI of the TEU). The 1998 Declaration of the Council on the death penalty indicates that the Union is working towards the universal abolition of the death penalty. The wording set out in the text is that of Protocol No 6. If one wished to avoid giving the impression that the Union is abolishing a penalty which has already been abolished by all the Member States, one could also simply take over the second sentence of Protocol No 6: "No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed."

Article 3. Liberty and security

- 1. Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person.
- 2. No one shall be arrested or detained save in the cases prescribed by law.
- 3. Everyone arrested or detained on reasonable suspicion of having committed an offence shall be brought before a judge and shall be entitled to trial within a reasonable time or be released pending trial.
- 4. Everyone who is deprived of his liberty by arrest or detention shall be entitled to take proceedings by which the lawfulness of his detention shall be decided speedily by a court and his release ordered if the detention is not lawful.
- 5. Everyone who has been the victim of arrest or detention in contravention of the above provisions shall have an enforceable right to compensation.

Commentary

This text is drawn from Article 5 of the European Convention on Human Rights. Paragraph 1 states the principle. As the Union does not have penal jurisdiction, it cannot be directly responsible for the respect of these rights in the practical implementation of penal activity. On the other hand, in the context of the work accomplished on the basis of Title VI of the TEU, it has the obligation to ensure that measures taken in this context, particularly with regard to the harmonisation of penal legislation, do not infringe those rights. Article 2 of the 1989 Declaration of the European Parliament restricted itself to mentioning the principle of liberty and security, but at that time the TEU did not exist and it was not deemed necessary to develop the principle. This solution is no longer possible today, given the development of the Union's powers.

The question should be carefully examined in conjunction with the Article 1 or preamble proposed as part of the horizontal provisions. It must be clear that the obligation of compliance with fundamental rights devolves upon the Union when it adopts measures within the framework of Title VI, i.e. within the framework of its own tasks, and not upon the Member States within the framework of their national penal systems, which are outside the scope of Community law. The same remark applies also in the cases of Articles 5 and 6.

Article 4. Right to an effective remedy

Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated shall have the right to bring an action before a court or tribunal specified by law.

Commentary

This article follows Article 13 of the European Convention on Human Rights and Article 19 of the 1989 Declaration of the European Parliament. The Court of Justice enshrined the principle in Community law in its judgment of 15 May 1986 (Case 222/84, Johnston, ECR 1651), National Constitutions.

Article 5. Right to a fair trial

1. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.
2. Access to justice shall be effective. Legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources [insofar as such aid is indispensable to ensure the effectiveness of access to justice].
3. Everyone charged with an offence has the following minimum rights:
 - (a) to be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law;
 - (b) to be informed promptly, in a language which he understands and in detail, of the accusation against him, and to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence;
 - (c) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or to be given it free, and to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot speak the language of the proceedings;
 - (d) to have access to the dossier; to examine or have examined under the same conditions witnesses on his behalf and witnesses against him.

Commentary

Paragraphs 1 and 2 concern justice in general and are therefore applicable to the Union's own judicial system. Paragraph 3 concerns criminal procedure and the same form of presentation has been used as in the preceding Article. These rights are taken from Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights and Article 19 of the 1989 Declaration of the European Parliament. It should be noted that, in accordance with the case law of the European Court of Human Rights, no State is under any absolute obligation to introduce a system of legal aid for all civil cases. States must only provide legal aid where the lack of such aid would invalidate the guarantee of an effective remedy (ECHR judgment of 9.10.1979, Airey, Series A, Volume 32, 11). Nor are there any principles common to the Member States in this field.

Article 6. No punishment without law

No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence in law at the time when it was committed. No heavier penalty than the one applicable at the time of committing the offence shall be imposed. If, subsequent to the commission of the offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.

Commentary

This article adopts the classic principle of non-retroactivity of laws and penalties in criminal matters. The principle of retroactive application of the lighter penalty, existing in many Member States and to be found in Article 15 of the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, has been added. See Article 7 of the European Convention on Human Rights and Article 21 of the 1989 European Parliament Declaration.

Article 7. Non bis in idem

No one shall be tried or convicted for offences for which they have already been finally acquitted or convicted.

Commentary

See Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the European Convention on Human Rights and Article 20 of the 1989 Declaration of the European Parliament.

Article 8. Respect for private and family life

- 1. Everyone shall have the right to respect and protection for their identity.
- 2. Respect for privacy and family life, reputation, the home and the confidentiality of correspondence, irrespective of the medium, shall be guaranteed.

Commentary

This article follows Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights. The reason for the use of the expression "irrespective of the medium" in paragraph 2 is to make clear the fact that this paragraph applies equally to the Internet. A specific Article will cover data protection, which therefore is not referred to here. See also Article 6 of the 1989 Declaration of the European Parliament.

Article 9. Family life

- 1. Everyone shall have the right to found a family.
- 2. The Union shall ensure the legal, economic and social protection of the family.
- 3. The Union shall ensure the protection of children.

Commentary

The inspiration for this article is Article 12 of the European Convention on Human Rights and Article 7 of the 1989 Declaration of the European Parliament. In paragraph 1, there should perhaps be a restrictive clause, as not everyone can found a family under all circumstances (cf. restrictions as a result of minimum age requirements or prohibition of certain marriages within families), but in this case it is difficult to imagine a solution other than reference to national law as in Article 12. Would not the best solution be to allow the operation of the general limitation clause (cf. Article Y below)? Concerning children, the phrase "in accordance with the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child of 20 November 1989" could be added to paragraph 3. But need reference be made to an instrument external to the Union which may develop independently? The question is not the same for the European Convention on Human Rights, which is specifically mentioned in the Treaty.

II. HORIZONTAL ARTICLES

These articles are not submitted for discussion. They are intended merely to provide an illustration of a possible way of solving certain horizontal problems which are closely linked to matters to be examined when drafting provisions on specific rights.

Preamble or Article 1

The following provisions are applicable to the Institutions and bodies of the European Union within the framework of the powers and tasks assigned to them by the Treaties. They are binding on the Member States only where the latter transpose or apply the law of the Union. The Charter does not introduce new tasks or powers, nor does it extend existing tasks or powers.

Commentary

This general article should either be placed in the preamble or become the first article of the Charter. It is intended to indicate clearly that the Charter's scope is restricted to the European Union and to avoid any application to the Member States when they are acting within their own jurisdiction. It adopts the case law of the Court of Justice as set out in the Cinéthèque case (judgment of 11 July 1985, Joined Cases 60 and 61/84, ECR p. 2618, paragraph 26) and more recently in the Kremzow Case (judgment of 29 May 1997, Case C-299/95, ECR p. I-2629). It also indicates that, while the Union must guarantee respect for fundamental rights within the framework of its own areas of jurisdiction, the Charter cannot have the effect of extending the powers of the Union, which is the express result of the Court's Opinion of 28 March 1996 on the accession of the Community to the European Convention on Human Rights (point 27 in particular). According to the Court's reasoning, although the Community has the obligation to respect fundamental rights, it does not follow that it thereby acquires competence to act in this field, except where this is expressly provided for in the Treaties. In other words, the obligation to respect fundamental rights is a constraint on the Community's action and not a licence to legislate in this field.

Article X

- 1. Certain rights shall be reserved for citizens of the European Union. *[It may be decided to extend the enjoyment of such rights wholly or partly to other persons.]

Commentary

This paragraph enshrines the fact that certain rights may be reserved for citizens of the Union. These rights will be identified on a case-by-case basis (using the formula of "all persons" or "the citizens of the Union" to identify those entitled). Concerning the possibility of an extension, the guarantee of this depends less on a reference in the Charter than on the existence of a legal basis in the Treaty. Extension may be effected by unilateral acts of the Union or by international conventions. It needs to be considered whether the possibility of an extension should be mentioned.

Article Y. Limitations

Without prejudice to provisions affording more protection than this Charter, no limitation on respect for the rights and freedoms which it recognises shall be admitted except under a rule of law which is not an implementing rule, does not infringe the essential content of the rights in question and, subject to the principle of proportionality, remains within the limits necessary for the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society.

Commentary

A model for a possible general limitation clause, suggested as an example if the question of limitations is taken up in relation to a specific right. It does not exclude the existence of specific clauses for particular rights. There is a problem with regard to the nature of the act limiting fundamental rights. The term "rule of law" may be considered too broad, as it includes implementing measures, but "a law" is not appropriate since it has no meaning in Community law at present, unless understood as in the European Convention on Human Rights in the sense of a general and abstract rule without implying the source of the rule. The present formula eliminates the possibility of limiting rights by means of implementing measures. It leaves this option to the legislator alone, acting on the appropriate legal basis.

Article Z. Level of protection

No provision of the this Charter may be interpreted as placing restrictions on the protection afforded, in conformity with Article 6 of the Treaty on European Union, by the European Convention on Human Rights.

Commentary

The purpose of this article, a suggested wording for which is given by way of example, is to ensure that, in conformity with Article 6 of the Treaty on European Union, the level of protection of human rights in the Union cannot be inferior to that afforded by the European Convention on Human Rights, regardless of the wording of the Charter. This article makes it possible to depart from the wording of the Convention without altering the standard of protection afforded to the individual.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 9 février 2000CHARTE 4125/00*CONTRIB 20*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-joint le discours prononcé par Mme Anne-Marie SIGMUND (présidente du Groupe III, rapporteur du Comité économique et social) lors de la réunion du 2 février 2000. ¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langues française et allemande.

31 janvier 2000

Monsieur le Président,
Mesdames, Messieurs,

Nous sommes très reconnaissants à l'Enceinte chargée d'élaborer une Charte européenne des droits fondamentaux de nous avoir donné la possibilité de vous présenter aujourd'hui les principales réflexions du Comité économique et social sur un catalogue européen des droits fondamentaux.

Le Comité économique et social a abordé pour la première fois la question de l'élaboration d'une Charte européenne des droits fondamentaux dans le cadre des travaux d'un groupe d'étude sous la présidence allemande du Conseil, lorsqu'une première réflexion a été entamée sur différentes approches possibles. Dans ce contexte, il était déjà largement acquis que cette entreprise revêt un caractère éminemment politique. Il ne s'agit pas seulement de codifier les droits existants aux différents niveaux politiques et de les élever pour ainsi dire au rang constitutionnel du droit des sociétés. Il s'agit aussi de présenter aux citoyens européens un instrument juridique clair et accessible énumérant leurs droits directs, leurs droits fondamentaux et leurs devoirs dans le cadre de l'Union.

Dans le cadre d'une réunion extraordinaire de son Bureau, le Comité s'est ensuite penché sur le contexte politique dans lequel s'inscrit l'élaboration de cette Charte des droits fondamentaux. Il lui a fallu constater que l'Union doit se rendre à l'évidence qu'un fossé s'est creusé, sur le plan émotionnel, entre elle et ses citoyens. "Manque de contacts entre l'Europe et ses citoyens", "déficit démocratique", tels sont les reproches que l'on entend régulièrement formuler à l'encontre de l'Europe. Force nous est de constater que nos concitoyens des différents Etats membres n'ont pas le sentiment de faire partie d'une "Europe des citoyens", pas plus qu'ils ne s'identifient avec une telle Europe. Cela tient sûrement également au fait que la mutation de l'Europe, au départ Communauté économique, en une vaste union politique suite à l'Acte unique et en passant par Maastricht et Amsterdam, n'a pas toujours été très bien comprise par les citoyens européens. Or, le développement d'une telle "identité européenne" serait, dans la perspective de l'élargissement, un outil très important pour donner aux pays candidats une "échelle des valeurs" commune à tous les Etats membres et déterminante pour l'Europe. Pour être efficaces, ces valeurs communes, servant de base à des actions communes, ont toutefois besoin d'un ancrage institutionnel. C'est pourquoi le Comité économique et social préconise l'élaboration d'une Charte des droits fondamentaux, contraignante et faisant partie intégrante des Traités européens.

Un souci fondamental du Comité est de garantir que les citoyens européens, lorsqu'il s'agit de questions qui les concernent aussi directement qu'un catalogue de droits fondamentaux, soient associés de façon optimale au processus décisionnel. Le Comité économique et social, en tant que porte-parole de la société civile organisée d'Europe, qui défend les intérêts des citoyens européens par le biais des organisations qui la représentent, s'engage à faire en sorte que le processus d'élaboration de la Charte des droits fondamentaux repose sur la plus large base possible et offre le plus de possibilités de participation.

C'est aussi pourquoi le Comité n'a pas encore émis d'avis définitif, dans la mesure où il entend également donner la parole, dans le cadre d'auditions qu'il organisera dans les semaines à venir, à celles des organisations de la société civile qui ne sont pas représentées au Comité. Le Comité considère comme essentielle, pour l'élaboration de la Charte, une telle participation de la société civile organisée européenne, inscrite dans la continuité et soutenue par la base.

Permettez-moi dès lors, monsieur le Président, de vous demander instamment d'autoriser le Comité à participer en tant qu'observateur aux réunions de vos groupes de travail et de lui donner la possibilité de vous tenir au courant de l'état d'avancement de ses travaux.

Au cours des auditions précitées, il conviendra de se pencher sur les considérations suivantes :

1. La citoyenneté de l'Union doit se matérialiser pour le citoyen; elle doit être le moteur d'une "identité européenne". Sous quelle forme le lien entre le catalogue des droits fondamentaux et la citoyenneté européenne sera-t-il le mieux représenté ?
2. Le citoyen doit accepter son rôle de détenteur de droits et d'obligations. A cette fin, il convient d'établir un catalogue clair et explicite de ces droits et obligations, que les citoyens reconnaîtront en tant que définition de leurs propres valeurs.
3. D'un point de vue juridique également, le développement de la protection des droits fondamentaux depuis Amsterdam a atteint un point tel qu'il est nécessaire de dresser une liste claire des droits fondamentaux européens en vigueur.
4. Les droits civiques et politiques, mais aussi sociaux et économiques constituent un tout indivisible. Ils ne se cumulent pas, mais sont interdépendants.
Les droits fondamentaux peuvent également être différenciés selon d'autres critères, notamment:
 - droits de l'homme - droits fondamentaux européens - droits civiques européens
 - droits ayant force exécutoire concrète - droits programmatiques
 - droits individuels - droits collectifsQuelle approche adopter ?
5. La charte des droits fondamentaux doit en particulier reposer sur la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, la Charte sociale européenne et les principes juridiques généraux institutionnalisés par la jurisprudence, et intégrer les droits fondamentaux déjà formulés ou ébauchés dans le traité d'Amsterdam. En outre, elle devrait faire référence à la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme et aux conventions de l'ONU relatives aux droits de l'enfant, à l'élimination de toutes les formes de discrimination à l'égard des femmes et au statut des réfugiés.

6. Les droits fondamentaux doivent avoir force exécutoire vis-à-vis des instances européennes. Les droits programmatiques doivent être définis de manière à permettre une action en justice.
7. La charte des droits fondamentaux doit s'inscrire dans le champ d'application du droit communautaire et tenir compte des compétences des Etats membres ainsi que de leur acquis juridique.
8. Le problème de la compétence judiciaire pour les questions relatives aux droits de l'homme doit être examiné.
9. Tout comme la société, les droits fondamentaux sont en constante mutation.
10. Juridiquement et politiquement, un catalogue de droits fondamentaux n'a de sens que s'il est intégré dans le traité et est contraignant.

Immédiatement après ces auditions, le Comité participera à une discussion sur la formulation des différents droits fondamentaux et élaborera ensuite un projet d'avis en la matière.

Le Comité espère vivement avoir la possibilité de vous présenter ce projet d'avis, qui aura déjà fait l'objet d'un débat avec ses membres et des associations invitées.

Merci beaucoup.

Anne-Marie SIGMUND
Présidente du Groupe des Activités diverses

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 17 February 2000CHARTE 4131/00*CONTRIB 26*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter the speech given by Mr. Jacob Söderman, European Ombudsman, at the meeting of 1/2 February 2000. ¹

¹ The text has been submitted in English, French and German language.

Public Hearing on the draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

2 February 2000, 09.00.

European Parliament
Rue Wiertz
B - 1047 Brussels

Preliminary remarks by the European Ombudsman, Jacob Söderman

Mr President!

Members of the Convention!

I would first like to thank you for inviting me to speak at the very beginning of your work of drafting a Charter of Fundamental Rights for the European Union.

The office of European Ombudsman was established by the Treaty of Maastricht with the aim of furthering the citizenship of the Union and enhancing the relations between the Union and its citizens. The Ombudsman's specific task is to make inquiries about possible instances of maladministration in the activities of Community institutions and bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role. It is important to underline that the mandate of the European Ombudsman concerns only the Community institutions and bodies. Community law and policies are implemented mostly by national, regional or municipal administrations of the Member States, but the European Ombudsman cannot supervise their activities.

The definition of maladministration which was proposed by the Ombudsman and accepted is that:

“Maladministration occurs when a public body fails to act in accordance with a rule or principle which is binding upon it.”

This, of course, includes failure to respect human rights.

1 What is the problem?

On the basis of my experiences as European Ombudsman since September 1995, I will try to look at the idea of the Charter from the perspective of the citizen.

The Charter project began in response to a specific problem: the failure of the proposal that the European Community should accede to the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms. The Commission had proposed that the Community should sign the Convention. The Council asked for an Opinion of the Court of Justice on the proposal. In March 1996, the Court decided that the Community had no competence to accede to the Convention on the basis of the existing EC Treaty.¹ In 1997, the Treaty of Amsterdam committed the Union to respect fundamental rights, as guaranteed by the European Convention and as they result from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, as general principles of Community law.² However, the Member States did not take the opportunity of the Amsterdam Treaty to provide the Community with competence to accede to the Convention, or to any other international human rights convention.

There are two reasons for citizens to be dissatisfied with the present situation. First, The Treaty refers to fundamental rights, but does not say what they are. To discover what fundamental rights the institutions and bodies of the European Union should respect, the citizen must become an expert in comparative constitutional law as well as in Community law.

The second problem is the gap in protection of rights at the level of the Union. The Member States have all signed the European Convention and there are many other international instruments for the protection of human rights which bind all, or a majority, of the Member States. From the citizen's perspective it is not obvious why these provisions should apply to the activities of national authorities in their fields of competence, but not to the activities of the Union's institutions and bodies within the Union's fields of competence.

2 A pragmatic proposal

I have already proposed, on previous occasions,³ a pragmatic way forward from the present situation.

The proposal is to insert a provision in the EC Treaty to require that the Union's institutions and bodies respect the existing international human rights instruments that all, or a majority, of its Member States have ratified. This would include not only the ECHR, but also other Council of Europe Conventions such as the European Social Charter, the European Convention for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and the Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities. It would also include United Nations instruments such as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and the ¹ Opinion 2/94 [1996] ECR I-1759. The Court held that Article 308 (ex Article 235) of the EC Treaty (ECT), which gives the Council the power to take appropriate measures if action of the Community is necessary to attain one of the objectives of the Community, was not a sufficient legal basis, given the "fundamental institutional implications" for the Community and the Member States of accession to the European Convention.

² Article 6 of the Treaty on European Union.

³ In speeches at the conference "A European Union Human Rights Agenda for the year 2000" Vienna, 9 October 1998 and to the European Forum, "Eine Europäische Charta der Grundrechte - Beitrag zur gemeinsamen Identität", Köln, 27 April 1999.

International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as well as a number of ILO conventions. A complete list of the relevant instruments could be annexed to the Treaty.

In my view, the main advantage of this proposal is that it could be accepted and implemented quite rapidly. On the other hand, it must be acknowledged that the result would not be perfect, since the citizen would still be obliged to read a number of different texts in order to know his or her fundamental rights. Furthermore, the lack of international supervision would remain.

I therefore very much welcome the initiative to create a Charter of Fundamental Rights. In my view, the starting point for drafting the Charter should be respect for the existing international human rights instruments which are already binding on all, or a majority, of the Union's Member States, as well as their constitutional principles.

In order to be understood by the citizens and to make it possible to apply, the new Charter should be drafted to include clear provisions, binding on the Union's institutions and bodies, both internally and in their relations with third countries and international organisations. If this could be achieved, it would already be an important step forward for the citizen.

If there is sufficient political will within the Union, this could of course become the foundation for a more ambitious approach in the future.

The most encouraging part of your work in drafting the new Charter is the possibility to take into account modern developments in human rights standards and in the relationship between the citizen and the public administration.

3 A fundamental right to an open, accountable and service-minded administration

Foremost amongst these developments is the idea that the citizen has a right that his or her affairs be dealt with properly, fairly and promptly by an open, accountable and service-minded public administration.

Experience shows that an open administration, which is practised in many Member States, allows the citizen to obtain the information needed to call the administration to account for its actions and omissions, and so promotes a high level of public debate and enhances the possibilities of rational consent and participation. Furthermore openness seems to work against corruption, while a closed and confidential handling of public affairs provides opportunities for fraud and other illegal activities.

Alongside openness and accountability, should be placed service-mindedness. Service-mindedness implies that the administration exists to serve citizens, not vice versa. In national systems of administration, this principle is expressed in different ways such as citizen-friendliness and the concept of public service.

In the Charter itself, the citizen's right to good administration should be stated at the level of principle. To put the principle into practice, it would be necessary to enact a Regulation on good administrative behaviour and another on access to information and to documents.

To include this right in the Charter could have a broad impact on all existing and future Member States, helping to make the 21st century the "century of good administration".

4 Rights are worth nothing without effective remedies

Mr Chairman!

In the final section of my remarks I would like to emphasise that rights are worth nothing without effective remedies. I stress this point because I have been disturbed by what has happened to the promises which were made to citizens of the Union in the Treaty of Amsterdam. According to the Amsterdam Treaty, the Union is founded on the principles of liberty, democracy, respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, and the rule of law. Furthermore, decisions should be taken "as openly as possible".⁴

Despite these fine words, some Community legislation continues to be decided behind closed doors by the Council of Ministers. I have heard it argued that these meetings should not be open to the public because, on the one hand, the debates lack interest and, on the other hand, because the real negotiations would move to corridors and private meetings. If these arguments were valid, they would equally apply at national level and the national Parliaments should also legislate in closed session. In my view, the arguments are not valid. Citizens in a democracy should be entitled to listen to the debates which accompany the enactment of laws.

The Treaty also promised citizens a constitutional right of access to documents of the European Parliament, Council and Commission. According to Article 255 EC, "general principles and limits on grounds of public or private interest governing this right of access to documents" shall be determined before 1 May 2001. Last week, the Commission published its proposal for a Regulation. I am sorry to say that this document seems to consist mainly of a long and obscure list of possible reasons to deny access to documents. This cannot be what was intended when the Treaty of Amsterdam was drafted.

However, it must be remembered that the activity of the Court of Justice and Court of First Instance has consistently promoted respect for Community law including fundamental rights. Insofar as citizens enjoy, at present, any rights of access to documents, this is in large part due to the Courts.⁵

⁴ "Treaty on European Union, Articles 1 and 6.

⁵ I developed this point in my speech on the 10th Anniversary of the Court of First Instance, 19 October 1999.

I do hope that the Charter will be drafted and adopted in a form which enables the citizen to apply to the Community Courts if his or her fundamental rights are infringed by the activities of a Union institution or body. Within his mandate, the European Ombudsman is also ready to supervise respect for fundamental rights, for the benefit of the citizens, as an extra-judicial remedy.

As the experience of the Member States shows, the protection of fundamental rights can be further enhanced and strengthened by the possibility of international supervision. The most developed and effective system of supervision is that of the European Convention on Human Rights. All the Union's Member States have accepted international supervision through the Convention system, which they played an active part in creating and developing over a long period. It therefore seems right that the institutions and bodies of the Union should also accept this supervision, through accession to the Convention.

Mr President!

Members of the Convention!

I wish you every success in your important task of drafting the Charter of Fundamental Rights for the European Union.

Thank you for your attention.

Editors' note to CHARTE 4135/00,
Observations sur CHARTE 4123/1/00 REV 1 de M. Guy Braibant (Représentant personnel du Gouvernement de la France):

See also CHARTE 4221/00.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 21 February 2000 (22.02)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4135/00*CONVENT 7*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft EU Charter of Fundamental Rights

Please find attached the comments made by Mr Guy BRAIBANT, the personal representative of France, on the draft set out in CHARTE 4123/1/00 REV 1.

COMMENTS ON THE DRAFT RIGHTS SET OUT IN
CHARTE 4123/00

I. It would be desirable to include among the fundamental individual rights listed at the beginning of the Charter:

- equality in rights or the principle of equality, as embodied in Member States' constitutional traditions and in a number of international instruments; that principle is not to be confused with non-discrimination; it would thus be possible to follow the beginning of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR): "human beings are free and equal in dignity and rights";
- the right to recognition as a person before the law, in accordance with Article 6 of the UDHR and Article 16 of the United Nations Covenant on Civil and Political Rights;
- the right of everyone to a nationality (Article 15 of the UDHR).

II. Articles

Article 1

- (a) Dignity is an excellent place to start. The wording used follows the 1989 European Parliament Declaration. In my view, however, it would be preferable to refer to the dignity of the human person and respect for that dignity. I would propose one of the following wordings:

- "the dignity of the human person shall not be infringed";
 - "the dignity of the human person shall be respected under all circumstances";
 - "the right to dignity is inherent in the human person".
- (b) In my view, the right to dignity, which lies behind many articles in the draft, ought to appear on its own in Article 1; otherwise it might appear to amount merely to the right to freedom from torture and forced labour, currently referred to in the same article.
- (c) If it is wished to retain the ban on forced labour, heed should be paid to the negative definition of the term given in the ECHR, which is of considerable practical significance. I can understand its omission here so as not to clutter up the text. However, it should at least be stated in an accompanying report or explanatory memorandum that the Charter's drafters did not mean to dispense with that definition and do refer to it by implication.
- (d) I believe there is a need to add a provision on slavery and servitude, which unfortunately remain of relevance today, even in Europe.

Article 2

- (a) Paragraph 2: It would be better to delete the word "genetic", which does not add anything and is liable to cause confusion.

My preference is for the shorter version. If it is nevertheless wished to add some details regarding bioethics, which would probably be helpful in order to make the Charter more modern, I would propose keeping to three basic principles:

- a ban on "eugenic practices" (Article 16 of the French Civil Code, as a result of a 1994 law);

- a ban on the cloning of human beings;
- an assertion that the human body and its parts may not give rise to financial gain (with the removal, if possible, of the restrictive wording "as such").

The indent on discrimination could be transferred to the general article on non-discrimination.

- (b) Paragraph 3: The death penalty cannot of course "be abolished", since it already has been. I would propose simply taking the alternative wording: "no one shall be condemned to death or executed".

It should be noted that the ECHR Protocol on the matter includes an article on exceptions in time of war. I am not proposing that it be included here, particularly since it makes reference to the Secretary-General of the Council of Europe. However, it should be mentioned in the accompanying report so as not to give the impression that it is no longer applicable.

Article 3

- (a) The wording in paragraph 2, "no one shall be arrested or detained", is narrower than that used in Article 5 of the ECHR, "no one shall be deprived of his liberty"; the latter wording, which also covers arrangements such as residence and reporting orders, is to be preferred.
- (b) Paragraphs 3 to 6 are criminal law provisions, and could well be placed closer to or combined with Article 5(3). This would also give greater prominence to Article 4, which is general in nature and could be placed closer to Article 5(2). In order to avoid repeating the word "effective", the latter provision could be worded as follows: "access to justice shall be facilitated by providing legal aid to ...".

Articles 6 and 7

- (a) I think Latin expressions should be avoided in a document designed to make rights clearer.
- (b) In Article 6 the wording "criminal offence in law" is more restrictive than that in Article 7 of the ECHR "criminal offence under national or international law"; this restrictive wording is at odds with the development of international criminal courts and indictments on the basis of international law.

Article 8

It seems to me that nowadays the concepts of private life and family life are separate. I suggest deleting "family life" from Article 8 and keeping it for Article 9, thus avoiding pointless duplication.

Article 9

1. I think that, as stated in the commentary, reference should be made to local law, as in Article 12 of the ECHR.
2. and 3. These are hardly legislative provisions and what is more they have the disadvantage of appearing to create new powers for the Union. I propose replacing paragraph 2 by a wording that mirrors that of Article 8(2) ("Respect for family life shall be guaranteed") and, as regards children, incorporating one or two essential articles of the United Nations Convention, notably Article 3(1) which refers to the concept of "the best interests of the child" and an article on the protection of child development.

III. Horizontal articles

Although they are not for discussion, I think it preferable to state my views on these provisions now.

1. Preamble or Article 1

This provision is useful but anticipates the inclusion of rights in the Treaty, which is not within the Convention's remit. It would be more at home in an introductory report on the Charter.

2. Article X

This provision is inappropriate and will undoubtedly prompt criticism of the Charter, as being solely for the "rich and privileged" who have the good fortune to be citizens of the European Union. And basically it is inexact, since many rights are universal or are extended to foreigners who are legally resident. The scope of the Charter needs to be specified in the Articles or Chapters.

3. Article Y

I understand the intention of the authors of this text. However, it needs to be more clearly worded, avoiding in particular the concepts of "rules of law" and "implementing rule"; furthermore, a general restriction replacing the particular restrictions of the Convention might give the impression that the Charter provides less protection than the Convention.

4. Article Z

If this Article is considered essential, it would be better to delete the reference to Article 6 TEU, which adds nothing.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 21 February 2000 (23.02)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4136/00*CONTRIB 29*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Attached hereto is a contribution by Mr Fischbach and Mr Krüger, Council of Europe observers.¹

¹ Text supplied in and English.

21.2.2000

CONTRIBUTION BY MR FISCHBACH AND MR KRÜGER,
COUNCIL OF EUROPE OBSERVERS

On 2 February 2000, at the end of the last meeting of the Convention, the delegation of observers from the Council of Europe announced that it would be submitting contributions to the Convention's proceedings in two spheres in particular, namely the identification of rights which might be included in the Charter and the issue of the European Communities' and/or the European Union's accession to the European Convention on Human Rights. An initial contribution on the latter issue is set out below.

Factors vital to the Charter's success

(a) Content of the Charter

Whether the Charter proves a success will depend on a number of factors. The first of these is its content. It would be reasonable for the Charter to include social and economic rights as well as civil and political rights. Human rights are indivisible and cannot be separated into watertight divisions. In any event, the European Union may grant different or additional rights to persons within its jurisdiction. Indeed, Article 53 of the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) clearly envisages that Contracting States may, under their own law or under other treaties, increase the level of protection afforded by the ECHR. Progress in this sphere by member States of the Union would provide an impulse for improving the protection of human rights in general in Europe.

(b) Ensuring consistency and legal certainty

If, as is proposed by President Herzog, the Charter is to be legally binding, another vital factor for the Charter's success will be the degree to which it is able to fit in with the other international instruments for the protection of fundamental rights, in particular the ECHR. As a number of participants at the meeting on 1 and 2 February 2000 pointed out, a situation where applicants are faced with a plethora of systems should be avoided because of the attendant risk of inconsistent or even incompatible outcomes; that would undermine legal certainty, an element that is essential to the smooth functioning of any society. Fundamental rights are too important to be implemented inconsistently. Far from reinforcing fundamental rights, any inconsistency will weaken them.

In order to ensure the requisite consonance between the ECHR and the Charter, it will be necessary first of all to ensure that a given right cannot be understood or construed differently, according to whether the instrument being applied is the ECHR or the Charter. That would create different standards and thus run counter to one of the cardinal features of fundamental rights: their universality.

(i) Reference to the ECHR and the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights

One way of achieving that purpose at the outset would be to adhere as closely as possible to the text of the ECHR where the Charter protects the same rights.

The next issue that will arise is the interpretation of those instruments. In that connection, it would be advisable for the Charter to contain a reference not only to the ECHR but also to the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights in order to avoid the emergence of diverging case-law on identical provisions. It will be noted that Articles 19 and 32 of the ECHR vest the power to interpret the ECHR in the European Court of Human Rights.

Such a reference would, however, be insufficient as two gaps would remain.

Firstly, the European Court of Human Rights would not be able to review whether the application of the provisions borrowed from the ECHR by the Charter complied with the ECHR.

Secondly, it would not resolve the problem arising from the fact that the institutions of the European Communities and the European Union are not bound by the ECHR – unlike the member States which, in lieu of the Community institutions, are answerable to the European Court of Human Rights for the effects of Community law in their domestic legal orders.

That was the problem which recently arose in the case of Matthews, in which on 18 February 1999 the United Kingdom was held responsible by the European Court of Human Rights for the effects in its domestic legal order of a primary Community law, in that case one which deprived the inhabitants of Gibraltar of the right to take part in elections to the European Parliament.

Similarly, on 15 November 1996 the Court held in the Cantoni case that the fact that a domestic provision was based almost word for word on a Community Directive did not prevent the provision from being reviewable under the ECHR.

In the future, the European Court of Human Rights may have to consider the responsibility of a State that is required to apply a Community Regulation.

(ii) Accession to the European Convention on Human Rights

In the light of these case-law developments, the only effective and clear solution to these problems would be to provide for the European Communities – and the European Union when allowed to do so under Community law – to accede to the ECHR. Without lessening the Charter's usefulness, accession to the ECHR would have the advantage of ensuring consistency in the protection of fundamental rights in Europe.

Firstly, the Charter would be seen as complementing, not being an alternative, to the ECHR, in keeping with Article 53 of the ECHR. That would underscore the fact that the Charter did not affect the universality of human rights or uniformity of standards in Europe.

Secondly, the European Court of Human Rights would be able to review the interpretation of those provisions of the Charter that were borrowed from the ECHR, thus ensuring perfect consonance between the two instruments in the interests of the clarity and legal certainty to which European citizens aspire.

Lastly, it would enable Community institutions to be a party to proceedings before the European Court of Human Rights that concerned the effects of Community provisions in the legal orders of member States.

From that perspective, accession to the ECHR appears to be a natural and logical complement to the adoption of the Charter. Just as the States have accepted the supervision of the European Court of Human Rights, so also it would be logical for the Union to accept this form of external review. To accept the contrary would ultimately amount to affording Community institutions greater freedom than that afforded to national ones.

Towards a relationship of cooperation between the European Court of Human Rights and the Court of Justice of the European Communities

It must be noted in this connection that on no account will the European Communities' or the European Union's accession to the ECHR mean that a hierarchy is established between the Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights, just as no such hierarchy exists between the latter court and any of the national courts.

The European Court of Human Rights has no power to impose penalties on national authorities, to censure them for their acts or to set their acts aside. In other words, it cannot intervene in the legal order of the State concerned and adheres to the principle that it is for the national authorities to interpret domestic law. Its power is restricted to verifying whether the acts of a national authority comply with the ECHR. If they do not, the Court will find a violation of the ECHR, but has no power to set aside or modify the relevant act or to prescribe the measures which the State concerned should take to redress the violation. The States are free to decide on which measures to implement in order to comply with the Court's judgment. Thus the subsidiarity principle applicable in Community law also governs relations between the European Court of Human Rights and the national authorities.

The above clearly shows that the relationship between the European Court of Human Rights and the national courts is not a hierarchical one, but one of cooperation in the interests of achieving consistent application of the ECHR throughout Europe.

When applied in the context of the European Communities, this machinery would leave intact the autonomy of Community law and the Court of Justice, the sole issue being compliance with the European Convention of Human Rights, to the exclusion of any issue regarding the interpretation and application of Community law. In that connection, it should be noted that the mere fact that the ECHR and the rights it embodies are applied in the Community legal order or, as now, are referred to by that order through Article 6 § 2 of the European Union Treaty does not alter their nature and content. This is confirmed by the fact that the Court of Justice has consistently and increasingly referred to the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights when interpreting the ECHR, thereby itself highlighting the importance of a consistent and uniform interpretation of the ECHR in Europe.

Terms of accession that will preserve jurisdiction while ensuring complementarity

However, with a view to reinforcing guarantees that the autonomy of Community law will be preserved if the European Communities and/or European Union acceded to the ECHR, machinery adapted to the special features of Community law can be devised. Thus, before deciding a case touching on a provision of the ECHR, the Court of Justice could seek an advisory opinion from the European Court of Human Rights limited to issues concerning the interpretation of the ECHR. It would be for the Court of Justice to extract from that opinion the points necessary for it to decide the case before it.

Articles 47 to 49 of the ECHR already provide for a procedure of advisory opinions. The procedure could be adapted to the present situation and so made more flexible and speedier. Further, the composition of chambers dealing with requests for an opinion could also be adjusted to take into account the special nature of Community law.

Should the Convention so wish, the Council of Europe will without delay submit proposals in greater detail with a view to enabling the Community or the Union to accede to the ECHR along the above lines.

Of course, the Convention has no power to amend the Treaties. However, the Presidency of the European Council of Cologne concluded: “It will then have to be considered whether and, if so, how the Charter should be integrated into the treaties”. Thus, as integration of the Charter necessarily means amending the treaties, the amendments should also be accompanied by all measures necessary to make integration a success. There is therefore nothing to prevent the Convention from recommending, as a natural and logical complement to the adoption of the Charter, that the Communities and/or the Union accede to the ECHR.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 24 February 2000 (28.02)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4137/00*CONVENT 8*NOTE FROM THE PRAESIDIUM

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union – Proposed Articles (Articles 10 to 19)

Below are further articles relating to civil and political rights. The only Article on the initial list which has not been included is the one concerning the principle of democracy. The place and the content of that Article merit particular attention. Proposals will be made later, particularly in the light of the principles common to national constitutions. Likewise, the question of freedom of movement will be considered at a later stage.

Article 10: Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Everyone shall have the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; this right includes freedom to change his religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.

Comments

This wording is taken from numerous national constitutions, Article 9 of the European Convention on Human Rights and Article 4 of the 1989 European Parliament Declaration. The Court of Justice of the European Communities endorsed the principle of freedom of religion in the Prais case (Judgment of 27 October 1976, Case 130/75, ECR. p. 1589). Article 9 of the European Convention develops the implications of this freedom (freedom to change religion or belief, to manifest one's religion or beliefs publicly, etc.). Since these are implications and not rights, it might seem preferable simply to make a statement of principle and to stop after the first part of the sentence. Any limitations will stem from the general limitation clause.

Article 11: Freedom of expression

Everyone shall have the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas, regardless of frontiers.

Comments

This Article incorporates the principles of Article 10 of the European Convention on Human Rights and Article 5 of the 1989 European Parliament Declaration. Paragraph 2 is based on several national constitutions and the Parliament Declaration. The Court of Justice has endorsed the principle of freedom of expression on several occasions, first and foremost in the ERT Judgment (Judgment of 18 June 1991, Case C-260/89, ECR. p. I-5485).

Article 12: Right to education

- 1. Everyone shall have the right to education [and to vocational training] appropriate to their abilities.
- 2. There shall be free choice of educational [and vocational training] establishment.
- 3. The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be guaranteed.
- 4. Art, science, research and teaching shall be free of constraint.

Comments

This Article is based on common constitutional traditions of the Member States, Article 2 of the Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights and Article 16 of the 1989 European Parliament Declaration. As regards vocational training, which is not covered by the European Convention on Human Rights, there are doubts as to whether it should be included here or under social rights. The case law of the Court of Justice relates to access to such training for Community nationals and persons treated as such and to the question of Community competence, not to the existence of a right to education. Should reference be made to the obligation to ensure that primary and secondary education is compulsory and free of charge, and also to ensure equal opportunities as regards access to higher education? For paragraph 4 there are other possible wordings which would make clear that the types of freedom at issue are the freedom to found educational establishments and the freedom to decide the content of the education in certain cases. As regards paragraph 2, this freedom cannot be absolute. Could it perhaps be made subject to the obligation to respect fundamental rights?

Article 13: Freedom of assembly and association

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions.

Comments

This Article is based on national constitutional traditions, Article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights and Articles 10 and 11 of the 1989 European Parliament Declaration. Should explicit reference be made to the freedom not to join a trade union or an association? Does this freedom derive clearly from the case law of the European Court of Human Rights? The question of freedom to form political parties will be dealt with in connection with the rights of citizens. It has also been suggested that the following could be added: "The freedom to form groupings within a trade or profession and the freedom to organise for the purpose of protecting other interests shall also be guaranteed".

Article 14: Right of access to information

Every citizen of the Union and anyone residing in the Union shall have a right of access to the documents of the institutions of the European Union. This right shall be exercised under the conditions laid down by Article 255 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Comments

The wording of this Article is difficult. It follows from Article 255 of the Treaty. That Article specifies the persons who enjoy right of access (citizens, residents and legal persons with their registered office in the Community). The wording is identical for the right of petition and the right to apply to the Ombudsman. Should this right be placed here or in the part relating to citizens only? Furthermore, the right of access is not absolute. It has limitations. Should there be a reference to the Treaty, which sets out those limitations, or can the general limitation clause be regarded as sufficient?

Article 15: Data protection

Every natural person shall have a right to protection for his personal data.

Comments

Under Article 286 of the EC Treaty the Community Directives on data protection are applicable to the institutions and bodies. Those Directives are based on the Council of Europe Convention on the protection of personal data. The wording is therefore based on that Convention. The Convention provides for the possibility of extending those principles to the manual processing of files. It seems preferable to lay down a general rule rather than to include a detailed list of principles which will be subject to change in the light of technical advances. In any case, data protection is an aspect of respect for privacy. See Article 18 of the 1989 European Parliament Declaration. A more comprehensive alternative wording could be considered: "Respect for the rights and freedoms laid down by this Charter, and in particular the right to privacy, shall be guaranteed with regard to the processing, by whatever means, of any information concerning an identified or identifiable natural person. The information must be processed fairly and for specified purposes, and subject to the data subject's consent or to any other legitimate basis specified by law". This wording is closer to the Community texts and covers the protection not only of privacy but of all freedoms. Should control by an independent body be included as well?

Article 16: Right to ownership

Everyone is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law and subject to fair [and prior] compensation.

Comments

This Article reflects Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights and Article 9 of the 1989 European Parliament Declaration. This is a fundamental principle common to all national constitutions. It has been endorsed many times in the case law of the Court of Justice, and first and foremost in the Hauer judgment (13 December 1979, ECR. p. 3727). It is not certain that the principle of prior compensation is common to all Member States.

Article 17: Right of asylum and expulsion

- 1. Persons who are not nationals of the Union shall have a right of asylum in the European Union [in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees] [under the conditions laid down in the Treaties].
- 2. Collective expulsions of aliens shall be prohibited.

Comments

This Article is based on Article 4 of Protocol No 4 to the European Convention on Human Rights as regards collective expulsions. The 1989 European Parliament Declaration contained no reference to this, but no Community policy existed at the time. The text of paragraph 1 is based on Article 63 of the EC Treaty which incorporates the Convention on refugees into Community law. The provisions of Article 1 of Protocol No 7 to the European Convention on Human Rights on Procedural safeguards relating to expulsion have not been included as most Member States have not signed or ratified this Protocol. In any case the Geneva Convention contains guarantees to this effect. It has been suggested that reference be made to the right to temporary protection for displaced persons "under the conditions laid down in the Treaties or measures taken in pursuance thereof", but, as substantive law stands at present, does such a right exist?

Article 18: Equality

All persons shall be equal before the law.

Comments

This Article expresses a principle which the Court has deemed to be a fundamental principle of Community law (Judgment of 13 November 1984, Racke, Case 283/83, ECR. p. 3791).

Article 19: Non-discrimination

- 1. Any discrimination based on sex, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, membership of a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
- 2. The Union shall seek to eliminate inequalities and to promote equality between men and women. [The equality of the sexes shall be ensured in particular by the setting of pay and other working conditions in accordance with the Treaty and with the texts implementing it.]

Comments

As regards paragraph 1, the European Convention on Human Rights limits the application of the principle to guaranteed rights, but here again it is a principle which forms part of the constitutional traditions common to the Member States. The Treaty enshrines the principle of equal treatment only in specific cases (between Community nationals, between men and women at work). But it seems clear that any form of discrimination would be contrary to the general principles of Community law. The list combines the list in Article 13 of the Community Treaty with the list in Article 14 of the European Convention on Human Rights. It will be seen that discrimination on grounds of nationality has not been prohibited. This is a complex issue because not all discrimination is prohibited if the rights in question are linked to the status of Community national (rights of movement, residence and establishment, for example). It must be left to the courts to assess in accordance with traditional case law whether discrimination is based on objective grounds and whether it is proportionate to the objective pursued. However, either a paragraph on the prohibition of discrimination on grounds of nationality as between citizens of the Union could be inserted here, or this question could be moved to the section on citizens of the Union. Paragraph 2, taken from Article 3(2) of the EC Treaty, authorises positive action.

It has been suggested that this Article should also include a paragraph 3, based on Article 6 of the Finnish constitution, which would deal with children's rights. The paragraph would read:

"4. Children shall be treated as individuals and shall be permitted to influence matters affecting them according to their degree of maturity."

Should this paragraph be inserted here or should it be placed elsewhere together with parents' and families' rights?

=====

PROGETTO DI CARTA DEI DIRITTI FONDAMENTALI DELL'UNIONE EUROPEAfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, 28 febbraio 2000 (21.03)
(OR. fr/it)*CHARTE 4138/00*CONTRIB 30*NOTA DI TRASMISSIONE

Oggetto: Progetto di Carta dei Diritti fondamentali dell'Unione europea

Si accludono due lettere che l'On. Elena Paciotti, Parlamento europeo, ha indirizzato al Presidium della Convenzione.¹

¹ Queste lettere sono pervenute unicamente in lingua italiana.

Strasburgo, 14 febbraio 2000

Alla Presidenza della Convenzione
Incaricata di redigere il progetto di
Carta dei Diritti fondamentali dell'UE

OGGETTO: il diritto alla protezione dei dati personali

A norma dell'articolo 286 del Trattato che istituisce la Comunità europea – come modificato dal Trattato di Amsterdam – mi sembra che si debba ritenere vigente nell'Unione il diritto fondamentale alla protezione dei dati personali, quello che la giurisprudenza costituzionale tedesca ha definito come "diritto fondamentale all'autodeterminazione informatica" o "habeas data".

Poiché tale diritto non è inserito nell'elenco contenuto nella nota della Presidenza del 27 gennaio 2000, chiedo che venga introdotto fra i diritti da prendere in considerazione nella prossima riunione.

Una formulazione a mio avviso condivisibile di tale diritto è quella contenuta nel progetto predisposto dal prof. Dr. Jürgen Meyer, del Bundestag, distribuito il 6 gennaio 2000, all'art. 6:

" Ognuno ha il diritto di decidere autonomamente sulla divulgazione e l'utilizzo dei propri dati personali e di ottenere informazioni sulla memorizzazione di questi ultimi, nella misura in cui ciò non leda i diritti di terzi.

Limitazioni sono ammissibili per legge soltanto in caso di superiore interesse pubblico."

Con i migliori saluti,

Elena Paciotti

Bruxelles, 23 febbraio 2000

Alla Presidenza della Convenzione
Incaricata di redigere una Carta dei Diritti fondamentali
dell'Unione europea.

Fundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

OGGETTO: Progetto di Carta dei diritti fondamentali dell'Unione europea

In relazione al testo dell'Art. 2 proposto con la nota del 15 febbraio scorso, suggerisco una formulazione alternativa del paragrafo 2:

" Ciascuno ha il diritto al rispetto dell'integrità fisica, psichica, genetica.

Nessun intervento sanitario può essere effettuato senza il consenso libero e informato dell'interessato.

Il corpo umano e le sue parti non possono costituire oggetto di profitto.

È proibita ogni forma di discriminazione basata sulle condizioni di salute o sui caratteri genetici di una persona. I test genetici sono ammessi solo per la tutela della salute dell'interessato o per fini di ricerca."

Distinti saluti.

Elena Paciotti

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 28 February 2000 (29.02)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4139/00*CONTRIB 31*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

The text ¹ of the statement by the Council of Europe's Mr Marc Fischbach at the meeting of the Convention on 24 February 2000 is attached.

¹ Submitted in French and English.

COUR EUROPÉENNE DES DROITS DE L'HOMME
EUROPEAN COURT OF HUMAN RIGHTS

22 February 2000

The European Union's Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights

(...)

I have studied with the greatest attention the draft Articles submitted to the Convention for perusal in the document Convent 5 and it seems appropriate at this juncture to make a number of general observations on them, noting that some of the proposed provisions fall well short of the level of protection afforded at present by the European Convention on Human Rights.

One example of this is Article 3, on liberty and security. Its text is directly based on Article 5 of the European Convention. But according to Article 5, it is not sufficient for arrest or detention to comply with domestic law in order to be compatible with the European Convention. They must also be effected for one of the purposes exhaustively listed in Article 5. The case-law includes cases where a deprivation of liberty was held to be in breach of Article 5 not because it did not comply with domestic law but because it was not effected for one of these purposes.

I note, however, that this exhaustive list has not been reproduced in the draft Article 3 which has been submitted to us. That would seriously weaken the present level of protection in that it would be sufficient, for a deprivation of liberty to be compatible with the Charter, for it to comply with domestic law.

Some of the other draft provisions raise the same concerns, particularly those relating to so-called "horizontal questions". I know that at this stage these have not been submitted for discussion and merely serve to provide an illustration of the way in which certain horizontal problems raised by the drafting of the Articles relating to specific rights might be solved. Nevertheless, I wish to make two comments on them which seem to me to be of a fundamental nature.

My first observation concerns the general limitation clause proposed in Article Y. On this point, I would like to point out that the European Convention on Human Rights contains a number of provisions which are either not limited in any way or subject only to limitations whose scope has been narrowly circumscribed by the European Court of Human Rights. That applies in particular to Articles 2 to 7, which concern, among other matters, the dignity of the human being, the right to life, liberty and security, the right to a fair trial and the principle nullum crimen sine lege. Here again, accepting that these provisions might be affected by a general limitation clause would amount to reducing the level of protection guaranteed by the European Convention on Human Rights [and thus doing the opposite of what Article Z says, a provision I intend to come back to in a moment].

I further note that Article Y refers to "the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society", but without listing those interests exhaustively, as the European Convention on Human Rights does. This too would lower the standards of protection currently in force in Europe since any interest at all might one day be held to be "legitimate".

To remedy the problems I have just mentioned, I fear that it will not be sufficient to refer to Article Z of the draft. That brings me to my second remark, concerning the correct interpretation of Article Z, regard being had to the wording defining certain rights.

On the one hand, the wording seems in certain cases to lag behind the level of protection afforded at present by the European Convention on Human Rights. On the other hand, however, Article Z provides that no provision of the Charter may be interpreted as placing restrictions on that protection. If it is true, as a number of members of the Convention have already said, that our main concern should be to ensure the readability and comprehensibility of the Charter, then that situation is one which I find unsatisfactory.

To ask citizens to compare two parallel texts, and in this instance that would mean grasping and understanding all the subtle differences between Articles referring to the same rights – differences of which I could moreover cite further examples – seems to me to go well beyond what one can legitimately expect of an individual subject of law and in any case to run counter to the objective of making the Charter readable and comprehensible.

In conclusion, I can therefore only emphasise the need to depart as little as possible from the text of the European Convention on Human Rights where the rights set forth therein are included in the Charter. On that subject, I would refer you to the contribution made by the Council of Europe observers on 21 February.

That being said, Mr President, if the Convention wishes, the Council of Europe is ready to submit concrete proposals to it very rapidly with a view to ensuring a minimum level of consistency between the Articles of the Charter and the Convention provisions.

Thank you.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 28 February 2000 (01.03)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4140/00*CONVENT 9*NOTE FROM THE SECRETARIAT

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
- Comparative Table

Further to the meeting on 24 and 25 February, please find enclosed a comparative table containing the rights in the wording proposed in Charte 4123/1/00 REV 1 (Articles 8 and 9) and Charte 4137/00 (Articles 10 to 19), laid out beside similar provisions, where such exist, in the European Convention on Human Rights.

European Convention on Human Rights	Praesidium Draft
Article 8: Right to respect of private and family life <ol data-bbox="231 406 1047 771" style="list-style-type: none"> <li data-bbox="231 406 1047 479">1. Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence. <li data-bbox="231 511 1047 771">2. There shall be no interference by a public authority with the exercise of this right except such as is in accordance with the law and is necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security, public safety or the economic well-being of the country, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others. 	Article 8: Respect for private and family life <ol data-bbox="1050 406 1923 592" style="list-style-type: none"> <li data-bbox="1050 406 1923 479">1. Everyone shall have the right to respect and protection for their identity. <li data-bbox="1050 479 1923 592">2. Respect for privacy and family life, reputation, the home and the confidentiality of correspondence, irrespective of the medium, shall be guaranteed.
Article 12: Right to marry Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and to found a family, according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right.	Article 9: Family life <ol data-bbox="1050 885 1923 1031" style="list-style-type: none"> <li data-bbox="1050 885 1923 917">1. Everyone shall have the right to found a family. <li data-bbox="1050 917 1923 990">2. The Union shall ensure the legal, economic and social protection of the family. <li data-bbox="1050 990 1923 1031">3. The Union shall ensure the protection of children.

European Convention on Human Rights	Praesidium Draft
Article 9: Freedom of thought, conscience and religion <ol data-bbox="178 354 1045 781" style="list-style-type: none"> <li data-bbox="178 354 1045 537">1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; this right includes freedom to change his religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance. <li data-bbox="178 570 1045 781">2. Freedom to manifest one's religion or beliefs shall be subject only to such limitations as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of public safety, for the protection of public order, health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others. 	Article 10: Freedom of thought, conscience and religion Everyone shall have the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; this right includes freedom to change his religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.

European Convention on Human Rights	Praesidium Draft
Article 10: Freedom of expression <ol data-bbox="176 386 1047 1034" style="list-style-type: none"> <li data-bbox="176 386 1047 609">1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers. This article shall not prevent States from requiring the licensing of broadcasting, television or cinema enterprises. <li data-bbox="176 641 1047 1034">2. The exercise of these freedoms, since it carries with it duties and responsibilities, may be subject to such formalities, conditions, restrictions or penalties as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society, in the interests of national security, territorial integrity or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, for the protection of the reputation or rights of others, for preventing the disclosure of information received in confidence, or for maintaining the authority and impartiality of the judiciary. 	Article 11: Freedom of expression Everyone shall have the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas, regardless of frontiers.

European Convention on Human Rights	Praesidium Draft
Article 2: Right to education No person shall be denied the right to education. In the exercise of any functions which it assumes in relation to education and to teaching, the State shall respect the right of parents to ensure such education and teaching in conformity with their own religious and philosophical convictions.	Article 12: Right to education <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Everyone shall have the right to education [and to vocational training] appropriate to their abilities. 2. There shall be free choice of educational [and vocational training] establishment. 3. The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be guaranteed. 4. Art, science, research and teaching shall be free of constraint.
Article 11: Freedom of assembly and association <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his interests. 2. No restrictions shall be placed on the exercise of these rights other than such as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others. This article shall not prevent the imposition of lawful restrictions on the exercise of these rights by members of the armed forces, of the police or of the administration of the State. 	Article 13: Freedom of assembly and association Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions.

European Convention on Human Rights	Praesidium Draft
	Article 14: Right of access to information Every citizen of the Union and anyone residing in the Union shall have a right of access to the documents of the institutions of the European Union. This right shall be exercised under the conditions laid down by Article 255 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.
	Article 15: Data protection Every natural person shall have a right to protection for his personal data.
Article 1: Protection of ownership Every natural or legal person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions. No one shall be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and subject to the conditions provided for by law and by the general principles of international law. The preceding provisions shall not, however, in any way impair the right of a State to enforce such laws as it deems necessary to control the use of property in accordance with the general interest or to secure the payment of taxes or other contributions or penalties.	Article 16: Right to ownership Everyone is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law and subject to fair [and prior] compensation.

European Convention on Human Rights	Praesidium Draft
Article 3: Prohibition of expulsion of own nationals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. No one shall be expelled, by means either of an individual or of a collective measure, from the territory of the State of which he is a national. 2. No one shall be deprived of the right to enter the territory of the State of which he is a national. Article 4: Prohibition of collective expulsion of aliens Collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited.	Article 17: Right of asylum and expulsion <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Persons who are not nationals of the Union shall have a right of asylum in the European Union [in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees] [under the conditions laid down in the Treaties]. 2. Collective expulsions of aliens shall be prohibited.
	Article 18: Equality All persons shall be equal before the law.
Article 14: Prohibition of discrimination The enjoyment of the rights and freedoms set forth in this Convention shall be secured without discrimination on any ground such as sex, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.	Article 19: Non-discrimination <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Any discrimination based on sex, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, membership of a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited. 2. The Union shall seek to eliminate inequalities and to promote equality between men and women. [The equality of the sexes shall be ensured in particular by the setting of pay and other working conditions in accordance with the Treaty and with the texts implementing it.]

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 28 February 2000 (29.02)
(OR. de)*CHARTE 4141/00*CONVENT 10*NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Draft Articles 1-9 (see CHARTE 4123/1/00 REV 1)

Please find attached a new version of the draft Articles in CHARTE 4123/1/00 REV 1 not yet discussed, which was submitted by former Federal President Mr Roman Herzog, Personal Representative of the Federal Republic of Germany and Convention Chairman.

Structure of the Charter

The Charter of Fundamental Rights of the EU to be drawn up by the Convention should comprise the following sections:

1. Fundamental human rights
2. Rights of freedom
3. Rights of equality
4. Economic and social rights
5. Political rights
6. Judicial rights

The Convention will find below proposals for the fundamental rights to be included in each individual section.

Within each section the draft will start with an Article 1 with a view to facilitating work in the coming months. The Articles should then be numbered consecutively in the final text.

6. Judicial rights

Article 1

(Right to an effective remedy)

Everyone whose rights and freedoms as set forth in the Charter are violated shall have an effective remedy before a national authority notwithstanding that the violation has been committed by persons acting in an official capacity.

Commentary:

Verbatim text of Article 13 of the ECHR, except for an introductory change referring to the planned Charter

Article 2(Right to a fair trial)

- 1. In the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. Judgment shall be pronounced publicly but the press and public may be excluded from all or part of the trial in the interests of morals, public order or national security in a democratic society, where the interests of juveniles or the protection of the private life of the parties so require, or to the extent strictly necessary in the opinion of the court in special circumstances where publicity would prejudice the interests of justice.
- 2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
- 3. Everyone charged with a criminal offence has the following minimum rights:
 - (a) to be informed promptly, in a language which he understands and in detail, of the nature and cause of the accusation against him;
 - (b) to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence;
 - (c) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or, if he has not sufficient means to pay for legal assistance, to be given it free when the interests of justice so require;

- (d) to examine or have examined witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him;
- (e) to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court.

Commentary:

Verbatim text of Article 6 of the ECHR

Article 3

(Right of appeal in criminal matters)

1. Everyone convicted of a criminal offence by a tribunal shall have the right to have his conviction or sentence reviewed by a higher tribunal. The exercise of this right, including the grounds on which it may be exercised, shall be governed by law.
2. This right may be subject to exceptions in regard to offences of a minor character, as prescribed by law, or in cases in which the person concerned was tried in the first instance by the highest tribunal or was convicted following an appeal against acquittal.

Commentary:

Verbatim text of Article 2 of Protocol N° 7 to the ECHR

Article 4

(No punishment without law)

- 1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed.
- 2. This article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of law recognised by civilised nations.

Commentary:

Article 7 of the ECHR, unchanged

Article 5

(Right not to be tried or punished twice)

- 1. No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings under the jurisdiction of the same State for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law and penal procedure of that State.
- 2. The provisions of the preceding paragraph shall not prevent the reopening of the case in accordance with the law and penal procedure of the State concerned, if there is evidence of new or newly discovered facts, or if there has been a fundamental defect in the previous proceedings, which could affect the outcome of the case.

Commentary:

*Verbatim text of the 1st and 2nd paragraphs of Article 4 of Protocol N° 7 to the ECHR.
Paragraph 3 may be added if the Convention so wishes.*

Article 6

(Compensation for wrongful conviction)

When a person has by a final decision been convicted of a criminal offence and when subsequently his conviction has been reversed, or he has been pardoned, on the ground that a new or newly discovered fact shows conclusively that there has been a miscarriage of justice, the person who has suffered punishment as a result of such conviction shall be compensated according to the law or the practice of the State concerned, unless it is proved that the non-disclosure of the unknown fact in time is wholly or partly attributable to him.

Commentary:

Verbatim text of Article 3 of Protocol N° 7 to the ECHR

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 28 février 2000 (01.03)
(OR. de)*CHARTE 4141/1/00
REV 1 (fr)*CONVENT 10*NOTE

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne
 - Propositions pour les articles 1 à 9 (document de référence :
 Charte 4123/1/00 REV 1)

Veillez trouver ci-joint une nouvelle version des propositions d'articles figurant dans le document Charte 4123/1/00 REV 1 qui n'ont pas encore été examinées, présentée par M. Roman Herzog, ancien Président de la République fédérale d'Allemagne, représentant personnel pour ce pays et président de la Convention.

Structure de la Charte

La Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne qui doit être élaborée par la Convention devrait comporter les sections suivantes :

1^{ère} section Les droits fondamentaux de l'homme

2^{ème} section Libertés

3^{ème} section Droits ayant trait à l'égalité

4^{ème} section Droits économiques et sociaux

5^{ème} section Droits politiques

6^{ème} section Droits dans le domaine de la justice.

Il est proposé à la Convention de reprendre les droits fondamentaux énoncés ci-après pour les différentes sections.

Dans le projet, chaque section débute par un article 1^{er}, ce qui devrait faciliter le travail au cours des mois à venir. Néanmoins, dans le texte définitif, il conviendra de renuméroter les articles de manière à avoir une numérotation continue.

6^{ème} section : Droits dans le domaine de la justice

Article premier

(Droit à un recours effectif)

Toute personne dont les droits et libertés reconnus dans la présente Charte ont été violés, a droit à l'octroi d'un recours effectif devant une instance nationale, alors même que la violation aurait été commise par des personnes agissant dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions officielles.

Commentaire :

Il s'agit de l'article 13 de la CEDH, mais avec une introduction modifiée qui fait référence à la Charte à élaborer.

Article 2(Droit à un procès équitable)

- 1. Toute personne a droit à ce que sa cause soit entendue équitablement, publiquement et dans un délai raisonnable, par un tribunal indépendant et impartial, établi par la loi, qui décidera, soit des contestations sur ses droits et obligations de caractère civil, soit du bien-fondé de toute accusation en matière pénale dirigée contre elle. Le jugement doit être rendu publiquement, mais l'accès de la salle d'audience peut être interdit à la presse et au public pendant la totalité ou une partie du procès dans l'intérêt de la moralité, de l'ordre public ou de la sécurité nationale dans une société démocratique, lorsque les intérêts des mineurs ou la protection de la vie privée des parties au procès l'exigent, ou dans la mesure jugée strictement nécessaire par le tribunal, lorsque dans des circonstances spéciales la publicité serait de nature à porter atteinte aux intérêts de la justice.
- 2. Toute personne accusée d'une infraction est présumée innocente jusqu'à ce que sa culpabilité ait été légalement établie.
- 3. Tout accusé a droit notamment à :
 - a) être informé, dans le plus court délai, dans une langue qu'il comprend et d'une manière détaillée, de la nature et de la cause de l'accusation portée contre lui ;
 - b) disposer du temps et des facilités nécessaires à la préparation de sa défense ;
 - c) se défendre lui-même ou avoir l'assistance d'un défenseur de son choix et, s'il n'a pas les moyens de rémunérer un défenseur, pouvoir être assisté gratuitement par un avocat d'office, lorsque les intérêts de la justice l'exigent ;

- d) interroger ou faire interroger les témoins à charge et obtenir la convocation et l'interrogation des témoins à décharge dans les mêmes conditions que les témoins à charge ;
- e) se faire assister gratuitement d'un interprète, s'il ne comprend pas ou ne parle pas la langue employée à l'audience.

Commentaire :

Il s'agit de la retranscription mot pour mot de l'article 6 de la CEDH.

Article 3

(Droit à un double degré de juridiction en matière pénale)

1. Toute personne déclarée coupable d'une infraction pénale par un tribunal a le droit de faire examiner par une juridiction supérieure la déclaration de culpabilité ou la condamnation. L'exercice de ce droit, y compris les motifs pour lesquels il peut être exercé, sont régis par la loi.
2. Ce droit peut faire l'objet d'exceptions pour des infractions mineures telles qu'elles sont définies par la loi ou lorsque l'intéressé a été jugé en première instance par la plus haute juridiction ou a été déclaré coupable et condamné à la suite d'un recours contre son acquittement.

Commentaire :

Il s'agit de la retranscription mot pour mot de l'article 2 du protocole n° 7 à la CEDH.

Article 4

(Pas de peine sans loi)

- 1. Nul ne peut être condamné pour une action ou une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, ne constituait pas une infraction d'après le droit national ou international. De même il n'est infligé aucune peine plus forte que celle qui était applicable au moment où l'infraction a été commise.
- 2. Le présent article ne portera pas atteinte au jugement et à la punition d'une personne coupable d'une action ou d'une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, était criminelle d'après les principes généraux de droit reconnus par les nations civilisées.

Commentaire :

Reproduction sans modification de l'article 7 de la CEDH.

Article 5

(Droit à ne pas être jugé ou puni deux fois)

- 1 Nul ne peut être poursuivi ou puni pénalement par les juridictions du même État en raison d'une infraction pour laquelle il a déjà été acquitté ou condamné par un jugement définitif conformément à la loi et à la procédure pénale de cet État.
- 2 Les dispositions du paragraphe précédent n'empêchent pas la réouverture du procès, conformément à la loi et à la procédure pénale de l'État concerné, si des faits nouveaux ou nouvellement révélés ou un vice fondamental dans la procédure précédente sont de nature à affecter le jugement intervenu.

Commentaire :

Retranscription mot pour mot de l'article 4, paragraphes 1 et 2, du protocole n° 7 à la CEDH. Le paragraphe 3 devra être ajouté, le cas échéant, si la Convention le souhaite.

Article 6(Droit d'indemnisation en cas d'erreur judiciaire)

Lorsqu'une condamnation pénale définitive est ultérieurement annulée, ou lorsque la grâce est accordée, parce qu'un fait nouveau ou nouvellement révélé prouve qu'il s'est produit une erreur judiciaire, la personne qui a subi une peine en raison de cette condamnation est indemnisée, conformément à la loi ou à l'usage en vigueur dans l'État concerné, à moins qu'il ne soit prouvé que la non-révélation en temps utile du fait inconnu lui est imputable en tout ou en partie.

Commentaire :

Retranscription mot pour mot de l'article 3 du protocole n° 7 à la CEDH.

PROGETTO DI CARTA DEI DIRITTI FONDAMENTALI DELL'UNIONE EUROPEAfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, 29 febbraio 2000 (21.03)
(OR. fr/it)*CHARTE 4142/00*CONTRIB 32*NOTA DI TRASMISSIONE

Oggetto: Progetto di Carta dei Diritti fondamentali dell'Unione europea

Si acclude una lettera che l'On. Elena Paciotti, Parlamento europeo, ha indirizzato al Presidium della Convenzione.¹

¹ Questa lettera è pervenuta unicamente in lingua italiana.

Bruxelles, 28 febbraio 2000

Alla Presidenza della Convenzione
incaricata della redazione della Carta dei diritti fondamentali

Oggetto: protezione dei dati personali

Facendo seguito alla mia lettera pari oggetto del 14/02/00 e preso atto che nella nota del presidium del 15/02, a commento dell'art. 8 è scritto "un articolo specifico sarà consacrato alla protezione dei dati", propongo qui di seguito due formulazioni alternative a quella già proposta dal prof. Jürgen Meyer, allo scopo di rendere più approfondita e ampia la discussione sul tema:

1. (questa formulazione mi è stata suggerita dal prof. Spyros Simitis: ne trascrivo anche il testo in tedesco)

" (1) Ogni persona ha il diritto di decidere in merito al trattamento dei dati che la riguardano.

(2) Ogni persona ha il diritto di conoscere dal responsabile dell'elaborazione dati se vi siano dati che la riguardino e quali essi siano.

(3) Limitazioni di questo diritto possono essere previste soltanto dalla legge"

"

(1) Jede Person hat das Recht, über die Verarbeitung der sich auf sie beziehenden Daten selbst zu bestimmen.

(2) Jede Person hat das Recht, von dem für die Verarbeitung Verantwortlichen bestätigt zu bekommen, ob und welche Daten, die sich auf sie beziehen, verarbeitet werden.

(3) Einschränkungen dieser Rechte dürfen nur durch Gesetz erfolgen."

2.

" Ciascuno ha diritto di decidere liberamente sulla raccolta, l'utilizzazione e la circolazione dei propri dati personali, di ottenere informazioni sul loro trattamento e di accedere alle informazioni raccolte.

Specifiche limitazioni possono essere previste solo per legge per la tutela di rilevanti interessi pubblici."

Distinti saluti.

Elena Paciotti

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 8 March 2000 (14.03)
(OR. en,nl)*CHARTE 4145/00*CONTRIB 35*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter on Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find attached a contribution by Mr Frits KORTHALS ALTES, Personal Representative of the Netherlands Government.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION
(contribution by Frits Korthals Altes, representative of the Netherlands Government in the Convention for the drawing up of a draft Charter of fundamental rights of the European Union)

I endorse the efforts being made to establish a concise wording for the fundamental rights so that citizens and other residents of the European Union find them comprehensible and easy to read. However, I have two objections to the proposals discussed so far and contained in CONVENT 5 (CHARTE 4123/1/0 REV 1) and CONVENT 8 (CHARTE 4137/00). The same applies to the proposals contained in CONVENT 10 (CHARTE 4141/00). Those objections are as follows:

1. Deviating from the wording of a fundamental right also contained in the ECHR risks producing a difference in interpretation between the ECHR and the EU Charter. There is no objection if such deviation aims to expand that fundamental right: in my opinion, the European Union has every entitlement to expand a fundamental right in such a way as to make protection within the European Union stronger than that guaranteed by the ECHR. On the other hand, the EU Charter must never restrict a fundamental right already guaranteed by the ECHR or word it in more limited terms than the ECHR does.
2. In specific cases, the ECHR authorises States to infringe a fundamental right. It also lays down the generally strict conditions under which such infringements may take place (cf. Article 5 of the ECHR). By not including an article authorising infringement and laying down the conditions under which a fundamental right may be infringed, the EU Charter risks diverging even further from the ECHR.

The same thing will happen when we eventually come to draw up fundamental social rights which are already contained in the revised European Social Charter (ESC) or treaties of the International Labour Organisation (ILO). A similar discrepancy may also arise between fundamental rights yet to be drafted which have already been expressed by bodies of the European Union in a European Parliament declaration or other instrument.

In principle I see two possible means of overcoming these objections:

1. by making explicit reference in each article to ECHR, ESC, ILO or EU documents;
2. by specifying in an introductory ("horizontal") article that only the original articles of the ECHR, ESC, ILO or EU document to which the explanatory notes on the article refer are applicable, and that the sole purpose of the ensuing list of rights is to summarise the rights laid down in the ECHR, ESC, ILO or EU documents without altering their scope. While the rights enshrined in the ECHR, ESC, ILO or EU documents may be expanded, an express indication must be given where this is the case.

I have provided examples of each option below.

My preference would be for option 1, even though I am aware that the informal meetings of the Convention have proceeded on the basis of horizontal provisions pursuant to option 2. My preference is based on the fact that the articles which the Convention has discussed so far appear to accord unlimited rights, whereas those rights may in fact be restricted by the horizontal provisions. If the articles were worded in accordance with option 1, it would be immediately obvious that each article could be subject to restrictions as justified by ECHR, ESC and EU documents or other treaties.

EXAMPLES:

Re 1.

§ 1 Human dignity

Article 1

- 1.1. The right to human dignity shall be inseparably linked to the human person.
- 1.2. The right to human dignity shall be inviolable and must be respected under all circumstances.

Article 2

- 2.1. No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.
- 2.2. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
- 2.3. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour, except in the cases provided for in Article 4.3 of the ECHR.

§ 2 Right to life

Article 3

- 3.1. Everyone has the right to life.
- 3.2. Everyone has the right to the respect of his physical and mental integrity.
- 3.3. The death penalty may not be enforced other than in the event of war, subject to due regard for Article 2 of Protocol No 6 to the ECHR.

Article 4

- 4.1. An intervention in the health field may only be carried out after the person concerned has given free and informed consent to it.
- 4.2. The cloning of human beings is forbidden.

§ 3 Liberty and security

Article 5

- 5.1. Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person.
- 5.2. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in the cases referred to in Article 5.1 of the ECHR and with due regard for Articles 5.2 - 5.5 of the ECHR, Article 1 of Protocol No 4 and Articles 2, 3 and 4 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR.

§ 4 Right to a fair trial

Article 6

In the determination of his civil and administrative rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.

Article 7

- 7.1. Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to request an effective remedy from a court or tribunal specified by law.¹
- 7.2. Everyone charged with an offence has the following rights in accordance with Articles 6.2 and 6.3 of the ECHR:
 - (a) to be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law;

¹ This wording deviates from that of Article 13 of the ECHR to favour residents as Article 13 refers to a "national authority" rather than "a court or tribunal specified by law". There should therefore be no reference to Article 13 of the ECHR.

- (b) to be informed promptly, in a language which he understands and in detail, of the accusation against him, and to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence;
- (c) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or, if he has not sufficient means to pay for legal assistance, to be given it free, and to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language of the proceedings;
- (d) to have access to the dossier; to examine witnesses on his behalf and to produce and examine or have examined witnesses against him under the same conditions as witnesses on his behalf.

Article 8

- 8.1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence in law at the time when it was committed. No heavier penalty than the one applicable at the time of committing the offence shall be imposed. If, subsequent to the commission of the offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
- 8.2. The previous paragraph shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of law recognised by civilised nations.

Article 9

With due regard for the restrictions and exceptions referred to in Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR, no one shall be tried or convicted for offences for which they have already been finally acquitted or convicted.

§ 5 Freedom of the individual

Article 10

- 10.1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion and belief; this right shall include freedom to change his religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.
- 10.2. The right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion and belief shall be subject only to such limitations as are referred to in Article 9.2 of the ECHR.

Article 11

- 11.1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression; this right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and images without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.
- 11.2. The right to freedom of expression shall be subject only to such limitations as are referred to in Article 10 of the ECHR.

Article 12

There shall be freedom of art, science and research.

§ 6 Respect for private and family lifeArticle 13

- 13.1. Everyone has the right to protection of their identity.
- 13.2. Respect for the privacy, reputation, home and confidentiality of correspondence, irrespective of the medium, shall be guaranteed within the limits set by Article 8.2 of the ECHR.

Article 14

- 14.1. Everyone has the right to marry and to found a family, according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right.
- 14.2. Every minor has the right to protection by the public authorities.
- 14.3. Respect for family life shall be guaranteed within the limits set by Article 8.2 of the ECHR.

Article 15

- 15.1. Every child has the right to compulsory free primary education within the age limits set by national legislation and to secondary education in accordance with his capabilities.
- 15.2. There shall be freedom of choice of educational establishment.
- 15.3. The right of parents or legal guardians to secure for their children an education which conforms to their religious or philosophical beliefs shall be respected.

Etc.

Re b. Introductory (horizontal) article

Insofar as they do not explicitly expand the rights and freedoms guaranteed by the ECHR and the accompanying Protocols, the rights and freedoms listed in Articles 1 to ... shall have the same scope and significance as the corresponding rights guaranteed in Section I (Articles 1 to 18) of the ECHR and in the Protocols to the ECHR, and may, unless expressly stated otherwise, be limited by law in the same way and under the same conditions as those rights. The interpretation of the ECHR and its Protocols provided in the case law of the European Court of Human Rights, established by Article 19 of the ECHR, shall be the basis for applying the rights and freedoms laid down in Articles 1 to

A similar provision referring to the ESC (and ILO Conventions) should precede the enumeration of the social rights.

The Hague, 6 March 2000

Frits KORTHALS ALTES

=====

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 6 March 2000CHARTE 4146/00*CONTRIB 36*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution of Lord GOLDSMITH, Personal Representative of the Government of the United Kingdom.¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English only.

(i) DRAFT CHARTER

(b) PART A

II. Article 1 / Purpose and Object

- (1) The dignity of the person is inviolable. In order to protect it, the European Union declares its adherence to the fundamental rights set out below.
- (2) The following provisions are addressed to the bodies and institutions of the European Union in the exercise of the responsibilities and tasks assigned to them by the Treaties. [*] They establish neither new tasks or competences for the Union nor do they extend its existing tasks or competences.
- (3) The fundamental rights are listed below in Part A. Part B explains the nature, full extent and application of these rights.

Notes:

- ‘Purpose and Object’ is borrowed from the helpful titular formulation in the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine and is perhaps a more accurate description than ‘Article 1’.
- ‘Inviolability’ presents some difficulties in English. Prof. Braibant has suggested an alternative formulation using ‘respected’ which we should consider.
- []I would suggest that we omit the second sentence of your Article 1(2) which contains a proposition which would require a Treaty amendment for its validity. We can discuss these issues at greater length.*

Article 2(Right to life)

- (1) Everyone’s right to life shall be protected by law.
- (2) The death penalty is abolished. No one shall be condemned to such penalty or executed.

Notes:

- I still think it is better to aim for a shorter Part A leading to a cleaner, more accessible document, with the detail in Part B.

-
- Headnote for Articles 3 to 5: We could possibly consider the pros and cons of combining these provisions under a single Article entitled 'Respect for the person.'

Article 3

(Right to the respect of physical and mental integrity)

Everyone has the right to the respect of his or her physical and mental integrity in the application of biology and medicine.

Article 4

(Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment)

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 5

(Prohibition of forced or compulsory labour)

No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.

Note:

- Setting out this right in this way increases visibility without losing legal certainty.

Article 6

(Liberty and security)

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person and cannot be deprived of it save in limited specific cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.

Note:

- I regard it as important that the right should not be cut down by using any expression which might be interpreted differently from ECHR Article 5, which limits cases where a person might be deprived of liberty to specific limited circumstances. But the two-part approach allows visibility without losing legal certainty. This approach enables a visible statement of a personal right but tied clearly to the protection of the individual in ECHR Article 5.
-

PART B

This Part explains the nature, full extent and application of the fundamental rights referred to in Part A.

General Provisions

Each reference in this Charter to an Article of the ECHR or its Protocols should be interpreted in accordance with the jurisprudence of the Strasbourg organs.

Note:

- It will be necessary in the draft to capture the developing jurisprudence of the Strasbourg and to tie the application of the Charter rights to individuals to the obligations of Member States. It may be possible to incorporate some or all of such material in Article 1 or draft a general clause thereby avoiding needless repetition. But it is probably better to return to this question at the end of the process. The text I previously proposed included ‘References to ECHR Articles in this Charter are to be understood having regard to the jurisprudence of the Strasbourg organs. They do not confer a guarantee greater than that under the corresponding ECHR Article(s) subject to any reservation or, where applicable, derogation entered in respect of them’. This will have to be for consideration.

III. Article 1 / Purpose and Object

1(1): The principle of respect for the inviolable dignity of the human person is the foundation for statements of fundamental rights throughout the European Union. Article 1 has effect in accordance with the constitutional traditions of Member States and is respected by the Union bodies and institutions.

Note:

- We cannot supply a Part B text for Article 1(2), because there is as yet no certainty about the legal force the Charter may be given at some later stage.

Article 2

(Right to life)

The rights in Article 2 are the rights guaranteed by Article 2 of and Articles 1, [2], 3 and 4 of Protocol 6 to the ECHR, read with ECHR Articles 17 and 18¹. The full ¹ It will need to be considered later where in the Charter we should set out the text of ancillary provisions of this kind.

ECHR Article 2 is as follows [...] The full text of relevant provisions of ECHR Protocol 6 is as follows [...]

Article 3

(Right to the respect of physical and mental integrity)

The right set out in this Article comprises the following principles:

- (a) the principle of informed consent should be respected;
- (b) the human body and its parts shall not, as such, give rise to financial gain;
- (c) research on human beings shall only be carried out under appropriate conditions for their protection;
- (d) organ removal from living donors shall only be permitted under specified circumstances and with the consent of the person concerned.

The principle in (a) above is covered by the general rule given in Article 5 of the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. It will not be applicable in all circumstances; for example, where a person is not able to give informed consent the relevant rules given in Articles 6, 8, 17 and 20 of the Biomedicine Convention must be applied. Where a person suffers from a serious mental disorder the principles given in articles 7 and 26 of the Biomedicine Convention will be applicable if certain criteria are met.

The principle in (b) above is that laid down in Article 21 of the Biomedicine Convention.

The appropriate protective conditions referred to in (c) above are set out in Articles 16 and 17 of the Biomedicine Convention.

The principle in (d) above is laid down in Article 19 of the Biomedicine Convention, which specifies the permitted circumstances.

References to the Biomedicine Convention articles are to be read subject to the relevant exceptions provided by that Convention and subject to any applicable reservation or derogation.

Note:

I expressed concern about the Praesidium text not reflecting the existing situation, and the need to confine ourselves to existing, justiciable rights. There is another preliminary observation: unlike the ECHR, the Council of Europe’s Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine permits the Community to accede (although I believe it has not yet done so). The Biomedicine Convention is not an existing active instrument and we will have to consider very carefully what should be included, which rights are common to Member States’ constitutional traditions, and ensure that we reflect the language and exceptions of the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. I have asked for advice on the detailed position in the UK at the moment. But in order to produce a draft for discussion I have very tentatively suggested the short Part A wording and the Part B note above, and may revert with further wording.

Article 4

(Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment)

Article 4 recites the text of Article 3 of the ECHR, the rights in which are guaranteed by that provision, read with ECHR Articles 17 and 18.

Article 5

(Prohibition of forced or compulsory labour)

The rights in Article 5 are the rights guaranteed by Article 4 of the ECHR, read with ECHR Articles 17 and 18. The full ECHR text of Article 4 is as follows: [...]

Article 6

(Liberty and security)

The rights in Article 6 are the rights guaranteed by Article 5 of the ECHR, read with ECHR Articles 17 and 18. The full text of ECHR Article 5 is as follows: [...]

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 8 March 2000 (13.03)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4149/00*CONVENT 13*NOTE FROM THE PRAESIDIUM

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
- New proposal for Articles 1 to 12 (now 1 to 16)
Reference documents: CHARTE 4123/1/00 REV 1 CONVENT 5 and
CHARTE 4137/00 CONVENT 8

Following the discussions of the Convention, which met as a Working Party, the new wording of Articles 1 to 12 has been drawn up, taking account of the comments made. Each Article is followed by a statement of reasons. Part II contains two horizontal Articles which are not under discussion but feature by way of illustration.

The order of the Articles is provisional. A general presentational outline for the Charter is being drawn up.

I. Draft Articles

Article 1. Dignity of the human person

The dignity of the human person shall be respected and protected in all circumstances.

Statement of reasons

This Article is inspired by the principles common to the constitutional traditions of Member States and by Article 1 of the 1989 Declaration of the European Parliament. The concern was that it should appear as the first Article of the Charter, since dignity of the human person is the very foundation of fundamental rights. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights sets out this principle in its preamble:

"Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world."

Respect for the dignity of the human person constitutes an inherent limitation to all the other rights, which may not be used to infringe that dignity.

It has been suggested that a second paragraph should be added to this Article, defining the scope of the Charter in a horizontal fashion. This paragraph could read as follows:

"The provisions of this Charter shall be applicable to the institutions and organs of the Union in the framework of the powers and tasks conferred on them by the Treaties, and to the Member States when implementing Community law. They shall not establish any competence or new tasks for the Union nor shall they extend the latter's competence and tasks."

Another solution would be to include this provision in the preamble or to make it a separate Article.

Article 2. Right to life

1. Everyone has the right to life.
2. No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed.

Statement of reasons

Paragraph 1 is taken from Article 2 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone's right to life shall be protected by law. No one shall be deprived of his life intentionally save in the execution of a sentence of a court following his conviction of a crime for which this penalty is provided by law.*
- 2. Deprivation of life shall not be regarded as inflicted in contravention of this article when it results from the use of force which is no more than absolutely necessary:*
 - (a) in defence of any person from unlawful violence;*
 - (b) in order to effect a lawful arrest or to prevent the escape of a person lawfully detained;*
 - (c) in action lawfully taken for the purpose of quelling a riot or insurrection."*

The exceptions referred to in Article 2(2) of the Convention apply in the context of this Charter in accordance with Article 6 of the Treaty on European Union which refers to the European Convention on Human Rights.

Paragraph 2 is taken from the second sentence of Article 1 of Protocol No 6 to the European Convention on Human Rights. Article 2 of the Protocol is worded as follows:

"A State may make provision in its law for the death penalty in respect of acts committed in time of war or of imminent threat of war; such penalty shall be applied only in the instances laid down in the law and in accordance with its provisions"

Although this provision is not included in the Charter, it applies in the European Union context in accordance with Article 6 of the TEU.

However, it was deemed necessary to include these provisions not only because of their intrinsic importance but also because abolition of the death penalty is now an objective of the Union to be realised through the CFSP and may also have a role to play with regard to cooperation in criminal matters (Title VI TEU). The 1998 declaration of the Council on the death penalty indicates that the Union is working towards the universal abolition of the death penalty.

Article 3. Right to the respect of integrity

- 1. Everyone has the right to the respect of his physical and mental integrity.
- 2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles in particular must be respected:
 - prohibition of eugenic practices
 - respect of the informed consent of the patient
 - prohibiting the making of the human body and its products a source of financial gain
 - prohibition of the cloning of human beings

Statement of reasons

These principles are set out in the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. They are accompanied by separate provisions on consent, particularly where a person is unable to give his consent, and by restrictions. It is not the aim of this Charter to derogate from those provisions. The list is not exhaustive, allowing for its development to take account of future progress in this area.

Article 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman and degrading treatment.

Statement of reasons

This Article is taken from Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Article 5. Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

- 1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
- 2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.

Statement of reasons

This Article is taken from Article 4 of the European Convention on Human Rights. The third paragraph of that Article, which indicates the cases in which labour is not regarded as forced or compulsory, has not been included. Although these definitions have not been included in the Charter, they retain their force in accordance with Article 6 of the TEU. This paragraph reads as follows:

"For the purpose of this Article the term "forced or compulsory labour" shall not include:

- (a) any work required to be done in the ordinary course of detention imposed according to the provisions of Article 5 of this Convention or during conditional release from such detention;*
- (b) any service of a military character or, in case of conscientious objections in countries where they are recognised, service exacted instead of compulsory military service;*
- (c) any service exacted in case of an emergency or calamity threatening the life or well-being of the community;*
- (d) any work or service which forms part of normal civic obligations."*

Article 6. Right to liberty and security

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in specific cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.

Statement of reasons

Article 5 of the European Convention on Human Rights defines the cases in which a person may be deprived of his liberty as follows:

"1. Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in the following cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law:

- (a) the lawful detention of a person after conviction by a competent court;*
- (b) the lawful arrest or detention of a person for non-compliance with the lawful order of a court or in order to secure the fulfilment of any obligation prescribed by law;*
- (c) the lawful arrest or detention of a person effected for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority on reasonable suspicion of having committed an offence or when it is reasonably considered necessary to prevent his committing an offence or fleeing after having done so;*
- (d) the detention of a minor by lawful order for the purpose of educational supervision or his lawful detention for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority;*
- (e) the lawful detention of persons for the prevention of the spreading of infectious diseases, of persons of unsound mind, alcoholics or drug addicts or vagrants;*

- (f) the lawful arrest or detention of a person to prevent his effecting an unauthorised entry into the country or of a person against whom action is being taken with a view to deportation or extradition.
2. Everyone who is arrested shall be informed promptly, in a language which he understands, of the reasons for his arrest and of any charge against him.
 3. Everyone arrested or detained in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1.c of this article shall be brought promptly before a judge or other officer authorised by law to exercise judicial power and shall be entitled to trial within a reasonable time or to release pending trial. Release may be conditioned by guarantees to appear for trial.
 4. Everyone who is deprived of his liberty by arrest or detention shall be entitled to take proceedings by which the lawfulness of his detention shall be decided speedily by a court and his release ordered if the detention is not lawful.
 5. Everyone who has been the victim of arrest or detention in contravention of the provisions of this article shall have an enforceable right to compensation."

The aim of Article 6 of the Charter is not to allow any cases of deprivation of liberty other than those authorised by the European Convention on Human Rights, as is indicated by the reference to specific cases. Insofar as the Charter applies within the Union, these rights should in particular be respected when, in accordance with Title VI of the Treaty on European Union, the Union adopts framework decisions for harmonisation in criminal matters.

Article 7. Right to an effective remedy

Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.

Statement of reasons

This Article reproduces Article 13 of the European Convention on Human Rights:

"Everyone whose rights and freedoms as set forth in this Convention are violated shall have an effective remedy before a national authority notwithstanding that the violation has been committed by persons acting in an official capacity."

The Court of Justice enshrined the principle in Community law in its judgment of 15 May 1986 (Johnston, Case 222/84, ECR I 651). According to the Court, this principle also applies to the Member States when they are implementing Community law. The inclusion of this precedent in the Charter is not intended to change the appeal system laid down by the Treaties, and particularly the rules relating to admissibility. This principle is to be implemented according to the procedures laid down in the Treaties: an action for annulment when the conditions for admissibility have been fulfilled or a preliminary ruling on admissibility when the case is brought before a national judge. The wording of the Article has been adapted to take account of the specific characteristics of the Union. Thus, reference to a national authority has been deleted, since the Charter applies only to institutions and organs of the Union and since, in this framework, an action may be brought either before the Community judge or before the national judge who is the common law judge as regards application of Community law. Accordingly, reference to a national authority has been replaced with reference to a court because the Court precedent refers to judicial protection.

Article 8. Right to a fair trial

Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. Free legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is indispensable to ensure the effectiveness of access to justice.

Statement of reasons

This Article follows Article 6(1) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

"In the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. Judgment shall be pronounced publicly but the press and public may be excluded from all or part of the trial in the interests of morals, public order or national security in a democratic society, where the interests of juveniles or the protection of the private life of the parties so require, or to the extent strictly necessary in the opinion of the court in special circumstances where publicity would prejudice the interests of justice."

The limitations have not been included, but they apply in the Charter framework pursuant to Article 6 of the TEU and the general clause on limitations which will appear in the Charter. It should be noted that in accordance with the case law of the European Court of Human Rights, provision should be made for legal aid where the absence of such aid would make it impossible to ensure an effective remedy (ECHR Judgment of 9.10.1979, Airey, Series A, Volume 32, 11). There is also a system of legal assistance for cases before the Court of Justice of the European Communities. That being so, it was deemed important to enshrine this principle in the Charter.

Article 9. Rights of the defence

Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law and has the right to respect of his rights to defence.

Statement of reasons

This Article is taken from Articles 5(2) and 5(3) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.*
- 3. Everyone charged with a criminal offence has the following minimum rights:*
- (a) to be informed promptly, in a language which he understands and in detail, of the nature and cause of the accusation against him;*
 - (b) to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence;*
 - (c) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or, if he has not sufficient means to pay for legal assistance, to be given it free when the interests of justice so require;*
 - (d) to examine or have examined witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him;*
 - (e) to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court."*

Given the decision taken in favour of concise drafting, it was not thought necessary to include this Article in full, but in accordance with Article 6 of the TEU these provisions, which clarify the principles set out in the Article of the Charter, are applicable in Community law.

Article 10. No punishment without law

- 1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national law, Union law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
- 2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of law recognised by democratic nations.

Statement of reasons

This Article follows the traditional principle of the non-retroactivity of laws and criminal sanctions. There has been added the principle of the retroactivity of a more lenient penal law which exists in a number of Member States and which features in Article 15 of the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. Article 7 of the European Convention on Human Rights is worded as follows:

- "1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed.*
- 2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of law recognised by civilised nations."*

In paragraph 2, the word "civilised" has simply been replaced by the more modern term "democratic"; this does not change in the meaning of this paragraph which refers to crimes against humanity.

Article 11. Right not to be tried or punished twice

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law.

Statement of reasons

Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the European Convention of Human Rights reads as follows:

- "1. No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings under the jurisdiction of the same State for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law and penal procedure of that State.*
- 2. The provisions of the preceding paragraph shall not prevent the reopening of the case in accordance with the law and the penal procedure of the State concerned, if there is evidence of new or newly discovered facts, or if there has been a fundamental defect in the previous proceedings, which could affect the outcome of the case.*
- 3. No derogation from this Article shall be made under Article 15 of the Convention."*

The wording of this Article is not intended to deprive paragraph 2 of the Article in Protocol No 7 of its legal effect, as that applies in Community law pursuant to Article 6 of the TEU. The "non bis in idem" principle applies in Community law (see an important precedent, the judgment of 5 May 1996, Cases 18/65 and 35/65, Gutmann v Commission [1966] ECR 150 and a recent case, the Court's decision of 20 April 1999, Joined Cases T-305/94 and others, Limburgse Vinyl Maatschappij NV v Commission, not yet published).

Article 12. Respect for private life

Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy, his honour, his home and the confidentiality of his communications.

Statement of reasons

This Article is based on Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence.*
- 2 There shall be no interference by a public authority with the exercise of this right except such as is in accordance with the law and is necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security, public safety or the economic well-being of the country, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others."*

The term "honour" has been added to the text of the Convention. It is taken from a number of national constitutions. "Communication" has replaced "correspondence" to take account of developments in means of communication. Respect for family life is covered by a separate Article. Paragraph 2 on limitations has not been included but it is applicable under Union law pursuant to Article 6 of the TEU and the clause on limitations in the Charter. A special Article will be given over to data protection. It is therefore not mentioned here.

Article 13. Family life

- 1. Everyone has the right to respect for his family life.
- 2. Everyone has the right to marry and to found a family, according to the laws of the Member States governing the exercise of this right.
- 3. Protection of the family on a legal, economic and social level shall be ensured.

Statement of reasons

The first paragraph of this Article is based on Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights and paragraph 2 on Article 12 of that Convention, which reads as follows:

"Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and to found a family according to the national laws governing the exercising of this right."

Reference to legislation as regards marital law is consistent with subsidiarity and with the diversity of national situations. Paragraph 3 applies to the Union when it adopts measures within its powers to take account of family protection needs. A specific Article will be given over to the rights of children.

Article 14. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion.

Statement of reasons

This wording reproduces Article 9 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; this right includes freedom to change his religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.*
- 2. Freedom to manifest one's religion or beliefs shall be subject only to such limitations as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of public safety, for the protection of public order, health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others."*

The fact that the Charter does not incorporate the limitations set out in paragraph 2 does not deprive those restrictions of their effects under Union law, pursuant both to Article 6 of the TEU and to the general clause on limitations contained in the Charter. The Court of Justice of the European Communities endorsed religious freedom in the Prais Case (Judgment of 27 October 1976, Case 130/75, ECR 1589). Given the decision in favour of concise drafting for the Charter, the implications of religious freedom have not been included, but this is not intended to deprive these provisions of their effect as they are only the implications of the general principle.

Article 15. Freedom of expression

- 1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.
- 2. Art, science and research shall be free of constraint.

Statement of reasons

This Article incorporates the principles of Article 10 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers. This article shall not prevent States from requiring the licensing of broadcasting, television or cinema enterprises.
2. The exercise of these freedoms, since it carries with it duties and responsibilities, may be subject to such formalities, conditions, restrictions or penalties as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society, in the interests of national security, territorial integrity or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, for the protection of the reputation or rights of others, for preventing the disclosure of information received in confidence, or for maintaining the authority and impartiality of the judiciary."

Paragraph 2 has not been included but it is applicable under Union law pursuant to Article 6 of the TEU and to the general clause on limitations included in the Charter. The Court of Justice has endorsed the principle of freedom of expression on several occasions, first and foremost in the ERT Judgment (Judgment of 18 June 1991, Case C-260/89, ECR I-5485).

The paragraph includes provisions contained in much national legislation. The European Court of Human Rights considers that artistic freedom is part of freedom of expression. The freedom of science and research is subject, as are all the other rights, to the respect of human dignity laid down in Article 1 of the Charter.

Article 16. Right to education

- 1. No person shall be denied the right to education, including in particular the right to receive free compulsory education.
- 2. The founding of educational establishments shall be free of constraint.
- 3. The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be guaranteed.

Statement of reasons

This Article is based on the common constitutional traditions of Member States and on Article 2 of the Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

"No person shall be denied the right to education. In the exercise of any functions which it assumes in relation to education and to teaching, the State shall respect the right of parents to ensure such education and teaching in conformity with their own religious and philosophical convictions."

It was considered useful to add the principle of free compulsory education. As it is worded, it merely implies that as regards compulsory education, each child has the possibility of attending an establishment which offers free education. It does not require all establishments which provide education, in particular private ones, to be free of charge. Insofar as the Charter applies to the Union, this means that in its training policies the Union must respect free compulsory education, but this does not, of course, create new powers. The principle of academic freedom is not included, but it constitutes both a structural principle of academic organisation and the guarantee of the freedom of expression in this area. The Charter in no way infringes this principle.

II. Horizontal articles

It has been acknowledged that it is essential for the Charter to contain a number of horizontal Articles to resolve the problems of its scope and limitations and relationships with the European Convention on Human Rights. It is proposed that the scope be dealt with in Article 1. As for the other matters, although they have not been the subject of specific discussions, they have been broached on several occasions in the course of the proceedings. The discussions have made it possible to clarify the clauses contained in CHARTE 4123/1/00 REV 1 CONVENT 5. However, these are still tentative texts which are not intended for discussion but which provide material for consideration, and which will be discussed subsequently.

The possible general clause on the scope of the Charter is set out in the statement of reasons for Article 1.

Article X. Limitations

Without prejudice to provisions affording more protection than this Charter or the European Convention on Human Rights, any limitation on respect for the rights and freedoms which it recognises must be provided for by the law. It must not infringe the essential content of the rights and freedoms in question and, subject to the principle of proportionality, remain within the limits necessary for the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society.

Statement of reasons

This provision, which sets out the principles relating to the limitations on guaranteed rights, has the effect of incorporating all the limitations laid down by the European Convention on Human Rights where those afford more protection than measures which might be taken on the basis of the general clause on limitations. According to the European Convention as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights, the term "law" must be understood in the material not the formal sense. It can cover sub-legislative, customary or case law standards. The law must be accessible and allow the individual to foresee the consequences of his behaviour (see especially the Hurvig judgment of 24 April 1990, paragraphs 28 et seq.).

Article Y. Level of protection

No provision of this Charter may be interpreted as placing restrictions on the protection afforded by the European Convention on Human Rights.

ENTWURF DER CHARTA DER GRUNDRECHTE DER EUROPÄISCHEN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brüssel, den 7. März 2000CHARTE 4150/00*CONTRIB 37*ÜBERMITTLUNGSVERMERK

Betr.: Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union

Finden Sie bitte nachstehend die Anmerkungen der deutschen Länder zur Aufzeichnung des Präsidiums. (Charte 4123/1/00 REV 1 Convent 5 - Vorschläge für die Artikel 1 bis 9).¹

¹ Dieser Text wurde nur in deutscher Sprache übermittelt.

FREISTAAT THÜRINGEN

Thüringer Staatskanzlei • Postfach 997 • 99021 Erfurt

Minister für Bundes- und
Europaangelegenheiten und
Chef der StaatskanzleiAn den
Vorsitzenden des Konvents
zur Ausarbeitung des Entwurfs
einer EU-Charta der Grundrechte
Herrn Bundespräsidenten a.D.
Prof. Dr. Roman Herzog
Sekretariat des KonventsFax 00322 285 7837
e-mail: Jean-Paul.Jacqué@consilium.eu.int

Geschäftszeichen:	Ihr Zeichen, Ihre Nachricht vom	Telefon	Datum
33/Wm, Fie		0361 / 37 92 831	.02.2000
<small>F:\encours\jacque\CharteArchives\DE\04150.d0</small>

Anmerkungen der deutschen Länder zur Aufzeichnung des Präsidiums Charte 4123/1/00 REV1 Convent 5
hier: Vorschläge für die Artikel 1 bis 9

Sehr geehrter Herr Vorsitzender,

zu den durch das Präsidium für die informelle Sitzung des Konvents am 24./25. Februar 2000 vorgelegten Vorschlägen für die Artikel 1 bis 9 eines Entwurfs der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union haben sich die deutschen Länder im Rahmen ihrer Abstimmungsgespräche ein erstes Meinungsbild verschafft. Ich erlaube mir, Ihnen diese erste Einschätzung zu übermitteln und möchte Sie herzlich bitten, unsere Anregungen im Verlaufe der Diskussion im Konvent zu berücksichtigen.

Ich bitte um Ihr Verständnis, dass auf Grund unverhersehbarer anderweitiger politischer Termine weder ich noch mein Vertreter, Herr Dr. Weber, an der kommenden informellen Sitzung des Konvents teilnehmen können.

Mit freundlichen Grüßen

Jürgen Gnauck
Minister

Thüringer Staatskanzlei
Referat 33

23. Februar 2000

Erstes Meinungsbild der Länderarbeitsgruppe zur Erarbeitung eines Entwurfs der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union
zum Dokument
Charte 4123/1/00 REV 1 CONVENT 5 (Stand 15. Februar 2000)

Die Arbeitsgruppe der deutschen Länder hat am 22. Februar 2000 das o.g. Dokument einer ersten Prüfung unterzogen und erlaubt sich dazu folgende Anmerkungen:

Generell wurde kritisch angemerkt, dass sich die Artikelabfolge streng an dem Aufbau der EMRK orientiert. Bezüglich der Artikelabfolge wäre jedoch besonderes Augenmerk auf die Wertigkeit der Regelungsinhalte zu legen.

Zu Artikel 1: Die Würde des Menschen

Absatz 1:

Hier wurde im Länderkreis bereits die Frage nach dem persönlichen und sachlichen Anwendungsbereich der Charta aufgeworfen und festgestellt, dass u.U. an dieser Stelle eine entsprechende Aussage getroffen werden müsste.

Absatz 2:

Die Integration dieser Passage in Artikel 2 des Entwurfs erscheint überlegenswert. Ausserdem stellt sich die Frage nach dem Zusammenhang des sog. "kleinen Asylrechts" zur Formulierung "unmenschliche Behandlung".

Absatz 3:

Sollte als eigenständige Norm formuliert werden. Problematisch erscheint die Interpretation des Begriffs "Zwangs- und Pflichtarbeit" unter dem Gesichtspunkt, dass in einigen Ländern das Landesrecht die Verpflichtung zu sog. "Hand- und Spanndiensten" enthält. Auch unter dem Stichwort "Arbeit statt Strafe" erscheint die derzeitige Formulierung des Abs. 3 zu unpräzise.

Zu Artikel 2: Recht auf Leben

Absatz 2-4:

Aus Ländersicht bestehen grundsätzliche Bedenken zu den vorgeschlagenen bioethischen Formulierungen. Dies betrifft insbesondere den Alternativentwurf zu Absatz 2. Insgesamt erscheint der Einstieg in die Problematik zu intensiv und nicht ausgewogen. So wird z.B. die Problematik der Nichteinwilligungsfähigkeit oder die Frage der gewinnbringenden Vertreibung von Blutplasma nicht angeschnitten. Grundsätzlich erscheinen die Ausführungen der Alternativformulierung zu Absatz 2 nicht ausgewogen.

Unabhängig davon stellt sich die Frage, ob die Materie nicht besser sekundärrechtlich zu regeln ist. Die Arbeitsgruppe der Länder spricht sich jedenfalls gegen die Aufnahme der Alternativformulierung in den Entwurf aus.

Absatz 3:

Sollte wie folgt gefasst werden:

”Niemand darf zum Tode verurteilt oder hingerichtet werden.”

Zu Artikel 3: Freiheit und Sicherheit

Absatz 1:

Der Begriff ”Sicherheit” erscheint noch interpretationsbedürftig zu sein. Ist er im Licht des EGV zu sehen oder eröffnet die Formulierung weitergehende Ansprüche gegenüber den Nationalstaaten insbesondere in den Bereichen Justiz und Inneres? Eine Harmonisierung des in den Mitgliedstaaten diesbezüglich geltenden Rechts wird abgelehnt. Für den Bereich der Schutz- und Abwehrrechte wird die Vollständigkeit des Grundrechtskatalogs unterstützt, nicht aber bei derivativen oder originären Leistungsrechten in den genannten Bereichen.

Sollte ”Sicherheit” i.S. eines Willkürverbots gemeint sein, bestehen keine Bedenken.

Absätze 2-5:

Erscheinen insgesamt zu detailliert. Die Länder melden hierzu weiteren Prüfbedarf an.

In Absatz 2 wäre in Anlehnung an die EMRK wohl besser von ”Freiheitsentzug” zu sprechen.

Bezüglich Absatz 3 wird darauf hingewiesen, dass ”hinreichender Verdacht” nicht identisch ist mit dem im deutschen Recht enthaltenen Begriff des ”dringenden Tatverdachts”.

Die ”Haftentlassung während des Verfahrens” ist eine Rechtsfolge und muss daher an dieser Stelle nicht erwähnt werden.

Absatz 5:

Hier stellt sich die Frage, ob dies nicht Regelungsmaterie des Sekundärrechts sein sollte.

Ausserdem wäre der Begriff ”Entschädigung” dem Begriff ”Schadensersatz” vorzuziehen.

Zu Artikel 4: Recht auf ein wirksames Verfahren

Handelt es sich hier um Rechte, die der Charta entspringen oder insgesamt um alle innerhalb der Mitgliedstaaten der EU verbrieften Rechte? Angeregt wird ausserdem, vom einem ”fairen oder gerechten” Verfahren zu sprechen.

Zu Artikel 5: Recht auf ein gerechtes Verfahren

Absatz 1:

Vorgeschlagen wird, die Worte ”in billiger Weise” zu ersetzen durch das Wort ”angemessen”.

Desweiteren stellt sich die Frage, ob nicht ähnlich wie in Art. 6 Abs. 1 Satz 2 EMRK unter den dort genannten Gründen von einer öffentlichen Verhandlung abgesehen werden sollte, da die dort aufgeführten berechtigten Interessen Dritter und Umständen auch die des Angeklagten dem Anspruch auf eine öffentliche Verhandlung entgegenstehen könnten.

Absatz 2:

Hier sollte der Zugang zum Recht "garantiert" werden.

Absatz 3 a)-d):

Erscheint insgesamt zu detailliert. Ausserdem sollte in Ziffer a) besser von einer Unschuldsvermutung ausgegangen werden.

Zu Artikel 6: Nullum crimen sine lege

Interpretationsbedarf besteht hier hinsichtlich des Begriffs "dem Gesetz". Ist hier das inländische bzw. internationale Recht gemeint?

Zu Artikel 7: Ne bis in idem

Ist diese Norm auf den jeweiligen Nationalstaat zu beziehen oder soll sie auf die gesamte EU ausgedehnt werden? Letzteres entspräche nicht der deutschen Sicht, die davon ausgeht, dass sich der Grundsatz "ne bis in idem" nur auf den betroffenen Staat bezieht. Ansonsten würde sich der Grundsatz des Strafklageverbrauchs auf die gesamte EU erstrecken.

Zu Artikel 8: Achtung des Privat- und Familienlebens

Die Bestimmung muss entzerrt werden.

Absatz 1:

Besser wäre anstatt von "Identität" von "Persönlichkeit" zu sprechen oder wird hier auf die genetische Identität angespielt?

Absatz 2:

Sollte als eigenständige Bestimmung aufgenommen werden, wobei der Bereich des Familienlebens eher zu Artikel 9 gehört, während der übrige rechtliche Regelungsgehalt des Absatzes eigenständig bestehen sollte. Vorgeschlagen wird angesichts der dynamischen Entwicklung von Übertragungsmedien von "Mitteilungen" zu sprechen, anstatt auf den Post- und Fernmeldeverkehrs abzustellen. Grundsätzlich wird vorgeschlagen auf die "Unverletzlichkeit" der genannten Schutzbereiche abzustellen und nicht von "Gewährleistung" zu sprechen.

Zu Artikel 9: Familienleben

Von der Aufnahme dieses Artikels in den Chartaentwurf ist abzusehen, da dies sekundärrechtlich zu regeln ist und keine weiteren Kompetenzen der EU eröffnet werden sollen.

Zu den aufgeworfenen Querschnittsfragen haben sich die deutschen Länder grundsätzlich bereits erstmals im Beschluss der Europaminister vom 2./3. Dezember 2000 geäußert, der Beschluss ist in Anlage beigefügt.

24. Europaministerkonferenz der Länder am 2./3. Dezember 1999 in Frankfurt / Main

Beschluß

TOP 5 Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union

Berichterstatter: Niedersachsen, Sachsen

1. Die Europaminister- und senatoren begrüßen die Initiative des Europäischen Rates von Köln im Juni 1999, durch ein zu diesem Zweck einzurichtendes Gremium eine Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union erarbeiten zu lassen. Sie würdigen die unmittelbar nach der Beschlussfassung des Europäischen Rates von der Bundesregierung eingeleitete Beteiligung der Länder an den Vorbereitungsarbeiten. Durch die Teilnahme von Vertretern der Länder im Europäischen Grundrechtsgremium, das am 17.12.1999 seine Arbeit aufnehmen wird, werden auch die Erfahrungen und Auffassungen der Länder in die Grundrechtarbeit auf europäischer Ebene einfließen können.
2. Grundrechte stellen die Personen und deren zu schützenden Lebensbereich, insbesondere politischer, wirtschaftlicher, sozialer und kultureller Art, in den Mittelpunkt. Mit einer Charta der Grundrechte bekennen sich die Mitgliedstaaten und die beteiligten Organe und Institutionen der Europäischen Union dazu, den europäischen Einigungsprozess auch weiterhin zum Wohle und im Interesse der Bürger zu gestalten und jedes Handeln der Europäischen Union an diesem Wertfundament zu messen. Eine in sich geschlossene und verständliche Darstellung der europäischen Grundrechte ist daher ein wichtiger Schritt zu einem wirklichen Europa der Bürger.
3. Grundrechte sind Ausdruck grundlegender gemeinsamer Werte- und Rechtsüberzeugungen innerhalb der Europäischen Union. Eine Grundrechtecharta trägt zur weiteren Identitätsbildung der Europäischen Union bei und vermittelt eine klare Orientierung für Beitrittskandidaten.
4. Grundrechte der Europäischen Union sollen zuerst ihre eigenen Organe und Institutionen binden. Bei der Umsetzung und Durchführung der gemeinschaftsrechtlichen Regelungen haben aber auch die Mitgliedstaaten und ihre Gliederungen die Erfordernisse des Grundrechtsschutzes in der Gemeinschaftsrechtsordnung zu berücksichtigen. Eine Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union ist geeignet, innerhalb ihres Anwendungsbereichs das einheitliche Verständnis der Grundrechte im Gemeinschaftsrecht zu fördern.

5. Die Europaminister und –senatoren der Länder unterstreichen die ungeschmälerte Wirkung und Bedeutung der in den nationalen Verfassungen verbrieften Grundrechte. Eine Charta soll nicht einer Harmonisierung der in den Mitgliedstaaten und in den Ländern und Regionen geltenden Grundrechte dienen. Die Europäische Union muß auch in Zukunft die Bedeutung und Traditionen nationaler und internationaler Verbriefungen von Grundrechten mit ihren Besonderheiten achten und respektieren. Insbesondere die Bindung der Mitgliedstaaten an die Europäische Menschenrechtskonvention und der Rechtsweg zum Europäischen Gerichtshof für Menschenrechte müssen unberührt bleiben
6. Die Europäische Grundrechtecharta wird unmittelbare rechtliche Wirkung erst mit einer späteren förmlichen Einbeziehung in das Vertragswerk nach dem Verfahren des Art. 48 EUV erhalten. Die vorgesehene feierliche Erklärung Ende 2000 ist ein förderlicher Schritt hierzu. Die inhaltlichen Beratungen müssen sich deshalb von Anfang an mit allen rechtlichen Auswirkungen einer Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union befassen. Die Europaminister und –senatoren bekräftigen, dass mit Blick auf die angestrebte Integration der Charta in das Vertragswerk nur solche Inhalte aufgenommen werden dürfen, die später auch bindende Wirkung entfalten können. Aus diesem Grund darf es keine Aufnahme von politischen Handlungszielen in die Charta geben.
7. Eine Charta der Grundrechte verstärkt die rechtstaatliche Bindung und Begrenzung der Ausübung öffentlicher Gewalt in der Europäischen Union. Die Europaminister und –senatoren betonen, dass mit der Ausformulierung einer europäischen Grundrechtecharta das in Art. 5 EU-Vertrag und Art. 5 Abs. 1 EG-Vertrag verankerte Prinzip der begrenzten Einzelermächtigung unangetastet bleiben muß. Die Aufnahme einer Charta der Grundrechte in das Gemeinschaftsrecht darf nicht den bestehenden Anwendungsbereich des Gemeinschaftsrechts erweitern. Bei der Gestaltung und Ausformulierung der einzelnen Rechte ist daher strikt darauf zu achten, dass ihnen nicht neue Handlungsermächtigungen für Organe und Institutionen der Europäischen Union zu entnehmen sind.

Protokollnotiz von Bayern, Brandenburg und Sachsen:

Die Länder Bayern, Brandenburg und Sachsen weisen darauf hin, dass eine präzisere Kompetenzabgrenzung das mit der Grundrechtecharta verbundene Risiko einer Ausdehnung der EU-Zuständigkeiten verringern würde.

8. Die Europaminister und –senatoren verbinden mit der auszuarbeitenden Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union die vorstehenden Eckwerte, die entsprechend dem Arbeitsfortschritt im Grundrechtgremium unter Beteiligung aller betroffenen Fachpolitikbereiche weiterentwickelt und konkretisiert werden sollten. Sie bitten deshalb das Vorsitzland, baldmöglichst den Bundesrat auf der Grundlage dieses Beschlusses zu befassen.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 7 March 2000CHARTE 4151/00*CONTRIB 38*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a letter sent by Mr. Buttiglione, member of the European Parliament, to Mr. Herzog, President of the Convention. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English only.

Bruxelles, 20 February 2000

Dear Mr. President,

One fundamental right of the human person, that we want to see affirmed in our European Charter of Human Rights and Duties, is the right not to be discriminated because of one's nationality, of one's race, of one's sex, of one's religion or philosophical belief and of the colour of one's skin.

Discrimination on this basis is a grave offence against human rights, denies to some men a full participation in the human community and not only hinders the full development of the personality of the person who is the object of discrimination but also impoverishes the whole society in which the person is discriminated depriving it of the creative and constructive contribution of this person.

Discrimination denies the fundamental unity of the human family and the fundamental equality of all men.

There is however in these last years a certain cultural propensity to enlarge the catalogue of the causes of discrimination that should be rejected and considered illegal. There are even some philosophers who consider discrimination to be an evil in itself, reject therefore all kind of discrimination and consider even discrimination to be the only possible evil.

I think that this is going too far.

Even if in the every day use of the word discrimination acquired the meaning of bad or negative discrimination the original meaning of to discriminate, resulting also from its etymology, is to make distinction. In this sense it does not contradict the principle of equality that prescribes that the same situations should be treated in the same way but prescribes also that different situations should be treated in different ways. So to discriminate between situations that are essentially different does not imply any violation of human rights. Where an essential or pertinent difference is present it would be a violation of human rights not to take into account, not to consider it and to treat different situations as if they were equal. So in this case it is only correct to treat a man who is blind in a way that is different from that in which we treat a man who enjoys the full vision of both his eyes. To support the blind with some kind of public support constitutes a positive discrimination that does not violate the rights of the not blind.

In the same way a man and a woman who bind themselves with a vow of marriage, give birth to a certain number of children, provide for their nourishment and education and are taken care of by them in their old age, exercise a positive social function that provides a fundamental pre/condition for the very existence of society.

It is therefore only correct that the legislation should defend the rights of the family, recognise its social function and provide different kinds of encouragement to the foundation of family and of support to existing families.

The refuse of all discriminations, if taken at face value, would imply an absolute moral relativism that considers any form of behaviour to be equal to any other, and we should therefore be obliged to treat in the same way the killer and the victim, the robber and the robbed or the healthy and the sick and so forth. The principle of non discrimination in the larger sense would imply a renunciation to passing not only any value judgement but also any functional judgement and any judgement in general because to judge means exactly the same as to discriminate: to make distinction in order to treat different state of affairs in different and appropriate forms.

For the above mentioned reasons we must be very careful when confronted with proposal to enlarge the traditional catalogue of prohibitions of discriminations. The question we should consider before we decide whether a discrimination is legitimate or not is whether differences between two state of affairs justify the fact that they are not treated in the same way.

There is today an important pressure to add to the traditional catalogue of condemned discrimination the discrimination because of one's sexual preference. I think that on this point we should be very careful. What does "sexual preference" really mean? First of all it means that our sex (masculine or feminine), the fact of being males or females, is not a natural condition but rather the object of a cultural determination or of an individual decision through which we make a decision of being males or females. It cannot however be denied that we have a body that, as a rule and with very few exceptions, is either a male or a female body. If we decide to be a female, but we have a male body, we cannot give to our male body female character, we cannot become pregnant, we cannot bear children. What we can do is to practice a homosexual lifestyle.

This is not the appropriate place to discuss the causes of homosexuality. We are only concerned with the social role and significance of homosexual behaviour. Shall we say that here we have something similar to being a male or a female and that therefore we have a particular right to non discrimination? It is clear that nobody should be discriminated because of what he does and because of his sexual preference within his private sphere, in so far as adult and consenting human being are involved and no violence is exercised and no damage is inflicted.

We have here a general and broad protection of the right to privacy that includes within its borders also the defence of homosexual behaviour within the private sphere. This is what is generally meant with the expression toleration of homosexuality. This implies that no human being should be punished, persecuted, offended or discriminated just for practising homosexuality. If this is the aim we want to pursue, than we need not affirming a particular right to non discrimination on the basis of sexual preference. The defence of the right to sexual preference is contained in the defence of the right to privacy and the right to sexual preference is a specification and determination of the general right to privacy. Another interpretation is however possible of the right to non discrimination on the basis of sexual preference. This interpretation transforms the aforementioned right into right to affirmative action in the public sphere. Affirmative action means that homosexuality as such is a life style that has a right to public expression and is a vested interest that must be considered and protected as such. There is a great difference between the recognition and the respect of the rights of the homosexual individual, that is of the human being who happens to be a homosexual, and the affirmation of the rights of homosexuality as such.

If we recognise the rights of homosexuality as a lifestyle we might be confronted with the demand that children be exposed in their teens, when their sexual identity is being formed, to homosexual influence with a presentation of homosexuality as sexual preference or sexual lifestyle equally legitimate as heterosexuality.

Homosexual couples could demand the same rights as married ones. It seems that this would be unreasonable because heterosexual married couples have a social function, that of procreating new human beings and educating them as citizens, that of creating a bond of vertical solidarity among the generations and a bond of horizontal solidarity among brothers, sisters, siblings and so forth. This is the reason why the family is the fundamental cell of society that deserves to be encouraged and supported by the state, because if the family decays and disappears the very existence of the broader communities like the state might be endangered.

The family is a community that has a right to existence and protection in the public sphere and the same is true for the heterosexual lifestyle upon which procreation and family life is based. There is no reason to recognise the same right to homosexual couples who do not perform the same reproductive and educational function.

It is reasonable that the taxpayer should accept an additional burden to help traditional families because in his old age he will be assisted with the recourses created through the work and the contributions of the sons and daughters born to life in the families. The partners in a homosexual couple may regulate their reciprocal relations through the instruments of the civil law, they have no children that may compel one of the partners to renounce completely or only in part to a professional career causing a justified claim to particular protection. In the case of a homosexual partnership we have two individuals who live together and have a right to non interference but no right to public support.

It is not difficult to imagine other cases in which relevant differences in fact may justify relevant differences in treatment. I shall mention only the difficult problem of the protection of local identities, of specific relations between a culture and a territory that may deserve to be preserved in the framework of a right of local communities to identity and culture.

But on this point I shall take the liberty of sending you perhaps another letter.

With best regards,

yours truly

Rocco Buttiglione

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 7 mars 2000CHARTE 4152/00*CONTRIB 39*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-après une contribution de M. José Barros Moura, représentant du Parlement du Portugal. ¹

¹ Ce text a été soumis seulement en langue française.

PRÉFACE

L'État européen est un État social, et cela bien avant que les États ne s'intègrent dans l'Union. Ils ont tous apporté avec eux le sens de la responsabilité de collectivité face aux besoins des citoyens. Quoique, dans l'histoire de chaque pays, des cheminements spécifiques aient conduit à des formes différentes dans l'exercice de cette responsabilité, dans tous les États de l'Union, les droits sociaux sont, à des degrés différents sans doute, respectés, défendus et promus. D'où un espace commun qui a déjà une dimension sociale.

Le comité estime que le moment est venu de rassembler ce qui, dans ce volet social, est déjà codifié et, simultanément, d'entamer le processus vers la codification de ce qui, dans cet espace commun, correspond aux aspirations et aux besoins des Européens. Certes, L'État social est aujourd'hui sous attaque et nettement en crise, mais cela ne veut pas dire qu'il faille renoncer à ses principes. Au contraire, il faut trouver des conditions nouvelles pour le repenser, car il est l'expression du «souci de l'autre», de la valorisation des ressources humaines, et, de ce fait, dynamisateur, en profondeur, de la compétitivité à visage humain.

Si «modèle social européen» il y a, c'est aussi au niveau de la mise en commun des expériences des différents systèmes nationaux que de nouvelles percées pourront être trouvées. C'est dire que la réflexion sur les droits sociaux et leur mise en œuvre dans les conditions du monde d'aujourd'hui doivent avoir la place qui leur revient dans l'édifice de l'Union européenne.

La mise en œuvre du marché unique, s'achevant dans l'Union économique et monétaire, constitue un objectif cible qui a conduit à la mobilisation et à la réorganisation des acteurs économiques des pays de l'Union européenne. De même, le déclenchement ferme d'un processus conduisant à l'union sociale européenne deviendra un objectif capable de faire progresser la construction de l'Union.

L'urgence est là: à la fois interne et externe. Interne parce qu'il s'agit de la sécurité de la vie des Européens qu'il faut assurer face aux questions posées par le phénomène persistant qu'est la rareté du travail ainsi que face aux nouvelles données démographiques. Urgence externe aussi parce que la position économique de l'Union dans le marché mondial ainsi que l'efficacité de notre aide au développement passe avant tout par la possibilité d'offrir de nouveaux «modèles» qui permettent à chaque pays de trouver ses propres voies pour une société à la fois de progrès économique et de justice sociale.

La question sociale, qui, au début de l'industrialisation, s'exprimait surtout dans les rapports capital-travail, s'est enrichie. Y ont contribué, à la fois, le changement radical des composantes de la production et l'émergence de droits sociaux couvrant pratiquement tous les aspects des conditions de vie des personnes. Droits civiques et droits sociaux deviennent interdépendants. Dans la tradition européenne, les droits sociaux et les droits civiques sont inséparables. C'est «la liberté et les conditions de la liberté», c'est le visage en miroir de «démocratie et développement».

La citoyenneté y apparaît en clair. C'est dire que, en posant la question des droits sociaux, nous touchons d'emblée à tout l'ensemble des droits qui s'expriment dans la «citoyenneté». Approfondir cette citoyenneté dans le cadre de l'Union ne pourra être, pour chaque pays, qu'une occasion d'aller plus loin dans sa propre citoyenneté.

Car, si l'évolution des droits sociaux dans les pays de l'Union oblige celle-ci à faire un pas décisif dans sa construction, ce n'est que dans le cadre de ses compétences que sa responsabilité s'exprimera. Plus qu'ailleurs, les droits sociaux épousent le diversifié, le multiple dans l'espace de l'Union: les responsabilités des États membres en sortent renforcées.

À travers l'histoire de l'Union, la citoyenneté a graduellement pris corps. Une étape juridique importante a été consignée dans le traité de Maastricht. Mais l'Union pratique déjà le respect et la promotion de la dimension sociale de la citoyenneté. Le Parlement et la Commission y ont posé des jalons, le premier à travers ses propositions concernant les droits fondamentaux (1989-1996), la deuxième à travers les différents volets de politiques sociales qu'elle stimule ou coordonne, et surtout par la charte sociale, dont l'initiative lui revient.

Ces droits sociaux qui s'enchevêtrent avec les droits civiques et qui explicitent la citoyenneté ne peuvent avoir, aux yeux du comité, qu'une suite: la proposition d'un «bill of rights» doit devenir une cible importante dans l'évolution de l'Union. C'est pourquoi le comité propose, dans une première étape, c'est-à-dire pendant la prochaine conférence intergouvernementale, que soient intégrés des droits fondamentaux sociaux et civiques dans le traité et que soit ainsi rendu explicite l'engagement de l'Union dans la formulation d'un «bill of rights qui puisse nous guider à l'aube du XXI siècle.

Une fois ces propositions incluses dans le traité, le comité recommande que ce travail s'achève au cours d'une seconde étape qu'il considère d'une importance capitale pour le futur de l'Union: il s'agit de parfaire le «bill of rights» encore embryonnaire. Par l'intérêt immédiat et direct qu'un tel processus peut susciter il dynamisera l'engagement des citoyens européens, des groupes sociaux et économiques, bref de la société civile de tous les pays de l'Union.

Ainsi, pour le comité, le défi actuel ne consiste pas uniquement à amender, dans le domaine qui lui revient, telle ou telle disposition des traités. Il s'agit d'un autre souffle, d'une autre ampleur. Il s'agit d'une véritable refondation de l'Union européenne. Relever ce défi est l'exigence du temps présent et la garantie d'un nouvel éveil des Européens à leur appartenance, en tant que citoyens, à l'Union.

Le travail de ce comité a été, pour sa présidente, une occasion enrichissante de vivre une telle appartenance. Dans un délai extrêmement court — le Comité a tenu sa première réunion en octobre 1995 et la dernière en février 1996 —, les membres du comité ont été capables d'exprimer leur conscience de citoyens européens, et cela non pas en dépit de leurs expressions nationales, mais exactement à partir d'elles et de leur richesse propre. L'intérêt qu'ils ont porté à notre tâche, les compétences qu'ils ont mises à la disposition du comité et leur contribution pendant et entre les sessions de travail donnent la mesure de ce que l'on peut faire si l'on tient vraiment à l'Europe.

Mais cela n'aurait pas été possible sans les qualités exceptionnelles — de talent, de savoir interdisciplinaire, de dévouement et d'écoute intelligente à toute suggestion — du rapporteur. L'équipe du secrétariat de la DG V a été un soutien compétent et efficace dans l'accomplissement de la mission du comité.

À tous, je veux témoigner publiquement ma reconnaissance, en avouant le plaisir que j'ai eu à travailler avec de tels collaborateurs.

Maria de Lourdes Pintasilgo

PROPOSITIONS DU COMITÉ DES SAGES ■

- I. Engager une réflexion d'ensemble en Europe sur nos conceptions du travail, de l'activité et de l'emploi afin que nos politiques soient en mesure d'assurer à chacun la place qui lui est due dans la société.
- II. Préciser les modalités d'une rénovation de notre État providence afin qu'il devienne un meilleur atout de compétitivité et de cohésion sociale et favorise la pleine activité de chacun.
- III. Faciliter la mise en œuvre de politiques permettant aussi bien aux hommes qu'aux femmes de concilier les responsabilités familiales et les responsabilités professionnelles.
- IV. Approfondir les conditions d'émergence d'une nouvelle génération de droits civiques et sociaux tenant compte, notamment, des changements technologiques, des progrès des connaissances en matière d'environnement et des changements démographiques.
- V. Renforcer la citoyenneté et la démocratie dans l'Union en traitant de façon indivisible les droits civiques et les droits sociaux.
- VI. Préciser les motifs et les modalités de l'intervention de l'Union en matière sociale, conformément aux principes de subsidiarité et de proportionnalité.
- VII. Franchir lors de la prochaine conférence intergouvernementale, une première étape, en inscrivant dans les traités un socle de droits civiques et sociaux fondamentaux («bill of rights»), en précisant ceux qui bénéficient d'une protection juridictionnelle immédiate et ceux qui ont un caractère plus programmatique et qui seront approfondis dans une deuxième étape (voir proposition n° XIII). Tous ces droits seraient ouverts aux citoyens de l'Union. Certains de ces droits pourraient également bénéficier, dans les conditions appropriées, aux citoyens des pays tiers.

- VIII. Inclure parmi les droits mentionnés dans la proposition n° VII l'interdiction de toute discrimination fondée notamment sur la race, la couleur, le sexe, la langue, la religion, les opinions politiques ou toutes autres opinions, l'origine nationale ou sociale, l'appartenance à une minorité nationale, la fortune, la naissance, le handicap ou toute autre situation.
- IX. Par exception, poser le principe selon lequel chaque État doit mettre en place, dans les conditions fixées par lui, un revenu minimal pour les personnes qui ne parviennent pas à accéder à un emploi rémunéré et qui ne bénéficient pas d'autres sources de revenu.
- X. Regrouper en un seul traité, avec numérotation continue des articles, l'ensemble des textes existants.
- XI. Donner des bases juridiques plus solides à la Cour de justice en étendant aux pactes internationaux signés par les États membres les références juridiques auxquelles la Cour se réfère au titre de l'article F et en levant les restrictions de l'article L.
- XII. Plutôt que d'adhérer à la convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales, du 4 novembre 1950, instaurer un recours spécial pour la protection des droits fondamentaux qui serait attribué à une juridiction d'appel propre à l'Union et composée de juges non permanents provenant des tribunaux constitutionnels ou supérieurs des États membres.
- XIII. Prévoir dans le nouveau traité un article qui engage un processus large et démocratique d'élaboration collective, au niveau de l'Union, d'une liste complète des droits et des devoirs civiques et sociaux. Lancé par le Parlement européen sur proposition de la Commission, ce processus, auquel les parlements nationaux doivent être étroitement associés et auquel participeraient non seulement les partenaires sociaux traditionnels, mais aussi les organisations non gouvernementales, devrait déboucher dans les cinq ans sur une nouvelle conférence intergouvernementale.

- XIV. Regrouper l'ensemble des dispositions concernant les politiques sociales, et notamment le protocole social, dans un titre unique du traité.
- XV. Appliquer la règle de la majorité qualifiée dans le domaine social, à l'exception de quelques domaines sensibles (protection sociale, participation).
- XVI. Reconnaître explicitement, dans le traité, le rôle de partenaire des nouveaux acteurs collectifs qui agissent dans la société civile.
- XVII. Mettre en place un statut d'association de droit européen.
- XVIII. Élargir les conditions d'éligibilité des fonds structurels en leur permettant de mener des actions de promotion des droits sociaux fondamentaux.
- XIX. Poser le principe que toute politique européenne doit faire l'objet d'une étude d'impact en termes de cohésion sociale.
- XX. Inclure dans le traité un chapitre sur l'emploi légitimant une action de coordination de l'Union conforme aux principes de subsidiarité et de proportionnalité.
- XXI. Prévoir explicitement la possibilité pour l'Union de mener des actions de coordination et d'expérimentation dans le domaine de la lutte contre l'exclusion sociale.
- XXII. Faire entrer dans le domaine communautaire les politiques d'immigration et d'asile ainsi que les politiques d'entrée, de circulation et de séjour qui concernent les citoyens de pays tiers.
- XXIII. Faire également entrer dans le domaine communautaire les politiques concernant la drogue.
- XXIV. Préciser le concept de service d'utilité publique dans la mesure où ces services de base conditionnent l'exercice de certains droits sociaux.

- XXV. Lancer un programme de travail dans le domaine de la politique sociale européenne et faire apparaître les coûts de la non-Europe sociale.
- XXVI. Constituer des séries statistiques sociales portant sur l'ensemble de l'Union.

RESUMÉ

Dans son deuxième programme d'action sociale (avril 1995), la Commission a prévu la mise en place d'un comité des Sages destiné, notamment, à examiner les suites susceptibles d'être réservées à la charte communautaire des droits sociaux des travailleurs dans le cadre de la révision des traités de l'Union européenne.

Si, pour répondre pleinement à sa mission, le comité a souhaité élargir le champ de sa réflexion, c'est qu'il a eu le sentiment que l'Europe était, plus qu'elle ne le croit elle-même, en péril et que le déficit social actuellement constaté était, pour elle, lourd de menaces. L'Europe ne se construira pas sur fond de chômage et d'exclusion ni sur un déficit de citoyenneté. L'Europe sera l'Europe de tous, de tous ses citoyens, ou ne sera pas.

I — Les questions sociales sont désormais au cœur des défis auxquels la construction européenne doit répondre

1. L'Union européenne doit affirmer plus nettement son identité

Si elle entend devenir une entité politique originale, elle ne pourra faire l'économie d'une définition claire de la citoyenneté qu'elle offre à ses participants. L'inclusion dans les traités de droits, tant civiques que sociaux, pourrait permettre de nourrir cette citoyenneté et de diminuer la perception d'une Europe élaborée par des élites technocratiques insuffisamment proches des préoccupations quotidiennes. Il ne serait pas inutile de rappeler que le progrès économique n'est qu'un moyen et que le but de l'Union c'est de permettre à chaque citoyen de réaliser son développement potentiel personnel en liaison avec ses semblables et en tenant compte de la nécessaire solidarité avec les générations futures.

2. Le défi de l'emploi ne sera pas relevé sans un renouvellement important de nos politiques, qui doivent être plus actives et plus efficaces, mais aussi de nos conceptions du travail et de l'activité.

Si l'Europe refuse à la fois l'aggravation des inégalités et de la marginalisation sociale et la généralisation des politiques d'assistance passive destinées aux personnes en situation d'exclusion, elle devra faire un effort considérable d'innovation, d'organisation et de mobilisation pour construire un mode de développement où chacun aura sa place. Il faudra développer une conception active de la citoyenneté, où chacun acceptera d'avoir des obligations envers autrui. Il faudra renouveler assez profondément nos politiques publiques, qui doivent prévenir autant que guérir, et inciter à l'effort plutôt qu'assister.

De façon plus générale, c'est notre conception même du travail qui doit changer et s'élargir; le modèle du travail à plein temps, déjà altéré par le chômage et les emplois atypiques, subis plus que voulus, évoluera vers des schémas où des périodes d'activités rémunérées alterneront ou se conjugueront avec des phases de formation ou de temps libre, la continuité entre les phases devant être assurée avec un minimum de ruptures; le travail rémunéré monopolisera moins le champ de l'activité sociale légitime; d'autres types d'activités, le plus souvent non rémunérées, prendront une importance sociale plus grande et verront leur rôle reconnu et soutenu par la collectivité. Entre toutes ces formes d'activité et de travail, des relations se noueront, qui peuvent constituer un grand enrichissement collectif si elles sont convenablement maîtrisées et si elles n'entraînent pas de précarité pour les personnes. Un dispositif de sécurité économique et de maîtrise par chacun de son développement personnel reste à construire, la flexibilité sociale au profit des personnes jouant un rôle de contrepoids vis-à-vis de la flexibilité économique.

3. La construction d'un modèle social rénové original constitue également un atout pour la compétitivité économique européenne.

Dans l'économie mondialisée que nous connaissons actuellement, la compétitivité est un impératif catégorique qui ne saurait être éludé. Mais celle-ci n'implique pas le démantèlement du welfare state ou la réduction des minimums sociaux. Elle nous oblige, en revanche, à changer et à rénover notre système social: en diminuant le poids des charges sociales qui pèsent sur le travail; en développant les droits sociaux, telle la formation, qui facilitent les productions à forte valeur ajoutée; en faisant d'un dialogue social européen renouvelé un levier de compétitivité; en répondant de façon coordonnée au choc démographique, ce qui doit conduire à adapter les régimes de retraite de base et à mettre en œuvre des politiques permettant, aussi bien aux hommes qu'aux femmes de concilier les responsabilités familiales et les responsabilités professionnelles; en s'attaquant aux différentes formes d'exclusion sociale, grâce à des politiques innovantes, plus personnalisées et s'articulant efficacement avec les organisations non gouvernementales; en prenant en compte les questions d'environnement.

4. Les défis de l'élargissement et de la mondialisation concernent aussi les questions sociales.

La réussite de l'intégration dans l'Union des pays d'Europe centrale ou orientale ne repose pas seulement sur l'attrait de notre modèle économique, mais aussi sur celui de notre modèle social; or, celui-ci a tendance à s'altérer. Un noyau de normes sociales claires devrait être posé comme une exigence pour ces pays dès lors qu'ils deviennent membres à part entière. Cela suppose que ce noyau soit défini par l'Union.

La mondialisation présente des aspects sociaux qui vont apparaître de plus en plus clairement (en particulier la mondialisation progressive du marché du travail). La question du rythme de diffusion dans les pays émergents des normes sociales en vigueur dans les pays industrialisés devra être posée. Cela pourrait conduire l'Union à ressentir le besoin d'une politique sociale extérieure plus affirmée. L'Union ne saurait défendre le principe de l'universalisation des droits sans définir pour elle-même les droits auxquels elle se réfère.

II – L'agencement en Europe des droits civiques et sociaux et des politiques sociales est actuellement d'une grande complexité

1. Les États ont des régimes constitutionnels variables, mais ont tous adhéré à un certain nombre de conventions et de pactes, en particulier la convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l'homme et des libertés fondamentales de 1950, qui contient une procédure remarquable de garantie effective des droits.

En ce qui concerne les traités de l'Union européenne, on ne peut, à ce stade, parler d'une véritable construction de droits sociaux et civils, mais plutôt de dispositions empiriques qui ont été bâties peu à peu pour accompagner l'unification des économies et permettre, à cet effet, la mise en œuvre d'un minimum de politiques sociales: les articles 117 à 122 du traité de Rome, complétés par l'Acte unique de 1986; la charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs, adoptée en 1989 par onze États sur douze; les nouvelles dispositions du traité de Maastricht, et notamment son protocole social, adopté par quatorze États sur quinze. Dans l'ensemble, les droits sociaux sont définis en dehors du traité, et principalement pour les travailleurs. Il n'y a pas, dans les traités, un catalogue de droits sociaux fondamentaux auxquels la Cour de justice pourrait se référer pour contrôler les actes communautaires. Cet ensemble a besoin d'être rendu à la fois plus lisible, plus simple, plus cohérent et plus efficace.

2. Cependant, dans un domaine en permanente évolution, de nombreux problèmes doivent être surmontés.

Les droits sociaux et les droits civils, civiques et mêmes politiques font-ils partie d'un même ensemble — comme le pense le comité — ou doivent-ils être considérés de façon distincte? Cette distinction en recouvre largement une autre: celle qui existe entre, d'une part, des droits qui consistent à limiter les risques d'empiétement de l'État vis-à-vis de l'autonomie des personnes, droits qui s'expriment essentiellement par des dispositions juridiques, et, d'autre part, des droits à un ensemble de prestations déterminées, droits qui ont un coût et qui nécessitent que des ressources financières soient dégagées.

Mais qui sont les débiteurs des droits ainsi affirmés, qui en assure l'exercice? Qui en fournit les moyens lorsque la collectivité les reconnaît aux individus? La question se pose dans la plupart des cas, mais avec une intensité particulière dans le cas des droits sociaux programmatiques (droit au logement, à l'emploi, etc.). Dans ce cas, l'affirmation des droits est indissociable des politiques sociales qui les mettent en œuvre. Mais il serait illusoire de penser que le respect des droits relève uniquement de la collectivité et des politiques publiques. La mise en œuvre concrète des droits repose aussi sur les relations interpersonnelles et sur les obligations que chacun se sent à l'égard d'autrui; il n'y a pas de droits sans devoirs ni de démocratie sans civisme.

Enfin, la liste des droits fondamentaux n'est pas immuable, d'abord, parce que la conception de la personne s'approfondit et, ensuite, parce que l'évolution des techniques suscite des menaces pour les personnes. Après la première génération des droits civils et politiques, puis celles des droits sociaux, on voit apparaître la possibilité de nouvelles avancées qui doivent être discutées, approfondies et précisées.

3. Il est indispensable de définir clairement ce qui incombe à l'Union et ce qui incombe aux États membres, en matière de droits fondamentaux notamment.

La répartition des compétences entre les États membres et l'Union, plus délicate dans le domaine social qu'en matière économique, n'a pas jusqu'ici trouvé de solution claire; il est admis par tous que les principes de subsidiarité et de proportionnalité doivent s'exercer pleinement et jouer un rôle essentiel. Chaque pays doit maintenir ses spécificités.

Notre capacité à développer une union sociale dépendra donc de notre aptitude à définir les terrains ou les fonctions que l'Union doit assumer, soit parce que les États membres ne sont pas en situation d'intervenir efficacement, soit parce que l'intervention de l'Union se révèle plus optimale que celle des États et produit davantage d'externalités:

- mener et coordonner des réflexions prospectives;
- définir un socle de droits fondamentaux qui s'imposent à l'Union et aux États lorsqu'ils agissent sous l'emprise du droit communautaire;
- tirer toutes les conséquences des droits pour tous les citoyens de l'Union à circuler et à séjourner librement sur le territoire des États membres;
- aider à la correction des déséquilibres qui apparaissent;
- aider à la solution de problèmes délicats qui, bien que relevant des États, impliquent des approches communes;
- contribuer au rapprochement des réglementations lorsque des disparités exagérées sont constatées et, éventuellement, imposer des minimums.

III — Préciser, dans une première étape, le contenu d'un socle minimal de droits fondamentaux

Les progrès immédiats à réaliser dans le cadre de la conférence intergouvernementale sont les suivants.

1. Regrouper en un seul traité, avec une numérotation continue des articles, les textes actuellement dispersés dans les quinze traités

2. Donner des bases juridiques plus solides à la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes pour faire appliquer les droits fondamentaux

Les références utilisées par la Cour de justice pour déterminer les principes généraux du droit communautaire seraient étendues, d'une part, à la charte communautaire des droits sociaux des travailleurs, qui se trouverait ainsi indirectement incorporée aux traités, et, d'autre part, aux principaux pactes internationaux signés par les États membres. Elles pourraient être utilisées pour contrôler l'ensemble des actes juridiques de l'Union. À cette fin, les restrictions que l'article L du traité sur l'Union européenne oppose à l'article F devraient être levées.

Cette amélioration, en rendant plus réellement effective l'application de la convention des droits de l'homme du Conseil de l'Europe, pourrait constituer une solution aux nombreux problèmes posés par une adhésion de l'Union à cette convention, qui semblent avoir été sous-estimés jusqu'ici (faible contenu en droits sociaux, nécessité au préalable de faire ratifier par 38 États une révision de la convention). Pour que la Cour de Luxembourg ne soit pas juge en dernier ressort en matière de droits fondamentaux, une juridiction d'appel propre à l'Union et composée de juges non permanents provenant des tribunaux constitutionnels ou supérieurs des États membres pourrait être instituée.

3. Inscrire dès à présent dans le traité une première liste de droits fondamentaux

Cette liste porterait uniquement sur le domaine communautaire, c'est-à-dire les actes de l'Union et ceux que les États adoptent sous l'emprise du droit communautaire. Elle n'implique aucun changement dans le domaine des compétences respectives de l'Union et des États et ne modifie pas les rapports juridiques entre les États membres et leurs ressortissants.

Huit droits seraient reconnus et bénéficieraient d'une protection juridictionnelle directe: égalité devant la loi, interdiction de toute discrimination, égalité entre les hommes et les femmes, liberté de mouvement au sein de l'Union, droit de choisir sa profession et son système éducatif sur l'ensemble du territoire de l'Union, droit d'association et de défense des droits, droit de négociation et action collective.

Quant aux droits constituant des objectifs à atteindre (droit à l'éducation, au travail, à la sécurité sociale, à la protection de la famille, etc.), qui constituent des parties intégrantes du modèle européen, ils seraient énumérés, mais la discussion concernant leur contenu et l'éventuelle édicition de minimums serait renvoyée à la deuxième phase ci-après.

L'importance du chômage dans la Communauté, la nécessité de lutter contre la pauvreté et l'exclusion ont conduit le comité à proposer, dans un seul cas, une clause minimale: le principe devrait ainsi être posé dans le traité, c'est-à-dire au niveau de l'Union, que chaque État membre doit mettre en place un revenu minimal pour les personnes qui ne peuvent, malgré leurs efforts, accéder à un emploi rémunéré et qui ne bénéficient pas d'autres sources de revenu, le montant de cette prestation étant fixé au niveau de chaque État membre.

IV—Engager un processus d'élaboration collective d'un catalogue moderne de droits et de devoirs civiques et sociaux

Le renforcement du traité pour y inclure les droits fondamentaux ne peut être réalisé en une fois. Une liste complète des droits à établir n'est pas disponible actuellement, surtout si l'on souhaite être audacieux et innovant: un gros travail interdisciplinaire et de technique juridique s'impose. Il ne faut pas octroyer des droits par le haut; ceux-ci, au contraire, doivent faire l'objet d'une élaboration démocratique selon une logique de citoyenneté active; il y a là, d'ailleurs, une occasion unique de faire fonctionner concrètement l'espace public démocratique européen.

C'est pourquoi un processus d'élaboration collective devrait être prévu par le traité révisé. L'exercice de consultation devrait être lancé par le Parlement européen sur proposition de la Commission européenne et piloté par un comité ad hoc. Il ferait intervenir les partenaires sociaux habituels, mais aussi les organisations non gouvernementales, un inventaire exhaustif de celles-ci étant effectué dans chaque pays, en fonction des types de droits concernés. Le Parlement européen serait régulièrement informé et consulté sur l'évolution de ce processus, auquel les parlements nationaux seraient étroitement associés.

Au bout de quatre à cinq ans, une fois ce processus consultatif achevé, les gouvernements en tireraient les conséquences sous forme d'un amendement au traité existant, dans le cadre d'une nouvelle conférence intergouvernementale dont le principe devrait être retenu dès maintenant.

V—Intégrer les politiques sociales dans la démarche ordinaire de l'Union

Bon nombre de droits fondamentaux reposent explicitement sur la mise en œuvre de politiques sociales déterminées. Il ne servirait à rien d'intégrer les droits fondamentaux dans les traités sans qu'il en soit de même des politiques sociales qui permettent de les appliquer.

Étant donné qu'il ne s'agit pas ici de l'objet central de son mandat, le comité s'est limité à quelques propositions, reprises ci-après.

1. Dispositions générales

- Regrouper l'ensemble des dispositions concernant les politiques sociales dans un titre unique du traité.
- Lorsqu'une politique sociale de l'Union est nécessaire en termes de subsidiarité et de proportionnalité, appliquer la règle de la majorité qualifiée, à l'exception de quelques domaines sensibles (sécurité et protection sociale, participation).
- Reconnaître explicitement comme partenaire, dans le traité, les acteurs collectifs qui agissent dans la société civile, en particulier les institutions de solidarité qui œuvrent contre l'exclusion et la grande pauvreté et qui peuvent représenter les chômeurs et les exclus.

- Utiliser les fonds structurels pour la promotion des droits fondamentaux.
- Développer l'expertise en sciences sociales et humaines dans le domaine de la politique sociale européenne.
- Examiner systématiquement l'impact des diverses politiques européennes menées sur la cohésion sociale et sur les risques d'exclusion.

2. Dispositions particulières

- Revaloriser la place faite à l'emploi dans le traité et instituer un comité de l'emploi pendant du comité monétaire et se réunissant périodiquement avec lui.
- Permettre à l'Union de mener des actions de coordination et d'expérimentation dans le domaine de la lutte contre l'exclusion.
- Faire entrer dans le domaine institutionnel habituel, qui facilite les prises de décision, la politique d'immigration et d'asile ainsi que les politiques concernant les citoyens des pays tiers.
- Adopter une solution identique pour ce qui concerne la lutte contre les effets de la drogue sur les personnes, qu'il s'agisse de traitement, de prévention ou de contrôle du trafic.
- Préciser dans le traité le concept des services d'utilité publique.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 9 March 2000 (10.03)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4156/00*CONVENT 15*NOTE FROM THE PRAESIDIUM

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Reference document: CHARTE 4149/00 CONVENT 13

You have received the text of Articles 1 to 15 (CHARTE 4149/00) of the draft Charter, drawn up by the Praesidium following the Convention's discussions. That text will be examined at the meeting on 20 and 21 March. To facilitate discussion, members may send proposals for amendments to the Secretariat by 17 March. Obviously any members who have not submitted written proposals may make proposals orally at the meeting.

Those proposals, which will be distributed to the members, are not intended to be examined and put to the vote on 20 March. They will be used by the Praesidium, meeting as a drafting committee, as a basis for the final version of the draft Charter which will subsequently be submitted to the Convention. At that time an official deadline will be set for the submission of amendments and those amendments will be systematically examined by the Convention.

The procedure is thus as follows:

- initial draft articles prepared by the drafting committee following the proceedings of the Convention meeting as a working group;
- written or oral amendment proposals and discussion by the Convention on 20 and 21 March;
- preparation of a new text by the drafting committee on the basis of the discussion;
- submission of written amendments;
- final examination of the amendments and adoption of the draft Charter.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 13 March 2000 (15.03)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4160/00*CONTRIB 44*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find attached a contribution by Mr Guy Braibant, representative of the President and the Prime Minister of France.

ADDITIONAL OBSERVATIONS ON THE DRAFT RIGHTS IN CHARTE 4123/00

Article 3

Paragraph 2 should state that "No one shall be arrested or detained save in the cases and in the manner prescribed by law".

Article 4

For consistency's sake, "court or tribunal" ("juge" in the French) should probably be replaced by "tribunal", the term used in Article 5.

Article 5

A right to compensation in the event of judicial error might be stipulated. Article 3 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR contains such a right, but limits it to cases where there has been a criminal conviction. A case may be made for broadening the right to compensation, given the seriousness of the effects which such errors can have in civil or administrative matters, and the restricted nature of the action which can be taken in the field of judicial responsibility.

Articles 6 and 7

I believe that at this point the Charter should include the principle of the necessity of punishment, and perhaps the principle of its proportionality.

It seems that the principle of the application of the lightest penalty gives rise to difficulties as regards punishments for offences of a financial nature such as embargoes.

The scope of Article 7 should be limited to criminal matters. It cannot in any case be intended to apply to administrative sanctions.

Article 8

In paragraph 1, the term "identity" should be defined or amended, so that it clearly refers to civil status and legal personality and not to cultural identity.

In paragraph 2, I believe that "confidentiality" should be replaced by "respect", which would offer more protection.

The right to one's image could also be recognised in this Article.

Article Y

Apart from the fact that this Article may give the impression that the Charter restricts certain rights, it does not remove the need for the incorporation into some Articles of definitions or restrictions which would make it easier to transform the rights into reality.

Guy BRAIBANT
Representative of the President of the Republic and of the Prime Minister to the Convention drawing up the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

=====

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 20 March 2000 (21.03)CHARTE 4170/00*CONVENT 17*NOTE FROM THE PRAESIDIUM

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union – Proposed Articles on the rights of citizens (Articles A to J)

The rights of citizens

These Articles refer to rights which the Treaty establishing the European Community places generally under the heading of "Rights of citizens". These Articles are presented together, but their final position in the Charter will depend on decisions taken by the Convention on the overall structure of the Charter. Some limited rights are reserved for citizens (the right to vote and freedom of movement) but others also apply to those residing in the territory of the Member States. Others apply to everyone. Where rights are reserved for citizens alone, should there be a general clause to the effect that such rights may be extended to third-country nationals (Article 63(4) provides for the possibility of extension as regards freedom of movement)?

Article A. Principle of democracy

1. All public authority stems from the people.
2. The Union and its institutions are founded on the principles of liberty, democracy, respect for human rights and the rule of law, principles which are common to the Member States.
3. The representatives in the European Parliament of the peoples of the States brought together in the Community [the Union] shall be by directly and freely elected universal suffrage and secret ballot.

Comments

Paragraph 1 states the principle of democracy which was enshrined by the Court of Justice in particular in its judgment of 29 October 1980 on Case 138/79 Roquette Frères v. Council [1980] ECR 3333. Although all public authority stems from the people, it does not follow that every public authority must be elected, but it must be appointed or established by an institution whose origin is democratic.

Paragraph 2 follows Article 6(1) of the TEU: "The Union is founded on the principles of liberty, democracy, respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, and the rule of law, principles which are common to the Member States".

Paragraph 3 follows Article 190(1) of the TEC, which was considered to be preferable to Article 3 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR: "The High Contracting Parties undertake to hold free elections at reasonable intervals by secret ballot, under conditions which will ensure the free expression of the opinion of the people in the choice of the legislature". This Article takes the form of an international commitment, whereas the Treaty provides for elections in Article 190(1) of the TEC: "The representatives in the European Parliament of the peoples of the States brought together in the Community shall be elected by direct universal suffrage".

Article B. Political parties

Every citizen of the Union has the right to form and to join political parties. Political parties at Union level contribute to forming a European awareness and to expressing the political will of the citizens of the Union.

Comments

Follows the wording on the freedom of association, with the addition of part of Article 191 of the TEC: "Political parties at European level are important as a factor for integration within the Union. They contribute to forming a European awareness and to expressing the political will of the citizens of the Union". As drafted the first sentence implies that this right may be invoked by a citizen of the Union in any Member State.

Article C. Right to participate in elections to the European Parliament

Every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he is not a national has the right to vote and stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State. This right is exercised in accordance with the detailed arrangements laid down in the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Comments

This text follows Article 19(2) of the TEC: "2. Without prejudice to Article 190(4) and to the provisions adopted for its implementation, every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he is not a national shall have the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State. This right shall be exercised subject to detailed arrangements adopted by the Council, acting unanimously on a proposal from the Commission and after consulting the European Parliament; these arrangements may provide for derogations where warranted by problems specific to a Member State". Given that there are certain specific arrangements laid down by the Treaties, a reference to the arrangements laid down by the Treaties would appear to be necessary.

Article D. The right to participate in municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he is not a national has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State. This right shall be exercised in accordance with the detailed arrangements laid down in the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Comments

This text follows Article 19(1) of the TEC: "Every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he is not a national shall have the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State. This right shall be exercised subject to detailed arrangements adopted by the Council, acting unanimously on a proposal from the Commission and after consulting the European Parliament; these arrangements may provide for derogations where warranted by problems specific to a Member State".

Article E. The right to good administration [relations with the administration]

- 1. Every person residing in a Member State has the right to have his affairs handled properly, impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.
- 2. This right includes:
 - the right of every person to be heard before any individual measure which would affect him personally is taken in relation to him;
 - the right of every person to have access to his file, if this access is necessary for him to state his arguments, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy;
 - the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.
- 3. Every citizen may address the institutions and bodies of the Union in one of the official languages of the Union and must have an answer in that language.

Comments

The first paragraph is in response to a request made several times during the Convention, particularly by the Ombudsman.

The principles set out in paragraph 2, which only concern individual decisions, basically result from the case law of the Court and, with regard to the obligation to give reasons, from Article 253 of the Treaty: "Regulations, directives and decisions adopted jointly by the European Parliament and the Council, and such acts adopted by the Council or the Commission, shall state the reasons on which they are based and shall refer to any proposals or opinions which were required to be obtained pursuant to this Treaty." The principles for non-contentious administrative procedure are set out in the following judgments in particular: Case 374/87 Orkem [1989] ECR 3283, Case T-450/93 Lisrestal, CFI, [1994] ECR II-1177, Case C-269/90 TU München [1991] ECR I-5469, Case T-167/94 Detlef Nölle [1995] ECR II-2589. The reference to confidentiality refers to the protection of personal data.

Paragraph 3 follows Article 21 of the TEC: "Every citizen of the Union may write to any of the institutions or bodies referred to in this Article or in Article 7 in one of the languages mentioned in Article 314 and have an answer in the same language."

The right of access to documents might be placed in this Article.

Article F. Right of access to documents

NB: Depends on where this right will be situated. A draft Article was proposed in 4137/00 CONVENT 8.

Article G. Access to the Ombudsman

Every citizen of the Union and every person residing in the territory of a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration by the institutions and bodies of the Union, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role. This right shall be exercised under the conditions laid down in the Treaty establishing the European Community and the provisions concerning its implementation.

Comments

The Article presents the principles which result from Articles 21 and 195 of the TEC.

Article 21: "Every citizen of the Union may apply to the Ombudsman established in accordance with Article 195".

Article 195: "1. The European Parliament shall appoint an Ombudsman empowered to receive complaints from any citizen of the Union or any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State concerning instances of maladministration in the activities of the Community institutions or bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

In accordance with his duties, the Ombudsman shall conduct inquiries for which he finds grounds, either on his own initiative or on the basis of complaints submitted to him direct or through a Member of the European Parliament, except where the alleged facts are or have been the subject of legal proceedings. Where the Ombudsman establishes an instance of maladministration, he shall refer the matter to the institution concerned, which shall have a period of three months in which to inform him of its views. The Ombudsman shall then forward a report to the European Parliament and the institution concerned. The person lodging the complaint shall be informed of the outcome of such inquiries.

The Ombudsman shall submit an annual report to the European Parliament on the outcome of his inquiries.

2. The Ombudsman shall be appointed after each election of the European Parliament for the duration of its term of office. The Ombudsman shall be eligible for reappointment.

The Ombudsman may be dismissed by the Court of Justice at the request of the European Parliament if he no longer fulfils the conditions required for the performance of his duties or if he is guilty of serious misconduct.

3. The Ombudsman shall be completely independent in the performance of his duties. In the performance of those duties he shall neither seek nor take instructions from any body.

The Ombudsman may not, during his term of office, engage in any other occupation, whether gainful or not.

4. The European Parliament shall, after seeking an opinion from the Commission and with the approval of the Council acting by a qualified majority, lay down the regulations and general conditions governing the performance of the Ombudsman's duties."

Article H. The right to petition

Every citizen of the Union and every person residing in the territory of a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament under the conditions laid down in the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Comments

This Article presents the principles resulting from Articles 21 and 194 of the TEC.

Article 21: "Every citizen of the Union shall have the right to petition the European Parliament in accordance with Article 194."

Article 194 of the TEC: "Any citizen of the Union, and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State, shall have the right to address, individually or in association with other citizens or persons, a petition to the European Parliament on a matter which comes within the Community's fields of activity and which affects him, her or it directly."

Article I. Freedom of movement

Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States, subject to the limitations and conditions laid down in the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Comments

This Article follows the principle set out in Article 18 of the TEC.

Article 18 TEC: "1. Every citizen of the Union shall have the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States, subject to the limitations and conditions laid down in this Treaty and by the measures adopted to give it effect.

2. The Council may adopt provisions with a view to facilitating the exercise of the rights referred to in paragraph 1; save as otherwise provided in this Treaty, the Council shall act in accordance with the procedure referred to in Article 251. The Council shall act unanimously throughout this procedure."

Article J. Non-discrimination

Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and without prejudice to any provisions contained therein, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

Comments

This right is enshrined in Article 12 of the TEC.

Article 12 TEC: "Within the scope of application of this Treaty, and without prejudice to any special provisions contained therein, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

The Council, acting in accordance with the procedure referred to in Article 251, may adopt rules designed to prohibit such discrimination."

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 28 March 2000CHARTE 4176/00*CONTRIB 59*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
- Reference document Charte/4149/00 Convent 13

Please find hereafter a proposal for amendment to article 16, point 1, submitted by Mr. Graham Watson, Member of the European Parliament. ¹

"Basic education shall be available to all citizens as a universal right, free of direct charge and shall be obligatory for minors".

¹ This text has been submitted in English language only.

ENTWURF DER CHARTA DER GRUNDRECHTE DER EUROPÄISCHEN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brüssel, den 28. März 2000CHARTE 4177/00*CONTRIB 60*ÜBERMITTLUNGSVERMERK

Betr.: Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union

Finden Sie bitte nachstehend Änderungsvorschläge zu Dokument Charta 4149/00 Convent 13, vorgelegt von Herrn Jürgen Meyer, Mitglied des deutschen Bundestags. ¹

¹ Dieser Text wurde nur in deutscher Sprache übermittelt.

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Meyer, MdB
Stv. Vorsitzender des Ausschusses für die Angelegenheiten
der Europäischen Union des Deutschen Bundestages

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Meyer, MdB · Büro Berlin · Unter den Linden 50 · 2122 / 2124

Berlin

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Meyer
Deutscher Bundestag
Büro: Unter den Linden 50 · 2122 / 2124
✉ Platz der Republik 1, 11011 Berlin
Tel: (030) 227 - 79 12 0
Fax: (030) 227 - 76 31 6
Email: juergen.meyer@bundestag.de

Wahlkreis

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Meyer
Münsterplatz 45
Postfach 36 28
89026 Ulm
Tel: (0731) 6 02 13 61
Fax: (0731) 6 13 21
Email: juergen.meyer@wk.bundestag.de

16 März

Änderungsvorschlag zu Art. 13

Gemäß dem vorgeschlagenen Verfahren des Präsidiums (siehe Convent 15 vom 9. März 2000) reiche ich als Delegierter des Konvents in meiner Funktion als Vertreter des Deutschen Bundestages folgenden Änderungsvorschlag zu dem vom Präsidium vorgeschlagenen Art. 13 (in der Fassung Convent 13 vom 8. März 2000) ein.

Art. 13 Ehe und Familie

- (1) Jeder hat das Recht, nach den nationalen Gesetzen und im freien und vollen Einverständnis der künftigen Ehegatten eine Ehe zu schließen und eine Familie zu gründen.
- (2) Lebensgemeinschaften, die auf Dauer angelegt sind, haben ein Recht auf Schutz vor Diskriminierung.
- (3) Ehe und Familie genießen besonderen Schutz. Alleinerziehende, kinderreiche Familien sowie Familien mit behinderten Angehörigen haben Anspruch auf die besondere Fürsorge durch die öffentliche Gewalt.

Begründung

Der Schutz der Ehe und des Familienlebens ist ein grundlegendes Grund- und Menschenrecht, welches in der Grundrechtscharta berücksichtigt werden muss.

In Abs. 1 wird zunächst das Recht auf freie Eheschließung und auf Familiengründung gewährleistet. Beide Rechten stellen Abwehrrechte gegen staatliche Eingriffe dar.

Dieses Recht ist in Art. 8 und 12 EMRK, in Art. 16 Allgemeine Erklärung der Menschenrechte, in Art. 23 Abs. 2 und 3 Internationaler Pakt über bürgerliche und politische Rechte (IPbPR), in Art. 6 Abs. 1 (deutsches) Grundgesetz sowie in zahlreichen Verfassungen der Mitgliedstaaten enthalten. Der EuGH hat ausgeführt, dass das Recht auf Eheschließung und der Schutz der Familie bereits jetzt „zu den vom Gemeinschaftsrecht anerkannten Grundrechten gehöre“.¹ Auch der Europäische Gerichtshof für Menschenrechte hat diesen Grundsatz wiederholt bestätigt.²

Die Einschränkung „nach den nationalen Gesetzen“ orientiert sich an der gleichlautenden Bestimmung des Art. 12 EMRK. Hiermit soll vermieden werden, dass der Konvent eine europaweite Definition des Ehebegriffs vornehmen muss.

Die Festlegung auf „im freien und vollen Einverständnis der künftigen Ehegatten“ übernimmt die entsprechende Formulierung aus Art. 23 Abs. 3 IPbPR. Diese Norm ist ebenfalls in der Allgemeinen Erklärung der Menschenrechte enthalten (Art. 16 Abs. 2), womit ihre globale Anerkennung und Würdigung zum Ausdruck kommt.

Abs. 2 berücksichtigt einen soziologischen Wandel in der Gesellschaft, der in einer zeitgemäßen Grundrechtscharta enthalten sein muss. Die Zahl der in Deutschland lebenden nicht-ehelichen Lebensgemeinschaften hat sich zwischen 1978 und 1998 mehr als versechsfacht. Ähnliche Entwicklungen sind in allen europäischen Ländern zu beobachten. Aus diesem Grund berücksichtigen auch konservative Parteien zunehmend diese soziologischen Tatsachen.³ Auch in neuen Verfassungen, beispielsweise in der Verfassung Brandenburgs, ist die Schutzbedürftigkeit von auf Dauer angelegten Lebensgemeinschaften anerkannt (Art. 26 Abs. 2).

¹ Vgl. Wetter, Irmgard: Die Grundrechtscharta des Europäischen Gerichtshofes. Frankfurt a.M. u.a., 1998, S. 168 f, sowie die Verweise auf die Urteile des EuGH in den Fußnoten 660 f.

² Frowein, Jochen Abr./Peukert, Wolfgang: Europäische Menschenrechtskonvention. Straßburg u.a., 1996, S. 421 ff.

³ So z.B. auf dem Kleinen Parteitag der deutschen CDU, vgl. Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung

Darüber hinaus berücksichtigen mehr und mehr Mitgliedstaaten der Union auch die Rechte von Homosexuellen, indem sie die Möglichkeit einer eingetragenen Lebenspartnerschaft einräumen, mit dem Ziel, bestehende rechtliche Diskriminierungen zu verhindern. Ohne dass mit Abs. 2 eine Entscheidung zugunsten eines Modells gefällt werden soll, stellt doch das Verbot der Diskriminierung eine Mindestanforderung dar.

Abs. 3 Satz 2 stellt bestimmte Untergruppen von Familien unter den besonderen Schutz der Union. Der Schutz von kinderreichen Familien ist in den Verfassungen Griechenlands (Art. 21 Abs. 2), Italiens (Art. 31) und Polens (Art. 71 Abs. 1) enthalten. Die Verfassung Brandenburgs (Art. 26 Abs. 1) enthält darüber hinaus eine Schutznorm für Alleinerziehende und Familien mit behinderten Angehörigen.

Ebenfalls schützt nach einschlägiger Rechtsprechung des Europäischen Gerichtshofes für Menschenrechte der Art. 8 EMRK Alleinerziehende, die unter den allgemeinen Familienschutz fallen.⁴

Zwar ist innerhalb des Konvents vorgesehen, einen expliziten Artikel zu den Rechten von Kindern zu formulieren; gleichwohl scheint es bereits an dieser Stelle angezeigt, die soziologische Einheit, in der eine Mehrzahl der Kinder lebt, unter besonderen Schutz zu stellen.

⁴ vom 11.12.1999 „Kleiner Parteitag berät über Spenden und Familienpolitik“. Frowein, Jochen Abr./Peukert, Wolfgang: Europäische Menschenrechtskonvention. Straßburg u.a., 1996, S. 424.

Änderungsvorschlag

zu Art. 14

Gemäß dem vorgeschlagenen Verfahren des Präsidiums (siehe Convent 15 vom 9. März 2000) reiche ich als Delegierter des Konvents in meiner Funktion als Vertreter des Deutschen Bundestages folgenden Änderungsvorschlag zu dem vom Präsidium vorgeschlagenen Art. 14_(in der Fassung Convent 13 vom 8. März 2000) ein.

Art. 14 Gedankens-, Gewissens- und Religionsfreiheit

- (1) Jede Person hat das Recht auf Gedankens-, Gewissens- und Religionsfreiheit. Niemand darf zur Teilnahme an einer religiösen oder weltanschaulichen Handlung oder zur Verwendung einer religiösen Eidesformel gezwungen werden.
- (2) Niemand ist verpflichtet, seine religiösen oder weltanschaulichen Anschauungen zu offenbaren.
- (3) Kann ein Unionsbürger die von einer öffentlichen Gewalt auferlegten Pflichten nicht erfüllen, weil sie seinem Gewissen widersprechen, kann das Gemeinwesen im Rahmen seiner Möglichkeiten andere, gleichbelastende Pflichten eröffnen. Dies gilt nicht für Steuern und Abgaben.

Begründung

Der Abs. 1 Satz 1 folgt dem Vorschlag des Präsidiums und dem gleichlautenden Art. 9 Abs. 1 Satz 1 EMRK.

In Satz 2 wird klargestellt, dass die genannten Rechte Freiheiten in dem Sinne darstellen, dass es keine erzwungene Teilnahme an weltanschaulichen, religiösen oder rituellen Handlungen geben darf. Vergleichbare Regelungen finden sich in den Verfassungen Belgiens (Art. 20), Dänemarks (§ 68), Finnlands (§ 9), Luxemburgs (Art. 20), Schwedens (Kapitel 2 § 2) und Deutschlands (Art. 4 Abs. 1 GG). Auch der Europäische Gerichtshof für Menschenrechte hat in Auslegung des Art. 9 Abs. 1 Satz 1 eine „negative Religionsfreiheit“ anerkannt¹ und von einem „Schutz für Atheisten, Agnostiker, Skeptiker und Unbeteiligte“ gesprochen.²

¹ Nachweis siehe in: Frowein, Jochen Abr./Peukert, Wolfgang: Europäische Menschenrechtskonvention. Straßburg u.a., 1996, S. 371.

² Ebenda; S. 368.

Abs. 2 orientiert sich an entsprechenden Regelungen in den Verfassungen Portugals (Art. 41 Abs. 3), Schwedens (Kapitel 2 § 2), Spaniens (Art. 16 Abs. 2), der Slowakei (Art. 41 Abs. 2), Polens (Art. 53 Abs. 7) und Brandenburgs (Art. 13 Abs. 2). Auch der Art. 136 Weimarer Reichsverfassung, der gemäß Art. 140 GG Bestandteil des Grundgesetzes ist, enthält das Recht auf Nichtäußerung seiner religiösen Überzeugungen. Ebenfalls kann ein solches Recht aus Art. 5 Abs. 1 GG abgeleitet werden.³

Abs. 3 konkretisiert die Gewissensfreiheit.

Das Recht auf Kriegsdienstverweigerung, als eine mögliche aber nicht zwingende Form der Gewissensfreiheit, ist in den Verfassungen Deutschlands (Art. 4 Abs. 3 GG) und Portugals (Art. 41 Abs. 6) anerkannt. Zwar wird das Recht auf Kriegsdienstverweigerung in der EMRK nicht explizit gewährleistet (vgl. Art. 4 Abs. 3 b), gleichwohl schreiben Frowein/Peukert in ihrem EMRK-Kommentar zur Glaubens- und Gewissensfreiheit: „Es besteht aber ein Recht darauf, dass der Staat bei Festlegung der Pflichten Rücksicht auf die Religion nimmt.“⁴ Insofern würde die vorgeschlagene Formulierung zur Positivierung dieses Recht führen.

Gleichwohl wird in Abs. 3 durch die einschränkende Formulierung „im Rahmen seiner Möglichkeiten“ und „dies gilt nicht für Steuern und Abgaben“ vermieden, dass es zu einer willkürlichen und ausufernden Geltendmachung von Gewissensnot kommt. Entsprechende Fälle hat der Europäische Gerichtshof für Menschenrechte auch immer wieder zurückgewiesen.⁵

³ Maunz/Düring/Herzog u.a.: Grundgesetz Kommentar. München, 1991, Band 1 (Lieferung 1 – 29), Art. 5 Rdnr. 40.

⁴ Ebenda, S. 378.

⁵ Ebenda, S. 376 ff.

Änderungsvorschlag

zu Art. 15

Gemäß dem vorgeschlagenen Verfahren des Präsidiums (siehe Convent 15 vom 9. März 2000) reiche ich als Delegierter des Konvents in meiner Funktion als Vertreter des Deutschen Bundestages folgenden Änderungsvorschlag zu dem vom Präsidium vorgeschlagenen Art. 15 (in der Fassung Convent 13 vom 8. März 2000) ein.

Art. 15 Freiheit der Meinungsäußerung

- (1) Jede Person hat das Recht auf freie Meinungsäußerung. Dieses Recht schließt die Meinungsfreiheit und die Freiheit ein, Informationen und Ideen ohne behördliche Eingriffe und ohne Rücksicht auf Staatsgrenzen zu empfangen und weiterzugeben.
- (2) Die Pressefreiheit und die Freiheit der Berichterstattung werden gewährleistet. Die Organe der Union sind im verpflichtet, der Presse Auskünfte zu erteilen.
- (3) Kunst, Wissenschaft, Forschung und Lehre sind frei.

Begründung

Abs. 1 übernimmt die vorgeschlagene Formulierung des Präsidiums.

Abs. 2 fügt einen neues, bisher unbeachtetes Recht ein. Hierbei kann es aber keinen Zweifel geben, dass die Pressefreiheit zu den vornehmsten Rechten in einem demokratischen und rechtsstaatlichen Gemeinwesen zählt. Sie ist ein Lebenselement der Demokratie. Aus diesem Grund findet es sich in nahezu allen Verfassungen der Mitgliedstaaten.

Die Auskunftspflicht, die in Satz 2 geregelt ist, ist in der Bundesrepublik Deutschland einfachgesetzlich auf Länderebene gewährleistet. Zwar läßt sich aus Art. 5 Abs. 1 Satz 2 (deutsches) Grundgesetz (GG) keine Informationspflicht des Staates an die Presse ableiten, gleichwohl kommen Maunz/Düring/Herzog in ihrem GG-Kommentar zu dem Ergebnis, dass , sich eine Regierung oder eine Behördenorganisation, die sich nachweisbar den Vorwurf der Pressefeindlichkeit zugezogen hat, auch unter verfassungsrechtlichen Gesichtspunkten die Frage stellen lassen müssen, ob es sich bei ihrem Verhalten ausschließlich um eine durchaus zulässige Zurückhaltung gegenüber der Presse oder nicht doch um eine allgemeine, dem demokratischen Prinzip zuwiderlaufende Öffentlichkeitsfeindlichkeit handelt.“¹ Diesen Grundsatz zu beachten, empfiehlt sich für die Union ganz besonders, da auf europäischer Ebene erst von einer „entstehenden Öffentlichkeit“ gesprochen werden kann.

Abs. 3 ergänzt den Präsidiumsvorschlag um das Wort „Lehre“. Die Freiheit der Forschung und Lehre ist ein unbestrittenes Menschenrecht, welches sich u.a. in Art. 15 Internationaler Pakt über wirtschaftliche, soziale und kulturelle Rechte findet. Ebenfalls ist die Freiheit der Lehre in nahezu jeder Verfassung der Mitgliedsländer enthalten.

Der gesamte Artikel 5 ist in vielen Verfassungen und Menschenrechtsverträgen mit einer Schrankenklauseel versehen worden. Gemäß der Diskussionslage im Konvent wird eine solche Schranke hier zunächst nicht formuliert, da erst Klarheit über die Rechte herrschen muss, bevor man über Schranken nachdenkt. Schon jetzt kann aber festgestellt werden, dass sich eine allgemeine Schrankenklauseel, die sich an Art. 20 Abs. 2 Internationaler Pakt über bürgerliche und politische Rechte² anlehnen würde, anbietet.

¹ Maunz/Düring/Herzog u.a.: Grundgesetz Kommentar. München, 1991, Band 1 (Lieferung 1 – 29), Art. 5 Rdnr.138.

² Jedes Eintreten für nationalen, rassistischen oder religiösen Haß, durch das zu Diskriminierung, Feindseligkeit oder Gewalt aufgestachelt wird, wird durch Gesetz verboten.“

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 28 March 2000CHARTE 4178/00*CONTRIB 61*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter observations by Mr Fischbach and Mr. Krüger to the document
Charte 4149/00 Convent 13.¹

¹ This text has been submitted in French and English languages.

16.3.2000

CONTRIBUTION OF MR FISCHBACH AND MR KRÜGER, COUNCIL OF EUROPE OBSERVERS

COMMENTS ON DOCUMENT “CONVENT 13”

Statement of reasons

Document Convent 13 is based on the idea that as a result of Article 6 TEU the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) is already, as such, part of European Union law and accordingly of the future Charter. While that view deserves to be maintained, it nonetheless remains to be explicitly confirmed by the Court of Justice of the European Communities. Applying the ECHR “as general principles of Community law” (Article 6 § 2 TEU) must probably be distinguished from applying it per se; otherwise the question would arise why the substantive provisions of the ECHR had not already been integrated as such into the Treaties. That applies even more to the ECHR’s Protocols, which have not yet been ratified by all the European Union’s member States; Protocol No. 7, for instance, referred to in Article 11 of document Convent 13, has been ratified by only eight of the fifteen member States.

In the absence of such confirmation by the Court of Justice, and for the avoidance of any misunderstanding detrimental to legal certainty, it would be as well not only to reproduce in the statement of reasons the complete text of the relevant provisions of the ECHR but also to specify in the text of the Charter that the statement of reasons forms an integral part of the Charter.

If care is not taken to ensure that it is made clear through the statement of reasons that the relevant provisions of the ECHR form an integral part of the Charter, there would be at least two types of consequence:

- (a) Certain provisions of the Charter would afford a lower level of protection than the ECHR. That is true, for example, of Article 6 (Convent 13), whose second sentence reads: “No one shall be deprived of his liberty, save in specific cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.” Without the further text in Article 5 ECHR, which exhaustively lists these “specific cases”, the Charter would afford a lower level of protection than the ECHR (see, in this connection, Mr Fischbach’s oral remarks of 24 February 2000, document Contrib 31).
- (b) Other provisions would be either unrestricted or – as the case might be – subject to a general limitation clause. In many cases, however, the special restrictions resulting from the ECHR and its case-law can be expected to provide greater protection than the restrictions resulting from a general clause (see, in this connection, Article X in doc. Convent 13 and Mr Fischbach’s remarks referred to above).

It is accepted, however, that none of the Charter's provisions will be able to be interpreted as restricting the protection afforded by the ECHR (Article Y of doc. Convent 13).

The proposal approach would also have the advantage of increasing the Charter's readability and clarity inasmuch as readers would not have to consult another instrument in order to discover the real scope of the Charter's provisions.

Article 4 (Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment)

This provision, which is meant to reproduce Article 3 ECHR, should read: "No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment."

Articles 8 and 9 (Right to a fair trial – defence rights)

According to the settled case-law of the European Court of Human Rights, paragraphs 2 and 3 of Article 6 "represent specific applications of the general principle stated in paragraph 1 of the Article. The presumption of innocence embodied in paragraph 2 and the various rights of which a non-exhaustive list appears in paragraph 3 ('minimum rights', 'notamment') are constituent elements, amongst others, of the notion of a fair trial in criminal proceedings'."

In document Convent 13 the principle (the right to a fair trial), reproduced in Article 8, is separated from its applications (the presumption of innocence and the rights of the defence), which appear in Article 9. Yet the list of defence rights taken over from Article 6 §§ 2 and 3 ECHR in the statement of reasons for Article 9 (Convent 13) remains illustrative and not exhaustive, as is apparent from the expression "minimum rights". It may therefore be supposed that other judicial applications of the principle will supplement the list in Article 9. For that reason it would be desirable to combine Articles 8 and 9.

A solution would then remain to be found for the current second sentence of Article 8, on free legal aid. In its present version, and in so far as it applies to criminal proceedings, it duplicates Article 6 § 3 (c) ECHR, taken over in the statement of reasons for Article 9 of the Charter. These two provisions should therefore be harmonised, in a single Article. The simplest thing would no doubt be to extend the application of Article 6 § 3 (c) ECHR to cover all proceedings (criminal and other) governed by such a single Article.

Article Y (Level of protection)

It would be desirable to word this Article as follows:

"No provision of this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting the protection afforded by the European Convention on Human Rights as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights."

Since the entry into force of the ECHR, the European Court of Human Rights has considerably extended its scope and strengthened its requirements. Steps should be taken to ensure that regard is had to that when the Charter is being interpreted.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 28 March 2000CHARTE 4179/00*CONTRIB 62*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter draft amendments to document Charte 4149/00 Convent 13 by Lord Goldsmith, QC, Personal Representative of the Government of the United Kingdom. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English language only.

17 March 2000

M. Jean-Paul Jacqué
Charter Praesidium
Brussels

DRAFT AMENDMENTS TO CONVENT 13

1. Thank you for sending me Convent 13 with the Praesidium's latest draft Articles 1-16. I would like to table the following written amendments.
2. I welcome the Praesidium's work to bring these Articles more in line with the language and approach of the ECHR. I feel that we must go further, however. The explanatory notes as presently drafted provide some guidance as to the Convention's rationale for particular draft Articles. But they cannot be taken as having the same legal force and effect as a clear definition of the right, tying the right to the corresponding existing right, eg under the ECHR. The reference to Article 6 of the TEU does not appear to me adequate to achieve the intended objective. I therefore regard a full and integrated Part B as essential if we are to stay within the remit given by the Cologne Conclusions.
3. In submitting my draft amendments, I have therefore included language for Part B. Please note that the Part A text is offered on the basis that it must be given the solid legal ground I propose for Part B. Without Part B, my Part A proposals do not stand and the full text of the relevant ECHR Articles would have to be substituted. "A language" is in bold and "B language" is in italics. Part B would also need to include the General Provisions tabled in my paper CONTRIB 36 but we can discuss this matter when we come to horizontal articles. Naturally, I reserve my position on these important horizontal matters.
4. For ease of reference, however:
 - i) I have included the appropriate Part B language alongside the corresponding Part A right. I envisage the two would be in different parts of the document;
 - ii) I have also therefore attached at Annex 1 how the document would look. It will be seen that I have proposed titles instead of the 'Part A' shorthand; namely 'Proclamation of Rights' and 'Definition of Rights'.

[Signed]

Lord Goldsmith QC

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS

Article 1/Object and Purpose

Amendments:

- Amend title to Object and Purpose
- Delete The dignity of the human person shall be respected and protected in all circumstances.
- Substitute:
 - 1) All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and are entitled to equal protection of the law without any discrimination. In recognition of this, the European Union Institutions respect, within the spheres of their competence, the fundamental rights set out below.
 - 2) The following provisions are addressed to the bodies and institutions of the European Union in the exercise of the powers and tasks assigned to them by the Treaties. They neither establish new tasks or competences for the Union nor do they extend its existing tasks or competences.
 - 3) The fundamental rights are listed below in Part A. Part B explains the nature, full extent and application of these rights.

B: 1(1): The principle of respect for the inviolable dignity and equality of the human person is the foundation for statements of fundamental rights throughout the European Union. That principle has effect in accordance with the constitutional traditions of Member States and is respected by the Union bodies and institutions. The principle of non-discrimination is the right in article 14 of the ECHR when read with articles 2-12, articles 1 and 2 of Protocol 1 and article 2 of Protocol 6 and read with articles 16, 17 and 18. The full text of ECHR article 14 is as follows [...]

Notes:

- ‘ Object and Purpose’ follows the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties and is perhaps a more accurate description than just ‘Article 1’.
- I have proposed no Part B text for Article 1.2.

Article 2 Right to Life

Amendments:

- Delete in 2.1: Everyone has the right to Life
- substitute in 2.1 Everyone’s right to life shall be protected by law

No amendment to Article 2.2 (No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed)

B: The rights in Article 2 are the rights guaranteed by Article 2 of and Articles 1, [2], 3 and 4 of Protocol 6 to the ECHR, read with ECHR Articles 17 and 18². The full ECHR Article 2 is as follows [...]. The full text of relevant provisions of ECHR Protocol 6 is as follows [...]

Article 3 Right to the respect of physical and mental integrity

Amendment:

- Delete this Article

Note:

- In a spirit of co-operation I previously suggested as an experiment language on the following lines:

Everyone has the right to the respect of his or her physical and mental integrity in the application of biology and medicine

B: The right set out in this Article comprises the following principles:

- (a) the principle of informed consent should be respected;*
- (b) the human body and its parts shall not, as such, give rise to financial gain;*
- (c) research on human beings shall only be carried out under appropriate conditions for their protection;*
- (d) organ removal from living donors shall only be permitted under specified circumstances and with the consent of the person concerned.*

The principle in (a) above is covered by the general rule given in Article 5 of the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. It will not be applicable in all circumstances; for example, where a person is not able to give informed consent the relevant rules given in Articles 6, 8, 17 and 20 of the Biomedicine Convention must be applied. Where a person suffers from a serious mental disorder the principles given in articles 7 and 26 of the Biomedicine Convention will be applicable if certain criteria are met.

The principle in (b) above is that laid down in Article 21 of the Biomedicine Convention.

The appropriate protective conditions referred to in (c) above are set out in Articles 16 and 17 of the Biomedicine Convention.

The principle in (d) above is laid down in Article 19 of the Biomedicine Convention, which specifies the permitted circumstances.

References to the Biomedicine Convention articles are to be read subject to the relevant exceptions provided by that Convention and subject to any applicable reservation or derogation.

Article 4 Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

Amendment:

² It will need to be considered later where in the Charter we should set out the text of ancillary provisions of this kind.

- add the words ‘or punishment’ at the end so that it reads:

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

B: The right in Article 4 is the right in Article 3 of the ECHR, the rights in which are guaranteed by that provision, read with ECHR Articles 17 and 18.

Article 5 Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

Amendment:

- Delete numbers and punctuation so that the Article reads:

No one shall be held in slavery or servitude or required to perform forced or compulsory labour

B: The right in Article 5 is the right guaranteed by Article 4 of the ECHR, read with ECHR Articles 17 and 18. The full ECHR text of Article 4 is as follows: [...]

Article 6 Liberty and Security

Amendments:

- Delete ‘. No one shall be deprived of his liberty’
- Replace with and cannot be deprived of it
- Add the word ‘limited’ before ‘specific cases’ so that it reads:

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person and cannot be deprived of it save in limited specific cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.

B: The rights in Article 6 are the rights guaranteed by Article 5 of the ECHR, read with ECHR Articles 17 and 18. The full text of ECHR Article 5 is as follows: [...]

Article 7 Right to an effective remedy

Amendment:

- Delete this Article

Note:

- I have no proposal to offer regarding remedies at this stage and believe that consideration of this matter must be deferred until we are clear what rights will be included in the Charter and what approach is to be adopted regarding the horizontal issues. I should simply note at this stage that the Praesidium text is narrower than the ECHR Article 13 and inconsistent with it in other respects.

Article 8 Right to a fair trial

Amendments:

- Add after ‘reasonable’: period of any criminal charge against him or her, or in determining his or her civil rights and obligations.
- Delete: time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.
- Add: Hearings shall be by an independent and impartial tribunal established by the law.
- Delete second sentence: Free legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is indispensable to ensure the effectiveness of access to justice.
- Add: If it is a criminal charge, the accused shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law and has certain guaranteed rights to defend himself or herself.

So that the Article reads:

Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable period of any criminal charge against him or her, or in determining his or her civil rights and obligations. Hearings shall be by an independent and impartial tribunal established by the law.

If it is a criminal charge, the accused shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law and has certain guaranteed rights to defend himself or herself.

B: The rights in Article 8 are the rights guaranteed by Article 6 of the ECHR read with Article 17 and 18. The full text is as follows [...]

Article 9 Rights of the defence

Amendment:

- Delete the Article (see revised Article 8 above)

Article 10 No punishment without law

Amendments:

- Delete Article 10 draft text
- Substitute: No one shall be punished except under the law

B: The right in article 10 is the right guaranteed by article 7 of the ECHR read with articles 17 and 18. The full text of article 7 is as follows: [...]

Article 11 Right not to be tried or punished twice

Amendments:

- Delete: again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law.
- Add: twice for the same criminal offence

so that the Article reads:

No one shall be tried or punished twice for the same criminal offence

B: The right in article 11 is the right guaranteed by article 4 of Protocol 7 to the ECHR read with articles 17 and 18. The full text of article 4 is as follows: [...]

Article 12 Respect for Private Life

Amendments:

- Delete: privacy, his honour, his home and the confidentiality of his communications
- Add: or her private and family life, home and correspondence. These rights may be interfered with only in limited, specified circumstances.

so that the Article reads:

Everyone has the right to respect for his or her private and family life, home and correspondence. These rights may be interfered with only in limited, specified circumstances.

B: The right in article 12 is the right guaranteed by article 8 of the ECHR read with articles 17 and 18. The full text of article 8 is as follows: [...]

Article 13 Family life

Amendments:

- Delete 13.1
- Delete 13.2
- Add: Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and found a family according to national law governing the exercise of this right.
- Delete 13.3

B: The right in article 13 is the right guaranteed by article 12 of the ECHR read with articles 17 and 18. The full text of article 12 is as follows: [...]

Article 14 Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Amendment:

- Add: Restrictions can only be placed on this right in limited, specified circumstances.

So that the Article reads:

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. Restrictions can only be placed on this right in limited, specified circumstances.

B: The right in article 14 is the right guaranteed by article 9 of the ECHR read with articles 17 and 18. The full text of article 9 is as follows: [...]

Article 15 Freedom of expression

Amendments:

- Delete: This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.
- Delete: Art, science and research shall be free of constraint.
- Add: Restrictions can only be placed on this right in limited, specified circumstances.

So that the Article reads:

Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. Restrictions can only be placed on this right in limited, specified circumstances.

B: The right in article 15 is the right guaranteed by article 10 of the ECHR read with articles 16, 17 and 18. The full text of article 10 is as follows: [...]

Article 16 Right to Education

Amendments:

- Delete: , including in particular the right to receive free compulsory education
- Delete: The founding of education establishments shall be free of constraint
- Delete: The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be guaranteed.

So that the Article reads:

No one shall be denied the right to education.

B: The right in article 16 is the right guaranteed by article 2 of the First Protocol to the ECHR read with articles 17 and 18 and any reservations on this Protocol. The full text of article 2 is as follows: [...]

No person shall be denied the right to education. In the exercise of any functions which it assumes in relation to education and to teaching, the State shall respect the right of parents to ensure such education and teaching in conformity with their own religious and philosophical convictions.

Note:

- Education is an area where special care is needed to ensure no extension to Community competence. The UK's reservation on the second sentence to Article 2 of the First Protocol to the ECHR must be fully protected in the Charter.

PROCLAMATION OF RIGHTS

(PART A)

Article 1 Object and Purpose

- 1) All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and are entitled to equal protection of the law without any discrimination. In recognition of this, the European Union Institutions respect, within the spheres of their competence, the fundamental rights set out below.
- 2) The following provisions are addressed to the bodies and institutions of the European Union in the exercise of the powers and tasks assigned to them by the Treaties. They neither establish new tasks or competences for the Union nor do they extend its existing tasks or competences.
- 3) The fundamental rights are listed below in Part A. Part B [Definition of Rights] defines the nature, full extent and application of these rights.

Notes:

- ‘ Object and Purpose’ follows the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties and is perhaps a more accurate description than just ‘Article 1’.
- I have proposed no Part B text for Article 1.2.

Article 2 Right to Life

(1) Everyone’s right to life shall be protected by law

(2) No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed

Article 4 Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 5 Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

No one shall be held in slavery or servitude or required to perform forced or compulsory labour

Article 6 Liberty and Security

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person and cannot be deprived of it save in limited specific cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.

Article 8 Right to a fair trial

(1) Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable period of any criminal charge against him or her, or in determining his or her civil rights and obligations. Hearings shall be by an independent and impartial tribunal established by the law.

(2) If it is a criminal charge, the accused shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law and has certain guaranteed rights to defend himself or herself.

Article 10 No punishment without law

No one shall be punished except under the law

Article 11 Right not to be tried or punished twice

No one shall be tried or punished twice for the same criminal offence

Article 12 Respect for Private Life

Everyone has the right to respect for his or her private and family life, home and correspondence. These rights may be interfered with only in limited, specified circumstances.

Article 13 Family life

Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and found a family according to national law governing the exercise of this right.

Article 14 Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. Restrictions can only be placed on this right in limited, specified circumstances.

Article 15 Freedom of expression

Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. Restrictions can only be placed on this right in limited, specified circumstances.

Article 16 Right to Education

No one shall be denied the right to education.

Note:

- Education is an area where special care is needed to ensure no extension to Community competence. The UK's reservation on the second sentence to Article 2 of the First Protocol to the ECHR must be fully protected in the Charter.

DEFINITION OF RIGHTS

(PART B)

This Part defines the nature, full extent and application of the fundamental rights referred to in [Part A] [the Proclamation of Rights].

General Provisions

Where in this Charter reference is made to an Article of the ECHR or its Protocols, it shall be interpreted in accordance with the jurisprudence of the Strasbourg organs from time to time.

[Reference to reservations/derogations]

Note:

- It may be possible to shorten the Part B texts for ECHR rights using a umbrella Article such as ‘Each Article in this document refers to the rights guaranteed by the corresponding Articles of the ECHR, as specified below, read with Articles 17 and 18 and where applicable 16 of the Convention’.

Article 1 Object and Purpose

1(1): The principle of respect for the inviolable dignity and equality of the human person is the foundation for statements of fundamental rights throughout the European Union. That principle has effect in accordance with the constitutional traditions of Member States and is respected by the Union bodies and institutions. The principle of non-discrimination is the right in article 14 of the ECHR when read with articles 2-12, articles 1 and 2 of Protocol 1 and article 2 of Protocol 6 and read with articles 16, 17 and 18. The full text of ECHR article 14 is as follows [...]

Article 2 Right to Life

The rights in Article 2 are the rights guaranteed by Article 2 of and Articles 1, [2], 3 and 4 of Protocol 6 to the ECHR, read with ECHR Articles 17 and 18³. The full ECHR Article 2 is as follows [...]. The full text of relevant provisions of ECHR Protocol 6 is as follows [...]

Article 4 Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

The right in Article 4 is the right in Article 3 of the ECHR, the rights in which are guaranteed by that provision, read with ECHR Articles 17 and 18.

Article 5 Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

The right in Article 5 is the right guaranteed by Article 4 of the ECHR, read with ECHR Articles 17 and 18. The full ECHR text of Article 4 is as follows: [...]

³ It will need to be considered later where in the Charter we should set out the text of ancillary provisions of this kind.

Article 6 Liberty and Security

The rights in Article 6 are the rights guaranteed by Article 5 of the ECHR, read with ECHR Articles 17 and 18. The full text of ECHR Article 5 is as follows: [...]

Article 8 Right to a fair trial

The rights in Article 8 are the rights guaranteed by Article 6 of the ECHR read with Article 17 and 18. The full text is as follows [...]

Article 10 No punishment without law

The right in article 10 is the right guaranteed by article 7 of the ECHR read with articles 17 and 18. The full text of article 7 is as follows: [...]

Article 11 Right not to be tried or punished twice

The right in article 11 is the right guaranteed by article 4 of Protocol 7 to the ECHR read with articles 17 and 18. The full text of article 4 is as follows: [...]

Article 12 Respect for Private life

The right in article 12 is the right guaranteed by article 8 of the ECHR read with articles 17 and 18. The full text of article 8 is as follows: [...]

Article 13 Family life

The right in article 13 is the right guaranteed by article 12 of the ECHR read with articles 17 and 18. The full text of article 12 is as follows: [...]

Article 14 Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

The right in article 14 is the right guaranteed by article 9 of the ECHR read with articles 17 and 18. The full text of article 9 is as follows: [...]

Article 15 Freedom of expression

The right in article 15 is the right guaranteed by article 10 of the ECHR read with articles 16, 17 and 18. The full text of article 10 is as follows: [...]

Article 16 Right to Education

The right in article 16 is the right guaranteed by article 2 of the First Protocol to the ECHR read with articles 17 and 18 and any reservations on this Protocol. The full text of article 2 is as follows: [...]

No person shall be denied the right to education. In the exercise of any functions which it assumes in relation to education and to teaching, the State shall respect the right of parents to ensure such education and teaching in conformity with their own religious and philosophical convictions.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 7 avril 2000CHARTE 4180/00*CONTRIB 63*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-après des observations de M. Guy Braibant, Représentant Personnel du Gouvernement de la France, sur le document CHARTE 4149/00 CONVENT 13. ¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langue française seulement.

Paris, le 17 mars 2000

NOUVELLES OBSERVATIONS SUR LES ARTICLES 1 A 16
FAISANT L'OBJET DU DOCUMENT « CHARTE 4149/00 » DU 8 MARS 2000

Article 6

Il faudrait remplacer « dans des cas spécifiques et selon les voies légales » par « dans les cas et selon les formes prévues par la loi ».

La rédaction de la seconde phrase ne convient pas : elle semble ouvrir un champ à la fois très flou et plus vaste que celui permis par la CEDH pour les cas d'atteinte légale à la liberté.

Le fait de ne pas reprendre les cas précis d'atteintes énumérés à l'article 5 de la CEDH n'est pas gênant dans la mesure où la « clause plancher » prévoit que la Charte ne peut être moins protectrice que la CEDH.

Article 8

Les deux propositions devraient faire l'objet de deux paragraphes distincts.

Dans le second paragraphe, il faudrait supprimer « gratuite ». D'une part, l'aide juridictionnelle peut comporter ou non la gratuité des frais du procès. D'autre part, cette disposition pourrait être interprétée comme remettant en cause les systèmes qui, comme ceux qui existent en France, permettent de refuser l'aide juridictionnelle pour des raisons tenant au caractère sérieux du recours et pas seulement aux ressources de l'intéressé.

Article 9

Le titre proposé pour cet article est trop restrictif.

Par ailleurs, je crois préférable de le scinder en deux paragraphes, le premier consacrant le droit à la présomption d'innocence et le second celui au respect des droits de la défense.

Enfin, le second paragraphe pourrait être ainsi rédigé : « Le respect des droits de la défense en garanti à toutes personnes accusée ».

Article 10

Dans le premier paragraphe, la notion de « droit de l'Union », qui est imprécise et n'ajoute rien, devrait être supprimée.

Article 11

Afin de préciser que ce droit ne s'applique qu'à l'intérieur de la matière pénale et ne prohibe pas le cumul de sanctions disciplinaires et pénales pour un même fait, il convient de compléter cet article de la manière suivante : « ... par un jugement pénal définitif... ».

Article 13

Dans le paragraphe 2, il est préférable de se référer aux « lois nationales relatives à l'exercice de ce droit » plutôt qu'aux « lois des Etats membres », afin de se rapprocher du texte de la CEDH et d'éviter de poser des difficultés concernant les compétences respectives des Etats membre de l'Union.

Le paragraphe 3, tel qu'il est rédigé, aurait sans doute plus sa place parmi les droits économiques et sociaux.

Article 15

Le paragraphe 2 me semble devoir être supprimé. En effet, la liberté de l'art n'est pas contestable mais est couverte par la liberté d'expression. Quant à affirmer que la recherche et la science sont libres, cela me paraît difficile, comme le prouvent assez les débats relatifs au caractère éthique d'avancées récentes.

Au demeurant, cette phrase est en rupture avec tout le reste du texte qui proclame des droits et des libertés en faveur des individus et non d'activités génériques ou de concepts - dont les contours seraient en outre certainement à définir.

Article 16

Je crois qu'il nous faudrait trouver, pour le deuxième paragraphe, une formule permettant d'éviter que les sectes ne créent des établissements d'enseignement.

Guy BRAIBANT

Représentant du Président de la République et du Premier ministre
à la Convention chargée d'élaborer la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 28 March 2000CHARTE 4181/00*CONTRIB 64*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution from Mr. Erling Olsen, Personal Representative of the Government of Denmark on document Charte 4149/00 Convent 13. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English language only.

Dr. polit. Erling Olsen Søbredde 14 DK-2820 Gentofte
Tlf. +45 39 65 58 38 Fax +45 39 65 87 43 e-mail: eoaul@post11.tele.dk

Comments by Dr. Erling Olsen

17 March 2000

As foreseen in CONVENT 15 I wish to submit some written comments to document CONVENT 13. My comments are based on the following assumptions:

- That the Charter must address itself to relations between EU-citizens (and other persons within the jurisdiction of the Union) and the EU institutions (not the Member States) in order to be understood and appreciated by our citizens, (wording along the lines of TEU Article 6 paragraph 2 and Article 46 (d)).
- That the Charter in its implementation does not raise conflicts with other international procedures for the effective implementation of human rights, in particular the European Convention on Human Rights.
- That the Charter should reflect existing rights.
- That the provisions of the Charter shall be applicable to the institutions and organs of the Union within their existing competences. The Charter shall not extent nor create new competences for the Union.

Based on the above mentioned assumptions I believe that we will serve our citizens best by dividing the document into two interdependent parts. One Part (A) where we set out the fundamental rights and freedoms in a short and clear way making them easily read and understood and a second Part (B) explaining in more detail the exact scope of the Fundamental Rights concerned by preferable quoting the relevant/corresponding Article in for instance the European Convention on Human Rights.

This having been said, I wish at this stage of our proceedings to offer the following specific comments on COVENT 13 as presently drafted:

Re: Article 1

I can support the wording of this Article. As the text is primarily derived from the Universal Declaration of Human Rights the Commentary should start off with the quotation from that Declaration.

Concerning the horizontal issue of the applicability of the Charter as mentioned in the Commentary I find that such a provision concerning the scope of application could be drafted as a separate Article and not only as part of the preamble. The wording should reflect my before-mentioned comments under first and fourth indent. I propose the following wording: “The provisions of this Charter shall apply to the institutions and organs of the Union in the framework of the powers and tasks conferred on them by the Treaties. They shall not establish any competence or new tasks for the Union nor shall they extend the latter’s competence and tasks”.

Re: Article 2

As a general observation I wish to underline that we must be cautious not to differ with the text of the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR). We can not solve the problem by simply making a reference to TEU article 6 as regards to, for example, the exemptions. In my opinion this is far from sufficient to guarantee the relevant interpretation and limitations laid down in the correspondent Articles in the ECHR. I also believe we have to draw attention to the relevant case-law of the European Court of Human Rights. I suggest that in the statement of reasons (part B) we should for every Article quote the relevant corresponding text from the ECHR and make a reference to the jurisprudence of the European Court of Human Rights. It must be obvious to everyone that the first part (part A) can only be read in conjunction with the second part (part B), which spells out, inter alia, the relevant exceptions to the rule.

Re: Article 3

I support paragraph 1 but I find that paragraph 2 should be deleted. In the Commentary (part B) we could make a reference to the basic principles contained in the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine.

Re: Article 5

I refer to my general observation under Article 2.

Re: Article 7

The article describes how the other provisions under the Charter should be enforced. This article seems to me to have a more horizontal character and may therefore be deleted from this part of the Charter.

Re: Article 8

I suggest that the text in the first paragraph be extended in accordance with Article 6 (1) of the ECHR by the wording “In the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him...”. This precision is very important to underline.

Re: Article 9

I refer to my observations made under article 2. It should be considered to insert the principle that “everyone has the right not to be compelled to testify against himself or to confess guilt”. This fundamental principle is derived from the case law of the European Court of Human Rights and also to be found in the UN Convention on Civil and Political Rights (Article 14).

Re: Article 10

I prefer to keep the exact wording of Article 7 in the EHCR.

Re: Article 11

I refer to my general observation made under Article 2.

Re: Article 12

I refer to my general observation under Article 2.

Re: Article 13

As regards to Paragraph 1, I refer to my general observation under Article 2.

I suggest, however, that the first and second paragraph are combined and propose the following wording: “Everyone has the right to respect for his family life and the right to marry and to found a family, according to the laws of the Member States governing the exercise of this right”.

Paragraph 3 appears to be merely a policy statement rather than a fundamental right or freedom and should in my opinion be deleted.

Re: Article 14

I refer to my general observation under Article 2.

Re: Article 15

I refer to my general observation under Article 2.

Re: Article 16

Paragraph 2 is not quite clear and the Commentary is silent on this paragraph. Paragraph 2 should be deleted.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 30 March 2000CHARTE 4182/00*CONTRIB 65*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution by Mr. Prof. Dr. George Papadimitriou, Personnel Representative of the Government of Greece, on document Charte 4149/00 CONVENT 13 and Charte 4170/00 CONVENT 17.¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English language only.

PROF. DR. GEORGE PAPADIMITRIOU

30 SINA Str. - 106 72 ATHENS

TEL. 36.17.443, 36.35.137

FAX: 36.29.353

Comments to the document “Convent 17”

I. Principle of Democracy (Articles A and C)

1. Articles A and C should be integrated in one article due to their close connection. The provision of article C recognizes the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at elections for the European Parliament for citizens of the Union residing in a Member State of which they are not nationals. In this sense, it specifies the right laid down in article A paragraph 3 and it extends its content.

2. Paragraph 2 of article A is identical to article 6 paragraph 1 of the Conventions and is included in Title I. It should remain in its present place in order to retain its wide normative content not only for the field of fundamental rights but also for the structure and the function of the Union. It should be stressed out that article 6 paragraph 1 is the most important new provision in the Conventions for the institutional identity of the Union. For all the aforementioned reasons it should be deleted from article A.

3. Despite the inherent difficulties, the wording of paragraph 1 could probably be altered as follows: “All public authority stems from the peoples of the Union”.

4. Paragraph 3 of article A is already included in article 190 paragraph 1 of the Conventions. Its incorporation in the Charter does not create any problems regarding the systematic and normative approach of the division of the Conventions related to the European Parliament.

5. Article A’s paragraphs are renumbered according to the abovementioned remarks.

II. The right to participate in municipal elections (Article D)

1. This article is in its essence identical to article 19 paragraph 1 of the Conventions. Its incorporation in the Charter is a right choice keeping its existing wording and content.

2. Article D is renumbered as article B.

III. Political Parties (Article B)

1. Article B should only recognize the right of every person to establish political parties and participate in their function. On the other hand, the wording of the article which is related to the position of the political parties in the Union should remain, in its current form, a part of article 191 of the Conventions.

2. Article B is renumbered as article C.

IV. The right to good administration (Article E)

The wording of article E paragraph 2 should be altered as follows:

“This right especially includes”

2. The right of article E paragraph 3 which corresponds to article 21 paragraph 3 of the Conventions should be recognized not only for citizens but for every person.

Article E is renumbered as article D.

V. Right of access to documents (Article F)

1. The incorporation of this article appears to be a necessary enrichment of the Charter and therefore it should be included.

2. Article F is renumbered as article E.

VI. Freedom of Movement (Article I)

1. This article is identical to article 18 paragraph 1 of the Conventions. Its incorporation in the Charter is necessary, but in the chapter regarding individual rights.

2. It should be examined, though, whether paragraph 2 of article 18 should remain as it is in the Conventions.

VII. Non-discrimination (Article I)

1. This article corresponds to article 12 paragraph 1 of the Conventions. Its content could be enriched by mentioning at least some of the criteria of article 13 of the Conventions i.e. sex, national origin, religion.

VIII. Problems of legislative technique

The transfer of provisions from the Conventions to the Charter is a process that gives rise to many problems. Relatively, a legislative technique should be developed with great care because this choice is inevitably going to expand.

bouli/com.art.17/24.3.00

Comments to the document “Convent 13”
(Articles 15 - 16, Section II)

I. Freedom of expression (Article 15)

1. The wording of the second sentence of article 15 paragraph 1 is altered as follows: “This freedom extends to all means of expression and especially includes...”.

2. Paragraph 2 of article 15 should be detached and form a separate article. On the other hand, the content of research should be further defined in order to avoid extreme expressions of that freedom.

II. Right to education (Article 16)

Paragraph 1 of article 16 should be altered as follows:

“Every person has a right to education, which especially includes the claim for free...”.

2. In paragraph 2 of article 16, it should be elaborated whether it refers to all the levels of education or only to the basic level.

3. In paragraph 3 of article 16, the wording should be altered as follows:

“The right of the parents to ensure the learning and education of their children according to their religious and philosophical beliefs should be exercised in order to serve the child’s best interest”.

4. The Charter should also include provisions for the new forms of education i.e. continuing education.

III. Horizontal articles (Section II)

In article X the possibility should be examined of including the wording of the relevant article of the European Convention on Human Rights.

March 24, 2000

Bouli/Com.Art. 13/24.3.00

PROF. DR. GEORGE PAPADIMITRIOU

30 SINA Str. - 106 72 ATHENS

TEL. 36.17.443, 36.35.137

FAX: 36.29.353

Criteria for the inclusion of a right in the Charter

In drafting the Charter, two simple questions arise : (a) what rights are to be included in the Charter and (b) what the content of those rights should be. The answer to those questions may be prompted by certain criteria which can be used as “working tools”, first, for inclusion of a right in the Charter and, second, for determination of the content of that right. Here the following criteria suggest themselves in particular :

1. Recognition of a right in the case-law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities

The first criterion to suggest itself is recognition of a right in the settled case-law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities. This is indeed the “raw material” which is designed to constitute the system of protection of fundamental rights in the European Union.

2. Rights safeguarded in European and International Conventions

A comparable but clearly separate criterion is, in addition, the safeguarding of a fundamental right in related European and international conventions. Here certain distinctions must be made which will determine the order in which recourse will be made to them. The texts to which express reference is made in the Treaties of Maastricht and Amsterdam, that is to say the European Convention on Human Rights (and its Protocols), the European Social Charter (1961) and the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers (1989), take precedence. It is worth pointing out that those texts, being expressly referred to in the Treaties, constitute sources of Community Law.

Secondly, recourse may be made to other international texts (regional and universal, general and special) for the protection of rights such as, for instance, the United Nations Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the United Nations Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (1966).

3. The constitutional traditions of the Member States

A different version of the same criterion is recourse to the constitutional traditions of the Member States (Article 6(2) of the TEU) for the purpose of ascertaining each time whether and with what content a specific right is safeguarded. In that connection two problems arise in particular: (a) whether a right must be expressly laid down or whether it is sufficient for it to be grounded in the Constitution and (b) whether the laying down or grounding of a right in all Constitutions without exception is required or only in the majority of Constitutions. Clarification is also necessary as to whether an overwhelming or a clear majority is required.

4. Significance of the right for the Community legal order

In order for a right to be included in the Charter its significance for the Community legal order must always be substantiated. The value of that criterion can be shown if it is borne in mind that the beneficiaries of the system that is being fashioned are the citizens of the European Union and the system is directed at its institutions, with the aim of protecting the citizen vis-à-vis Community powers rather than vis-à-vis any other powers.

On that point it is worth noting that, as the competences of the European Union are gradually broadened to cover new areas, the protection of the European citizen must correspondingly be broadened with the redefinition of rights or the establishment of new rights. The Charter does not therefore aim to provide a solution once and for all to the problem, since it will be enriched in the future “in waves”, with other rights top, in parallel with the progress of European unification.

5. The degree of institutional development in the European Union

The above criteria facilitate the task of identifying the rights which mark the current level of protection of the European citizen vis-à-vis Community power. In cases where the further broadening of fundamental rights is considered to be required, the degree of institutional development in the European Union figures as a criterion, with the inclusion in the Charter of rights which reinforce the democratic and social character of the Union under the rule of law. This is a criterion whose use would contribute to strengthening the system of protection of fundamental rights and the better fulfillment of its task. That prospect finds support in particular in Article 6(2) of the TEU, in which for the first time democracy and the rule of law are declared to be principles of the European Union.

Is the Charter to be binding or declaratory ?

1. One of the preliminary questions which rightly preoccupied the Convention from the beginning of its work is the nature of the Charter, in other words the question whether the Charter will be binding or merely declaratory. The answer is vital, not only for the determination of the ultimate objective of the Convention but also for the choice of method by which the Charter will be drafted and for the shaping of its provisions.

2. Of crucial significance for the answer to that question is of course the content of the mandate given to the Convention by the Cologne Summit. However also significant - and this has not as yet been emphasized as much as it should be - are the provisions of the constitutional texts of the European Union which refer, directly or indirectly, to the need to protect the European citizen vis-à-vis the powers of the Community institutions. Consequently recourse to the content of the mandate is a necessary but not sufficient condition for determining the nature of the Charter. It is vital to clarify, first, the content of the mandate, which forms part of a very important political decision and, second, the related provisions of the Treaties, which have a normative quality.

3. In the relevant passage of the Conclusions of the Cologne European Council, it is stated “at the present stage of development of the European Union, the fundamental rights applicable at Union level should be consolidated in a Charter and thereby made more evident”. It is not, at first sight, easy to understand from the above formulation whether the leaders of the States and Governments were intending to draft a binding or a declaratory text. However, the fact that the term “rights which apply” was used enables the conclusion to be drawn that they had in mind the drafting of a binding text with provisions binding by definition or with provisions which acquire a binding character due to their normative relevance to binding provisions.

4. The development of Article 5, paragraphs 1 and 2, of the TEU bears out that position. Paragraph 2 states that the Union is to respect fundamental rights, as guaranteed by the European Convention on Human Rights, and as they result from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States. In addition, paragraph 1 elevates the principle of rule of law to a fundamental principle of the Union. Since, therefore, paragraph 2 specifies the progress towards establishing a Union governed by the rule of law and paragraph 1 expressly declares the rule of law to be one of its principles, there is a direct requirement to draft a Charter with binding force which will set out the above principle and give it a specific content. The same applies, mutatis mutandis, with the reference in Article 6, paragraph 1, of the TEU to the principle of democracy as a principle of the Union. The Convention should, therefore, from the beginning direct itself on the basis of the above provisions to drawing up a text that will be of a binding character, overcoming any contrary arguments, without, however, exceeding the mandate given by the Cologne Summit.

5. It is also worth noting that in Annex IV of the Cologne Conclusions express reference is made to the prospect of incorporating the Charter in the Treaties and by extent, to the establishment of its binding character. Even though that version stands under the condition of the relevant decision of the member-states, the mere mentioning in the Cologne Conclusions of the possibility of incorporation for the Charter, implies for the Convention an obligation independent of its possibility to be realized. It is about the obligation to draft a Charter in a form capable to correspond to the needs dictated by the possibility in the Cologne Conclusions.

March 24, 2000

ENTWURF DER CHARTA DER GRUNDRECHTE DER EUROPÄISCHEN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brüssel, den 28. März 2000CHARTE 4183/00*CONTRIB 66*ÜBERMITTLUNGSVERMERK

Betr.: Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union

Finden Sie bitte nachstehend Anmerkungen der Arbeitsgruppe der deutschen Länder, vorgelegt von Herrn Jürgen. Gnauck, Vertreter des deutschen Bundestags, zu Dokument Charta 4149/00 Convent 13.¹

¹ Dieser Text wurde nur in deutscher Sprache übermittelt.

Thüringer Staatskanzlei • Postfach 997 • 99021 Erfurt

Minister für Bundes- und
Europaangelegenheiten und
Chef der Staatskanzlei

An den
Vorsitzenden des Konvents
zur Ausarbeitung des Entwurfs
einer Charta der Grundrechte der EU
Herrn Bundespräsidenten a.D.
Prof. Dr. Roman Herzog
Sekretariat des Konvents

Fax: 0032-2-285 7837
e-mail: Jean-Paul.Jacqué@consilium.eu.int

Geschäftszeichen:
33/KI-03145

Ihr Zeichen, Ihre Nachricht vom

Telefon

Datum
17.3.2000

Anmerkungen der Arbeitsgruppe der deutschen Länder zum Vermerk des Präsidiums
CHARTE 4149/00 CONVENT 13

Neuer Vorschlag für die Artikel 1 bis 12 (jetzt 1 bis 16)

Sehr geehrter Herr Vorsitzender,

das Präsidium hat für die informelle Sitzung des Konvents am 20./21. März 2000 neue Vorschläge für die Artikel 1 bis 12 (jetzt 1 bis 16) eines Entwurfs der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union vorgelegt. Die deutschen Länder haben sich im Rahmen ihrer Abstimmungsgespräche ein erstes Meinungsbild verschafft. Ich erlaube mir, Ihnen diese Einschätzung zu übermitteln und möchte Sie herzlich bitten, unsere Anregungen im Verlaufe der Diskussion im Konvent zu berücksichtigen.

Mit freundlichen Grüßen

Jürgen Gnauck
Minister

Thüringer Staatskanzlei

Erfurt, 16. März 2000

Anmerkungen der Arbeitsgruppe der deutschen Länder zur Erarbeitung eines Entwurfs der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union
zu Dokument

CHARTE 4149/00 CONVENT 13 neuer Vorschlag für die Artikel 1 bis 12 (jetzt 1 bis 16)

Die Arbeitsgruppe der deutschen Länder hat am 14. März 2000 das o.g. Dokument einer ersten Prüfung unterzogen (eine Stellungnahme zu dem Korrigendum vom 16. März 2000 war nicht mehr möglich) und erlaubt sich dazu folgende Anmerkungen:

Generell wird festgestellt, dass eine endgültige Stellungnahme zu den vorgeschlagenen Artikeln erst erfolgen kann, wenn ein alle Artikel umfassender Entwurf der Charta vorliegt, der - insbesondere anhand der Platzierung der einzelnen Artikel im Chartatext - eine systematische Gesamtanalyse ermöglicht.

Zu Artikel 1. Würde des Menschen

Die Europäische Union ist eine Wertegemeinschaft, in der die Würde des Menschen im Mittelpunkt steht. Darum wird ausdrücklich begrüßt, dass im vorliegenden Entwurf die Würde des Menschen als Fundament der Grundrechte an die Spitze der Grundrechte der Charta gestellt wurde. Allerdings wird in Anlehnung an die Erklärung des Europäischen Parlaments von 1989 und an Artikel 1 Grundgesetz für die Bundesrepublik Deutschland folgende Formulierung bevorzugt:
" Die Würde des Menschen ist unantastbar. "

Essentielle Anforderung der Länder an den Regelungsgehalt der Charta ist, dass diese eine Aussage zu ihrem Anwendungsbereich enthält. Eine entsprechende Aussage lediglich in der rechtlich unverbindlichen Präambel der Charta wäre nicht akzeptabel. Ausdrücklich unterstützt wird aus diesem Grund der Vorschlag, dem Artikel 1 einen Absatz 2 hinzuzufügen, in dem der Anwendungsbereich der Charta bereichsübergreifend festgelegt wird. Eine auf diese Weise an exponierter Stelle im Chartatext vorangestellte Generalklausel ist für das Verständnis der nachfolgenden Regelungsinhalte der Charta aus Sicht der Länder unabdingbar.

Zu Artikel 2. Recht auf Leben

Der vorgelegte Formulierungsvorschlag wird ausdrücklich unterstützt.

Zu Artikel 3. Recht auf Unversehrtheit

Zu Absatz 1 wird die vorgelegte Formulierung unterstützt.

Zu Absatz 2 melden die Länder erheblichen Prüfvorbehalt an. Der dort gewählte Wortlaut wird der Komplexität der aufgeworfenen Probleme nicht gerecht.

Es wird vorgeschlagen, einzuhaltende Grundsätze (unter anderem für Medizin und Biologie als potentielle bioethische Problembereiche), etwa unter enger Bezugnahme auf die Würde des Menschen und die körperliche Unversehrtheit besser allgemein und in einem separaten Artikel zu formulieren.

Grundsätzlich wird darauf hingewiesen, dass nicht alle Mitgliedstaaten dem Übereinkommen des Europarates über Menschenrechte und Biomedizin beigetreten sind.

Die unter Absatz 2 (Spiegelstriche 1 bis 3) aufgeführten Grundsätze erscheinen stark interpretationsbedürftig; eine Aufnahme in den Chartatext wird daher abgelehnt.

Wo liegt die Grenze zwischen lauterer und verwerflichen eugenischen Praktiken?

Hat die Nutzung des menschlichen Körpers oder einzelner Teile zur Erzielung von Gewinnen (z.B. im Falle des Blutplasmas) ausschließlich negativen – also verbotswürdigen - Charakter?

Generell sollte geprüft werden, ob nicht bereits Artikel 1 i.V.m. Artikel 3 Absatz 1 ausreichenden Schutz vor Missbrauch für die aufgeworfenen Problembereiche umfasst.

Zu Artikel 4. Verbot der Folter und der unmenschlichen Behandlung

Der Formulierungsvorschlag wird zur Kenntnis genommen.

Zu Artikel 5. Verbot der Sklaverei und der Zwangsarbeit

Der Textvorschlag wird inhaltlich unterstützt; jedoch besteht weiterer Prüfbedarf hinsichtlich der hierzu erforderlichen Schrankenwirkung. Einem Missverständnis dahingehend, dass zwar das Verbot von Zwangs- und Pflichtarbeit, nicht aber dessen Einschränkungen aus der EMRK übernommen werden sollten, muss vorgebeugt werden.

Zu Artikel 6. Recht auf Freiheit und Sicherheit

Der Begriff "Sicherheit" erscheint aus Ländersicht weiterhin nicht akzeptabel. Ist er im Lichte der EMRK zu sehen oder eröffnet die Formulierung weitergehende Ansprüche gegenüber den Mitgliedstaaten und ihren Untergliederungen in den Bereichen Justiz und Inneres? Eine Eröffnung von Leistungsrechten in den genannten Bereichen wird ausdrücklich abgelehnt

Sind mit den in Satz 2 genannten "besonderen Fällen" die in Artikel 5 EMRK festgelegten Fälle gemeint oder soll damit eine Art Verhältnismäßigkeitsgrundsatz in die Norm eingefügt werden? Jedenfalls wird Wert auf das kumulative Vorliegen der Voraussetzungen "in besonderen Fällen" und "auf die gesetzlich vorgeschriebene Weise" gelegt.

Zu Artikel 7. Recht auf wirksame Beschwerde

Es wird vorgeschlagen, die Überschrift umzuformulieren in "Rechtsweggarantie", und den Artikel gegebenenfalls wie folgt zu fassen: "Jeder Person, deren Rechte und Freiheiten durch Maßnahmen der Europäischen Union oder in Anwendung des Gemeinschaftsrechts verletzt worden sind, steht der Rechtsweg offen."

Vor der Verankerung einer Rechtsschutzgarantie müsste geklärt werden, durch welche Gerichte (EuGH, nationale Gerichte) der Rechtsschutz gewährt werden soll.

Zu Artikel 8. Recht auf ein unparteiisches Gericht

Soweit hier die generelle Forderung nach einer öffentlichen Verhandlung enthalten sein sollte, wird dies strikt abgelehnt, da dieser Forderung berechnete Interessen Dritter und unter Umständen auch die des Angeklagten entgegenstehen können. Artikel 6 Absatz 1 EMRK ermöglicht zwar den Ausschluss der Presse und Öffentlichkeit zum Schutz der Prozessparteien. Zeugen wären aber von dieser Regelung nicht umfasst.

Die Aufnahme eines Satzes 2 zur Prozesskostenhilfe wird grundsätzlich skeptisch gesehen. Ist eine solche Regelung notwendig? Reichen die mitgliedstaatlichen Regelungen hierzu nicht aus? Unabhängig davon wird äußerster Wert darauf gelegt, festzustellen, dass der Begriff "unentgeltliche Prozesskostenhilfe" auch Stundungen, Ratenzahlungen, Darlehen u.ä. umfasst. Die Garantie unentgeltlicher Prozesskostenhilfe ohne konditionalen Bezug zur Unerlässlichkeit dieser Hilfe, um den Zugang zum Recht zu gewährleisten, wird strikt abgelehnt.

Zu Artikel 9. Recht der Verteidigung

Der vorgelegte Textentwurf wird unterstützt.

Zu Artikel 10. Keine Strafe ohne Gesetz

Zu Absatz 1 wird die vorgelegte Formulierung unterstützt.

Zu Absatz 2 gibt es derzeit keine Anmerkungen.

Zu Artikel 11. Recht, wegen derselben Sache nicht zweimal vor Gericht gestellt oder bestraft zu werden Nach Art. 54 des Schengener Durchführungsübereinkommens (SDÜ) und Art. 1 des Abkommens vom 25. Mai 1987 zwischen den Mitgliedstaaten der Europäischen Gemeinschaften über das Verbot der doppelten Strafverfolgung verurteilte Urteile aus den Vertragsstaaten die Strafklage in Deutschland.

Allerdings sehen Artikel 55 SDÜ bzw. Artikel 2 des Abkommens von 1987 eine Reihe von Ausnahmemöglichkeiten vor, die in dem dort geregelten Rahmen abweichende Erklärungen zulassen. Hiervon haben die Mitgliedstaaten, darunter auch die Bundesrepublik Deutschland, Gebrauch gemacht. Es liegt eine entsprechende deutsche Erklärung zu dem Abkommen von 1987 vor.

Das Abkommen ist im Verhältnis Deutschland, Dänemark, Frankreich, Italien, den Niederlanden, Portugal und Österreich bereits anwendbar.

Zu Artikel 12. Achtung des Privatlebens

Die vorgelegte Textfassung suggeriert das Vorliegen eines Leistungsrechtes. Es wird vorgeschlagen, den Artikel durch Aufteilung in verschiedene Artikel zu entzerren. Zunächst sollte das Persönlichkeitsrecht als zentrales Freiheitsrecht formuliert werden. Nach hiesiger Sicht wäre der Begriff der "Ehre" davon erfasst und könnte daher entfallen.

Der Schutz der Wohnung sowie die Wahrung des Brief-, Post- und Fernmeldegeheimnisses sollten getrennt und in unterschiedlichen Artikeln niedergeschrieben werden.

Zu Artikel 13. Familienleben

Die Einfügung eines solchen Artikels wird grundsätzlich für verzichtbar erachtet. Es wird darauf hingewiesen, dass die EU keine familienpolitische und familienrechtliche Zuständigkeit besitzt. Die Formulierung darf keinen Schutzauftrag der EU oder eine durch die EU zu sichernde Institutsgarantie herleiten. Hilfsweise wird folgende Formulierung für Absatz 1 vorgeschlagen: "Jede Person hat das Recht auf Achtung ihrer Ehe und Familie".

Die vorliegende Formulierung zu Absatz 2 ist obsolet, da sie lediglich festzustellen vermag, dass die Mitgliedstaaten die Ausübung des Rechts in differenzierter Form regeln.

Die Länder sprechen sich für die Streichung des Absatzes 3 aus, da er in der vorliegenden Formulierung ein umfassendes Leistungsrecht gewähren würde.

Zu Artikel 14. Gedanken-, Gewissens- und Religionsfreiheit

Derzeit gibt es hierzu keine Anmerkungen. Es wird jedoch darauf hingewiesen, dass die vorliegende Formulierung das "weltanschauliche Bekenntnis" außer Acht lässt.

Zu Artikel 15. Freiheit der Meinungsäußerung

Derzeit sind keine Anmerkungen veranlasst.

Artikel 16. Recht auf Bildung

Absatz 1 suggeriert in der vorliegenden Form ein umfassendes Leistungsrecht und sollte daher im Sinne eines Elementarschutzes und unter dem Gesichtspunkt des Gleichheitssatzes formuliert werden:

„Gleicher und gerechter Zugang zu vorhandenen Bildungsstätten wird entsprechend den Fähigkeiten und Möglichkeiten des einzelnen eröffnet.“

Es wäre deutlich zu machen, dass die Mitgliedstaaten gleichen und gerechten Zugang zu Bildungsstätten nur im Rahmen der vorhandenen Kapazitäten gewährleisten müssen. Die Verpflichtung zur Schaffung neuer, darüber hinausgehender Kapazitäten muss ausgeschlossen sein.

Gegen Absatz 2 bestehen erhebliche Bedenken. Er muss gestrichen werden, da er in der vorliegenden Form die Gründung von Lehranstalten jeglicher staatlicher Kontrolle entziehen würde.

Absatz 3 muss prinzipiell aus Artikel 16 ausgegliedert werden.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 28 March 2000CHARTE 4184/00*CONTRIB 67*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter comments on document Charte 4149/00 Convent 13 submitted by Mr. Gunnar Jansson, Representative of the Finnish Parliament. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English and Finnish language.

Mr Gunnar Jansson,
Representative of the Finnish Parliament,
Vice-president of the Representatives
of the National Parliaments

17 March 2000

COMMENTS ON DOCUMENT "CONVENT 13"

Article 8. Right to a fair trial

Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. Free legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is indispensable to ensure the effectiveness of access to justice.

Proposed new Article 8:

Everyone has the right to have his case dealt with appropriately and without undue delay by a competent court of law or other authority, as well as to have a decision pertaining to his rights or obligations reviewed by a court of law or other independent organ for the administration of justice.

The consideration of a case by a court of law or other independent organ for the administration of justice shall be public, and the person concerned shall have the right to be heard, the right to receive a reasoned decision and the right to appeal as well as other guarantees of a fair trial and good governance before the court of law or other independent organ for the administration of justice.

Statement of reasons

Paragraph 1 in Article 6 of the European Convention of Human Rights has proved to be difficult to interpret, as it focuses on the consideration of criminal charges and civil litigation relating to the rights and obligations of the individual. However, in its case law the European Court of Human Rights has interpreted the provision as entailing a right to a judicial decision even in respect of cases falling within the sphere of public law, such as withdrawal of an authorisation to engage in business activities or other comparable authorisation, or conflict of interests between a public authority and the individual. Therefore the wording of Article 8, paragraph 1 of the Charter has been extended in scope, in comparison with the European Convention of Human Rights, so as to cover all kinds of cases pertaining to the rights and obligations of the individual as well as the consideration of such cases before competent (administrative) authorities other than courts of law.

Paragraph 1 also provides everyone with the right to appeal against decisions concerning his rights or obligations. This addition makes it possible to restrict the scope of Article 7 of the Charter, in the same way as Article 13 of the European Convention, to exclusively comprise violations of those rights and freedoms which are protected by the Charter.

Paragraph 2 concerns the guarantees of a fair trial and good governance. These include guarantees additional to those falling within the scope of paragraph 1, which are an integral part of the right to a fair trial and good governance. The paragraph enlists as such guarantees the publicity of proceedings, the right to be heard and the right to receive a reasoned decision which traditionally have been considered the most important guarantees of legal protection. Cost-free legal assistance would be part of the guarantees of a fair trial, although it is not explicitly mentioned.

I also agree with the statement of Mr Paavo Nikula and Mrs Tuija Brax about the structure and linguistic form of the Charter of the Fundamental Rights in their proposal.

Gunnar Jansson
Representative of the Finnish Parliament,
Vice-president of the Representatives of the National Parliaments

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 28 March 2000CHARTE 4185/00*CONTRIB 68*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter comments on document Charte 4149/00 Convent 13 submitted by Mr. Paavo Nikula, Personal Representative of the Finnish Government, and Mrs Tuija Brax, Representative of the Finnish Parliament. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English and Finnish language.

Mr Paavo Nikula,
Personal Representative of the Finnish Government
Mrs Tuija Brax, Representative of the Finnish Parliament

17 March 2000

COMMENTS ON DOCUMENT "CONVENT 13"

Structure of the Charter of fundamental rights

In our opinion the scope of application of the Charter, referred to in the statement of reasons for Article 1, is an issue that must be regulated in the first part of the document. Furthermore, the issue is of such significance that it should rather be included in a separate Article than merely be mentioned in the preamble. We also find it important to have a specific entity covering all the horizontal questions. For these reasons we would suggest the following kind of structure:

The Charter of fundamental rights would have a preamble, and Part I would contain extensive provisions on all the horizontal questions.

Example:

Part 1 - Horizontal questions

Article 1 - Scope of the Charter

Article 2 - General derogation clause

Article 3 - Charter and domestic provisions on fundamental rights

Article 4 - Minimum level of protection

Part 2 of the Charter would contain the Articles on individual rights to be protected (in consecutive order starting from Article 1), basically as suggested in Convent 13. Part 3 of the Charter would state reasons for each right (similarly in consecutive order starting from 1), basically as suggested in Convent 13. (As an example for the relationship between Part 2 and Part 3 of the Charter, see the comparable structure in Parts I and II of the Revised European Social Charter.)

Wording

In order to avoid unnecessary problems of interpretation, one should make sure that the internal structures of Articles are consistent and the wording is precise. It is not necessary to refine the wording of the text until after agreement on the substance of the Articles has been reached. However, the following aspects relating to the structure of the Charter should be paid attention to already at this stage:

- The Articles should be written in the form of uncontested rights (as in Article 2, paragraph 1) or prohibitions (as in Article 2, paragraph 2). This kind of a formulation is justified as it cannot be interpreted as extending the competence or tasks of the European Union. In this respect provisions ensuring (Article 13, paragraph 3) or guaranteeing a certain right (Article 16, paragraph 3) allow different interpretations. Similarly the Finnish translation of Article 15, paragraph 2 leaves room for interpretation, although the English wording is less problematic.

- The aim with the formulation of Articles in Convent 13 has been to avoid derogation clauses relating to individual rights. However, there is a specific derogation clause in the last sentence of Article 6. The internal structure of the Articles should be consistent. The Convention must determine the legal meaning it wishes to give for a certain derogation clause, in case such derogation clauses are intended to be used.
- The requirement of consistency in the wording, referred to above, also concerns the requirement that limitations must be prescribed by law. Such a requirement has been included in certain Articles (second sentence in Article 6, and paragraph 2 of Article 13). It must be clearly indicated that this kind of a requirement does not entail an obligation upon the Member States to take legislative measures, for example.

Article 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman and degrading treatment.

Proposed new Article 4:

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment, nor expelled to a State where he would be in danger of being subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman treatment.

Statement of reasons

The principle of non-refoulement is an established principle in the case law of the European Court of Human Rights, being an integral element of interpretation of Article 3 of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms. (see e.g. the Soering Case, Eur. Court of H.R., Judgment of July 7, 1989; and especially the Chahal Case, Eur. Court of H.R., Judgment of November 15, 1996).

Article 12. Respect for private life

Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy, his honour, his home and the confidentiality of his communications.

Proposed new Article 12:

Everyone has the right to protection of his private and family life, his honour, his home and the confidentiality of his communications.

Statement of reasons

The substance of Article 12 has been changed so as to make it a clear right. The protection of family life included in Article 8 of the European Convention has been included; see statement of reasons for Article 13.

Article 13. Family life

- 1. Everyone has the right to respect for his family life.
- 2. Everyone has the right to marry and to found a family, according to the laws of the Member States governing the exercise of this right.
- 3. Protection of the family on a legal, economic and social level shall be ensured.

Proposed new Article 13:

Article 13. Right to marriage

Everyone has the right to marry and to found a family according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right.

Statement of reasons

The modernised version of the right to marriage corresponds to Article 12, paragraph 2 of the European Convention of Human Rights. The protection of family life (Convent 13: paragraphs 2 and 3 of Article 13) is included in the proposed new Article 12 in which it is given as a right of the individual. This kind of a formulation and structuring is closer to the wording of the European Convention, as well as its object and purpose.

Article 15. Freedom of expression

- 1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.
- 2. Art, science and research shall be free of constraint.

Statement of reasons

See the statement of reasons for Article 16.

Article 16. Right to education

1. No person shall be denied the right to education, including in particular the right to receive free compulsory education.
2. The founding of educational establishments shall be free of constraint.
3. The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be guaranteed.

Proposed new Article 16:

1. Everyone has the right to education, including in particular the right to receive free compulsory education.
2. The founding of educational establishments shall be free of constraint.
3. The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be guaranteed.

Statement of reasons

The form of a positive right in paragraph 1 is better and corresponds to the interpretation of the European Convention of Human Rights by the Strasbourg organs.

Paragraph 3 has a link to the separate Article on the rights of the child, and these two should later be dealt with together. The Convention on the Rights of the Child emphasises the principle of the best interests of the child, apart from the rights of the parents.

The last two sentences in the statement of reasons, concerning academic freedom, should be removed and inserted in the statement of reasons for paragraph 2 of Article 15. Apart from academic freedom, the principle of autonomy of university education should be mentioned. (“The principles of academic freedom and autonomy of university education...”).

We also agree with the statement by Mr Gunnar Jansson about article 8 of the Charter of the Fundamental Rights in his proposal.

Paavo Nikula
Personal Representative of the Finnish Government

Tuija Brax
Representative of the Finnish Parliament

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 28 mars 2000CHARTE 4186/00*CONTRIB 69*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-après des propositions d'amendements relatives au document
Charte 4149/00 Convent 13, présentées par M. Ben Fayot, Représentant du Parlement luxembourgeois. ¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langue française seulement.

Monsieur Roman Herzog
Président
de la Convention pour l'élaboration d'une charte des droits fondamentaux de l'UE
Bruxelles

Luxembourg, le 17 mars 2000

Monsieur le Président,

Je vous prie de trouver ci-joint quelques propositions d'amendement concernant les articles 1 à 15 (Charte 4149/00 CONVENT 13).

- Quant à l'exposé des motifs concernant l'article 1, je suis d'avis qu'il n'est pas indiqué de le compléter par un paragraphe 2 d'une tout autre nature. Il convient plutôt d'en faire un préambule général pour lequel il suffit d'une phrase: " Les dispositions de la présente charte sont applicables aux institutions et organes de l'Union dans le cadre des compétences et des tâches qui leur sont attribuées par les Traités ainsi qu'aux Etats membres lorsqu'ils mettent en oeuvre le droit communautaire." La dernière phrase est à biffer. Elle ne fait que répéter la première, mais par la négative, et elle crée dès l'abord une impression "négative" quant à la charte.

- Article 8 : La deuxième phrase peut être modifiée en remplaçant "octroyer" par "accorder" (octroyer, c'est imposer de force). La formulation peut être plus ramassée.

" Une aide juridique gratuite est accordée à ceux qui ne disposent pas de ressources suffisantes pour leur assurer un accès effectif à la justice."

- Article 9 : Remplacer la 2e partie de la phrase par une nouvelle phrase. L'article se lirait ainsi: " Tout accusé est présumé innocent jusqu'à ce que sa culpabilité ait été légalement établie. Le respect des droits de la défense est garanti."

- Article 13 : Le paragraphe 2 serait à reformuler de la façon suivante:

" 2. Toute personne a le droit de se marier et de fonder une famille conformément aux lois des Etats membres (relatives à l'exercice de ce droit)."

L'élément de phrase entre parenthèses peut être omis à mon avis.

- Article 15 : Ne suffit-il pas, dans le 2e paragraphe, de ne citer que l'art et la science, la recherche étant une sous-catégorie des deux?

" 2. L'art et la science sont libres. "

- Article 16 : Cet article comportant deux points de vue - celui de l'enfant (et/ou de l'adulte) et celui des parents - , le paragraphe 2 qui soulève d'importants problèmes dans certains pays peut être omis.

De nombreux problèmes d'interprétation peuvent surgir à cause de l'imprécision et de la multiplicité des termes employés: éducation, instruction, enseignement. L'éducation concerne une approche plus générale, les termes d'instruction et d'enseignement sont ciblés sur l'acquisition de connaissances et de méthodes.

On pourrait proposer la formulation suivante:

" Art. 16 Droit à l'instruction

1. Nul ne peut se voir refuser le droit à l'instruction qui comporte notamment la faculté de suivre gratuitement l'enseignement obligatoire.

2. Le droit des parents d'assurer l'instruction de leurs enfants conformément à leurs convictions est respecté. "

Ce recentrage est indiqué puisqu'il semble acquis qu'il y aura un article sur les droits des enfants dans lequel on pourra revenir sur le problème plus général de l'éducation.

Veuillez agréer, Monsieur le Président, l'expression de mes sentiments distingués.

Ben Fayot
représentant de la Chambre des Députés du Grand-Duché de Luxembourg

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 28 mars 2000CHARTE 4187/00*CONTRIB 70*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-après des observations sur le document Charte 4149/00 Convent 13, présentées par M. Stefano Rodotà, Représentant personnel du Gouvernement de l'Italie. ¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langue française seulement.

Observations sur la proposition de rédaction des articles 1-16 de la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

art. 3

La référence à certains principes du n° 2 ne peut être limitée uniquement au "domaine de la médecine et de la biologie". En effet, l'intégrité physique et psychique des individus est désormais mise également en danger par des activités d'ordre commercial (comme cela a lieu, par exemple, aux Etats Unis avec les services génétiques fournis directement aux personnes d'organisations d'entreprises). Il faut par conséquent que les principes soient affirmés d'une manière générale, par exemple comme suit:

- Aucune intervention concernant l'intégrité physique et psychique d'un individu ne peut être effectuée sans le consentement libre et informé de l'intéressé.
- Le corps humain et ses parties ne peuvent en aucun cas constituer une source de gain.

L'éventuelle insertion dans la Charte de principes concernant l'eugénétique exige d'être mieux précisés en raison de la nécessité de définir exactement ce que l'on entend justement par "eugénétique", étant donné l'ampleur croissante des possibles interventions génétiques; et de la référence à la clonation qui exige pour le moins une spécification portant sur la "clonation reproductive d'êtres humains".

art. 12

Ajouter "de son propre honneur et de la liberté et du secret de ses communications".

art. 15

Modifier le n° 1 de la manière suivante (voir la Déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme des Nations Unies): "Ce droit comprend la liberté d'opinion et la liberté de chercher, recevoir et diffuser des informations...".

Il est en outre indispensable d'introduire une référence au fait que ce droit est concrètement limité non seulement par de possibles ingérences d'autorités publiques ou contraintes liées aux frontières, mais aussi par des conditionnements économiques découlant surtout des concentrations de la propriété des médias. Il faudrait par conséquent reformuler comme suit la partie finale du n° 1: "sans qu'il y ait possibilité d'ingérences des autorités publiques, de limitations de frontière et de conditionnements découlant des concentrations de la propriété des médias.

Je me suis borné à traiter uniquement les questions les plus importantes. Je suis toute la matinée au numéro 06/6818636

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 28 March 2000CHARTE 4188/00*CONTRIB 71*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter comments and draft amendments on document Charte 4149/00 Convent 13 submitted by Mr. Andrew Duff, member of the European Parliament. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted only in English language.

Andrew Duff

Mr Roman Herzog
President of the Convention
European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights

17 March 2000

1. Explanatory Statements

I write concerning the nature and style of the explanatory memoranda.

On the presumption that the Charter will have mandatory effect upon European Union institutions and agencies, we need to clarify with some urgency the legal force of the accompanying statements.

As I understand it, the proposal of the Praesidium is that the memoranda will have official status; they will be bound formally within the Charter, although they should not themselves carry legal force. The statements will include a definition of the proposed scope of the Article. Their purpose is to explain to those who need to interpret the Charter the intentions of the drafting Convention, and, in particular, to clarify its relationship with the EU Treaties, the ECHR and other international treaties. They are an aid to making the Charter justiciable.

If this understanding is correct, the Convention will not need to crawl over the wording of the explanatory statements with the same rigour as we are bringing to the drafting of the Articles. But we shall have to consider with some care their form and utility.

At the moment, there is no systematic approach to the drafting of the explanatory statements. May I propose that the Convention adopts explicit guidelines in order to encourage a uniformity of approach and comprehension?

May I also propose that each statement contains three specific paragraphs explaining:

1. How the Article has drawn from the ECHR, and why. Where relevant, the articles and protocols of the ECHR should be reproduced in full.
2. How the Article has drawn from other international treaties, and why; and where these documents may be most easily found by a non-specialist readership.
3. The connection between the Article and the competences of the European Union; how it might effect the operation of the EU.

Of these three elements, it is the last which, in my view, may give rise to the greatest complication.

The European Union enjoys no general catalogue of competences. The Treaties are in what one might call a pre-constitutional order. Much rationalisation and simplification is required before the citizen could know clearly how power is exercised within the Union, the responsibilities of each institution and their inter-relationship. However, it is certainly possible to cite the relevant articles of the Treaty, as well as to describe the general principles of European Community law, the relevant jurisprudence of the European Court of Justice and the current acquis communautaire in terms of policy. It is also possible — and may certainly be useful for the citizen — for the specific EU decision-making process to be described in a fairly technical manner in each policy area.

This exercise will be absorbing and challenging. I am in no doubt that it will in part be controversial, especially for those who either do not know or who choose not to accept the present scale and scope of European integration. But it must nevertheless be done and done well if the Charter is to remain focused on the European Union and all its works.

I would recommend that we recruit a number of academic specialists to help us in that task, although, naturally, ultimate responsibility for what goes into the explanatory memoranda rests with the Convention. You will see that the European Parliament, in its resolution of yesterday, has called, among other things, for an academic colloquy.

Please accept my compliments.

ANDREW DUFF M.E.P.

Andrew Duff

Mr Roman Herzog
President of the Convention
European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights

17 March 2000

Proposed Amendments

I have the honour to propose various amendments to the Articles contained in CHARTE 4149/00. Some are stylistic, in the interests of plain speech.

Article 2

1. ...
2. No one shall be condemned to death or executed.

Article 3

Right to integrity

1. Everyone's physical and mental integrity shall be respected.
2. In the fields of medicine and biology,
 - human beings shall not be cloned
 - eugenic practices shall be prohibited
 - patients shall have the right to informed consent
 - the human body and its products shall not be made a source of financial gain.

Article 13

1. Everyone's family life or partnership shall be respected.
2. ...
3. The legal, social and economic interests of the family or cohabiting partner shall be protected.

Note: Non-conventional families are now so common in several member states, and their number on the increase, that a failure to recognise this phenomenon explicitly will cause widespread concern and dismay. It is vital that the Charter reflects contemporary society if it is to resonate within it.

ANDREW DUFF M.E.P.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 24 March 2000CHARTE 4189/00*CONTRIB 72*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution (motion tabled by the PDS grouping in the German Bundestag) by Mrs Sylvia Kaufmann, Member of the European Parliament. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in German, English and French languages.

German Bundestag
13/2457
13th electoral term
27.09.95

Printed Paper

Motion
tabled by the PDS grouping

Basic rights for persons living in the European Union

The Bundestag is requested to adopt the following motion:

The Federal Government is called upon

1. To take active steps to ensure that the statutory anchoring of the individual and collective basic rights of persons living in the European Union in the Treaty on European Union is placed on the agenda of the 1996 Intergovernmental Conference;
2. To exert its influence towards the 1996 Intergovernmental Conference resulting in the Treaty on European Union being extended to cover basic rights for all persons living in the European Union, enforceable before the European Court of Justice;
3. To work towards amending the Treaty on European Union as regards Union citizenship, with the aim of eliminating the distinction between citizens of the Member States and persons from non-member states to the extent that equal personal, political, social, economic and cultural rights are guaranteed for all persons with permanent residence in the European Union.

These basic rights must correspond to the following provisions:

I. Personal rights

Protection of human dignity

- (1) The dignity of man shall be inviolable. To respect and protect it shall be the duty of all public authority.
- (2) It shall be the duty of every person to recognise the dignity of all other persons. All persons shall acknowledge each other as equals, with all their differences.
- (3) It shall be the right of all persons that their dignity be respected, even at the time of death.

Right to life and safety

- (1) Everyone shall have the right to life, to respect for his physical, mental and spiritual integrity, as well as to personal liberty and safety.
- (2) No one may be sentenced to death, or subjected to torture or to treatment or punishment of an inhuman or degrading nature.
- (3) No one may be subjected to medical, biological or other scientific experiments without their voluntary consent or as a result of exploitation of a situation of personal distress.

Equality

- (1) All persons shall be equal before the law.
- (2) No one may be discriminated against or favoured on grounds of sex, sexual identity, homeland and origin, ethnic affiliation, parentage, nationality and language, as well as religious, ideological or political convictions. Persons with physical, mental or spiritual impairments or with disabilities may not be discriminated against.
- (3) Men and women shall have equal rights. The equal participation of both sexes in all social fields shall be established and safeguarded.
- (4) In the event of existing inequalities, the necessary equilibrium shall be ensured in favour of the disadvantaged.

Free development of personality

- (1) Everyone shall have the right to free development of his personality insofar as he does not violate the rights of others or offend against constitutional order.
- (2) Every woman shall have the right to decide whether to carry a child through to the full term of pregnancy.

Personal liberty

- (1) The liberty of the individual shall be inviolable. It may only be restricted pursuant to a law and taking into account the forms prescribed therein.
- (2) Every person arrested or taken into custody shall be informed, without delay, of the reason for the deprivation of his liberty and the agency which occasioned such deprivation. The next of kin shall be entitled to information concerning the deprivation of liberty. Upon the request of the person arrested or taken into custody, other persons shall also be informed of the arrest or taking into custody, without delay.
- (3) Every person arrested or taken into custody shall, within 24 hours, be brought before the responsible judge, who shall decide on the arrest or taking into custody. Before each judicial decision concerning an order for, or the continuation of, deprivation of liberty, the person involved shall be given the opportunity to call in a legal counsel of his choice.
- (4) No person retained in custody may be subjected to physical or spiritual abuse or harassment.
- (5) No one may be extradited to a country in which the danger exists of him being sentenced to death or tortured.

Freedom of conscience and religion

- (1) Everyone shall have the right to freedom of conscience, religion and thought, as well as freedom of ideological creed.
- (2) The right to conscientious objection shall be guaranteed. Persons who take avail of this right may not be discriminated against.
- (3) Examinations of creed shall be prohibited.
- (4) No one may be compelled to participate in a religious or ideological act, or be prevented from such participation by means of coercion.

Freedom of expression and information

- (1) Everyone shall have the right to freely express his opinion. Freedom of the press and freedom of reporting by means of radio, television and film shall be guaranteed.
- (2) These rights shall include the freedom to obtain information, without hindrance, from generally accessible sources or other legally open sources.
- (3) These rights shall be limited by the statutory provisions for the protection of youth, the preservation of dignity of women and the personal rights of the individual.
- (4) War propaganda shall be prohibited. All advocacy of national and religious hatred, as well as nationalistic, racist, fascist, anti-Semitic and sexist propaganda, shall be prohibited.

Protection of privacy

- (1) Everyone shall have the right to respect and protection of his personal sphere. The confidentiality of non-public communications shall be inviolable.
- (2) Respect of the privacy of posts and telecommunications shall be guaranteed.

Inviolability of the home

- (1) The home shall be inviolable.
- (2) Searches may only be carried out on the order of a judge.

Data protection

- (1) Everyone shall have the right to his personal data and to inspect files pertaining to his person.
- (2) This right shall include the entitlement to consent to the recording, storage, processing, forwarding, correction, or other use of personal data, as well as their contents. Restrictions shall only be permissible by law for persons holding public office.

Freedom of movement

- (1) All persons shall have the right to freedom of movement.
- (2) The right to reside and settle at any desired location may only be restricted by, or pursuant to, a law.

Right of asylum

- (1) Persons persecuted on political, ideological, ethnic or religious grounds, or because of their sex, their sexual identity or a disability, shall have the right of asylum.
- (2) Persons seeking asylum may not be deported or extradited to a country in which the danger exists of their being sentenced to death, tortured, persecuted or subjected to any other kind of repression.
- (3) The right of war refugees and persons in distress to admittance shall be guaranteed.

Protection of minorities

- (1) All persons shall be free to profess their affiliation to a national minority or ethnic group and to style their life accordingly within the framework of constitutional order.
- (2) The entitlement of national, ethnic and religious minorities to protection and promotion of their identity and culture shall be guaranteed.

II. Rights of shaping policy

Right to political participation

- (1) The right of all persons to political participation shall be guaranteed.
- (2) It shall be asserted by means of general, direct, free, equal and secret elections and votes, as well as manifold policy-making and control rights of the individual and social groups.
- (3) Everyone shall have the right to timely and sufficient participation in the decision-making process in the case of public affairs affecting his person.

Freedom of assembly

All persons shall have the right to assemble peaceably without permission.

Freedom of association

- (1) All persons shall have the right to form and join associations. All associations shall have the right to define their internal rules and regulations freely and independently.

- (2) No one may be compelled to join an association.
- (3) The internal rules and regulations of political parties, associations, citizens' groups and initiatives which are devoted to public affairs and which have an influence on the formation of public opinion, must conform to democratic principles. The right to participate in the formation of political will shall be guaranteed.

Right of petition and right to popular initiatives

- (1) Everyone shall have the right to address requests or complaints to the competent agencies and to the parliaments on the national and European level. Everyone shall be entitled to a reply within a reasonable period of time, together with a justification.
- (2) The right to popular initiatives, petitions and referendums in order to enact, amend, repeal or prevent legal acts and political decisions by the European Union shall be guaranteed.

III. Social, economic and cultural rights

Protection of the family and lifestyle

- (1) All persons shall have the right to freely select their type of lifestyle and to establish corresponding cohabitations. All lifestyles shall enjoy equal respect, as well as legal, economic and social protection.
- (2) Special social assistance shall be provided for single parents, cohabitations with numerous children and cohabitations including disabled members.
- (3) Persons who raise children or support and care for persons in need of help within a common household shall be entitled to protection and assistance, as well as social consideration. The compatibility of gainful employment, participation in public life and parenthood shall be promoted.

Children and youths

- (1) Children and youths shall have the right to respect of their dignity as independent personalities. The development of their personalities shall be specially promoted in accordance with their growing skills and needs and they shall be enabled to act independently. They shall enjoy the special protection of society.
- (2) Every child shall be entitled to care and support. The body politic shall promote nursery schools and youth centres, regardless of their sponsorship.
- (3) Children and youths shall be entitled to free upbringing, education and training corresponding to their skills, regardless of their origins and their economic situation.
- (4) Children and youths shall be protected against physical and mental neglect, punishment and maltreatment and sexual abuse. Should the well-being of children and youths be endangered, particularly by the failure of persons having parental powers, the body politic shall be obliged to guarantee the necessary help.
- (5) Child labour shall be prohibited.

Right of ownership

- (1) Property and the right of inheritance shall be guaranteed.
- (2) Property shall impose duties. Its use shall also serve the public weal. It may not impair basic rights and the natural bases of existence.
- (3) Expropriation shall be permitted only in the interests of the public weal. It may only be effected under the provisions pursuant to law and in return for suitable compensation.

Environmental protection

- (1) Everyone shall have the right to protection and preservation of his natural environment. All measures necessary for the preservation, restoration and safeguarding of the natural bases of existence shall be taken.
- (2) Animals shall be protected against avoidable suffering and injury.
- (3) Public and private projects shall be subject to proof of their environmental compatibility pursuant to the provisions of a law.

Right to work and occupational liberty

- (1) Everyone shall have the right to work and labour promotion.
- (2) Everyone shall have the right to choose freely his occupation and place of work and to practise his occupation freely.
- (3) Everyone shall be entitled to humane working conditions which guarantee the protection of his health and safety.
- (4) No one may be arbitrarily denied work, and no one may be forced to perform a specific job.

Freedom of coalition, collective bargaining autonomy, co-determination

- (1) Everyone shall have the right, in order to assert his interests, to form and join trade unions or other associations aimed at shaping working and economic conditions, and to engage freely in their activities.
- (2) Collective bargaining autonomy, the right to strike and other forms of industrial action aimed at safeguarding the interests of the employees shall be guaranteed. Lockouts shall be prohibited.
- (3) Employees shall have the right to regular information concerning the economic and financial situation of their company.
- (4) The right of co-determination of employees in all decisions which may affect their interests shall be guaranteed.

Social protection

- (1) Everyone shall have the right to protection of his health and to health care.
- (2) All persons shall have the right to social security.
- (3) All persons shall have the right to suitable living accommodation.

Right to education

- (1) Everyone shall have the right to education and training. Access to higher education and vocational education shall be free.
- (2) The freedom of life-long learning and the freedom of teaching shall be guaranteed. To this end, the right to progress through all levels of education within the context of equal opportunities for all, including the safeguarding of the material conditions, shall be guaranteed.
- (3) The right of parents to raise their children according to their religious and ideological convictions shall be guaranteed, respecting the right of the child to its own development.

Freedom of art and science

- (1) Art and science shall be free. They shall receive public promotion.
- (2) Free and equal access to art and culture, as well as to research, shall be guaranteed.
- (3) Research entailing special risks shall be subject to public notification. It may be restricted by law if it should be deemed capable of violating human dignity or impairing the natural bases of existence.

Right to sport, leisure time and recreation

Everyone shall have the right to sport, leisure time and recreation.

IV. Procedural rightsAccess to the law

- (1) Everyone shall have the right to complete information concerning his rights.
- (2) Everyone shall have the right to a due process of law before a judge appointed by law. Special tribunals shall be prohibited.
- (3) Everyone shall have the right to his case being heard fairly, equitably, publicly and within a reasonable period of time by an independent and impartial court of law on a legal basis. He shall have the right to judicial hearing.
- (4) Access to the law shall be guaranteed. Legal aid shall be provided for those persons who do not have sufficient means to finance legal assistance.
- (5) Everyone shall have the right to lodge an appeal against a court decision, which shall lead to the complete review of a decision made against him. It shall be prohibited to impose a more severe punishment in the event of an appeal for the benefit of the person affected.
- (6) No one may be discriminated against for asserting his procedural rights.

Rights of sanction

- (1) No one may be held accountable for acts or omissions for which they bore no responsibility at the time of their commission according to valid law.
- (2) No one may be held accountable for acts or omissions which he did not commit culpably. It shall be assumed that everyone is innocent until conclusively proven guilty.
- (3) No one may be prosecuted or convicted anew for an act for which he has already been convicted.

V. General provisionsValidity of basic rights

- (1) These basic rights shall be binding on legislation, executive powers, the dispensation of justice and, insofar as stipulated, third parties, as directly applicable law.
- (2) The basic rights shall also apply to legal entities to the extent that the nature of the rights permits.

Level of protection

None of these provisions may be interpreted as a restriction of the protection afforded by the laws of the Union, the laws of the Member States and international law.

Abuse of rights

None of these provisions may be interpreted in such a way that any right may arise to perform an activity or act aimed at impairing or abolishing these rights and freedoms.

Legal protection

All persons shall be entitled to lodge a complaint with the European Court of Justice claiming that one of his basic rights as guaranteed herein has been violated by the public authorities.

Right to resist

All persons shall be entitled to the right to resist obvious violations or unlawful elimination of the democratic principles of the European Union by the public authorities.

Bonn, 26 September 1995

Dr. Gregor Gysi and Grouping

Justification

The 1996 Intergovernmental Conference to review and revise the Maastricht Treaty provides the opportunity of finally setting clear political examples aimed at overcoming the crisis in the process of European integration and of doing justice to the global requirements of the present day and the future. However, this presupposes the existence of the political will to eliminate the misorientation and aberrations of the Maastricht Treaty and its deficits, all of which are bemoaned by every political body in Germany.

The aberrations and deficits of the Maastricht Treaty include a lack of attunement to public concerns and a lack of democracy. The slogan "A People's Europe", propagated for many years by the EU Commission, governments and political parties, is still nothing more than hollow words on a piece of paper.

This motion will put basic rights for the European Union up for debate. Enforceable basic and human rights must be guaranteed for all persons with permanent residence in the European Union, not just for the so-called Union citizens, as an integral component of the Treaty on European Union. This primarily involves two aspects:

First of all, the deficits in the protection of basic rights must be eliminated, which arose from the national states surrendering sovereign rights to the European Union. This gave rise to a new, separate bearer of sovereign power. However, the protection of the basic rights of citizens living in the European Union remained limited to national frameworks and, consequently, only applicable to national sovereign rights.

Secondly, the process of European integration needs a new stimulus, which can only be achieved through fundamental democratisation. The people living in the European Union must be given the opportunity of helping to shape their present and future in the social, cultural, economic and political field in their regions, nations and the European Union. Only thus can a peaceful, socially just, democratic and environment-conserving Europe be forged and assume its role as an equal partner in this one world, without nationalism and xenophobia.

ENTWURF DER CHARTA DER GRUNDRECHTE DER EUROPÄISCHEN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brüssel, den 30. März 2000CHARTE 4191/00*CONTRIB 74*ÜBERMITTLUNGSVERMERK

Betr.: Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union

Finden Sie bitte nachstehend Änderungsanträge zu Dokument 4149/00 CONVENT 13, vorgelegt von Herrn Ingo Friedrich, Mitglied des Europaparlaments. ¹

¹ Dieser Text wurde nur in deutscher Sprache übermittelt.

Dr. Ingo Friedrich, MdEP
Vizepräsident des Europäischen Parlaments
Mitglied im EU-Grundrechtskonvent

Änderungsanträge zu Dokument Convent 13
Vorschlag für die Artikel 1-12 (jetzt 1 bis 16).

Änderungsantrag 1:

Artikel 1. Würde des Menschen

"Die Würde des Menschen wird (unter allen Umständen) geachtet und geschätzt.

- "unter allen Umständen" streichen-

Änderungsantrag 2:

neuen Artikel 2 einfügen (nach Artikel 1)

Artikel 2 (neu) Bindungswirkung der Charta

"Die Bestimmungen dieser Charta richten sich an die Organe und Einrichtungen der Union bei der Wahrnehmung der ihnen durch die Verträge zugewiesenen Zuständigkeiten und Aufgaben sowie an die Mitgliedstaaten bei der Anwendung des Gemeinschaftsrechts Sie begründen weder neue Aufgaben oder Zuständigkeiten der Union noch erweitern sie deren bestehende Aufgaben oder Zuständigkeiten".

Änderungsantrag 3:

Artikel 6

Recht auf Freiheit (zwei Wörter streichen)

Jede Person hat das Recht auf Freiheit (zwei Wörter streichen). Die Freiheit darf nur in besonderen Fällen und nur auf die gesetzlich vorgeschriebene Weise entzogen werden.

- "„ und Sicherheit" streichen-

Änderungsantrag 4:Artikel 12. Achtung des Privatlebens

Jede Person hat Anspruch auf Achtung Ihres Privatlebens, ihrer Persönlichkeit (1 Wort streichen) Ihrer Wohnung sowie des Brief-, Post- und Fernmeldegeheimnisses.

-"Ehre" streichen: "Persönlichkeit" einfügen

Änderungsantrag 5Art. 13 Familienleben

- (1) Jede Person hat das Recht auf Achtung Ihres Familienlebens.
- (2) (neu) Das Recht, eine Ehe einzugehen und eine Familie zu gründen, wird gewährleistet. Die Ausübung dieses Rechts regelt sich nach den Gesetzen der Mitgliedstaaten).
- (3) Der rechtliche, wirtschaftliche und soziale Schutz der Familie wird im Rahmen der Zuständigkeiten der Union gewährleistet.

Der ehemalige Absatz 2 wird ersetzt (s.o.), Einfügung Absatz 3.

Änderungsantrag 6:Artikel 14. (Gedanken-,) Gewissens- und Religionsfreiheit

"Jede Person hat das Recht auf (Gedanken-,) Gewissens- und Religionsfreiheit."

"Gedanken-," streichen sowie Artikel 14 umbenennen -

Änderungsantrag 7Artikel 16 Recht auf Bildung

- (1) Niemandem darf das Recht auf Bildung verwehrt werden; dazu gehört insbesondere die Möglichkeit, unentgeltlich am Pflichtschulunterricht teilzunehmen.
- (2) (neu) Ein gleichberechtigter Zugang zu staatlichen Ausbildungsmöglichkeiten ist zu gewähren.

- (3) Die Gründung von Lehranstalten ist frei.
- (4) Das Recht der Eltern, die Erziehung und den Unterricht ihrer Kinder entsprechend ihren eigenen religiösen und weltanschaulichen Überzeugungen sicherzustellen, wird geachtet.

-Absatz 2 neu einfügen

Dr. Ingo Friedrich, MdEP

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 27 March 2000 (30.03)
(OR. fr,en)*CHARTE 4192/00*CONVENT 18*NOTE FROM THE PRAESIDIUM

Subject: Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Proposals for social rights

Members of the Convention will find below an initial series of articles on social rights. The list is not exhaustive, and proposals for other articles will follow. The Praesidium is currently studying articles relating to wages and health. You are reminded that the original list of social rights drawn up for discussion by the Convention included the following:

Economic and social rights/objectives*Right to work and choose an occupation*

1. Right to work: objective of a high level of employment, freedom to choose and engage in an occupation (Article 127 EC, Article 1 Social Charter, Point 4 Community Charter of Social Rights).

Working conditions

2. Right to safety and health at work: right or political objective? (Article 140 EC, Article 3 Social Charter, Point 19 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 13 EP Decl. 1989).
3. Fair remuneration and minimum wage: distinguish between what is a right and what constitutes a political objective (Article 4 Social Charter, Article 4 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 13 EP Decl. 1989).

4. Right to weekly rest period and paid leave: right or political objective? (Article 2 Social Charter, Point 8 Community Charter of Social Rights).
5. Pensions: right or political objective? (Article 23 Social Charter, Points 24 and 25 Community Charter of Social Rights).
6. Free access to placement services: right or political objective? (Article 1 Social Charter, Point 6 Community Charter of Social Rights).

Training

7. Vocational guidance and continuing training: right or political objective? (Articles 9 and 10 Social Charter, Point 15 Community Charter of Social Rights).

Collective labour rights

8. Workers' right to information and consultation (Article 137 EC, Article 6 Social Charter, Point 17 Community Charter of Social Rights).
9. Right to collective bargaining (Article 137 EC, Article 6 Social Charter, Point 12 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 14 EP Decl. 1989).
10. Right to strike (Article 6 Social Charter, Point 13 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 14 EP Decl. 1989).

Social protection

11. Right to health: right or political objective? (Article 152 EC, Article 11 Social Charter, Point 19 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 15 EP Decl. 1989).
12. Right to social security, right to social and medical assistance: right or political objective? (Article 13 Social Charter, Point 10 Community Charter of Social Rights, Article 15 EP Decl. 1989).
13. Protection of maternity (Article 8 Social Charter).
14. Protection of children and young persons (Article 17 Social Charter, Points 20 et seq. Community Charter of Social Rights).
15. Integration of disabled persons (Article 15 Social Charter, Point 26 Community Charter of Social Rights).

The order of the rights will be reviewed subsequently as for civil and political rights.

Article I. Equality between men and women

Equality between men and women must be ensured with regard to work and employment and social protection.

Comment

See point 16 of the Community Charter: "Equal treatment for men and women must be assured. Equal opportunities for men and women must be developed. To this end, action should be intensified to ensure the implementation of the principle of equality between men and women as regards in particular access to employment, remuneration, working conditions, social protection, education, vocational training and career development ..."

Article II. Right to choose an occupation

Everyone has the right to choose and to engage in his occupation or business, without prejudice to the rules in the Treaty relating to the free movement of persons.

Comment

This right is recognised without any ambiguity in the case law of the Court as a fundamental right (see judgment of principle in Case 4/73 Nold [1974] ECR 491). A reference to the rules in the Treaty on the free movement of persons seems necessary, in order to establish that this right benefits those to whom freedom of movement applies.

Article III. Workers' right to information and consultation

Workers and their representatives have the right to effective information and consultation within the undertaking which employs them, particularly in the context of collective redundancy procedures and decisions relating to conditions of work and to the working environment.

Comment

See Articles 21 and 29 of the revised Social Charter:

"Article 21 – The right to information and consultation

With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right of workers to be informed and consulted within the undertaking, the Parties undertake to adopt or encourage measures enabling workers or their representatives, in accordance with national legislation and practice:

a to be informed regularly or at the appropriate time and in a comprehensible way about the economic and financial situation of the undertaking employing them, on the understanding that the disclosure of certain information which could be prejudicial to the undertaking may be refused or subject to confidentiality; and b to be consulted in good time on proposed decisions which could substantially affect the interests of workers, particularly on those decisions which could have an important impact on the employment situation in the undertaking."

"Article 29 - The right to information and consultation in collective redundancy procedures

With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right of workers to be informed and consulted in situations of collective redundancies, the Parties undertake to ensure that employers shall inform and consult workers' representatives, in good time prior to such collective redundancies, on ways and means of avoiding collective redundancies or limiting their occurrence and mitigating their consequences, for example by recourse to accompanying social measures aimed, in particular, at aid for the redeployment or retraining of the workers concerned."

These Articles did not appear in the Social Charter of 1961. They are mentioned in points 17 and 18 of the Community Charter. Article 137 of the TEC gives competence to the Community with regard to the information and consultation of workers.

Article IV. Freedom of association, rights of collective bargaining and collective action

1. Employers and workers have the right to associate freely, including at European Union level, in order to form the professional or trades union organisations of their choice to defend their economic and social interests.

Every employer and every worker has the right to join or not to join these organisations, without this causing him any personal or professional harm.

2. Employers or employers' organisations, on the one hand, and workers' organisations, on the other hand, have the right, under the conditions laid down by national legislation and practice, to negotiate and conclude collective agreements, including at European Union level.

3. Workers and employers have the right in cases of conflicts of interest to take collective action at European Union level should the occasion arise, including the right to strike.

Comment

The right to form and to join trade unions is recognised in Article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights. The rights of collective bargaining and collective action are recognised by the revised Social Charter (Article 6) and by the Social Charter. It is mentioned in point 12 of the Community Charter. It is recognised in the case law of the European Court of Human Rights as stemming from Article 11 of the Convention (Swedish train drivers union 1976). Finally, Articles 138 and 139 of the TEC deal with social dialogue at a Community level and provide for the conclusion of collective agreements.

Article 6 of the revised Social Charter reads as follows:

"Article 6 - The right to bargain collectively

With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right to bargain collectively, the Parties undertake:

- 1 to promote joint consultation between workers and employers;*
- 2 to promote, where necessary and appropriate, machinery for voluntary negotiations between employers or employers' organisations and workers' organisations, with a view to the regulation of terms and conditions of employment by means of collective agreements;*
- 3 to promote the establishment and use of appropriate machinery for conciliation and voluntary arbitration for the settlement of labour disputes;*

and recognise:

4 the right of workers and employers to collective action in cases of conflicts of interest, including the right to strike, subject to obligations that might arise out of collective agreements previously entered into.”

This text was taken from the original version of the Social Charter. The same wording is found in point 13 of the Community Charter. The addition of a reference to national legislation is necessary because, pursuant to Article 137(6) of the TEC, the Community does not have competence with regard to the right to strike in Member States. In this respect, therefore, it must recognise the national legislation in force. However, the Community does have competence with regard to its own employees.

The right to collective action has been recognised by the European Court of Human Rights as one element of the trade union rights recognised by Article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights (Schmidt and Dahlström, Sweden, 1976).

Article VII. Right to equal remuneration for equal work

Every worker has the right to equal remuneration for work of equal value.

Comment

This right is mentioned in Article 4 of the revised Social Charter:

"Article 4 - The right to a fair remuneration

With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right to a fair remuneration, the Parties undertake:

- 1 to recognise the right of workers to a remuneration such as will give them and their families a decent standard of living;
- 2 to recognise the right of workers to an increased rate of remuneration for overtime work, subject to exceptions in particular cases;
- 3 to recognise the right of men and women workers to equal pay for work of equal value;
- 4 to recognise the right of all workers to a reasonable period of notice for termination of employment;
- 5 to permit deductions from wages only under conditions and to the extent prescribed by national laws or regulations or fixed by collective agreements or arbitration awards.

The exercise of these rights shall be achieved by freely concluded collective agreements, by statutory wage-fixing machinery, or by other means appropriate to national conditions.”

This right appeared in the same form in the Social Charter of 1961. It is mentioned in point 5 of the Community Charter.

Article VI. Right to rest periods and annual leave

Every worker has the right to a weekly rest period and to an annual period of paid leave.

Comment

This right is referred to in Article 2 of the revised Social Charter:

"Article 2 – The right to just conditions of work

With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right to just conditions of work, the Parties undertake:

- 1. to provide for reasonable daily and weekly working hours, the working week to be progressively reduced to the extent that the increase of productivity and other relevant factors permit;*
- 2. to provide for public holidays with pay;*
- 3. to provide for a minimum of four weeks' annual holiday with pay;*
- 4. to eliminate risks in inherently dangerous or unhealthy occupations, and where it has not yet been possible to eliminate or reduce sufficiently these risks, to provide for either a reduction of working hours or additional paid holidays for workers engaged in such occupations;*
- 5. to ensure a weekly rest period which shall, as far as possible, coincide with the days recognised by tradition or custom in the country or region concerned as a day of rest;*
- 6. to ensure that workers are informed in written form, as soon as possible, and in any event not later than two months after the date of commencing their employment, of the essential aspects of the contract or employment relationship;*
- 7. to ensure that workers performing night work benefit from measures which take account of the special nature of the work."*

This Article was already part of the 1961 Social Charter. It is referred to in point 8 of the Community Charter. Article 137 of the EC Treaty establishes Community competence as regards working conditions.

Article VII Safe and healthy working conditions

Every worker has the right to safe and healthy working conditions

Comment

This right is referred to in Article 3 of the revised Social Charter:

"Article 3 – The right to safe and healthy working conditions

With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right to safe and healthy working conditions, the Parties undertake, in consultation with employers' and workers' organisations:

1 to formulate, implement and periodically review a coherent national policy on occupational safety, occupational health and the working environment. The primary aim of this policy shall be to improve occupational safety and health and to prevent accidents and injury to health arising out of, linked with or occurring in the course of work, particularly by minimising the causes of hazards inherent in the working environment;

2 to issue safety and health regulations;

3 to provide for the enforcement of such regulations by measures of supervision;

4 to promote the progressive development of occupational health services for all workers with essentially preventive and advisory functions."

This right featured in Article 3 of the 1961 Social Charter and in point 19 of the Community Charter. Article 137 of the EC Treaty gives the Union competence in this area.

It is proposed that the following rights should be added:

Article VIII. Protection of children and young people

The minimum age of admission to employment must not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age and, in any case, not lower than fifteen years.

Young people under eighteen years of age must have working conditions which suit their age and be protected against any work likely to harm their safety, health or physical, mental, moral or social development or to jeopardise their education.

Comment

This text is based on Article 7 of the European Social Charter and on the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers (points 20 to 23). First of all it reproduces the main thrust of point 20, which provides for a minimum employment age, linked to the end of compulsory schooling, which cannot under any circumstances be less than 15 years. However, the Charter begins as follows: "Without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people, in particular those ensuring their preparation for work through vocational training, and subject to derogations limited to certain light work, ..."

The second paragraph is based on point 22 of the Charter, which stipulates that labour regulations applicable to young workers must be adjusted to take account of their development and vocational training needs. The wording of the paragraph comes chiefly from Article 1(3) of Directive 94/33/EC on the protection of young people at work.

Article IX. Right to protection in cases of termination of employment

Workers have the right not to have their employment terminated without valid reason and to adequate compensation or other appropriate relief if their employment is terminated without valid reason.

Comment

Article 24 of the revised European Social Charter.

Article X. Right to vocational training and guidance

Everyone must have access, without discrimination, to appropriate vocational training and guidance and to benefit therefrom throughout his working life.

Comment

This Article is inspired, on the one hand, by paragraph 15 of the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers, which provides that "every worker of the European Community must be able to have access to vocational training and to benefit therefrom throughout his working life." On the other hand, it is also based on Articles 9 and 10 of the European Social Charter, which guarantee the right to vocational guidance and training respectively.

Article 140 of the EC Treaty provides for co-operation and co-ordination between the Member States in matters relating, inter alia, to basic and advanced vocational training. Furthermore, Article 150 is the foundation of the Community's vocational training policy.

Article XI. Right of employed women to protection of maternity

Every employed woman has the right to maternity leave of at least fourteen weeks before and/or after childbirth.

Comment: Article 8 of the revised Social Charter and Directive 92/85/CE of 19 October 1992

Article XII. Right to parental leave

Every worker has the right to parental leave of least 3 months following the birth or adoption of a child.

Comment

Article 27 of the Revised European Social Charter provides for the right to parental leave.

Furthermore, Directive 96/34, which implements the framework agreement of the social partners on this issue, lays down minimum requirements for parental leave of at least three months.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 29 March 2000
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4193/00*CONVENT 19*NOTE FROM THE PRAESIDIUM

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Proposals for social rights (draft Articles on rights relating to health and social protection)

Article XIII Social security

Every worker and his dependants have [everyone has] the right to social protection, including an adequate level of social security benefits, in accordance with each Member State's own procedures.

Article XIV Right to social assistance

Any person who is without adequate resources [and who is unable to secure such resources by his own efforts or from other sources] must receive appropriate social assistance enabling him to live in dignity.

Article XV Right of access to health care

Everyone must be able to benefit from measures to safeguard their health and, in case of sickness, to have access to health care.

ENTWURF DER CHARTA DER GRUNDRECHTE DER EUROPÄISCHEN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brüssel, den 29. März 2000CHARTE 4195/00*CONTRIB 76*ÜBERMITTLUNGSVERMERK

Betr.: Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union

Finden Sie bitte nachstehend Änderungsvorschläge zu Dokument Charta 4170/00
CONVENT 17 und Charta 4137/00 CONVENT 8, vorgelegt von Herrn. Jürgen Meyer, Vertreter des deutschen Bundestags.¹

¹ Dieser Text wurde nur in deutscher Sprache übermittelt.

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Meyer, MdB
Stv. Vorsitzender des Ausschusses für die Angelegenheiten
der Europäischen Union des Deutschen Bundestages

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Meyer, MdB · Büro Berlin · Unter den Linden 50 · 2122 / 2124

Berlin

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Meyer
Deutscher Bundestag
Büro: Unter den Linden 50 · 2122 / 2124
✉ Platz der Republik 1, 11011 Berlin
Tel: (030) 227 - 79 12 0
Fax: (030) 227 - 76 31 6
Email: juergen.meyer@bundestag.de

Wahlkreis

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Meyer
Münsterplatz 45
Postfach 36 28
89026 Ulm
Tel: (0731) 6 02 13 61
Fax: (0731) 6 13 21
Email: juergen.meyer@wk.bundestag.de

24 März 2000

Änderungsvorschlag zu Art. I

Gemäß dem vorgeschlagenen Verfahren des Präsidiums (siehe Convent 15 vom 9. März 2000) reiche ich als Delegierter des Konvents in meiner Funktion als Vertreter des Deutschen Bundestages folgenden Änderungsvorschlag zu dem vom Präsidium vorgeschlagenen Art. I (in der Fassung Convent 17) ein.

Art. I Freizügigkeit

- (1) Alle Unionsbürger und –bürgerinnen haben das Recht, sich im Hoheitsgebiet der Mitgliedstaaten frei zu bewegen und aufzuhalten.
Allen Bürgern und Bürgerinnen von Drittstaaten steht dieses Recht in gleichem Umfang zu, wenn sie sich seit fünf Jahren rechtmäßig im Hoheitsgebiet der Mitgliedstaaten aufhalten.
- (2) Allen Unionsbürgern und –bürgerinnen steht es frei, das Hoheitsgebiet der Mitgliedstaaten zu verlassen und wieder dorthin zurückzukehren.

(3) Die Rechte nach Abs. 1 und 2 können durch Bestimmungen eingeschränkt werden, die im Einklang mit den in dieser Charta enthaltenen Grundsätzen stehen.

Begründung:

Abs. 1 Satz 1 übernimmt den Formulierungsvorschlag des Präsidiums unter Herausnahme der Schrankenbestimmung. Letzteres ist im Sinne der – vom Konvent immer wieder geforderten – sprachlichen Klarheit notwendig. Eine Schrankenbestimmung wird deshalb in einem gesonderten Abs. 3 formuliert.

Die Gleichstellung der Bürger von Drittstaaten in Abs. 1 Satz 2 folgt dem Hinweis im Einleitungsvermerk des Präsidiums. Sie wird an dieser Stelle angeführt, damit dieses Recht keine Auswirkungen auf den Abs. 2 – und damit insbesondere auf ein so kaum gewolltes dauerhaftes Recht zur jederzeit erneuten Einreise – hat.

Eine Gleichstellung von Drittstaatlern beim Recht auf Freizügigkeit ist nach Art. 63 Nr. 4 EGV möglich. Eine solche Regelung entspricht u.a. Art. 13 Allgemeine Erklärung der Menschenrechte, Art. 12 Internationaler Pakt über bürgerliche und politische Rechte (IPbpr) und Art. 2 Protokoll Nr. 4 EMRK.

Das in Abs. 2 enthaltene Recht zur Einreise und zum Verlassen des Hoheitsgebietes der Union orientiert sich an entsprechenden Regelungen in Art. 13 Abs. 2 Allgemeine Erklärung der Menschenrechte, Art. 12 Abs. 2 IPbpr und Art. 2 Abs. 2 Protokoll Nr. 4 EMRK.

Eine Schrankenbestimmung, wie sie in Abs. 3 enthalten ist, findet sich in vergleichbaren Artikeln in der EMRK und dem IPbpr. Die dortigen Schrankenbestimmungen unterliegen ihrerseits wieder Schranken, indem diese „in einer demokratischen Gesellschaft durch das öffentliche Interesse“ geboten (Protokoll Nr. 4 Art. 2 Abs. 4 EMRK) bzw. „die Einschränkungen mit den übrigen in diesem Pakt anerkannten Rechte vereinbar“ sein müssen (Art. 12 Abs. 3 IPbpr). Insbesondere bei der EMRK ist das Gebot der Verhältnismäßigkeit zu beachten.¹ Dem folgend wird in Abs. 3 als Schranken-Schranke der „Einklang mit den in dieser Charta enthalten Grundsätzen“ eingeführt. Die in Abs. 3 enthaltene Abweichung zu meinem früher eingebrachten umfassenden Chartaentwurf (Charte 4102/00: Art. 19 Abs. 3 „die im Einklang mit den Grundlagen der Union stehen“) erklärt sich aus der mittlerweile fortgeschrittenen Integration der Union und der mit der Charta entstehenden Möglichkeit, die Schranken-Schranke präziser zu formulieren.

¹ Frowein, Jochen Abr./Peukert, Wolfgang: Europäische Menschenrechtskonvention. Straßburg u.a., 1996, S. 846.

Änderungsvorschlag zu Art. 19

Gemäß dem vorgeschlagenen Verfahren des Präsidiums (siehe Convent 15 vom 9. März 2000) reiche ich als Delegierter des Konvents in meiner Funktion als Vertreter des Deutschen Bundestages folgenden Änderungsvorschlag zu dem vom Präsidium vorgeschlagenen Art. 19_(in der Fassung Convent 8 vom 24. Februar 2000) ein.

Art. 19 Asyl

- (1) Jeder, der politisch verfolgt wird oder unmenschlicher oder erniedrigender Bestrafung oder Behandlung ausgesetzt ist, genießt Asylrecht. Frauenspezifische Asylgründe sind zu berücksichtigen.
- (2) Niemand darf in einem Staat abgeschoben werden, wenn stichhaltige Gründe für die Annahme bestehen, dass nach der Abschiebung die in Abs. 1 beschriebenen Maßnahmen drohen.
- (3) Kollektivausweisungen von Ausländern sind nicht zulässig.

Begründung:

Das Recht auf Asyl findet sich u.a. in Art. 14 Allgemeine Erklärung der Menschenrechte, in den Verfassungen der Bundesrepublik Deutschland (Art. 16 a), Frankreichs (heute noch gültige Präambel der Verfassung von 1946), Italiens (Art. 10), Portugals (Art. 33 Abs. 6), Spaniens (Art. 13 Abs. 4), der Slowakei (Art. 53) und Polens (Art. 56).

Die in Abs. 1 Satz 2 enthaltene Aufnahme von frauenspezifischen Aslygründen lehnt sich an die international zunehmende Erkenntnis an, dass Frauen als soziologische Gruppe oftmals besonderen Verfolgungen ausgesetzt sind.² In diesem Zusammenhang sei hier auf die systematische Vergewaltigung von muslimischen Frauen während der kriegerischen Auseinandersetzungen im Gebiet des ehemaligen Jugoslawiens hingewiesen und die - damit zusammenhängende -

² Mit der Aufnahme der frauenspezifischen Asylgründe präzisiere ich meinen früher eingebrachten Grundrechtsentwurf (Charta 4102/00).

Berücksichtigung von Vergewaltigung als spezifische Kriegsverbrechen seitens der UNO.
Mit der Aufnahme einer solchen Präzisierung der Verfolgung, würde die Union zur Positivierung eines modernen Grundrechts beitragen, wie sie schon jetzt vereinzelt Berücksichtigung findet.³

Das in Abs. 2 verbrieftete Recht auf Schutz vor Abschiebung in bestimmten Fällen findet sich nicht nur in vielen Verfassungen der Mitgliedsländer (Finnland, Frankreich, Griechenland, Italien, Portugal, Spanien), sondern u.a. auch in Art. 3 UN-Folterkonvention und in Art. 33 Abs. 1 Genfer Flüchtlingskonvention.

Der Abs. 3 übernimmt den Formulierungsvorschlag des Präsidiums.

³ Verwaltungsgericht Magdeburg am 20. Juni 1996, Koalitionsvertrag der rot-grünen Bundesregierung vom 20. Oktober 1998.

Editors' note to CHARTE 4196/00,
Contributo di M. Andrea Manzella (Parlamento Italiano): Risoluzione della Giunta Per Gli Affari
Delle Comunità europee del Senato Italiano (datata 15/03/00):

The Council has no record of a French version of this document existing.

PROGETTO DI CARTA DEI DIRITTI FONDAMENTALI DELL'UNIONE EUROPEAfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, 31 marzo 2000
(OR. FR)*CHARTE 4196/00*CONTRIB 77*NOTA DI TRASMISSIONE

Oggetto: Progetto di Carta dei diritti fondamentali dell'Unione europea

Si allega la "Risoluzione della Giunta per gli affari delle Comunità europee" presentata dal Sen. Andrea Manzella, rappresentante del Parlamento europeo.¹

¹ Testo pervenuto solo in lingua italiana.

Roma, 16 marzo 2000

Prot. n.

Caro Presidente,

ho il piacere di inviarLe copia della risoluzione sulla Carta dei diritti fondamentali dell'Unione europea approvata lo scorso 15 marzo dalla Giunta per gli affari delle Comunità europee del Senato.

Con i più cordiali saluti

On. Roman HERZOG
Presidente della Convenzione per la redazione della
Carta dei diritti fondamentali
dell'Unione europea
Bruxelles

SENATO DELLA REPUBBLICA

XIII LEGISLATURA

Doc. XXIV
n. 15

RISOLUZIONE DELLA GIUNTA PER GLI AFFARI DELLE COMUNITÀ EUROPEE

d'iniziativa del senatore BESOSTRI

approvata nella seduta del 15 marzo 2000

ai sensi dell'articolo 50, comma 2, del Regolamento, a conclusione dell'esame svoltosi nelle sedute dell'11 novembre e 16 dicembre 1999 e 9 e 15 marzo 2000 del seguente affare: redazione della Carta dei diritti fondamentali dell'Unione europea

13 - COM - RIS - 00015 - 0
TIPOGRAFIA DEL SENATO (150)

La Giunta per gli affari delle Comunità europee del Senato, in sede di esame dell'affare assegnato ai sensi dell'articolo 50, comma 2, del Regolamento, in merito alla redazione della Carta dei diritti fondamentali dell'Unione europea;

considerando le decisioni del Consiglio europeo di Colonia del 3 e 4 giugno 1999 e di Tampere del 15 e 16 ottobre 1999, in merito all'istituzione di un organismo, che ha assunto la denominazione di Convenzione, incaricato di redigere un progetto di Carta dei diritti fondamentali dell'Unione europea da trasmettere al Consiglio europeo; visto il progetto di risoluzione sull'elaborazione di una Carta dei diritti fondamentali dell'Unione europea approvato il 1^o marzo 2000 dalla Commissione affari costituzionali del Parlamento europeo;

preso atto dell'auspicio formulato dal Presidente della Repubblica italiana nell'allocuzione di Trieste del 23 febbraio 2000 che la Carta dei diritti fondamentali dei cittadini dell'Unione europea sia approvata entro l'anno dal Consiglio europeo e che costituisca «il primo, fondamentale nucleo della Costituzione europea»;

acquisiti i contributi dei membri e degli osservatori e gli altri documenti presentati alla suddetta Convenzione incaricata della redazione della Carta; preso atto del Progetto di articolato della Carta dei diritti fondamentali elaborato dal Presidium della suddetta Convenzione; preso atto delle audizioni svolte l'8, il 15, il 23 e il 29 febbraio 2000 nell'ambito dell'indagine conoscitiva congiunta svolta dalla Giunta per gli affari delle Comunità europee del Senato e dalla XIV Commissione permanente, politiche dell'Unione europea, della Camera dei deputati;

visto il Trattato sull'Unione europea, e in particolare gli articoli 6 e 7, e visto il Trattato sulla Comunità europea e, in particolare, le disposizioni sulla cittadinanza dell'Unione; considerando che il 14 febbraio 2000 ha avuto inizio la Conferenza intergovernativa sulla revisione dei Trattati in conformità con le decisioni assunte dai Consigli europei di Helsinki e di Colonia; rilevando il progetto di raccomandazione presentato dalla Delegazione del Senato alla Conferenza degli organismi specializzati negli affari comunitari (COSAC) di Helsinki dell'ottobre del 1999;

evidenziando come debba ritenersi superata la distinzione fra diritti dell'uomo \pm oggetto della Dichiarazione universale del 10 dicembre 1948 e della Convenzione del 4 novembre 1950 \pm e diritti del cittadino, salvo che per alcuni diritti di natura politica, civile e sociale espressamente legati alla nozione di cittadinanza europea;

rilevando pertanto che le dimensioni del fenomeno dell'immigrazione non consentono di considerare la condizione dello straniero come una posizione individuale bensì richiedano un approccio comprensivo nei confronti del tema dei diritti umani; sottolineando come il tema dei diritti umani sia intrinsecamente connesso alla parità di trattamento e opportunità dell'uomo e della donna;

tenendo conto delle altre convenzioni europee ed internazionali sui diritti umani e, in particolare, della Convenzione sui diritti del fanciullo del 1989, della nuova Carta sociale europea del 1996, della Convenzione sui diritti dell'uomo e la biomedicina del 1997 e della Convenzione sulla protezione dei dati a carattere personale del 1981;

auspicando che l'elaborazione di una Carta dei diritti possa costituire il nucleo di una riorganizzazione dei Trattati che contempra una parte di natura costituzionale sui diritti fondamentali ed il quadro istituzionale ed una parte dedicata alla definizione delle politiche attualmente disciplinate dai Trattati e delle politiche che in futuro gli Stati membri vorranno attribuire all'Unione;

auspicando che su tali temi prenda posizione la prossima COSAC di Lisbona del 29 e 30 maggio 2000, anche su iniziativa della delegazione del Senato;

auspicando che la suddetta Convenzione proceda all'elaborazione di un progetto di Carta coerente con i suddetti orientamenti e presenti il testo finale al Consiglio europeo in tempo utile affinché tale testo possa essere esaminato nell'ambito della Conferenza intergovernativa; sottolineando la necessità di:

affermare l'indivisibilità dei diritti fondamentali sia nel senso di una loro trasmissibilità tra pilastro e pilastro, sia nel senso dell'uguale trattamento per i diritti civili e politici, da un lato, e dei diritti sociali, dall'altro;

affermare l'inviolabilità dei diritti fondamentali anche per gli stranieri, salvo le naturali differenziazioni per i diritti politici, per evitare che l'Europa presenti un duplice volto, con pratiche di discriminazione al suo interno e pretesa di clausola democratica nelle sue relazioni esterne;

collegare visibilmente i diritti fondamentali al concetto di cittadinanza europea, ora troppo ristretto nel tessuto normativo dei Trattati; rendere realmente giustiziabili i diritti fondamentali, sia integrando le istanze di giurisdizione europea con le giurisdizioni nazionali, sia integrando, attraverso meccanismi di rinvii e ricorsi, la giurisdizione delle due Corti europee di Lussemburgo e di Strasburgo;

prevedere una clausola evolutiva che consenta un aggiornamento della Carta anche in forza di pronunce della Corte di giustizia delle Comunità europee e del richiamo alle Convenzioni europee in relazione alle mutate esigenze in materia di tutela dei diritti fondamentali che potrebbero manifestarsi in conseguenza di fenomeni quali lo sviluppo delle biotecnologie e delle tecnologie dell'informazione e la scoperta di nuovi fattori di pericolo per la salute umana e l'equilibrio ecologico; connettere i diritti fondamentali con le politiche fondamentali per non limitare il progetto di Carta a semplice proclamazione o catalogo dei diritti ma per considerare ciascun diritto come l'espressione finale di una politica reale complessiva;

impegna il Governo ad adoperarsi affinché:

- a)* la Conferenza intergovernativa includa nel proprio ordine del giorno la procedura di adozione del progetto di Carta dei diritti fondamentali elaborato dalla suddetta Convenzione;
- b)* il negoziato sulle riforme istituzionali si concluda inserendo le disposizioni della Carta sui diritti fondamentali nel contesto dei Trattati ovvero di un protocollo allegato;
- c)* nell'ambito del negoziato sulle riforme istituzionali siano adottate delle disposizioni volte ad assicurare il carattere vincolante dei diritti fondamentali sanciti dalla Carta, a definire gli strumenti di tutela di tali diritti e ad assicurare misure di raccordo e di coordinamento con gli strumenti di tutela dei diritti umani riconosciuti dalla Convenzione europea sui diritti dell'uomo del 1950 e dalle altre convenzioni stipulate nell'ambito del Consiglio d'Europa, onde evitare la configurazione di una divisione dell'Europa basata su eventuali differenze sostanziali nello status giuridico rispettivamente garantito dall'ordinamento del Consiglio d'Europa e dal diritto dell'Unione europea.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 5 April 2000 (06.04)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4199/00*CONTRIB 80*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft EU Charter of Fundamental Rights

Please find below the European Parliament resolution, adopted on 16 March 2000 (Report by Mr Duff and Mr Voggenhuber).¹

¹ The text was submitted in all languages.

EU Charter of Fundamental Rights

A5-0064/2000

European Parliament resolution on the drafting of a European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights (C5-0058/1999 – 1999/2064(COS))

The European Parliament,

- having regard to the decision of the European Council on the drafting of a European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights (C5-0058/1999),
- having regard to its position as representative of the peoples of the European Union,
- considering that the Union should strengthen the protection of the rights and interests of the nationals of its Member States through the introduction of a citizenship of the Union (Article 2 of the EU Treaty),
- having regard to the fact that the Union must respect fundamental rights "as they result from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, as general principles of Community law" (Article 6 of the EU Treaty),
- having regard to the Preamble of the United Nations Charter and the Universal Declaration on Human Rights adopted by the UN General Assembly in its resolution 217 A (III) on 10 December 1948 in Paris,
- having regard to its numerous initiatives in the matter of fundamental and citizens' rights, in particular to its resolution of 12 April 1989 on the Declaration of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms ¹,
- having regard to its initiatives in the matter of a constitution for the European Union, in particular its resolution of 12 December 1990 on the constitutional basis of European Union ² and its resolution of 10 February 1994 on the Constitution of the European Union ³,
- having regard to the conclusions of the Cologne European Council and the conclusions of the Tampere European Council,
- having regard to its resolution of 16 September 1999 on the drawing up of a Charter of Fundamental Rights ⁴,
- having regard to its resolution of 27 October 1999 on the European Council meeting in Tampere ⁵,
- having regard to the outstanding importance of the forthcoming enlargement of the Union and the Intergovernmental Conference,

¹ OJ C 120, 16.5.1989, p. 51.

² OJ C 19, 28.1.1991, p. 65.

³ OJ C 61, 28.2.1994, p. 155.

⁴ OJ C 54, 25.2.2000, p. 93.

⁵ Texts adopted at that Sitting, point 15.

- having regard to the setting-up on 17 December 1999 in Brussels of the Convention to draft a European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights,
 - having regard to Rule 47(1) of its Rules of Procedure,
 - having regard to the report of the Committee on Constitutional Affairs and the opinions of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, Human Rights, Common Security and Defence Policy, the Committee on Citizens' Freedoms and Rights, Justice and Home Affairs, the Committee on Legal Affairs and the Internal Market, the Committee on Women's Rights and Equal Opportunities, the Committee on Petitions and the Committee on Employment and Social Affairs (A5-0064/2000),
- A. whereas the Union is founded on the principles of liberty, democracy, respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms and the rule of law (Article 6 of the EU Treaty),
- B. whereas the creation of an ever closer Union among the peoples of Europe (Article 1 of the EU Treaty) and the maintenance and development of the Union as an area of freedom, security and justice (Article 2 of the EU Treaty) are based on general and absolute respect for human dignity, which is unique to each person, yet common to all, and inviolable,
- C. whereas the Union must respect "fundamental rights, as guaranteed by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms signed in Rome on 4 November 1950 and as they result from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, as general principles of Community law " (Article 6 of the EU Treaty),
- D. whereas some specific rights are already enshrined in the Treaties,
- E. whereas the fundamental freedoms and rights unavoidably stemming from the recognition of human dignity require genuine, comprehensive legal protection and effective legal guarantees,
- F. whereas the primacy of Union law and significant powers of its institutions, which affect individuals, make it necessary to strengthen the protection of fundamental rights at European Union level,
- G. whereas the increase in the powers of the Union and the European Community, especially in the sensitive field of internal security, together with the limits on parliamentary or judicial controls in that field, make it obvious that there is an urgent need for a European Charter of Fundamental Rights,
- H. whereas as the Union develops an imbalance must not be created between the objective of security and the principles of freedom and law,

- I. whereas fundamental freedoms can be restricted without parliamentary approval, both in the framework of the Union Treaty and of Community law, despite the fact that this is incompatible with the constitutional traditions common to the Member States,
- J. whereas, even in the case of legitimate restrictions of fundamental rights, the inherent nature of such rights may in no case be infringed,
- K. whereas the economic aspect of European integration must henceforth be supplemented by a genuine political, democratic and social union,
- L. whereas fundamental social freedoms ought to be strengthened and developed at European Union level,
- M. whereas the Union's common foreign and security policy, which will in future include defence, must be developed in compliance with fundamental rights,
- N. whereas new conflicts with fundamental freedoms can arise from developments in, for example, biotechnology or information technology, and whereas a consensus on fundamental rights at European level constitutes an important contribution towards finding a global solution to the problem,
- O. whereas there are serious indications of a rise in racism and xenophobia,
- P. whereas it is important that, while respecting the role of every national language, the European Union and its Member States attend to the protection of the diversity of the languages and cultures of Europe, especially regional and minority languages and cultures, and to this end guarantee to the citizens of the Union, through appropriate means of support, that they can maintain and develop their own languages and cultures in the public and private domain,
- Q. whereas the human right to asylum must be maintained according to the provisions of the Geneva Refugee Convention,
- R. whereas a European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights, in the same way as national provisions concerning fundamental rights, should not in any way conflict with the European Convention on Human Rights,
- S. whereas the Union's accession to the European Convention on Human Rights following the necessary amendments to the Treaty on European Union would represent an important step towards the strengthening of the protection of fundamental rights in the Union,
- T. whereas the creation of an ever closer union among the peoples of Europe is inseparably linked with the task of increasing, in addition to fundamental rights, citizens' rights, namely the political, economic and social rights associated with Union citizenship,
- U. whereas a charter of fundamental rights constituting merely a non-binding declaration and, in addition, doing no more than merely listing existing rights, would disappoint citizens' legitimate expectations,

- V. whereas the Charter of Fundamental Rights should be regarded as a basic component of the necessary process of equipping the European Union with a constitution,
1. Welcomes the drafting of a European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights, which will contribute to defining a collective patrimony of values and principles and a shared system of fundamental rights which bind citizens together and underpin the Union's internal policies and its policies involving third countries; welcomes therefore the progress made in this connection since the European Council meeting in Tampere, in particular the establishment of the joint Convention composed of representatives of the Heads of State and Government, the European Parliament, the parliaments of the Member States and the Commission;
 2. Notes that the establishment of a binding European list of fundamental rights will confer a more secure legal and moral basis on the process of European integration, will give concrete form to the common basis that exists at the level of the constitutional state and will provide more transparency and clarity for citizens;
 3. Offers its full support and cooperation in drafting the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union;
 4. Notes that the recognition and shaping of fundamental and citizens' rights is one of the primary tasks of parliaments;
 5. Calls on its delegation to the Convention drafting the charter vigorously to defend the position set out in this resolution;
 6. Intends to vote in plenary on the adoption of the Charter at the appropriate time and deems it advisable to publish in advance its objectives regarding the Charter of Fundamental Rights as set out hereunder;
 7. Points out that its final assent to a Charter of Fundamental Rights depends to a large extent upon whether the charter:
 - (a) has fully binding legal status by being incorporated into the Treaty on European Union;
 - (b) subjects any amendment to the Charter to the same procedure as its original drafting, including the formal right of assent for the European Parliament;
 - (c) contains a clause, requiring the consent of the European Parliament whenever fundamental rights are to be restricted in any circumstances whatsoever;
 - (d) contains a clause stipulating that none of its provisions may be interpreted in a restrictive manner with regard to the protection guaranteed by Article 6(2) of the Treaty on European Union;
 - (e) includes such fundamental rights as the right of association in trade unions and the right to strike;

- (f) recognises that fundamental rights are indivisible by making the charter applicable to all the European Union's institutions and bodies and all its policies, including those contained in the second and third pillars in the context of the powers and functions conferred upon it by the Treaties;
 - (g) is binding upon the Member States when applying or transposing provisions of Community law;
 - (h) is innovative in nature by also giving legal protection to the peoples of the European Union in respect of new threats to fundamental rights, for example from the fields of information technology and biotechnologies, and confirms, as an integral part of fundamental rights, and especially women's rights, the general non-discrimination clause and environmental protection;
8. Resolves to hold a scientific colloquium to advise Parliament and to carry out public hearings of representatives of society in general;
 9. Will strongly support initiatives for a broad societal discussion in the Member States, involving social partners, NGOs and other representatives of civil society;
 10. Calls for recognition of the contribution that can be made by organisations representing civil society to the drafting of the Charter;
 11. Proposes to grant the States applying for accession observer status in the Convention drafting the Charter and to begin a continuous exchange of opinions with them in the context of the European Conference;
 12. Emphasises that the charter should not replace or weaken Member States' provisions concerning fundamental rights;
 13. Supports the agreement reached by the Convention that the charter should be drafted on the presumption that it will have full legal force;
 14. Emphasises the need to incorporate in the charter, in addition to the rights already enshrined in the EU Treaty, the standards applicable to the Union that are set out in the international conventions signed by the Member States within the context of the United Nations, the Council of Europe, the International Labour Organisation and the Organisation for Security and Cooperation in Europe;
 15. Calls upon the IGC to:
 - (a) put the incorporation into the Treaty of the Charter of Fundamental Rights on its agenda and to give it at that conference the position which it deserves in view of its paramount importance for an ever closer union among the peoples of Europe;

- (b) enable the Union to become a party to the ECHR so as to establish close cooperation with the Council of Europe, whilst ensuring that appropriate action is taken to avoid possible conflicts or overlapping between the Court of Justice of the European Communities and the European Court of Human Rights;
 - (c) add a reference to the European Social Charter and to the appropriate ILO and UN conventions to the reference to the European Convention on Human Rights in Article 6 of the Treaty on European Union;
 - (d) give all persons protected under the charter access to the Court of Justice of the European Communities by supplementing existing mechanisms for judicial review;
16. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Convention responsible for drafting the European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights, the Intergovernmental Conference, the Council, the parliaments of the Member States, the Commission and the Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights.
-

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 29 mars 2000CHARTE 4200/00*CONTRIB 81*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-joint une contribution de M. Hubert Haenel, représentant du Parlement français.¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langue française seulement.

SÉNAT*Republique Française*

Paris, le 17 mars 2000

Hubert HAENELCONTRIBUTION AU PROJET DE
CHARTRE EUROPEENNE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX*Proposition d'inclure dans la Charte une déclaration des responsabilités des citoyens*A - Justification :

Il paraît nécessaire de compléter l'énoncé des droits fondamentaux par un énoncé des devoirs et responsabilités des citoyens pour deux principales raisons :

1. La Charte va, pour l'essentiel, codifier les droits fondamentaux déjà reconnus. Elle va donc comprendre deux catégories de droits :

– les droits-libertés, qui reviennent principalement à limiter et encadrer les pouvoirs des autorités publiques (même si chaque citoyen dont la liberté est ainsi reconnue a le devoir de respecter celle d'autrui) ;

– les droits-créances, qui créent des obligations pour la société. Or cette deuxième catégorie de droits, qui a tendance à s'étendre (droit au travail, à la santé, à la protection sociale...), implique, plus clairement encore que la première, des devoirs pour les citoyens.

Dans ces conditions, une Charte rédigée uniquement en termes de droits ne délivrerait pas un message approprié aux citoyens et notamment aux jeunes, qui doivent savoir que les droits sont inséparables des responsabilités.

2. La Charte doit tenir compte de la spécificité politique de l'Union européenne. Les diverses déclarations des droits dans les pays européens ont rarement mentionné les responsabilités des citoyens, parce qu'il s'agissait de conquérir des droits sur des régimes autoritaires, ou d'empêcher le retour de régimes autoritaires. L'Union européenne est dans une situation très différente. Elle n'est pas un empire. Elle repose sur une volonté commune de dépasser les affrontements et les haines entre les peuples européens ; elle est fondée sur la recherche d'une union toujours plus étroite entre les peuples, et non pas sur la volonté de limiter l'arbitraire d'un pouvoir préexistant ; elle est donc une construction, un véritable « contrat social » auquel participent des peuples d'une grande diversité, dont l'association doit être sans cesse consolidée et cimentée. Il paraît donc particulièrement justifié, dans le cas de la Charte européenne, d'insister sur la solidarité et la réciprocité, donc sur les devoirs et les responsabilités.

B - Le contenu

Une déclaration des responsabilités des citoyens pourrait retenir les thèmes suivants :

– les devoirs civiques : voter, participer à la vie politique, s'informer, participer équitablement à l'impôt ;

– les devoirs économiques : travailler, participer à la création de richesses (ces devoirs sont une contrepartie nécessaire des droits sociaux) ;

– les devoirs socioculturels : participer à la vie associative et culturelle notamment dans l'optique de la dimension européenne ;

– les devoirs vis-à-vis de l'environnement (devoirs vis-à-vis des générations futures) ;

– les devoirs envers autrui (tolérance, entraide, respect de l'égalité des sexes, responsabilités envers les enfants et les personnes âgées).

Un article final préciserait qu'aucun des devoirs ainsi énoncés ne peut être interprété comme une remise en cause d'un des droits fondamentaux reconnus par la Charte.

ENTWURF DER CHARTA DER GRUNDRECHTE DER EUROPÄISCHEN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brüssel, den 4. April 2000CHARTE 4201/00*CONTRIB 82*ÜBERMITTLUNGSVERMERK

Betr.: Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union

Finden Sie bitte nachstehend Änderungsanträge zu Dokument CHARTE 4170/00
CONVENT 17, vorgelegt von Herrn Ingo Friedrich, Mitglied des Europaparlaments. ¹

¹ Dieser Text wurde nur in deutscher Sprache übermittelt.

Dr. Ingo Friedrich, MdEP
 Vizepräsident des Europäischen Parlaments
 Mitglied im EU-Grundrechtskonvent

Änderungsanträge zu Dokument CONVENT 17
 Vorschläge für die Artikel über die Bürgerrechte (Artikel A bis J)

Änderungsantrag 1:

Artikel A. Grundsatz der Demokratie

1. Alle öffentliche Gewalt geht (zwei Wörter streichen) von den Völkern der in der EU vereinigten Staaten aus.
2. Die Union (drei Wörter streichen) beruht auf den Grundsätzen der Freiheit, der Demokratie, der Achtung der Menschenrechte und der Rechtsstaatlichkeit; diese Grundsätze sind allen Mitgliedstaaten gemeinsam.
3. Die Abgeordneten der Völker der in der Union (ein Wort streichen) zusammengeschlossenen (1 Wort streichen) Staaten im Europäischen Parlament werden in allgemeiner, unmittelbarer, freier, gleicher und geheimer Wahl von den Völkern der in der EU vereinigten Staaten gewählt.

In Absatz 1 "vom Volk" ersetzen durch "von den Völkern der in der EU vereinigten Staaten" .

In Absatz 2 "und ihre Organe" streichen.

In Absatz 3 "Gemeinschaft" ersetzen durch "Union" und "vereinigt" durch "zusammengeschlossenen"; "gleicher" einfügen.

Änderungsantrag 2:

Artikel B. Politische Parteien

Alle Unionsbürger und -bürgerinnen haben das Recht, mit anderen politische Parteien auf der Ebene der EU zu gründen und diesen beizutreten. Die politischen Parteien auf der Ebene der Europäischen Union tragen dazu bei, ein europäisches Bewußtsein herauszubilden und den politischen Willen der Bürger und Bürgerinnen der Union zum Ausdruck zu bringen. Dieses Recht gilt nicht für Parteien, die nach ihren Zielen oder dem Verhalten ihrer Anhänger nicht die Grundsätze der Freiheit, der Demokratie, der Achtung der Menschenrechte und der Rechtsstaatlichkeit achten.

*In Satz 1 "auf der Ebene der EU" einfügen nach "politische Parteien". Neuer Satz angefügt*Änderungsantrag 3:

Artikel C. Recht auf Teilnahme an den Wahlen zum Europäischen Parlament

Alle Unionsbürger und -bürgerinnen mit Wohnsitz in einem Mitgliedstaat, dessen Staatsangehörigkeit sie nicht besitzen, besitzen in dem Mitgliedstaat, in dem sie ihren Wohnsitz haben, das aktive und passive Wahlrecht bei den Wahlen zum Europäischen Parlament, wobei für sie dieselben Bedingungen gelten wie für die Angehörigen des betreffenden Mitgliedstaats, sofern dem nicht besondere Probleme dieses Mitgliedstaates entgegenstehen. Dieses Recht wird nach den im Vertrag zur Gründung der Europäischen Gemeinschaft vorgesehenen Einzelheiten ausgeübt.

In Satz 1 "sofern dem nicht besondere Probleme dieses Mitgliedstaates entgegenstehen" nach "Mitgliedstaats".

Änderungsantrag 4:

Artikel D. Recht auf Teilnahme an den Kommunalwahlen

Alle Unionsbürger und -bürgerinnen mit Wohnsitz in einem Mitgliedstaat, dessen Staatsangehörigkeit sie nicht besitzen, haben in dem Mitgliedstaat, in dem sie ihren Wohnsitz haben, das aktive und passive Wahlrecht bei Kommunalwahlen, wobei für sie die selben Bedingungen gelten wie für die Angehörigen des betreffenden Mitgliedstaates, sofern dem nicht besondere Probleme dieses Mitgliedstaates entgegen stehen. Dieses Recht wird nach den im Vertrag zur Gründung der Europäischen Gemeinschaft vorgesehenen Einzelheiten ausgeübt.

In Satz 1 einfügen: "sofern dem nicht besondere Probleme dieses Mitgliedstaaten entgegen stehen" einfügen nach "Mitgliedstaats".

Änderungsantrag 5:

Artikel E. Recht auf eine ordnungsgemäße Verwaltung [Beziehungen zur Verwaltung]

- 1. Alle Personen mit Wohnsitz in einem Mitgliedstaat haben ein Recht darauf, daß ihre Angelegenheiten von den Organen und Einrichtungen der Union ordnungsgemäß, unparteiisch, gerecht und innerhalb einer angemessenen Frist behandelt werden.

Absatz 2 a.F. streichen.

- 2. Alle Bürger und Bürgerinnen können sich in einer der Amtssprachen der Union an die Organe und Einrichtungen der Union wenden und müssen eine Antwort in dieser Sprache erhalten.

Nr. 2 streichen.

In Absatz "zur Wahrung ihrer Rechte" einfügen nach "Argumente"

Änderungsantrag 6:

Artikel F streichen

Änderungsantrag 7:

Artikel H. Petitionsrecht

Alle Unionsbürger und -bürgerinnen sowie alle Personen mit Wohnsitz im Hoheitsgebiet eines Mitgliedstaates besitzen das Petitionsrecht beim Europäischen Parlament in Angelegenheiten, die in die Tätigkeitsbereiche der Union fallen und die ihn oder sie unmittelbar betreffen und den im Vertrag zur Gründung der Europäischen Gemeinschaft festgelegten Bedingungen.

Nach den Worten beim Europäischen Parlament die Worte "in Angelegenheiten, die in die Tätigkeitsbereiche der Union fallen und die ihn oder sie unmittelbar betreffen" einfügen.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 5 avril 2000CHARTE 4202/00*CONTRIB 83*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-joint une contribution de M. Alvaro Rodriguez Bereijo, Représentant du President du gouvernement espagnol relative aux articles 1 a 16 du document CHARTE 4159/00
CONVENT 13. ¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langues française et espagnole.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 12 April 2000 (18.04)
(OR. en,nl)*CHARTE 4225/00*CONTRIB 100*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution by Mrs Johanna Maij-Weggen, member of the European Parliament, on the document CHARTE 4192/00 CONVENT 18. ¹

¹ This text exists in Dutch and English.

Mrs Maij-Weggen's amendments to the proposed articles on social rights

Article I should read as follows:

Equality between men and women must be ensured with regard to employment, pay, education and vocational training, social protection and taxation.

Article IV should read as follows:

1. Employers and workers have the right to associate freely, to negotiate collective agreements and, in cases of conflicts of interest, to take action and/or strike, even at European level.
2. Every citizen has the right, on an individual basis, to reach agreements concerning his/her employment contract, in compliance with national and European legislation.

Article V should read as follows:

Every worker has the right to fair remuneration.

Article VII should read as follows:

Every worker has the right to safe and healthy working conditions. [no change to English].

Article VIII, second paragraph, should read as follows:

Young people under eighteen years of age must have working conditions which suit their age and be protected against any work likely to harm their health and development.

Une autre solution consisterait dans l'inclusion de cette disposition au préambule ou d'en faire un article à part".

Ces observations importantes posent les problèmes suivants:

L'un d'eux fait référence au cadre des compétences, étant donné que l'on y spécifie l'application de la Charte aux institutions et organismes de l'Union et aux Etats membres lorsqu'ils appliquent le Droit communautaire, sans tenir compte que beaucoup des droits que l'on voudrait inclure dans la Charte, par leur propre nature et contenu, ne seront jamais appliqués, ni par la Communauté et ses Institutions, ni par les Etats membres, en exécution du Droit communautaire. Si l'on maintient le champ d'application prévu à la clause que nous examinons, nous nous trouverions devant le fait que la Charte contient des droits dont l'application est impossible. Pour cela, il serait préférable de les supprimer ou bien d'élargir leur champ d'application, entendu que ces droits s'appliquent aux Etats membres dans le cadre de ses compétences. Les droits mentionnés devront avoir les Etats membres en tant que destinataires exclusifs, étant donné qu'actuellement la Communauté manque de compétences sur eux. C'est le cas, par exemple avec le droit à la vie, la peine de mort, le procès pénal, l'éducation, etc. Ces droits, dans la mesure où ils sont contenus dans la Convention Européenne des Droits Humains (CEDH) et font partie du patrimoine des droits fondamentaux européens, doivent se refléter dans la Charte, mais ils sont uniquement exigibles aux Etats. Puisque la Communauté et ses institutions, spécialement le Tribunal de Justice, manquent de compétences pour leur sauvegarde et control, il faudrait s'en remettre à ce qui est prévu dans la législation interne de chaque Etat, sans préjudice des renvois que les législations internes mentionnées puissent faire à d'autres textes ou instances non communautaires. N'est pas recevable un renvoi spécifique à une autre source qui ne soit pas celle interne de chaque Etat, puisque, dans le cas contraire, l'interprétation du droit communautaire serait attribuée à une instance supranationale différente de la Communauté.

Troisièmement, il est très important de laisser bien clair que la référence à la reconnaissance et à la protection des droits fondamentaux ne peut être interprétée en aucun cas comme l'élargissement, dans ces matières, des compétences non incluses actuellement dans le cadre de la Communauté Européenne d'après le texte de ses Traités. Le contraire supposerait une modification indirecte du Droit Communautaire qui dépasserait le cadre du mandat reçu par la Convention. Cette inquiétude est reflétée dans le projet et l'on propose, comme rédaction alternative, suite aux observations antérieures, ce qui suit:

"Les dispositions de la présente Charte seront applicables à la Communauté et ses institutions et aux Etats membres dans la limite de leurs compétences respectives.

Les dispositions de la Charte n'impliquent aucune attribution de nouvelles compétences en faveur de la Communauté ou ses institutions, ni aucun élargissement des compétences existantes ou des objectifs qui ont été attribués à la Communauté et ses institutions".

Cette double clause, relative au champ d'application de la Charte et à la non-modification du champ de compétence de la Communauté et ses Institutions, devrait se compléter avec une autre clause relative au control juridictionnel des droits reconnus dans la Charte en cohérence avec ce qui a été exposé précédemment. Un contenu possible de cette clause serait différencier trois types de suppositions (ou hypothèses):

* le respect, par la Communauté et ses Institutions, des droits reconnus dans la Charte y qui affecten son champ de compétence, correspondrait au Tribunal de Justice des Communautés Européennes;

* le respect, par les Etats Membres, des droits reconnus dans la Charte lorsqu'ils agissent en exécution du Droit communautaire, correspondrait au Tribunal de Justice des Communautés Européennes et aux organismes juridictionnels internes en tant qu'applicateurs du Droit Communautaire;

* le respect, par les Etats Membres, des droits reconnus par la Charte dans les matières qui sont de sa seule compétence, serait garanti conformément au système de contrôle juridictionnel prévu dans les législations internes de chacun des Etats Membres.

En accord avec la terminologie utilisée par le TCE, on propose de remplacer le terme "missions" par "objectifs".

Article 2. Le Droit à la vie

1. Toute personne a droit à la vie.

2. Personne ne pourra être condamné à la peine de mort, ni exécuté.

Rédaction alternative

Article 2. Le Droit à la vie.

1. Tous ont droit à la vie.

2. Personne ne pourra être condamné à la peine de mort, ni exécuté, sauf ce qui est prévu dans les lois pénales par temps de guerre.

Motivation:

On propose l'expression "tous" au lieu de "toute personne", afin d'éviter le conflit de la détermination juridique, différente dans les différents Etats, du concept de la personne.

En ce qui concerne la peine de mort, le CEDH dans son protocole n° 6 a prévu l'exemption à l'abolition de la peine de mort, son maintien en temps de guerre, et la Convention a été ratifiée dans ces termes. L'Espagne a aboli, depuis la Loi Organique 11/1995, du 27 novembre, la peine de mort y compris dans ce cas et a ratifié sans réserves le second protocole facultatif du Pacte International des Droits Civils et Politiques destiné à abolir la peine de mort (New York 15.12.1989). Cependant, l'article 15 de la Constitution espagnole prévoit la possible application de la peine de mort en cas de guerre, et ce d'après ce que le législateur puisse ordonner, à tout moment, et l'abolition absolue est en contradiction avec le précepte mentionné.

L'exposition des motifs du projet reprend cette circonstance, mais comprend que celle-ci est sauvée par le renvoi que l'article 6 du TUE fait au CEDH. Ainsi, et comme on pourra l'observer plus loin, dans divers articles de la proposition qui a été remise, on a supprimé toute référence à des limites, exceptions ou définitions contenues dans le CEDH (par exemple, l'article 5.2, définitions du travail forcé ou obligatoire; ou l'article 8, limites à la publicité du procès, libertés de pensée, d'expression, etc.), entendu qu'ils sont d'application en vertu de l'article 6 UE.

Nous ne partageons pas cette opinion étant donné que cet article établi, à son alinéa 2° que "l'Union Européenne respectera les droits fondamentaux, tels qu'ils sont garantis dans la Convention Européenne pour la Protection des Droits Humains y des Libertés Fondamentales, signé à Rome le 4 novembre 1950, et tel que prévu dans les traditions constitutionnelles communes aux Etats Membres, en tant que principes généraux du Droit Communautaire". Comme on peut apprécier, ce précepte oblige l'Union à respecter les droits fondamentaux en tant que principes généraux du Droit communautaire, en spécifiant que les droits en question seront ceux établis dans le CEDH et dans les traditions constitutionnelles des Etats Membres. Telle est la situation actuelle, à laquelle on devrait ajouter le contrôle juridictionnel que le Tribunal de Justice effectue pour le respect de cet article, en vertu de l'article 46 UE.

Cependant, par l'adoption d'une Charte des Droits Fondamentaux de l'Union Européenne et, si cela était le cas, l'incorporation aux Traités, il est évident que cet article 6 devra, soit être modifié, soit disparaître. Cela n'a aucun sens de dire que les droits fondamentaux doivent être respectés par l'Union en tant que principes généraux du Droit Communautaire et en accord avec le CEDH et les traditions constitutionnelles des Etats Membres, et en même temps avoir une énumération de droits qui lient les Institutions et les Etats Membres en exécution du Droit communautaire.

D'autre part, s'il s'avérait qu'aucune spécification de limites ou d'exceptions n'était nécessaire, étant donné que, en vertu de l'art 6 UE, c'est le CEDH qui est appliqué, c'est alors l'inutilité de l'exercice effectué qui est mise en évidence. Il n'est donc pas nécessaire de rédiger une Charte, puisque nous disposons de l'art. 6 UE qui fait que le CEDH s'applique à l'Union.

En ce qui concerne la peine de mort, on ne peut omettre, en outre, que cette interdiction est dirigée unique et exclusivement aux Etats, et non aux Institutions Européennes.

Article 3. Le Droit au respect de l'intégrité

1. Toute personne a le droit au respect de son intégrité physique et psychique.

2. Dans le cadre de la médecine et de la biologie, on doit spécialement respecter les principes suivants:

- interdiction des pratiques eugéniques
- respect du consentement libre et informé du patient
- interdiction du fait que le corps humains et ses produits se convertissent en objet de profit (ou lucre)
- interdiction de la clonation d'êtres humains

Observations.

1) On propose de modifier, ne fut-ce que la traduction espagnole de l'alinéa premier de l'article, en remplaçant "psychique" par "morale". En effet, le terme "moral" se rattache plus à la tradition juridique espagnole et, en outre, apporte une dimension plus ample que "psychique" -qui est plutôt un terme scientifique- et qui, plus est, se réfère plus à l'intégrité physique.

2) L'alinéa relatif à la médecine et à la biologie a été extrait, comme expliqué dans l'exposition des motifs, de la "Convention pour la Protection des Droits Humains et la dignité de l'être humain en respect avec les applications de la biologie et de la médecine" élaborée dans le cadre du Conseil Européen et que l'Espagne n'a pas ratifié.

Les mentions réalisées à cet alinéa n'apportent aucune valeur ajoutée à la reconnaissance du droit à la vie et à l'intégrité physique et moral, et son ambiguïté est susceptible de présenter, au contraire, des problèmes d'interprétation. En accord avec le proverbe allemand "dans le détail se trouve le diable", il se peut qu'en concrétisant les interdictions à celles prévues dans cet article, des faits également contraires aux Droits Humains non repris dans l'article proposé puissent y être admis. On peut invoquer le fait que le Droit doit s'adapter à l'évolution technologique, mais cette même raison conseille précisément, lorsque l'on dispose de prévisions qui peuvent parfaitement s'adapter aux changements technologiques, ne pas tomber dans des classifications qui emprisonnent l'évolution propre à laquelle on prétend s'adapter. D'autre part, l'analyse de la Convention à laquelle on fait référence révèle que les préceptes qui y sont contenus doivent se comprendre dans son entièreté, en satisfaisant par exemple les limites et exceptions prévues dans les articles 7, 8, 9 et 26 sur la protection des personnes qui souffrent de troubles mentaux, les situations d'urgence, les désirs exprimés auparavant et les restrictions dans l'exercice des droits.

Article 4. Interdiction de torture et des traitements inhumains.

Personne ne pourra être soumise à la torture ni à des peines ou traitements inhumains ou dégradants.

Aucune observation à formuler.

Article 5. Interdiction de l'esclavage et du travail forcé.

- 1. Personne ne pourra être soumise à l'esclavage ou à la servitude.
- 2. Personne ne pourra être contrainte de réaliser un travail forcé ou obligatoire.

Rédaction alternative:

Ajouter à l'alinéa second ce qui suit: "N'auront pas ce caractère les prestations personnelles qui sont établies par loi et sont exigées aux citoyens pour des raisons civiles, dans les cas d'urgence, de calamité, la prestation du service militaire ou la prestation sociale qui le remplace, ni le travail exigé normalement à une personne privée de liberté."

Motivation:

En accord avec l'article 4.3, lettres a, b, c et d du CEDH, n'ont pas de caractère forcé les prestations personnelles exigées aux citoyens pour des raisons civiles, dans les cas d'urgence, de calamité, ni la prestation du service militaire ou prestation sociale de remplacement, ni le travail exigé normalement à une personne privée de liberté. Même si dans l'exposition de motifs on affirme que le renvoi du TUE à son article 6 est suffisant pour sauver ces exceptions, on réitère que, sans préjudice aucun du caractère qu'il faudra donner à cette Charte dans l'Ordre Juridique Européen, un précepte de ce genre dirigé aux Etats-Unis doit contenir en soi la définition adéquate du droit qui exclut la considération de travaux forcés de ceux énoncés.

Article 6. Le Droit à la liberté et à la sécurité

Toute personne a le droit à la liberté et à la sécurité. Personne ne peut être privé de sa liberté, sauf dans des cas spécifiques et en accord avec les voies légales.

Rédaction alternative:

Toute personne a le droit à la liberté et à la sécurité. Personne ne peut être privé de sa liberté, sauf dans les cas et dans la forme prévus par la loi.

Motivation:

Il n'existe pas d'inconvénient à accepter la synthèse qui, en relation avec le brouillon précédant et avec le texte du CEDH, se fait du droit à la liberté et à la sécurité, en élargissant en plus son contenu à la "privation de la liberté" qu'elle qu'en soit la cause et non uniquement à la détention ou prison pour des causes pénales (pour maladies psychiques, par exemple). En outre, dans la mesure où le précepte peut uniquement être dirigé aux Etats-Unis, celui-ci est suffisant avec la proclamation du droit.

La proposition qui est réalisée prétend à une plus grande perfection linguistique, à la fois qu'à son accomodation au langage technique juridique: les cas "spécifiques" sont seulement ceux déterminés par la loi, et les "voies légales" sont les formes ou procédures également déterminées par loi.

Article 7. Le Droit au recours effectif

Toute personne dont les droits et libertés ont été violés a le droit au recours effectif devant un tribunal.

Note: Les articles 7 et 8 devraient se scinder en deux alinéas d'un même précepte en tant que manifestation des procédures auxquelles font expressément référence les conclusions du Conseil de l'Europe; ceci peut être utile afin de favoriser une meilleure visibilité de la Charte; c'est en effet le cas à l'article 6 du CEDH.

Rédaction alternative:

Le Droit à la tutelle judiciaire effective.

Toute personne, dont les droits et libertés, reconnus dans cette Charte, ont été violés, a le droit d'accès à la tutelle judiciaire effective en accord avec le Droit Communautaire et avec la loi de chaque Etat.

Motivation:

1. Il faut mentionner expressément que les droits et libertés protégés son ceux reconnus dans la Charte et non d'autres.

2. Afin de moderniser la formulation de ce droit et le doter d'un caractère omnicompréhensif, c'est-à-dire, dans tous les domaines juridictionnels (civils, pénaux, contentieux administratifs, c-à-d les autorités judiciaires qui, dans certains Etats contrôlent l'Administration, et Social), internes et communautaires, il paraît opportun de modifier sa dénomination en utilisant l'expression "droit d'accès à la tutelle judiciaire effective". En outre, en espagnol le mot "recours" s'identifie à la révision par une instance soit administrative ou judiciaires d'un cas auparavant prononcé par une instance inférieure.

3. En tous cas, l'accès à la tutelle judiciaire effective est un droit conféré par la Loi, c'est pourquoi l'on propose une mention expresse à celle-ci pour son développement par les Etats ou aux Traités pour ce qui est des Institutions Européennes. Ce seront donc la Loi et le Droit Communautaire qui, tout en respectant l'accès à la tutelle judiciaire, établiront les ordres juridictionnels et leurs respectives compétences, les procédures afin de rendre effectif ce droit, en y incluant les règles de légitimation active et passive, etc...

Note. L'Espagne n'a pas ratifié le protocole n° 7 concernant la double instance pénale; il ne semble pas que dans ce texte cette réserve soit compromise.

Article 8. Le Droit à un tribunal impartial.

Toute personne a le droit à ce que sa cause soit entendue équitablement et publiquement, dans un délai raisonnable, par un tribunal indépendant et impartial, établi par la loi. Une assistance juridique gratuite sera prestée à ceux qui ne disposent pas de moyens suffisants, si toutefois celle-ci est indispensable afin de garantir l'efficacité de l'accès à la justice.

Aucune observation n'est formulée. La rédaction pourrait s'améliorer, du moins en espagnol, en modifiant les expressions suivantes:

- "autorité judiciaire" (qui comprend les organes juridictionnels unipersonnels et associés, et qui en Espagne sont appelés Tribunaux).
- "prédéterminé para la loi" au lieu de "establi"

Article 9. Les Droits à la défense.

Tout accusé est présumé innocent jusqu'à ce que sa culpabilité ait été légalement déclarée et a droit au respect des droits à la défense.

Note: Les articles 9, 10 et 11 devraient être groupés en un seul, puisqu'ils établissent tous trois des garanties au procès pénal.

Rédaction alternative

Article 9. Les Droits à la défense

Tout accusé est présumé innocent jusqu'à ce que sa culpabilité ait été légalement déclarée et a droit au respect des droits à la défense et à l'égalité des armes.

Observations:

On ne peut passer sous silence que l'Espagne a formulé, en son temps, une réserve en ce qui concerne l'application des articles 5 et 6 du CEDH en relation avec le régime disciplinaire des Forces Armées, actuellement régi par la Loi Organique 8/1998, du 2 décembre, du Régime Disciplinaire des Forces Armées, et la Loi Organique 11/1991 qui établit le régime disciplinaire de la Garde Civile, qui, en accord avec l'article 25.3 CE prévoit l'imposition, par les autorités militaires non judiciaires, de peines privant de la liberté dans ce domaine. La moindre concrétion des préceptes de ce dernier brouillon par rapport au précédent paraît éviter toute collision entre l'ordre interne et ce que l'on y exprime, tant que sa rédaction s'en tient aux termes actuels.

Article 10. Il n'y a pas de peine sans loi.

Personne ne pourra être condamné pour une action ou une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, ne constitue pas une infraction prévue par le Droit national, le Droit de l'Union ou le Droit international. De même, aucune peine plus grave que celle d'application au moment où l'infraction a été commise ne pourra être imposée. Si, postérieurement à l'accomplissement de l'infraction, la loi ordonne l'imposition d'une peine plus légère, celle-ci devra être appliquée.

Le présent article n'empêchera pas le jugement ni le châtement d'une personne coupable d'une action ou d'une omission qui, au moment de son accomplissement, constituerait un délit selon les principes généraux des Droits reconnus par les nations démocratiques.

Rédaction alternative:Article 10. Principe de légalité pénale

- "Personne ne pourra être condamné pénalement pour une action ou une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, ne constitue pas une infraction pénale prévue par la loi. De même, aucune peine plus grave que celle d'application au moment où l'infraction a été commise ne pourra être imposée. Si, postérieurement à l'accomplissement de l'infraction, la loi ordonne l'imposition d'une peine plus légère, celle-ci devra être appliquée".

- Suppression du second paragraphe.

Motivation:

1) L'inclusion de l'expression "pénale" permet de délimiter le cadre de ce Droit à la légalité. De ce fait, en principe, est exclue son application dans le domaine de ce qui peut être sanctionné administrativement. Cela n'empêcherait pas à ce que dans un précepte à part, on fasse une mention à l'application du principe de légalité dans le domaine des sanctions administratives, avec un renvoi à la "legislation" qui permette la prévision des infractions et des sanctions dans les normes communautaires (Règlements et Directives), la collaboration des règlements émanant de l'Administration dans la description des types des infractions et dans la détermination des sanctions, de même que son grand jeu dans le domaine des relations spéciales de soumission. Il est très difficile que l'article s'applique aux Institutions de la Communauté, tandis que l'utilisation par la Communauté Européenne de la faculté sanctionnatrice et quotidienne.

2) Au contraire, on inclut la mention à l'expression "loi" au lieu de Droit national ou droit international, parce que cet instrument de norme permet de renforcer les garanties des citoyens en réservant à l'expression de la volonté populaire dans les organismes qui comprennent le pouvoir législatif, la compétence pour prévoir des infractions pénales. Il ne paraît pas opportun dans l'état actuel du droit européen de maintenir les renvois vagues au Droit international ou le seconde paragraph relatif aux "principes généraux du Droit", étant donné qu'il existent des instruments juridiques précis nationaux et internationaux sous forme des lois et traités qui garantissent aussi bien la punition de coupable de ce gens de délits que ses droits à la défense. Ce qu'établi précisément aussi bien le droit international que les principes constitutionnels au sujet de ces matières, c'est la réserve stricte à la Loi pour la configuration des délits et des peines.

3. On propose l'élimination de la référence au Droit de l'Union, parce qu'actuellement elle manque absolument de compétences en matière de typification de formes délictueuses.

Article 11. Le droit de ne pas être jugé ou puni deux fois

Personne ne pourra être sous procès ou puni pénalement à cause d'une infraction pour laquelle il a déjà été absous ou condamné par une sentence définitive conformément à la loi.

Rédaction alternative:

Le droit à ne pas être jugé ou condamné pénalement deux fois pour le même fait.

Personne ne pourra être inculpé ou condamné pénalement en raison des faits pour lesquels il a été déjà absous ou condamné pénalement par sentence ferme.

Motivation:

Le caractère pénal du champ d'application de cet article 7 devrait être renforcé, de ce fait la possibilité de la double sanction pénale et disciplinaire pour le même fait serait sauvée, raison pour laquelle l'Espagne n'a pas ratifié le protocole n° 7 du CEDH. En effet, le problème que suscite ce principe et son extension au domaine disciplinaire en interdisant la double sanction pénale et administrative pour des mêmes faits dans le domaine des nommées "relations spéciales de soumission", qui s'applique, par exemple, aux fonctionnaires, ou aux personnes liées à l'Administration avec une intensité spéciale (par exemple, une peine privative de liberté pour un délit d'assassinat pourrait être imposée par un juge pénal à un agent de l'autorité et, postérieurement, l'expulsion de l'Administration comme conséquence de la sentence pénale par une autorité administrative dans une procédure disciplinaire). D'autre part, dans ce cas la rédaction du brouillon précédent est préférable, puisqu'elle délimite avec plus de précision le champ du ne bis in idem à la double sanction pénale pour les mêmes faits, mieux qu'infractions.

Une chose différente serait que l'on admette la suggestion formulée en relation avec la prévision des principes spécifiques dans le domaine de la procédure administrative en général et des sanctions administratives en particulier, imposées par les Etats lorsqu'ils appliquent le Droit Communautaire ou par les Institutions Communautaires, en prévoyant un précepte interdisant, dans le domaine des sanctions administratives, la double sanction pour le même fait.

Les réserves exposées par l'Espagne sont partagées par d'autres Etats de l'Union.

L'affirmation réalisée dans l'exposition des motifs doit se nuancer dans le sens que "le principe non bis in idem" s'applique au Droit Communautaire (entre autres parmi d'autres exemples d'une jurisprudence importante, la sentence du 5 mai 1966, Gutmann contre Commission, affaires 18/65 et 35/65. Rec. 1966 p.150, et, dans une affaire récente la sentence du Tribunal de Justice, du 20 avril 99 les affaires conjointes T-305/94 et autres, Limburgse Vinyl Maatschappij NV contre Commission, non encore publiées). Ce qui est repris, au moins dans la première sentence que l'on a pu consulter, c'est l'interdiction de la double sanction disciplinaire non pénale (Dans ce cas, la sanction était imposée par la Commission à un fonctionnaire communautaire), pour des mêmes faits, question différente à celle posée ici. En tout cas, la proposition insisterait sur la convenance de prévoir des dispositions relatives à l'exercice du droit administratif sanctionneur par les Institutions de la Communauté.

Article 12. Respect de la vie privée.

Toute personne a le droit au respect de sa vie privée, de son honneur, de son domicile et du secret de ses communications.

Rédaction alternative

Intimité personnelle et familiale.

Sont garantis les droits à l'intimité personnelle et familiale, et à l'honneur; de même que les droits à l'inviolabilité du domicile, au secret des communications indépendamment du support utilisé et à la protection des données à caractère personnel. L'exercice de ces droits pourra être limité par Loi et, si cela était le cas, par autorisation judiciaire préalable.

Motivation:

1. Il serait opportun de supprimer la mention à l'identité par rapport au brouillon précédent, qui n'apparaît ni dans le CEDH ni dans le Droit Interne espagnol et son inclusion peut poser de grands problèmes d'interprétation, en commençant par sa propre définition et sa titularité.
2. D'autre part, il paraît plus adéquat de faire référence, en espagnol, au droit à l'honneur au lieu de la réputation (tel que repris dans le nouveau texte), et à l'intimité plutôt qu'à la vie privée et familiale. On propose de conserver ici la mention à la vie familiale, parce qu'on comprend que ce qui est protégé est plutôt l'intimité ou la privacité familiale que l'institution familiale, conclusion à laquelle on arrive en changeant de place cette inclusion à l'article 13.1.
3. D'autre part, il semblerait que ce soit l'endroit opportun pour inclure la protection des données et la limitation de l'usage de l'informatique, étant donné qu'elles ont une relation directe avec l'intimité, plutôt que de leur dédier un précepte propre et surtout séparé de celui-ci.
4. Dans la rédaction alternative, une mention aux limites de ce droit y a été incluse. On réitère ainsi la disconformité, exprimée dans les observations à l'article 2.2 en relation avec l'interprétation de l'article 6 TUE. A ce qu'on y dit, il faut ajouter la conviction du fait que les limites des droits sont une part consubstantielle de leur contenu et leur propre définition. Dans certains cas, comme on verra plus loin avec la liberté d'expression, la limite s'établit précisément en défense des autres droits, tels que le droit à l'honneur ou à l'intimité. Il faut accepter l'idée, dans ces droits qui s'appliquent également aux relations entre particuliers, que l'expression des limites prive de force expresse le droit, alors que ce qu'il fait est précisément l'inverse, le garantir. Les destinataires des limitations ne sont pas seulement les Etats mais aussi les autres citoyens. Dans ce cas, l'existence des limites à ces droits doit être mentionnée (Cfr article 8 CEDH), même en exigeant son établissement par loi, de même que sa garantie, en exigeant que la limitation se fasse par intervention judiciaire.

Article 13. Vie familiale.

- 1. Toute personne a le droit au respect de sa vie familiale.
- 2. Toute personne a le droit de se marier et de fonder une famille d'après les lois des Etats membres relatives à l'exercice de ce droit.
- 3. La protection de la famille sur le plan juridique, économique et social serait garantie.

Observations:

En concordance avec ce qui a déjà été exprimé antérieurement, étant donné qu'il ne s'agit pas de protéger la famille en tant qu'Institution juridique, sinon son intimité, on propose de ramener son contenu à l'alinéa précédant.

En ce qui concerne l'alinéa second, la nouvelle formulation, avec renvoi à la Loi de chaque Etat pour l'établissement des conditions requises et des limites de ce droit, paraît opportune.

L'alinéa 3, bien qu'ayant changé sa rédaction par rapport à la version précédente, établit un principe de politique sociale qui ne fait pas partie de l'actuelle compétence de l'Union Européenne ni de la Communauté, c'est pourquoi sa formulation risque d'être interprétée dans le sens d'extralimenter le mandat reçu par la Convention, dans les termes exprimés auparavant. On propose sa suppression.

Article 14. Liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion.

Toute personne a le droit à la liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion.

Rédaction alternative: Ajout d'un nouvel alinéa:

- 2. Ces droits ne pourront faire l'objet de plus de restrictions que celles qui, prévues par la loi, constituent des mesures nécessaires et proportionnelles pour la protection de l'ordre, la santé ou la morale publiques ou des droits et libertés reconnus dans cette Charte.

Observations:

Le précepte reproduit littéralement l'alinéa 1 de l'article 9 du CEDH et, comme tel, ne suscite aucune question. Non obstant, les limitations à ce droit, tel que prévue à l'alinéa second, sont omises et, d'après notre critère, celles-ci doivent figurer littéralement à l'article ou ne fût-ce que de façon abrégée. On pourrait compléter le précepte avec l'inclusion d'une mention relative au fait que "personne ne pourra être obligé à déclarer d'après son idéologie, sa religion ou ses croyances".

Article 15. La liberté d'expression.

1. Toute personne a le droit à la liberté d'expression. Ce droit comprend la liberté d'opinion et la liberté de ne pas recevoir ou de communiquer des informations ou des idées sans qu'il puisse y avoir une ingérence quelconque de la part des autorités publiques et sans considération des frontières.

2. L'art, la science et l'investigation sont libres.

Observations.

La rédaction du précepte reprend partiellement l'article 10 du CEDH. La mention au fait que "l'art, la science et l'investigation sont libres" se trouve maintenant correctement incluse, en ce qui concerne les manifestations des droits à la liberté de pensée, d'expression et d'information.

Dans ce cas-ci, sans doute avec plus de clarté que dans d'autres, on apprécie le besoin de mentionner expressément les limites de ces droits, c'est pourquoi on réitère les observations précédentes à ce sujet. De ce fait, on propose l'ajout d'un alinéa supplémentaire avec le contenu suivant:

3. Ces droits ont leur limite au respect des droits reconnus dans cette Charte, qui sont ceux établis par les lois qui les développent, ceux qui dérivent de la sécurité publique, et, spécialement, le droit à l'honneur, à l'intimité et à la protection de l'enfance et de la jeunesse.

Article 16. Le Droit à l'éducation.

1. Le droit à l'instruction ne peut être refusé à personne, ce qui inclut, en particulier, la possibilité de suivre gratuitement l'enseignement obligatoire.

2. La création de centres d'enseignements est libre.

3. On respectera le droit des parents à assurer l'éducation et l'enseignement de leurs enfants selon leurs convictions religieuses et philosophiques.

Rédaction alternative:

1. Tout le monde a le droit à l'instruction. La gratuité de l'enseignement de base obligatoire sera garantie.

2. On garantira la liberté de création de centres décents tout en respectant les principes démocratiques.

3. On respectera le droit des parents à assurer l'éducation et l'enseignement de leurs enfants, conformément à leurs convictions religieuses et philosophiques.

Motivation:

1. On propose la rédaction positive du premier alinéa avec l'intention de donner une plus grande emphase au caractère subjectif de ces droits.

2. Au sujet de l'alinéa 2, il faut dire que la liberté de création est un principe admis par tous les Etats Membres mais dont l'exercice est soumis au développement légal, où sont établis des conditions qui le limitent (à titre d'exemple on peut citer la régularisation des conditions des centres d'enseignement, en ce qui concerne leur qualité d'enseignement ou l'homologation des titres), outre la limite concernant les autres droits et principes démocratiques.

17 mars 2000.

ENTWURF DER CHARTA DER GRUNDRECHTE DER EUROPÄISCHEN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brüssel, den 4. April 2000CHARTE 4203/00*CONTRIB 84*ÜBERMITTLUNGSVERMERK

Betr.: Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union

Finden Sie bitte nachstehend Anmerkungen der Arbeitsgruppe der deutschen Länder, vorgelegt von Herrn Jürgen Gnauck, Vertreter des deutschen Bundestags, zu Dokument CHARTE 4137/00 CONVENT 8 und CHARTE 4170/00 CONVENT 17.¹

¹ Dieser Text wurde nur in deutscher Sprache übermittelt.

Thüringer Staatskanzlei • Postfach 997 • 99021 Erfurt

Minister für Bundes- und
Europaangelegenheiten und
Chef der Staatskanzlei

An den
Vorsitzenden des Konvents
zur Ausarbeitung des Entwurfs
einer Charta der Grundrechte der EU
Herrn Bundespräsidenten a.D.
Prof. Dr. Roman Herzog
Sekretariat des Konvents

Fax: 0032-2-285 7837
e-mail: Jean-Paul.Jacqué@consilium.eu.int

Geschäftszeichen:	Ihr Zeichen, Ihre Nachricht vom	Telefon	Datum
33/KI-03145

F:\encours\jacque\CharteArchives\DE\04203.d0

Anmerkungen der Arbeitsgruppe der deutschen Länder zu den Vorschlägen des Präsidiums CHARTE 4137/00 CONVENT 8 und CHARTE 4170/00 CONVENT 17

Sehr geehrter Herr Vorsitzender,

das Präsidium hat für die informelle Plenartagung des Konvents am 27./28. März 2000 Vorschläge für die Artikel 10 bis 19 (Dokument CONVENT 8) und für die Bürgerrechte (Dokument CONVENT 17) vorgelegt. Die deutschen Länder haben sich im Rahmen ihrer Abstimmungsgespräche ein erstes Meinungsbild verschafft. Ich erlaube mir, Ihnen diese Einschätzung zu übermitteln und möchte Sie herzlich bitten, unsere Anregungen im Verlaufe der Diskussion im Konvent zu berücksichtigen.

Mit freundlichen Grüßen

Jürgen Gnauck
Minister

Regierungsstraße 73 • 99084 Erfurt • Telefon: (0361) 37 92831 • Telefax: (0361) 37 92832

Thüringer Staatskanzlei

Erfurt, den 27.08.2000

Referat 33/Bo, Fie

Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union
Anmerkungen der Arbeitsgruppe der deutschen Länder zu den Vorschlägen des Präsidiums
Charte 4170/00 CONVENT 17 und Charte 4137/00 CONVENT 8

Zum Dokument CONVENT 17:

1. Zur Einleitung

Unter der Rubrik oder dem Oberbegriff "Bürgerrechte" schlägt der Vorspann eine Dreiteilung zwischen Bürgerrechten im eigentlichen Sinne, Einwohnerrechten und Menschenrechten vor. In der verfassungsrechtlichen Terminologie stellt jedoch der Begriff "Bürgerrechte" den Gegenbegriff zu "Menschenrechten" dar. Daher wäre hier wohl der Oberbegriff der "politischen Rechte" zutreffender.

Die in Erwägung gezogene allgemeine Bestimmung, wonach den Unionsbürgern vorbehaltene Rechte auf Staatsangehörige dritter Länder ausgedehnt werden können, lehnen die deutschen Länder ab. Für eine derartige Ausweitung besteht in der Charta kein Bedürfnis. Im Übrigen versteht es sich von selbst, dass eine Ausdehnung jederzeit erfolgen kann.

2. Zu Artikel A. Grundsatz der Demokratie

Absatz 1 spricht allgemein vom "Volk". Ein europäisches Staatsvolk hat sich jedoch nicht gebildet. Bezugspunkt der Charta müssen daher die Völker der Unionsstaaten bleiben, wie es die Absätze 2 und 3 auch zutreffend voraussetzen. Daher wird vorgeschlagen, anstelle der Aussage "vom Volk" die Wörter "von den Völkern der in der Europäischen Union vereinigten (oder: zusammengeschlossenen) Staaten" einzufügen.

Die Vorschrift des Absatzes 2 geht insoweit über den ihr zu Grunde liegenden Artikel 6 Abs. 1 EUV hinaus, als nach dem Wort "Union" die Wörter "und ihre Organe" eingefügt werden. Ist damit etwa eine weitergehende "Demokratisierung" der Organe bezweckt? Auf der anderen Seite übernimmt Absatz 2 die Formulierung des Artikels 6 Abs. 1 EUV nicht vollständig, sondern spart den Grundsatz der Achtung der Grundfreiheiten aus. Eine Begründung hierfür fehlt. Genügt auch insoweit der an erster Stelle genannte Grundsatz der Freiheit?

Insgesamt gesehen sollte der Eindruck vermieden werden, dass es sich bei der Charta um den Kern einer EU-Gesamtverfassung handelt.

Absatz 3 sollte zunächst um den Grundsatz der Gleichheit der Wahl ergänzt werden. So ist sichergestellt, dass jede Stimme bei der Umsetzung der Stimmen in die Zuteilung von Parlamentssitzen mit gleichem Erfolgswert berücksichtigt wird. Die Formulierung würde damit lauten: "Die Abgeordneten der Völker der in der Gemeinschaft (Union) vereinigten Staaten im Europäischen Parlament werden in allgemeiner, unmittelbarer, freier, gleicher und geheimer Wahl gewählt."

Weiter sollte anstelle des Wortes "Gemeinschaft" das Wort "Union" verwendet werden. Nach Art. 49 EUV ist nämlich nur noch ein Beitritt zur und somit eine Mitgliedschaft in der Union möglich. Ausgeschlossen ist ein Beitritt nur zu einer der Europäischen Gemeinschaften oder zur zweiten oder dritten "Säule".

3. Zu Artikel B. Politische Parteien

In Satz 1 sollten nach den Worten "mit anderen politischen Parteien" die Worte "auf der Ebene der Europäischen Union" eingefügt werden. Die Charta kann nämlich aus Kompetenzgründen nicht das Recht gewähren, politische Parteien für Wahlen allein in den Mitgliedstaaten zu gründen.

Darüber hinaus empfiehlt sich eine Straffung des Satzes 1. Die genannte Gründungsfreiheit impliziert die Freiheit des Beitritts zu einer gegründeten politischen Partei und des Verbleibs darin. Daher erscheint es unnötig, das Recht auf Beitritt zu einer politischen Partei ausdrücklich festzuschreiben. Im Übrigen könnte die bisherige Formulierung dazu führen, dass weitere Teilgarantien (etwa die interne Betätigungsfreiheit oder das Recht auf autonome Gestaltung der Organisation der Parteien) als vom Schutz des Artikels B ausgeschlossen betrachtet würden, weil sie - anders als die Beitrittsfreiheit - nicht genannt sind.

Satz 2 hat den Charakter einer allgemeinpolitischen Aussage oder eines bloßen Programmsatzes. Daher erscheint die Aufnahme in eine Grundrechtecharta äußerst fraglich.

Schließlich ist zu erwägen, ob – etwa in einem Absatz 2 – eine Ausnahme für solche Parteien vorzusehen ist, die nach ihren Zielen oder nach dem Verhalten ihrer Anhänger nicht die Grundsätze der Freiheit, der Demokratie, der Achtung der Menschenrechte und der Rechtsstaatlichkeit beachten.

Es sollte ferner sorgfältig geprüft werden, ob politische Parteien aus Artikel B einen Anspruch auf eine allgemeine Parteienfinanzierung durch die Europäische Union herleiten könnten.

4. Zu Artikel C. Recht auf Teilnahme an den Wahlen zum Europäischen Parlament

Die in Artikel C und D aufgeführten Wahlrechte der Unionsbürger für Wahlen zum Europäischen Parlament und zu den Kommunalvertretungen könnten – im Interesse der Straffung – in einem Artikel zusammengeführt werden. Dies entspräche Artikel 19 EGV, der das Wahlrecht bei Wahlen zum Europäischen Parlament und bei Kommunalwahlen ebenfalls zusammenfasst.

Es erscheint sinnvoll, am Ende des Satzes 1 eine Öffnungsklausel vorzusehen, die lauten könnte: "sofern dem nicht besondere Belange dieses Mitgliedstaates entgegen stehen".

Die deutsche Fassung des Satzes 2 könnte noch sprachlich wie folgt verbessert werden: "Dieses Recht besteht nach Maßgabe des Vertrages zur Gründung der Europäischen Gemeinschaft".

5. Zu Artikel D. Recht auf Teilnahme an den Kommunalwahlen

Es wird vorgeschlagen, Artikel D als Absatz 2 des Artikels C auszugestalten. Hier empfiehlt sich im Übrigen die gleiche sprachliche Verbesserung wie in Artikel C ("nach Maßgabe").

Darüber hinaus sollte Satz 2 entsprechend dem bisherigen Artikel 19 Absatz 1 und Absatz 2 EGV dahingehend ergänzt werden, dass Ausnahmeregelungen vorgesehen werden, wenn dies aufgrund besonderer Probleme eines Mitgliedstaates gerechtfertigt ist. Zumindest ist klarzustellen, dass sich durch Artikel D an dem bisherigen Umfang des Wahlrechts, wie es im EGV und in den hierzu ergangenen Rechtsakten festgelegt ist, nichts ändert. Dies ist insbesondere von Bedeutung hinsichtlich der in der Kommunalwahl-Richtlinie 94/80/EG des Rates vom 19. Dezember 1994 (Amtsblatt der Europäischen Gemeinschaft Nr. L 368/38 vom 31.12.1994) enthaltenen Ausnahmeregelung des Artikels 5 Absatz 3. Dort ist bestimmt, dass die Mitgliedstaaten die Ämter des Leiters des Exekutivorgans sowie seiner Vertretung eigenen Staatsangehörigen vorbehalten können.

6. Zu Artikel E. Recht auf eine ordnungsgemäße Verwaltung (Beziehungen zur Verwaltung)

Die Notwendigkeit dieses Artikels insgesamt wird stark bezweifelt. Nach hier vertretener Auffassung ergibt sich das Recht auf eine ordnungsgemäße Verwaltung bereits aus den Verpflichtungen der Union und ihrer Organe aus dem Grundsatz der Rechtsstaatlichkeit (Artikel A). Mit anderen Worten dürfte das in Artikel E verankerte Recht bereits Ausfluss des Rechtsstaatsprinzips sein. Im Übrigen könnte das Recht als Anreiz für verstärkte Rügen missverstanden werden.

Sollte der Artikel in die Charta aufgenommen werden, empfiehlt sich jedenfalls eine Straffung, insbesondere eine Streichung des Absatzes 2. Die dort in den Spiegelstrichen 1 bis 3 normierten Teilgarantien (rechtliches Gehör auch im Verwaltungsverfahren; Recht auf Akteneinsicht im Verwaltungsverfahren; Begründungszwang der Verwaltung) ergeben sich durchweg aus den Anforderungen, die der Grundsatz der Rechtsstaatlichkeit an die Rechtsanwendung durch die Verwaltung stellt. Rechtsstaatliches Entscheiden verlangt schließlich eine Messbarkeit und Vorhersehbarkeit des Verwaltungshandelns. Eine Aufzählung lediglich einiger Beispielfälle würde ggf. dazu führen, dass andere Ausprägungen der Rechtsstaatlichkeit im Bereich der Verwaltung (wie etwa die Forderungen nach rationaler Verwaltungsorganisation oder nach Befangenheits- und Unvereinbarkeitsregeln) als von Artikel E nicht umfasst angesehen werden.

Absatz 1 des Artikels stellt darauf ab, dass Personen ihren Wohnsitz in einem Mitgliedstaat haben. Im Umkehrschluss wäre daraus zu schließen, dass Personen ohne Wohnsitz in einem Mitgliedstaat damit rechnen müssten, dass ihre Angelegenheiten von den Organen und Einrichtungen der Union nicht ordnungsgemäß, d.h. nicht unparteiisch, gerecht und innerhalb einer angemessenen Frist behandelt werden müssen. Dies kann nicht gemeint sein. Auf der anderen Seite ist fraglich, ob man sämtliche in Artikel E niedergelegten Rechte ohne Rücksicht auf die Staatsangehörigkeit gewähren will.

Sollte Absatz 2 beibehalten werden, ist jedenfalls auf Ausnahmeregelungen zu achten. Schließlich kann nach allgemeinen Grundsätzen des Verwaltungsfahrensrechts aus übergeordneten Erwägungen heraus (z. B. Gefahr im Verzug; Sach- und Rechtslage bekannt) auf eine Anhörung und Begründung im Einzelfall verzichtet werden. Ferner sollte das Akteneinsichtsrecht nicht auf die Geltendmachung der Argumente, sondern auf die Wahrnehmung eigener Rechte bezogen werden.

7. Zu Artikel F. Recht auf Zugang zu den Dokumenten

Die Aufnahme eines derartigen Rechts erscheint aus rechtssystematischen Gründen mehr als fraglich. Dieses Recht ist schließlich von seinem Rang und Gehalt her nicht mit klassischen Grundrechten zu vergleichen und käme allenfalls für Verfahrensbeteiligte in Betracht. Artikel F könnte daher ganz entfallen; eine Regelung auf sekundärrechtlicher Ebene ist wohl ausreichend. Allenfalls empfiehlt sich die Aufnahme oder Integration in Artikel E.

8. Zu Artikel G. Befassung des Bürgerbeauftragten

Hier empfiehlt sich einmal eine Grundsatzdiskussion darüber, wie die Einrichtung diverser Beauftragter im staatlichen und staatsnahen Bereich unter dem Gesichtspunkt der Gewaltenteilung zu beurteilen ist. Dann ist zweifelhaft, ob das Recht ohne Rücksicht auf die Staatsangehörigkeit gewährt werden soll. Gerade im Bereich des Ausländer- und Asylrechts könnte eine Flut von Beschwerden eingehen.

9. Zu Artikel H. Petitionsrecht

Hier sollte zunächst entsprechend Artikel 194 EGV deutlich gemacht werden, dass das Petitionsrecht nur im Tätigkeitsbereich der Organe der Europäischen Union gilt. Diese Einschränkung der Behandlungskompetenz könnte dadurch erreicht werden, dass nach der Erwähnung des Europäischen Parlaments folgender Passus eingefügt wird: "in Angelegenheiten, die in die Tätigkeitsbereiche der Union fallen und die sie unmittelbar betreffen,".

Darüber hinaus ist fraglich, ob Personen, die von petitionsfähigen Entscheidungen betroffen sind, sich aber in Drittstaaten befinden, vom Schutzbereich des Artikels H ausgeschlossen sein sollen. Dies gilt etwa für Ausländer, die über die Grenzen des Unionsgebietes hinaus abgeschoben werden.

Schließlich sollte der Konvent das Verhältnis des Artikels H zu Artikel G klären. Die durch das Petitionsrecht eröffnete Möglichkeit, sich zu artikulieren, zu informieren und im Wege der Petition auch mittelbar auf die politische Willensbildung Einfluss zu nehmen, wird bereits durch die Befassung des Bürgerbeauftragten eröffnet.

10. Zu Artikel I. Freizügigkeit

Dem Textvorschlag wird uneingeschränkt zugestimmt. Seinem Regelungsgehalt nach enthält Artikel I allerdings ein Freiheitsrecht. Es stellt sich mithin die Frage, ob es an dieser Stelle systematisch richtig eingeordnet ist. In seiner Bedeutung rangiert es sicherlich vor den Artikeln E, F, G und H. Aus Sicht des Unionsbürgers dürfte Artikel I (und auch Artikel J) einen größeren Stellenwert besitzen als die Rechte auf politische Teilhabe (Artikel C und D) und deren Annexrechte (Artikel B und H). Das in Artikel I geregelte Recht, sich im Hoheitsgebiet eines Mitgliedstaates aufzuhalten, ist schließlich die Grundvoraussetzung der politischen Teilhaberechte, die den Wohnsitz in einem Mitgliedstaat verlangen.

11. Zu Artikel J. Diskriminierungsverbot

Der vorgeschlagenen Fassung wird zugestimmt. Es ist allerdings zu überlegen, ob aus Gründen der besseren Übersicht und Verständlichkeit die Diskriminierungsverbote des Artikels J und des mit Dokument CONVENT 8 vorgeschlagenen Artikels 19 nicht zu einem einheitlichen Diskriminierungsverbot zusammengefasst werden können. Darüber hinaus sollte darauf geachtet werden, dass nicht nur Diskriminierungen, sondern auch Bevorzugungen oder sachlich nicht gerechtfertigte Besserstellungen aus Gründen bestimmter Staatsangehörigkeiten unterbunden werden.

Zum Dokument CONVENT 8

1. Zu Artikel 13. Versammlungs- und Vereinigungsfreiheit

Hier ist zum einen zu erwägen, ob man die Versammlungs- und Vereinigungsfreiheit nicht in gesonderten Bestimmungen aufnehmen sollte. Zum anderen wäre daran zu denken, Versammlungen zu illegalen Zwecken ausdrücklich aus dem Schutzbereich des Grundrechtes auszunehmen.

2. Zu Artikel 14. Recht auf Zugang zu Informationen

Hier gelten die Ausführungen zu dem Vorschlag für Artikel F CONVENT 17.

3. Zu Artikel 15. Datenschutz

Die vorgeschlagene Regelung zum Datenschutz wird gebilligt. Eine darüber hinaus gehende Regelung wird nachdrücklich abgelehnt. Insbesondere erscheint die vorgeschlagene Aufnahme einer Überwachung durch besondere Einrichtungen, etwa durch Kontrollstellen mit Untersuchungs- und wirksamen Einwirkungsbefugnissen, als zu weit gehend. Würde man nämlich die Absicherung der Grundrechte durch eigens eingerichtete, besondere Stellen auch bei den anderen Rechten mit in die Charta aufnehmen (was bei manchen Rechten angesichts ihrer gegenüber dem Datenschutz nicht weniger existenziellen Bedeutung dann zu fordern wäre), würde dies zu einer Überfrachtung der Grundrechtecharta führen. Dies schließt eine Regelung auf sekundärrechtlicher Ebene nicht aus.

Darüber hinaus ist zu beachten, dass aus der Grundrechtecharta keine neuen Handlungskompetenzen für die Union erwachsen dürfen. Im Übrigen erscheint eine über die Vorschriften des Bundesdatenschutzgesetzes bzw. der Datenschutzgesetze der Länder hinaus gehende bzw. daneben bestehende Kontrolle nicht erforderlich.

Die Beschränkung auf natürliche Personen in Art. 15 wirft schließlich die Frage auf, in welcher Weise die Grundrechtecharta das "Persönlichkeitsrecht" der juristischen Personen sowie den Schutz von Betriebsgeheimnissen zu erfassen gedenkt (unter Eigentum, Wirtschaftsfreiheit?).

4. Zu Artikel 16. Eigentumsrecht

Die Vorschrift lässt offen, was konkret unter "Eigentum" zu verstehen ist. Auch stellt sich die Frage, ob nicht eine Aussage zur Sozialbindung des Eigentums aufgenommen werden sollte ("Eigentum verpflichtet"). Das gleiche gilt für das Erbrecht.

5. Zu Artikel 17. Asyl- und Ausweisungsrecht

Gegen diese Regelung bestehen erhebliche Bedenken. Über die Charta darf kein neues EU-Grundrecht auf Asyl begründet werden. Es fällt auch auf, dass Absatz 1 keine Tatbestandsvoraussetzungen formuliert, wie etwa die politische Verfolgung.

Die Ausführungen zu Artikel 63 EGV in dem Kommentar des Entwurfs sind nicht recht verständlich, da diese Bestimmung gerade kein Recht "auf" Asyl gewährt, sondern nur (Verfahrens-)Rechte "im" Asyl. Dies muss klargestellt werden. So begründet auch die Genfer Konvention keinen Anspruch auf Zugang zu einem Asylverfahren, sondern lediglich Rechte im Asyl.

Mit dem Verbot der "Kollektivausweisungen" in Absatz 2 lehnt sich der vorgeschlagene Artikel 17 an die EMRK an. Die EMRK will jedoch lediglich verhindern, dass eine Ausweisung ohne Einzelfallprüfung erfolgt. Um Unsicherheiten bei der Auslegung zu vermeiden, z. B. hinsichtlich der Rückführung von Bürgerkriegsflüchtlingen, sollte Artikel 17 Absatz 2 entsprechend konkret formuliert werden.

6. Zu Artikel 18. Gleichheit

Die vorgeschlagene Regelung begegnet keinen Bedenken.

7. Zu Artikel 19. Nichtdiskriminierung

Bei der vorgeschlagenen Regelung in Absatz 2 ist darauf zu achten, dass daraus keine neuen oder erweiterten Kompetenzen der Europäischen Union hergeleitet werden können. Ggf. empfiehlt es sich, Absatz 2 zu streichen. Im Übrigen ist zu prüfen, ob die Formulierung "Ungleichheiten" das eigentliche Ziel beschreibt, "Ungerechtigkeiten" zu beseitigen.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 4 April 2000CHARTE 4204/00*CONTRIB 85*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution by Mr. Gunnar Jansson, and Mrs Tuija Brax, Representatives of the Finnish Parliament. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English language only.

Mr Gunnar Jansson,
 Representative of the Finnish Parliament,
 Vice-president of the Representatives
 of the National Parliaments

Personal Representative of the Finnish Government
Mrs Tuija Brax, Representative of the Finnish Parliament

PRINCIPLE OF GOOD GOVERNANCE

Mr Gunnar Jansson, Vice-president of the Representatives of the National Parliaments for the Convention, proposed on 17 March 2000 that Article 8 in Convent 13 be amended and extended to cover not only the right to a fair trial but also the right to good governance. First, we would like to note that the former translation into English contained some inaccuracies. The correct proposal by Mr Jansson reads as follows:

Article 8. Right to a fair trial and good governance.

Everyone has the right to have a case pertaining to his or her rights or obligations dealt with appropriately and without undue delay by a competent court of law or other authority, as well as to have a decision in this kind of a case reviewed by a court of law or other independent organ for the administration of justice.

The consideration of a case by a court of law or other independent organ for the administration of justice shall be public, and the right to be heard and to receive a reasoned decision as well as other guarantees of a fair trial and good governance shall be in force before the court of law or other authority.

We should like to support the proposal for following reasons:

European Convention on Human Rights, Article 6 Paragraph 1 contains the basic rules for trial procedures. Paragraphs 2 and 3 of this Article supplement the above with regard to criminal processes. The basic rules for governance procedures have not been defined in the Convention on Human Rights. This is an essential flaw from today's perspective, as people are more often in contact with administrative bodies than courts of law. For example, the enforcement of EC legislation on a national level is to a large extent the responsibility of administrative bodies.

The limited nature of the European Convention on Human Rights, Article 6 Paragraph 1 is manifest in its scope of application to practice, as the phrase "civil rights and obligations" has been broadly interpreted to cover matters under public law as well. Such continually broadening interpretation provides, in our opinion, in itself sufficient grounds for the mentioning of the principle of good governance in the EU fundamental rights charter in conjunction with the principle of fair trial. Both the principle of good governance and that of fair trial are similar in substance insofar as they are both evolutive in nature and likely to undergo changes in the course of time. In the case of the principle of fair trial, this has become evident in the way its contents are in fact consolidated only with application to practice.

It should be noted that Mr Jansson’s proposal is limited to cover “civil rights and obligations” only and its scope does not extend to cover governance at large. The proposal contains firstly a section on the right to have decisions concerning issues falling under this category to be handled in a court of law or other independent organ for the administration of justice. Secondly, the transparency of the process in a court of law and other independent organ for the administration of justice is secured. Thirdly, the proposal includes the following elements of good governance:

- (1) the appropriate handling of cases
- (2) the handling of cases without undue delay
- (3) the right to be heard in a case
- (4) the right to receive a reasoned decision
- (5) other guarantees pertaining to good governance.

It should be clear what is meant by Elements 2–4 in Mr Jansson’s proposal. Element 3 could be further specified to be referring to the right to have access to any document in conjunction with the hearing that may be significant in relation to the ruling of the case (i.e. the publicity principle as regards the parties concerned).

Elements 1 and 5 in Mr Jansson’s proposal are more general in nature and need some further definition. In our opinion those elements that are not specifically regulated by some other section of the fundamental rights charter can be left to be clarified in the explanatory memorandum. Elements 1 and 5 may in our opinion contain the following meanings:

- the public authority has the obligation to handle a case initiated by an individual pertaining to his or her rights
- the public authority shall handle the case in an objective manner so that all aspects that may be significant to the decision concerning the matter are sufficiently investigated
- the preparation and decision on the case shall only be carried out by competent representatives of the public authority
- the public authority shall treat all parties involved in a case in a friendly and helpful manner
- the individual has the right to appear in a case in person or through, or assisted by, a representative
- the individual has the right to receive legal aid, and without cost, when required
- the individual has the right to receive legal aid in his or her own mother tongue (including sign language), and similarly a public authority shall have any aspect that arises during the hearing of the case interpreted into the mother tongue of the individual if the latter does not have sufficient command of the language used by the authority
- when giving the decision, the public authority must provide the parties concerned with the information on how to appeal on the decision and disseminate the contents of the decision to the individual concerned in an effective manner.

We do, however, feel that whether these points should be included in Element 1 or 5, is entirely a matter of taste.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 4 April 2000CHARTE 4205/00*CONTRIB 86*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution by Mr. Paavo Nikula, Personnel Representative of the Finnish government and Mr. Gunnar Jansson and Mrs. Tuija Brax, Representatives of the Finnish Parliament.¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English language only.

Mr Paavo Nikula,

Personal Representative of the Finnish Government

Mr Gunnar Jansson,

Representative of the Finnish Parliament,

Vice-president of the Representatives

of the National Parliaments

Mrs Tuija Brax, Representative of the Finnish Parliament

BASIC RIGHTS CONCERNING THE ENVIRONMENT

Basic rights provisions concerning the environment are relatively new, their roots going back to the 1970s. Worth a mention here is the UN Conference on the Human Environment held in Stockholm in 1972, which approved a declaration of the right to environment. New international developments are represented by the 1992 UN Conference on Environment and Development in Rio de Janeiro. It approved among other things the so-called Rio declaration, which is based on the principle of sustainable development. A recent interesting example from the European point of view is the declaration Water Security in the 21st century, made at the Hague minister conference. At this conference representatives of European states were prepared to include a statement to the effect that access to safe and sufficient water and sanitation should also be considered as a basic right. However, no such statement was included in the final declaration, mainly owing to opposition from the developing countries.

The individual's right to environment is not included in universal or regional human rights conventions. However, a way has emerged through the practical application of the European Human Rights Convention to develop rights concerning environmental protection and a healthy environment on the basis of such existing rights as the right to life, the right to the respect of one's private life, the right to health and the right to property, and also with regard to remedies and to the right to information. (See Theodor Meron, The Implications of the European Convention on the Development of Public International Law, Contribution of the ad hoc Committee of Legal Advisers on Public International Law (CADHI), 19th meeting, Belin 13–14 March 2000).

International developments have also begun to influence national constitutions. The provisions of these with regard to the environment vary in their content. The appendix contains the applicable sections from the constitutions of Portugal, Spain, Germany, the Netherlands, Sweden and Finland as well as Norway.

According to the decisions of Cologne European Council, the European Union charter has to treat basic rights in the way that they are guaranteed in the European Human Rights Convention and as they appear as general principles of European Community Law, deriving from the common constitutional tradition of the member states. The Treaty of Amsterdam included the principle of sustainable development as one of the central aims of Community actions. It was also acknowledged on the European Union level, and provisions concerning the environment in the articles setting out the objectives of the Treaty on the European Union and the Treaties establishing the European Communities were strengthened. The Treaty of Amsterdam also strengthened the Community's obligation to take into account in all its actions the requirements of environmental protection.

With reference to the facts stated above, we feel that the charter should include basic rights to environmental protection and the right to a healthy environment. These items are indeed mentioned in the document Body 4, after the right to property. For instance, article 20 of the Finnish constitution corresponds to our goals. However, it is appropriate for this question to be brought to the Convention for discussion on the basis of the proposal of the Drafting Committee.

APPENDIX

Portugal

Article 66 - Environment and quality of life

1. Everyone has the right to a healthy and ecologically balanced human environment and the duty to defend it.
2. In order to guarantee the right to such an environment, within the context of sustainable development, it is the duty of the State, acting through appropriate bodies and with the involvement and participation of the citizens:
 - a. To prevent and control pollution, and its effects, and harmful forms of erosion;
 - b. To organise and promote national planning with the objectives of establishing proper locations for activities and a balance between economic and social development, while enhancing the landscape;
 - c. To establish and develop nature reserves and parks and recreation areas, and classify and protect the countryside in order to guarantee nature conservation and the preservation of cultural assets of historic or artistic interest;
 - d. To promote the rational use of natural resources, while safeguarding their capacity for renewal and ecological stability, respecting the principle of solidarity between generations;
 - e. To promote, in conjunction with the local authorities, the environmental quality of populated areas and urban life, specifically with regard to architecture and the protection of historical zones;
 - f. To promote the inclusion of environmental objectives in the various sectors of policy;
 - g. To promote environmental education and respect for environmental values;
 - h. To ensure that tax policy achieves compatibility between development and protection of the environment and quality of life.

Spain

Article 45 [Environment]

- (1) Everyone has the right to enjoy an environment suitable for the development of the person as well as the duty to preserve it.
- (2) The public authorities shall concern themselves with the rational use of all natural resources for the purpose of protecting and improving the quality of life and protecting and restoring the environment, supporting themselves on an indispensable collective solidarity.
- (3) For those who violate the provisions of the foregoing paragraph, penal or administrative sanctions, as applicable, shall be established and they shall be obliged to repair the damage caused.

Germany

Article 20a [Protection of Natural Resources]

The state, also in its responsibility for future generations, protects the natural foundations of life in the framework of the constitutional order, by legislation and, according to law and justice, by executive and judiciary.

Netherlands

Article 21 [Environment]

It shall be the concern of the authorities to keep the country habitable and to protect and improve the environment.

Sweden

Article 2 (2)

- (2) The personal, economic and cultural welfare of the individual shall be fundamental aims of public activity. In particular, it shall be incumbent upon the public administration to secure the right to work, housing and education, and to promote social care and social security and a good living environment.

Finland

Article 20 - Responsibility for the environment

Nature and its biodiversity, the environment and the national heritage are the responsibility of everyone. The public authorities shall endeavour to guarantee for everyone the right to a healthy environment and for everyone the possibility to influence the decisions that concern their own living environment.

Norway

Article 110b [Environment]

- (1) Every person has a right to an environment that is conducive to health and to natural surroundings whose productivity and diversity are preserved. Natural resources should be made use of on the basis of comprehensive long-term considerations whereby this right will be safeguarded for future generations as well.
- (2) In order to safeguard their right in accordance with the foregoing paragraph, citizens are entitled to be informed of the state of the natural environment and of the effects of any encroachments on nature that are planned or commenced.
- (3) The State authorities shall issue further provisions for the implementation of these principles.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 6 April 2000CHARTE 4206/00*CONTRIB 87*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution by Mrs. Charlotte Cederschiöld, member of the European Parliament, on articles 10 and 16. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English language only.

CONTRIBUTION TO THE CONVENT: ART. 3 AND 10- By Charlotte Cederschiöld, Member of the European ParliamentArticle 10 – Prohibition against retroactive legislation

3. (new) Retroactive legislation or administrative measures affecting individuals directly and negatively shall be prohibited in areas of civil law.

Motivation:

Concerning the principle of non-retroactivity in legislation this principle should relate to the principle of proportionality ("Verhältnismäßigkeit"), which makes up a protection for individuals against qualified acts of authorities going too far. Clearly the prohibition of non-retroactivity in legislation does not only apply in criminal law, but also in civil law (eg the competition rules about old and new agreements in the Council regulation 17/62). The prohibition against retroactive effects must therefor include all forms of qualified acts by authorities that affect individuals negatively. This relates to the principle of legal certainty for individuals and the protection of justified expectations.

Article 16 – the right to ownership

Everyone is entitled to own and use her/his possessions and to give it away. No one may be deprived of her/his possessions or restricted in their use except in essential (wesentlich) public interest and in such cases subject to the conditions provided for by law and subject to full compensation for the loss.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 4 avril 2000CHARTE 4207/00*CONTRIB 88*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-joint une proposition d'amendements au document CHARTE 4170/00
CONVENT 17, présenté par Mme Claude Du Granrut, membre du Comité des Régions. ¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langue française seulement.

Subject: Projet de Charte des Droits Fondamentaux de l'Union Européenne

Convent 17

Article A - Principe de démocratie

PROPOSITION D'AMENDEMENT DU COMITE DES REGIONS

Exposé des motifs

- La reconnaissance du droit des citoyens à participer à la gestion des affaires publiques implique que ce droit soit exercé au niveau local, c'est à dire au niveau où s'expriment leurs attentes dans la vie quotidienne et où peuvent être élaborées les solutions les plus adaptées.
- La démocratie de proximité constitue un fondement essentiel de l'Union Européenne : cf. article 1er du TUE qui rappelle que dans l'Union " les décisions sont prises le plus près possible des citoyens".
- Enfin dans la perspective, leur adhésion à l'Union, les Pays-candidats sont invités à mettre en place des Collectivités locales et régionales élues et dotées de compétences décentralisées.

Propositions

- Ajout
 1. Toute autorité publique émane du peuple. Ce principe démocratique s'applique aux Collectivités infra-étatiques.
- Rédaction modifiée
 1. Le respect du principe démocratique implique que toute autorité publique émane du peuple et que les citoyens disposent d'organes locaux de décision élus.

Claude Du GRANRUT

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 7 avril 2000CHARTE 4214/00*CONTRIB 90*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-après des observations de M. Guy Braibant, Représentant Personnel du Gouvernement de la France, sur les documents CHARTE 4192/00 CONVENT 18 et CHARTE 4193/00 CONVENT 19. ¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langue française seulement.

le 3 avril 2000

Guy BRAIBANT
Représentant du Président de la République et du Premier ministre de France

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNE

Droits économiques et sociaux (CONVENT 18 et 19, art. I à XV) : observations et amendements.

Article I - Egalité entre les hommes et les femmes

1. Je propose de distinguer entre le principe général d'égalité des sexes, qui devrait figurer parmi les premiers articles de la Charte, en raison de son importance et son application en matière économique et sociale (emploi, travail, protection sociale).

Le principe général pourrait être ainsi formulé:

"L'égalité entre les hommes et les femmes doit être garantie et appliquée dans tous les domaines"

Pour l'application en matière économique et sociale, la rédaction pourrait être la suivante :

"L'égalité de traitement entre les hommes et les femmes doit être assurée en matière d'emploi, de travail et de protection sociale".

2. La possibilité d'adopter des mesures temporaires de discrimination positive pourrait être prévue dans les commentaires sous la forme suivante :

"Cet article ne fait pas obstacle à la possibilité de mettre en oeuvre, de façon temporaire, de mesures spécifiques pour l'un ou l'autre sexe pour compenser ou éliminer des inégalités de fait".

On pourrait également reproduire la rédaction de l'article 141.4 du traité d'Amsterdam.

Article II - Liberté professionnelle

1. Il ne faut pas paraître limiter cette liberté aux activités "commerciales". Ou bien on supprime ce qualificatif, ou bien on le remplace par "professionnelles", ou bien on supprime purement et simplement "et ses activités commerciales" qui n'ajoute rien et affaiblit la rédaction.

2. La deuxième phrase est inutile et obscure pour le "citoyen non juriste". En français, d'ailleurs, l'expression "sans préjudice" est ambiguë. En tout cas, la rédaction ne révèle pas clairement que, comme le dit le commentaire, "ce droit profite aux titulaires de la libre circulation".

3. Cette liberté n'est jamais absolue, comme le souligne l'arrêt Nold (conditions d'accès, diplômes, discipline professionnelles, règles d'urbanisme et d'environnement, etc.). Il faut soit l'indiquer dans cet article ou dans le commentaire, en reprenant la formule de l'arrêt Nold ("limites justifiées par des objectifs d'intérêt général"), soit y renvoyer dans la clause générale de limitation.

Article III - Droit à l'information et à la consultation des travailleurs

La rédaction met trop l'accent sur les "procédures de licenciement collectif", alors que c'est en amont de ces procédures et souvent pour les éviter que l'information et la consultation sont le plus utiles.

On pourrait reprendre la formule de la charte sociale révisée qui, conformément aux tendances actuelles, prévoit des consultations "en temps utiles sur les décisions envisagées qui sont susceptibles d'affecter substantiellement les intérêts des travailleurs, notamment sur celles qui auraient des conséquences importantes sur la situation de l'emploi dans l'entreprise, et sur les décisions relatives aux conditions et au milieu de travail"

Article IV - Droit d'association, de négociation et d'action collective

Il vaut mieux séparer la "liberté syndicale" (alinéa 1) qui figure déjà dans la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, et les actions syndicales (alinéas 2 et 3) qui ont leur place ici.

Article VII - Sécurité et hygiène dans le travail

La notion d'hygiène est aujourd'hui remplacée par celle, plus large, de santé. La rédaction pourrait être :

"tout travailleur a droit à la protection de sa sécurité et de sa santé dans le travail".

Article VIII - Protection des enfants et des adolescents

Faut-il conserver dans le texte même de la Charte l'indication des âges (15 ans, 18 ans), qui sont évolutifs et qui pourraient figurer dans le commentaire ?

Articles XI : Droit des travailleuses à la protection de la maternité, et XII : Droit au congé parental Faut-il fixer la durée des congés dans le texte, ou seulement dans le commentaire.

Article XII : Sécurité sociale

La rédaction appelle plusieurs remarques :

- le droit à la sécurité sociale doit être présenté comme un droit de la personne. Les législations de sécurité sociale des quinze Etats membres couvrent l'ensemble des personnes résidant sur leur territoire. Certaines le font à partir de régimes professionnels complétés par des mécanismes sous conditions de résidence (cf. France : régimes d'activité professionnelle et premier étage de la couverture maladie universelle, Allemagne...) d'autres sur la base de régimes ouverts à toute la population résidente (Royaume-Uni, pays nordiques, pour partie des risques couverts, pays de l'Europe du Sud).

Présenter le droit à la sécurité sociale comme un droit des travailleurs et de ses ayants droit, complété par un mécanisme d'assistance sociale :

- constituerait une régression par rapport aux législations de la grande majorité des Etats membres et par rapport au Traité d'Amsterdam ;

- est juridiquement faux, dans la mesure où les dispositifs des Etats membres concernés qui complètent leurs régimes professionnels sont des législations de sécurité sociale et non des dispositifs d'assistance sociale ;

- est politiquement inacceptable : l'inactif ne doit pas apparaître comme un "sous-homme" par rapport au travailleur dans une charte de droits fondamentaux.

Il conviendrait pas conséquent d'affirmer un droit à la sécurité sociale qui repose sur une définition à la fois large et générique comprenant :

- la couverture des soins de santé et de maternité (concept large évitant les références soit aux systèmes d'assurance soit aux systèmes nationaux de santé,
- la compensation des charges familiales,
- le versement de revenus de remplacement particulièrement en cas d'accidents et de maladie professionnelle, d'invalidité et de retraite,
- le versement de revenus de remplacement en cas de perte d'emploi.

Un tel article pourrait dès lors se lire :

Droit à la sécurité sociale :

"dans les conditions définies par les législations internes des Etats membres et coordonnées au niveau communautaire, toute personne doit bénéficier d'une sécurité sociale".

Dans la partie B pourrait être précisé le champ d'application matériel et personnel de cet article.

Article XV : Droit à l'accès aux soins

Le titre est trop restrictif par rapport à la nouvelle rédaction. On pourrait intituler cet article "droit à la santé", comme le "droit à l'éducation" et rapprocher les deux articles. En outre, il faudrait dire à la fin de l'article "aux soins que nécessitent son état".

Editors' note to CHARTE 4221/00,
Observations sur CHARTE 4123/00 de M. Guy Braibant (Représentant personnel du Gouvernement de la France):

See also CHARTE 4135/00.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 7 avril 2000CHARTE 4221/00*CONTRIB 90*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-après des observations de M. Guy Braibant, Représentant Personnel du Gouvernement de la France, sur le document CHARTE 4123/00 CONVENT 5. ¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langue française seulement.

OBSERVATIONS SUR LE PROJET DE REDACTION DE DROITS FAISANT L'OBJET DU DOCUMENT
« CHARTE 4123/00 »

I/ Il serait souhaitable d'énoncer parmi les droits fondamentaux de la personne énumérés au début de la Charte :

- l'égalité en droits, ou le principe d'égalité qui figurent dans les traditions constitutionnelles des Etats-membres et dans un certain nombre de documents internationaux; ce principe ne se confond pas avec celui de non-discrimination ; on pourrait reprendre ainsi le début de la déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme : « les hommes sont libres et égaux en dignité et en droits » ;
- le droit à la personnalité juridique, reconnu par l'article 6 de la DUDH et par l'article 16 du Pacte des Nations-Unies sur les droits civils et politiques ;
- le droit de tout individu à une nationalité (art. 15 DUDH).

II/ Articles

Article 1^{er}

a) Il est excellent de commencer par la dignité. La formule retenue est celle de la déclaration de 1989 du Parlement européen. Mais il me paraîtrait préférable de parler de la dignité de la personne humaine et de son respect. Je propose l'une des rédactions suivantes :

- « aucune atteinte ne doit être portée à la dignité de la personne humaine » ;
- « la dignité de la personne humaine doit être respectée en toutes circonstances » ;
- « le droit à la dignité est inhérent à la personne humaine ».

b) Il me semble que le droit à la dignité, qui inspire de nombreux articles du projet, mérite d'apparaître seul dans l'art. 1^{er} ; sinon l'on aurait l'impression qu'il se réduit aux interdictions de la torture et du travail forcé, qui figurent actuellement dans le même article.

c) Si l'on souhaite maintenir l'interdiction du travail forcé, il faut être attentif à la définition négative qui en est donnée dans la CEDH et qui a une grande importance pratique. Je comprend qu'on ne le reproduise pas ici, pour ne pas alourdir le texte. Mais il faudrait du moins affirmer dans un rapport de présentation ou un exposé des motifs que les auteurs de la Charte n'ont pas entendu y renoncer et s'y sont implicitement référés.

d) Je pense qu'il convient d'ajouter une disposition sur l'esclavage et la servitude, qui reste malheureusement d'actualité, même en Europe.

Article 2

a) Paragraphe 2 : Il vaudrait mieux supprimer le mot « génétique » qui n'ajoute rien et prête à confusion.

Je préfère la version courte. Si l'on souhaite toutefois donner quelques précisions se rattachant à la bioéthique, ce qui serait sans doute utile pour donner un caractère plus moderne à la Charte, je proposerai de s'en tenir à trois principes fondamentaux :

- l'interdiction des « pratiques eugéniques » (art. 16 du code civil français, issu d'une loi de 1994) ;
- l'interdiction du clonage des êtres humains ;
- l'affirmation que le corps humain et ses parties ne peuvent être sources de profits (en retirant si possible la formule restrictive « en tant que tels »).

L'alinéa sur la discrimination pourrait être reporté dans l'article général sur la non-discrimination.

b) Paragraphe 3 : On ne peut évidemment pas « abolir » la peine de mort, puisqu'elle l'est déjà. Je propose de ne retenir que la formule alternative : « Nul ne peut être condamné à mort, ni exécuté ».

Il faut observer que le protocole de la CEDH sur cette question comprend un article sur les exceptions en temps de guerre. Je ne propose pas de le reprendre ici, d'autant plus qu'il comporte une référence au secrétaire général du Conseil de l'Europe. Mais il faudrait en faire état dans le rapport de présentation pour ne pas donner l'impression qu'il n'est plus applicable.

Article 3

a) La rédaction du paragraphe 2 « nul ne peut être arrêté ou détenu » est plus restrictive que celle de l'article 5 de la CEDH « nul ne peut être privé de sa liberté » ; cette dernière formule qui couvre aussi, par exemple, la résidence surveillée, est préférable.

b) Les paragraphes 3 à 6 sont des dispositions de caractère pénal, qui pourraient être utilement rapprochées de, ou regroupées avec, le paragraphe 3 de l'article 5. Cela permettrait en outre de mieux mettre en valeur l'article 4, qui a un caractère général et qui pourrait être rapproché du paragraphe 2 de l'article 5. Celui-ci pourrait être rédigé ainsi, afin d'éviter la répétition du mot « effectif » : « l'accès à la justice doit être facilité par ».

Articles 6 et 7

a) Je crois qu'il faut éviter les expressions latines dans un document destiné à accroître la lisibilité des droits.

b) A l'article 6, la formule « infraction prévue par la loi » est plus restrictive que celle de l'article 7 de la CEDH « infraction d'après le droit national ou international » ; cette rédaction restrictive est contradictoire avec le développement des juridictions pénales internationales et des incriminations sur la base du droit international.

Article 8

Il me semble qu'aujourd'hui, les concepts de vie privée et de vie familiale sont distincts. Je propose de retirer l'expression de « vie familiale » de l'article 8 et de lui réserver l'article 9, ce qui éviterait une redondance.

Article 9

1. Je crois utile, comme il est indiqué dans le commentaire, de renvoyer au droit local, comme l'article 12 de la CEDH.

2 et 3. Ces dispositions ne sont guère normatives et ont en outre l'inconvénient de paraître créer des compétences nouvelles de l'Union. Je propose de remplacer le 2 par une formule symétrique de l'article 8.2 (« Le respect de la vie familiale est garanti ») et, pour les enfants, de reprendre un ou deux articles essentiels de la Convention des Nations-Unies, notamment l'article 3.1 qui se réfère à la notion « d'intérêt supérieur de l'enfant » et un article sur la protection du développement de l'enfant.

III/ Articles horizontaux

Bien qu'elles ne soient pas en discussion, il me paraît préférable d'indiquer dès maintenant les observations que ces dispositions m'inspirent.

1. Préambule ou article 1^{er}

Cette disposition est utile, mais anticipe sur l'insertion des droits dans le traité, qui n'est pas du ressort de la Convention. Elle trouverait mieux sa place dans un rapport de présentation de la Charte.

2. Article X

Cette disposition est inopportune et ne manquera pas de susciter des critiques contre la Charte réservé aux « riches privilégiés » qui ont la chance d'être citoyens de l'Union européenne. Et pour l'essentiel elle est inexacte car beaucoup de droits sont universels ou étendus aux résidents étrangers en situation régulière. Il faudrait prévoir le champ d'application de la Charte dans les articles ou les chapitres.

3. Article Y

Je comprend l'intention des auteurs de ce texte. Mais il faudrait trouver une rédaction plus claire, qui évite notamment les concepts de « règle de droit » et de « règle d'exécution » ; en outre, une restriction générale se substituant aux restrictions particulières de la Convention pourrait donner l'impression que la Charte est moins protectrice que la Convention.

4. Article Z

Si cet article est considéré comme indispensable, il faudrait mieux supprimer la référence à l'article 6 TUE. qui n'ajoute rien.

Guy BRAIBANT
Représentant du Président de la République et du Premier ministre
à la Convention chargée d'élaborer la Charte des droits
fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 10 avril 2000CHARTE 4221/00 COR 1*CONTRIB 96*CORRIGENDUM A LA NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

La souscote correcte du document 4221/00 est CONTRIB 96.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 12 April 2000CHARTE 4222/00*CONTRIB 97*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter comments by Mr. George Papadimitriou, Personnel Representative of the Greek government, on documents CHARTE 4192/00 CONVENT 18 and CHARTE 4193/00 CONVENT 19.¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English language only.

PROF. DR. GEORGIOS PAPADIMITRIOU

RECHTSANWALT

SINA - STR. 30, 106 72 ATHEN

TEL: (301) 3617443, 3635137

FAX: (301) 36293534

Comments on the proposed Social Rights (Convents 18 - 19)

Article I Equality between men and women

Equality is guaranteed in article 13 of the Treaties along with its protective function in order to avoid and abolish inequalities. Thus it would be preferable to include in Article I a provision to guarantee the equality of opportunities between men and women in the field of employment and work. With this solution we create the conditions for the emancipated function of the equality of opportunities. This solution seems also to be more compatible with the provision of article 3, para. 2 in combination with the provision of article 3 para. 1i, as well as with that of article 141 para. 3 of the Treaties.

A special provision for the equality between men and women in the field of social protection should also be included in order to better bring out and develop its protective function.

Article II Right to choose an occupation

The wording of the article should also include free movement of capital and services because, as it stands, it states the obvious by including only free movement of persons. Thus, it should be further defined. The possibility of abrogating the term “business” should also be examined.

Article III Workers’ right to information and consultation

The wording should be reverted in order to include first the “...decisions relating to conditions of work and to the working environment...” and afterwards the “...context of collective redundancy procedures”.

In order not to widen the normative function of article 138 of the Treaties, the comment accompanying article III should explicitly mention that the provision is interpreted and applied in the light of the wording of the aforementioned article of the Treaties.

Article IV Freedom of association, rights of collective bargaining and collective action

Where the wording of the article mentions “employers and workers” it should be reverted in order to include first the “...workers...” and afterwards the “...employers....”.

In order not to widen the normative function of article 139 of the Treaties, the comment accompanying article IV should explicitly mention that the provision is interpreted and applied in the light of the wording of the aforementioned article of the Treaties.

Article VII Safe and healthy working conditions

The right provided for in this article should be interpreted and applied in the light of the wording of articles 137, para.1, per.1 and 140 per. 5-6 of the Treaties.

Article IX Right to protection in cases of termination of employment

The wording of the article should end at “....in case of dismissal.” because the present wording gives rise to contradictions.

Article X Right to vocational training and guidance

There is a strong need to expressly include a right to access to vocational training in the provision of this article and abrogate the term “..., without discrimination, ...”.

Article XII Right to parental leave

Fostering should be included as a third case for parental leave and the wording should change as follows “... following the birth, the fostering and the adoption...”.

Article XIV Right to social assistance

The wording of the provision should explicitly mention that any person has a right to receive appropriate social assistance. The article should not include the sentence in brackets [and who is other sources].

Article XV

The wording of the provision should explicitly mention that everyone has a right to benefit from measures to safeguard their health and a right to have access to health care.

Inclusion of additional rights in the catalogue of social rights

1. The right of every person to work should be expressly included in the appropriate place in the catalogue.

2. The inclusion of a provision for social assistance for the homeless people should be also examined.

3. An additional provision should be drafted for the protection of, and assistance to disabled people.

Dis.Charta/ComConv18-19.doc/5.4.2000

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 12 April 2000 (18.04)
(OR. en,nl)*CHARTE 4225/00*CONTRIB 100*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution by Mrs Johanna Maij-Weggen, member of the European Parliament, on the document CHARTE 4192/00 CONVENT 18. ¹

¹ This text exists in Dutch and English.

Mrs Maij-Weggen's amendments to the proposed articles on social rights

Article I should read as follows:

Equality between men and women must be ensured with regard to employment, pay, education and vocational training, social protection and taxation.

Article IV should read as follows:

1. Employers and workers have the right to associate freely, to negotiate collective agreements and, in cases of conflicts of interest, to take action and/or strike, even at European level.
2. Every citizen has the right, on an individual basis, to reach agreements concerning his/her employment contract, in compliance with national and European legislation.

Article V should read as follows:

Every worker has the right to fair remuneration.

Article VII should read as follows:

Every worker has the right to safe and healthy working conditions. [no change to English].

Article VIII, second paragraph, should read as follows:

Young people under eighteen years of age must have working conditions which suit their age and be protected against any work likely to harm their health and development.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 17 April 2000 (19.04)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4227/00*CONVENT 26*NOTE FROM THE PRAESIDIUM

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Proposals for social rights III

Article XVI. The right of elderly persons to social protection

- 1. Every worker must, at the time of retirement, be able to enjoy resources affording him or her a decent standard of living.
- 2. Any person who has reached retirement age but who is not entitled to a pension or who does not have other means of subsistence must be entitled to sufficient resources and to medical and social assistance specifically suited to his/her needs.

Reasons

Community Charter (points 24 & 25); revised Social Charter, Article 23:

"Article 2 – The right of elderly persons to social protection

With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right of elderly persons to social protection, the Parties undertake to adopt or encourage, either directly or in co-operation with public or private organisations, appropriate measures designed in particular:

- to enable elderly persons to remain full members of society for as long as possible, by means of:
 - a adequate resources enabling them to lead a decent life and play an active part in public, social and cultural life;*
 - b provision of information about services and facilities available for elderly persons and their opportunities to make use of them;*
- to enable elderly persons to choose their life-style freely and to lead independent lives in their familiar surroundings for as long as they wish and are able, by means of:
 - a provision of housing suited to their needs and their state of health or of adequate support for adapting their housing;*
 - b the health care and the services necessitated by their state;*
- to guarantee elderly persons living in institutions appropriate support, while respecting their privacy, and participation in decisions concerning living conditions in the institution."

Paragraph 2 of the proposed Article could appear in Article XIV on the right to social assistance.

Article XVII. The right of disabled persons to social and professional integration

All disabled persons, whatever the origin and nature of their disability, are entitled to additional specific measures aimed at improving their social and professional integration.

Reasons

Article 13 of the Treaty establishing the European Community authorises the adoption of positive measures to prevent discrimination on grounds of disability. The fourth indent of Article 137(1) establishes Community competence with a view to integrating persons excluded from the labour market. The aim of the provision is to legitimise positive action. Consideration should be given to whether this text should not appear in the section dealing with equality and non-discrimination.

Point 24 of the Community Social Charter; Article 15 of the European Social Charter:

"Article 15 - The right of physically or mentally disabled persons to vocational training, rehabilitation and social resettlement

With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right of the physically or mentally disabled to vocational training, rehabilitation and resettlement, the Contracting Parties undertake:

- 1 to take adequate measures for the provision of training facilities, including, where necessary, specialised institutions, public or private;*
- 2 to take adequate measures for the placing of disabled persons in employment, such as specialised placing services, facilities for sheltered employment and measures to encourage employers to admit disabled persons to employment."*

Article XVIII. The right of migrant workers to equal treatment

Third country workers residing lawfully in the territory of Member States are entitled to a treatment not less favourable than that of European Union workers in respect of working conditions.

Reasons

Community competence in this area is established by the third indent of Article 137(3). The rule laid down here is simply that of non-discrimination in respect of working conditions.

"Article 19 of the Social Charter:

Article 19 – The right of migrant workers and their families to protection and assistance

With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right of migrant workers and their families to protection and assistance in the territory of any other Contracting Party, the Contracting Parties undertake:

- 1. to maintain or to satisfy themselves that there are maintained adequate and free services to assist such workers, particularly in obtaining accurate information, and to take all appropriate steps, so far as national laws and regulations permit, against misleading propaganda relating to emigration and immigration;*
- 2. to adopt appropriate measures within their own jurisdiction to facilitate the departure, journey and reception of such workers and their families, and to provide, within their own jurisdiction, appropriate services for health, medical attention and good hygienic conditions during the journey;*
- 3. to promote cooperation, as appropriate, between social services, public and private, in emigration and immigration countries;*

4. to secure for such workers lawfully within their territories, insofar as such matters are regulated by law or regulations or are subject to the control of administrative authorities, treatment not less favourable than that of their own nationals in respect of the following matters:
 - a remuneration and other employment and working conditions;
 - b membership of trade unions and enjoyment of the benefits of collective bargaining;
 - c accommodation;
5. to secure for such workers lawfully within their territories treatment not less favourable than that of their own nationals with regard to employment taxes, dues or contributions payable in respect of employed persons;
6. to facilitate as far as possible the reunion of the family of a foreign worker permitted to establish himself in the territory;
7. to secure for such workers lawfully within their territories treatment not less favourable than that of their own nationals in respect of legal proceedings relating to matters referred to in this article;
8. to secure that such workers lawfully residing within their territories are not expelled unless they endanger national security or offend against public interest or morality;
9. to permit, within legal limits, the transfer of such parts of the earnings and savings of such workers as they may desire;
10. to extend the protection and assistance provided for in this article to self-employed migrants insofar as such measures apply."

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 18 April 2000 (19.04)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4235/00*CONVENT 27*NOTE FROM THE PRAESIDIUM

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights in the European Union
 – Horizontal clauses

As agreed, members of the Convention will find below a number of draft horizontal clauses aimed at resolving such questions as the scope of the Convention, the limits that can be placed on the rights guaranteed and the relationship with other instruments for the protection of fundamental rights.

Article H.1 Scope

- 1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union within the framework of the powers conferred on them by the Treaties, and also to the Member States exclusively within the framework of implementing Community law.
- 2. They shall not establish any competence or any new task for the Community or the Union.

Statement of reasons

The aim of this provision is to determine the scope of the Charter. It seeks to establish clearly that the Charter applies to the institutions of the Union, within the framework of the Union's powers and tasks. In other words, the Charter applies only to matters covered by Community competence and the tasks of the Union. This provision is in keeping with Article 6(2) of the Treaty on European Union, which requires the Union to respect fundamental rights, and with the mandate issued by Cologne European Council. It follows from the case law of the Court of Justice that the requirement to respect fundamental rights is also binding on the Member States when they act in the context of Community law (judgment of 13 July 1989, Wachauf, Case 5/88, ECR p. 2609, in particular paragraph 19).

Article H.2 Limitation of guaranteed rights

- 1. The rights and freedoms recognised in Articles ... of this Charter may not be the subject of any limitation.
- 2. Any limitation to the rights and freedoms guaranteed by this Charter must be provided for by the legislator. It must respect the essential content of the rights and freedoms in question and, subject to the principle of proportionality, remain within the limits necessary for the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society. The limitations provided for by the European Convention on Human Rights shall apply to those rights and freedoms contained in this Charter that are also guaranteed by the said Convention.

Statement of reasons

This provision, which sets out the principles relating to the limitations on guaranteed rights, has the effect of identifying certain rights which may not be limited in any way and of incorporating, by law, all the limitations laid down by the European Convention on Human Rights where these afford more protection than any measures that might be taken on the basis of the general limitation clause. According to the case law of the Court of Justice of the Communities, fundamental rights may be restricted "provided that the restrictions in fact correspond to objectives of general interest pursued by the Community and that they do not constitute, with regard to the objectives pursued, a disproportionate and intolerable interference which infringes upon the very substance of the rights guaranteed" (judgment of 8 April 1992, Commission v. FRG, Case C-62/90, ECR I-2575, paragraph 23; see also judgment of 12 July 1989, Schraeder, Case 265/87, ECR p. 2237, paragraph 15).

Article H.3

The rights guaranteed by Articles ... shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits laid down by the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Statement of reasons

This Article has the effect of referring back to the Treaty where the rights in question are defined by the Treaty itself. The same applies to certain rights such as the freedom of movement, the right to participate in European and municipal elections, the right to refer to the Ombudsman, the right to petition, etc.

Article H.4 Level of protection

No provision of this Charter may be interpreted as restricting the scope of the rights guaranteed by Union law, the law of the Member States, international law and international conventions ratified by the Member States, including the European Convention on Human Rights as interpreted by the case law of the European Court of Human Rights.

Statement of reasons

The object of the provision is clear. It is to maintain the level of protection currently afforded by Union law, the law of the Member States and international law. Owing to its importance, mention is made of the European Convention on Human Rights, which constitutes in all cases a minimum standard.

Article H.5 Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter may be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms set forth herein.

Statement of reasons

This Article reproduces Article 17 of the European Convention on Human Rights:

"Nothing in this Convention may be interpreted as implying for any State, group or person any right to engage in any activity or perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms set forth herein or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for in the Convention."

Editors' note to CHARTE 4238/00 ADD 1,
Amendments to CHARTE 4193/00 and 4192/00 of Mrs Pervenche Berès, Mrs Elena Paciotti and Mrs
Ieke van den Burg (MEPs):

The INIT FR version of this document was dated 18 April 2000.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 23 May 2000CHARTE 4238/00 ADD 1*CONTRIB 111*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter the German, English and Spanish translation of the contribution regarding the documents CHARTE 4193/00 CONVENT 19 and CHARTE 4192/00 CONVENT 18, submitted by Mrs. Pervenche Berès, Mrs. Elena Paciotti and Mrs. Ieke van den Burg, members of the European Parliament. ¹

¹ This text exists in French, English, Spanish and German languages.

Mrs Pervenche BERÈS, MEP

Vice-chairman of the European Parliament Delegation to the Convention responsible for drafting the Charter of Fundamental Rights

Mrs Elena PACIOTTI, MEP

Full member of the Convention responsible for drafting the Charter of Fundamental Rights

Mrs Ieke van den BURG, MEP

Substitute member of the Convention responsible for drafting the Charter of Fundamental Rights

Amendments to document CONVENT 19Proposals for social rights*Amendment 1

Replace Articles XIII and XV:

Everyone has the right to access to appropriate health care, effective social protection and high-quality social services.

Amendment 2

Add the following article:

Elderly persons

All elderly persons have the right to lead an independent and decent life. They should be able to play an active part in political, social and cultural life. Every worker and his dependants have the right to a pension guaranteeing a decent and independent standard of living.

Comment

See Article 23 of the revised European Social Charter

Article 23 - The right of elderly persons to social protection

With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right of elderly persons to social protection, the Parties undertake to adopt or encourage, either directly or in co-operation with public or private organisations, appropriate measures designed in particular:

- to enable elderly persons to remain full members of society for as long as possible, by means of:
 - a adequate resources enabling them to lead a decent life and play an active part in public, social and cultural life;*
 - b provision of information about services and facilities available for elderly persons and their opportunities to make use of them;*
- to enable elderly persons to choose their life-style freely and to lead independent lives in their familiar surroundings for as long as they wish and are able, by means of:
 - a provision of housing suited to their needs and their state of health or of adequate support for adapting their housing;*
 - b the health care and the services necessitated by their state;*
- to guarantee elderly persons living in institutions appropriate support, while respecting their privacy, and participation in decisions concerning living conditions in the institution.

Amendment 3

Replace Article XIV with:

Minimum income

Any person who is without adequate resources, especially if he is unable to gain access to paid employment, has the right to a minimum income enabling him to live in dignity.

Comment

This right has already been recognised in the Council recommendation of 24 June 1992 on common criteria concerning sufficient resources and social assistance in social protection systems (92/441/EEC). The European Parliament has adopted a number of resolutions calling for the establishment of a minimum income in all Member States as a means of combating social exclusion (OJ C 262, 10.10.1988, p. 194).

See also Article 30 of the revised European Social Charter on the right to protection against poverty and social exclusion.

Mrs Pervenche BERÈS, MEP

Vice-chairman of the European Parliament Delegation to the Convention responsible for drafting the Charter of Fundamental Rights

Mrs Elena PACIOTTI, MEP

Full member of the Convention responsible for drafting the Charter of Fundamental Rights

Mrs Ieke van den BURG, MEP

Substitute member of the Convention responsible for drafting the Charter of Fundamental Rights

Amendments to document CONVENT 18Proposals for social rights

Add the following rights:

Right to housing

Everyone has the right to decent and appropriate housing.

Comment

See Article 31 of the revised European Social Charter:

Article 31 - The right to housing

With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right to housing, the Parties undertake to take measures designed:

- 1. to promote access to housing of an adequate standard;*
- 2. to prevent and reduce homelessness with a view to its gradual elimination;*
- 3. to make the price of housing accessible to those without adequate resources.*

This right is also recognised in the Belgian, Greek, Spanish, Italian, Dutch, Portuguese, Finnish and Swedish constitutions.

Right to a healthy environment

Everyone has the right to live in a clean and healthy environment and the duty to protect the quality of the environment for present and future generations.

Comment

This right is recognised in the Belgian, Portuguese, Spanish, German, Italian, Dutch, Swedish, Finnish and Norwegian constitutions. See contribution 86 by Mr Paavo Nikula, Mr Gunnar Jansson and Mrs Tuija Brax.

Right to work

Everyone has the right to gain his living by work which he freely chooses or accepts.

Comment

This article should be supplemented by Article 20 – occupational freedom – in the contribution (CHARTE 4102/00 – CONTRIB 2) by Professor Jürgen Meyer, Bundestag representative in the Convention.

See Article 1 of the revised European Social Charter:

Article 1 - The right to work

With a view to ensuring the effective exercise of the right to work, the Parties undertake:

- 1. to accept as one of their primary aims and responsibilities the achievement and maintenance of as high and stable a level of employment as possible, with a view to the attainment of full employment;*
- 2. to protect effectively the right of the worker to earn his living in an occupation freely entered upon;*
- 3. to establish or maintain free employment services for all workers;*
- 4. to provide or promote appropriate vocational guidance, training and rehabilitation.*

Access to services of general interest

Everyone has the right to high-quality services of general interest in all areas which contribute to the quality of life, sustainable development and, more generally, the protection of fundamental rights. Services of general interest shall be based on the principles of equal access, universality, continuity, democratic scrutiny and transparency.

Comment

This right has already been recognised in Article 16 of the Treaty of Amsterdam: ‘Without prejudice to Articles 73, 86 and 87, and given the place occupied by services of general economic interest in the shared values of the Union as well as their role in promoting social and territorial cohesion, the Community and the Member States, each within their respective powers and within the scope of application of this Treaty, shall take care that such services operate on the basis of principles and conditions which enable them to fulfil their missions.’

This right is also set out in Declaration No 37 on public credit institutions in Germany which is annexed to the final act of the Treaty of Amsterdam.

Integration of disabled persons

All disabled persons, whatever the nature of their disablement, must be entitled to additional concrete measures aimed at improving their social and professional integration. These measures must concern, in particular, according to the capacities of the beneficiaries, vocational training, ergonomics, accessibility, mobility, means of transport and housing.

Comment

This article is identical to Article 26 of the Community Charter of Basic Social Rights. This right is recognised in the constitutions of several Member States, in particular the Greek, Spanish and Portuguese constitutions. Declaration No 22, annexed to the final act of the Treaty of Amsterdam, regarding persons with a disability, calls on the Community institutions to take account of their specific rights.

Work and family responsibilities

Every person with family responsibilities has the right to remain in or apply for employment without being discriminated against and to carry out his family responsibilities without prejudice to his job or career.

Every worker shall be entitled to parental leave.

Comment

Article 27 - The right of workers with family responsibilities to equal opportunities and equal treatment

With a view to ensuring the exercise of the right to equality of opportunity and treatment for men and women workers with family responsibilities and between such workers and other workers, the Parties undertake:

- 1. to take appropriate measures:
 - a) to enable workers with family responsibilities to enter and remain in employment, as well as to re-enter employment after an absence due to those responsibilities, including measures in the field of vocational guidance and training;*
 - b) to take account of their needs in terms of conditions of employment and social security;*
 - c) to develop or promote services, public or private, in particular child daycare services and other childcare arrangements;
- 2. to provide a possibility for either parent to obtain, during a period after maternity leave, parental leave to take care of a child, the duration and conditions of which should be determined by national legislation, collective agreements or practice;*
- 3. to ensure that family responsibilities shall not, as such, constitute a valid reason for termination of employment.*

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 2 May 2000CHARTE 4261/00*CONTRIB 134*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter comments on the documents CHARTE 4170/00 CONVENT 17 and CHARTE 4137/00 CONVENT 8, submitted by Mr. Jens-Peter Bonde, member of the European Parliament. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English language only.

Comments on CHARTE 4170/00 Convent 17 and CHARTE 4137/00 Convent 8Rights of the citizens*Article E in Convent 17 paragraph 2 (part 2) regarding the right to good administration

In Convent 17 the paragraph has the following wording:

- the right of every person to have access to his file, if this access is necessary for him to state his arguments, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy;

The paragraph should be altered from as follows:

- ”- the right of every person to have access to his file in accordance with the existing rules for access to information.”

Art. F in Convent 17 and article 14 in Convent 8 regarding right of access to documents

Should be altered as follows:

”Every citizen of the Union and anyone residing in the Union shall have the right of access to the documents and the informations of the institutions of the European Union. Everything is open unless there is a decision allowing a derogation from the general principle of openness in public law and administration. Derivations should be followed by a concrete reason which can be appealed to the European Ombudsman. Exceptions from the general rule and implementation of the rules of access to information can be adopted according to Article 255 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.”

Motivation:

The basic rule should be that the individual has access to all files. Exceptions from this rule should be limited and wellfounded. Exceptions should be followed by a concrete reason and it should be possible to complain about a rejection.

Editors' note to CHARTE 4269/00,
Commentaires sur CHARTE 4192/00 et 4193/00
des Lands allemands soumis par M. Jürgen Gnauck (Bundsrat) (datés le 08/05/00):

The dating on the attached document appears erroneous. The original German version is dated 26 September 2013.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 5 mai 2000 (12.05)
(OR. en)*CHARTE 4269/00*CONTRIB 142*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-joint les observations des Länder allemands relatives aux propositions du Présidium figurant dans les documents CHARTE 4192/00 CONVENT 18 et CHARTE 4193/00 CONVENT 19, transmises par M. Jürgen Gnauck, membre du Bundesrat. ¹

¹ Ce document n'existe qu'en langues allemande et française.

Jürgen Gnauck
Ministre des affaires fédérales et européennes
Chef de la Chancellerie
Chancellerie du Land de Thuringe
B.P. 997
D-99021 Erfurt

À l'attention de
M. Roman Herzog
Ancien Président de la République fédérale d'Allemagne
Président de la Convention pour l'élaboration du projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne
Prinzregentenstrasse 89

D-81675 Munich

Transmission préalable par fax (089-470 27 168)

À l'attention du Secrétariat de la Convention
Rue de la Loi 175
B-1048 Bruxelles

Transmission préalable par fax (0032-2-285 78 37)

Par E-mail (fundamental_rights@consilium.eu.int)

Observations du groupe de travail des Länder allemands relatives aux propositions du Présidium figurant dans les documents CHARTE 4192/00 CONVENT 18 et CHARTE 4193/00 CONVENT 19

Monsieur le Président,

Ainsi qu'il ressort de l'ordre du jour de la réunion informelle de la Convention des 27 et 28 avril 2000, la Convention va poursuivre ses travaux sur les premières propositions du Présidium relatives aux articles ayant trait aux droits sociaux. Dans le cadre de leurs réunions de coordination, les Länder allemands ont dégagé un premier avis sur les propositions figurant dans les documents CHARTE 4192/00 CONVENT 18 et CHARTE 4139/00 CONVENT 19. J'ai l'honneur de vous transmettre ci-joint les résultats de cette évaluation et je vous saurais gré de prendre en compte nos observations dans le cadre des travaux de la Convention.

(formule de politesse)

Jürgen Gnauck
Ministre

Chancellerie du Land de Thuringe
Bureau 33/Bo,Ri

Erfurt, le 8 mai 2000

Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Observations du groupe de travail des Länder allemands relatives aux propositions du Présidium figurant dans les documents CHARTE 4192/00 CONVENT 18 et CHARTE 4193/00 CONVENT 19

Les Länder allemands adhèrent au principe de l'État social, sur lequel est fondé leur rôle de garants, en Allemagne, d'un niveau de protection sociale élevé. Ils accordent en même temps une grande importance à la dimension sociale de l'Union européenne et défendent l'idée d'un ordre social européen.

Toutefois, l'opportunité d'insérer les droits sociaux proposés dans une Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne relève d'un autre débat. Les Länder allemands ont établi à cet égard les critères suivants :

Le projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux doit respecter strictement le mandat du Conseil européen de Cologne, qui prévoit simplement qu'il faudra "prendre en considération" des droits économiques et sociaux et ce uniquement dans la mesure où ils ne justifient pas uniquement des objectifs pour l'action de l'UE. Il s'agit d'établir une liste de "droits" qui rende visible pour les citoyens de l'Union européenne l'attachement de cette dernière aux valeurs juridiques fondamentales auxquelles adhèrent ses États membres. Il ne s'agit pas d'élaborer un programme politique de l'Union. Cela exclut donc la définition d'objectifs politiques.

En outre, la Charte ne peut pas, à elle seule, élargir les compétences de l'Union européenne. Par conséquent, l'insertion de règles détaillées sur des sujets qui ne relèvent pas de la compétence de l'Union réduirait l'impact que l'on souhaite donner à la Charte, l'Union n'étant pas en mesure d'assurer elle-même le respect des droits dans ces domaines.

Il ne faut par ailleurs pas perdre de vue que les droits sociaux peuvent être invoqués en justice. Indépendamment de ce qui précède, une Charte surchargée perdrait de sa valeur. Les acquis sociaux qui distinguent les États européens n'ont pas tous vocation à devenir des droits inaliénables, dont l'existence est indépendante notamment - et précisément - de la capacité économique d'un État. La section traitant des droits sociaux apparaît beaucoup trop chargée. Il en résulte un déséquilibre en défaveur des droits de base énoncés dans les sections précédentes, et la signification véritable des différents droits perd de sa netteté.

Enfin, la Charte devrait être formulée de manière concise, lisible et accessible à tous ; il faut donc se limiter à des règles générales moins détaillées. C'est d'ailleurs l'approche adoptée par la Convention pour les droits de base. Il conviendrait de s'en tenir à cette approche rationnelle également pour les droits sociaux. Il faudrait donc vérifier si des règles de nature simplement législative ne seraient pas suffisantes.

Conformément au mandat du Conseil européen, la Charte doit énoncer des règles contraignantes auxquelles est soumise l'action des institutions de l'Union. Il s'agit donc d'obligations incombant à la puissance publique. Cela exclut par conséquent que les droits fondamentaux comportent des effets directs à l'égard de tiers, c'est-à-dire des obligations imposées également à des citoyens et citoyennes ou à des entreprises. Les Länder s'opposent par principe à une telle extension. Dans cette optique, il serait opportun d'également faire preuve de beaucoup plus de retenue pour certaines dispositions afin de ne pas faire naître chez les citoyens de l'Union, par le biais d'un instrument juridique, des attentes auxquelles il serait impossible de répondre.

Dans ces conditions, les Länder allemands estiment que bon nombre des droits sociaux proposés pourraient disparaître de la Charte. En ne les y faisant pas figurer, on contribuerait d'ailleurs certainement à faciliter l'acceptation de celle-ci.

En espérant que la Convention fera siennes les considérations ci-dessus et prendra la responsabilité de renoncer à formuler des souhaits politiques au profit de dispositions juridiquement viables, les Länder allemands adoptent, sur les propositions soumises par le Présidium en ce qui concerne les droits économiques et sociaux, la position ci-après.

Concernant le document CONVENT 18:

1. Article I. Egalité entre les hommes et les femmes

Vu l'article 19 figurant dans le document CONVENT 8 ("Non-discrimination"), cette garantie supplémentaire semble superflue. Sur le fond, cette disposition ne suscite aucune objection. Il conviendrait toutefois de remplacer le terme "égalité" par "égalité de traitement".

2. Article II. Liberté professionnelle

Les Länder allemands estiment qu'il est indispensable de limiter ce droit fondamental aux citoyennes et citoyens de l'Union, ce qui permettrait aussi de supprimer le dernier membre de phrase, qui prête de toute façon à confusion. Dans la perspective de l'élaboration de dispositions transversales ou horizontales, il faudrait en outre examiner de près si une clause générale de limitation serait suffisante dans ce cas ou s'il ne faut pas prévoir des limitations différenciées.

3. Article III. Droit à l'information et à la consultation des travailleurs

Il faut se demander si une disposition de cette nature a vraiment sa place dans une Charte des droits fondamentaux. Il semble que des règles de droit dérivé suffiraient amplement et que, de surcroît, de telles règles offrirait de surcroît plus de souplesse qu'un droit fondamental et permettraient une évolution dynamique. Cela vaut par exemple pour la fixation de seuils (quelle est, pour une entreprise, la taille minimale à partir de laquelle existe un droit à l'information et à la consultation?).

Il faut en tout état de cause exclure toute contrainte et toute obligation juridiques directes de l'employeur.

Sur le plan rédactionnel, cet article devrait être épuré. Ainsi, le terme "effective" et le membre de phrase commençant par "notamment" sont superflus. En outre, il conviendrait de suivre le texte de l'article 21 de la Charte sociale révisée et de dire "les travailleurs ou leurs représentants".

4. Article IV. Droit d'association, de négociation et d'action collective Il serait souhaitable de condenser le texte de cet article. Les Länder allemands sont d'avis que les dispositions du paragraphe 1, deuxième phrase, et du paragraphe 2 découlent du droit énoncé au paragraphe 1, première phrase, et peuvent donc être supprimées.

Il conviendrait en outre de supprimer le paragraphe 3 (droit de grève) afin d'éviter de donner une orientation unilatérale au texte. Il faut en tout cas préciser que les conflits d'intérêts visés doivent être liés au travail, ce qui exclut par exemple la "grève politique".

5. Article V. Droit à une rémunération égale pour un travail égal

L'objet principal de cette disposition est déjà couvert par la disposition générale énonçant le principe d'égalité. Par conséquent, les Länder allemands sont favorables à la suppression pure et simple de l'article 5, d'autant que l'article 4 de la Charte sociale révisée, mentionné dans le commentaire, a un contenu différent.

6. Article VI. Droit au repos et au congé annuel

Cette disposition semble à la fois trop détaillée et trop peu ouverte et dynamique pour pouvoir répondre aux besoins futurs. Des dispositions de droit dérivé devraient suffire pour assurer la protection de ce droit. Il conviendrait de supprimer cet article afin de ne pas surcharger la Charte.

7. Article VII. Sécurité et hygiène dans le travail

Sur le fond, cette disposition ne suscite aucune objection. Il faut toutefois se demander, ici aussi, s'il est indispensable d'insérer cette disposition dans la Charte des droits fondamentaux, qui énonce déjà le droit au respect de l'intégrité physique. Cette disposition ne doit en aucun cas avoir d'effet direct envers des tiers.

8. Article VIII. Protection des enfants et des adolescents

Les Länder allemands sont favorables à une protection étendue des enfants et des adolescents, mais estiment qu'il serait souhaitable d'avoir un article moins détaillé. Les limites d'âge fixées de manière rigide, en particulier, suscitent des réserves. Il semblerait plus opportun d'insérer dans la Charte une clause de protection générale des enfants et des adolescents.

9. Article IX. Droit à la protection en cas de licenciement

Compte tenu de la grande complexité de la question, la formulation choisie ne semble pas adéquate. Vu la multiplicité des intérêts qui doivent être pris en compte et mis en balance en cas de licenciement, il conviendrait de renoncer à faire figurer le droit à la protection en cas de licenciement parmi les droits fondamentaux. Les Länder pourraient tout au plus accepter une formulation concise. Dans ce cas, des dérogations devraient être autorisées pour les petites entreprises, les contrats de travail à durée déterminée et les périodes d'essai.

10. Article X. Droit à la formation et à l'orientation professionnelle

L'accès sans discrimination à une formation professionnelle adéquate est déjà couvert par l'interdiction générale de la discrimination et la liberté professionnelle. Il semblerait par conséquent que l'on puisse se passer d'une disposition spécifique. Par ailleurs, l'insertion d'un droit à l'orientation professionnelle aurait pour effet de surcharger la Charte.

Cette disposition ne devrait en aucun cas donner naissance à un droit à participer à des actions de formation ou à bénéficier de certains services.

11. Article XI. Droit des travailleuses à la protection de la maternité

Là aussi il faudrait se demander s'il ne serait pas préférable de renoncer à une disposition particulière. Le droit à un congé de maternité d'au moins quatorze semaines semble trop spécifique et détaillé. Il semblerait plus opportun de regrouper la protection des mères et celle des enfants et adolescents. Les Länder allemands sont favorables à une disposition générale relative à la protection de la maternité analogue à celle figurant à l'article 6, paragraphe 4, de la Loi fondamentale allemande, qui prévoit ce qui suit : "Toute mère jouit du droit à la protection et à l'assistance de la communauté."

12. Article XII. Droit au congé parental

Le texte proposé apparaît ambigu; il est en outre trop détaillé et trop "prescriptif". Il ne semble donc pas opportun de faire figurer ce droit parmi les droits fondamentaux.

Concernant le document CONVENT 19 :

1. Article XIII. Sécurité sociale

Il semble très douteux que cette disposition puisse être invoquée en justice. Il y a en outre lieu d'éviter ici aussi tout effet à l'égard de tiers. Enfin, il semble s'agir d'un objectif purement politique.

Par conséquent, les Länder allemands plaident en faveur d'une suppression de cette disposition.

En tout état de cause, sur le plan rédactionnel, le terme "ayants droits" devrait être remplacé par "créanciers alimentaires". En outre, le membre de phrase "selon les modalités propres à chaque État" n'est pas pertinent : il convient de se référer à la situation de droit propre à chaque Etat.

2. Article XIV. Droit à l'aide sociale

Les Länder allemands ne s'opposent pas à l'insertion d'une disposition de cette nature. Le critère à appliquer pour déterminer l'importance de l'aide sociale devrait être la dignité humaine. Il convient de noter, pour éviter toute équivoque, que le droit à l'aide sociale ne saurait faire obstacle à des mesures mettant fin au séjour de ressortissants de pays tiers.

3. Article XV. Droit à l'accès aux soins de santé

Cette disposition apparaît superflue, car elle découle déjà de l'article relatif à la dignité humaine et à l'aide sociale. Les Länder s'opposent à une garantie institutionnelle de ce droit.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 2 mai 2000CHARTE 4270/00*CONTRIB 143*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver les observations de M. Guy Braibant, représentant du gouvernement français, sur les droits économiques et sociaux (documents CHARTE 4192/00 CONVENT 18, CHARTE 4193/00 CONVENT 19 et CHARTE 4227/00 CONVENT 26).¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langue française seulement.

Paris, le 13 avril 2000

COMPLEMENT A MES OBSERVATIONS DU 3 AVRIL SUR LES ARTICLES I A XV

(Droits économiques et sociaux : documents Convent 18, Convent 19 et SN/2432/00)

* ARTICLE III

Le droit à l'information et à la consultation des travailleurs au sein de l'entreprise est, je crois, au nombre des plus fondamentaux parmi les droits de cette troisième corbeille.

Consacré aussi bien par les deux chartes auxquelles nous renvoie notre mandat (articles 17 et 18 de la Charte communautaire de 1989 et articles 21 et 29 de la Charte sociale du Conseil de l'Europe) que par une directive des Communautés européennes (directive 94/45 relative au comité d'entreprise européen), ce droit ne doit pas être limité à l'hypothèse des procédures de licenciement collectif. Il paraît en effet plus moderne et surtout plus conforme aux textes de référence de l'élargir à l'anticipation des situations de crise.

La rédaction de cet article devrait ainsi s'inspirer de celle des dispositions de la Charte sociale révisée et prévoir que : «Les travailleurs ont le droit d'être informés et consultés en temps utile sur les décisions envisagées qui sont susceptibles d'affecter substantiellement les intérêts des travailleurs, et notamment sur celles qui auraient des conséquences importantes sur la situation de l'emploi dans l'entreprise, ainsi que sur les décisions relatives aux conditions et au milieu de travail».

* ARTICLE IV

1. La liberté syndicale, posée par le 1er alinéa, devrait faire l'objet d'un article distinct. Il s'agit d'un droit dont le caractère fondamental n'est pas contestable, reconnu explicitement à l'article 11 de la CEDH ainsi que par la Charte communautaire de 1989 (article 11), la Charte sociale révisée (article 5), de nombreuses conventions de l'OIT (n° 87 et 98 en particulier) et la déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme (article 23-4).

2. Au second alinéa, il convient de préciser que le droit de négocier et de conclure des conventions collectives s'exerce dans les conditions prévues par les législations nationales et communautaires.

3. Il serait préférable, pour le 3ème alinéa, de revenir à la version de cet article initialement proposée (doc. SN/2158/1/00 REV), qui prévoyait que «Les travailleurs peuvent recourir à des actions collectives en cas de conflits d'intérêts, y compris le droit de grève, dans le cadre des obligations résultant des législations nationales et communautaires». La rédaction alternative proposée par le secrétariat paraît en effet inclure un droit de lock-out, ce qui n'est pas satisfaisant.

L'article 13 de la Charte communautaire de 1989 offre une formule ramassée qui me paraît bonne : «Le droit de recourir en cas de conflits d'intérêts à des actions collectives inclut le droit de grève, sous réserve des obligations résultant des réglementations nationales [et communautaires] et des conventions collectives».

* ARTICLE VI

L'expression «période annuelle de congés payés» risque de prêter à confusion. Il serait préférable de parler de «congés payés annuels».

* ARTICLE VII

Le droit à la sécurité et à la santé - terme désormais utilisé de préférence à celui d'hygiène par la législation communautaire - appartient au socle commun des droits en vigueur dans tous les Etats membres. Il est en effet consacré par la directive 89/391 ainsi que par toute une série de directives spécifiques, et l'article 137 du traité CE donne compétence à l'Union en cette matière.

* ARTICLE IX

La rédaction proposée n'est pas satisfaisante. Elle pose en effet en principe d'application générale un droit négatif. En outre, la formule «sans motif valable» n'est pas suffisamment précise : d'une part, elle ne couvre pas les différentes hypothèses prévues en droit du travail pour cette rupture du contrat (motif économique, faute simple, grave ou lourde...); d'autre part, elle est peu protectrice puisqu'elle n'indique pas que le travailleur doit être informé du motif de son licenciement.

Cet article pourrait dès lors être rédigé ainsi : «Aucun travailleur ne peut faire l'objet d'un licenciement sans avoir été informé de son motif. Ce motif doit pouvoir être soumis à l'appréciation d'un juge, qui peut condamner l'employeur à une réparation appropriée».

* ARTICLE XI

La protection de la maternité ne saurait être ramenée au droit des femmes enceintes à un congé payé - congé dont la durée pourrait n'être fixée que dans le commentaire de notre Charte.

Conformément à la directive 92/85 et à l'article 8 de la Charte sociale du Conseil de l'Europe, cet article devrait être complété pour prévoir que la protection de la maternité comprend une protection contre le licenciement, contre les travaux pénibles et dangereux, le droit au remplacement à un poste adapté et, le cas échéant, une réglementation d travail de nuit.

Les services de la Commission ont proposé de compléter notre Charte par quatre articles.

* Je suis très favorable à ce que des articles soient consacrés au droit des personnes âgées à une protection sociale et au droit des personnes handicapées à l'intégration professionnelle et à la protection sociale.

* Le droit au logement me paraît tout aussi fondamental. Il est également l'un de ceux qui nourrissent le plus d'attentes chez les citoyens et les différentes ONG.

Or ce droit bénéficie d'ores et déjà d'une reconnaissance internationale certaine. Il est consacré par des textes déjà anciens et largement ratifiés, la déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme (article 25) et le Pacte international sur les droits économiques et sociaux (article 11). Plus récemment, le «droit à un logement convenable» a fait l'objet du Plan mondial d'action adopté par l'ONU en juin 1997, grâce notamment à la prise de position commune des Etats membres de l'Union européenne. Ce droit est également inscrit à l'article 31 de la Charte sociale européenne à laquelle le mandat donné par le Conseil européen nous renvoie. Enfin, plusieurs conventions de l'OIT posent le droit au logement pour des catégories spécifiques : les travailleurs (1962), les travailleurs âgés (1980), les réfugiés (1981), les travailleurs immigrés (1990).

Si la rédaction de l'article consacré au droit au logement doit bien entendu respecter le principe de subsidiarité, il me semblerait difficile que notre Charte l'omette.

La rédaction pourrait être la suivante : «L'Union contribue par ses politiques à la réalisation du droit au logement», ce qui serait en harmonie avec la formulation de l'article suivant, consacré à l'emploi, qui reprend les termes de l'article 2 du traité CE.

Deux autres droits fondamentaux méritent de figurer dans la Charte.

* Le droit des représentants des travailleurs à la protection dans l'entreprise, acquis social fondamental qui se présente incontestablement comme un droit dur dont la sanction peut être assurée. Ce droit est garanti par la Charte communautaire de 1989 (article 28) ainsi que par la convention n°135 de l'OIT.

* Le droit d'égal accès au service public.

Guy BRAIBANT

Représentant du Président de la République et du Premier ministre à la Convention chargée d'élaborer la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 4 May 2000CHARTE 4271/00*CONTRIB 144*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a proposed amendment on the structure of social rights by Mr. Jürgen Meyer, member of the German parliament. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in German, French and English languages.

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Meyer, MdB

Stv. Vorsitzender des Ausschusses für die Angelegenheiten
der Europäischen Union des Deutschen Bundestages

Prof. Dr. Jürgen Meyer, MdB · Büro Berlin Unter den Linden 50 2122/2124

Proposed amendment
on the structure of social rights

In accordance with the procedure proposed by the Praesidium (see Convent 15 of 9 March 2000), in my capacity as a delegate to the Convention and the representative of the German Bundestag, I submit the following proposed amendment on the structure of the Charter of Fundamental Rights, which pertains to economic and social basic rights.

I. Introduction

Since - as expected - there have been fundamental differences of opinion in the Convention's debate on economic and social basic rights, I submit the following motion for an amendment as a mediation proposal which takes account of the arguments put forward by the proponents of social basic rights and the sceptics alike.

Under this proposal, economic and social basic rights should be incorporated into the Charter of Fundamental Rights on the basis of three pillars:

1. As the first pillar, the principle of solidarity is introduced, either in the Preamble or in a separate Article. In this way, alongside liberty, democracy, respect for human rights and the rule of law, a further principle is added which is common to the Member States.
2. As the second pillar, a list is drawn up of the economic and social rights which are uncontested and which must therefore be incorporated into the Charter.
3. As the third pillar, a horizontal article is proposed, containing the provision that the level of protection afforded by the Charter must not fall below national and international laws, treaties and conventions, and that existing instruments are referred to in the interpretation of rights contained in the Charter.

II. Proposed wording

1. First pillar:

For the Preamble or a separate Article, the following wording is proposed:

The Union and its institutions are founded on the principles of liberty, democracy, solidarity, respect for human rights and the rule of law, principles which are common to the Member States.

2. Second pillar:

Here, the Praesidium has proposed a series of Articles in Convent 18, 19 and 26, which are not contested. I also refer to Articles 8, 13, 14, 15, 20, 21 and 22 of my discussion draft, in which I have suggested appropriate wording for social rights (CHARTE 4102/00).

3. Third pillar:

The following wording is proposed as a horizontal clause:

Art. H 4 Level of protection

- 1. No provision of this Charter may be interpreted as restricting the scope of the protection guaranteed by European and national law and by international conventions and treaties. This applies especially to the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, as interpreted by the case law of the European Court of Human Rights.
- 2. In interpreting the fundamental rights contained in this Charter, especially economic and social rights, the international conventions and treaties concluded by Member States of the European Union must be taken into account.

III Statement of reasons

1. First pillar:

The wording of the Article takes over the Praesidium's proposed phrasing (Article A paragraph 2, Convent 17), adding the term "solidarity".

The principle of solidarity is a constituent element of every - also non-state - community. In Germany, it is implicitly contained in the social state principle laid down in the Basic Law², in France in the historical constitutional link between the terms "solidarité" and "fraternité", in the Spanish Constitution (Article 2), and the Polish Constitution (Preamble). For the EC/EU, the European Court of Justice refers to the "duty of solidarity assumed by the Member States through their accession to the Community" (ECJ Judgment, Case 39/73, Rep. 1973, 101 [102]), and reiterates this in many other judgments and opinions (ECJ Opinion, Rep. 1977, 741 ff, Opinion 1/76; ECJ Judgment, Rep. 1980, 907 ff: Case 136/82; Case 263/82; Case 64/84; Case 250/84; Case 276/80; Case 203/86).

² Jarass, Hans/Pieroth, Bodo: Grundgesetz für die Bundesrepublik Deutschland. Kommentar. Munich: Beck, 2000, Art. 20 para 105, p. 503 (5th edition)

2. Second pillar:

As the second pillar, and in accordance with the commitment undertaken by the heads of state and government at the Cologne European Council, the Charter should include Articles derived from the constitutional traditions common to the Member States, as well as the European Social Charter and the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers. Failure to take account of these rights would violate the Cologne commitment and would not deliver citizens' desired identification with the Charter of Fundamental Rights.

Since the third pillar (see below) proposes that the Charter be interpreted with reference to international standards, these Articles do not need to contain detailed provisions and can be limited to basic norms. This approach has repeatedly been demanded in the Convention's discussions as well.

3. Third pillar:

Paragraph 1 is based on the Praesidium's proposals in Convent 27 (Article H.4).

Criticism has rightly been voiced in the Convention that the provisions on social rights must not be too detailed, as a dynamic element is preferable to a static element when framing minimum standards too. I therefore propose to resolve this problem with a horizontal clause (third pillar).

Over and above the Praesidium's proposal, an Article 2 is therefore added which contains a provision on the interpretation of the rights contained in the Charter. International protection of fundamental and human rights must be seen as a unified regime which has gained in clarity and binding force over the last fifty years. Through the development of the European Convention on Human Rights, Europe has played a leading role in this context, which has greatly influenced the development of other regional human rights conventions (American Convention on Human Rights, Banjul Charter) as well. At the same time, the European states have participated actively in the development of universal conventions, resulting in standards which are binding on all EU Member States. A reference to these standards in the Charter would reaffirm the interdependence of the regime, as reflected in the decisions of national courts and international proceedings too.

1. A reference to internationally recognized standards enables clear and comprehensible wording to be used without forfeiting the necessary legal clarity.
2. The dynamic element required for the interpretation of all fundamental rights, but demanded primarily for social rights during the Convention's discussions, is also safeguarded through reference to the international regime.
3. With this reference, the European Union demonstrates that it sees itself as part of the international human rights regime. This would ensure a high status for the Charter of Fundamental Rights at international level.
4. This approach is consistent with the principle contained in many Member States' constitutions that interpretation must be in line with international law.

The fact that reference is made to the international conventions recognized and/or concluded by Member States means that there is no "risk" for any state that subsequent interpretations would contravene what has already been recognized at international and perhaps at national level. Thus the interpretation of the Charter of Fundamental Rights also takes account of those restrictions submitted by individual states in the form of reservations, provided that they do not contravene the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 2 mai 2000CHARTE 4272/00*CONTRIB 145*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-après des propositions de dispositions horizontales soumises par MM. Fischbach et Krüger, observateurs du Conseil de l'Europe. ¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langue française uniquement.

17.4.2000

PROPOSITIONS DE DISPOSITIONS HORIZONTALES
SOUMISES PAR MM. FISCHBACH ET KRÜGER,
OBSERVATEURS DU CONSEIL DE L'EUROPE
(Doc. de référence: CHARTE 4149/00 CONVENT 13)

Article X: clause de limitation générale

[Les droits reconnus aux articles ... ne peuvent faire l'objet d'aucune limitation.] Sous réserve de dispositions plus protectrices [de la présente Charte ou]¹ de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, toute limitation au respect des autres droits et libertés reconnus dans la présente Charte doit être:

- prévue par la loi²,
- poursuivre un but légitime³ et
- être nécessaire dans une société démocratique⁴, [dans le respect du principe de proportionnalité et de la substance même du droit ou de la liberté en question.]⁵

Notes

1. Les dispositions de la Charte sont dépourvues de limitations jusqu'à présent.
2. Communautaire et/ou nationale ?
3. Le terme "but légitime" est utilisé par la CEDH et la jurisprudence. En outre, le terme "intérêts" peut inclure aussi des intérêts particuliers ou corporatistes, ce qui est moins le cas du terme "but". Du point de vue de la sécurité juridique et de l'effet protecteur, ces buts ou intérêts gagneraient à être limitativement énumérés, comme dans la CEDH, sauf à estimer qu'une telle énumération n'est pas nécessaire, compte tenu du membre de phrase "Sous réserve de dispositions plus protectrices de la CEDH" et de l'effet de l'article Y. Il reste cependant que l'interprétation conjointe de la Charte et de la CEDH sur ce point pourrait être source d'hésitations et d'incertitudes.
4. Cette formulation semble plus forte et donc plus protectrice que celle utilisée dans le Convent 13. En effet, la Cour de Strasbourg a déduit de la condition de "nécessité" de l'ingérence que celle-ci doit répondre à un "besoin social impérieux". Dans le texte du Convent 13, ce sont les "limites" à la "limitation" qui doivent être nécessaires, pas la limitation elle-même. Il en résulte donc, au moins en théorie, une plus grande marge de manoeuvre pour les Etats.

5. Cette précision n'est pas vraiment nécessaire, car elle résulte de la jurisprudence sur la "nécessité dans une société démocratique". Le terme "substance même" est préférable au terme "contenu essentiel", car utilisé dans la jurisprudence de la Cour de Strasbourg et de la Cour de justice. Il s'agit en effet d'éviter des confusions inutiles sur des termes qui désignent la même réalité.

Article Y: niveau de protection

Aucune des dispositions de la présente Charte ne sera interprétée comme limitant ou portant atteinte à la protection offerte par la Convention de sauvegarde des Droits de l'Homme et des Libertés fondamentales, telle qu'interprétée par la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme, [et la Charte sociale européenne (révisée), telle qu'interprétée par le Comité d'experts indépendants.]

Note

Il convient d'assurer que la Charte ne soit interprétée ni comme se situant en-dessous du niveau de protection de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme et de la Charte sociale (révisée), ni comme restreignant celui-ci, par voie de conséquence. Le texte soumis est considéré comme couvrant ces deux éventualités.

Interdiction de l'abus de droit

Aucune des dispositions de la présente Charte ne peut être interprétée comme impliquant pour un Etat, [l'Union ou un de ses organes,] un groupement ou un individu, un droit quelconque de se livrer à une activité ou d'accomplir un acte visant à la destruction des droits ou libertés reconnus dans la présente Charte ou à des limitations plus amples de ces droits et libertés que celles prévues à ladite Charte.

Ce libellé est tiré de l'article 17 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme.

Préambule

Considérant que la Convention de sauvegarde des Droits de l'Homme et des Libertés fondamentales, la Charte sociale européenne (révisée) et les autres instruments de protection des droits fondamentaux du Conseil de l'Europe servent de base commune à la sauvegarde des droits fondamentaux dans toute l'Europe, et que leur contenu, ainsi que la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme et les conclusions du Comité d'experts indépendants sont à prendre en compte lors de l'interprétation de la présente Charte;

Article Y: niveau de protection

Aucune des dispositions de la présente Charte ne sera interprétée comme limitant ou portant atteinte à la protection offerte par la Convention de sauvegarde des Droits de l'Homme et des Libertés fondamentales et la Charte sociale européenne (révisée).

Note

Il convient d'assurer que la Charte ne soit interprétée ni comme se situant en-dessous du niveau de protection de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme et de la Charte sociale (révisée), ni comme restreignant celui-ci, par voie de conséquence. Le texte soumis est considéré comme couvrant ces deux éventualités.

1.

Interdiction de l'abus de droit

Aucune des dispositions de la présente Charte ne peut être interprétée comme impliquant pour un Etat, [l'Union ou un de ses organes,] un groupement ou un individu, un droit quelconque de se livrer à une activité ou d'accomplir un acte visant à la destruction des droits ou libertés reconnus dans la présente Charte ou à des limitations plus amples de ces droits et libertés que celles prévues à ladite Charte.

Ce libellé est tiré de l'article 17 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 2 mai 2000CHARTE 4280/00*CONTRIB 153*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver une contribution de M. Guy Braibant, représentant du gouvernement français, sur les droits sociaux. ¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langue française seulement.

Paris, le 2 mai 2000

CONTRIBUTION SUR LES DROITS SOCIAUX

Au moment où la Convention aborde la phase finale de ses travaux, il me paraît utile de présenter quelques observations.

La rédaction des trente premiers articles, correspondant à peu près aux deux premières “ corbeilles ” du mandat de Cologne, n’appelle de ma part, à ce stade, que des remarques de forme.

1/ L’importance des droits économiques et sociaux, dont la Convention n’a pas terminé l’examen, est évidente. Elle est triple :

- Ils se sont développés au cours du dernier demi-siècle, particulièrement en Europe ; ils constituent un élément essentiel du “ modèle social européen ” ;
- Ils correspondent aux attentes de la “ société civile ” et ils concernent la vie quotidienne de la population ;
- Ils forment la principale valeur ajoutée par la Charte aux instruments existants, notamment la Convention européenne de sauvegarde des droits de l’homme et des libertés fondamentales.

Naturellement, tous les droits n’ont pas la même signification. Les uns sont absolus (dignité, vie, égalité des sexes) ; les autres peuvent être limités pour des motifs d’intérêt général, d’ordre public, etc. ; enfin, certains droits économiques et sociaux, décrits parfois comme des “ droits de créance ” ou des “ droits à ” (et non des “ droits de ”) sont subordonnés à des mesures collectives de mise en œuvre. De même que la proclamation d’un “ droit à la santé ” ne signifie pas que chacun a le droit d’être en bonne santé à tout moment, le “ droit au logement ” ne permet pas à chacun d’aller en justice pour exiger l’attribution d’un logement. Il n’en a pas moins une signification juridique d’orientation et d’incitation à prendre des mesures permettant à chacun d’accéder à un logement décent, compte tenu de ses ressources et de sa situation familiale.

C’est ce que le Conseil constitutionnel français appelle un “ objectif de valeur constitutionnelle ” et il a fait précisément application de cette notion au droit au logement, en le déduisant de la sauvegarde de la dignité humaine (décision du 19 janvier 1995) : “ La possibilité pour toute personne de disposer d’un logement décent est un objectif de valeur constitutionnelle ; il incombe tant au législateur qu’au gouvernement de déterminer, conformément à leurs compétences respectives, les modalités de mise en œuvre de cet objectif ”. C’est moins qu’un droit classique mais c’est plus qu’un simple objectif politique. La Convention a donc le droit de le retenir. Le même raisonnement peut s’appliquer à d’autres notions.

Il appartient naturellement à la Convention de décider lesquelles de ces notions ont un caractère “fondamental” et constitutif de notre communauté de valeurs.

2/ Compte tenu des développements précédents, il me semble que la Charte devrait comprendre notamment les droits suivants, qui figuraient presque tous dans la première liste soumise à la Convention au début de ses travaux (body 4) :

- le droit à l’information des travailleurs, notamment en cas de licenciement collectif ;
- le droit de négociation collective ;
- le droit au repos (repos hebdomadaire et congés payés) ;
- le droit de grève ;
- le droit au logement ;
- les droits liés à la protection de l’environnement et à la protection des consommateurs (une première rédaction a été soumise à la Convention, mais elle n’a pas été jugée satisfaisante, notamment pour une raison de forme : la réunion des deux aspects en un seul article) ;
- le droit d’accès aux services économiques d’intérêt général.

Ces droits seront, comme les autres, soumis à la clause générale de limitation qui figurera dans la Charte. En outre, une clause horizontale spécifique pourrait permettre de tenir compte de leur nature particulière en renvoyant au législateur le soin de les mettre en œuvre.

Bien entendu, on pourrait laisser à la jurisprudence le soin de dégager de tels droits à partir des principes communs aux juges européens et de certains droits généraux comme la dignité de la personne humaine. Mais ce serait un processus long et qui ne serait pas conforme aux objectifs de visibilité et de lisibilité des droits fondamentaux qui sont à l’origine de la rédaction de la Charte et figuraient au premier rang du mandat de la Convention.

Guy BRAIBANT

Représentant du Président de la République et du Premier ministre

à la Convention chargée d’élaborer la Charte des droits fondamentaux de l’Union européenne

Editors' note to CHARTE 4284/00,
Note du Présidium: Proposition pour les articles 1 à 30 (Droits civils et politiques et droits du citoyen (fr)
+ COR 1 (es) + COR 2 (dk) + REV 1 (fr):

REV1 aligns French version (Art 20-23; Principe de démocratie; Numbering after Article 23) with English version.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 5 mai 2000CHARTE 4284/00*CONVENT 28*NOTE DU PRESIDIUM

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

- Nouvelle proposition pour les articles 1 à 30 (Droits civils et politiques et droits du citoyen)
-

Les membres de la Convention trouveront ci-après la nouvelle rédaction des articles 1 à 30, établie en tenant compte des modifications proposées et des observations formulées. Chaque article est suivi d'un exposé des motifs. La place des différents articles est provisoire.

Projets d'articles

Article 1. Dignité de la personne humaine

- 1. La dignité de la personne humaine doit être respectée et protégée.
- 2. Toutes les personnes sont égales en droit.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article figure comme premier article de la Charte, car la dignité de la personne humaine constitue le fondement même des droits fondamentaux. La déclaration universelle des droits de l'homme établit ce principe dans son préambule:

«considérant que la reconnaissance de la dignité inhérente à tous les membres de la famille humaine et de leurs droits égaux et inaliénables constitue le fondement de la liberté, de la justice et de la paix dans le monde».

Le respect de la dignité de la personne humaine constitue une limite inhérente à tous les autres droits qui ne peuvent être utilisés pour porter atteinte à cette dignité.

Le paragraphe 2 retrace un principe que la Cour a jugé être un principe fondamental communautaire (arrêt du 13.11.1984, Racke, Aff. 283/83, Rec. p. 3791).

Article 2. Droit à la vie

- 1. Toute personne a droit à la vie
- 2. Nul ne peut être condamné à la peine de mort, ni exécuté.

Exposé des motifs

Le paragraphe 1 reproduit l'article 2 de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme qui se lit ainsi:

"1. Le droit de toute personne à la vie est protégée par la loi. La mort ne peut être infligée à quiconque intentionnellement, sauf en exécution d'une sentence capitale prononcée par un tribunal au cas où le délit serait puni de cette peine par la loi.

2. La mort n'est pas considérée comme infligée en violation de cet article dans les cas où elle résulterait d'un recours à la force rendu absolument nécessaire :

- a. pour assurer la défense de toute personne contre la violence illégale ;*
- b. pour effectuer une arrestation régulière ou pour empêcher l'évasion d'une personne régulièrement détenue ;*
- c. pour réprimer, conformément à la loi, une émeute ou une insurrection.».*

Les exceptions visées au paragraphe 2 de l'article 2 de la convention s'appliquent dans le cadre de la présente charte conformément à la clause générale au projet d'article H 2 figurant au doc. charte 4235/00 CONVENT 27.

Le paragraphe 2 reproduit la deuxième phrase de l'article 1 du protocole n° 6 à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. L'article 2 du protocole est rédigé ainsi :

«Un Etat peut prévoir dans sa législation la peine de mort pour des actes commis en temps de guerre ou de danger imminent de guerre; une telle peine ne sera appliquée que dans les cas prévus par cette législation et conformément à ses dispositions... ».

Le problème des limitations sera résolu par la clause horizontale relative à la convention européenne.

Article 3. Droit au respect de l'intégrité de la personne humaine

- 1. Toute personne a droit au respect de son intégrité physique et mentale.
- 2. Dans le cadre de la médecine et de la biologie, les principes suivants doivent notamment être respectés :
 - interdiction des pratiques eugéniques;
 - respect du consentement éclairé du patient;
 - interdiction de faire du corps humain et de ses produits une source de profit;
 - interdiction du clonage reproductif des êtres humains.

Exposé des motifs

Ces principes figurent dans la Convention sur les droits de l'homme et la biomédecine. La présente charte ne vise à pas déroger à ces dispositions. L'énumération n'est pas exhaustive, ce qui permet une évolution pour tenir compte des progrès éventuels en la matière.

Article 4. Interdiction de la torture et des traitements inhumains

Nul ne peut être soumis à la torture, ni à des peines ou traitements inhumains ou dégradants. Nul ne peut être expulsé ni extradé vers un Etat où il serait menacé d'être soumis à la peine de mort, à la torture ou à d'autres traitements inhumains.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article reproduit l'article 3 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme : Nul ne peut être soumis à la torture ni à des peines ou traitements inhumains ou dégradants. La seconde phrase de cet article incorpore la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne sur l'article 3.

Article 5. Interdiction de l'esclavage et du travail forcé

1. Nul ne peut être tenu en esclavage ni en servitude.
2. Nul ne peut être astreint à accomplir un travail forcé ou obligatoire.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article reprend l'article 4 de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme :

«1 Nul ne peut être tenu en esclavage ni en servitude.

2 Nul ne peut être astreint à accomplir un travail forcé ou obligatoire.

3 N'est pas considéré comme «travail forcé ou obligatoire» au sens du présent article :

a tout travail requis normalement d'une personne soumise à la détention dans les conditions prévues par l'article 5 de la présente Convention, ou durant sa mise en liberté conditionnelle;

b tout service de caractère militaire ou, dans le cas d'objecteurs de conscience dans les pays où l'objection de conscience est reconnue comme légitime, à un autre service à la place du service militaire obligatoire;

c tout service requis dans le cas de crises ou de calamités qui menacent la vie ou le bien-être de la communauté;

d tout travail ou service formant partie des obligations civiques normales. »

Le troisième alinéa de cet article qui indique dans quel cas un travail n'est pas considéré comme forcé ou obligatoire n'a pas été reprise. Cette disposition sera intégrée par la clause horizontale relative à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Il va de soi que ne relèvent notamment pas de la notion de travail forcée les prestations personnelles établies par la loi et qui sont exigées des citoyens pour des raisons civiques ou dans des cas d'urgence ou de calamité, l'accomplissement des obligations militaires ou le service de remplacement, ni le travail exigé normalement d'une personne privée de liberté.

Article 6. Droit à la liberté et à la sûreté

Toute personne a droit à la liberté et à la sûreté. Nul ne peut être privé de sa liberté, sauf dans des cas et selon les formes prévus par la loi.

Exposé des motifs

L'article 5 de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme défini ainsi les cas dans lesquels une personne peut être privée de sa liberté:

"1 Toute personne a droit à la liberté et à la sûreté. Nul ne peut être privé de sa liberté, sauf dans les cas suivants et selon les voies légales :

a s'il est détenu régulièrement après condamnation par un tribunal compétent;

b s'il a fait l'objet d'une arrestation ou d'une détention régulières pour insoumission à une ordonnance rendue, conformément à la loi, par un tribunal ou en vue de garantir l'exécution d'une obligation prescrite par la loi;

c s'il a été arrêté et détenu en vue d'être conduit devant l'autorité judiciaire compétente, lorsqu'il y a des raisons plausibles de soupçonner qu'il a commis une infraction ou qu'il y a des motifs raisonnables de croire à la nécessité de l'empêcher de commettre une infraction ou de s'enfuir après l'accomplissement de celle-ci;

d s'il s'agit de la détention régulière d'un mineur, décidée pour son éducation surveillée ou de sa détention régulière, afin de le traduire devant l'autorité compétente;

e s'il s'agit de la détention régulière d'une personne susceptible de propager une maladie contagieuse, d'un aliéné, d'un alcoolique, d'un toxicomane ou d'un vagabond;

f s'il s'agit de l'arrestation ou de la détention régulières d'une personne pour l'empêcher de pénétrer irrégulièrement dans le territoire, ou contre laquelle une procédure d'expulsion ou d'extradition est en cours.

2 Toute personne arrêtée doit être informée, dans le plus court délai et dans une langue qu'elle comprend, des raisons de son arrestation et de toute accusation portée contre elle.

3 Toute personne arrêtée ou détenue, dans les conditions prévues au paragraphe 1.c du présent article, doit être aussitôt traduite devant un juge ou un autre magistrat habilité par la loi à exercer des fonctions judiciaires et a le droit d'être jugée dans un délai raisonnable, ou libérée pendant la procédure. La mise en liberté peut être subordonnée à une garantie assurant la comparution de l'intéressé à l'audience.

4 Toute personne privée de sa liberté par arrestation ou détention a le droit d'introduire un recours devant un tribunal, afin qu'il statue à bref délai sur la légalité de sa détention et ordonne sa libération si la détention est illégale.

5 Toute personne victime d'une arrestation ou d'une détention dans des conditions contraires aux dispositions de cet article a droit à réparation."

L'article 6 de la charte n'entend permettre aucun autre cas de privation de liberté que ceux qui sont autorisés par la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, lesquels s'appliquent en vertu du projet d'article H 2 (2) relatif aux limitations des droits garantis, figurant au document CHARTE 4235/00 CONVENT 27. Dans la mesure où la charte s'applique dans le cadre de l'Union, ces droits devront notamment être respectés lorsque, conformément au titre VI du traité sur l'Union européenne, l'Union adopte des décisions-cadres pour l'harmonisation en matière pénale.

Article 7. Droit à un recours effectif

Toute personne dont les droits et libertés ont été violés a droit à un recours effectif devant un tribunal.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article reprend l'article 13 de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme:

"Toute personne dont les droits et libertés reconnus dans la présente Convention ont été violés, a droit à l'octroi d'un recours effectif devant une instance nationale, alors même que la violation aurait été commise par des personnes agissant dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions officielles".

La Cour de justice a consacré le principe en droit communautaire dans son arrêt du 15 mai 1986 (Johnston, aff. 222/84, Rec. p.1651). Selon la Cour, ce principe s'applique également aux Etats membres lorsqu'ils appliquent le droit communautaire. L'inscription de cette jurisprudence dans la charte n'a pas pour objet de modifier le système de recours prévu par les traités et notamment les règles relatives à la recevabilité. Ce principe est mis en œuvre selon les voies procédurales prévues dans les traités : recours en annulation lorsque les conditions de recevabilité sont remplies ou recours préjudiciel en appréciation de recevabilité lorsque la question est posée devant un juge national. La rédaction de l'article a été adaptée pour tenir compte des spécificités de l'Union. Ainsi, on a supprimé la référence à une instance nationale puisque la Charte s'applique qu'aux institutions et organes de l'Union et que, dans ce cadre, le recours peut être exercé soit devant le juge communautaire, soit devant le juge national qui est le juge de droit commun en matière d'application du droit communautaire. De même, la notion d'instance nationale a été remplacée par celle de tribunal puisque la jurisprudence de la Cour vise la protection juridictionnelle.

Article 8. Droit à un tribunal impartial

- 1. Toute personne a droit à ce que sa cause soit entendue équitablement, publiquement et dans un délai raisonnable, par un tribunal indépendant et impartial, établi par la loi.
- 2. Une aide juridictionnelle est accordée à ceux qui ne disposent pas de ressources suffisantes dans la mesure où cette aide serait indispensable pour assurer l'effectivité de l'accès à la justice.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article se fonde sur l'article 5 § 1 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme qui se lit ainsi :

«Toute personne a droit à ce que sa cause soit entendue équitablement, publiquement et dans un délai raisonnable, par un tribunal indépendant et impartial, établi par la loi, qui décidera, soit des contestations sur ses droits et obligations de caractère civil, soit du bien-fondé de toute accusation en matière pénale dirigée contre elle. Le jugement doit être rendu publiquement, mais l'accès de la salle d'audience peut être interdit à la presse et au public pendant la totalité ou une partie du procès dans l'intérêt de la moralité, de l'ordre public ou de la sécurité nationale dans une société démocratique, lorsque les intérêts des mineurs ou la protection de la vie privée des parties au procès l'exigent, ou dans la mesure jugée strictement nécessaire par le tribunal, lorsque dans des circonstances spéciales la publicité serait de nature à porter atteinte aux intérêts de la justice.»

En droit communautaire, le droit à un tribunal s'applique à tous les contentieux. Elle est l'une des conséquences du fait que la Communauté est une communauté de droit comme l'a Cour l'a constaté dans l'affaire 194/83, Les Verts contre Parlement européen (arrêt du 23 avril 1986, rec. p.1339), ce qui entraîne comme conséquence un droit à un recours effectif devant un juge (parmi une jurisprudence abondante, Johnston, aff. 222/84, arrêt du 15 mai 1986 rec. p.1682).

Les limitations n'ont pas été reproduites, mais elles s'appliquent dans le cadre de la clause générale de limitation qui devrait figurer dans la charte.

En ce qui concerne le paragraphe 2, il convient de noter que d'après la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme, une aide judiciaire doit être accordée lorsque l'absence d'une telle aide rendrait inefficace la garantie d'un recours effectif (Arrêt CEDH du 9.10.1979, Airey, Série A, Volume.32, 11). Il existe également un système d'assistance judiciaire devant la Cour de justice des Communautés européennes. Dans ces conditions, il a été jugé important de consacrer le principe dans la charte.

Article 9. Présomption d'innocence et droits de la défense dans un procès pénal

- 1. Tout accusé est présumé innocent jusqu'à ce que sa culpabilité ait été légalement établie.
- 2. Le respect des droits de la défense est garanti à tout accusé .

Exposé des motifs

Cet article se fonde l'article 5 § 2 et 3 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme qui se lit ainsi :

"2 Toute personne accusée d'une infraction est présumée innocente jusqu'à ce que sa culpabilité ait été légalement établie.

- 3 Tout accusé a droit notamment à :*

- a être informé, dans le plus court délai, dans une langue qu'il comprend et d'une manière détaillée, de la nature et de la cause de l'accusation portée contre lui;*
- b disposer du temps et des facilités nécessaires à la préparation de sa défense;*
- c se défendre lui-même ou avoir l'assistance d'un défenseur de son choix et, s'il n'a pas les moyens de rémunérer un défenseur, pouvoir être assisté gratuitement par un avocat d'office, lorsque les intérêts de la justice l'exigent;*
- d interroger ou faire interroger les témoins à charge et obtenir la convocation et l'interrogation des témoins à décharge dans les mêmes conditions que les témoins à charge;*
- e se faire assister gratuitement d'un interprète, s'il ne comprend pas ou ne parle pas la langue employée à l'audience."*

Compte tenu du parti pris de brièveté dans la rédaction qui a été retenu, il n'a pas été jugé utile de reproduire cet article dans son intégralité, mais conformément à l'article 6 du traité sur l'Union européenne ces dispositions qui explicitent les principes retenus dans l'article de la charte, s'appliquent dans le droit de l'Union.

Article 10. Pas de peine sans loi

- 1. Nul ne peut être condamné pour une action ou une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, ne constituait pas une infraction d'après le droit national ou le droit international. De même, il n'est infligé aucune peine plus forte que celle qui était applicable au moment où l'infraction a été commise. Si, postérieurement à cette infraction, la loi prévoit une peine plus légère, celle-ci doit être appliquée.
- 2. Le présent article ne porte pas atteinte au jugement et à la punition d'une personne coupable d'une action ou d'une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, était criminelle d'après les principes généraux du droit international.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article reprend le principe classique de la non-rétroactivité des lois et des peines en matière pénale. Il a été ajouté le principe de la rétroactivité de la loi pénale plus douce qui existe dans de nombreux Etats membres et qui figure à l'article 15 du Pacte sur les droits civils et politiques. L'article 7 de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme est rédigé comme suit:

- "1 Nul ne peut être condamné pour une action ou une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, ne constituait pas une infraction d'après le droit national ou international. De même il n'est infligé aucune peine plus forte que celle qui était applicable au moment où l'infraction a été commise.*
- 2 Le présent article ne portera pas atteinte au jugement et à la punition d'une personne coupable d'une action ou d'une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, était criminelle d'après les principes généraux de droit reconnus par les nations civilisées."*

On a simplement remplacé au paragraphe 2 le terme « civilisées » par le terme plus moderne de principe généraux du droit international ce qui n'implique aucun changement dans le sens de ce paragraphe qui vise notamment les crimes contre l'humanité.

Article 11. Droit à ne pas être jugé ou puni deux fois

Nul ne peut être poursuivi ou puni pénalement en raison d'une infraction pour laquelle il a déjà été acquitté ou condamné par un jugement définitif conformément à la loi.

Exposé des motifs

L'article 4 du protocole n° 7 à la convention européenne des droits de l'homme se lit ainsi:

- "1 Nul ne peut être poursuivi ou puni pénalement par les juridictions du même Etat en raison d'une infraction pour laquelle il a déjà été acquitté ou condamné par un jugement définitif conformément à la loi et à la procédure pénale de cet Etat.
- 2 Les dispositions du paragraphe précédent n'empêchent pas la réouverture du procès, conformément à la loi et à la procédure pénale de l'Etat concerné, si des faits nouveaux ou nouvellement révélés ou un vice fondamental dans la procédure précédente sont de nature à affecter le jugement intervenu.
- 3 Aucune dérogation n'est autorisée au présent article au titre de l'article 15 de la Convention."

Le paragraphe 2 de l'article du protocole n°7 s'appliquera en vertu de la clause horizontale relative à la Convention. Le principe «non bis in idem» s'applique en droit communautaire (voir parmi une importance jurisprudence, arrêt du 5 mai 1966, Gutmann c/Commission, aff. 18/65 et 35/65, Rec 1966, p.150 et pour une affaire récente arrêt du Tribunal du 20 avril 1999, aff. jointes T-305/94 et autres, Limburgse Vinyl Maatschappij NV c/Commission, non encore publié).

Article 12 . Respect de la vie privée

Toute personne a droit au respect de sa vie privée, de son honneur et de sa réputation, de son domicile et du secret de sa correspondance et de ses communications.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article se fonde l'article 8 de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme qui se lit ainsi:

"1 Toute personne a droit au respect de sa vie privée et familiale, de son domicile et de sa correspondance.

2 Il ne peut y avoir ingérence d'une autorité publique dans l'exercice de ce droit que pour autant que cette ingérence est prévue par la loi et qu'elle constitue une mesure qui, dans une société démocratique, est nécessaire à la sécurité nationale, à la sûreté publique, au bien-être économique du pays, à la défense de l'ordre et à la prévention des infractions pénales, à la protection de la santé ou de la morale, ou à la protection des droits et libertés d'autrui."

Par rapport au texte de la convention, la mention de l'honneur a été ajoutée. Elle est reprise de nombreuses constitutions nationales. Le terme de «communication» a été substitué à celui de «correspondance» pour tenir compte de l'évolution des moyens de communication. Le respect de la vie familiale fait l'objet d'un article distinct. Le paragraphe 2 sur les limitations n'ait pas été repris, mais il s'applique dans le cadre du droit de l'Union en vertu de la clause horizontale relative à la Convention.

Article 13. Vie familiale

- 1. Toute personne a droit au respect de sa vie familiale.
- 2. Toute personne a le droit de se marier et de fonder une famille selon les lois nationales régissant l'exercice de ce droit.
- 3. La protection de la famille sur le plan juridique, économique et social est assurée.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article est inspiré dans son premier paragraphe de l'article 8 de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme et dans son paragraphe 2 de l'article 12 de ladite convention qui se lit ainsi:

" A partir de l'âge nubile, l'homme et la femme ont le droit de se marier et de fonder une famille selon les lois nationales régissant l'exercice de ce droit."

Le renvoi à la législation nationale au paragraphe 2 est conforme à la subsidiarité et à la diversité des situations nationales. Le paragraphe 3 impose à l'Union lorsqu'elle adopte des mesures dans le cadre de ses compétences de tenir compte des exigences de protection de la famille. Sa place exacte dans la Charte sera déterminée lorsque la structure d'ensemble sera examinée.

Article 14. Liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion

Toute personne a droit à la liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion.

Exposé des motifs

Cette formule reproduit de l'article 9 de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme qui se lit ainsi:

"1 Toute personne a droit à la liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion ; ce droit implique la liberté de changer de religion ou de conviction, ainsi que la liberté de manifester sa religion ou sa conviction individuellement ou collectivement, en public ou en privé, par le culte, l'enseignement, les pratiques et l'accomplissement des rites.

2 La liberté de manifester sa religion ou ses convictions ne peut faire l'objet d'autres restrictions que celles qui, prévues par la loi, constituent des mesures nécessaires, dans une société démocratique, à la sécurité publique, à la protection de l'ordre, de la santé ou de la morale publiques, ou à la protection des droits et libertés d'autrui."

Le fait que la charte ne reprenne pas les limitations énoncées au paragraphe 2 ne prive celles-ci d'effets dans le cadre du droit de l'Union en vertu de la clause horizontale relative à la Convention. La Cour de justice des Communautés a consacré la liberté religieuse dans l'affaire Prais (Arrêt du 27 octobre 1976, aff. 130/75, Rec. p.1589). Compte tenu du parti pris de brièveté retenu pour la rédaction de la charte, les implications de la liberté religieuse n'ont pas été reproduites, mais cela ne vise pas à priver ses dispositions d'effet puisqu'elles ne sont que des implications du principe général.

Article 15. Liberté d'expression

Toute personne a droit à la liberté d'expression. Ce droit comprend la liberté d'opinion et la liberté de recevoir ou de communiquer des informations ou des idées sans qu'il puisse y avoir d'ingérence d'autorités publiques et sans considération de frontière.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article reprend les principes de l'article 10 de la convention européenne des droits de l'homme qui se lit ainsi:

"1 Toute personne a droit à la liberté d'expression. Ce droit comprend la liberté d'opinion et la liberté de recevoir ou de communiquer des informations ou des idées sans qu'il puisse y avoir ingérence d'autorités publiques et sans considération de frontière. Le présent article n'empêche pas les Etats de soumettre les entreprises de radiodiffusion, de cinéma ou de télévision à un régime d'autorisations.

2 L'exercice de ces libertés comportant des devoirs et des responsabilités peut être soumis à certaines formalités, conditions, restrictions ou sanctions prévues par la loi, qui constituent des mesures nécessaires, dans une société démocratique, à la sécurité nationale, à l'intégrité territoriale ou à la sûreté publique, à la défense de l'ordre et à la prévention du crime, à la protection de la santé ou de la morale, à la protection de la réputation ou des droits d'autrui, pour empêcher la divulgation d'informations confidentielles ou pour garantir l'autorité et l'impartialité du pouvoir judiciaire."

Le paragraphe 2 n'a pas été repris, mais il est applicable dans le droit de l'Union en vertu de la clause horizontale relative à la Convention. La Cour de justice a consacré à plusieurs reprises le principe de la liberté d'expression et, en premier lieu, dans l'arrêt ERT (Arrêt du 18 juin 1991, aff. C-260/89, Rec. p. I-5485).

Article 16 . Droit à l'éducation

- 1. Toute personne a droit à l'éducation ainsi qu'à l'accès à la formation professionnelle et continue. Ce droit comporte la faculté de suivre gratuitement l'enseignement obligatoire.
- 2. La création d'établissements d'enseignement est libre.
- 3. Le droit des parents d'assurer l'éducation et l'enseignement de leurs enfants, conformément à leurs convictions religieuses et philosophiques, doit être respecté.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article est inspiré tant des traditions constitutionnelles communes aux Etats membres que de l'article 2 du protocole additionnel à la convention européenne des droits de l'homme qui se lit ainsi :

"Nul ne peut se voir refuser le droit à l'instruction. L'Etat, dans l'exercice des fonctions qu'il assumera dans le domaine de l'éducation et de l'enseignement, respectera le droit des parents d'assurer cette éducation et cet enseignement conformément à leurs convictions religieuses et philosophiques."

Il a été jugé utile d'ajouter le principe de gratuité de l'enseignement obligatoire. Tel qu'il est formulé, il implique seulement que pour l'enseignement obligatoire, chaque enfant ait la possibilité d'accéder à un établissement qui pratique la gratuité. Il n'impose pas que tous les établissements, notamment privés, qui dispensent cet enseignement soient gratuits. Dans la mesure où la Charte s'applique à l'Union, ceci signifie que dans le cadre de ses politiques de formation, l'Union doit respecter la gratuité de l'enseignement obligatoire, mais cela ne crée pas bien entendu de nouvelles compétences. Le principe de la liberté académique n'est pas repris, mais il constitue tant un principe structurel de l'organisation universitaire que la garantie de la liberté d'expression dans ce domaine. La charte ne porte en rien atteinte à ce principe.

Article 17. Liberté de réunion et d'association

Toute personne a droit à la liberté de réunion pacifique et à la liberté d'association, y compris le droit de fonder avec d'autres des syndicats ou des partis politiques et de s'y affilier.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article se fonde sur l'article 11 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme:

"1 Toute personne a droit à la liberté de réunion pacifique et à la liberté d'association, y compris le droit de fonder avec d'autres des syndicats et de s'affilier à des syndicats pour la défense de ses intérêts.

2 L'exercice de ces droits ne peut faire l'objet d'autres restrictions que celles qui, prévues par la loi, constituent des mesures nécessaires, dans une société démocratique, à la sécurité nationale, à la sûreté publique, à la défense de l'ordre et à la prévention du crime, à la protection de la santé ou de la morale, ou à la protection des droits et libertés d'autrui. Le présent article n'interdit pas que des restrictions légitimes soient imposées à l'exercice de ces droits par les membres des forces armées, de la police ou de l'administration de l'Etat."

La question des limitations sera réglée par la clause horizontale relative à la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme.

Article 18. Droit d'accès aux documents

Tout citoyen de l'Union ou toute personne résidant dans l'Union a un droit d'accès aux documents du Parlement européen, du Conseil et de la Commission.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article reproduit l'article 255 du traité CE dans sa première phrase. Les conditions et limites mentionnées dans la suite de l'article relèvent de la clause horizontale qui règle d'une manière générale la question.

Article 19. Protection des données

Toute personne a le droit de décider elle-même de la divulgation et de l'utilisation de ses données personnelles.

Exposé des motifs

L'article 286 du traité CE rend applicable aux institutions et organes les directives communautaires relatives à la protection des données. Ces directives sont fondées sur la convention du Conseil de l'Europe sur la protection des données personnelles. Il semble préférable d'énoncer une règle générale plutôt que de reprendre une liste détaillée de principes qui seront soumis à évolution en raison du progrès technique. En tout état de cause, la protection des données est un élément du respect de la vie privée.

Article 20. Droit de propriété

Toute personne a le droit de posséder des biens acquis légalement, de les utiliser et d'en disposer. L'usage de ces biens doit contribuer à l'intérêt général. Nul ne peut être privé de sa propriété que pour cause d'utilité publique et dans les cas et conditions prévus par une loi et moyennant l'assurance préalable d'une juste indemnité.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article se fonde sur l'article 1er du protocole additionnel à la convention européenne des droits de l'homme :

"Toute personne physique ou morale a droit au respect de ses biens. Nul ne peut être privé de sa propriété que pour cause d'utilité publique et dans les conditions prévues par la loi et les principes généraux du droit international.

Les dispositions précédentes ne portent pas atteinte au droit que possèdent les Etats de mettre en vigueur les lois qu'ils jugent nécessaires pour réglementer l'usage des biens conformément à l'intérêt général ou pour assurer le paiement des impôts ou d'autres contributions ou des amendes."

Il s'agit d'un principe fondamental commun à toutes les constitutions nationales. Il a été consacré à des maintes reprises par la jurisprudence de la Cour de justice et en premier lieu dans l'arrêt Hauer (13 décembre 1979, Rec. p. 3727). Un certain nombre de membres ont souhaité moderniser la rédaction de la Convention.

Article 21. Droit d'asile et expulsion

1. Les ressortissants des pays tiers qui craignent avec raison d'être persécutés du fait de leur race, de leur religion, de leur appartenance à un certain groupe social ou de leurs opinions politiques ont un droit d'asile dans l'Union européenne conformément aux règles de la Convention de Genève du 28 juillet 1951 et au protocole du 31 janvier 1967 relatifs au statut des réfugiés.
2. Les expulsions collectives d'étrangers sont interdites.

Exposé des motifs

Le paragraphe 2 de cet article est inspiré de l'article 4 du protocole n° 4 à la convention européenne des droits de l'homme en ce qui concerne les expulsions collectives. Il vise à garantir que chaque décision fasse l'objet d'un examen spécifique et que l'on ne puisse décider par une mesure unique d'expulser toutes les personnes présentant des caractéristiques déterminées. Le texte du paragraphe 1 est inspiré de l'article 63 CE qui incorpore en droit communautaire la convention sur les réfugiés. Les dispositions de l'article 1 du protocole n° 7 à la convention européenne des droits de l'homme relatives aux garanties procédurales en cas d'expulsion n'ont pas été reprises, car la plupart des Etats membres n'ont pas signé ou ratifié ce protocole. De toute façon, la convention de Genève contient des garanties en ce domaine.

Article 22. Egalité et non-discrimination

1. Est interdite toute discrimination fondée sur le sexe, la race, la couleur ou l'origine ethnique ou sociale, la langue, la religion ou les convictions, les opinions politiques, l'appartenance à une minorité nationale, la fortune, la naissance, un handicap, l'âge ou l'orientation sexuelle.
2. Dans le domaine d'application du Traité instituant la Communauté européenne et du Traité sur l'Union européenne, toute discrimination fondée sur la nationalité est interdite.
3. L'Union cherche à éliminer les inégalités et à promouvoir l'égalité entre les hommes et les femmes. L'égalité des sexes est notamment assurée dans la fixation des rémunérations et des autres conditions de travail .

Exposé des motifs

Le paragraphe 1 reprend la convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Celle-ci limite l'application du principe aux droits garantis, mais le droit communautaire va plus loin après l'adoption du traité d'Amsterdam. La liste combine la liste de l'article 13 du traité communautaire et la liste de l'article 14 de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme. Le principe de non-discrimination formulé au paragraphe 2 est consacré à l'article 12 du Traité CE.

Article 12 CE : "Dans le domaine d'application du présent traité, et sans préjudice des dispositions particulières qu'il prévoit, est interdite toute discrimination exercée en raison de la nationalité.

Le Conseil, statuant conformément à la procédure visée à l'article 251, peut prendre toute réglementation en vue de l'interdiction de ces discriminations."

La formule du paragraphe 3 vise à permettre les actions positives qui sont prévues par le traité.

Article 23. Droit des enfants

Les enfants doivent être traités comme des personnes à part entière et doivent pouvoir influencer sur les questions les concernant personnellement dans une mesure correspondant à leur niveau de maturité.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article répond à diverses demandes et s'inspire de la Convention sur les droits de l'enfant.

Principe de démocratie

Article supprimé.

Exposé des motifs

A la suite des travaux de la Convention, il a été décidé que figureront au préambule, les mentions suivantes:

- 1. Toute autorité publique émane du peuple.
- 2. L'Union et ses institutions se fondent sur les principes de la liberté, de la démocratie, du respect des droits de l'homme ainsi que de l'Etat de droit, principes qui sont communs aux Etats membres.

Le paragraphe 3 reproduisait l'article 190 § 1 CE qui a été jugé préférable à l'article 3 du protocole additionnel CEDH : "Les Hautes Parties contractantes s'engagent à organiser, à des intervalles raisonnables, des élections libres au scrutin secret, dans les conditions qui assurent la libre expression de l'opinion du peuple sur le choix du corps législatif." En effet, cet article prend la forme d'un engagement international alors que le traité prévoit déjà l'élection dans l'article 190 § 1 traité CE : "Les représentants, au Parlement européen, des peuples des Etats réunis dans la Communauté sont élus au suffrage universel direct". Ce paragraphe a été déplacé à l'article relatif aux élections européennes.

Article 23. Partis politiques

Tout citoyen a le droit de fonder avec d'autres un parti politique au niveau de l'Union et toute personne a le droit de s'y affilier. Ces partis politiques doivent respecter les droits et libertés garantis par la présente charte.

Exposé des motifs

Le droit de fonder un parti politique est garanti à tout citoyen de l'Union, celui de s'y affilier étant ouvert à toute personne résidant dans un Etat membre. La possibilité de limitations à l'exercice de ces droits découlera de l'article horizontal consacré aux limitations.

Article 24. Droit de vote et d'éligibilité au Parlement européen

- 1. Les membres du Parlement européen sont élus au suffrage universel direct, libre et secret.
- 2. Tout citoyen de l'Union a le droit de vote et d'éligibilité dans l'Etat membre dans lequel il réside dans les mêmes conditions que les ressortissants de cet Etat.

Exposé des motifs

Ce texte reprend l'article 19 § 2 CE : "2. Sans préjudice des dispositions de l'article 190, paragraphe 4, et des dispositions prises pour son application, tout citoyen de l'Union résidant dans un État membre dont il n'est pas ressortissant a le droit de vote et d'éligibilité aux élections au Parlement européen dans L'Etat membre où il réside, dans les mêmes conditions que les ressortissants de cet État. Ce droit sera exercé sous réserve des modalités, arrêtées par le Conseil, statuant à l'unanimité sur proposition de la Commission et après consultation du Parlement européen; ces modalités peuvent prévoir des dispositions dérogatoires lorsque des problèmes spécifiques à un État membre le justifient"

Une référence sera faite dans un article horizontal aux conditions prévues par le traité.

Article 25. Droit de vote et d'éligibilité aux élections municipales

Tout citoyen de l'Union a le droit de vote et d'éligibilité aux élections municipales dans l'Etat membre dans lequel il réside dans les mêmes conditions que les ressortissants de cet Etat.

Exposé des motifs

Ce texte reprend l'article 19 § 1 CE: "Tout citoyen de l'Union résidant dans un État membre dont il n'est pas ressortissant a le droit de vote et d'éligibilité aux élections municipales dans l'État membre où il réside, dans les mêmes conditions que les ressortissants de cet État. Ce droit sera exercé sous réserve des modalités arrêtées par le Conseil, statuant à l'unanimité sur proposition de la Commission et après consultation du Parlement européen; ces modalités peuvent prévoir des dispositions dérogatoires lorsque des problèmes spécifiques à un État membre le justifient." Une référence aux conditions prévues par le traité sera reprise dans une clause horizontale.

Article 26. Relations avec l'administration

1. Toute personne a le droit de voir ses affaires traitées impartialement, équitablement et dans un délai raisonnable par les institutions et organes de l'Union.
2. Ce droit comporte notamment:
 - le droit de toute personne d'être entendue avant qu'une mesure individuelle qui l'affecterait défavorablement soit prise à son encontre;
 - le droit d'accès de toute personne au dossier qui la concerne, dans le respect des intérêts légitimes de la confidentialité et du secret des affaires;
 - l'obligation pour l'administration de motiver ses décisions.
3. Toute personne peut s'adresser aux institutions de l'Union dans une des langues officielles de l'Union et doit recevoir une réponse dans cette langue.

Exposé des motifs

Le premier paragraphe répond à une demande exprimée plusieurs fois au cours de la Convention, notamment par le médiateur.

*Les principes repris dans le paragraphe 2 qui ne concernent que les décisions individuelles, résultent pour l'essentiel de la jurisprudence de la Cour et, en ce qui concerne l'obligation de motiver, de l'article 253 du traité : "Les règlements, les directives et les décisions adoptés conjointement par le Parlement européen et le Conseil ainsi que lesdits actes adoptés par le Conseil ou la Commission sont motivés et visent les propositions ou avis obligatoirement recueillis en exécution du présent traité." Les principes de procédure administrative non contentieuse sont rappelés notamment dans les arrêts Orkem, aff. 374/87, rec. 1989, 3283, Lisrestal, TPI, aff. T-450/93, Rec. 1994., II-1177, TU München, C-269/90, rec. 1991, I-5469, Nölle, T-167/94, Rec.1995, II-2589. La référence à la confidentialité se réfère à la protection de données personnelles.*

Le paragraphe 3 reprend l'article 21 CE: "Tout citoyen de l'Union peut écrire à toute institution ou organe visé au présent article ou à l'article 7 dans l'une des langues visées à l'article 314 et recevoir une réponse rédigée dans la même langue."

Article 27. Médiateur

Tout citoyen ainsi que toute personne physique ou morale résidant ou ayant son siège statutaire dans un Etat membre a le droit de saisir le médiateur de l'Union des cas de mauvaise administration des institutions et organes de l'Union, à l'exception de la Cour de Justice et du Tribunal de Première instance dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions juridictionnelles.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article présente les principes qui résultent des articles 21 et 195 du traité CE.

Article 21:

"Tout citoyen de l'Union peut s'adresser au médiateur institué conformément aux dispositions de l'article 195."

Article 195 § 1 " Le Parlement européen nomme un médiateur, habilité à recevoir les plaintes émanant de tout citoyen de l'Union ou de toute personne physique ou morale résidant ou ayant son siège statutaire dans un Etat membre et relatives à des cas de mauvaise administration dans l'action des institutions ou organes communautaires, à l'exclusion de la Cour de justice et du Tribunal de première instance dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions juridictionnelles.

Conformément à sa mission, le médiateur procède aux enquêtes qu'il estime justifiées, soit de sa propre initiative, soit sur la base des plaintes qui lui ont été présentées directement ou par l'intermédiaire d'un membre du Parlement européen, sauf si les faits allégués font ou ont fait l'objet d'une procédure juridictionnelle. Dans les cas où le médiateur a constaté un cas de mauvaise administration, il saisit l'institution concernée, qui dispose d'un délai de trois mois pour lui faire tenir son avis. Le médiateur transmet ensuite un rapport au Parlement européen et à l'institution concernée.

La personne dont émane la plainte est informée du résultat de ces enquêtes. Chaque année, le médiateur présente un rapport au Parlement européen sur les résultats de ses enquêtes.

2. Le médiateur est nommé après chaque élection du Parlement européen pour la durée de la législature. Son mandat est renouvelable.

Le médiateur peut être déclaré démissionnaire par la Cour de justice, à la requête du Parlement européen, s'il ne remplit plus les conditions nécessaires à l'exercice de ses fonctions ou s'il a commis une faute grave.

3. Le médiateur exerce ses fonctions en toute indépendance. Dans l'accomplissement de ses devoirs, il ne sollicite ni n'accepte d'instructions d'aucun organisme. Pendant la durée de ses fonctions, le médiateur ne peut exercer aucune autre activité professionnelle, rémunérée ou non.

4. Le Parlement européen fixe le statut et les conditions générales d'exercice des fonctions du médiateur après avis de la Commission et avec l'approbation du Conseil statuant à la majorité qualifiée."

Une référence au traité sera faite dans une clause horizontale.

Article 28. Droit de pétition

Tout citoyen ainsi que toute personne physique ou morale résidant ou ayant son siège statutaire dans un Etat membre a le droit de pétition devant le Parlement européen.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article présente les principes qui résultent des articles 21 et 194 du traité CE

Article 21: "Tout citoyen de l'Union a le droit de pétition devant le Parlement européen conformément aux dispositions de l'article 194."

Article 194 CE: "Tout citoyen de l'Union, ainsi que toute personne physique ou morale résidant ou ayant son siège statutaire dans un Etat membre, a le droit de présenter, à titre individuel ou en association avec d'autres citoyens ou personnes, une pétition au Parlement européen sur un sujet relevant des domaines d'activité de la Communauté et qui le ou la concerne directement."

Article 29. Liberté de circulation

Tout citoyen de l'Union a le droit de circuler et de séjourner librement sur le territoire des Etats membres.

Exposé des motifs

Cet article reprend le principe énoncé à l'article 18 du traité CE.

Article 18 CE:

- "1. Tout citoyen de l'Union a le droit de circuler et de séjourner librement sur le territoire des Etats membres, sous réserve des limitations et conditions prévues par le présent traité et par les dispositions prises pour son application.*
- 2. Le Conseil peut arrêter des dispositions visant à faciliter l'exercice des droits visés au paragraphe 1; sauf si le présent traité en dispose autrement, il statue conformément à la procédure visée à l'article 251. Le Conseil statue à l'unanimité tout au long de cette procédure."*

Une référence au traité sera faite dans une clause horizontale.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 5 May 2000 (12.05)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4284/00*CONVENT 28*PRAESIDIUM NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
- New proposal for Articles 1 to 30 (Civil and political rights and citizens' rights)

Members of the Convention will find below the new wording of Articles 1 to 30, which has been drawn up in the light of suggested amendments and comments. Each Article is followed by a statement of reasons. The order of the Articles is provisional.

Draft Articles

Article 1. Dignity of the human person

- 1. The dignity of the human person must be respected and protected.
- 2. Everyone is equal before the law.

Statement of reasons

This Article appears as the first Article of the Charter since dignity of the human person is the very foundation of fundamental rights. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights sets out this principle in its preamble:

"Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world."

Respect for the dignity of the human person constitutes an inherent limitation to all the other rights, which may not be used to infringe that dignity.

Paragraph 2 sets out a principle which the Court has held to be a fundamental Community principle (judgment of 13 November 1984, Racke, Case 283/83, ECR 3791).

Article 2. Right to life

- 1. Everyone has the right to life.
- 2. No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed.

Statement of reasons

Paragraph 1 is taken from Article 2 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone's right to life shall be protected by law. No one shall be deprived of his life intentionally save in the execution of a sentence of a court following his conviction of a crime for which this penalty is provided by law.*
- 2. Deprivation of life shall not be regarded as inflicted in contravention of this article when it results from the use of force which is no more than absolutely necessary:*
 - (a) in defence of any person from unlawful violence;*
 - (b) in order to effect a lawful arrest or to prevent the escape of a person lawfully detained;*
 - (c) in action lawfully taken for the purpose of quelling a riot or insurrection."*

The exceptions referred to in Article 2(2) of the Convention apply in the context of this Charter in accordance with the general clause in draft Article H2 in CHARTE 4235/00 CONVENT 27.

Paragraph 2 is taken from the second sentence of Article 1 of Protocol No 6 to the European Convention on Human Rights. Article 2 of the Protocol is worded as follows:

"A State may make provision in its law for the death penalty in respect of acts committed in time of war or of imminent threat of war; such penalty shall be applied only in the instances laid down in the law and in accordance with its provisions"

The problem of limitations will be resolved by the horizontal clause relating to the European Convention.

Article 3. Right to respect for the integrity of the human person

- 1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and mental integrity.

- 2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - prohibition of eugenic practices;
 - respect for the informed consent of the patient;
 - prohibition of making the human body and its products a source of financial gain;
 - prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Statement of reasons

These principles are set out in the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. It is not the aim of this Charter to derogate from those provisions. The list is not exhaustive, allowing for development to take account of future progress in this area.

Article 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.
No one may be expelled or extradited to a State where he would be in danger of being subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman treatment.

Statement of reasons

*This Article is taken from Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights:
No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. The second sentence of the Article incorporates the European Court's jurisprudence on Article 3.*

Article 5. Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

- 1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
- 2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.

Statement of reasons

This Article is taken from Article 4 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

- "1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.*
- 2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.*
- 3. For the purpose of this Article the term "forced or compulsory labour" shall not include:*
- (a) any work required to be done in the ordinary course of detention imposed according to the provisions of Article 5 of this Convention or during conditional release from such detention;*
 - (b) any service of a military character or, in case of conscientious objections in countries where they are recognised, service exacted instead of compulsory military service;*
 - (c) any service exacted in case of an emergency or calamity threatening the life or well-being of the community;*
 - (d) any work or service which forms part of normal civic obligations."*

The third paragraph of that Article, which indicates the cases in which labour is not regarded as forced or compulsory, has not been included. It will be incorporated via the horizontal clause relating to the European Convention on Human Rights. It goes without saying that the concept of forced labour does not cover, inter alia, personal services laid down by law which are exacted of citizens for civic reasons or in case of an emergency or calamity, the fulfilment of military obligations or alternative service, or any work ordinarily exacted of a person deprived of liberty.

Article 6. Right to liberty and security

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in cases prescribed by law and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.

Statement of reasons

Article 5 of the European Convention on Human Rights defines the cases in which a person may be deprived of his liberty as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in the following cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law:
- (a) the lawful detention of a person after conviction by a competent court;*
 - (b) the lawful arrest or detention of a person for non-compliance with the lawful order of a court or in order to secure the fulfilment of any obligation prescribed by law;*

- (c) the lawful arrest or detention of a person effected for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority on reasonable suspicion of having committed an offence or when it is reasonably considered necessary to prevent his committing an offence or fleeing after having done so;
- (d) the detention of a minor by lawful order for the purpose of educational supervision or his lawful detention for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority;
- (e) the lawful detention of persons for the prevention of the spreading of infectious diseases, of persons of unsound mind, alcoholics or drug addicts or vagrants;
- (f) the lawful arrest or detention of a person to prevent his effecting an unauthorised entry into the country or of a person against whom action is being taken with a view to deportation or extradition.
2. Everyone who is arrested shall be informed promptly, in a language which he understands, of the reasons for his arrest and of any charge against him.
3. Everyone arrested or detained in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1.c of this article shall be brought promptly before a judge or other officer authorised by law to exercise judicial power and shall be entitled to trial within a reasonable time or to release pending trial. Release may be conditioned by guarantees to appear for trial.
4. Everyone who is deprived of his liberty by arrest or detention shall be entitled to take proceedings by which the lawfulness of his detention shall be decided speedily by a court and his release ordered if the detention is not lawful.
5. Everyone who has been the victim of arrest or detention in contravention of the provisions of this article shall have an enforceable right to compensation."

The aim of Article 6 of the Charter is not to allow any cases of deprivation of liberty other than those authorised by the European Convention on Human Rights, which apply by virtue of draft Article H2(2) on the limitation of guaranteed rights, set out in CHARTE 4235/00 CONVENT 27. Insofar as the Charter applies within the context of the Union, these rights should in particular be respected when, in accordance with Title VI of the Treaty on European Union, the Union adopts framework decisions for harmonisation in criminal matters.

Article 7. Right to an effective remedy

Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.

Statement of reasons

This Article reproduces Article 13 of the European Convention on Human Rights:

"Everyone whose rights and freedoms as set forth in this Convention are violated shall have an effective remedy before a national authority notwithstanding that the violation has been committed by persons acting in an official capacity."

The Court of Justice enshrined the principle in Community law in its judgment of 15 May 1986 (Johnston, Case 222/84, ECR I 651). According to the Court, this principle also applies to the Member States when they are implementing Community law. The inclusion of this precedent in the Charter is not intended to change the appeal system laid down by the Treaties, and particularly the rules relating to admissibility. This principle is to be implemented according to the procedures laid down in the Treaties: an action for annulment when the conditions for admissibility have been fulfilled or a preliminary ruling on admissibility when the case is brought before a national judge. The wording of the Article has been adapted to take account of the specific characteristics of the Union. Thus, reference to a national authority has been deleted, since the Charter applies only to institutions and organs of the Union and since, in this framework, an action may be brought either before the Community judge or before the national judge who is the ordinary-law judge as regards application of Community law. Accordingly, reference to a national authority has been replaced with reference to a court because the Court precedent refers to judicial protection.

Article 8. Right to a fair trial

- 1. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.
- 2. Legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is indispensable to ensure effective access to justice.

Statement of reasons

This Article follows Article 6(1) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

"In the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. Judgment shall be pronounced publicly but the press and public may be excluded from all or part of the trial in the interests of morals, public order or national security in a democratic society, where the interests of juveniles or the protection of the private life of the parties so require, or to the extent strictly necessary in the opinion of the court in special circumstances where publicity would prejudice the interests of justice."

In Community law, the right to a fair hearing applies to all disputes. That is one of the consequences of the fact that the Community is a community based on the rule of law as stated by the Court in Case 294/83, "Les Verts" v. European Parliament (judgment of 23 April 1986, ECR 1339; that means that there is a right to an effective judicial remedy (among the many precedents, Johnston, Case 222/84, judgment of 15 May 1986, ECR 1682).

The limitations have not been included, but they apply in the general clause on limitations which will appear in the Charter.

With regard to paragraph 2, it should be noted that in accordance with the case law of the European Court of Human Rights, provision should be made for legal aid where the absence of such aid would make it impossible to ensure an effective remedy (ECHR Judgment of 9.10.1979, Airey, Series A, Volume 32, 11). There is also a system of legal assistance for cases before the Court of Justice of the European Communities. That being so, it was deemed important to enshrine this principle in the Charter.

Article 9. Presumption of innocence and rights of the defence

- 1. Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
- 2. Everyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed respect for his rights to defence.

Statement of reasons

This Article is taken from Article 6(2) and (3) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.*
- 3. Everyone charged with a criminal offence has the following minimum rights:*

- (a) to be informed promptly, in a language which he understands and in detail, of the nature and cause of the accusation against him;
- (b) to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence;
- (c) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or, if he has not sufficient means to pay for legal assistance, to be given it free when the interests of justice so require;
- (d) to examine or have examined witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him;
- (e) to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court."

Given the decision taken in favour of concise drafting, it was not thought necessary to include this Article in full, but in accordance with Article 6 of the TEU these provisions, which clarify the principles set out in the Article of the Charter, are applicable in Community law.

Article 10. No punishment without law

- 1. No one shall be held guilty of any offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute an offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
- 2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of international law.

Statement of reasons

This Article follows the traditional principle of the non-retroactivity of laws and criminal sanctions. There has been added the principle of the retroactivity of a more lenient penal law which exists in a number of Member States and which features in Article 15 of the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. Article 7 of the European Convention on Human Rights is worded as follows:

- "1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed.*
- 2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of law recognised by civilised nations."*

In paragraph 2, the reference to "general principles of law recognised by civilised nations" has been replaced by the more modern reference to "general principles of international law"; this does not change the meaning of this paragraph, which refers to crimes against humanity in particular.

Article 11. Right not to be tried or punished twice

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law.

Statement of reasons

Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the European Convention of Human Rights reads as follows:

- "1. No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings under the jurisdiction of the same State for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law and penal procedure of that State.*
- 2. The provisions of the preceding paragraph shall not prevent the reopening of the case in accordance with the law and the penal procedure of the State concerned, if there is evidence of new or newly discovered facts, or if there has been a fundamental defect in the previous proceedings, which could affect the outcome of the case.*
- 3. No derogation from this Article shall be made under Article 15 of the Convention."*

Paragraph 2 of the Article in Protocol No 7 will be applicable by virtue of the horizontal clause relating to the Convention. The "non bis in idem" principle applies in Community law (see, among the many precedents, the judgment of 5 May 1996, Cases 18/65 and 35/65, Gutmann v Commission [1966] ECR 150 and a recent case, the decision of the Court of First Instance of 20 April 1999, Joined Cases T-305/94 and others, Limburgse Vinyl Maatschappij NV v Commission, not yet published).

Article 12. Respect for private life

Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy, his honour and his reputation, his home and the confidentiality of his correspondence and communications.

Statement of reasons

This Article is based on Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence.
- 2 There shall be no interference by a public authority with the exercise of this right except such as is in accordance with the law and is necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security, public safety or the economic well-being of the country, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others."

The term "honour" has been added to the text of the Convention. It is taken from a number of national constitutions. "Communication" has been added to "correspondence" to take account of developments in means of communication. Respect for family life is covered by a separate Article. Paragraph 2 on limitations has not been included but it is applicable under Union law by virtue of the horizontal clause relating to the Convention.

Article 13. Family life

- 1. Everyone has the right to respect for his family life.
- 2. Everyone has the right to marry and to found a family, according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right.
- 3. The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.

Statement of reasons

The first paragraph of this Article is based on Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights and paragraph 2 on Article 12 of that Convention, which reads as follows:

"Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and to found a family according to the national laws governing the exercising of this right."

The reference to national law in paragraph 2 is consistent with subsidiarity and with the diversity of national situations. Paragraph 3 applies to the Union when it adopts measures within its powers to take account of family protection needs. Its exact position will be determined when the overall structure of the Charter is considered.

Article 14. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion.

Statement of reasons

This wording reproduces Article 9 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; this right includes freedom to change his religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.*
- 2. Freedom to manifest one's religion or beliefs shall be subject only to such limitations as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of public safety, for the protection of public order, health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others."*

The fact that the Charter does not incorporate the limitations set out in paragraph 2 does not deprive those restrictions of their effects under Union law, by virtue of the horizontal clause relating to the Convention. The Court of Justice of the European Communities endorsed religious freedom in the Prais Case (judgment of 27 October 1976, Case 130/75, ECR 1589). Given the decision in favour of concise drafting for the Charter, the implications of religious freedom have not been included, but this is not intended to deprive these provisions of their effect as they are only the implications of the general principle.

Article 15. Freedom of expression

Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.

Statement of reasons

This Article incorporates the principles of Article 10 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers. This article shall not prevent States from requiring the licensing of broadcasting, television or cinema enterprises.*
- 2. The exercise of these freedoms, since it carries with it duties and responsibilities, may be subject to such formalities, conditions, restrictions or penalties as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society, in the interests of national security, territorial integrity or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, for the protection of the reputation or rights of others, for preventing the disclosure of information received in confidence, or for maintaining the authority and impartiality of the judiciary."*

Paragraph 2 has not been included but it is applicable under Union law by virtue of the horizontal clause relating to the Convention. The Court of Justice has endorsed the principle of freedom of expression on several occasions, first and foremost in the ERT Judgment (judgment of 18 June 1991, Case C-260/89, ECR I-5485).

Article 16. Right to education

- 1. Everyone has the right to education and the right of access to vocational and continuing training. These rights include the right to receive free compulsory education.
- 2. The founding of educational establishments shall be free of constraint.
- 3. The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be respected.

Statement of reasons

This Article is based on the common constitutional traditions of Member States and on Article 2 of the Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

"No person shall be denied the right to education. In the exercise of any functions which it assumes in relation to education and to teaching, the State shall respect the right of parents to ensure such education and teaching in conformity with their own religious and philosophical convictions."

It was considered useful to add the principle of free compulsory education. As it is worded, it merely implies that as regards compulsory education, each child has the possibility of attending an establishment which offers free education. It does not require all establishments which provide education, in particular private ones, to be free of charge. Insofar as the Charter applies to the Union, this means that in its training policies the Union must respect free compulsory education, but this does not, of course, create new powers. The principle of academic freedom is not included, but it constitutes both a structural principle of academic organisation and the guarantee of the freedom of expression in this area. The Charter in no way infringes this principle.

Article 17: Freedom of assembly and association

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions or political parties.

Statement of reasons

This Article is based on Article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his interests.*
- 2. No restrictions shall be placed on the exercise of these rights other than such as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others. This article shall not prevent the imposition of lawful restrictions on the exercise of these rights by members of the armed forces, of the police or of the administration of the State."*

The question of restrictions will be covered by the horizontal clause relating to the European Convention on Human Rights.

Article 18. Right of access to documents

Every citizen of the Union or anyone residing in the Union has a right of access to the documents of the European Parliament, of the Council and of the Commission.

Statement of reasons

This Article is taken from the first sentence of Article 255 of the EC Treaty. The conditions and limits described in the remainder of the Article are covered by the horizontal clause which deals with the issue in a general fashion.

Article 19. Data protection

Everyone has the right to determine for himself whether his personal data may be disclosed and how they may be used.

Statement of reasons

Under Article 286 of the EC Treaty the Community Directives on data protection are applicable to the institutions and bodies. Those Directives are based on the Council of Europe Convention on the protection of personal data. It seems preferable to lay down a general rule rather than to include a detailed list of principles which will be subject to change in the light of technical advances. In any case, data protection is an aspect of respect for privacy.

Article 20. Right to property

Every person has the right to own, use and dispose of lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law and subject to a prior guarantee of fair compensation.

Statement of reasons

This Article is based on Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights:

"Every natural or legal person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions. No one shall be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and subject to the conditions provided for by law and by the general principles of international law.

The preceding provisions shall not, however, in any way impair the right of a State to enforce such laws as it deems necessary to control the use of property in accordance with the general interest or to secure the payment of taxes or other contributions or penalties."

This is a fundamental principle common to all national constitutions. It has been recognised on numerous occasions by the case law of the Court of Justice, initially in the Hauer judgment (13 December 1979, ECR 3727). A number of members wished to update the wording of the Convention. The use of possessions must be within the limitations imposed by the general interest.

Article 21. Right to asylum and expulsion

- 1. Nationals of third countries shall have the right to asylum in the European Union in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees.
- 2. Collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited.

Statement of reasons

Paragraph 2 of this Article is based on Article 4 of Protocol No 4 to the European Convention on Human Rights concerning collective expulsion. Its purpose is to guarantee that every decision is based on a specific examination and that no single measure can be taken to expel all persons with particular characteristics. The text of paragraph 1 is based on Article 63 TEC which incorporates the Convention on Refugees into Community law. The provisions of Article 1 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR concerning procedural safeguards in the event of expulsion have not been incorporated as most Member States have not signed or ratified that Protocol. In any event the Geneva Convention contains guarantees in that respect.

Article 22. Equality and non-discrimination

- 1. Any discrimination based on sex, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, political opinion, association with a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
- 2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.
- 3. The Union shall seek to eliminate inequalities and to promote equality between men and women in particular equality between the sexes shall be ensured when setting pay and other working conditions.

Statement of reasons

Paragraph 1 is based on the European Convention on Human Rights. The ECHR limits the application of the principle to guaranteed rights, but Community law goes further following the adoption of the Amsterdam Treaty. The list combines that in Article 13 of the Community Treaty with that in Article 14 of the ECHR. The principle of non-discrimination set out in paragraph 2 is enshrined in Article 12 of the EC Treaty.

Article 12 TEC: "Within the scope of application of this Treaty, and without prejudice to any special provisions contained therein, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

The Council, acting in accordance with the procedure referred to in Article 251, may adopt rules designed to prohibit such discrimination."

The wording of paragraph 3 is intended to authorise positive action as provided for in the Treaty.

Article 23. Children's rights

Children must be treated as equal individuals, they must be allowed to influence matters pertaining to their person to a degree corresponding to their maturity

Statement of reasons

This Article is in response to various requests and is based on the Convention on the Rights of the Child.

Principle of democracy

Following the Convention's discussions, it was decided that the following statements would appear in the preamble:

- 1. All public authority stems from the people.
- 2. The Union and its institutions are founded on the principles of liberty, democracy, respect for human rights and the rule of law, principles which are common to the Member States.

Paragraph 3 follows Article 190(1) TEC, which was considered preferable to Article 3 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR: "The High Contracting Parties undertake to hold free elections at reasonable intervals by secret ballot, under conditions which will ensure the free expression of the opinion of the people in the choice of the legislature." This Article takes the form of an international commitment, whereas the Treaty provides for elections in Article 190(1) TEC: "The representatives in the European Parliament of the peoples of the States brought together in the Community shall be elected by direct universal suffrage". This paragraph has been transferred to the Article relating to European elections.

Article 24. Political parties

Every citizen has the right to form a political party at the level of the Union and everyone has the right to join such a party. These political parties must respect the rights and freedoms guaranteed by this Charter.

Statement of reasons

Every Union citizen is guaranteed the right to found a political party, and the right to join such a party is open to anyone living in a Member State. The possibility of limiting the exercise of these rights will derive from the horizontal article concerning limitations.

Article 25. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate for the European Parliament

- 1. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage by free and secret ballot.
- 2. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Statement of reasons

This text follows Article 19(2) of the TEC: "2. Without prejudice to Article 190(4) and to the provisions adopted for its implementation, every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he is not a national shall have the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State. This right shall be exercised subject to detailed arrangements adopted by the Council, acting unanimously on a proposal from the Commission and after consulting the European Parliament; these arrangements may provide for derogations where warranted by problems specific to a Member State".

A reference to the conditions laid down in the Treaty will be made in a horizontal article.

Article 26. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate in municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Statement of reasons

This text follows Article 19(1) of the TEC: "Every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he is not a national shall have the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State. This right shall be exercised subject to detailed arrangements adopted by the Council, acting unanimously on a proposal from the Commission and after consulting the European Parliament; these arrangements may provide for derogations where warranted by problems specific to a Member State".

A reference to the conditions laid down in the Treaty will be made in a horizontal clause.

Article 27. Relations with the administration

1. Every person has the right to have his affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.
2. This right includes:
 - the right of every person to be heard before any individual measure which would affect him adversely is taken in relation to him;
 - the right of every person to have access to his file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy;
 - the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.
3. Every person may address the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of the Union and must have an answer in that language.

Statement of reasons

The first paragraph is in response to a request made several times during the Convention, particularly by the Ombudsman.

The principles set out in paragraph 2, which only concern individual decisions, basically result from the case law of the Court and, with regard to the obligation to give reasons, from Article 253 of the Treaty: "Regulations, directives and decisions adopted jointly by the European Parliament and the Council, and such acts adopted by the Council or the Commission, shall state the reasons on which they are based and shall refer to any proposals or opinions which were required to be obtained pursuant to this Treaty." The principles for non-contentious administrative procedure are set out in the following judgments in particular: Case 374/87 Orkem [1989] ECR 3283, Case T-450/93 Lisrestal, CFI, [1994] ECR II-1177, Case C-269/90 TU München [1991] ECR I-5469, Case T-167/94 Detlef Nölle [1995] ECR II-2589. The reference to confidentiality refers to the protection of personal data.

Paragraph 3 follows Article 21 of the TEC: "Every citizen of the Union may write to any of the institutions or bodies referred to in this Article or in Article 7 in one of the languages mentioned in Article 314 and have an answer in the same language."

Article 28. Ombudsman

Every citizen and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration by the institutions and bodies of the Union, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Statement of reasons

The Article presents the principles which result from Articles 21 and 195 of the TEC.

Article 21:

"Every citizen of the Union may apply to the Ombudsman established in accordance with Article 195".

Article 195: "1. The European Parliament shall appoint an Ombudsman empowered to receive complaints from any citizen of the Union or any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State concerning instances of maladministration in the activities of the Community institutions or bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

In accordance with his duties, the Ombudsman shall conduct inquiries for which he finds grounds, either on his own initiative or on the basis of complaints submitted to him direct or through a Member of the European Parliament, except where the alleged facts are or have been the subject of legal proceedings. Where the Ombudsman establishes an instance of maladministration, he shall refer the matter to the institution concerned, which shall have a period of three months in which to inform him of its views. The Ombudsman shall then forward a report to the European Parliament and the institution concerned. The person lodging the complaint shall be informed of the outcome of such inquiries.

The Ombudsman shall submit an annual report to the European Parliament on the outcome of his inquiries.

2. The Ombudsman shall be appointed after each election of the European Parliament for the duration of its term of office. The Ombudsman shall be eligible for reappointment.

The Ombudsman may be dismissed by the Court of Justice at the request of the European Parliament if he no longer fulfils the conditions required for the performance of his duties or if he is guilty of serious misconduct.

3. The Ombudsman shall be completely independent in the performance of his duties. In the performance of those duties he shall neither seek nor take instructions from any body.

The Ombudsman may not, during his term of office, engage in any other occupation, whether gainful or not.

4. The European Parliament shall, after seeking an opinion from the Commission and with the approval of the Council acting by a qualified majority, lay down the regulations and general conditions governing the performance of the Ombudsman's duties."

A reference to the Treaty will be made in a horizontal clause.

Article 29. Right to petition

Every citizen and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Statement of reasons

This Article presents the principles resulting from Articles 21 and 194 of the TEC.

Article 21: "Every citizen of the Union shall have the right to petition the European Parliament in accordance with Article 194."

Article 194 of the TEC: "Any citizen of the Union, and any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State, shall have the right to address, individually or in association with other citizens or persons, a petition to the European Parliament on a matter which comes within the Community's fields of activity and which affects him, her or it directly."

Article 30. Freedom of movement

Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.

Statement of reasons

This Article follows the principle set out in Article 18 of the TEC.

Article 18 TEC:

- "1. Every citizen of the Union shall have the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States, subject to the limitations and conditions laid down in this Treaty and by the measures adopted to give it effect.*
- 2. The Council may adopt provisions with a view to facilitating the exercise of the rights referred to in paragraph 1; save as otherwise provided in this Treaty, the Council shall act in accordance with the procedure referred to in Article 251. The Council shall act unanimously throughout this procedure."*

A reference to the Treaty will be made in a horizontal clause.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 8 May 2000CHARTE 4285/00*CONTRIB 157*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter comments and amendments on the document CHARTE 4192/00
CONVENT 18 submitted by Mr. Jens-Peter Bonde, member of the European Parliament. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English language only.

MEP Jens-Peter Bonde
LEO 7H353 Rue Wiertz * B-1047 Bruxelles
Tel.: (32) 2 284 5167 * Fax: (32) 2 284 9167

Bruxelles 16 October 2007

Comments and amendments on the proposed Social Rights (Convent 18).

Article III. Workers' right to information and consultation

After "Workers and their representatives" there is a need to add "in accordance with the minimum regulations of the community and national legislation and/or practice".

It is important that it is possible to specify the right to information and consultation through directives, which can be implemented in each Member State in accordance with the national practices of the Member State.

The labour markets are structured differently in the Member States. Therefore when drafting the Charter, it is necessary to take these differences into consideration. It is important that we stress that the rights in the Charter can be implemented, while respecting the different national practices, traditions and features of the labour markets.

It should also be added that the information shall be given 'in appropriate time' in order to make the right more concrete and effective.

Article IV. Freedom of association, rights of collective bargaining and collective action.

I suggest that we strike out Article IV. The article is in complete contrast to Article 137.6 of the TEC. That says that the content of Article 137 of the TEC doesn't include wage issues, the right to organise, the right to strike and the right to lock out. The proposed article goes further than the Treaty allows. Especially one could ask if it is not going way beyond the powers of the EU to include the right not to join an association.

If we choose to maintain this article under part 3 the passage "under the conditions laid down by national legislation and practice" should be added.

Article V. Right to equal remuneration for work of equal value

I suggest that we keep the wording from Article 141 of the TEC and make a reference in part B to this Article.

Article VI. Right to rest periods and annual leave

Article VI should be amended this way:

Every worker has the right to a weekly and a daily rest period and to an annual period of paid leave.

Article VIII. Protection of children and young people

After the first sentence, it should be added, "unless there are specific exceptions adopted in accordance with the Treaty".

Directive 94/33 already contains specific exceptions for children doing artistic work and carrying out smaller jobs, as for example delivering newspapers. It is necessary to add that specific exceptions can be allowed if they are adopted in accordance with the Treaty.

The way that the article is formulated now, it is actually establishing new rights. We should limit ourselves to only reinforcing already existing standards. The article is therefore not acceptable as it is formulated now.

Article X

The proposed article should be deleted.

This is not an individual right that we can guarantee the citizens. It is more a political aim than an individual right, and is an issue that should be regulated by the Member States.

Article XII

The proposed wording of the article make it sounds like the parental leave needs to be effectuated when the child is born or adopted. In Directive 96/34 the parents have the freedom to take the parental leave until the child becomes eight years old. If we choose to maintain this right in the charter this should be included.

Following articles should furthermore be included in the Charter:

The principle of subsidiarity in the sphere of fundamental social rights

The EU-institutions and the Member States shall take account of the diverse forms of national practices, in particular in the field of contractual relations, when implementing measures concerning fundamental social rights.

Comment:

”The proposed article stems from Article 136 of the TEC. It reinforces that the principle of subsidiarity also applies in the field of the labour market. The principle of subsidiarity is fundamental, especially in the light of the fundamental differences that exist among the Member States in the field of labour markets and in the regulation thereof. The Charter should respect the different ways the labour markets are constructed in the different Member States. The aim of the Charter is not to eliminate those differences, but to ensure fundamental rights, while respecting the different national traditions. It is therefore important that this article is included in the charter.”

The right to implement fundamental social rights

1. In Member States where the matter of implementing fundamental social rights is normally left to agreements between employers or employers' organisations and workers' organisations, or are normally carried out otherwise than by law, the undertakings of these matters may be given and compliance with them shall be treated as effective if their provisions are applied through such agreements or other means to the great majority of the workers concerned.
2. In Member States where these matters are normally the subject of legislation, the undertakings concerned may likewise be given, and compliance with them shall be regarded as effective if the provisions are applied by law to the great majority of the workers concerned.

Comment:

The right to implement fundamental social rights stems from Article 137.4 of the TEC, Article 33 of the Social Charter, Preamble and Article 27 of the Community Charter of Rights. The proposed articles only reinforce already existing rights.

It is important that the right to implement fundamental social rights by collective agreements is included in the Charter. It is a fundamental feature for those Member States, where the labour market mainly is build upon collective bargaining. It is important that the Charter do not interfere with the system in these Member States. The Charter should not give preference to countries where these matters are normally settled by law. It is therefore important that it is stressed in the Charter that fundamental social rights can be implemented by law or by collective agreements.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 8 mai 2000CHARTE 4295/00*CONTRIB 167*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-joint une proposition d'amendements relatifs aux documents CHARTE 4149/00 CONVENT 13, CHARTE 4137/00 CONVENT 8 et CHARTE 4170 CONVENT 17, présentée par M. Jean-Luc DEHAENE, représentant personnel du Gouvernement belge.¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langues française et néerlandaise.

DROITS CIVILS ET POLITIQUES

Propositions d'amendement :

Article 6 (numérotation de CONVENT 13). Droit à la liberté et à la sûreté.

« Toute personne a droit à la liberté et à la sûreté. Nul ne peut être privé de sa liberté, sauf dans les cas prévus par la loi et dans le respect des voies légales ».

A l'article 5 de la CEDH, les cas où il peut être dérogé à cette règle ont été énumérés de manière exhaustive. Il va de soi que dans la Charte, le nombre de cas où il peut être dérogé à ce droit fondamental a également été soumis à certaines restrictions. Le texte ici proposé garantit que la restriction de liberté ne pourra être imposée par n'importe qui. C'est une attribution du législateur. On respecte de la sorte l'esprit de la CEDH ; celle-ci imposait en effet une restriction similaire en matière de procédure (« selon les voies légales »).

Article 7. Doit à un recours effectif

« Toute personne dont les droits et libertés ont été violés a droit à un recours effectif devant un tribunal ».

Article 8. Droit à un tribunal impartial

« Toute personne a droit à ce que sa cause soit entendue équitablement, publiquement et dans un délai raisonnable, par un tribunal indépendant et impartial établi par la loi. Afin d'assurer un accès effectif au droit, une aide juridique gratuite sera octroyée à ceux qui ne disposent pas de ressources suffisantes.

On a voulu, dans le texte proposé, consacrer le principe de l'aide juridique gratuite en faveur des nécessiteux. Afin d'élargir l'accès au droit, la précision que cette aide doit être « indispensable pour assurer l'effectivité de l'accès à la justice » n'a pas été maintenue. L'omission de cette condition supplémentaire se situe dans la ligne de la jurisprudence de la Cour européenne des droits de l'homme (voir exposé des motifs de cet article dans CONVENT 13).

Article 10. Pas de peine sans loi

Paragraphe 2 : « Le présent article ne porte pas atteinte à la poursuite en jugement et à la punition d'une personne coupable d'une action ou d'une omission qui, au moment où elle a été commise, était criminelle d'après les principes généraux du droit.

L'ajout « reconnus par les nations démocratiques » se trouvant dans la version actuelle est pléonastique dans le contexte des principes généraux du droit et introduit en outre une note désuète.

Article 11. « Non bis in idem »

« Nul ne peut être poursuivi ou encourir une peine pénale dans un état membre de l'Union européenne en raison d'une infraction pour laquelle il a déjà été acquitté ou condamné dans un état membre de l'Union européenne par un jugement définitif et conformément à la loi.

La version actuelle implique que les juridictions de tout ature état au monde doivent être reconnues. Aux termes de l'article 4 du protocole n° 7 à la CEDH cette reconnaissance est limitée aux juridictions d'un même état. Le texte ici proposé constitue une position intermédiaire en ce qu'il étend la reconnaissance des décisions judiciaires aux Etats membres de l'Union européenne. Le principe non bis in idem s'applique dès lors dans ce nouvel espace judiciaire.

Article 16. Droit à l'éducationSuppression du paragraphe deux

Afin de rapprocher autant que possible le texte de la Charte de celui de l'article 2 du premier protocole additionnel à la CEDH, il y a lieu de supprimer ce deuxième paragraphe.

Article 14 (numérotation de CONVENT 8). Droit d'accès à l'information.

Tout citoyen de l'Union ou toute personne physique ou morale ayant sa résidence ou son siège statutaire dans un état membre de l'Union européenne a un droit d'accès aux documents des institutions de l'Union européenne.

Aux termes de l'article 255 du traité CE, le droit d'accès à l'information est acquis aux personnes physiques et morales. Il semble donc juste de respecter également ce champ d'application dans la Charte. En effet, la version actuelle exclut les personnes morales. Il était inutile d'ajouter la dernière phrase qui figure dans la version actuelle, étant donné qu'il existe une disposition horizontale réglant les relations entre la Charte et les Traités CE et UE (article 11.3).

Article 15. Protection des données.

La rédaction alternative proposée dans le commentaire est celle qu'il y a lieu de retenir. En effet, la formulation de l'autre texte est trop générale et ne fait pas la part des éventuelles exceptions. La rédaction alternative détermine en quoi consiste le droit concerné et offre par conséquent une protection plus efficace pour les données personnelles.

Article 16. Droit de propriété.

Toute personne a droit au respect des biens qu'il a légalement acquis. Nul ne peut être privé de sa propriété, si ce n'est pour des motifs d'utilité publique, dans les cas et conditions prévus par la loi, et moyennant une juste indemnité fixée au préalable.

L'ajout des termes « qu'il a légalement acquis » a pour objet d'éviter qu'une personne n'invoque cette disposition pour assimiler la détention d'un bien (« éventuellement acquis de manière illégale ») avec l'exercice de la propriété légale sur le dit bien. En ce qui concerne l'indemnité à payer en cas d'expropriation, il est indiqué que celle-ci soit fixée d'avance.

Article 17. Droit d'asile

Paragraphe 1 « Toute personne peut bénéficier, dans tout état membre de l'Union européenne, du droit d'asile aux termes de la Convention de Genève du 28 juillet 1951 et du Protocole du 31 janvier 1967 relatifs au statut des réfugiés.

Conformément aux obligations liant les Etats membres en vertu de la Convention de Genève du 28 juillet 1951 et du Protocole du 31 janvier 1967 relatifs au statut des réfugiés, chaque demande d'asile, qu'elle émane d'un citoyen de l'Union européenne ou de personnes qui ne sont pas des citoyens de l'Union européenne, devra être traitée individuellement. C'est là le motif de l'extension ratione personae du droit d'asile ici proposée.

A défaut d'un véritable droit d'asile UE, il est techniquement plus correct de désigner ce droit par l'expression « droit d'asile aux termes du droit des états membres de l'UE ».

Article E (numérotation de CONVENT 17). Droit à une bonne administration.

1. « Toute personne ~~résidant dans un état membre~~ a le droit de voir ses affaires traitées convenablement, impartialement, équitablement et dans un délai raisonnable par les institutions et organes de l'Union.
2. Ce droit comporte :
 - le droit ~~pour toute personne~~ d'être entendue...
 - le droit ~~pour toute personne~~ d'avoir accès...
 - l'obligation pour l'administration...
3. Quiconque a le droit de s'adresser à tout institution ou organe de l'Union dans l'une des langues visées à l'article 314 CE et de recevoir une réponse dans cette langue. »

Le droit à une bonne administration est un droit qui doit être reconnu à toute personne entrant en contact avec les autorités européennes. Il n'y a nullement lieu d'opérer la distinction entre les citoyens de l'Union ou les personnes qui ne sont pas citoyens de l'Union ou entre ceux qui ont leur résidence sur le territoire d'un état membre de l'Union et ceux qui ne l'ont pas.

Article G. Accès au médiateur

« Tout citoyen de l'Union ou toute personne physique ou morale ayant sa résidence ou son siège statutaire dans un Etat membre de l'Union européenne a le droit de...

Le présent texte est plus conforme aux termes de l'article 195, paragraphe 1, CE. Il stipule clairement que les personnes morales ont elles aussi le droit de saisir le médiateur.

Article H. Droit de pétition.

« Tout citoyen de l'Union ou toute personne physique ou morale ayant sa résidence ou son siège statutaire dans un état membre de l'Union européenne a le droit de....

Le présent texte est plus conforme aux termes de l'article 194 CE. Il stipule clairement que les personnes morales bénéficient elles aussi du droit de pétition.

Article I. liberté de mouvement

« Tout citoyen de l'Union a le droit de circuler et de séjourner librement sur le territoire des états membres ».

Etant donné l'existence d'une disposition horizontale réglant la corrélation entre le Charte et le traité UE (article H3), il n'est pas nécessaire de maintenir dans la version actuelle la partie de phrase qui suit « sur le territoire des états membres.... ». Si elle était malgré tout maintenue, il y aurait lieu de la compléter comme suit :

«par le Traité instituant la Communauté européenne et les dispositions ayant pour objet sa mise en oeuvre.

Cet ajout inspiré de l'article 18, paragraphe 1, CE, garantit l'application des directives et des règlements relatifs à la liberté de mouvement et au droit de séjour.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 10 May 2000CHARTE 4297/00*CONTRIB 169*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find submitted a proposal on including minority rights by Mr. Jens-Peter Bonde, member of the European Parliament. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English language only.

European Centre for Minority Issues

Informal Advisory Paper

10 May 2000

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION:
POSSIBILITY OF INCLUSION OF A PROVISION ON NON-DOMINANT GROUPS

Commissioned by: The Office of Jens Peter Bonde, MEP
Member of the Drafting Body

Authors: Kinga Gal, Marc Weller, ECMI

We are asked to advise on a possible provision on non-dominant groups in the Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union. This document seeks to explain some of the options for such a provision. Given the very short period of time available for offering this advice, ECMI emphasizes that it would be more than pleased to offer more detailed suggestions as the drafting progresses, and to offer comments on draft provisions which may emerge from the drafting process.

This document contains:

- I. General Issues Relative to Human and Minority Rights
 - A. Fundamental Rights in the European Union
 - B. Who is addressed by the Provision
 - C. Negative Rights and Claim Rights
 - D. Individual, Group, Minority and People's Rights
- II. Substantive Entitlements
- III. Drafting suggestions
 - A. Incorporation by Reference
 - B. A Mini Catalogue
 - C. A Soft Provision of a General Kind
- IV. Documentary Annex
 - A. Declaration on the Rights of the Principles of International Cultural Co-operation
 - B. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights
 - C. Document of the Copenhagen Meeting of the Conference on the Human Dimension
 - D. European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages
 - E. Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious or Linguistic Minorities
 - F. Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities

I. General Issues Relative to Human and Minority Rights

When considering drafting suggestions, it may be useful to bear a few conceptional issues in mind. These relate to the relationship between fundamental and human (and minority) rights, the different approaches to the establishment of rights, and the distinction between individual, group, minority and peoples' rights.

A. Fundamental Rights in the European Union

In the Conclusions of the European Council of Cologne of 3/4 June 1999, it was determined that there exists a need, at the present stage of the Union's development, to establish a Charter of fundamental rights in order to make their overriding importance and relevance more visible to the Union's citizens. Given the gradual development of the Communities/Union over the past half-century, from an economic integration organization to a comprehensive political Union, it is not surprising that the issue of human rights is one which is not free from difficulty and controversy. Human rights were gradually introduced into the legal framework of the Communities/Union, mainly through the jurisprudence of the European Court of Justice. It was felt necessary to disguise this fact somewhat by referring to 'fundamental rights' instead of human rights. In practice, these fundamental rights were often developed and interpreted in accordance with the jurisprudence of the European Court of Human Rights attached to the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms which applies among the wider membership of the Council of Europe.

The consonance of human rights and 'fundamental rights' was formally confirmed in Article 6 (formerly Article F) of the Treaty of the European Union. That article provides, inter alia, that 'The Union shall respect fundamental rights, as guaranteed by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms' Hence, the Drafting Body is requested by the Council to address both substantive and basic procedural rights, drawing upon the European Convention and also constitutional traditions common to the Member States and general principles of Community law, as well as specialized documents, such as the European Social Charter and the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers.

B. Who is to be Addressed by the Provision

The mandate of the Body in relation to fundamental rights is not specified in great detail in the Cologne decision. One may distinguish a number of different kinds of substantive fundamental rights:

- Fundamental rights addressed to the organs of the Union, restraining them from adopting measures incompatible with these rights. Given the supranational character of the legal system involved here, the organs of the Union would also be precluded from requiring Member States to adopt measures inconsistent with fundamental rights.
- In addition to the organs of the Union, fundamental rights established in the Charter can also apply to the Member States and their relations with individuals within their area of jurisdiction. According to this conception, the Union and the Member states would be considered one legal space, where all public actors must act according to common standards of fundamental rights.
- Finally, fundamental rights may be conceived of in an even wider sense. Under the human rights and constitutional law doctrine of 'Drittwirkung', both Union and Member State organs are not only required to act themselves in accordance with fundamental rights, but they must also ensure throughout the legal space to which the Charter is to apply that other actors comply with these rights.

Depending on the specific fundamental right involved, it is presumed that the Charter will in principle seek to address all three of the above circumstances. The draft provision on non-dominant groups will therefore need to restrain or guide Union action and the public acts of Member states and it will also flavour relations among private actors in the Union's legal space.

C. Negative Rights and Claim Rights

Traditionally, human rights were conceived in the Western liberal tradition as defenses against the excessive or arbitrary application of state powers. These are so-called ‘negative’ rights, which generally relate to civil and political matters and tend to preclude certain action by organs of the Union or States. The mandate of the Drafting Body goes further, however, also including economic and social rights, emphasizing a positive right of action from the State or the Union (so-called claim rights).

D. Individual, Group, Minority and Peoples’ Rights

Another distinction relates to individual, collective and group rights. Individual rights are easy to distinguish, establishing directly the individual as the beneficiary. Some individual rights are restricted to citizens of the states of the Union and this issue may be of special relevance in the context of certain minorities whose citizenship is questioned by their state of residence, or who are not territorially bound into a particular state.

The identification of collective or groups rights is more difficult, as there exists a subtle conceptual difference which is of particular importance in relation to non-dominant groups. Collective rights describe those entitlements which reside in the individual, even if they can only be realized collectively with others. For example, the right to profess and exercise one’s religion in communion with others is held by every individual, but can only be actualized together with others. The same substantive protection or entitlement can also be achieved, however, by way of a group right. In relation to this particular example, a provision might establish a right for religious groups to organize themselves, establish institutions and to run educational establishments. Again, individuals would benefit from the exercise of this right, but the right resides in the group, rather than the individual.

While this distinction may at first sight seem excessively technical, it is of the greatest importance in practice, and constitutes a veritable battleground in terms of the drafting of legislation or international instruments covering non-dominant groups. The recognition of a separate legal identity of groups is highly contested by some governments. These governments may sometimes perceive such a recognition to be the first step in the dilution of central state power and ultimately of state sovereignty.

Groups rights tend to focus on populations united by a particular feature, such as religious affiliation or language. Minority rights may also address religious or language communities. However, in a slightly different sense, minority rights are also often connected with a more multi-faceted ethnic (or national) identity of which religious affiliation or language may only be one element. The recognition of the existence of a particular minority in this sense is, again, a particularly sensitive issue for some states. The proposal for a legal standard which would recognize such an identity at Union level has therefore already proved to be quite controversial.

A number of international instruments nevertheless address minority issues, although in a somewhat more focused way. These instruments will concern themselves with ‘national’ minorities. National minorities are non-dominant groups in one state which have an external ‘ethnic kin state’ (e.g., the Danish minority in Germany, the Albanians in Kosovo, etc). The external dimension generated by the interest of the kin state in the fate of the minority, and the risk of international tension associated with this external dimension, has made it possible to generate standards on national minorities at the bilateral and regional level, including stability pact initiatives. The widening of the Union will import into its legal space the potential political tensions affiliated with this issue, although it remains controversial whether this problem should be addressed at the level of the European Charter. The emphasis on national minorities in several other documents is of course noteworthy, indicating once again the reluctance of governments, also especially in Western Europe, to address non-dominant groups in a wider sense.

Another issue concerns the question of ‘traditional’ minorities. A number of states only recognize minorities which are long-established on their territory. If there is to be a minority provision in the Charter, it is likely that these states will seek confirmation of this view, which is not free from controversy.

Finally a word on peoples' rights, in particular the right to self-determination. That term has many meanings in many different contexts, from the right to democratic governance to the right to secession. Given the technical legal connotations of the right to self-determination in the latter context, the term is best avoided where the Charter is concerned, at least in connection with minority provisions.

E. Soft Law and Hard Law

It is obvious that even the introduction of any kind of provision on minority rights or non-dominant groups is going to be highly controversial. Recent legislative vigour in Europe in relation to such rights might be somewhat deceiving. Some of the relevant documents may give the appearance of treaties, but were expressly established in the form of soft law. The Framework Convention takes the form of a treaty, but its title is chosen quite deliberately, perhaps providing more of a framework for state action, rather than hard, enforceable obligations. Moreover, in most relevant documents, the substantive provisions are often put in quite general terms, giving them an aspirational character.

II. Substantive Entitlements

A brief survey of minority rights instruments or conventions containing provisions relative to non-dominant groups is appended to this document. More detailed provisions can be found in the bilateral treaties, including instruments adopted in the context of the stability pact initiative, and peace agreements adopted or proposed for regions of ethnic crisis (Dayton, Rambouillet). It would be possible to conduct a more detailed exegesis of all of these instruments and to develop a catalogue of rights on such a basis. In such a way, the minority provision in the Charter would resemble a mini minority convention contained in a single article (drafting option B, see section IV. of this document). However, it may not be realistic to seek to import such a detailed provision into the Charter, given the apprehension of some states in this respect, and the focus of the Council on ‘fundamental rights’. It might also be argued that this might not be desirable, inasmuch as minority rights are rapidly developing. Hence, it might be argued that it would be preferable to refer in the Charter to general, guiding principles, instead of seeking to establish a highly specific catalogue of rights.

In terms of substantive obligations, one might bear the following considerations in mind:

- Non discrimination: A general provision providing for non-discrimination will undoubtedly be contained in the Charter. Such a provision applies to all individuals, whether members of a minority or not. Special non discrimination provisions applicable for all, for example in relation to the administration of justice (equality before the law) will also feature in the text. One might consider to add a special provision which precludes non-discrimination expressly on certain grounds connected with a minority identity,
- Right to determine appurtenance: It is an essential element of minority protection that minorities are self-constitutive. Their existence does not depend on an act of recognition by a state. Individuals must be able freely to choose their appurtenance to a minority group, without pressure from either the state or the group in question. (See, e.g., Article 2, Framework Convention). This view is, however, disputed by several governments.
- The protection of national minorities forms an integral part of the international protection of human rights, and as such falls within the scope of international co-operation. As an integral part of the overall protection of human rights minority rights should be covered in full in the European Charter on Fundamental Rights. This principle as quoted at the head of this paragraph is laid down in Article 1 of the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities (1995).
- The right to the protection and promotion of ethnic, cultural, linguistic and religious identity of national minorities is one of the basic human rights guaranteed in article 27 of the 1966 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. Almost all of the binding or non-binding international documents addressing the protection of minorities refer to their right to identity protection and promotion, such as articles 1 and 2 of the UN Declaration on the Rights of Persons belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities (1992); paragraphs 32 and 33 of the OSCE Copenhagen Document (1990), article 5 of the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities (1995) and the spirit enshrined in the preamble of the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages (1992).
- The right to enjoy their own culture is one main element of the protection of the identity of a person belonging to a minority. The right guarantees more than just the protection of a specific identity, it also contribute to its survival and development. The right to enjoy ones own culture may refer to various cultural and educational rights, including the right to access to the media of persons belonging to the respective minority. These kinds of rights are guaranteed in article 27 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (1966); articles 2 and 4 of the UN Declaration on the Rights of Persons belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities (1992); paragraphs 32 and 32.2 of the OSCE Copenhagen Document (1990), articles 5 and 6 of the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities (1995).
- The right to profess and practice their own religion, is strongly anchored in international law, including article 27 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (1966); the UN Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion

- or Belief (1981); articles 2 and 4 of the UN Declaration on the Rights of Persons belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities (1992); paragraph 32.3 of the OSCE Copenhagen Document (1990), articles 5 and 8 of the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities (1995).
- The right to use their own language, in private and in public. Linguistic rights constitute one of the most important rights for persons belonging to national, ethnic or linguistic minorities. As language is one of the basic forms of expression of a minority identity, the right to protection and promotion of identity can be realised only if adequate linguistic rights exist and are promoted. A wide range of linguistic rights are enshrined in article 4 of the UN Declaration on the Rights of Persons belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities (1992); paragraphs 32 and 34 of the OSCE Copenhagen Document (1990), article 10 of the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities (1995) and in the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages (1992).
 - The right to effective participation in cultural, religious, social, economic and public life seeks to empower minorities to participate fully in civil society. (Article 2 of the UN Declaration on the Rights of Persons belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities (1992); paragraph 35 of the OSCE Copenhagen Document (1990), article 15 of the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities (1995). In order to meet the needs and aspirations of persons belonging to national minorities concerning their identity protection and promotion, as well as to manage ethnic, linguistic, religious and cultural diversity, it is necessary to actively involve national minorities in the decisions taking on all levels in the cultural, social, economic and public life of the society.
 - Local and regional self-governance. The principle of subsidiarity is one of the basic principles of the European Union, enshrined in the Maastricht Treaty (1992) and Treaty of Amsterdam (1997), as well as in several Council of Europe documents, such as the European Charter of Local Self-Governments (1985) and the European Charter of Regional Self-Governments (1997). According to this principle, only matters that local and regional levels are not capable of addressing effectively should be decided or administered by superior authorities. Therefore, decisions are taken to the closest possible level to the citizens. This would include an emphasis on local self-governance also in areas where minorities constitute a local or regional majority.

III. Drafting suggestions

All three of the suggestions which follow are quite modest, noting the significant opposition that may exist in relation to the inclusion of any specific minority provision. A more ambitious effort would also cover collective rights of minorities.

The first alternative establishes a general provision for the protection and promotion of minority rights, and then seeks to incorporate more detailed provisions from other documents. These documents have been accepted (although at times in soft-law) by most of the Member States of the Union.

The second alternative instead seeks to establish a mini-catalogue of substantive minority rights. In a more ambitious version, that catalogue would advance upon the provisions of the Framework Convention. In its present form, it is in some aspects more restrictive than the Convention. The third alternative is a general, aspirational provision which may have to be considered if it proves impossible to achieve a more substantive article during the negotiations.

In relation to all three alternatives it has been presumed that there will exist a general non-discrimination clause elsewhere in the Charter which will be applicable to minorities, as well as specific guarantees of equal treatment (fair trial, etc.)

Alternative A

Persons belonging to [national] minorities have the right to the protection and promotion of their ethnic, cultural, linguistic and religious identity inter alia through effective participation in cultural, religious, social, economic and public life within the Union, as set out in the UN Declaration on the Rights of Persons belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities (1992), the OSCE Copenhagen Document (1990), the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities (1995) and the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages (1992) and other relevant standards.

Alternative B

(1) The protection of [national] minorities forms an integral part of the international protection of human rights, and as such falls within the scope of international co-operation. No policies and measures shall be adopted which adversely affect the effective development of ethnic, religious, cultural and linguistic diversity and effective steps shall be taken to promote the expression and development of such diverse identities.

(2) To belong to a [national] minority is a matter of a person's individual choice and no disadvantage may arise from the exercise of such a choice. [The existence or not of a minority is not dependent on an act of recognition by a government.]

(3) Persons belonging to [national] minorities have the right to the protection and promotion of their ethnic, cultural, linguistic and religious identity. In particular they have the right to enjoy their own culture, to profess and practice their own religion, to use their own language, in private and in public, to arrange for education and have the right to effective participation in cultural, religious, social, economic and public life, including, where appropriate, through their own institutions and media and according to the principles of local self-governance and subsidiarity.

Alternative C

The Union shall encourage a spirit of tolerance and intercultural dialogue and take effective measures to promote mutual respect and understanding and co-operation among all persons, irrespective of those persons' ethnic, cultural, linguistic or religious identity, in particular in the fields of education, culture and the media. Paying due regard to the principle of subsidiarity, local self-governance shall be promoted where appropriate.

IV. Documentary Annex

Note: Excerpts have been quoted from: Gudmundur Alfredsson and Göran Melander. A Compilation of Minority Rights Standards. A Selection of Texts from International and Regional Human Rights Instruments and other Documents. Lund: Raoul Wallenberg Institute of Human Rights and Humanitarian Law, 1997. Full text documents have been provided by ECMI.

I. Table of Contents (full text documents in caps)

- A. Declaration on the Rights of the Principles of International Cultural Co-operation
- B. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights
- C. Document of the Copenhagen Meeting of the Conference on the Human Dimension
- D. EUROPEAN CHARTER FOR REGIONAL OR MINORITY LANGUAGES
- E. Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious or Linguistic Minorities
- F. FRAMEWORK CONVENTION FOR THE PROTECTION OF NATIONAL MINORITIES

- A. Declaration on the Rights of the Principles of International Cultural Co-operation. (Extract)
Adopted by the UNESCO General Conference (14th Session), 4 November 1966.

Article 1.

1. Each culture has a dignity and a value which must be respected and preserved.
2. Every people has the right and the duty to develop its culture.
3. In their rich variety and diversity, and in the reciprocal influences they exert on one another, all cultures form part of the common heritage belonging to all mankind.

- B. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. (Extract)
Adopted and opened for signature, ratification and accession by the General Assembly of the United Nations, resolution 2200 (XXI), 16 December 1966. Entered into force: 3 January 1976.

Article 27.

In those States in which ethnic, religious, or linguistic minorities exist, persons belonging to such minorities shall not be denied the right, in community with the other members of the group, to enjoy their own culture, to profess and practice their own religion, or to use their own language.

C. Document of the Copenhagen Meeting of the Conference on the Human Dimension. (Extract)

Adopted by the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe, 29 June 1990.

(30) The participating States recognize that the questions relating to national minorities can only be satisfactorily resolved in a democratic political framework based on the rule of law, with a functioning independent judiciary. This framework guarantees full respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, equal rights and status for all citizens, the free expression of all their legitimate interests and aspirations, political pluralism, social tolerance and the implementation of legal rules that place effective restraints on the abuse of governmental power.

They also recognize the important role of non-governmental organizations, including political parties, trade unions, human rights organizations and religious groups, in the promotion of tolerance, cultural diversity and the resolution of questions relating to national minorities.

They further reaffirm that respect for the rights of persons belonging to national minorities as part of universally recognized human rights is an essential factor for peace, justice, stability and democracy in the participating States.

(31) Persons belonging to national minorities have the right to exercise fully and effectively their human rights and fundamental freedoms without any discrimination and in full equality before the law.

The participating States will adopt, where necessary, special measures for the purpose of ensuring to persons belonging to national minorities full equality with the other citizens in the exercise and enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms.

(32) To belong to a national minority is a matter of a person's individual choice and no disadvantage may arise from the exercise of such choice.

Persons belonging to national minorities have the right freely to express, preserve and develop their ethnic, cultural, linguistic or religious identity and to maintain and develop their culture in all aspects, free of any attempts at assimilation against their will. In particular, they have the right:

(32.1) to use freely their mother tongue in private as well as in public;

(32.2) to establish and maintain their own educational, cultural and religious institutions, organizations or associations, which can seek voluntary financial and other contributions as well as public assistance, in conformity with national legislation;

(32.3) to profess and practise their religion, including the acquisition, possession and use of religious materials, and to conduct religious educational activities in their mother tongue;

(32.4) to establish and maintain unimpeded contacts across frontiers with citizens of other States with whom they share a common ethnic or national origin, cultural heritage or religious beliefs;

(32.5) to disseminate, have access to and exchange information in their mother tongue;

(32.6) to establish and maintain organizations or associations within their country and to participate in international non-governmental organizations.

Persons belonging to national minorities can exercise and enjoy their rights individually as well as in community with other members of their group. No disadvantage may arise for a person belonging to a national minority on account of the exercise or non-exercise of any such rights.

(33) The participating States will protect the ethnic, cultural, linguistic and religious identity of national minorities on their territory and create conditions for the promotion of that identity. They will take the necessary measures to that effect after due consultations, including contacts with organizations or associations of such minorities, in accordance with the decision-making procedures of each State.

Any such measures will be in conformity with the principles of equality and non-discrimination with respect to the other citizens of the participating State concerned.

(34) The participating States will endeavour to ensure that persons belonging to national minorities, notwithstanding the need to learn the official language or languages of the State concerned, have adequate opportunities for instruction of their mother tongue on in their mother tongue, as well as wherever possible and necessary, for its use before public authorities, in conformity with applicable national legislation.

In the context of the teaching of history and culture in educational establishments, they will also take account of the history and culture of national minorities.

(35) The participating States will respect the right of persons belonging to national minorities to effective participatin in public affairs, including participation in the affairs relating to the protection and promotion of the identity of such minorities.

The participating States note the efforts undertaken to protect and create conditions for the pomotion of the ethnic, cultural, linguistic and religious identity of certain national minorities by establishing, as one of the possible means to achieve these aims, appropriate local or autonomous administrations corresponding to the specific historical and territorial circumstances of such minorities and in accordance with the policies of the State concerned.

(36) The participating States recognize the particular importance of increasing constructive co-operation among themselves on questions relating to national minorities. Such co-operation seeks to promote mutual understanding and confidence, friendly and good-neighbourly relations, international peace, security and justice.

Every participating State will promote a climate of mutual respect, understanding, co-operation and solidarity among all persons living on its territory, without distinction as to ethnic or national origin or religion, and will encourage the solution of problems through dialogue based on the principles of the rule of law.

(37) None of these commitments may be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or perform any action in contravention of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, other obligations under international law or the provisions of the Final Act, including the principle of territorial integrity of States.

(38) The participating States, in their efforts to protect and promote the rights of persons belonging to national minorities, will fully respect their undertakings under existing human rights conventions and other relevant international instruments and consider adhering to the relevant conventions, if they have not yet done so, including those providing for a right of complaint by individuals.

(39) The participating States will co-operate closely in the competent international organizations to which they belong, including the United Nations, and, as appropriate, the Council of Europe, bearing in mind their on-going work with respect to questions relating to national minorities.

(40) The participating States clearly and unequivocally condemn totalitarianism, racial and ethnic hatred, anti-semitism, xenophobia and discrimination against anyone as well as persecution on religious and ideological grounds. In this context, they also recognize the particular problems of Roma (gypsies).

They reaffirm their intention to intensify the effort to combat these phenomena in all their forms and therefore will:

(40.1) take effective measures, including the adoption, in conformity with their constitutional systems and international obligations, of such laws as may be necessary, to provide protection against any acts that constitute incitement to violence against persons or groups based on national, racial, ethnic or religious discrimination, hostility or hatred, including anti-semitism;

(40.2) commit themselves to take appropriate measures to protect persons or groups who may be subject to threats or acts of discrimination, hostility or violence as a result of their racial, ethnic, cultural, linguistic or religious identity, and to protect their property;

(40.3) take effective measures, in conformity with their constitutional systems, at the national, regional and local levels to promote understanding and tolerance, particularly in the fields of education, culture and information;

COUNCIL OF EUROPE
European Treaties
ETS No. 148

D. EUROPEAN CHARTER FOR REGIONAL OR MINORITY LANGUAGES

Strasbourg, 5.XI.1992

Preamble

The member States of the Council of Europe signatory hereto,

Considering that the aim of the Council of Europe is to achieve a greater unity between its members, particularly for the purpose of safeguarding and realising the ideals and principles which are their common heritage;

Considering that the protection of the historical regional or minority languages of Europe, some of which are in danger of eventual extinction, contributes to the maintenance and development of Europe's cultural wealth and traditions;

Considering that the right to use a regional or minority language in private and public life is an inalienable right conforming to the principles embodied in the United Nations International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and according to the spirit of the Council of Europe Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms;

Having regard to the work carried out within the CSCE and in particular to the Helsinki Final Act of 1975 and the document of the Copenhagen Meeting of 1990;

Stressing the value of interculturalism and multilingualism and considering that the protection and encouragement of regional or minority languages should not be to the detriment of the official languages and the need to learn them;

Realising that the protection and promotion of regional or minority languages in the different countries and regions of Europe represent an important contribution to the building of a Europe based on the principles of democracy and cultural diversity within the framework of national sovereignty and territorial integrity;

Taking into consideration the specific conditions and historical traditions in the different regions of the European States,

Have agreed as follows:

Part I

General provisions

Article 1 - Definitions

For the purposes of this Charter:

a "regional or minority languages" means languages that are:

- i traditionally used within a given territory of a State by nationals of that State who form a group numerically smaller than the rest of the State's population; and
- ii different from the official language(s) of that State;

it does not include either dialects of the official language(s) of the State or the languages of migrants;

b "territory in which the regional or minority language is used" means the geographical area in which the said language is the mode of expression of a number of people justifying the adoption of the various protective and promotional measures provided for in this Charter;

c "non-territorial languages" means languages used by nationals of the State which differ from the language or languages used by the rest of the State's population but which, although traditionally used within the territory of the State, cannot be identified with a particular area thereof.

Article 2 - Undertakings

1. Each Party undertakes to apply the provisions of Part II to all the regional or minority languages spoken within its territory and which comply with the definition in Article 1.
2. In respect of each language specified at the time of ratification, acceptance or approval, in accordance with Article 3, each Party undertakes to apply a minimum of thirty-five paragraphs or subparagraphs chosen from among the provisions of Part III of the Charter, including at least three chosen from each of the Articles 8 and 12 and one from each of the Articles 9, 10, 11 and 13.

Article 3 - Practical arrangements

1. Each Contracting State shall specify in its instrument of ratification, acceptance or approval, each regional or minority language, or official language which is less widely used on the whole or part of its territory, to which the paragraphs chosen in accordance with Article 2, paragraph 2, shall apply.
2. Any Party may, at any subsequent time, notify the Secretary General that it accepts the obligations arising out of the provisions of any other paragraph of the Charter not already specified in its instrument of ratification, acceptance or approval, or that it will apply paragraph 1 of the present article to other regional or minority languages, or to other official languages which are less widely used on the whole or part of its territory.
3. The undertakings referred to in the foregoing paragraph shall be deemed to form an integral part of the ratification, acceptance or approval and will have the same effect as from their date of notification.

Article 4 - Existing regimes of protection

1. Nothing in this Charter shall be construed as limiting or derogating from any of the rights guaranteed by the European Convention on Human Rights.
2. The provisions of this Charter shall not affect any more favourable provisions concerning the status of regional or minority languages, or the legal regime of persons belonging to minorities which may exist in a Party or are provided for by relevant bilateral or multilateral international agreements.

Article 5 - Existing obligations

Nothing in this Charter may be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or perform any action in contravention of the purposes of the Charter of the United Nations or other obligations under international law, including the principle of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of States.

Article 6 - Information

The Parties undertake to see to it that the authorities, organisations and persons concerned are informed of the rights and duties established by this Charter.

Part II

Objectives and principles pursued in accordance with Article 2, paragraph

1

Article 7 - Objectives and principles

1. In respect of regional or minority languages, within the territories in which such languages are used and according to the situation of each language, the Parties shall base their policies, legislation and practice on the following objectives and principles:
 - a the recognition of the regional or minority languages as an expression of cultural wealth;
 - b the respect of the geographical area of each regional or minority language in order to ensure that existing or new administrative divisions do not constitute an obstacle to the promotion of the regional or minority language in question;
 - c the need for resolute action to promote regional or minority languages in order to safeguard them;
 - d the facilitation and/or encouragement of the use of regional or minority languages, in speech and writing, in public and private life;
 - e the maintenance and development of links, in the fields covered by this Charter, between groups using a regional or minority language and other groups in the State employing a language used in identical or similar form, as well as the establishment of cultural relations with other groups in the State using different languages;
 - f the provision of appropriate forms and means for the teaching and study of regional or minority languages at all appropriate stages;
 - g the provision of facilities enabling non-speakers of a regional or minority language living in the area where it is used to learn it if they so desire;
 - h the promotion of study and research on regional or minority languages at universities or equivalent institutions;
 - i the promotion of appropriate types of transnational exchanges, in the fields covered by this Charter, for regional or minority languages used in identical or similar form in two or more States.

2. The Parties undertake to eliminate, if they have not yet done so, any unjustified distinction, exclusion, restriction or preference relating to the use of a regional or minority language and intended to discourage or endanger the maintenance or development of it. The adoption of special measures in favour of regional or minority languages aimed at promoting equality between the users of these languages and the rest of the population or which take due account of their specific conditions is not considered to be an act of discrimination against the users of more widely-used languages.
3. The Parties undertake to promote, by appropriate measures, mutual understanding between all the linguistic groups of the country and in particular the inclusion of respect, understanding and tolerance in relation to regional or minority languages among the objectives of education and training provided within their countries and encouragement of the mass media to pursue the same objective.
4. In determining their policy with regard to regional or minority languages, the Parties shall take into consideration the needs and wishes expressed by the groups which use such languages. They are encouraged to establish bodies, if necessary, for the purpose of advising the authorities on all matters pertaining to regional or minority languages.
5. The Parties undertake to apply, mutatis mutandis, the principles listed in paragraphs 1 to 4 above to non-territorial languages. However, as far as these languages are concerned, the nature and scope of the measures to be taken to give effect to this Charter shall be determined in a flexible manner, bearing in mind the needs and wishes, and respecting the traditions and characteristics, of the groups which use the languages concerned.

Part III

Measures to promote the use of regional or minority languages in public life in accordance with the undertakings entered into under Article 2, paragraph

2

Article 8 - Education

1. With regard to education, the Parties undertake, within the territory in which such languages are used, according to the situation of each of these languages, and without prejudice to the teaching of the official language(s) of the State:
 - a
 - i to make available pre-school education in the relevant regional or minority languages; or
 - ii to make available a substantial part of pre-school education in the relevant regional or minority languages; or
 - iii to apply one of the measures provided for under i and ii above at least to those pupils whose families so request and whose number is considered sufficient; or
 - iv if the public authorities have no direct competence in the field of pre-school education, to favour and/or encourage the application of the measures referred to under i to iii above;
 - b
 - i to make available primary education in the relevant regional or minority languages; or
 - ii to make available a substantial part of primary education in the relevant regional or minority languages; or
 - iii to provide, within primary education, for the teaching of the relevant regional or minority languages as an integral part of the curriculum; or
 - iv to apply one of the measures provided for under i to iii above at least to those pupils whose families so request and whose number is considered sufficient;
 - c
 - i to make available secondary education in the relevant regional or minority languages; or
 - ii to make available a substantial part of secondary education in the relevant regional or minority languages; or iii to provide, within secondary education, for the teaching of the relevant regional or minority languages as an integral part of the curriculum; or iv to apply one of the measures provided for under i to iii above at least to those pupils who, or where appropriate whose families, so wish in a number considered sufficient;

d

i to make available technical and vocational education in the relevant regional or minority languages; or ii to make available a substantial part of technical and vocational education in the relevant regional or minority languages; or iii to provide, within technical and vocational education, for the teaching of the relevant regional or minority languages as an integral part of the curriculum; or iv to apply one of the measures provided for under i to iii above at least to those pupils who, or where appropriate whose families, so wish in a number considered sufficient;

e

i to make available university and other higher education in regional or minority languages; or ii to provide facilities for the study of these languages as university and higher education subjects; or iii if, by reason of the role of the State in relation to higher education institutions, sub-paragraphs i and ii cannot be applied, to encourage and/or allow the provision of university or other forms of higher education in regional or minority languages or of facilities for the study of these languages as university or higher education subjects;

f

i to arrange for the provision of adult and continuing education courses which are taught mainly or wholly in the regional or minority languages; or ii to offer such languages as subjects of adult and continuing education; or iii if the public authorities have no direct competence in the field of adult education, to favour and/or encourage the offering of such languages as subjects of adult and continuing education;

g to make arrangements to ensure the teaching of the history and the culture which is reflected by the regional or minority language;

h to provide the basic and further training of the teachers required to implement those of paragraphs a to g accepted by the Party;

i to set up a supervisory body or bodies responsible for monitoring the measures taken and progress achieved in establishing or developing the teaching of regional or minority languages and for drawing up periodic reports of their findings, which will be made public.

2. With regard to education and in respect of territories other than those in which the regional or minority languages are traditionally used, the Parties undertake, if the number of users of a regional or minority language justifies it, to allow, encourage or provide teaching in or of the regional or minority language at all the appropriate stages of education.

Article 9 - Judicial authorities

1. The Parties undertake, in respect of those judicial districts in which the number of residents using the regional or minority languages justifies the measures specified below, according to the situation of each of these languages and on condition that the use of the facilities afforded by the present paragraph is not considered by the judge to hamper the proper administration of justice:

a in criminal proceedings:

i to provide that the courts, at the request of one of the parties, shall conduct the proceedings in the regional or minority languages; and/or ii to guarantee the accused the right to use his/her regional or minority language; and/or iii to provide that requests and evidence, whether written or oral, shall not be considered inadmissible solely because they are formulated in a regional or minority language; and/or iv to produce, on request, documents connected with legal proceedings in the relevant regional or minority language, if necessary by the use of interpreters and translations involving no extra expense for the persons concerned;

b in civil proceedings:

i to provide that the courts, at the request of one of the parties, shall conduct the proceedings in the regional or minority languages; and/or

ii to allow, whenever a litigant has to appear in person before a court, that he or she may use his or her regional or minority language without thereby incurring additional expense; and/or iii to allow documents and evidence to be produced in the regional or minority languages, if necessary by the use of interpreters and translations;

c in proceedings before courts concerning administrative matters:

i to provide that the courts, at the request of one of the parties, shall conduct the proceedings in the regional or minority languages; and/or

ii to allow, whenever a litigant has to appear in person before a court, that he or she may use his or her regional or minority language without thereby incurring additional expense; and/or iii to allow documents and evidence to be produced in the regional or minority languages, if necessary by the use of interpreters and translations;

d to take steps to ensure that the application of sub-paragraphs i and iii of paragraphs b and c above and any necessary use of interpreters and translations does not involve extra expense for the persons concerned.

2. The Parties undertake:

a not to deny the validity of legal documents drawn up within the State solely because they are drafted in a regional or minority language; or b not to deny the validity, as between the parties, of legal documents drawn up within the country solely because they are drafted in a regional or minority language, and to provide that they can be invoked against interested third parties who are not users of these languages on condition that the contents of the document are made known to them by the person(s) who invoke(s) it; or c not to deny the validity, as between the parties, of legal documents drawn up within the country solely because they are drafted in a regional or minority language.

3. The Parties undertake to make available in the regional or minority languages the most important national statutory texts and those relating particularly to users of these languages, unless they are otherwise provided.

Article 10 - Administrative authorities and public services

1. Within the administrative districts of the State in which the number of residents who are users of regional or minority languages justifies the measures specified below and according to the situation of each language, the Parties undertake, as far as this is reasonably possible:

a

i to ensure that the administrative authorities use the regional or minority languages; or ii to ensure that such of their officers as are in contact with the public use the regional or minority languages in their relations with persons applying to them in these languages; or iii to ensure that users of regional or minority languages may submit oral or written applications and receive a reply in these languages; or iv to ensure that users of regional or minority languages may submit oral or written applications in these languages; or v to ensure that users of regional or minority languages may validly submit a document in these languages;

b to make available widely used administrative texts and forms for the population in the regional or minority languages or in bilingual versions;

c to allow the administrative authorities to draft documents in a regional or minority language.

2. In respect of the local and regional authorities on whose territory the number of residents who are users of regional or minority languages is such as to justify the measures specified below, the Parties undertake to allow and/or encourage:

- a the use of regional or minority languages within the framework of the regional or local authority;
 - b the possibility for users of regional or minority languages to submit oral or written applications in these languages;
 - c the publication by regional authorities of their official documents also in the relevant regional or minority languages;
 - d the publication by local authorities of their official documents also in the relevant regional or minority languages;
 - e the use by regional authorities of regional or minority languages in debates in their assemblies, without excluding, however, the use of the official language(s) of the State;
 - f the use by local authorities of regional or minority languages in debates in their assemblies, without excluding, however, the use of the official language(s) of the State;
 - g the use or adoption, if necessary in conjunction with the name in the official language(s), of traditional and correct forms of place-names in regional or minority languages.
3. With regard to public services provided by the administrative authorities or other persons acting on their behalf, the Parties undertake, within the territory in which regional or minority languages are used, in accordance with the situation of each language and as far as this is reasonably possible:
- a to ensure that the regional or minority languages are used in the provision of the service; or
 - b to allow users of regional or minority languages to submit a request and receive a reply in these languages; or
 - c to allow users of regional or minority languages to submit a request in these languages.
4. With a view to putting into effect those provisions of paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 accepted by them, the Parties undertake to take one or more of the following measures:
- a translation or interpretation as may be required;
 - b recruitment and, where necessary, training of the officials and other public service employees required;
 - c compliance as far as possible with requests from public service employees having a knowledge of a regional or minority language to be appointed in the territory in which that language is used.
5. The Parties undertake to allow the use or adoption of family names in the regional or minority languages, at the request of those concerned.

Article 11 - Media

1. The Parties undertake, for the users of the regional or minority languages within the territories in which those languages are spoken, according to the situation of each language, to the extent that the public authorities, directly or indirectly, are competent, have power or play a role in this field, and respecting the principle of the independence and autonomy of the media:
- a to the extent that radio and television carry out a public service mission:
 - i to ensure the creation of at least one radio station and one television channel in the regional or minority languages; or

- ii to encourage and/or facilitate the creation of at least one radio station and one television channel in the regional or minority languages; or
 - iii to make adequate provision so that broadcasters offer programmes in the regional or minority languages;
 - b
 - i to encourage and/or facilitate the creation of at least one radio station in the regional or minority languages; or
 - ii to encourage and/or facilitate the broadcasting of radio programmes in the regional or minority languages on a regular basis;
 - c
 - i to encourage and/or facilitate the creation of at least one television channel in the regional or minority languages; or
 - ii to encourage and/or facilitate the broadcasting of television programmes in the regional or minority languages on a regular basis;
 - d to encourage and/or facilitate the production and distribution of audio and audiovisual works in the regional or minority languages;
 - e
 - i to encourage and/or facilitate the creation and/or maintenance of at least one newspaper in the regional or minority languages; or
 - ii to encourage and/or facilitate the publication of newspaper articles in the regional or minority languages on a regular basis;
 - f
 - i to cover the additional costs of those media which use regional or minority languages, wherever the law provides for financial assistance in general for the media; or
 - ii to apply existing measures for financial assistance also to audiovisual productions in the regional or minority languages;
 - g to support the training of journalists and other staff for media using regional or minority languages.
- 2. The Parties undertake to guarantee freedom of direct reception of radio and television broadcasts from neighbouring countries in a language used in identical or similar form to a regional or minority language, and not to oppose the retransmission of radio and television broadcasts from neighbouring countries in such a language. They further undertake to ensure that no restrictions will be placed on the freedom of expression and free circulation of information in the written press in a language used in identical or similar form to a regional or minority language. The exercise of the above-mentioned freedoms, since it carries with it duties and responsibilities, may be subject to such formalities, conditions, restrictions or penalties as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society, in the interests of national security, territorial integrity or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, for the protection of the reputation or rights of others, for preventing disclosure of information received in confidence, or for maintaining the authority and impartiality of the judiciary.
- 3. The Parties undertake to ensure that the interests of the users of regional or minority languages are represented or taken into account within such bodies as may be established in accordance with the law with responsibility for guaranteeing the freedom and pluralism of the media.

Article 12 - Cultural activities and facilities

1. With regard to cultural activities and facilities - especially libraries, video libraries, cultural centres, museums, archives, academies, theatres and cinemas, as well as literary work and film production, vernacular forms of cultural expression, festivals and the culture industries, including inter alia the use of new technologies - the Parties undertake, within the territory in which such languages are used and to the extent that the public authorities are competent, have power or play a role in this field:
 - a to encourage types of expression and initiative specific to regional or minority languages and foster the different means of access to works produced in these languages;
 - b to foster the different means of access in other languages to works produced in regional or minority languages by aiding and developing translation, dubbing, post-synchronisation and subtitling activities;

- c to foster access in regional or minority languages to works produced in other languages by aiding and developing translation, dubbing, post-synchronisation and subtitling activities;
 - d to ensure that the bodies responsible for organising or supporting cultural activities of various kinds make appropriate allowance for incorporating the knowledge and use of regional or minority languages and cultures in the undertakings which they initiate or for which they provide backing;
 - e to promote measures to ensure that the bodies responsible for organising or supporting cultural activities have at their disposal staff who have a full command of the regional or minority language concerned, as well as of the language(s) of the rest of the population;
 - f to encourage direct participation by representatives of the users of a given regional or minority language in providing facilities and planning cultural activities;
 - g to encourage and/or facilitate the creation of a body or bodies responsible for collecting, keeping a copy of and presenting or publishing works produced in the regional or minority languages;
 - h if necessary, to create and/or promote and finance translation and terminological research services, particularly with a view to maintaining and developing appropriate administrative, commercial, economic, social, technical or legal terminology in each regional or minority language.
2. In respect of territories other than those in which the regional or minority languages are traditionally used, the Parties undertake, if the number of users of a regional or minority language justifies it, to allow, encourage and/or provide appropriate cultural activities and facilities in accordance with the preceding paragraph.
 3. The Parties undertake to make appropriate provision, in pursuing their cultural policy abroad, for regional or minority languages and the cultures they reflect.

Article 13 - Economic and social life

1. With regard to economic and social activities, the Parties undertake, within the whole country:
 - a to eliminate from their legislation any provision prohibiting or limiting without justifiable reasons the use of regional or minority languages in documents relating to economic or social life, particularly contracts of employment, and in technical documents such as instructions for the use of products or installations;
 - b to prohibit the insertion in internal regulations of companies and private documents of any clauses excluding or restricting the use of regional or minority languages, at least between users of the same language;
 - c to oppose practices designed to discourage the use of regional or minority languages in connection with economic or social activities;
 - d to facilitate and/or encourage the use of regional or minority languages by means other than those specified in the above sub-paragraphs.
2. With regard to economic and social activities, the Parties undertake, in so far as the public authorities are competent, within the territory in which the regional or minority languages are used, and as far as this is reasonably possible:
 - a to include in their financial and banking regulations provisions which allow, by means of procedures compatible with commercial practice, the use of regional or minority languages in drawing up payment orders (cheques, drafts, etc.) or other financial documents, or, where appropriate, to ensure the implementation of such provisions;
 - b in the economic and social sectors directly under their control (public sector), to organise activities to promote the use of regional or minority languages;
 - c to ensure that social care facilities such as hospitals, retirement homes and hostels offer the possibility of receiving and treating in their own language persons using a regional or minority language who are in need of care on grounds of ill-health, old age or for other reasons;
 - d to ensure by appropriate means that safety instructions are also drawn up in regional or minority languages;
 - e to arrange for information provided by the competent public authorities concerning the rights of consumers to be made available in regional or minority languages.

Article 14 - Transfrontier exchanges

The Parties undertake:

a to apply existing bilateral and multilateral agreements which bind them with the States in which the same language is used in identical or similar form, or if necessary to seek to conclude such agreements, in such a way as to foster contacts between the users of the same language in the States concerned in the fields of culture, education, information, vocational training and permanent education;

b for the benefit of regional or minority languages, to facilitate and/or promote co-operation across borders, in particular between regional or local authorities in whose territory the same language is used in identical or similar form.

Part IV

Application of the Charter

Article 15 - Periodical reports

1. The Parties shall present periodically to the Secretary General of the Council of Europe, in a form to be prescribed by the Committee of Ministers, a report on their policy pursued in accordance with Part II of this Charter and on the measures taken in application of those provisions of Part III which they have accepted. The first report shall be presented within the year following the entry into force of the Charter with respect to the Party concerned, the other reports at three-yearly intervals after the first report.
2. The Parties shall make their reports public.

Article 16 - Examination of the reports

1. The reports presented to the Secretary General of the Council of Europe under Article 15 shall be examined by a committee of experts constituted in accordance with Article 17.
2. Bodies or associations legally established in a Party may draw the attention of the committee of experts to matters relating to the undertakings entered into by that Party under Part III of this Charter. After consulting the Party concerned, the committee of experts may take account of this information in the preparation of the report specified in paragraph 3 below. These bodies or associations can furthermore submit statements concerning the policy pursued by a Party in accordance with Part II.
3. On the basis of the reports specified in paragraph 1 and the information mentioned in paragraph 2, the committee of experts shall prepare a report for the Committee of Ministers. This report shall be accompanied by the comments which the Parties have been requested to make and may be made public by the Committee of Ministers.
4. The report specified in paragraph 3 shall contain in particular the proposals of the committee of experts to the Committee of Ministers for the preparation of such recommendations of the latter body to one or more of the Parties as may be required.
5. The Secretary General of the Council of Europe shall make a two-yearly detailed report to the Parliamentary Assembly on the application of the Charter.

Article 17 - Committee of experts

1. The committee of experts shall be composed of one member per Party, appointed by the Committee of Ministers from a list of individuals of the highest integrity and recognised competence in the matters dealt with in the Charter, who shall be nominated by the Party concerned.
2. Members of the committee shall be appointed for a period of six years and shall be eligible for reappointment. A member who is unable to complete a term of office shall be replaced in accordance with the procedure laid down in paragraph 1, and the replacing member shall complete his predecessor's term of office.
3. The committee of experts shall adopt rules of procedure. Its secretarial services shall be provided by the Secretary General of the Council of Europe.

Part V

Final provisions

Article 18

This Charter shall be open for signature by the member States of the Council of Europe. It is subject to ratification, acceptance or approval. Instruments of ratification, acceptance or approval shall be deposited with the Secretary General of the Council of Europe.

Article 19

1. This Charter shall enter into force on the first day of the month following the expiration of a period of three months after the date on which five member States of the Council of Europe have expressed their consent to be bound by the Charter in accordance with the provisions of Article 18.
2. In respect of any member State which subsequently expresses its consent to be bound by it, the Charter shall enter into force on the first day of the month following the expiration of a period of three months after the date of the deposit of the instrument of ratification, acceptance or approval.

Article 20

1. After the entry into force of this Charter, the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe may invite any State not a member of the Council of Europe to accede to this Charter.
2. In respect of any acceding State, the Charter shall enter into force on the first day of the month following the expiration of a period of three months after the date of deposit of the instrument of accession with the Secretary General of the Council of Europe.

Article 21

1. Any State may, at the time of signature or when depositing its instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession, make one or more reservations to paragraphs 2 to 5 of Article 7 of this Charter. No other reservation may be made.
2. Any Contracting State which has made a reservation under the preceding paragraph may wholly or partly withdraw it by means of a notification addressed to the Secretary General of the Council of Europe. The withdrawal shall take effect on the date of receipt of such notification by the Secretary General.

Article 22

1. Any Party may at any time denounce this Charter by means of a notification addressed to the Secretary General of the Council of Europe.
2. Such denunciation shall become effective on the first day of the month following the expiration of a period of six months after the date of receipt of the notification by the Secretary General.

Article 23

The Secretary General of the Council of Europe shall notify the member States of the Council and any State which has acceded to this Charter of:

- a any signature;
- b the deposit of any instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession;
- c any date of entry into force of this Charter in accordance with Articles 19 and 20;
- d any notification received in application of the provisions of Article 3, paragraph 2;
- e any other act, notification or communication relating to this Charter.

In witness whereof the undersigned, being duly authorised thereto, have signed this Charter.

Done at Strasbourg, this 5th day of November 1992, in English and French, both texts being equally authentic, in a single copy which shall be deposited in the archives of the Council of Europe. The Secretary General of the Council of Europe shall transmit certified copies to each member State of the Council of Europe and to any State invited to accede to this Charter.

E. Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious or Linguistic Minorities

Adopted by General Assembly resolution 47/135 of 18 December 1992

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming that one of the basic aims of the United Nations, as proclaimed in the Charter, is to promote and encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all, without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Reaffirming faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small,

Desiring to promote the realization of the principles contained in the Charter, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief, and the Convention on the Rights of the Child, as well as other relevant international instruments that have been adopted at the universal or regional level and those concluded between individual States Members of the United Nations,

Inspired by the provisions of article 27 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights concerning the rights of persons belonging to ethnic, religious or linguistic minorities,

Considering that the promotion and protection of the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities contribute to the political and social stability of States in which they live,

Emphasizing that the constant promotion and realization of the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities, as an integral part of the development of society as a whole and within a democratic framework based on the rule of law, would contribute to the strengthening of friendship and cooperation among peoples and States,

Considering that the United Nations has an important role to play regarding the protection of minorities,

Bearing in mind the work done so far within the United Nations system, in particular by the Commission on Human Rights, the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities and the bodies established pursuant to the International Covenants on Human Rights and other relevant international human rights instruments in promoting and protecting the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities,

Taking into account the important work which is done by intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations in protecting minorities and in promoting and protecting the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities,

Recognizing the need to ensure even more effective implementation of international human rights instruments with regard to the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities,

Proclaims this Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities:

Article 1

1. States shall protect the existence and the national or ethnic, cultural, religious and linguistic identity of minorities within their respective territories and shall encourage conditions for the promotion of that identity.
2. States shall adopt appropriate legislative and other measures to achieve those ends.

Article 2

1. Persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities (hereinafter referred to as persons belonging to minorities) have the right to enjoy their own culture, to profess and practise their own religion, and to use their own language, in private and in public, freely and without interference or any form of discrimination.
2. Persons belonging to minorities have the right to participate effectively in cultural, religious, social, economic and public life.
3. Persons belonging to minorities have the right to participate effectively in decisions on the national and, where appropriate, regional level concerning the minority to which they belong or the regions in which they live, in a manner not incompatible with national legislation.
4. Persons belonging to minorities have the right to establish and maintain their own associations.
5. Persons belonging to minorities have the right to establish and maintain, without any discrimination, free and peaceful contacts with other members of their group and with persons belonging to other minorities, as well as contacts across frontiers with citizens of other States to whom they are related by national or ethnic, religious or linguistic ties.

Article 3

1. Persons belonging to minorities may exercise their rights, including those set forth in the present Declaration, individually as well as in community with other members of their group, without any discrimination.
2. No disadvantage shall result for any person belonging to a minority as the consequence of the exercise or non-exercise of the rights set forth in the present Declaration.

Article 4

1. States shall take measures where required to ensure that persons belonging to minorities may exercise fully and effectively all their human rights and fundamental freedoms without any discrimination and in full equality before the law.

2. States shall take measures to create favourable conditions to enable persons belonging to minorities to express their characteristics and to develop their culture, language, religion, traditions and customs, except where specific practices are in violation of national law and contrary to international standards.

3. States should take appropriate measures so that, wherever possible, persons belonging to minorities may have adequate opportunities to learn their mother tongue or to have instruction in their mother tongue.

4. States should, where appropriate, take measures in the field of education, in order to encourage knowledge of the history, traditions, language and culture of the minorities existing within their territory. Persons belonging to minorities should have adequate opportunities to gain knowledge of the society as a whole.

5. States should consider appropriate measures so that persons belonging to minorities may participate fully in the economic progress and development in their country.

Article 5

1. National policies and programmes shall be planned and implemented with due regard for the legitimate interests of persons belonging to minorities.

2. Programmes of cooperation and assistance among States should be planned and implemented with due regard for the legitimate interests of persons belonging to minorities.

Article 6

States should cooperate on questions relating to persons belonging to minorities, inter alia, exchanging information and experiences, in order to promote mutual understanding and confidence.

Article 7

States should cooperate in order to promote respect for the rights set forth in the present Declaration.

Article 8

1. Nothing in the present Declaration shall prevent the fulfilment of international obligations of States in relation to persons belonging to minorities. In particular, States shall fulfil in good faith the obligations and commitments they have assumed under international treaties and agreements to which they are parties.

2. The exercise of the rights set forth in the present Declaration shall not prejudice the enjoyment by all persons of universally recognized human rights and fundamental freedoms.

3. Measures taken by States to ensure the effective enjoyment of the rights set forth in the present Declaration shall not prima facie be considered contrary to the principle of equality contained in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

4. Nothing in the present Declaration may be construed as permitting any activity contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations, including sovereign equality, territorial integrity and political independence of States.

Article 9

The specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system shall contribute to the full realization of the rights and principles set forth in the present Declaration, within their respective fields of competence.

COUNCIL OF EUROPE
European Treaties
ETS No. 157

F. FRAMEWORK CONVENTION FOR THE PROTECTION OF NATIONAL MINORITIES

Strasbourg, 1.II.1995

The member States of the Council of Europe and the other States, signatories to the present framework Convention,

Considering that the aim of the Council of Europe is to achieve greater unity between its members for the purpose of safeguarding and realising the ideals and principles which are their common heritage;

Considering that one of the methods by which that aim is to be pursued is the maintenance and further realisation of human rights and fundamental freedoms;

Wishing to follow-up the Declaration of the Heads of State and Government of the member States of the Council of Europe adopted in Vienna on 9 October 1993;

Being resolved to protect within their respective territories the existence of national minorities;

Considering that the upheavals of European history have shown that the protection of national minorities is essential to stability, democratic security and peace in this continent;

Considering that a pluralist and genuinely democratic society should not only respect the ethnic, cultural, linguistic and religious identity of each person belonging to a national minority, but also create appropriate conditions enabling them to express, preserve and develop this identity;

Considering that the creation of a climate of tolerance and dialogue is necessary to enable cultural diversity to be a source and a factor, not of division, but of enrichment for each society;

Considering that the realisation of a tolerant and prosperous Europe does not depend solely on co-operation between States but also requires transfrontier co-operation between local and regional authorities without prejudice to the constitution and territorial integrity of each State;

Having regard to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and the Protocols thereto;

Having regard to the commitments concerning the protection of national minorities in United Nations conventions and declarations and in the documents of the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe, particularly the Copenhagen Document of 29 June 1990;

Being resolved to define the principles to be respected and the obligations which flow from them, in order to ensure, in the member States and such other States as may become Parties to the present instrument, the effective protection of national minorities and of the rights and freedoms of persons belonging to those minorities, within the rule of law, respecting the territorial integrity and national sovereignty of states;

Being determined to implement the principles set out in this framework Convention through national legislation and appropriate governmental policies,

Have agreed as follows:

Section I

Article 1

The protection of national minorities and of the rights and freedoms of persons belonging to those minorities forms an integral part of the international protection of human rights, and as such falls within the scope of international co-operation.

Article 2

The provisions of this framework Convention shall be applied in good faith, in a spirit of understanding and tolerance and in conformity with the principles of good neighbourliness, friendly relations and co-operation between States.

Article 3

3. Every person belonging to a national minority shall have the right freely to choose to be treated or not to be treated as such and no disadvantage shall result from this choice or from the exercise of the rights which are connected to that choice.
4. Persons belonging to national minorities may exercise the rights and enjoy the freedoms flowing from the principles enshrined in the present framework Convention individually as well as in community with others.

Section II

Article 4

4. The Parties undertake to guarantee to persons belonging to national minorities the right of equality before the law and of equal protection of the law. In this respect, any discrimination based on belonging to a national minority shall be prohibited.
5. The Parties undertake to adopt, where necessary, adequate measures in order to promote, in all areas of economic, social, political and cultural life, full and effective equality between persons belonging to a national minority and those belonging to the majority. In this respect, they shall take due account of the specific conditions of the persons belonging to national minorities.
6. The measures adopted in accordance with paragraph 2 shall not be considered to be an act of discrimination.

Article 5

3. The Parties undertake to promote the conditions necessary for persons belonging to national minorities to maintain and develop their culture, and to preserve the essential elements of their identity, namely their religion, language, traditions and cultural heritage.
4. Without prejudice to measures taken in pursuance of their general integration policy, the Parties shall refrain from policies or practices aimed at assimilation of persons belonging to national minorities against their will and shall protect these persons from any action aimed at such assimilation.

Article 6

6. The Parties shall encourage a spirit of tolerance and intercultural dialogue and take effective measures to promote mutual respect and understanding and co-operation among all persons living on their territory, irrespective of those persons' ethnic, cultural, linguistic or religious identity, in particular in the fields of education, culture and the media.

7. The Parties undertake to take appropriate measures to protect persons who may be subject to threats or acts of discrimination, hostility or violence as a result of their ethnic, cultural, linguistic or religious identity.

Article 7

The Parties shall ensure respect for the right of every person belonging to a national minority to freedom of peaceful assembly, freedom of association, freedom of expression, and freedom of thought, conscience and religion.

Article 8

The Parties undertake to recognise that every person belonging to a national minority has the right to manifest his or her religion or belief and to establish religious institutions, organisations and associations.

Article 9

3. The Parties undertake to recognise that the right to freedom of expression of every person belonging to a national minority includes freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas in the minority language, without interference by public authorities and regardless of frontiers. The Parties shall ensure, within the framework of their legal systems, that persons belonging to a national minority are not discriminated against in their access to the media.
4. Paragraph 1 shall not prevent Parties from requiring the licensing, without discrimination and based on objective criteria, of sound radio and television broadcasting, or cinema enterprises.
5. The Parties shall not hinder the creation and the use of printed media by persons belonging to national minorities. In the legal framework of sound radio and television broadcasting, they shall ensure, as far as possible, and taking into account the provisions of paragraph 1, that persons belonging to national minorities are granted the possibility of creating and using their own media.
6. In the framework of their legal systems, the Parties shall adopt adequate measures in order to facilitate access to the media for persons belonging to national minorities and in order to promote tolerance and permit cultural pluralism.

Article 10

4. The Parties undertake to recognise that every person belonging to a national minority has the right to use freely and without interference his or her minority language, in private and in public, orally and in writing.
5. In areas inhabited by persons belonging to national minorities traditionally or in substantial numbers, if those persons so request and where such a request corresponds to a real need, the Parties shall endeavour to ensure, as far as possible, the conditions which would make it possible to use the minority language in relations between those persons and the administrative authorities.
6. The Parties undertake to guarantee the right of every person belonging to a national minority to be informed promptly, in a language which he or she understands, of the reasons for his or her arrest, and of the nature and cause of any accusation against him or her, and to defend himself or herself in this language, if necessary with the free assistance of an interpreter.

Article 11

6. The Parties undertake to recognise that every person belonging to a national minority has the right to use his or her surname (patronym) and first names in the minority language and the right to official recognition of them, according to modalities provided for in their legal system.
7. The Parties undertake to recognise that every person belonging to a national minority has the right to display in his or her minority language signs, inscriptions and other information of a private nature visible to the public.
8. In areas traditionally inhabited by substantial numbers of persons belonging to a national minority, the Parties shall endeavour, in the framework of their legal system, including, where appropriate, agreements with other States, and taking into account their specific conditions, to display traditional local names, street names and other topographical indications intended for the public also in the minority language when there is a sufficient demand for such indications.

Article 12

4. The Parties shall, where appropriate, take measures in the fields of education and research to foster knowledge of the culture, history, language and religion of their national minorities and of the majority.
5. In this context the Parties shall inter alia provide adequate opportunities for teacher training and access to textbooks, and facilitate contacts among students and teachers of different communities.
6. The Parties undertake to promote equal opportunities for access to education at all levels for persons belonging to national minorities.

Article 13

4. Within the framework of their education systems, the Parties shall recognise that persons belonging to a national minority have the right to set up and to manage their own private educational and training establishments.
5. The exercise of this right shall not entail any financial obligation for the Parties.

Article 14

3. The Parties undertake to recognise that every person belonging to a national minority has the right to learn his or her minority language.
4. In areas inhabited by persons belonging to national minorities traditionally or in substantial numbers, if there is sufficient demand, the Parties shall endeavour to ensure, as far as possible and within the framework of their education systems, that persons belonging to those minorities have adequate opportunities for being taught the minority language or for receiving instruction in this language.
5. Paragraph 2 of this article shall be implemented without prejudice to the learning of the official language or the teaching in this language.

Article 15

The Parties shall create the conditions necessary for the effective participation of persons belonging to national minorities in cultural, social and economic life and in public affairs, in particular those affecting them.

Article 16

The Parties shall refrain from measures which alter the proportions of the population in areas inhabited by persons belonging to national minorities and are aimed at restricting the rights and freedoms flowing from the principles enshrined in the present framework Convention.

Article 17

3. The Parties undertake not to interfere with the right of persons belonging to national minorities to establish and maintain free and peaceful contacts across frontiers with persons lawfully staying in other States, in particular those with whom they share an ethnic, cultural, linguistic or religious identity, or a common cultural heritage.
4. The Parties undertake not to interfere with the right of persons belonging to national minorities to participate in the activities of non-governmental organisations, both at the national and international levels.

Article 18

6. The Parties shall endeavour to conclude, where necessary, bilateral and multilateral agreements with other States, in particular neighbouring States, in order to ensure the protection of persons belonging to the national minorities concerned.
7. Where relevant, the Parties shall take measures to encourage transfrontier co-operation.

Article 19

The Parties undertake to respect and implement the principles enshrined in the present framework Convention making, where necessary, only those limitations, restrictions or derogations which are provided for in international legal instruments, in particular the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, in so far as they are relevant to the rights and freedoms flowing from the said principles.

Section IIIArticle 20

In the exercise of the rights and freedoms flowing from the principles enshrined in the present framework Convention, any person belonging to a national minority shall respect the national legislation and the rights of others, in particular those of persons belonging to the majority or to other national minorities.

Article 21

Nothing in the present framework Convention shall be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or perform any act contrary to the fundamental principles of international law and in particular of the sovereign equality, territorial integrity and political independence of States.

Article 22

Nothing in the present framework Convention shall be construed as limiting or derogating from any of the human rights and fundamental freedoms which may be ensured under the laws of any Contracting Party or under any other agreement to which it is a Party.

Article 23

The rights and freedoms flowing from the principles enshrined in the present framework Convention, in so far as they are the subject of a corresponding provision in the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms or in the Protocols thereto, shall be understood so as to conform to the latter provisions.

Section IVArticle 24

4. The Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe shall monitor the implementation of this framework Convention by the Contracting Parties.
5. The Parties which are not members of the Council of Europe shall participate in the implementation mechanism, according to modalities to be determined.

Article 25

3. Within a period of one year following the entry into force of this framework Convention in respect of a Contracting Party, the latter shall transmit to the Secretary General of the Council of Europe full information on the legislative and other measures taken to give effect to the principles set out in this framework Convention.
4. Thereafter, each Party shall transmit to the Secretary General on a periodical basis and whenever the Committee of Ministers so requests any further information of relevance to the implementation of this framework Convention.
5. The Secretary General shall forward to the Committee of Ministers the information transmitted under the terms of this Article.

Article 26

3. In evaluating the adequacy of the measures taken by the Parties to give effect to the principles set out in this framework Convention the Committee of Ministers shall be assisted by an advisory committee, the members of which shall have recognised expertise in the field of the protection of national minorities.
4. The composition of this advisory committee and its procedure shall be determined by the Committee of Ministers within a period of one year following the entry into force of this framework Convention.

Section VArticle 27

This framework Convention shall be open for signature by the member States of the Council of Europe. Up until the date when the Convention enters into force, it shall also be open for signature by any other State so invited by the Committee of Ministers. It is subject to ratification, acceptance or approval. Instruments of ratification, acceptance or approval shall be deposited with the Secretary General of the Council of Europe.

Article 28

3. This framework Convention shall enter into force on the first day of the month following the expiration of a period of three months after the date on which twelve member States of the Council of Europe have expressed their consent to be bound by the Convention in accordance with the provisions of Article 27.
4. In respect of any member State which subsequently expresses its consent to be bound by it, the framework Convention shall enter into force on the first day of the month following the expiration of a period of three months after the date of the deposit of the instrument of ratification, acceptance or approval.

Article 29

3. After the entry into force of this framework Convention and after consulting the Contracting States, the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe may invite to accede to the Convention, by a decision taken by the majority provided for in Article 20.d of the Statute of the Council of Europe, any non-member State of the Council of Europe which, invited to sign in accordance with the provisions of Article 27, has not yet done so, and any other non-member State.
4. In respect of any acceding State, the framework Convention shall enter into force on the first day of the month following the expiration of a period of three months after the date of the deposit of the instrument of accession with the Secretary General of the Council of Europe.

Article 30

1. Any State may at the time of signature or when depositing its instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession, specify the territory or territories for whose international relations it is responsible to which this framework Convention shall apply.
2. Any State may at any later date, by a declaration addressed to the Secretary General of the Council of Europe, extend the application of this framework Convention to any other territory specified in the declaration. In respect of such territory the framework Convention shall enter into force on the first day of the month following the expiration of a period of three months after the date of receipt of such declaration by the Secretary General.
3. Any declaration made under the two preceding paragraphs may, in respect of any territory specified in such declaration, be withdrawn by a notification addressed to the Secretary General. The withdrawal shall become effective on the first day of the month following the expiration of a period of three months after the date of receipt of such notification by the Secretary General.

Article 31

1. Any Party may at any time denounce this framework Convention by means of a notification addressed to the Secretary General of the Council of Europe.
2. Such denunciation shall become effective on the first day of the month following the expiration of a period of six months after the date of receipt of the notification by the Secretary General.

Article 32

The Secretary General of the Council of Europe shall notify the member States of the Council, other signatory States and any State which has acceded to this framework Convention, of:

a any signature;

b the deposit of any instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession;

c any date of entry into force of this framework Convention in accordance with Articles 28, 29 and 30;

d any other act, notification or communication relating to this framework Convention.

In witness whereof the undersigned, being duly authorised thereto, have signed this framework Convention.

Done at Strasbourg, this 1st day of February 1995, in English and French, both texts being equally authentic, in a single copy which shall be deposited in the archives of the Council of Europe. The Secretary General of the Council of Europe shall transmit certified copies to each member State of the Council of Europe and to any State invited to sign or accede to this framework Convention.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 10 mai 2000CHARTE 4299/00*CONTRIB 171*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-après des propositions d'amendements aux clauses horizontales (document CHARTE 4235/00 CONVENT 27), présentées par M. Jean-Luc DEHAENE, représentant personnel du Gouvernement belge.¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langues française et néerlandaise.

Les dispositions horizontales

Propositions d'amendements :

Article H.2 (numérotation CONVENT 27). Limitation des droits garantis

Paragraphe 2. Toute limitation aux droits et libertés garantis par la présente Charte doit être prévue par le législateur. Elle doit respecter le contenu essentiel desdits droits et libertés et rester, dans le respect du principe de proportionnalité, dans les limites nécessaires à la protection d'intérêts légitimes dans une société démocratique. ~~Les limitations prévues par la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme sont applicables à ceux des droits et libertés contenus dans la présente Charte qui sont également garantis par ladite Convention.~~

Le premier paragraphe de cet article énumère les articles de la Charte qui ne peuvent pas faire l'objet de limitations. Les articles qui ne figurent pas dans ce premier paragraphe peuvent donc par contre faire l'objet de limitations. Pour définir la nature de ces limitations trois options nous sont offertes : (1) reprendre les limitations prévues dans la CEDH, (2) définir pour la Charte des limitations spécifiques inspirées de la CEDH ou encore (3) laisser au législateur le soin de fixer ces limitations. Dans le projet de charte à l'examen, ces trois options ont été combinées : (1) l'article H.2., paragraphe 2, dernier alinéa se réfère aux limitations prévues dans la CEDH, (2) les limitations stipulées dans certains articles sont inspirées de la CEDH (voir notamment les articles 10 (nullum crimen sine lege – Pas de peine sans loi) et 16 (Droit de propriété), (3) l'article H.2, paragraphe 2, premier alinéa offre au législateur la possibilité d'introduire des limitations.

L'amendement proposé, à savoir la suppression du dernier alinéa du paragraphe deux de l'article H.2, a pour objet de rationaliser cet écheciveau de limitations. La raison principale de cet aménagement, c'est que la suppression de cet alinéa, permet de mettre en place au sein de l'Union un niveau de protection des droits fondamentaux supérieur à celui de la CEDH (puisque nous ne reprenons pas automatiquement toutes les limitations aux droits et libertés stipulées dans le texte de la CEDH). Ceci offre au législateur européen la possibilité d'introduire ses propres limitations aux droits fondamentaux. Il va de soi que, dans ce contexte, le législateur ne pourra jamais introduire un niveau de protection de ces droits qui soit inférieur à celui de la CEDH (l'article H.4 en est la garantie). Ainsi, la CEDH restreint la compétence du législateur en matière d'introduction de limitations aux droits fondamentaux en stipulant, par exemple, que les restrictions, prévues par la loi « constituent des mesures nécessaires, dans une société démocratique, à la sécurité publique, à la protection de l'ordre, de la santé ou de la morale publique, ou à la protection des droits et libertés d'autrui » (article 9, §2 CEDH qui traite de la liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion). Grâce à l'article H.4, les restrictions imposées au législateur par la CEDH constituent en même temps le plafond des limitations que le législateur européen peut appliquer aux droits fondamentaux.

Il existe toutefois un droit qui est à ce point fondamental que toute possibilité de limitation par la loi doit être exclue, à savoir le droit à la vie (Charte, article 2). Cet article fait donc partie des articles visés au paragraphe premier de l'article H.2. La seule manière dont ce droit pourrait malgré tout être limité serait une restriction inscrite dans la Charte elle-même. Etant donné que dans la CEDH ce droit est assorti de certaines restrictions (voir article 2, paragraphe 2, CEDH), il y a lieu, par conséquent, de reprendre ces restrictions dans la Charte.

Article 2 : (le droit à la vie)

Paragraphe 3 : La mort n'est pas considérée comme infligée en violation du présent article dans les cas où elle résulterait d'un recours à la force rendu absolument nécessaire :

- (a) pour assurer la défense de toute personne contre la violence illégale ;
- (b) pour effectuer une arrestation régulière ou pour empêcher l'évasion d'une personne régulièrement détenue ;
- (c) pour réprimer, conformément à la loi, une émeute ou une insurrection.

Article H.3. Relation entre la Charte et les Traités de l'Union européenne.

Les droits garantis par les article (...) s'exercent dans les conditions et les limites définies par le Traité sur l'Union européenne et les Traités instituant les Communautés européennes.

Cet article a pour objet de soumettre les droits et les libertés inscrits dans la Charte qui coïncident avec des droits et des libertés inscrits dans le droit de l'Union aux mêmes conditions et aux mêmes restrictions que ces derniers. L'ajout est justifié par le fait que la portée de certains droits et libertés inscrits dans la Charte sont susceptibles d'avoir des effets sur d'autres dispositions que celles du droit de l'Union (par exemple, le Traité Euratom ou les dispositions relatives à la politique étrangère et de sécurité commune ou dans le cadre de la coopération policière et judiciaire en matière pénale).

Article H.5. Interdiction de l'abus de droit

« Aucune des dispositions de la présente Charte ne peut être interprétée comme impliquant un droit quelconque de se livrer à une activité ou d'accomplir un acte visant à la destruction des droits et libertés reconnus dans la présente Charte ou à des limitations plus amples que celles prévues à ladite Charte.

Cet ajout, inspiré du dernier alinéa de l'article 17 CEDH est nécessaire pour introduire dans le texte une notion de gradation. L'annihilation de certains droits et libertés n'est en effet qu'une variante extrême (et rare) de certaines limitations injustifiées de ces libertés et droits.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 12 May 2000
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4303/00*CONVENT 29*NOTE FROM THE PRAESIDIUM

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

On 12 May 2000 you received the document on civil and political rights (CHARTE 4284/00 CONVENT 28; REV 1 for the French version). This document is open to amendment, for which the deadline is 23 May.

To make it easier to reproduce and translate your amendments, it would be helpful if you would use the attached model, and send them by e-mail to:

Margit.Huy@consilium.eu.int.

Amendments should be to the Articles and not to the statement of reasons, which will be adapted according to the final wording adopted by the Convention.

The sequence in which the Articles are presented is provisional and will have to be adapted later.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Proposed amendment to Article:

Submitted by:

Proposed text:

Reasons:

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 17 May 2000CHARTE 4308/00*CONTRIB 175*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a draft preamble, submitted by Mr. Stefano RODOTÀ, personal representative of the Italian Government, Mr. Andrea MANZELLA, Member of the Italian Parliament and Mrs. Elena PACIOTTI, Member of the European Parliament. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English and Italian languages.

THE EUROPEAN UNION

- considering that the safeguard of fundamental rights is one of its founding principles and the essential premise of its legitimacy;
- taking account of the need to enshrine, in a form which is visible, readable and accessible for all citizens, the fundamental rights informing its nature and actions, in accordance with the common constitutional traditions of its member States, since such rights constitute the general principles of European Community law;
- acknowledging the need to adopt autonomously a Charter of Fundamental Rights in conformity with the development of the Union and its identity and in logical and consistent continuity with the legal and moral framework established by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and the Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 1950)
- aware that the fundamental rights and liberties of people are an essential prerequisite in order that women and men look at its actions with confidence;
- recalling that Europe witnessed dramatic mishaps and divisions whenever the respect for rights was neglected and the dignity of the human beings was violated;
- aware of the need to combine the rich tradition of the past with the opportunities of the modern times and to create the conditions for stronger common action and the acknowledgement of the several traditions present in Europe;
- recognising that the full respect for human dignity; equality and the rejection of any discrimination; solidarity amongst individuals, generations and peoples; access to and control of the new opportunities made available by the scientific and technological progress; peaceful coexistence and the acceptance of diversity are founding principles and values;
- approving the draft Charter submitted by the Convention composed of the delegates of the Heads of State or Government, members of the European Parliament and the national Parliaments, and the representative of the European Commission;

adopts the following

CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Stefano Rodotà
Andrea Manzella
Elena Paciotti

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 17 May 2000CHARTE 4309/00*CONTRIB 176*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution by Mr. Frits KORTHALS ALTES, personal representative of the Government of the Netherlands. ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in French, English, Dutch and German languages.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION (contribution by Frits Korthals Altes, representative of the Netherlands Government in the Convention for the drawing up of a draft Charter of fundamental rights of the European Union)

1. I endorse the effort being made to establish a concise wording for the fundamental rights so that citizens and other residents of the European Union find them comprehensible and easy to read. However, I have two objections to proposals discussed so far.
Deviating from the wording of a fundamental rights also contained in the ECHR risks producing a difference in interpretation between the ECHR and the EU Charter. There is no objection if such deviation aims to expand that fundamental right: in my opinion, the European Union has every entitlement to expand a fundamental right in such a way as to make protection within the European Union stronger than that guaranteed by the ECHR. On the other hand, the EU Charter must never restrict a fundamental right already guaranteed by the ECHR or word it in more limited terms than the ECHR does. However, in none of the discussions of fundamental rights conducted up to now in the framework of the draft Charter has any reference been made to deliberate expansion of the fundamental rights guaranteed under the ECHR.
2. In specific cases, the ECHR authorises States to infringe a fundamental right. It also lays down the generally strict conditions under which such infringements may take place (cf. Article 5 of the ECHR). By not including an article authorising infringement and laying down the conditions under which a fundamental right may be infringed, the EU Charter risks diverging even further from the ECHR.

Discussions of the horizontal articles have already shown how very difficult if not impossible it is to formulate them in such a way that they meet three - in my view, essential - requirements, i.e.

1. That the fundamental right guaranteed in the draft charter embodies no less than the same guarantee as that contained in the ECHR, even if it is formulated differently;
2. That since the regulatory bodies of the EC/EU share the same status as national legislatures, they are authorised to restrict a fundamental right, provided the ECHR authorises national legislatures to introduce such restrictions (cf article H2, paragraph 2 of CONVENT 27, CHARTE 4235/00 of 18 April 2000);
3. That in order to introduce such restrictions, the same conditions apply as those specified in the ECHR.

If these requirements are not met, the future EU Charter will diverge from the ECHR. For European citizens there will be two divergent regimes in the field of fundamental rights; the ECHR in relation to the state of residence, and the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union in relation to the institutions and bodies of the Union and to the state of residence when it applies to community or European Union law.

On a number of occasions, the view has been expressed, by, for instance the president of the group of experts, that simply to copy the relevant articles of the ECHR would make the text too long, making it less appealing to the citizens. I have therefore proposed inserting a reference to the relevant ECHR article. The citizen reading the article will know immediately that there are restrictions. This makes matters clearer. Otherwise, the reader will only discover at the end, in the horizontal articles, that the fundamental rights are not as far-reaching as he may have thought on first reading. Ms May-Weggen has also warned of the risk of the Charter giving with one hand and taking with the other. This is not likely to boost citizens' confidence in it.

I therefore explicitly urge referring article by article to the ECHR (and, where applicable, to the ESC, the relevant ILO treaty or EU document). Only when it is the express intention that the Charter grants new or more generous rights than ECHR, ESC or an ILO treaty, should no reference be made, since this is a new right.

An alternative to this method of reference is the proposal put forward by Lord Goldsmith to mention per article in a Part B (or binding explanatory note) that the right contained in the Charter is the same right as that referred to in article.... of the ECHR. and that the competent authority (to be defined) may introduce the same restrictions as referred to in said article, provided it does so under the same conditions.

EXAMPLES:

Re 1.

§ 1 Human dignity

Article 1

- 1.1. The right to human dignity shall be inseparably linked to the human person.
- 1.2. The right to human dignity shall be inviolable and must be respected under all circumstances.

Article 2

- 2.1. No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.
- 2.2. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
- 2.3. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour, except in the cases provided for in Article 4.3 of the ECHR.

§ 2 Right to lifeArticle 3

- 3.1. Everyone has the right to life.
- 3.2. Everyone has the right to the respect of his physical and mental integrity.
- 3.3. The death penalty may not be enforced other than in the event of war, subject to due regard for Article 2 of Protocol No 6 to the ECHR.

Article 4

- 4.1 An intervention in the health field may only be carried out after the person concerned has given free and informed consent to it.
- 4.2 Th cloning of human beings is forbidden.

§ 3 Liberty and securityArticle 5

- 5.1. Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person
- 5.2 No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in the cases referred to in Article 5.1 of the ECHR and with due regard for Articles 5.2 – 5.5 of the ECHR, Article 1 of protocol No 4 and Articles 2, 3 and 4 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR.

§ 4 Right to a fair trialArticle 6

In the determination of his civil and administrative rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.

Article 7

- 7.1 Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to request an effective remedy from a court or tribunal specified by law.¹
- 7.2 Everyone charged with an offence has the following rights in accordance with Articles 6.2 and 6.3 of the ECHR:
- (a) to be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law;
 - (b) to be informed promptly, in a language which he understands and in detail, of the accusation against him, and to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence;
 - (c) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or, if he has not sufficient means to pay for legal assistance, to be given it free, and to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language of the proceedings;
 - (d) to have access to the dossier; to examine witnesses on his behalf and to produce and examine or have examined witnesses against him under the same conditions as witnesses on his behalf.

Article 8

- 8.1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence in law at the time when it was committed. No heavier penalty than the one applicable at the time of committing the offence shall be imposed. If, subsequent to the commission of the offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
- 8.2 The previous paragraph shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of law recognised by civilised nations.

Article 9

With due regard for restrictions and exceptions referred to in Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR, no one shall be tried or convicted for offences for which they have already been finally acquitted or convicted.

¹ This wording deviates from that of Article 13 of the ECHR to favour residents as Article 13 refers to a 'national authority' rather than 'a court or tribunal specified by law'. There should therefore be no reference to Article 13 of the ECHR.

§ 5 Freedom of the individual

Article 10

- 10.1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion and belief; this right shall include freedom to change his religion of belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion of belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.
- 10.2 The right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion and belief shall be subject only to such limitations as are referred to in Article 9.2 of the ECHR.

Article 11

- 11.1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression; this right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and images without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.
- 11.2 The right to freedom of expression shall be subject only to such limitations as are referred to in Article 10 of the ECHR.

Article 12

There shall be freedom of art, science and research.

§ 6 Respect for private and family life

Article 13

- 13.1. Everyone has the right to protection of their identity.
- 13.2. Respect for the privacy, reputation, home and confidentiality of correspondence, irrespective of the medium, shall be guaranteed within the limits set by Article 8.2 of the ECHR.

Article 14

- 14.1 Everyone has the right to marry and to found a family, according to the national laws governing the exercise of the right.
- 14.2 Every minor has the right to protection by the public authorities.
- 14.3 Respect for family life shall be guaranteed within the limits set by Article 8.2 of the ECHR.

Article 15

- 15.1. Every child has the right to compulsory free primary education within the age limits set by national legislation and to secondary education in accordance with his capabilities.
- 15.2 There shall be freedom of choice of educational establishment.
- 15.3 The right of parents or legal guardians to secure for their children an education which conforms to their religious or philosophical beliefs shall be respected.

Etc.

The Hague, 8 May 2000
Frits KORTHALS ALTES

ENTWURF DER CHARTA DER GRUNDRECHTE DER EUROPÄISCHEN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brüssel, den 17 Mai 2000CHARTE 4310/00*CONTRIB 177*ÜBERMITTLUNGSVERMERK

Betr.: Entwurf der Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union

Finden Sie bitte nachstehend Anmerkungen der Arbeitsgruppe der deutschen Länder zu den Vorschlägen des Präsidiums CHARTE 4227/00 CONVENT 26 und CHARTE 4235/00 CONVENT 27 sowie Diskussionsvorschläge der deutschen Länder für die Sitzung des Konvents am 11./12. Mai 2000, vorgelegt von Herrn Jürgen GNAUCK, Mitglied des Bundestages.¹

¹ Dieser Text wurde nur in deutscher Sprache übermittelt.

Thüringer Staatskanzlei • Postfach 997 • 99021 Erfurt

Minister für Bundes- und
Europaangelegenheiten und
Chef der Staatskanzlei

An den
Vorsitzenden des Konvents
zur Ausarbeitung des Entwurfs
einer Charta der Grundrechte der EU
Herrn Bundespräsidenten a.D.
Prof. Dr. Roman Herzog
Prinzregentenstraße 89

81675 München

Vorab per Fax (089-470 27 168)!

An das
Sekretariat des Konvents
Rue de la Loi/Wetstraat 175

B-1048 Brüssel

Vorab per Fax (0032-2-285 78 37)!

Per E-mail (fundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int)!

Geschäftszeichen:	Ihr Zeichen, Ihre Nachricht vom	Telefon	Datum
33/KI-03145
F:\encours\jacque\Charte
Archives\DE\04310.d0

Anmerkungen der Arbeitsgruppe der deutschen Länder zu den Vorschlägen des Präsidiums
CHARTE 4227/00 CONVENT 26 und CHARTE 4235/00 CONVENT 27 sowie
Diskussionsvorschläge der deutschen Länder für die Sitzung des Konvents am
11./12. Mai 2000

Sehr geehrter Herr Vorsitzender,

der Konvent hat in seinen Sitzungen am 27./28. April und 2./3. Mai 2000 über die Vorschläge des Präsidiums zu den sozialen Rechten im Dokument CONVENT 26 und zu den horizontalen Bestimmungen im Dokument CONVENT 27 beraten. In der übernächsten Sitzung am 22./23. Mai 2000 wird der Konvent diese Bestimmungen in einem zweiten Durchgang behandeln. Die deutschen Länder haben sich im Rahmen ihrer Abstimmungsgespräche ein erstes Meinungsbild zu den Vorschlägen in den Dokumenten CONVENT 26 und CONVENT 27 verschafft. Ich erlaube mir, Ihnen diese Einschätzung zu übermitteln. Darüber hinaus wird die Sitzung am 11./12. Mai 2000 dazu dienen, offene Punkte wie die Präambel und den Chartaaufbau anzusprechen und Desiderate einzubringen. Die Arbeitsgruppe der deutschen Länder hat auch hierzu Diskussionsvorschläge erarbeitet, die ich Ihnen hiermit ebenfalls übersende.

Mit freundlichen Grüßen

Jürgen Gnauck
Minister

Thüringer Staatskanzlei
Referat 33/Bo, Fie

Erfurt, den 26.09.2013

Entwurf einer Charta der Grundrechte der Europäischen Union
Anmerkungen der Arbeitsgruppe der deutschen Länder zu den Vorschlägen des Präsidiums in den Dokumenten CONVENT 26 vom 17. April 2000 und CONVENT 27 vom 18. April 2000 sowie Diskussionsvorschläge für die Sitzung des Konvents am 11./12. Mai 2000

A. Zu Dokument CONVENT 26

Artikel XVI. – Das Recht älterer Menschen auf sozialen Schutz

Die deutschen Länder treten für einen Verzicht auf diese Bestimmung ein. Gegen den Regelungsvorschlag bestehen erhebliche Bedenken: Ein konkretes Arbeitnehmergrundrecht auf eine einzelne, bestimmte Form der sozialen Sicherung widerspricht der Funktion von Grundrechten. Die Absicherung älterer Menschen sollte dem Sekundärrecht vorbehalten bleiben, um eine dynamische Entwicklung zu ermöglichen und um eine Überfrachtung der Charta zu verhindern. Weiter ist zu berücksichtigen, dass nicht alle Vertragsparteien der Europäischen Sozialcharta an Artikel 23 dieser Sozialcharta gebunden sind, die dem Artikelvorschlag zu Grunde liegt. Schließlich ergeben sich die Regelungen in Abs. 2 bereits aus den Bestimmungen zur Sozialhilfe (Artikel XIV) bzw. aus den Bestimmungen zur Menschenwürde und sind daher gleichfalls überflüssig. In keinem Fall darf ein derartiges Grundrecht, das weit über die Sicherung des Existenzminimums hinaus ginge, einen einklagbaren Leistungsanspruch gegen den Staat begründen. Selbst aus der als Vorbild dienenden Bestimmung der Sozialcharta ergibt sich ein solcher Leistungsanspruch nicht, da er die Mitgliedstaaten nur verpflichtet, "geeignete Maßnahmen zu ergreifen oder zu fördern". Klarstellend ist anzumerken, dass jedenfalls ein derartiges Recht älterer Menschen auf sozialen Schutz aufenthaltsbeendigende Maßnahmen gegenüber Drittstaatsangehörigen nicht beeinträchtigen darf.

Zu Artikel XVII. – Das Recht Behinderter auf berufliche und soziale Eingliederung

Das hinter dem Formulierungsvorschlag stehende Ziel, für Behinderte gleichwertige Lebens- und Arbeitsbedingungen zu schaffen, wird von den deutschen Ländern grundsätzlich unterstützt und befürwortet. Gleichwohl erscheint die Bestimmung entbehrlich. Das Verbot der Nichtdiskriminierung von Behinderten ist bereits ausdrücklicher Regelungsgegenstand des allgemeinen Gleichbehandlungsgebotes gem. Artikel XIX. Abs. 1 Dokument CONVENT 8. Jedenfalls erscheint die Formulierung "konkrete ergänzende Maßnahmen, die ihre soziale und berufliche Eingliederung fördern", in ihrem Umfang zu unbestimmt. Die Maßnahmen, die die Grundrechtsträger auf Grund dieser Vorschrift möglicherweise fordern könnten, sind in keiner Weise absehbar. Im Übrigen birgt der Vorschlag die Gefahr einer kompetenzerweiternden Wirkung über die in Artikel 137 Abs. 1 vierter Spiegelstrich EGV und Artikel 13 EGV geregelten Kompetenzen hinaus.

Zu Artikel XVIII. – Das Recht der Wanderarbeitnehmer auf Gleichbehandlung

Die deutschen Länder halten es für bedenklich, dass hier, abweichend von den bisherigen Vorschlägen und mit einer irreführenden Überschrift („Wanderarbeitnehmer“), ein eigenes Grundrecht für aufenthaltsberechtigte Drittstaatsangehörige geschaffen werden soll. Weiter ist unklar, wie der Begriff Arbeitsbedingungen auszulegen ist. Sollten darunter auch Sozialschutzbestimmungen zu verstehen sein, so besteht die Gefahr, dass Wanderarbeitnehmer aus Drittstaaten ggf. zusätzliche Leistungsansprüche erwerben würden. Dies würde zu weiteren Kosten für die nationalen Sicherungssysteme führen.

Zwischenergebnis zu den bisher vorgeschlagenen Wirtschafts- und Sozialrechten.

Entsprechend den bisher vorgelegten Anmerkungen stehen die deutschen Länder den vorgeschlagenen sozialen Rechten überwiegend ablehnend gegenüber. Sie könnten allerdings dem Gedanken näher treten, den Grundsatz der Solidarität in der zukünftigen Präambel zu verankern. Damit würde eine zusätzliche Werteentscheidung getroffen, die allen Mitgliedstaaten und den deutschen Ländern gemein ist. Darüber unterstützen die Länder den von Prof. Dr. Roman Herzog angedeuteten Kompromissvorschlag, nur solche soziale Rechte in die Charta aufzunehmen, die eng mit der Würde des Menschen verbunden sind. Um der gesamten Charta zum Erfolg zu verhelfen, ist hier allerdings ein strenger Maßstab anzulegen.

B. Zu Dokument CONVENT 27

Zu Artikel H.1 – Anwendungsbereich

Gem. Artikel H.1 Abs. 1 soll die Charta auf die Mitgliedstaaten ausschließlich bei der Anwendung des Gemeinschaftsrechts Anwendung finden. Es ist mit Blick auf die Bedeutung der Verfassungsgerichte der Mitgliedstaaten eingehend zu prüfen, wie weit die Bindungswirkung bei der „Anwendung des Gemeinschaftsrechts“ („implementing Community law“; „la mise en oeuvre du droit communautaire“) geht. In diesem Zusammenhang stellen sich zahlreiche Fragen, etwa inwieweit die Umsetzung von Richtlinien in das nationale Recht hiervon erfasst ist? Weiter ist die Bindungswirkung insbes. in der „Dritten Säule“ der EU fraglich (etwa bei der Umsetzung und Anwendung von Rahmenbeschlüssen nach Artikel 34 Abs. 2 Buchstabe b) EUV und von Übereinkommen nach Artikel 34 Abs. 2 Buchstabe d) EUV.

In Abs. 2 sollte die Formulierung dahingehend abgeändert werden, dass er lautet: „Gemeinschaft oder (statt : „und für“) die Union“.

Zu Artikel H.2 – Einschränkung der gewährleisteten Rechte

Artikel H.2 Abs. 1 dürfte entbehrlich sein. Schließlich wären hier wohl nur die Menschenwürde und das Verbot der Todesstrafe oder der Folter und Sklaverei aufzunehmen, aus deren Formulierung bereits ihre absolute Geltung hervor geht.

In Artikel H.2 Abs. 2 Satz 1 ist die Rede vom „Gesetzgeber“. Hier ist unbedingt zu klären, wer damit gemeint ist.

Zu Artikel H.3

Das Abstellen auf die „Ausübung“ der Grundrechte erscheint zumindest bei Abwehrrechten als zu eng.

Zu Artikel H.4 – Schutzniveau

Derzeit sind hierzu keine Anmerkungen veranlasst.

Zu Artikel H.5 – Verbot des Missbrauchs der Rechte

Da das Missbrauchsverbot wohl allen Rechtsordnungen bekannt ist, könnte man evtl. auf Artikel H.5 verzichten.

C. Diskussionsvorschläge

Im Hinblick auf die Sitzung des Konventes am 11. und 12. Mai 2000 unterbreiten die deutschen Länder folgende Diskussionsvorschläge:

1. Präambel

Es wird angeregt, dass die Eingangsformel der Präambel die christlichen und humanistischen Grundlagen Europas deutlich macht. Denkbar wäre etwa, an die Einleitung der Verfassung der Republik Polen vom 2. April 1997 anzuknüpfen, die diejenigen anspricht, die an Gott glauben, als auch diejenigen, die diesen Glauben nicht teilen, sondern die universellen Werte aus anderen Quellen ableiten.

Wie bereits erwähnt, wäre ein Hinweis auf den Grundsatz der Solidarität in der Präambel einer Überfrachtung der Charta mit zum großen Teil nicht justiziablen, zu detaillierten und kompetenzerweiternden Sozialrechten vorzuziehen.

Darüber hinaus sollte der Grundsatz der Subsidiarität in der Präambel verankert werden. Damit würde man zugleich der kommunalen und regionalen Identität der einzelnen Bürgerinnen und Bürger gerecht.

2. Aufbau der Charta

Die deutschen Länder halten den vom Präsidium bereits vorgeschlagenen – vorläufigen – Aufbau für zweckmäßig. Danach könnten der Präambel die fundamentalen Rechte des Menschen, die Freiheits- und Gleichheitsrechte, die wirtschaftlichen und sozialen Rechte sowie die politischen und justiziellen Rechte folgen.

Eine Zweiteilung der Charta in einen kurzen und „leserlichen“ Teil für die Bürger und einen erläuternden Teil, der gleichermaßen rechtlich verbindlich wäre, wird von den deutschen Ländern abgelehnt. Insbesondere vertreten die deutschen Länder die Auffassung, dass eine solche Zweiteilung der Charta der gebotenen Transparenz und Verständlichkeit der Grundrechte für den Bürger zuwiderlaufen würde.

3. Desiderate

Nach Auffassung der deutschen Länder wären Fragen der Presse- und Rundfunkfreiheit (unter Beachtung der Zuständigkeit der Mitgliedstaaten, die Aufgaben, die Finanzierung und Organisation des öffentlichen Rundfunks zu regeln) sowie die Möglichkeit der gemeinsamen Religionsausübung noch eingehender zu diskutieren.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 16 May 2000 (18.05)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4316/00*CONVENT 34*PRAESIDIUM NOTE

Subject: Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

- New proposal for the Articles on economic and social rights and for the horizontal clauses
(reference docs: CHARTE 4192/00 CONVENT 18, CHARTE 4193/00 CONVENT 19, CHARTE 4227/00 CONVENT 26, CHARTE 4235/00 CONVENT 27)

Members of the Convention will find attached the version of the social rights and horizontal clauses which is being submitted for their consideration. The deadline for filing amendments is 5 June. When drafting amendments, it would be helpful if they could be presented using the form which you have been sent (see CHARTE 4303/00 CONVENT 29).

Article 31. Social rights and principles

The institutions and bodies of the Union, the Member States, exclusively within the scope of Community law, and the social partners at Community level, acting within the framework of their respective powers, shall observe the social rights and implement the social principles set out in this Charter.

Statement of reasons

This provision takes account of the particular nature of social rights and highlights the implications of the scope of the Charter in their regard. Social rights are binding on the Community legislature, on national legislation enacted in implementation of Union law, and on the social partners at Community level, who can conclude agreements at Community level pursuant to Article 139 of the TEC. All these bodies must respect those social rights; when laying down rules they may not act counter to them, save where allowed by the general clause on limitations. Given that social rights are constantly evolving, and that they often only acquire tangible form by means of implementing measures, it must be stipulated, when they comprise a right to an actual benefit, that these are principles whose application will, in a certain number of cases, be subject to the adoption of implementing measures. In this case, it is clear that the adoption of such measures will depend on the allocation of responsibilities in the Treaties, with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity. In other words, it is not possible, for example, to adopt rules that would undermine the right to a social benefit or prevent its implementation. However, such rights can only be claimed within the framework of existing Community or national measures.

Article 32. Freedom to choose an occupation

Everyone has the right to choose and to engage in an occupation.

Statement of reasons

This right is recognised without any ambiguity in the case law of the Court as a fundamental right (see judgment of principle in Case 4/73 Noldé [1974] ECR 491). Pursuant to Article 48, this right is exercised under the conditions and subject to the limits laid down by the Treaties, which includes the rules on the pursuit of occupations.

Article 33. Workers' right to information and consultation within the undertaking

Workers and their representatives have the right to information and consultation in good time within the undertaking which employs them.

Statement of reasons

Text based on the revised European Social Charter (Article 21) and the Community Charter (Article 17). There is a considerable Community acquis in this field : Directives 98/59/EC (collective redundancies), 77/187/EC (transfers of undertakings) and 94/45/EC (European works councils).

Article 34. Rights of collective bargaining and action

Employers and workers have the right to negotiate and conclude collective agreements and to take collective action, in cases of conflicts of interest, to defend their economic and social interests, including at European Union level, under the conditions laid down by national legislation and practice.

Statement of reasons

The right to form and to join trade unions is recognised in Article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights. The rights of collective bargaining and collective action are recognised by the revised Social Charter (Article 6) and by the Social Charter. They are mentioned in point 12 of the Community Charter. The right to collective action is recognised in the case law of the European Court of Human Rights as stemming from Article 11 of the Convention (Swedish train drivers union 1976). Finally, Articles 138 and 139 TEC deal with social dialogue at a Community level and provide for the conclusion of collective agreements. The concept of collective action includes, amongst other things, the right to strike.

Article 35. Right to rest periods and annual leave

Every worker has the right to limitation of maximum working hours, to daily and weekly rest periods and to an annual period of paid leave.

Statement of reasons

This Article is based, inter alia, on Directive 93/104/EC and Article 2 of the Social Charter.

Article 36. Safe and healthy working conditions

Every worker has the right to safe and healthy working conditions.

Statement of reasons

This Article is based on Directive 89/391/EC and Article 3 of the Social Charter. See also paragraph 19 of the Community Charter.

Article 37. Protection of young people

The minimum age of admission to employment must not be lower than the minimum school-leaving age without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people, in particular those ensuring their preparation for work through vocational training and subject to derogations limited to certain light work.

Young people admitted to work must have working conditions which suit their age.

Statement of reasons

This text is based on Article 7 of the European Social Charter and on the Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers (points 20 to 23). First of all it reproduces the main thrust of point 20, which provides for a minimum employment age, linked to the end of compulsory schooling, which cannot under any circumstances be less than 15 years. However, the Charter begins as follows: "Without prejudice to such rules as may be more favourable to young people, in particular those ensuring their preparation for work through vocational training, and subject to derogations limited to certain light work, ..."

The second paragraph is based on point 22 of the Charter, which stipulates that labour regulations applicable to young workers must be adjusted to take account of their development and vocational training needs. The wording of the paragraph comes chiefly from Article 1(3) of Directive 94/33/EC on the protection of young people at work.

Article 38. Right to protection in cases of termination of employment

All workers have a right to protection against unjustified or abusive termination of employment.

Statement of reasons

This Article simply provides for protection against arbitrary termination of employment.

Article 39. Right to reconcile family and professional life

All workers have the right to reconcile their family and professional lives. This right includes in particular the right to maternity leave before and/or after childbirth and the right to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child.

Statement of reasons

Articles 8 and 27 of the revised Social Charter.

Directive 92/85/EEC of 19 October 1992 concerning the right to maternity leave of at least 14 weeks and Directive 96/34/EC concerning the right to parental leave of at least 3 months.

Article 40. Right of migrant workers to equal treatment

Third-country nationals working lawfully in the territory of the Member States are entitled to treatment not less favourable than that of European Union workers in respect of working conditions.

Statement of reasons

Community competence in this area is established by the fourth indent of Article 137(3). The rule laid down here is simply that of non-discrimination in respect of working conditions.

Article 41. Social security and social assistance

- 1. Provision shall be made in accordance with each Member State's rules for social security benefits providing protection in the event of maternity, illness, dependence or old age and in the event of unemployment.
- 2. Provision shall be made for social assistance and housing benefit in order to guarantee a decent existence to anyone lacking sufficient resources.

Statement of reasons

This is a principle implemented according to national legislation, in compliance with Community law.

Article 42. Health protection

Everyone shall have access to medical care and prophylactic measures in accordance with each Member State's rules.

Statement of reasons

This is a principle implemented essentially by national legislation.

Article 43. The disabled

Provision shall be made for social and vocational integration measures for the disabled.

Statement of reasons

Article 13 of the Treaty establishing the European Community authorises the adoption of positive measures to prevent discrimination on grounds of disability. The fourth indent of Article 137(1) establishes Community competence with a view to integrating persons excluded from the labour market.

Article 44. Environmental protection

Union policies shall ensure environmental protection, which involves preserving, protecting and improving the quality of the environment, protecting human health and prudent and rational utilisation of natural resources.

Statement of reasons

Community competence as regards the environment is established by Title XIX of the Treaty. This too is a principle given tangible form by means of implementing measures which define the scope of the right. The wording is similar to Article 174 of the EC Treaty.

Article 45. Consumer protection

Union policies shall ensure a high level of protection as regards the health, safety and interests of consumers.

Statement of reasons

Community competence is established by Title XIV of the Treaty. The Charter enshrines a principle which takes form through Community or national legislation. The wording is similar to Article 153 of the EC Treaty.

Article 46. Scope

- 1. The provisions of this Charter are addressed to the institutions and bodies of the Union within the framework of the powers conferred on them by the Treaties, and to the Member States exclusively within the scope of Union law.
- 2. This Charter does not establish any competence or any new task for the Community or the Union or modify competences and tasks defined by the Treaties.

Statement of reasons

The aim of this provision is to determine the scope of the Charter. It seeks to establish clearly that the Charter applies primarily to the institutions and bodies of the Union, within the framework of the Union's powers and tasks. In other words, the Charter applies only to matters covered by Community competence and the tasks of the Union. This provision is in keeping with Article 6(2) of the Treaty on European Union, which requires the Union to respect fundamental rights, and with the mandate issued by Cologne European Council.

The term "institutions" is enshrined in the Treaty, Article 7 of which lists the institutions. The term "body" is commonly used to refer to all the authorities set up by the Treaties or by secondary legislation. It follows unambiguously from the case law of the Court of Justice that the requirement to respect fundamental rights is also binding on the Member States when they act in the context of Community law (judgment of 13 July 1989, Case 5/88 Wachauf [1989] ECR 2609). The Court of Justice recently confirmed this case law in the following terms: "In addition, it should be remembered that the requirements flowing from the protection of fundamental rights in the Community legal order are also binding on Member States when they implement Community rules..." (judgment of 13 April 2000, Case C-292/97, paragraph 37 of the grounds, not yet published). The second paragraph confirms that the Charter does not affect the competences and tasks which the Treaties confer on the Community and the Union.

Article 47. Limitation of guaranteed rights

Any limitation on the exercise of the rights and freedoms recognised by this Charter must be provided for by the competent legislative authority. The actual substance of those rights and freedoms must be respected. Subject to the principle of proportionality, any limitation must remain within the limits necessary for the protection of legitimate interests in a democratic society. Limitations may not exceed those permitted by the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

Statement of reasons

The purpose of this provision is to lay down general arrangements for the limitation of rights. The Article provides that the limitations laid down by the European Convention on Human Rights, which constitutes a minimum standard, may not be exceeded in any circumstances. It follows that when the Convention does not permit limitations on certain rights, they may not be limited on the basis of Community law either. As regards the Union's own limitation régime, the wording is based on the case law of the Court of Justice "...it is well established in the case law of the Court that restrictions may be imposed on the exercise of fundamental rights, in particular in the context of a common organisation of the market, provided that those restrictions in fact correspond to objectives of general interest pursued by the Community and do not constitute, with regard to the aim pursued, disproportionate and unreasonable interference undermining the very substance of those rights" (judgment of 13 April 2000, Case C-292/97, paragraph 45 of the grounds).

Article 48. Conditions and limits defined by the Treaty.

The rights enshrined by the Treaty establishing the European Community shall be exercised under the conditions and within the limits laid down therein.

Statement of reasons

This Article has the effect of referring back to the Treaty where the rights in question are defined by the Treaty itself. The same applies to certain rights such as freedom of movement, the right to participate in European and municipal elections, the right to refer to the Ombudsman, the right to petition, etc.

Article 49. Level of protection

Nothing in this Charter shall be interpreted as restricting or undermining human rights and fundamental freedoms recognised, in their respective fields of application, by the Member States' constitutions, international law and international agreements to which the Union, the Community or all the Member States are party, including the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

Statement of reasons

The aim of the provision is clear - to maintain the level of protection currently afforded by Union law, national law and international law. Owing to its importance, mention is made of the European Convention on Human Rights, which constitutes a minimum standard in all cases. The reference to the European Convention on Human Rights obviously means the Convention as interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights, whether now or in the future, by virtue of the principle that any interpretation is incorporated into the text interpreted. The same holds for the case law of the Court of Justice of the European Communities with respect to Community law.

Article 50. Prohibition of abuse of rights

Nothing in this Charter may be interpreted as implying any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms set forth herein or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for in this Charter.

Statement of reasons

This Article reproduces Article 17 of the European Convention on Human Rights:

"Nothing in this Convention may be interpreted as implying for any State, group or person any right to engage in any activity or perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms set forth herein or at their limitation to a greater extent than is provided for in the Convention."

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 23 mai 2000CHARTE 4322/00*CONTRIB 188*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver une contribution relative aux droits économiques et sociaux, soumise par M. Guy Braibant, Représentant personnel du gouvernement français. ¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langue française seulement.

Paris, le 19 mai 2000

CONTRIBUTION

Au moment où nos travaux entrent dans une phase décisive, je crois utile de souligner l'importance que les droits économiques et sociaux revêtent pour la réussite et l'acceptabilité de la Charte.

1. Les droits économiques et sociaux sont au cœur de la construction européenne : ils doivent donc être l'un des piliers de la Charte.

La Charte a vocation à rassembler dans un seul texte l'ensemble des droits fondamentaux communs aux Etats membres afin de manifester l'attachement de l'Union européenne à ces droits. Les droits économiques et sociaux figurent, avec la dignité de la personne humaine, dont ils sont d'ailleurs un prolongement, parmi ces valeurs communes fondamentales. Ils constituent un élément essentiel et distinctif du " modèle européen " et nul ne peut contester qu'ils font partie intégrante des traditions constitutionnelles communes aux Etats membres, visées à l'article 6 du Traité sur l'Union européenne.

La reconnaissance juridique et politique du caractère fondamental des droits économiques et sociaux a été le produit de la grande crise des années 1930 et des terribles drames de la seconde guerre mondiale. Ces droits ont constitué un élément décisif de la reconstruction de nos sociétés démocratiques au lendemain de la guerre, au moment même où débutait la construction européenne. C'est au cours même du conflit que la publication du célèbre rapport Beveridge par le gouvernement britannique, souligna l'importance de ces droits, notamment par la mise en place d'une protection sociale des citoyens. Toutes les Constitutions postérieures à la seconde guerre mondiale consacrent les droits sociaux parmi les droits fondamentaux qu'elles garantissent. Dans les autres Etats membres, ils font partie de la tradition constitutionnelle. Partout, ils sont mis en œuvre par la loi.

Au niveau communautaire, la dimension sociale a été fortement présente dès l'origine. Ainsi l'article 2 du Traité instituant la Communauté européenne précise-t-il que la Communauté a notamment pour mission " un niveau d'emploi et de protection sociale élevé, l'égalité entre les hommes et les femmes (...) un niveau élevé de protection et d'amélioration de la qualité de l'environnement, le relèvement du niveau et de la qualité de vie, la cohésion économique et sociale et la solidarité entre les Etats membres. " La Charte sociale européenne et la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs, auxquelles l'article 136 du Traité se réfère expressément, précisent et développent les droits économiques et sociaux.

Au plan international enfin, les droits économiques et sociaux ont été consacrés par le pacte des Nations-Unies sur les droits économiques, sociaux et culturels, auquel tous les Etats membres sont parties, et par les conventions de l'Organisation Internationale du Travail. Les pays européens ont toujours joué un rôle décisif dans la consécration internationale reçue par les droits économiques et sociaux.

2. Les droits économiques et sociaux sont des droits fondamentaux même si la mise en œuvre concrète de certains d'entre eux nécessite souvent l'intervention d'un texte intermédiaire.

Le fait de nécessiter des mesures concrètes de mise en œuvre ne retire pas à un droit son statut, comme l'illustrent, d'ailleurs, certains droits classiques (par exemple, le droit à la dignité ou le droit à l'éducation). S'il ne déploie tous ses effets juridiques que lorsque ces mesures ont été adoptées, il a tout de même certains effets immédiats. En premier lieu, un tel droit peut être opposé à une action qui irait directement à son encontre. Ainsi, par exemple, le droit à l'environnement pourrait être opposé directement à une directive qui autoriserait les décharges en plein air de manière très libérale. En deuxième lieu, un tel droit peut être utilisé par le juge lorsqu'il doit combiner plusieurs droits fondamentaux entre eux. De même que la liberté d'expression doit être combinée avec le respect de la dignité de la personne humaine ou avec le droit au respect de la vie privée, le droit à la protection de la santé doit pouvoir être combiné avec d'autres droits fondamentaux tels que le droit de propriété. Enfin, lorsque des mesures concrètes de mise en œuvre ont été prises, le droit peut être opposé à des actes qui viendraient remettre en cause dans leur principe même ces mesures.

Or, justement, pour l'ensemble des droits qui sont aujourd'hui proposés à la convention, les mesures de mise en œuvre ont déjà été prises : dans tous nos pays, il existe une sécurité sociale, des mécanismes d'aide au logement, une reconnaissance du droit de grève. Tout ces droits se sont déjà vu reconnaître un contenu effectif par le législateur national et l'affirmation d'un droit à la sécurité sociale ou d'un droit au logement ne constitue donc nullement la création d'un droit nouveau.

Sans doute est-ce là le critère qui doit guider notre choix : nous devons retenir les droits qui sont déjà garantis dans tous nos pays et que, justement en raison de leur caractère fondamental, nous n'envisageons pas de remettre en cause dans leur essence même. A contrario, refuser d'inscrire un droit existant signifierait que l'on serait prêt à admettre sa disparition de l'ordre juridique.

3. Le fait que certains de ces droits reposent essentiellement sur des mesures nationales de mise en œuvre est-il un obstacle à leur inclusion dans la charte ?

Je crois que non et je dirais même que, au contraire, il est peut-être encore plus nécessaire de s'assurer que les institutions de la Communauté n'y porteront pas atteinte lorsqu'elles prendront des décisions dans le cadre de leurs compétences. En effet, la Charte a pour fonction essentielle de soumettre les institutions de l'Union au respect des droits fondamentaux. Il est nécessaire d'encadrer les pouvoirs des institutions tant à l'égard des droits qui correspondent à des domaines où ces institutions disposent d'une compétence pour agir qu'à l'égard des droits qui correspondent au domaine de compétence des Etats membres. Ainsi, c'est parce que nous avons tous des systèmes nationaux de sécurité sociale qu'il est important d'assurer que la Communauté européenne ne remet pas en cause ces systèmes lorsqu'elle agit dans le cadre de ses compétences, par exemple au titre de ses attributions en matière de concurrence.

Poser un droit n'est pas créer une compétence ; c'est au contraire encadrer les compétences existantes. Or, compte tenu de l'étendue des compétences de la Communauté et de l'Union, il leur est déjà possible de violer, en théorie, la plupart des droits auxquels on peut songer.

Il est difficile d'exclure a priori l'hypothèse d'une atteinte à un droit fondamental donné par un acte des institutions au seul motif que ce droit n'entre pas directement dans le champ de leurs compétences. Ainsi, alors que la Communauté n'est pas compétente pour établir la peine de mort ou pour autoriser la torture, elle pourrait être amenée à méconnaître l'interdiction de la peine capitale ou de la torture si, par exemple, elle adoptait, dans le cadre de ses compétences en matière d'asile et d'immigration, des règles prévoyant le retour d'un étranger dans un pays où il risque l'un de ces traitements. De même pourrait-elle méconnaître le droit au logement tel qu'il est organisé dans les différents Etats membres si elle décidait que toute aide au logement est incompatible avec le traité. Ces quelques exemples montrent que tous les droits fondamentaux sont pertinents même s'ils correspondent à un domaine où la Communauté ne dispose pas de compétence directe pour agir.

4. La légitimité de la Charte et, donc, au fond, son sort dépendra dans une large mesure de sa capacité à intégrer les droits économiques et sociaux.

A Cologne, le Conseil européen a souligné que " le respect des droits fondamentaux constituait l'un des principes fondateurs de l'Union et la condition indispensable pour sa légitimité ". C'est pourquoi il a confié à la Convention le soin de réunir dans une Charte l'ensemble des droits fondamentaux qui sont au cœur du contrat social qui régit nos sociétés démocratiques. Dans ce cadre, il est évident que les droits économiques et sociaux doivent avoir toute leur place dans la Charte en se référant, comme le Conseil européen l'indique expressément, à la Charte sociale européenne et la Charte communautaire des droits sociaux fondamentaux des travailleurs, à l'exception de ceux qui constituent uniquement des objectifs pour l'action de l'Union, comme, par exemple, la réalisation d'un niveau d'emploi élevé (article 2 du TCE).

Compte tenu de l'importance que revêtent les droits économiques et sociaux dans la vie quotidienne de nos concitoyens, de leur place essentielle dans l'équilibre de nos sociétés et de la dimension sociale affirmée de la construction communautaire, la Charte devra comporter l'ensemble des droits économiques et sociaux fondamentaux. Si la Charte devait être en retrait par rapport au niveau actuel de protection des droits sur cette question essentielle, sa légitimité même serait remise en cause : de même que l'on ne pourrait admettre que la Charte réduise le niveau de protection des droits déjà assurée par la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme, on ne pourrait admettre que la Charte soit, pour les droits économiques et sociaux, en recul par rapport au niveau actuel de protection de ces droits tant au plan européen que national.

5. Le contenu actuel des droits économiques et sociaux tels qu'ils figurent dans le projet de Charte (convent 34) est encore insuffisant.

Des droits économiques et sociaux dont le caractère fondamental est indiscutable ont ainsi été éliminés du projet de Charte, alors qu'ils figuraient sur la liste initiale de base soumise à la convention au début de ses travaux :

a) le droit au travail en tant que tel : il s'agit pourtant d'un droit tout à fait fondamental qui vise notamment à empêcher les restrictions abusives à l'accès aux emplois et qui doit conduire à favoriser l'accès de chacun au monde du travail, notamment par les services de placement ; il ne signifie en aucun cas que chaque individu peut exiger de se voir donner un emploi : une telle interprétation est, à l'évidence, erronée voire fallacieuse. Ce droit fondamental, qui est reconnu dans tous les Etats membres (au niveau constitutionnel : Belgique, France, Finlande, Grèce, Espagne, Pays-Bas et Portugal) et qui est consacré par la Charte sociale européenne et la pacte des Nations-Unies sur les droits économiques, sociaux et culturels doit impérativement figurer dans la Charte.

b) Le droit à une rémunération équitable et à un salaire minimum : il s'agit également d'un droit essentiel qui a déjà été reconnu dans plusieurs actes de droit communautaire dérivé en vigueur et par l'article 30 de la Charte sociale européenne révisée ; certains Etats membres lui ont même reconnu une valeur constitutionnelle (Espagne, Finlande, Italie, Portugal). Tous les Etats membres ont institué un salaire minimum, même si le niveau de ce salaire est variable et même si des exceptions ont été prévues par les législations internes. La reconnaissance de ce droit ne doit bien sûr pas avoir pour effet de remettre en cause ces particularités nationales.

c) Le droit de grève : il s'agit d'un droit fondamental qui existe dans tous les Etats membres, même si, dans chaque Etat membre, des limites ont été posées à son exercice. Il a reçu la consécration constitutionnelle dans plusieurs Etats (France, Espagne, Grèce, Italie et Portugal). Si l'article 137 du TCE exclut la compétence de la Communauté pour réglementer le droit de grève (de même, d'ailleurs, que pour le droit d'association), il est possible que, dans l'exercice de ses compétences, elle prenne des mesures qui porterait atteinte à ce droit. Il est donc nécessaire de consacrer le droit de grève dans la Charte.

d) Le droit d'accès égal aux services d'intérêt général : l'importance des services d'intérêt général au sein des "valeurs communes de l'Union" et leur "rôle dans la cohésion sociale et territoriale de l'Union" sont consacrés par l'article 16 du TCE. La Charte doit refléter le droit communautaire en vigueur, précisé par la jurisprudence de la Cour de Justice, en consacrant le droit fondamental que constitue l'accès égal de tous aux services d'intérêt général.

Par ailleurs, on peut regretter l'absence d'un article spécifique pour certains droits essentiels :

- le droit des femmes : s'il est mentionné à l'article 22, relatif à l'interdiction des discriminations, le droit des femmes, eu égard à son importance, mériterait une disposition spécifique, comme cela était d'ailleurs initialement prévu dans le projet de Charte ;
- le droit au logement, qui n'apparaît qu'à l'article 41, mériterait également une disposition particulière, comme cela était initialement proposé : ce droit est garanti dans tous les Etats membres (certains lui ont même reconnu une valeur constitutionnelle : France, Belgique, Espagne, Finlande, Grèce, Pays-Bas et Portugal).

Je déposerai très prochainement auprès de la convention les amendements qui me semblent nécessaires pour donner aux droits économiques et sociaux la place qui leur revient au sein de la Charte.

Guy BRAIBANT
Représentant du Président de la République et du Premier ministre
à la Convention chargée d'élaborer la Charte des droits
fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Editors' note to 4330/00 ADD 1,
Contribution de MM. Fischbach et Krüger,
observateurs du Conseil de l'Europe
(datée le 05/06/2000):

The INIT FR version was dated 5 June, and the words 'integral part' in the final sentence were underlined.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 22 June 2000CHARTE 4330/00
ADD 1*CONTRIB 196*ADDENDUM TO COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter on fundamental rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter the English version of a contribution by MM. Fischbach and Krüger, Council of Europe observers. ¹

¹ This text exists in French and English.

5.6.2000

OBSERVATIONS ON CONVENT DOCUMENTS 28 AND 34,
BY MR FISCHBACH AND MR KRÜGER,
COUNCIL OF EUROPE OBSERVERS

The Council of Europe observers do not intend to propose any amendments to the text of the provisions submitted in documents Convent 28 and 34.

They note however that, as drafted in those documents, the statements of reasons contain elements which are essential to the comprehension and interpretation of the Charter. Such is the case in particular with the full text of the provisions taken from the European Convention on Human Rights and the reference to the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights. Such a reference is essential for at least two reasons.

1. Firstly, because of the fundamental importance of the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights in determining the level of protection guaranteed by the Charter.

The aim of the references to the ECHR in Articles 47 and 49 (Convent 34) is to prevent there being a lower level of protection under the Charter than that provided by the ECHR, which is considered a minimum standard. Since the adoption of the ECHR, the case-law has consistently raised the minimum standard to the point where today it is the case-law, just as much as the Convention, that determines the level of protection provided by the ECHR. There is every reason to believe that that trend will continue, as the Court has recently confirmed in its Selmouni judgment¹. For that reason, if the Charter is not to afford less protection than the ECHR, not only must regard be had to the relevant case-law, there must also be a legal obligation to that end.

Admittedly, as stated in the current draft of the statements of reasons, legal instruments are usually applied in accordance with their interpretation by the court empowered to construe them. Nevertheless, the text of the ECHR has been enhanced by no less than fifty years of case-law, and there can be no doubt but that that process will continue. Take, for example, all the positive obligations which the European Court of Human Rights has recognised and which complement the text of the Convention¹. How can parties to disputes under the Charter be ensured of benefiting from the existence of those obligations? Does the mere reference to the ECHR make it clear beyond doubt that they will automatically be taken into account when a corresponding provision of the Charter is being interpreted?

¹ See the Selmouni judgment of 28 July 1999, § 101.

It cannot be said enough that a reference to the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights would not result in protection under the Charter being restricted to the ECHR level, as there is nothing to prevent the Charter being interpreted in such a way as to afford a higher level of protection. That is one of the effects of the current draft of Article 49 of the Charter. In that regard, such a reference would represent no danger to the Charter as, in the unlikely event that the level of protection under the ECHR were reduced by the case-law, the Charter would be unaffected since the ECHR level constitutes a minimum standard, not a mandatory one.

2. Furthermore, without such a reference to the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights there would be no legal guarantee that Community institutions would not interpret the ECHR differently when applying it under Articles 47 and 49 of the Charter. By acceding to the ECHR, the Contracting States have legally recognised the authority of the European Court of Human Rights in the interpretation of the ECHR (Articles 1, 32 and 46 ECHR). On the other hand, without a reference to the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights, the institutions of the European Union would escape that sort of obligation even though they, too, through the Charter, would be applying the ECHR as a minimum standard. That would result in a degree of imbalance between the Union and the member States, something which not only would be difficult to justify but could also become a source of legal uncertainty.

¹ Thus, for example, the Court has held that States have an obligation to investigate matters apt to constitute a violation of Articles 2, 3 or 5 of the ECHR. On the basis of Articles 2 and 3 it has imposed an obligation on States to protect persons whose life or physical integrity is endangered by others or by phenomena such as atmospheric pollution or nuclear radiation. Likewise, the Court has found various positive obligations to be implicit in Article 8, such as the obligations to create a suitable environment for integrating children into their families, to ensure effective enforcement of judicial decisions concerning the custody of children, to inform the local population of health risks resulting from certain forms of pollution and, if appropriate, to intervene to eliminate the risks. Very recently the Court held that Article 10 imposed a positive obligation on national authorities to make suitable arrangements to prevent groups of people, such as employers and employees, infringing each other's freedom of expression. Those are but a few examples of a long series of obligations that have been held to exist under the case-law.

For that reason, it is important to ensure that the statements of reasons, or at the very least the essential elements mentioned above, become an integral part of the Charter. The observers reserve the right to lodge proposals to that end if appropriate.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 25 May 2000 (31.05)
(OR. multilingue)*CHARTE 4332/00*CONVENT 35*PRAESIDIUM NOTE

Subject: Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Amendments submitted by the members of the Convention regarding civil and political rights and citizens' rights
(Reference document: CHARTE 4284/00 CONVENT 28 (REV 1 in French only))

Delegations will find attached the amendments submitted by members of the Convention.

Amendments are set out Article by Article, and paragraph by paragraph where applicable, and bear a serial number. General comments and desiderata regarding the preamble are set out separately at the beginning of the document. The preamble will be discussed separately once the amendments have been examined.

General comments

ANDREW DUFF M.E.P.

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
- Amendments to Articles 1 to 30 (Civil and political rights and citizens' rights)

I. COMMENT

1. The amendments tabled here are drafted on the following presumptions:

- the Charter will have binding effect on the institutions and agents of the European Union;
- the Charter will be inserted somehow into the Treaty of Nice;
- there will be no preamble to the Charter that qualifies its force or meaning;
- the statement of reasons (or 'definitions') will have equal force to that of the articles themselves: I have suggested amendments to both parts;
- if we are to paraphrase the existing treaties we should attempt to do so with more style and clarity than we have usually managed to achieve in the first draft.

2 My amendments are especially substantive concerning:

Article 3 to include ecology

Article 12 to exclude honour and reputation

Article 13 to make specific reference to modern partnerships

Article 15 to protect cultural, national and regional minorities

Article 18 to widen the scope of access to documents

Article 21 to reinforce the rights of asylum seekers

Article 22 to reinforce regional and cultural minorities

Article 23 to assert the principle of democracy

Article 26 bis to include the right to diplomatic protection

Article 27 to ensure transparency of legislative acts and public access to information

Article HH to introduce a new horizontal clause allowing for the widening of the scope of application of the citizenship privileges.

3. I have made no proposals at this stage about the re-ordering of the articles.

ANDREW DUFF M.E.P.

Brussels

23 May 2000

Comments and proposals for amendments by the representative of the Danish Government,
Dr Erling Olsen, concerning CONVENT 28 (Articles 1-30) of 5 May 2000

General comments

- (1) The following proposals for amendment are put forward on condition that the text of the various articles and the accompanying definition of rights constitutes a composite whole. The section in CONVENT 28 entitled “Statement of reasons” (which, incidentally, I would propose be called “definition of right”/Part B, which appears more to the point), should in other words form an integral part of the Charter. I would reserve any further comments on the provisions in CONVENT 28 until such time as an adapted version of the definition of rights is available from the Secretariat: see CONVENT 29.
- (2) At various points in the “Statements of reasons” it is indicated that the question of restrictions of the rights described will be settled in the relevant horizontal provision (former Article H.2, now Article 47 in CONVENT 34). In my view this is insufficient and could give rise to legal uncertainty regarding the extent to which the relevant restrictions are to apply. As has been pointed out on a number of occasions, the exceptions laid down in the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) are of widely differing nature. Accordingly, the restriction of the individual right should be set out in conjunction with the right in Part B. This is to some extent already the case as regards CONVENT 28, Articles 2,5, 6, 12, 14, 15 and 17. In these cases a reference should also be made to the case law of the Court of Justice in Strasbourg.

GENERAL COMMENT ON MY AMENDMENTS

R. VAN DAM

MEP

If the Charter is to be an official document of the European Union, it should include only rights that are relevant to the functioning of European Union institutions and bodies. It is, after all, intended to apply to those bodies. We should not lose sight of that objective if the Charter is not to become a pointless document. If the Charter includes all sorts of rights which are not related to the powers of the Union, it will be impossible to uphold. It will promise a great deal but the rights it includes cannot be guaranteed. Existing competence cannot be expanded by this document. That is why I am advocating the deletion of a number of articles. Their content is often praiseworthy but the Charter is not a human rights convention. Human rights have to be protected and developed at other levels. The Member States are responsible in the first instance for protecting and developing fundamental rights. Then international organisations such as the United Nations and the Council of Europe have an important task in this area. That is where the protection of human rights should be concentrated primarily. The institutions and bodies of the Union must respect rights, but they are not the bodies primarily responsible for guaranteeing them.

That brings me to another point. I consider it essential that there be a uniform system for the protection of human rights throughout Europe. The text of the Charter must therefore be as closely aligned as possible on the European Convention on Human Rights. Many of my amendments are therefore intended to bring about closer alignment on the ECHR. On that point, I strongly support the proposal by the representative of the Netherlands Government, Korthals Altes. In that connection I have opted for a number of limitations per article, despite the Praesidium's proposal that limitations be grouped in one general horizontal article. Formulating limitations per article makes the Charter more transparent. Finally, I also consider it essential that the wording of the rights do not conflict with Europe's Christian roots.

Amendments proposed by the representatives of the Parliament of the Netherlands to the articles as set out in CHARTE 4248/00 CONVENT 28

Submitted by: E.M.H Hirsch Ballin, M. Patijn (on behalf of G.J.W. van Oven)

I. General reservations

A general reservation has been entered to the effect that as work proceeds on the establishment of the Charter, there must be a consensus on its relationship with the European Convention on Human Rights.

The proposers of these amendments are assuming that the Charter will depart as little as possible from the ECHR. At a later stage in the establishment of the Charter, specific limitation clauses will have to be drafted for each article, in accordance with the ECHR system.

There is a further general reservation on the Dutch text of CHARTE 4248/00 CONVENT 28 on the grounds that in some instances it is not in line with prevailing Dutch legal terminology.

Heinrich Neisser

*Member of the Convention for the drawing up of a draft
Charter of fundamental rights of the European Union*

Vienna, 23 May 2000

Subject: Proposed amendments to Articles 1 - 30 (CONVENT 28)

Dear Mr Chairman,

I should like to bring to your attention below a number of concrete proposals for amendments to the Articles referred to above.

However, I should first like to make a general comment regarding the problem of reservations concerning restrictions: in the current version of the draft (CONVENT 28), a horizontal provision on restrictions has apparently continued to be retained, which was not taken from the provisions on restrictions contained in the European Convention on Human Rights. Instead, CONVENT 34 contains a horizontal Article 47 (Limitation of guaranteed rights) which is intended to replace these specific provisions.

As discussion of the final wording of this horizontal Article is not intended to be held until after the "second reading" of the Civil and Political Rights, my proposed amendments below do not relate to the question of any specific provisions on restrictions. It will be possible to judge whether such provisions should be inserted only when it is established how a horizontal provision on restrictions could be worded. It might therefore prove necessary to return to the Articles on Civil and Political Rights after the discussion of Article 47 in order to insert specific reservations regarding restrictions at that stage, if possible.

(Complimentary close).

Heinrich Neisser

23 May 2000

M Jean-Paul Jacqué
Charter Praesidium
Brussels

DRAFT AMENDMENTS TO CONVENT 28

1. Thank you for sending me Convent 28 with the Praesidium's latest draft Articles 1-30. I would like to table the following written amendments.
2. The Praesidium's work to cross refer to the language and approach of the ECHR remains welcome. But as I mentioned in my letter of 17 March, we must go further. The explanatory notes provide some guidance as to the Convention's rationale for particular draft Articles. But they cannot be taken as having the same legal force and effect as a clear definition of the right, tying the right to the corresponding existing right, e.g. under the ECHR. I therefore regard a full and integrated "Definition of Rights" section as essential if we are to stay within the remit given by the Cologne Conclusions. I remain convinced that this approach is fully consistent with Union law, e.g. Article 6.2 TEU.
3. In submitting my draft amendments, I have therefore included language for the "Definition of Rights" section. I have included the appropriate "Definition" language alongside the corresponding "Proclamation" text. I envisage the two would be in different parts of the document. My reasons are not, of course, part of the revised text. Please note that the Part A text is offered on the basis that it must be given the solid legal ground I propose for Part B. Without Part B, my Part A proposals do not stand. I have not set out the ECHR or Treaty right in full in this document, although this could be done should the Convention prefer. For ease of reference, I will send a separate annex showing how the amended two-part document would look.
4. The Horizontal Articles will need to cover key ancillary provisions (e.g. ECHR Articles 17, 18 and where appropriate 16) which will need to be read together with the ECHR-based rights. Horizontal provisions will be needed to reinforce other aspects of the two-part approach (e.g. regarding the ability to derogate, respect for national identities and to clarify that the Charter does not contain new rights or remedies.)

Lord Goldsmith QC

Stockholm
2000-05-23

Mr Jean-Paul Jacqué
EU Charter Presidium
Council Secretariat
BRUSSELS

Draft Chart of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Dear M. Jacqué,

I have the honour to submit to you my first suggestions regarding document "CONVENT" (draft Articles 1-30) of the draft Charter.

Further comments may follow once the full text of the charter and suggestions by other members of the Convention have been presented.

At this stage I wish to make two general comments. The first is that the Swedish translation of the texts in Convent 28 is not altogether satisfactory and will need to be reviewed at a later point.

The second is that the entire text of the Charter needs to be gender neutral. To this end, I have enclosed a separate proposal which I kindly ask you to take into consideration.

Yours sincerely,

Professor Daniel Tarschys

Gender neutrality

In addition to comments and proposals for the draft text I suggest that a gender neutral text be employed. For that reasons, all the pronouns "his" should be replaced with "his or her" throughout the text.

Example:

"Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his or her liberty save in cases prescribed by law and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law."

Daniel Tarschys

Preamble

Proposed amendment to Article: Preamble, paragraph 2

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne Kaufmann

Proposed text:

2. The Union and its institutions are founded on the principles of liberty, democracy, respect for human rights (one word deleted), the rule of law and solidarity, principles which are common to the Member States.

Reasons:

On the basis of the "Declaration of fundamental rights and freedoms" adopted by the European Parliament on 12 April 1989, in the Preamble to which the principle of solidarity and the social state are enshrined, I would propose that the term "solidarity" be included as a further principle in the Preamble to the Charter.

Draft Charter of fundamental rights of the European Union

CONVENT 28

Submitted by: Jürgen Gnauck

The current proposal for a text for "Principle of democracy" in CONVENT 17 should be included, at least in part, in the Preamble. This is why it has currently elicited no proposed amendments. However, it should be pointed out in advance that the wording "All public authority stems from the people" could create misunderstandings. If such a provision had to be included in the Preamble at all, it should preferably be worded: "All public authority stems from the peoples of the States brought together within the European Union".

Proposed amendment to the Preamble/Principle of democracy

Submitted by: Prof. Dr Jürgen Meyer/Pervenche Beres/Jo Leinen/Hans-Peter Martin/Ieke van den Burg

Proposed text:

The Union and its institutions are founded on the principles of liberty, democracy, equality, solidarity, respect for human rights and the rule of law, principles which are common to the Member States.

Reasons:

The proposed amendment reiterates the first pillar of the 3-pillar structure submitted on 4 May (CONTRIB 144).

The wording of the Article takes over a proposal from the Praesidium and adds to it the concepts of "equality" and "solidarity".

The principle of solidarity is a constituent element of every - also non-state - community. In Germany, it is implicitly contained in the social state principle laid down in the Basic Law ¹, in France in the historical constitutional link between the terms "solidarité" and "fraternité", in the Spanish Constitution (Article 2) and the Polish Constitution

¹ Jarass, Hans/Pieroth, Bodo: Grundgesetz für die Bundesrepublik Deutschland. Kommentar. Munich: Beck, 2000, Art. 20 para 105, p. 503 (5th edition)

(Preamble). For the EC/EU, the European Court of Justice refers to the "duty of solidarity assumed by the Member States through their accession to the Community" ECJ Judgment, Case 39/73, Rep. 1973, 101 [102]), and reiterates this in many other judgments and opinions (ECJ Opinion, Rep. 1977, 741 et seq. Opinion 1/76, ECJ Judgment, Rep. 1980, 907 et seq. Case 136/82; Case 263/82; Case 64/84; Case 250/84; Case 276/80; Case 203/86).

As the 3-pillar structure has met with general approval in the Convention, and above all the first pillar, the principle of solidarity should be taken into account in the Preamble or in a separate Article.

Proposed amendment to Article: Preamble/Principle of democracy

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM (MEP)

Proposed text:

Delete paragraph 1.

Reasons:

Sovereignty of the people is not a concept central to the Member States of the European Union.

Proposed preamble

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

“The Signatory States:

- Are convinced that peaceful and happy societies are based on respect for the fundamental rights of the person, which is sacred; they reject any form of contempt for human beings.
- Affirm that this central value of respect for the person of necessity entails:
 - protecting the life and dignity of every human being;
 - equality before the law which defines and protects fundamental rights;
 - mutual support in the face of the vagaries of existence;
 - the right of all persons to be self-governing; to participate fully as citizens in the life of their communities in order better to defend their families and protect their material and spiritual goods; to exercise freely their sovereign rights by political democracy and the market economy;
 - respect for the affection and solidarity felt by each person, and thus for the feeling of belonging based on transmitted culture, a learnt past and the use of a common language;
 - the inalienable right of all citizens to exercise effective control over their representatives; to delegate only close, controllable and always revocable powers; to give institutions only subsidiary and subordinate powers.

- Recognise that the citizens of Europe's countries express their desire for solidarity by specific associations and communities, such as family or local communities, cantons, Länder, counties, regions and provinces; that the broadest and firmest expression of that support is in a nation's shared values which is where democracy is most fully exercised, and where the main thrust of political association must be situated.
- Consider contempt for nations one of the major causes of the wars which have ravaged Europe; but that respect for the diversity of nations and their peoples will benefit Europe, since it will promote freedom, emulation and pluralism which are the sources of European civilisation's oldest and most steadfast wealth.
- Are convinced that ignorance of, forgetting or scorning the rights of the person, as of families, communities or nations, are the sole causes of public misfortune and government corruption;
- State therefore that the European Union is a union of nations which, in mutual respect for each other and the democratic expression of each people, must pursue the following goals:
 - encouraging a common defence of the peoples of Europe in order together to protect their values, rights, languages, social models, territories and borders;
 - contributing to laying the foundations for sustainable development, through respect for life and by seeking the most fulfilling balance between man and his natural environment;
 - promoting the prosperity of the peoples of Europe by domestic free trade and competition, and by negotiating external trade agreements for fair trade between zones with different rules.

Reasons:

What the European Union needs is less a charter of citizens' rights (which, with the notable exception of the right to democratic expression at national level, are already well protected), than a solemn declaration setting forth member countries' common values.

Such a declaration, answering the prime question of "What brings us together?", would have the merit of making the European Union much more "visible" (as the Cologne Council wanted) than a mere list of legal rights which are in any case shared with many countries in the world outside the EU.

Proposed amendment to Article: Principle of democracy (page 24 of CONVENT 28)

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, MEP, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

1. Redraft paragraph 1 to read as follows:

“From the parish to Europe, all public authority stems from the people.”

2. Add a paragraph 3 to the proposed provision to read as follows:

“The requirement of transparency which characterises democracy implies that all legislative deliberations are open to the public.”

Reasons:

Re 1: It should be pointed out that the democratic principle applies, without exception, to all levels of public action.

Re 2: Applies a secular principle of democratic protection to the European Union.

Proposed amendment to Article: Principle of democracy

Submitted by: Simone BEISSEL

Proposed text:

All public authority stems from nations.

Reasons:

Proposed amendment to: PreambleSubmitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, MEP, Alternate Member of the ConventionProposed text:

1. There are no rights without duties.
2. No freedom is absolute. The law, by its principles and in its texts, determines the circumstances in which limitations may be recognised, and any limits or derogations.
3. Any alien in Union territory shall enjoy the protection granted to persons and goods by this Charter, unless it provides otherwise.

Reasons:

Such important principles must be laid down at the beginning of the Charter if we do not want to distort the perception of the text or even its legal effectiveness.

Proposed amendment to Article: preamble (“Principle of democracy”)

Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈS

Proposed text:

1. Public authority stems firstly from the people.
2. The Union and its institutions are founded on the principles of liberty, equality, solidarity, democracy, respect for human rights and the rule of law, principles which are common to the Member States.

Reasons:

*All public authority does not stem directly from the people, or else judges would have to be elected.
Equality and solidarity must appear in a modern list of the Union’s founding principles.*

Proposals concerning the whole of Article 1

AMENDMENT 1

Proposed amendment to Article: 1

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP.

Proposed text:

Article 1. Personal Dignity [delete: 4 words]

1. The dignity of the (delete: 1 word) person [delete 5 words] is inviolable.
2. Everyone is equal before the law.

Reasons:

This Article appears as the first Article of the Charter since dignity of the (delete: 1 word) person is the very foundation of fundamental rights. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights sets out this principle in its preamble:

"Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world."

Respect for the dignity of the (delete: 1 word) person constitutes an inherent limitation to all the other rights, which may not be used to infringe that dignity.

Paragraph 2 sets out a principle which the Court has held to be a fundamental Community principle (judgment of 13 November 1984, Racke, Case 283/83, ECR 3791).

AMENDMENT 2

Proposed amendment to Article: 1

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

1. The dignity of the human person must be respected and protected.
2. Everyone is equal before the law.
3. Everyone has the right to develop their personality freely.

Reasons:

The principle of freedom, like the principle of equality, stems from human dignity and should therefore not be left out of this article. General freedom of action is known to several European constitutions.

AMENDMENT 3Proposed amendment to Article: 1

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Delete all. Substitute the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”:

“Article 1: Object and purpose

“All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and are entitled to equal protection of the law. In recognition of this, the European Union Institutions respect, within the spheres of their competences, the fundamental rights set out below.”

Reasons:

This draft of Article 1 is intended to state clearly at an early stage the important principles of dignity, equality and equal protection before the law which are the context and indeed the ultimate source of the substantive rights which follow. They are not, however, as the Praesidium’s draft of Article 1 might suggest, to be put on the same basis as existing, justiciable, substantive rights. For example, dignity does not, as such, exist as a separate right in the ECHR, or elsewhere in Union law. To treat these principles as constituting the same sort of justiciable rights could create legal uncertainty and confusion. It might lead to obligations of uncertain scope and effect for the European Union institutions – and for Member States when acting as agents. My approach is intended clearly to show that this opening article is of a different nature from the Articles which follow. It is for that reason also that the Article should appear before the first heading for “Proclamation of Rights” and why there appears to be no need to provide a Definition of Rights (Part B) text (although I reserve the right to reconsider that issue once the text is otherwise complete).

AMENDMENT 4

Proposed amendment to Article: 1.– Dignity of the human person

Submitted by: Gabriel Cisneros LABORDA

Proposed text:

1. The dignity of each human being must be respected and protected.
2. All human beings shall be equal before the law.

Reasons:

Avoid exclusions derived from specific interpretations of the concept of person. Furthermore, the expression human being is the one used in Article 1 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Perhaps owing to a translation oversight, paragraph 2 of the Spanish text of the proposal is grammatically and legally incomplete.

AMENDMENT 5

Draft Article 1 Dignity of the human person

Move 1.1. to a preambular part of the Charter.

Merge 1.2 (equality before the law) with Article 22 on equality and non-discrimination.

Reasons:

1. "Dignity" is not really a right but rather a fundamental convention that must inform all legislation and political action. The UN Universal Declaration of Human Rights sets out the principle of the dignity of "members of the human family", "human beings" and "the human person" in its preamble and not in the operative part of its text.

AMENDMENT 6

Proposed amendment to Article: 1.

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

Substitute the following for the article:

- “1. The dignity and the freedom of a human being are inviolable.
2. The European Union shall recognise and protect fundamental rights and guarantee the free development of personality and respect for the principle of solidarity”.

Reasons:

The term “inviolable” stresses the fundamental value of a human being’s dignity and freedom with respect to the specific rules concerning them.

The second paragraph stresses the relevance of fundamental rights as an element in the progressive and concrete self-assertion of the human being.

AMENDMENT 7Proposed amendment to Article: 1

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, MEP, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

- Reverse the order of the first two rights
- Replace paragraph 2 by the following:
Human beings are born free and equal in law and so remain.

Reasons:

- for the first point: A person must be born before he acquires dignity by deserving respect in his own right.
- for the second amendment:
 - we should not depart from tradition
 - the wording should be more in line with the spirit of the language

Proposals for Article 1(1)

AMENDMENT 8

Proposed amendment to Article: 1

Submitted by: Win Griffiths MP

Proposed text:

Article 1.1 Delete here but include in preamble of Clauses.

Reasons:

A statement similar to this one is included in the preamble of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

AMENDMENT 9

Proposed amendment to Article: 1 - Dignity of the human person – Paragraph 1

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Delete paragraph 1

(“The dignity of the human person must be respected and protected.”)

Reasons:

This principle is so fundamental that it should not appear in the Charter itself but in the Preamble so that it permeates all of the rights set out in the rest of the text.

AMENDMENT 10

Proposed amendment to Article: 1(1)

Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANI

Proposed text ^{*}:

The dignity of the human person is inviolable.

Reasons:

The text proposed in CONVENT 28 is “the dignity of the human person must be respected and protected”. The qualification “human” may be omitted because it already appears in the title. On the other hand, the qualification “inviolable” is intended to strengthen the value of human dignity, also bearing in mind the fact that it frequently appears in national constitutions.

^{*} The amendments proposed are indicated by bold type.

AMENDMENT 11

Proposed amendment to Article: 1.

Submitted by: Johannes VOGGENHUBER

Proposed text:

1. The dignity of the human person is inviolable.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 12

Proposed amendment to Article: 1.1.

Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈS

Proposed text:

Everyone shall be entitled to respect for and protection of his dignity.

Reasons:

In the interests of harmonious drafting, “everyone” ought to be the subject of this article.

AMENDMENT 13

Proposed amendment to Article: 1.1.

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Respect for the inviolable dignity of the person and of the rights inherent therein shall constitute the foundation of the Union's legal, political and social order.

Reasons:

Improved drafting. The dignity of the person is not strictly speaking an actionable right or one on which courts can rule separately in the context of the foundation of all the rights that inherently attach to the person entitled to them. That being so, the wording of the provision does not express, with the force appropriate at the beginning of a charter such as this, the value of the dignity of the person or its relationship with the fundamental rights enunciated later.

Proposals for Article 1(2)

AMENDMENT 14

Proposed amendment to Article: 1

Submitted by: Win GRIFFITHS, MP

Proposed text:

Article 1.2 Delete but include in Article 8 (see later amendment).

Reasons:

Equality before the law is more suitable for Article 8.

AMENDMENT 15

Proposed amendment to Article: 1

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

Transfer paragraph 2 to Article 22.

Reasons:

Paragraph 2 is better placed in Article 22 (provision on non-discrimination). See the amendment to Article 22.

AMENDMENT 16

Proposed amendment to Article: 1(2)

Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈS

Proposed text:

Make this a separate article (Everyone is equal before the law.)

Reasons:

Equality and dignity are two different concepts and each deserves its own article.

AMENDMENT 17

Proposed amendment to Article: 1.2.

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Everyone is equal before the law.

Reasons:

The Spanish translation of this provision is incomprehensible (Equality of rights for all persons) and is not in line with the French text (Everyone is equal before the law).

The right to equality before the law must be compatible with the existence of differences in treatment that are proportionate and can be justified objectively and reasonably.

AMENDMENT 18

Proposed amendment to Article: 1.Dignity of the human person

Submitted by: Jordi SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

2. Everyone is equal before the law.

Reasons:

More appropriate wording in Spanish.

AMENDMENT 19

Proposed amendment to Article: 1(2): Dignity of the human person

Submitted by: Dr Ingo Friedrich

Proposed text:

“1. Die Würde des Menschen ist zu achten und zu schützen.

2. Alle Menschen sind vor dem recht gleich.”

(No change to the English text).

Reasons:

The term “Gesetz” (law) belongs to the Member States’ legal domain. “Gesetz” could be misunderstood as “a” law in the formal sense: fundamental rights have to apply to all legal pronouncements. Its use elsewhere in the draft Charter should consequently also be checked.

AMENDMENT 20

Proposed amendment to Article: 1(2)

Submitted by: Dr Peter Michael MOMBAUR, MEP

Proposed text:

"Alle Menschen sind vor dem Recht gleich". (No change to the English text).

Reasons:

The term "Gesetz" (law) belongs to the Member States' legal domain. Its use elsewhere in the draft Charter should consequently also be checked.

Proposals for Article 1a

AMENDMENT 21

Proposed amendment to Article: 1

Submitted by: RODOTA', MANZELLA and PACIOTTI

Proposed text:

After Article 1 insert the following:

"Article 1a. Equality and non-discrimination

1. Everyone shall be equal before the law.
2. Any form of discrimination on the basis of sex, race, skin colour, ethnic or social origin, language, religion or personal conviction, political opinion, membership of a national minority, possessions, birth, handicap, age or sexual orientation, genetic characteristics or state of health shall be prohibited.
3. Within the scope of the Treaty establishing the European Community and the Treaty on European Union all discrimination on the basis of nationality shall be prohibited.
4. The Union shall strive to eliminate existing inequality and to promote conditions that make equality effective".

Article 22 is accordingly deleted.

Reasons:

Every aspect of the fundamental principle of equality is regulated in full here (produced by combining the provisions of Articles 1 and 22, appropriately reframed, of the Praesidium text).

Proposals for the whole of Article 2

AMENDMENT 22Proposed amendment to Article: 2*Submitted by: François LONCLEProposed text:

“Everyone is equal before the law.”

Reasons:

The purpose of this amendment is to separate the principle of equality from Article 1, which also deals with the dignity of the human person.

AMENDMENT 23

Proposed amendment to Article: 2, Statement of reasons

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

Delete the statement of reasons

Reasons:

The statement of reasons should be deleted as the Charter is addressed to EU bodies and so does not have to fix exceptions as the ECHR does.

AMENDMENT 24

Proposed amendment to Article: 2

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP.

Proposed text:

Article 2. Right to life

1. Everyone has the right to life.
2. No one shall be condemned to (delete: 1 word) death (delete: 3 words).

Reasons:

Paragraph 1 is taken from Article 2 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone's right to life shall be protected by law. No one shall be deprived of his life intentionally save in the execution of a sentence of a court following his conviction of a crime for which this penalty is provided by law.*
- 2. Deprivation of life shall not be regarded as inflicted in contravention of this article when it results from the use of force which is no more than absolutely necessary:*
 - (a) in defence of any person from unlawful violence;*
 - (b) in order to effect a lawful arrest or to prevent the escape of a person lawfully detained;*
 - (c) in action lawfully taken for the purpose of quelling a riot or insurrection."*

The exceptions referred to in Article 2(2) of the Convention apply in the context of this Charter in accordance with the general clause in draft Article H2 in CHARTE 4235/00 CONVENT 27.

Paragraph 2 is taken from the second sentence of Article 1 of Protocol No 6 to the European Convention on Human Rights. Article 2 of the Protocol is worded as follows:

"A State may make provision in its law for the death penalty in respect of acts committed in time of war or of imminent threat of war; such penalty shall be applied only in the instances laid down in the law and in accordance with its provisions".

Since Protocol No. 6 was signed on 28 April 1983, the death penalty has been abolished in most Member States and has not been applied in any of them (Declaration No. 3 of the Treaty of Amsterdam relating to the Treaty on European Union). The problem of limitations will be resolved by the horizontal clause relating to the European Convention.

AMENDMENT 25Specific proposals for amendment

Submitted by: Evling OLSEN

Article 2: Replace “Everyone” by “Every individual”.

AMENDMENT 26

Proposed amendment to Article: 2. Right to life

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text:

1. (a) Everyone has the right to life.
(b) No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed.

2. Deprivation of life shall not be regarded as inflicted in contravention of this Article when it results from the use of force which is no more than absolutely necessary:
 - (a) in defence of any person from unlawful violence;
 - (b) in order to effect a lawful arrest or prevent the escape of a person lawfully detained;
 - (c) in action lawfully taken for the purpose of quelling a riot or insurrection.

Reasons:

The right to life is regarded as "the supreme right" among fundamental human rights (Human Rights Committee, No 146/1983, Baboeram v. Suriname, A/40/40, paragraph 697; General Comment 6/16 of 27 July 1982, paragraph, 1 and General Comment 14/23 of 2 November 1984; also to be found in: NOWAK, M., UN Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. CCPR Commentary, Kehl am Rhein, Engel Verlag, 1993, p. 851 and p. 861), or as "one of the most fundamental provisions" of the European Convention on Human Rights (Court of Human Rights, McCann, Farrell and Savage, 27 September 1995, Publications of the Court, Series A, Vol. 324, paragraph. 147; Court of Human Rights, Andronicou and Constantinou, 9 October 1997, Reports, 1997, paragraph. 171; Court of Human Rights, Kaya, 19 February 1998, Reports, 1998, paragraph 107; Court of Human Rights, Caciki, 8 July 1999, Reports, 1999, paragraph 86), in view of the fact that the exercise of all other protected rights presupposes respect for the right to life. The "fundamental nature" of the right to life requires that the possible restrictions be expressly included in Article 2 itself.

Proposals for Article 2(1)

AMENDMENT 27

Proposed amendment to Article: 2(1)

Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANI

Proposed text ^{*}:

Every person has the right to life.

Reasons:

It is proposed that every person be substituted for everyone, both to conform to the expression used in Article 1 (which refers to the "human person") and to avoid any interpretations that might lead to a general prohibition on abortion, contrary to many countries' national legislation.

* Proposed amendments are in bold type.

AMENDMENT 28

Proposed amendment to Article: 2(1)

Submitted by: Hubert HAENEL

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to life for the term of his natural life.

Reasons:

The right to life is so fundamental that it should be without limits: whatever a person's age or state of health, that right should not be violated on any account. It is thus worth stating that this right applies until the end of a person's natural life.

AMENDMENT 29

Proposed amendment to Article: 2. Right to life, paragraph 1

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to life, from the beginning until natural death.

Reasons:

The addition of “from the beginning until natural death” is intended to mean that the right to life is in no way diminished by the person’s inability to express himself, either at the beginning or the end of his life.

On the other hand, the right to life may be subject to other limitations for various reasons (see paragraph 1a).

AMENDMENT 30

Proposed amendment to Article: 2(1)

Submitted by: Gabriel Cisneros LABORDA

Proposed text:

Every human being has the right to life from its beginning until its natural end.

Reasons:

The same argument as in connection with Article 1.

AMENDMENT 31Proposed amendment to Article: 2*Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEPProposed text:Replace paragraph 2 by:

- That right shall be protected from conception to the end of life.

Reasons:

It is hard to imagine that Union bodies would ever acquire jurisdiction to impose penalties, much less a death penalty. This provision does not belong in a Charter addressed to the Institutions of the Union (cf. horizontal Article H.1(2) in CONVENT 27). A more precise definition of the right to life clarifies the implications which are inherent in inserting that right.

AMENDMENT 32

Proposed amendment to Article: 2(1)

Submitted by: M. PATIJN (on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

Replace current wording by: Everyone's right to life shall be protected by law.

Reasons:

The wording of that fundamental right should be closely aligned on the ECHR.

AMENDMENT 33

Proposed amendments to Article: 2. Right to life

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed text:

2.1 Everyone' s right to life shall be protected by law.

2.2 Retained.

Reasons:

Paragraph 2:1 is taken from Article 2 of the ECHR. However, while ECHR stipulates that the right shall be protected by law, no such formulation is included in the Convent 28 version of this Article. The ECHR places a positive obligation on Contracting States to ensure that their penal law includes provisions criminalising murder, manslaughter and also acts by which a person's death is caused unintentionally. It does not, however, hold them responsible for human rights violations as a result of acts (e.g. murders) committed by third parties. Since the draft Article has no equivalent formula, this might be interpreted as meaning that whoever is the addressee of the draft Article may be held responsible for ensuring that, for instance, no murders de facto take place within the EU territory.

AMENDMENT 34

Proposed amendment to Article: 2(1)

Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈS

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to respect for his life.

Reasons:

To make the first paragraph less ambiguous.

AMENDMENT 35Proposed amendment to Article: 2(1)

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister.

Proposed text:

Todos tienen derecho a la vida. (No change to English text).

Reasons:

The proposal is to translate “everyone” by “todos” instead of “toda persona” to avoid any conflict in the legal definition of “person” which varies between Member States.

AMENDMENT 36

Proposed amendment to Article: 2(1)

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text:

“Everyone's right to life shall be protected by law. Deprivation of life shall not be regarded as inflicted in contravention of this article when it results from the use of force which is no more than absolutely necessary:

- (a) in defence of any person from unlawful violence;*
- (b) in order to effect a lawful arrest or to prevent the escape of a person lawfully detained;*
- (c) in action lawfully taken for the purpose of quelling a riot or insurrection.”*

Reasons:

The general limitation clause in the “horizontal provisions” (Art. 47 of CHARTE 4316/00 CONVENT 34) is too broad for the fundamental right to life. The link with the clause on the level of protection, basically guaranteeing that no further limitations can be placed on the right to life, as provided in Article 2 of the ECHR, is not clear enough for citizens to understand. It is important to see immediately that the fundamental right to life can only be limited in specific circumstances.

To preclude any differing interpretations of Article 2 of the ECHR in this important area, the wording of that Article should be taken over.

AMENDMENT 37Proposed amendment to Article: 2

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce the following two-part text:

For Part A, "Proclamation of Rights":

Delete in 2.1: "Everyone has the right to life"

Substitute in 2.1: "Everyone's right to life shall be protected by law"

Retain 2.2 as drafted

For Part B, "Definition of Rights":

"The rights in Article 2 are the rights guaranteed by Article 2 of the ECHR and Articles 1 – 4 of Protocol 6 to the ECHR."

Reasons:

The Praesidium's draft of Article 2 is inconsistent with the corresponding right in the ECHR. It may be taken by the ECJ or others to have a different meaning, for example that it confers new rights upon the unborn. My amendment ensures that Article 2 is understood within the meaning of the relevant existing ECHR rights and subject to ECHR case law. I do not accept that limitations to this, or the other Charter rights, can be dealt with satisfactorily in a single "horizontal" clause. Limitations differ in type and effect from right to right. They need to be defined precisely in relation to each right so as to ensure legal certainty.

AMENDMENT 38

Proposed amendment to Article: 2 – Right to life
Paragraph 1a

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

“However the law may lay down measures departing from the previous paragraph if they are absolutely vital to protect the lives of other persons from unlawful violence or in defence of society”.

Reasons:

After affirming the right to life, to be honest, we should immediately be reminded of the traditional limitations, either by an explicit reference to Article H2 (horizontal clause), or by stating the spirit of those limitations directly.

Not to do so might impair understanding of the Charter were the reader not to read right to the last line which radically alters the whole meaning.

Proposals for Article 2(2)

AMENDMENT 39

Proposed amendment to Article: 2 – Right to life
Paragraph 2

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Delete paragraph 2 (“No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed”).

Reasons:

This paragraph does not correspond to any existing European Union powers.

AMENDMENT 40

Proposed amendment to Article: 2.

Submitted by: José BARROS MOURA and Maria Eduarda AZEVEDO

Proposed text:

1.
2. The death penalty shall be prohibited. No one shall be condemned to death or executed.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 41Proposed amendment to Article: 2

Submitted by: RODOTÀ, PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

Substitute the following for paragraph 2:

"2. No public authority may provide for the death penalty or impose or execute a sentence of death".

Reasons:

The aim of paragraph 2 is the outright elimination of the death penalty from the legal systems of the Union. The wording proposed addresses legislators, courts and administrative authorities alike.

AMENDMENT 42

Proposed amendment to Article: 2(2)

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

2. No one shall be condemned to death or executed, save under military criminal law in time of war.

Reasons:

Protocol No 6 to the ECHR provides, by way of exception to the abolition of the death penalty, for its application in time of war, and the Convention was ratified on that basis. With Organic Law 11/1995 of 27 November 1995 Spain abolished the death penalty even in such cases; Article 15 of Spain's constitution, however, provides for the possible application of the death penalty in the event of war if at that juncture the legislator so stipulates, a rule with which total abolition is not compatible.

The statement of reasons for the draft addresses that situation, but considers an exception to be made for it through the establishment of a general horizontal clause on the limitation of rights, a general approach used in the other articles, with all references to limitations, exceptions and definitions being omitted. I feel, on the contrary, that limitations on rights, as part and parcel of their make-up, must appear in the definition of the rights themselves, which provides, furthermore, the best guarantee that they will be safeguarded under implementing legislation, as well as ensuring proper coexistence of rights that may clash with each other.

The existence of a horizontal clause – subject at present to the drafting chosen for that clause so that it is acceptable to Spain – does not resolve the problems of the specific limitations on the exercise of certain rights; what would be unacceptable to Spain, as I have repeatedly indicated, is a clause that merely makes reference to the relevant provisions of the ECHR.

In addition, a general limitations clause is not a valid way of resolving the problem. In fact, in some of the articles it is not a question of enabling rights to be limited but rather of defining them negatively to make it clear beyond what point the content of the right does not extend. In other cases it is a matter of regulating those limits, to ensure that when the public authority (the legislator) establishes them it is similarly limited in the way in which it frames them. Clearly, that is not required in the case of every right in the Charter, but only for some which, because of their nature, so require.

The EU Charter of Fundamental Rights must be an autonomous text, drafted, naturally, in such a way as to comply with the fundamental rights "contained" in the ECHR, i.e. in content. But that does not mean that the EU Charter of Fundamental Rights must restrict itself merely to following or transcribing the text of the ECHR, as that would render unnecessary (being pointless and repetitive) a large part of the Convention's work.

In addition, the technique of resolving the problem of the limitations on the exercise of rights recognised in the Charter by means of a reference to the corresponding article of the ECHR in which exceptions or limitations are laid down is unacceptable, as I have already said in Convention working meetings. For that would mean introducing the ECHR law as directly applicable within the Charter. Or, in other words, including the ECHR in Community Treaty law, producing a result equivalent to the EU's accession to the ECHR. That is a possibility that the Council, the IGC and the Court of Justice of the European Communities have expressly rejected.

It should be noted that the reference to the ECHR in Article 6(2) of the TEU is not actually incorporating the ECHR into the text of the Treaty, but doing something quite different: obliging the European Union to respect fundamental rights, as guaranteed by the ECHR, as principles of Community law.

The proclamation of the fundamental rights and freedoms in the Charter (all the more so if the latter is to be incorporated into the EU Treaty as a text with legal force) must be an autonomous text, which does not need to be incorporated or supplemented (as if blank or incomplete) by other legal provisions alien to the Community law of which it forms part (such as the ECHR, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights or any other international law treaty or convention on human rights). There is therefore no room for any other source of human rights alongside or external to the Charter itself.

The contrary would mean that to a large extent the Charter (or at least that part of its content which overlaps with the ECHR) would be rendered redundant as a legal instrument, as it would serve to convert the ECHR into an autonomous standard by which to gauge the validity of acts and provisions of Community institutions and bodies from the point of view of the fundamental rights that the latter must respect.

If that were the case, there would be no need for the solemn declaration of those rights in the Charter and it would be sufficient if the Charter simply made reference to the ECHR, so that the Convention would be incorporated, as directly applicable law, into the Charter and into primary Community legislation.

I must make it clear that the amendment I propose is not meant to deny or detract from the crucial, outstanding value and importance of the role to be played by the ECHR and the case law of the CDH in the interpretation of the fundamental rights and freedoms in the Charter. Nor is it intended to call into question the relationship or cooperation between Community institutions (in particular the Court of Justice) and the Strasbourg court. Quite the contrary, what must be avoided is that, through a legal subterfuge, what the European Council and the Luxembourg Court of Justice have rejected – EU accession to the ECHR – is indirectly incorporated into Community Treaty law, like some Trojan horse.

Perhaps many of the fears that have arisen in connection with the references to the ECHR might be dispelled if in the end it were clearly established in the horizontal clauses that the Charter does not alter existing legal rules or the jurisdiction of the courts. Furthermore, the risk that two courts may interpret the same rights text in different ways exists at present, witness the wording of the Treaties and the case law of the Luxembourg court.

Finally, I would say that, if the intention of the agreements reached at the European Council meeting in Cologne and the Convention is to draw up a Charter that makes fundamental rights and freedoms visible for the citizen, referring to another standard (such as the ECHR) for the purpose of settling the limits to their exercise in every case will deprive the Charter of all visibility, make it complicated and confused and render it accessible only to legal experts, since to know fully the scope and content of a right it will be necessary to have recourse to another, different text, which is just what "visibility" is meant to avoid.

AMENDMENT 43

Proposed amendment to Article: 2(2)

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text:

No one shall be condemned to the death penalty or executed. No limitation of this right shall be permissible.

Reasons:

The first sentence is unchanged and corresponds exactly to the Praesidium proposal. The added second sentence is intended to make it clear to the citizen in a directly comprehensible manner that the death penalty has in fact been abolished. The possibility of making this provision subject to the general limitation of the horizontal clause in Article 43 of the draft would be a step backwards from the position of the ECHR.

The drafting proposed fundamentally takes over the level of protection afforded by Protocol No 6 to the ECHR. It goes further in that even "in time of war or of imminent threat of war" the death penalty is not permissible. In view of the rule-of-law and democratic standards achieved in the European Union there is no convincing basis for the death penalty at all. It is not necessary even in time of war. The dangers involved in this type of penalty are much greater than any benefit to society. This applies in time of war as well, because in exceptional circumstances the danger of defective procedures and accordingly of miscarriages of justice is particularly great.

Proposals for Article 2(3)

AMENDMENT 44Proposed amendment to Article: 2

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

Add the following new paragraph 3:

3. No one shall be expelled or extradited to a State where there are substantial grounds for believing that he would be in danger of being subjected to the death penalty or execution.

Reasons:

This provision is more appropriate here than in Article 4, which deals with the prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment. The text is in line with the grounds adduced by the European Court of Human Rights in the Case Soering v United Kingdom of 7 July 1989.

Proposed amendment to Article: 2Proposed text:

Add the following new paragraph 4:

4. Deprivation of life shall not be regarded as in contravention of this Article when it results from the use of force which is no more than absolutely necessary, in accordance with the instances listed in Article 2(2) of the ECHR.

Reasons:

This provision is in line with Article 2(2) of the ECHR, which lists a number of instances of deprivation of life resulting from the use of force which is no more than absolutely necessary. In keeping with the desire for conciseness, reference is made to Article 2(2) of the ECHR. The same technique has been used in amending the other articles.

Proposals for Article 3 as a whole

AMENDMENT 45Proposed amendment to Article: 3

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Delete this Article entirely but see Reasons below

Reasons:

I remain concerned as to how to deal with this issue pending the entry into force of the Human Rights and Biomedicine Convention in all the Member States. It is not yet ratified by the majority of Member States. The matters dealt with in the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine are complex and sensitive. Reference in the Charter to only some of the principles in the Biomedicine Convention is an unsatisfactory way forward and would be likely to create uncertainty, controversy and possible conflict with national positions. It should be noted that ECHR Articles 2, 3 and 8 have some bearing on the matters referred to in Charter Article 3. To that extent these matters may be covered by the Charter indirectly. I am not aware of any other rights existing at Union level.

I am prepared to consider this issue further but it could only be on the basis of a statement tied to existing national laws and practices, such as:

A: Everyone has the right to the respect of his or her physical and mental integrity in the application of biology and medicine.

B: The right in Article 3 is the right, to the extent recognised in national law, of:

- a) respect for the informed consent of the patient;
- b) prohibition of making the human body and its parts, as such, a source of financial gain;
- c) prohibition of creation of a human being identical to another human being whether living or dead.

It would have to be made clear, moreover, that the right cannot extend further than the corresponding provisions in the Biomedicine Convention.

AMENDMENT 46

Proposed amendment to Article: 3

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 3. Right to respect for (delete: 1 word) personal integrity (delete: 4 words)

- 3. Everyone's (delete: 7 words) physical and mental integrity shall be respected.
- 2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - prohibition of eugenics (delete: 1 word);
 - respect for the informed consent of the patient;
 - prohibition of making the human body and its products a source of financial gain;
 - prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.
- 3. In the field of ecology, the principle of sustainable development shall be respected.

Statement of reasons

The principles in the field of medicine and biology are set out in the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. It is not the aim of this Charter to derogate from those provisions. The list is not exhaustive, allowing for development to take account of future (delete: 1 word) developments in this area.

Article 2 of the Treaty on European Union as amended by the Treaty of Amsterdam sets for the Union the objective of achieving "balanced and sustainable development". Article 3(l) of the Treaty establishing the European Community establishes a competence in the field of environment policy. The obligatory nature of the principle of sustainable development is established in Article 6, which reads:

"Environmental protection requirements must be integrated into the definition and implementation of Community policies and activities referred to in Article 3, in particular with a view to promoting sustainable development."

AMENDMENT 47Proposed amendment to Article: 3

Submitted by: Johannes VOGGENHUBER and Kathalijne BUITENWEG

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and mental integrity.
2. Everyone has the right to a clean and healthy environment and to the protection of natural life support systems.
3. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - any intervention directed at alteration of the human genome may be undertaken only for preventive, diagnostic or therapeutic purposes and only if it is not intended to bring about any alteration in the genome of progeny;
 - respect for the informed consent of the patient;
 - prohibition of making the human body and its products a source of financial gain;
 - prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.
4. Everyone has the right to be informed of all data concerning his health and genetics. The wish not to be informed of such matters must be respected.
5. Genetic information may be used and passed on only with the patient's consent. The use of genetic diagnostics in employment and insurance matters is in any event prohibited.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 48

Proposed amendment to Article: 3. Right to respect for the integrity of the human person

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European matters of Thuringia

Proposed text:

"Article 3. Right to respect for the integrity of the human person.

Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and psychological integrity."

Reasons:

Article 3 should contain only the above key statement. The term "psychological" also seems to be more appropriate than the term "mental" actually used.

Paragraph 2 should be deleted for the following two reasons: the principles mentioned in paragraph 2 are set out in the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. It should be noted that not all Member States have acceded to that Convention.

The principles mentioned here also appear to be greatly in need of interpretation. Where, for example, does the boundary lie between genuine and reprehensible eugenic practices? In particular, the "prohibition of eugenic practices" referred to in the first indent is too indefinite, and so far-reaching in its effects as also to affect existing national provisions. Any measure intended to avoid genetically diseased progeny could ultimately be termed "eugenic". Accordingly, the abortion of a genetically affected embryo would also be "eugenic". This would also affect the current intensive discussion over pre-implantation diagnostics, as the latter's top priority aim is to detect genetic defects and "sort out" the corresponding embryos from the outset. In addition, the Article leaves the question entirely open as to whether "everyone" (cf. paragraph 1) covers the post-natal human being or also the unborn embryo. Paragraph 2 does not differentiate in this respect, however. In the case of "reproductive cloning of human beings" also referred to in paragraph 2, it does not seem clear what kind of human cloning (!) is indeed permitted (the cloning of parental cells, perhaps?). Further clarification in the statement of reasons at least would be helpful here.

Furthermore, it can be seen from the provisions of Article 3(2) how difficult it is to formulate "modern fundamental rights" succinctly. This is why the German Länder are in favour, at least for the moment, of refraining from seeking a fundamental solution to problems such as medicine and biology, in particular, and of omitting the proposed paragraph 2. In the case of the problems raised, sufficient protection against abuse should be provided by Article 1 in conjunction with Article 3(1).

AMENDMENT 49

Proposed amendment to Article: 3

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

Replace the text of the Article with the following:

- "1. Everyone is entitled to respect for physical and mental integrity.
- 2. No medical intervention can be carried out without the prior, free and informed consent of the person concerned and unless it is in conformity with his/her rights.
- 3. The human body and its parts cannot be objects of trade.
- 4. Eugenic practices aimed at organising the selection and the instrumentalisation of the person are prohibited.
- 5. Human reproductive cloning is prohibited".

Reasons:

The text, worded in prescriptive terms, reflects the state of development of the law regarding bioethics (cf. European Convention on Biomedicine).

AMENDMENT 50

Proposed amendment to Article: 3

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, MEP, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

Replace Article 3 by the following text :

1. The physical and mental integrity of the human person may not be harmed.
2. Respect for moral and physical integrity implies free access for all to advances in medicine and other sciences, and in particular equal access for all to health care.
3. Scientific research must also take account of everyone's rights:
 - increasing mastery of human genetics may not lead to eugenic practices designed to deprive the weakest of their rights;
 - the human body, its components and products may not be a source of financial gain;
 - more generally, living matter may not be patented, in whole or in part.
4. When old age impairs a person's integrity, that person shall receive specific help and assistance, regardless of his right to a pension,.
5. Everyone has the right to request and obtain a death which respects his dignity, particularly when respect for his physical and moral integrity or his dignity as a human being is infringed.
6. Everyone has the right to protection of the environment and shall have the right to compensation if that environment is altered without his agreement and his integrity is impaired.

Reasons:

Re 1: Stylistic improvement.

Re 2: Stylistic improvement; the right to free and equal access to health care is added as requested in a number of contributions to the Convention.

Re 3: Progress in genetics as a science requires a fuller text dispelling any ambiguity.

- Re 4: The community must rise to the challenges created by longer life-expectancy if human dignity is not to be sacrificed.
- Re 5: The Convention cannot avoid taking a stand on what happens when the right to life comes into conflict with respect for human dignity and is mistaken for a duty to remain alive.
- Re 6: The Charter cannot fail to address the implications of protection of the environment for the individual.

Proposals for Article 3(1)

AMENDMENT 51

Proposed amendment to Article: 3(1)

Submitted by: Peter ALTMAIER, Member of the German Parliament

Proposed text:

“Everyone has the right to respect for his physical, genetic and mental integrity.”

Reasons:

The reference to genetic integrity in Art. 3(1) clarifies the enumeration in Article 3(2). This seems desirable given the high value of genetic integrity.

AMENDMENT 52

Proposed amendment to Article: 3. Right to respect for the dignity of the human person

Submitted by: Jordi SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

p. 1 “Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and moral integrity.”

Reasons:

“Moral” is a more appropriate term than “mental” (in Spanish “psíquico”).

AMENDMENT 53Proposed amendment to Article: 3(1)*Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANIProposed text

p. 1 Every person has the right to respect for his physical and mental integrity.

Reasons:

It is suggested that everyone be replaced by every person both in order to bring the text into line with Article 1 and with the title of Article 3 (which has “human person”) and to preclude interpretations which might lead to a general ban on abortion, in contrast to national legislation in many Member States.

* Proposed amendment in bold.

AMENDMENT 54

Proposed amendment to Article: 3(1)

Submitted by: Alvaro Roríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and moral integrity.

Reasons:

The French text does not contain the term “psychique”. Mental is a broader term, as is moral.

AMENDMENT 55

Proposed amendment to Article: 3(1)

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text:

“Every individual has the right to respect for his physical and mental integrity”.

Reasons:

As a principle it seems expedient to make a clear distinction in the Charter between “individuals”, i.e. natural persons, and “persons” i.e. natural or legal persons. We therefore propose as a rule to speak of “individuals” when only natural persons are meant, and “persons” when natural and legal persons are meant.

There is no change to the content of the proposal by the Praesidium.

AMENDMENT 56

Proposed amendment to Article: 3(1)

Submitted by: Peter ALTMAIER, Member of the German Parliament

Proposed text:

“Everyone has the right to respect for his physical, genetic and mental integrity.”

Reasons:

The reference to genetic integrity in Art. 3(1) clarifies the enumeration in Art. 3(2). This seems desirable given the high value of genetic integrity.

Proposals for Article 3(2)

AMENDMENT 57Proposed amendment to Article: 3*Submitted by: Win GRIFFITHS, MPProposed Text:

Everyone has the right to respect for his/her physical and mental integrity.

Delete 3.2

Reasons:

3.2 sets out criteria which, if included at all in the Charter, would be better placed in "Part B" – however that may be set out in the Charter.

It will also be necessary to indicate any limitations to the individual right to appeal when the individual himself/herself is not able to make decisions on his/her own.

AMENDMENT 58

Proposed amendment to Article: 3

Submitted by: Erling OLSEN

Proposed text:

Paragraph 2 should be deleted.

AMENDMENT 59Proposed amendment to Article: 3

Submitted by: Guy BRAIBANT, personal representative of the President of the French Republic and of the French Prime Minister

Proposed text:

In the third indent of the second paragraph, insert “, its parts” after “the human body”.

Reasons:

As presently drafted, the provision that the human body cannot be commercialised is incomplete as it does not cover organs.

AMENDMENT 60Proposed amendment to Article: 3(2)

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

- Amend the introductory phrase to read as follows:

The following principles must be respected in this connection:

- Add the following to the fourth indent:

“and the creation of human/animal hybrids”.

Reasons:

The original introduction is too restrictive. The proposed addition reflects developments in bio-ethics.

AMENDMENT 61

Proposed amendment to Article: 3

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

Paragraph 2, fourth indent: prohibition of the (one word deleted) cloning of human beings.

Reasons:

The Article would thus provide greater protection against threats to human integrity.

AMENDMENT 62

Proposed amendment to Article: 3(2)

Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANI

Proposed text *:

In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:

- prohibition of eugenic practices;
- respect for the informed consent of the patient, although an intervention may be carried out on a person who does not have the capacity to consent, solely for his or her direct benefit.;
- prohibition of making the human body and its products a source of financial gain;
- prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Reasons:

The words in bold are taken from Article 6 of the Oviedo Convention and are intended to allow interventions which may be necessary for minors and those who are temporarily or permanently incapacitated.

* Proposed amendment in bold.

AMENDMENT 63Proposed amendment to Article: 3(2)

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - prohibition of eugenic practices;
 - respect for the (one word deleted) consent of the patient;
 - prohibition of making the human body and its products a source of financial gain;
 - prohibition of the (one word deleted) cloning of human beings.

Reasons:

1. (Does not apply to the English text.)
2. It is a principle that the patient's decision must be respected and not made conditional upon prior information which doctors are in any case required to give.
3. Delete the term "reproductive" which to my mind (a) is unclear and (b) may be interpreted as restricting a total ban on cloning human beings.

AMENDMENT 64

Proposed amendment to Article: 3(2) Right to respect for the integrity of the human form

Submitted by: VITORINO, Commission representative on the Convention

Proposed text:

2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - prohibition of eugenic practices;¹
 - [...] free and informed consent of the patient;
 - prohibition of making the human body and its products a source of financial gain;
 - prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Reasons:

1. “Respect” in the second indent repeats the verb in the introductory sentence.
2. Consent must not only be informed but also and above all free (see also Article 5(1) of the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedecine).

¹ The concept of eugenic practices must be clarified in the statement of reasons by, for instance, pointing out that its main purpose is the selection and instrumentalisation of persons.

AMENDMENT 65

Proposed amendment to Article: 3(2)

Submitted by: Dr Peter Michael MOMBAUR, MEP

Proposed text:

"Prohibition of the cloning of human beings"

Reasons:

The prohibition of the production of human beings with the same genetic material as a certain person living or dead must cover all stages of human development starting from the fusion of egg and sperm cell. Restricting the prohibition of cloning to reproductive cloning only would be wholly untenable and would certainly undermine acceptance of the Charter by numerous people in Europe.

AMENDMENT 66

Proposed amendment to Article: 3. Right to respect for the integrity of the human person

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 3. Right to respect for the integrity of the human person

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and mental integrity.
2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - prohibition of eugenic practices;
 - respect for the informed and stated consent of the patient, although that consent may not be to acts which are unlawful under domestic law or in breach of the rights guaranteed in this Charter and in particular in Article 2;
 - prohibition of making the human body and its products a source of financial gain;
 - prohibition of the (...) cloning of human beings.

Reasons:

- A. The patient's consent must not only be based on detailed prior information, but must also be clearly expressed.
- B. There must be a total ban on cloning of human beings, not just on reproductive cloning, to prevent any risk of slippage. The distinction is in fact artificial, since the act is still the same and it is a fundamental principle that the law punishes acts, not the reasons for them.

AMENDMENT 67Proposed amendment to Article: 3*Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈSProposed text:*Article 3. Right to respect for the integrity of the human person

Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and mental integrity.

In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:

- prohibition of eugenic practices, with the purpose of selection and instrumentalisation of persons;
- respect for the informed consent of the person;
- prohibition of making the human body and its products into any kind of saleable commodity;
- prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 68

Proposed amendment to Article: 3: Right to respect for the integrity of the human person

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and mental integrity. (No change to English text)
2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - prohibition of eugenic practices;
 - respect for the informed consent of the patient;
 - prohibition of making the human body and its products a source of financial gain;
 - prohibition of the (one word deleted) cloning of human (one word deleted) life forms in all stages of their development.

Reasons:

Re paragraph 1:

Does not apply to the English text.

Re paragraph 2:

Only by banning the cloning of human beings can their uniqueness be ensured.

AMENDMENT 69Proposed amendment to Article: 3*Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSERProposed text:

Article 3. Right to respect for the integrity of the human person

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and mental integrity.
2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - prohibition of eugenic practices;
 - respect for the informed consent of the patient;
 - prohibition of making the human body and its products as such a source of financial gain;
 - prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Reasons:

The expression “as such” bases the Article more closely on Article 21 of the Council of Europe Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. A total ban on any financial gain in connection with the human body and its parts seems excessive, particularly as far as getting blood and blood plasma from voluntary donors is concerned. The explanatory notes to Article 21 of the Convention state that organs and tissues proper should not be bought or sold or give rise to financial gain, but that technical acts (medical testing, pasteurisation, storage) performed in that connection should give rise to reasonable remuneration, and that medical devices incorporating processed human tissue may be sold. Further, blood and plasma donors may thus receive compensation (for their time and loss of income), but not payment in the sense of a purchase price.

AMENDMENT 70

Proposed amendment to Article: 3 : Right to respect for the integrity of the human person

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and moral integrity.
2. At the end of the next paragraph, add:

All human life must necessarily result from the fusion of gametes of human origin.

Reasons:

1. Moral is considered a more appropriate word than mental.
2. Science is progressing constantly. Apart from cloning, research is being conducted into ways of creating life in which a human being will not originate from a man and a woman. Attempts are also being made to produce human eggs from any kind of living cell.

AMENDMENT 71

Proposed amendment to Article: 3. Right to respect for the integrity of the human person

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed text:

Article 3.1. Delete the words "physical and mental".

Article 3.2. It is suggested to make a separate paragraph of this Article.

Reasons:

Paragraph 1.

Swedish experts are uncertain as to the precise meaning of the expression "mental integrity". I would leave out the qualification.

The relationship of this Article to Article 12 (respect for private life) requires further consideration.

Paragraph 2.

While paragraph 1 of this draft Article is a more general protection clause, paragraph 2 appears to deal with very specific aspects of a person's physical and mental integrity. It would be better to treat these aspects separately.

(For the Swedish translation of the second indent, revert to the version used in Convent 13).

AMENDMENT 72Proposed amendment to Article: 3

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

Delete paragraph 2.

Reasons:

Paragraph 2 may be omitted as it concerns a number of principles contained in the Council of Europe Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine. Various Member States have not yet adopted a definitive position on a number of provisions of that Convention. It would also raise the question of why principles contained in other Council of Europe Conventions (such as the Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities, the European Charter of Local Self-government and the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages) have not been included. This would not benefit the succinctness of the Charter, which is a further reason for deleting paragraph 2.

Proposed amendment to Article: 3Proposed text:

Add a new paragraph 3 reading as follows:

3. The right to respect for physical and mental integrity may be restricted only in accordance with the conditions laid down in Article 8(2) of the ECHR.

Reasons:

It would be preferable, as in the case of the ECHR, to indicate, for each right, the conditions under which the right in question may be restricted. A general restrictive clause would involve the danger that the possibilities for restriction might become too broad. In the interests of succinctness, Article 8(2) of the ECHR is not quoted in full, but merely referred to. It is thus clear that the conditions laid down by the ECHR must at least be fulfilled.

Proposals for Article 4

AMENDMENT 73

Proposed amendment to Article: 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Delete the second sentence (“No one may be expelled or extradited to a State where he would be in danger of being subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman treatment.”).

Reasons:

While the first sentence sets out a general principle, the second sentence deals with a specific case.

This specific case would be better placed in Article 21 (Right to asylum and expulsion), assuming that the wording of Article 21 does not render it superfluous.

AMENDMENT 74Proposed amendment to Article: 4*Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEPProposed text:Article 4 to be deleted.Reasons:

This Article may already be inferred implicitly from Articles 1 and 3 of the Charter. The expansion of the relevant concept in this Article does not contain any useful message for the bodies of the European Union. They do not have, nor should they be given, any penal jurisdiction. However necessary, protection against torture and inhuman or degrading treatment and punishment would be better dealt with in other contexts (e.g. in the Member States, the Council of Europe or the United Nations).

AMENDMENT 75

Proposed amendment to Article: 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

Submitted by: Jordi SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

Sentence 2: “No one may be expelled or extradited to a State whose legal order does not condemn the death penalty, torture or inhuman treatment.”

Reasons:

The concept of “a State where he would be in danger of being subjected to” is inappropriate in law.

AMENDMENT 76

Proposed amendment to Article: 4

Submitted by: Guy BRAIBANT, personal representative of the President of the French Republic and of the French Prime Minister

Proposed text:

In the title, after “inhuman”, insert “or degrading”.

Also insert “or degrading” towards the end of the second sentence of the Article.

Reasons:

The aim is to make the title more consistent with the content of the Article and prevent the second sentence from being interpreted to mean that degrading treatment is not sufficient to prevent expulsion or extradition.

AMENDMENT 77

Proposed amendment to Article 4: Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text: Delete sentence 2 from Article 4 and add as paragraph 2 to Article 21.

Reasons:

Contents belong to Article 21.

AMENDMENT 78

Proposed amendment to Article: 4

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”:

Delete the second sentence of this Article.

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 4 is the right guaranteed by Article 3 of the ECHR.”

Reasons:

I believe that, as with the other formulations, a clear legal definition is required which avoids any risk of uncertainty or conflict and in every case attracts the relevant jurisprudence of the European Court of Human Rights. This is not the case here. Equally, it would be a mistake for the Charter to single out particular items of ECHR case law: that could imply that other important case law is less important or to be ignored.

AMENDMENT 79Proposed amendment to Article: 4

Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANI

Proposed text ^{*}:

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. No one may be expelled or extradited to a State where the circumstances give reason to believe that he could be subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman treatment.

Reasons:

The words in bold replace “where he would be in danger of being”, which cannot be seen as a sufficient guarantee. The proposed amendment is in line with the case law of the European Court of Human Rights.

* Proposed amendments are in bold.

AMENDMENT 80

Proposed amendment to Article: 4

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

No one may be expelled or extradited to a state where he or she would be in danger of being subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman treatment.

Reasons:

This Article is taken from Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights:

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. The second sentence of the Article (delete: 1 word) embodies the jurisprudence of the European Court of Human Rights (delete: 1 word) on Article 3.

AMENDMENT 81Proposed amendment to Article: 4*Submitted by: Erling OLSENProposed text:

The words "death penalty" contained in the second sentence of this provision should be deleted. (The prohibition on expulsion or extradition to countries in which the party concerned risks the death penalty comes under Article 2 of the Charter.)

Reasons:

The reason for this proposed amendment is that the prohibition on expulsion or extradition to countries in which the party concerned risks the death penalty does not follow from the jurisprudence of the Court of Human rights on Article 3 of the ECHR, as claimed in the "statement of reasons". On the contrary, the prohibition is regarded as a reflex effect of Article 2 of and Additional Protocol No 6 to the Convention. This provision therefore comes under Article 2 of the Charter, possibly through a reference to the relevant case law in part B.

AMENDMENT 82Proposed amendment to Article: 4

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

Turn the first sentence into paragraph 1 and the second sentence into paragraph 2.

Reasons:

This corresponds more closely to the structure of the other Articles.

Proposed amendment to Article: 4 (second sentence)Proposed text:

The second sentence of Article 4 would read as follows:

2. No one may be expelled or extradited to a State where there are substantial grounds for believing that he would be in danger of being subjected to torture or inhuman or degrading treatment.

Reasons:

The text corresponds to the grounds of the European Court of Human Rights in the case of Soering v. United Kingdom of 7 July 1989. Article 4 relates to torture. There is no obvious reason, therefore, why the death penalty should be referred to here. See the amendment to Article 2.

AMENDMENT 83

Proposed amendment to Article: 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text:

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. No one may be expelled or extradited to a State where he would be in danger of being subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Reasons:

In order to bring the second sentence of this Article fully into line with the European Court case law on Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights (CDH, Cruz Varas et al., 20 March 1991, Publications of the Court, Series A, Vol. 201, par. 69-70; CDH, Vilvarajah et al., 30 October 1991, Publications of the Court, Series A, Vol. 215, par. 103), the words “or degrading treatment or punishment” need to be added to this provision (CONVENT 28 version).

AMENDMENT 84Proposed amendment to Article: 4

Submitted by: Win GRIFFITHS MP

Proposed text:

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. No one may be expelled or extradited to a State where allegations against him/her would put him/her in danger of being subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman treatment.

Reasons:

Amended text relates more specifically to any charge which would justify an application for extradition.

AMENDMENT 85

Proposed amendment to Article: 4, second sentence

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of Mr G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

"No one may be expelled or extradited to a State if it can reasonably be foreseen that he may be subjected to torture or other inhuman treatment".

Reasons:

The wording proposed is more balanced than that contained in CONVENT 28.

AMENDMENT 86Proposed amendment to Article: 4*Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈSProposed text:

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. No one may be expelled or extradited directly or indirectly to a State where he would be in danger of being subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman treatment.

Reasons:

The aim is to prevent expulsion to a destination from which an individual is likely to be ultimately expelled to a State where his physical integrity is threatened.

AMENDMENT 87

Proposed amendment to: 4 (second sentence)

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Delete the second sentence or, if it is retained, refer only to a third State.

Delete “expelled”.

Reasons:

The wording of this provision is highly confusing and could well lead to misinterpretation. What does “in danger of being” actually mean? How can this be verified? As the European Union is not excluded from the scope of this clause, this right could be exercised between Union States, which is inadmissible in a Union of law. In the case of expulsion – if the text is interpreted literally – illegal immigrants (in breach of immigration laws) could not be expelled to their countries of origin under such circumstances.

The text must be seen in the light of Protocol 29 of the Treaty establishing the European Community which covers asylum and extradition between Member States of the Union; this provides that given the level of protection of fundamental rights and freedoms “Member States shall be regarded as constituting safe countries of origin in respect of each other for all legal and practical purposes in relation to asylum matters.”

Given the sweeping nature and vagueness of the concepts it introduces and the way it is drafted, this clause is unacceptable. It is as well to remember that within the European Union, members of terrorist groups frequently claim to be “in danger” of being subjected to torture or inhuman treatment and use this as a legal loophole to prevent their being expelled or extradited to a European Union Member State wishing to try them for terrorist acts they have committed.

AMENDMENT 88

Proposed amendment to Article: 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

Article 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

“No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.”

Reasons:

Article 4 should contain only the above. The second sentence (prohibition of expulsion and extradition) should be added to Article 21 as a new paragraph 3 for reasons of logic.

AMENDMENT 89

Proposed amendment to: Article 4 (sentence 2)

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

No one may be expelled or extradited to a third country whose legal order does not explicitly reject the death penalty, torture and other human treatment.

Reasons:

The concept of “danger”, which is a clearly defined concept in criminal law, is unsuitable in this context and would be lacking in all legal rigour.

European Conventions on extradition provide that such bans must be limited to States which are not members of the European Union.

AMENDMENT 90

Proposed amendment to Article: 4

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

Delete from “No one may be expelled ...” to the end of the Article.

Reasons:

This sentence has been transferred to Article 21 (see corresponding amendment).

AMENDMENT 91Proposed amendment to Article: 4*Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEKProposed text:

“No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. No one may be expelled or extradited to a State where he would be in danger of being subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman treatment. Any restriction of this right is prohibited.”

Reasons:

Sentence 1 and sentence 2 of the proposed text remain unchanged. However, the third sentence which we propose adding should make it clear – in a way that the citizen can easily understand – that this fundamental right may not be restricted, in particular not in the framework of the “limitation of guaranteed rights” of Article 43 of the horizontal clauses.

Proposals for Article 5 as a whole

AMENDMENT 92

Proposed amendment to Article: 5. Statement of reasons

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

Delete the statement of reasons

Reasons:

The statement of reasons should be deleted since the Charter refers to EU bodies and therefore none of the exceptions laid down in the ECHR apply.

AMENDMENT 93Proposed amendment to Article: 5*Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEPProposed text:Article 5 to be deleted.Reasons:

This Article is already implied in Articles 1 and 3 of the Charter. Such expansion does not contain any useful message for the bodies or institutions of the European Union. In this case too, although the right in question needs to be protected, such protection would be better regulated and safeguarded elsewhere (e.g. in the Member States, the Council of Europe or the United Nations).

AMENDMENT 94Proposed amendment to Article: 5

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:Article 5. Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

No one shall be (delete: 5 words) enslaved or subjected to forced labour.

(Delete: paragraph 2)

Reasons:

This Article is taken from Article 4 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

- "1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.*
- 2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.*
- 3. For the purpose of this Article the term "forced or compulsory labour" shall not include:*
 - (a) any work required to be done in the ordinary course of detention imposed according to the provisions of Article 5 of this Convention or during conditional release from such detention;*
 - (b) any service of a military character or, in case of conscientious objections in countries where they are recognised, service exacted instead of compulsory military service;*
 - (c) any service exacted in case of an emergency or calamity threatening the life or well-being of the community;*
 - (d) any work or service which forms part of normal civic obligations."*

The third paragraph of that Article, which indicates the cases in which labour is not regarded as forced or compulsory, has not been included. It will be incorporated via the horizontal clause relating to the European Convention on Human Rights. (Delete: 5 words) The concept of forced labour does not cover, inter alia, personal services laid down by law which are exacted of citizens for civic reasons or in case of an emergency or calamity, the fulfilment of military obligations or alternative service, or any work ordinarily exacted of a person deprived of liberty.

AMENDMENT 95

Proposed amendment to Article: 5. Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

“Article 5. Prohibition of slavery, forced labour and trafficking in human beings.

1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.
3. Trafficking in human beings is prohibited.”

Reasons:

Trafficking in human beings is a growing problem throughout the world. It should, therefore, be expressly prohibited in the Charter.

AMENDMENT 96

Proposed amendment to Article: 5. Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed text:

Delete the draft text and replace it by Article 4 ECHR, possibly split between a part A and a part B.

Reasons:

Paragraph 3 of Article 4 of the ECHR does not merely contain definitions (a term used in the statement of reasons to the draft Article). Article 4 paragraph 3 of the ECHR implies significant limitations of the prohibition of forced and compulsory labour as found in paragraph 21 of the same Article. The only proper manner to deal with this is to reintroduce the exact wording of the ECHR, i.e. the whole text of Article 4 ECHR.

AMENDMENT 97

Proposed amendment to Article: 5

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”:

Retain existing text.

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 5 is the right guaranteed by Article 4 of the ECHR”

Reasons:

I welcome the Praesidium’s reliance on the ECHR wording. But I disagree that limitations in this case or qualifications from ECHR case law “go without saying”. These matters are not necessarily obvious or beyond argument. The Charter must be completely clear and precise. It must avoid any legal uncertainty or conflict with existing obligations.

AMENDMENT 98Proposed amendment to Article: 5*Submitted by: Erling OLSENProposed text:

No changes to the wording of this Article are proposed. However, the definition of the right should make it clear that the performance of community service as an alternative to imprisonment is not covered by the term "forced or compulsory labour".

AMENDMENT 98

Blank

Proposals for Article 5(1)

AMENDMENT 99

Proposed amendment to Article: 5(1)

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text:

No one shall be held in slavery or servitude. Any restriction of this right is inadmissible.

Reasons:

Sentence 1 corresponds word for word to the proposed text. Our proposal for an additional sentence 2 should make it immediately clear to citizens that this fundamental right cannot be restricted, and particularly not under the “general limitation clause” in Article 43 of the horizontal provisions.

Proposals for Article 5(2)

AMENDMENT 100

Proposed amendment to: Article 5(2) (addendum)

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Add a third paragraph to read as follows: “Forced or compulsory labour shall not include personal services as established by law or required of citizens for civic reasons or, in the case of an emergency or calamity, the performance of military service or alternative community service, or any work ordinarily required of a person in the course of detention.”

Reasons:

Pursuant to Article 4(3) (a), (b), (c), and (d) of the ECHR “forced labour” excludes personal services exacted of citizens for civic reasons or in the case of an emergency or calamity, or the performance of military service or alternative community service or any work ordinarily required of a person in the course of detention. Although the statement of reasons states that the horizontal clause is a sufficient way of incorporating these exceptions, it must be stressed that, without pre-empting the status that this Charter must be given in the European legal order, a provision of this nature addressed to the States should set out in appropriate terms the legal justification for excluding the circumstances listed from being considered as forced labour.

The reasons given in the statement of reasons for the amendment to Article 2(2) should be reproduced here.

AMENDMENT 101

Proposed amendment to Article: 5(2)

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour, save in the cases referred to in Article 4(3) of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Reasons:

Article 4(3) of the ECHR stipulates those activities not to be regarded as forced or compulsory labour for the purposes of that article. In view of the system followed as regards limitations, reference should be made to Article 4(3) of the ECHR.

AMENDMENT 102

Proposed amendment to Article: 5. Prohibition of slavery and forced labour
Paragraph 2

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

“No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour, subject to the reservations set out in Article H2 (provisional numbering)”.

Reasons:

The same as for Article 2(1).

AMENDMENT 103Proposed amendment to Article: 5

Submitted by: Johannes VOGGENHUBER and Kathalijne BUITENWEG

Proposed text:

1. ...
2. No one shall be subjected to forced or compulsory labour.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 104

Proposed amendment to Article: 5

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, MEP, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

Replace paragraph 2 of the proposed text by the following:

Apart from a legal requisition to fulfil a social obligation, no one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.

Reasons:

There are cases in which the survival of a community may justify compulsory labour, even if it is arduous or dangerous, but legal texts must lay down specific arrangements for the various cases conceivable.

Proposals for Article 6

Proposals for Article 6

AMENDMENT 105Proposed amendment to Article: 6

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

The second sentence to be deleted.

Reasons:

The second sentence bears no relation to the powers of the institutions and bodies of the European Union. In this case too, although the right in question needs to be protected, such protection would be better regulated and safeguarded elsewhere (e.g. in the Member States, the Council of Europe or the United Nations).

AMENDMENT 106

Proposed amendment to Article: 6. Reasons

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

Delete the statement of reasons

Reasons:

The statement of reasons should be deleted since the Charter refers to EU bodies only and therefore none of the exceptions laid down in the ECHR apply.

AMENDMENT 107

Proposed amendment to Article: 6

Submitted by: Peter ALTMAIER, Member of the German Bundestag

Proposed text:

Delete sentence 2.

Reasons:

To be systematic, sentence 2 should be deleted since the general limitation clause in the horizontal provisions of the Charter of Fundamental Rights also applies to Article 6.

AMENDMENT 108Proposed amendment to Article: 6

Submitted by: Dr Peter Michael MOMBAUR, MEP

Proposed text:

Delete the second sentence.

Reasons:

The limitation results from the horizontal articles.

AMENDMENT 109Proposed amendment to Article: 6

Submitted by: José BARROS MOURA and Maria Eduarda AZEVEDO

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in specified cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law as laid down in the European Convention on Human Rights.

AMENDMENT 110Proposed amendment to Article: 6*Submitted by: AndrewDUFF, MEPProposed text:*Article 6. Right to liberty and security

Everyone has the right to liberty and security (delete: 2 words) . No one shall be deprived of (delete: 2 words) these save in cases prescribed by law (delete: 1 word) and in accordance with (delete: 1 word) judicial procedures (delete: 3 words).

Reasons:

Article 5 of the European Convention on Human Rights defines the cases in which a person may be deprived of his liberty as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in the following cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law:
- (a) the lawful detention of a person after conviction by a competent court;*
 - (b) the lawful arrest or detention of a person for non-compliance with the lawful order of a court or in order to secure the fulfilment of any obligation prescribed by law;*
 - (c) the lawful arrest or detention of a person effected for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority on reasonable suspicion of having committed an offence or when it is reasonably considered necessary to prevent his committing an offence or fleeing after having done so;*
 - (d) the detention of a minor by lawful order for the purpose of educational supervision or his lawful detention for the purpose of bringing him before the competent legal authority;*

- (e) the lawful detention of persons for the prevention of the spreading of infectious diseases, of persons of unsound mind, alcoholics or drug addicts or vagrants;
- (f) the lawful arrest or detention of a person to prevent his effecting an unauthorised entry into the country or of a person against whom action is being taken with a view to deportation or extradition.
2. Everyone who is arrested shall be informed promptly, in a language which he understands, of the reasons for his arrest and of any charge against him.
3. Everyone arrested or detained in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1.c of this article shall be brought promptly before a judge or other officer authorised by law to exercise judicial power and shall be entitled to trial within a reasonable time or to release pending trial. Release may be conditioned by guarantees to appear for trial.
4. Everyone who is deprived of his liberty by arrest or detention shall be entitled to take proceedings by which the lawfulness of his detention shall be decided speedily by a court and his release ordered if the detention is not lawful.
5. Everyone who has been the victim of arrest or detention in contravention of the provisions of this article shall have an enforceable right to compensation."

The aim of Article 6 of the Charter is not to allow any cases of deprivation of liberty other than those authorised by the European Convention on Human Rights, which apply by virtue of draft Article H2(2) on the limitation of guaranteed rights, set out in CHARTE 4235/00 CONVENT 27. (Delete: 11 words) These rights should in particular be respected when, in accordance with Title VI of the Treaty on European Union, the Union adopts framework decisions for harmonisation in criminal matters.

AMENDMENT 111

Proposed amendment to Article: 6. Right to liberty and security

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

Art. 6. Right to liberty (delete two words)

Everyone has the right to liberty (delete two words) of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in specific cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.

Reasons:

If the concept of “security” was viewed in isolation, namely as an object of legal protection in its own right, including it in the Charter of Fundamental Rights would add a new dimension to its contents which would legally bind the State, i.e. the security authorities and thus also the police, to a very large extent. The Member States’ constitutions will not contain provisions of this sort explicitly guaranteeing (public) security. The Amsterdam Treaty does indeed set the Union the aim of creating “an area of freedom, security and justice” (Article 2 of the TEU) and this political objective may be seen as a guarantee of the security of persons living on Union territory. However, there is no need to create an individual legal status with very unspecific contents.

AMENDMENT 112

Proposed amendment to Article: 6. Right to liberty and security

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

“Article 6. Right to liberty.

Everyone has the right to liberty. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in cases prescribed by law and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law”.

Reasons:

The term “security” in Article 6 sentence 1 still seems unacceptable to the Länder. Taken over from French judicial usage, this term could cause problems under a German understanding of law. It might, for example, give rise to the mistaken belief that citizens had claims to internal security measures. The term is not explained in detail in the statement of reasons; it therefore seems preferable to delete it.

AMENDMENT 113

Proposed amendment to Article: 6

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person.
2. No one may be deprived of his liberty except in the cases mentioned in Article 5(1) of the ECHR.
3. Everyone who is arrested shall be informed promptly, in a language which he understands, of the reasons for his arrest and of any charge against him.
4. Everyone arrested or detained in accordance with the introductory part of Article 5(1) and Article 5(c) of the ECHR shall be brought promptly before a judge or other officer authorised by law to exercise judicial power and shall be entitled to trial within a reasonable time or to release pending trial. Release may be conditioned by guarantees to appear for trial.
5. Everyone who is deprived of his liberty by arrest or detention shall be entitled to take proceedings by which the lawfulness of his detention shall be decided speedily by a court and his release ordered if the detention is not lawful.
6. Everyone who has been the victim of arrest or detention in contravention of the provisions of this article shall have an enforceable right to compensation.

Alternative text:

1. Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person.
2. No one may be deprived of his liberty except in the cases mentioned in Article 5(1) of the ECHR and having regard to the rights guaranteed in Article 5(2) to (5) of the ECHR.

Reasons:

As with the ECHR, it is preferable, in the case of each right, to indicate the conditions under which that right may be restricted. With a general restriction clause, the possibilities for restriction may become too extensive. As a result, the proposed text refers to the grounds mentioned in Article 5(1) of the ECHR.

The rights guaranteed in Article 5(2) to (5) of the ECHR are set out in paragraphs 3 to 6 of the present article. Reference to the ECHR would be insufficient here as what is involved is not possible restriction of rights but the substance of rights themselves. If this should prove undesirable given the wish to keep the Charter concise, it would suffice to refer to the rights of someone deprived of his liberty, as laid down in Article 5(2) to (5) of the ECHR. In this connection see the alternative amended text.

AMENDMENT 114Proposed amendment to Article: 6

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

The text of Article 5 (1) of the ECHR should be adopted word for word.

Reasons:

An exhaustive description of the fundamental right to liberty and security is contained in the ECHR. The text of Article 6 as contained in CONVENT 28 is loosely worded.

AMENDMENT 115

Proposed amendment to Article: 6

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”:

Amend to read: “Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person and cannot be deprived of it save in limited specific cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The rights in Article 6 are the rights guaranteed by Article 5 of the ECHR”

Reasons:

I am happy with the substance of the Praesidium proposal but would suggest the small adaptation shown above which I think reads better and expresses the limitation better. My comments about Article 5 above are relevant. The Praesidium asserts in its commentary that these rights necessarily apply when the Union adopts framework decisions for harmonisation in criminal matters in accordance with Title VI of TEU. That assertion would have to be examined very carefully in the context of existing provisions about competence and justiciability.

AMENDMENT 116

Proposed amendment to Article: 6. Right to liberty and security

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed text:

Delete the second sentence of the draft Article. Reproduce the full Article 5 of the ECHR in a part B of the Charter.

Reasons:

Article 5 of the ECHR is the source of inspiration for this draft Article. It regulates in an exhaustive manner all the instances when the deprivation of a person's liberty is in line with the ECHR. To merely have a reference to (some) "cases" without express mention of those cases would be a step backwards as far as European protection of human rights is concerned. Moreover, the fact that important additional rights as provided for in Article 5 paragraphs 2-5 of the ECHR are left out of the draft Article means that the protection intended to be covered by it is not as wide-reaching as that already afforded by the ECHR.

AMENDMENT 117

Proposed amendment to Article: 6

Submitted by: Jordi SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

“Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in cases prescribed by law and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.”

Reasons:

More appropriate legal drafting in Spanish.

AMENDMENT 118Proposed amendment to Article: 6*Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANIProposed text ^{*}:

Right to liberty

Everyone has the right to liberty (...) of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in cases prescribed by law and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.

Reasons:

It is proposed that the reference to security be deleted from both title and text of the Article, as it is a potential source of misunderstanding. The words “right to security of person” tend to suggest a guarantee against danger, for example dangers relating to crime. The Court has consistently interpreted the “right to security of person” as a safeguard against arbitrary detention, as with the right of habeas corpus. That concept is covered by “right to liberty”.

* Proposed amendments are in bold.

AMENDMENT 119Proposed amendment to Article: 6*Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈSProposed text:

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in cases prescribed and in accordance with legal procedures.

Reasons:

“Loi” is a concept which does not exist in continental European law.

AMENDMENT 120Proposed amendment to Article: 6

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

“Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in cases prescribed by law and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.”

Reasons:

The proposed wording is a linguistic improvement [to the Spanish], and also brings the text into line with technical legal language: “specific” cases [used in the Spanish] are only those which are prescribed by law and the “legal means” [in Spanish] are the forms or procedures also prescribed by law. Moreover, this is the wording in the French text, suggesting that there must just be a problem with the Spanish translation.

AMENDMENT 121Proposed amendment to Article: 6*Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEKProposed text:

“Every human being has the right to liberty and security. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in cases prescribed by law and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.”

Reasons:

It is only possible to deprive natural persons of their liberty. For the sake of clarity, we propose using “human being”.

AMENDMENT 122

Proposed amendment to Article: 6

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

After “security of person” add “and family”.

Reasons:

The aim in specifying further the concept of security is to ensure that it applies to the family sphere and not just the individual.

AMENDMENT 123Proposed amendment to Article: 6

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, MEP, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:Replace Article 6 by the following:

1. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in cases prescribed by law and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.
2. The public authorities have a duty to organise society in such a way that the safety of persons and property is guaranteed, giving society a sense of security.

Reasons:

Re 1: The general right to liberty has been recognised by Article 1(2). No amendment has been made to the second sentence of Article 6.

Re 2: Society's headlong slide into violence starting at school necessitates a more precise formulation very different from the text in the European Convention on Human Rights.

Proposals for Article 7

AMENDMENT 124Proposed amendment to Article: 7

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Defer consideration of this Article (although see the proposal in the body of the Reasons)

Reasons:

This article creates problems which cannot be resolved until the totality of the other rights in the Charter have been finalised. This provision relates principally to the provision of remedies. The provision of remedies is rather the question of the horizontal articles and the legal status of the document.

The proposed Article is in any event unsatisfactory in extending Article 13 ECHR to all rights and in removing reference to “national authority”.

My position therefore is that this should be deferred until later. At that stage it may be possible to agree that a version along the following lines be put forward:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”:

“Everyone whose rights and freedoms in this Charter are violated has the right to an effective remedy before an appropriate authority.”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The rights in Article 7 are the rights provided a) in the case of acts of the Union Institutions, by Articles TEC 230 (action for annulment), 232 (failure to act); and 234 (preliminary rulings); and b) in the case of Member States implementing Community law, by national rules.”

AMENDMENT 126

Proposed amendment to Article: 7

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 7. Right to an effective remedy

Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.

Reasons:

This Article (delete: 1 word) reflects Article 13 of the European Convention on Human Rights:

"Everyone whose rights and freedoms as set forth in this Convention are violated shall have an effective remedy before a national authority notwithstanding that the violation has been committed by persons acting in an official capacity."

The Court of Justice enshrined the principle in Community law in its judgment of 15 May 1986 (Johnston, Case 222/84, ECR I 651). According to the Court, this principle also applies to the Member States when they are implementing Community law. The inclusion of this precedent in the Charter is not intended to change the appeal system laid down by the Treaties, and particularly the rules relating to admissibility. This principle is to be implemented according to the procedures laid down in the Treaties: an action for annulment when the conditions for admissibility have been fulfilled or a preliminary ruling on admissibility when the case is brought before a national judge. The wording of the Article has been adapted to take account of the specific characteristics of the Union. Thus, reference to a national authority has been deleted, since the Charter applies only to institutions and organs of the Union and since, in this framework, an action may be brought either before the Community judge or before the national judge who is the ordinary-law judge as regards application of Community law. Accordingly, reference to a national authority has been replaced with reference to a court because the Court precedent refers to judicial protection.

AMENDMENT 126

Proposed amendment to Article: 7

Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈS

Proposed text:

Everyone whose rights or freedoms have been violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.

Reasons:

This wording is in line with the new wording of Article 4.

AMENDMENT 127

Proposed amendment to Article: 7. Right to an effective remedy

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated within the framework of the activities of the European Union has the right to an effective remedy before an independent and impartial court.

Reasons:

As the Charter should concern only the direct or indirect activities of the institutions of the European Union, it is important to emphasise that here.

Addition of the phrase “before an independent and impartial court” moreover makes it possible to do without Article 8 (see that Article).

AMENDMENT 128

Proposed amendment to Article: 7:

Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSER

Proposed text:

Article 7: Right to an effective remedy

Everyone whose rights and freedoms as set forth in this Charter are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.

Reasons:

This Article is meant to correspond to Article 13 of the European Convention on Human Rights. That Article contains a procedural guarantee which extends only to rights guaranteed in the ECHR; in other words it is accessory. Article 7 of the Draft should therefore also be accessory. However, the present version (CONVENT 28) would include a general right to access to a court, which already exists in Article 8 of the Draft. Our proposed wording would emphasise the binding character of the rights set forth in the Charter.

AMENDMENT 129

Proposed amendment to Article: 7. Right to an effective remedy

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed text:

Rephrase this Article in the following way: "Everyone whose rights and freedoms according to this Charter are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a competent authority".

Reasons:

There are two main problems with the draft version of this Article.

In the first place it is not at all clear what is to be understood by the notion of "rights and freedoms". Article 13 of the ECHR is limited to the rights and freedoms set forth in the ECHR. Are rights and freedoms under domestic law to be included or does the formula in Convent 28 refer only to the rights that are included in the proposed charter? Assuming the latter, I propose to insert a clarification on this point. If any right under domestic legislation is to be covered by the draft Article, including such rights that do not fall within the scope of a "civil right" as this notion is interpreted by the European Court of Human Rights in the light of Article 6 of the ECHR, parts of the procedural laws of Member States (cf. the reference in the statement of reasons to the application of "this principle" also to Member States when they are implementing Community law) probably have to be amended in order to fulfil the requirements of this Article.

A second problem is linked to the reference to "courts" rather than "national authorities", which is the term used in Article 13 of the ECHR. The statement of reasons is not convincing on this point, since national bodies are involved in the implementation of Community legislation.

AMENDMENT 130

Proposed amendment to Article: 7:

Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSER

Proposed text:

Article 7: Right to an effective remedy

Everyone whose rights and freedoms as set forth in this Charter are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.

Reasons:

This Article is meant to correspond to Article 13 of the European Convention on Human Rights. That Article contains a procedural guarantee which extends only to rights guaranteed in the ECHR; in other words it is accessory. Article 7 of the Draft should therefore also be accessory. However, this version (CONVENT 28) would include a general right to access to a court, which already exists in Article 8 of the Draft. Our proposed wording would place particular emphasis on the binding character of the rights set forth in the Charter.

AMENDMENT 131

Proposed amendment to Article: 7

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Everyone whose rights and freedoms, as recognised in this Charter, are violated has the right to effective judicial protection”

Reasons:

1. Given the context of the Charter the precise scope of this right should be specified; it should therefore be stated explicitly that the rights and freedoms to be protected are those recognised by the Charter, and no others.
2. The Spanish word ‘recurso’ [appeal] is used when a case on which sentence has already been passed by a lower body is reviewed either by an administrative or a legal body. The technically more correct phrase – “access to effective judicial protection” is therefore proposed.

The right to effective judicial protection is a fundamental “service” right, requiring that the legislator regulate the relevant form and conditions (i.e. organise the judiciary and the administration of justice) for this right to be exercised and enjoyed by anyone.

AMENDMENT 132

Proposed amendment to Article: 7

Submitted by: Erling OLSEN

Proposed text:

As I already pointed out in my written submission of 17 March 2000, this provision should either be deleted or be dealt with separately as a horizontal provision.

In any case, the words "as referred to in this Charter" should be inserted after the words "rights and freedoms". Moreover, the words "before a court" should be deleted.

Reasons:

This provision does not make sense unless it is made clear which rights and freedoms it covers.

AMENDMENT 133

Proposed amendment to Article: 7

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

"Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to an effective legal remedy before a court of competent jurisdiction."

Reasons:

This brings the text closer to Article 13 of the ECHR while taking account of the special characteristics of the Union.

AMENDMENT 134Proposed amendment to Article: 7*Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANIProposed text ^{*}:

Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court or an equivalent body.

Reasons:

As the horizontal clauses specify, the Charter applies not merely to Union bodies but also to Member States when they are applying or implementing Community law. It should therefore be made clear that, at national level, effective remedy may also be sought before “an equivalent body”, i.e. a body which, while technically speaking not forming part of the judicial machinery, will by virtue of its position and procedures provide equivalent safeguards (impartiality, fair hearing, etc.) to those of the courts.

* Proposed amendments are in bold

AMENDMENT 135

Proposed amendment to Article: 7. Right to an effect remedy

Submitted by: Micheal O'KENNEDY, TD, personal representative of the Irish Head of State/Government

Proposed text:

Article 7

Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a competent authority.

Reasons:

Change "court" to "competent authority" as there are wider sources of remedies than courts, such as an Ombudsman. This also reflects the language of the ECHR.

AMENDMENT 136

Proposed amendment to Article: 7. Right to effective legal protection (delete 1 word)

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to (delete 6 words) effective legal protection before a court.

Reasons:

“Legal protection” should be used rather than “remedy”, since “remedy” has a specific and very narrow meaning. Further, “effective remedy” could create the mistaken impression that the remedy must also in some way be successful.

The term “court” should be understood in the sense decided by the CJEC in relation to requests for preliminary ruling pursuant to the second paragraph of Article 234 of the TEC; therefore rulings on appeal in the area of asylum law, for example, may also be taken by an independent and impartial review body (see Section III point 8 of the Council Resolution of 20 June 1995 on minimum guarantees for asylum procedures, OJ C 274/13 of 19 September 1996).

AMENDMENT 137

Proposed amendment to Article: 7. Right to effective remedy

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

“Article 7. Right to effective remedy

Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.”

Reasons:

The wording in CONVENT 13 seems preferable to that in CONVENT 28 since the term “remedy”, as understood in German law, has a specific and very narrow meaning.

AMENDMENT 138

Proposed amendment to Article: 7

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

“Every one whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to effective access to the courts”.

Reasons:

The use of the word “recurso” [appeal] in the Spanish could cause confusion with a body of second instance.

AMENDMENT 139

Proposed amendment to: Article 7 (heading)

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

Article 7. Right to an effective remedy before a court

Reasons:

This brings the wording of the heading into line with the wording used in the Article.

AMENDMENT 140

Proposed amendment to Article: 7

Submitted by: José BARROS MOURA and Maria Eduarda AZEVEDO

Proposed text:

Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to an effective remedy before the national or Community court having jurisdiction.

AMENDMENT 141

Proposed amendment to Article: 7

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, MEP, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

Replace the proposed text of Article 7 by the following:

The European Union guarantees the right of everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated to an effective and rapid remedy before an independent court.

Reasons:

The European Union does not have the power to modify social conduct but has the right and the duty to establish a procedure for protection and remedy.

It is normal and necessary that rapidity be guaranteed; otherwise remedy becomes derisory.

Finally, in such a context, remedy cannot be sought in just any court.

Proposals for Article 8 as a whole

AMENDMENT 142

Proposed amendment to Article: 8. Right to a fair trial

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed text:

Reconsider the whole text of this Article.

Reasons:

Paragraph 1:

I have several problems with this text which is said to follow Article 6 of the ECHR. Not quite. Firstly, Article 6 ECHR makes a distinction between civil and criminal cases and the case law of the Strasbourg Court is extensive when it comes to the definitions, in particular regarding the meaning of "civil rights and obligations".

Paragraph 2

The draft Article leaves open the object of the "fair and public hearing". Can anyone request a tribunal to conduct a hearing on any matter whatsoever? Article 6 paragraph 1 of the ECHR applies only to cases where the "determination of [a person's] civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against [a person]" is concerned.

The way the present draft Article is construed leaves room for doubt as to whether there is a need for draft Article 7. The relationship between the two Articles needs further clarification.

I also question the second paragraph of the draft Article which seems to guarantee free legal aid in all cases, including civil matters. Like many other Member States, Sweden does not automatically grant legal aid in all matters. Article 6 of the ECHR, according to its wording, guarantees legal aid in the form of legal assistance in criminal matters only. Furthermore, neither the Article nor statement of reasons indicates who would bear the costs for what might become a substantial undertaking. EU institutions? Member States? Any estimate of the financial implications of this Article?

AMENDMENT 143

Proposed amendment to Article: 8. Right to a fair trial

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Delete this Article.

Reasons:

Paragraph 2 corresponds rather to a measure implementing the general principle set out in paragraph 1 (everyone is entitled to a fair hearing). It should therefore be included in a legislative text of a lower level, not in a charter of fundamental rights.

Paragraph 1 could be transferred to Article 8 (see amendment to that Article) so as to shorten the Charter by condensing provisions which are in any case already contained in a multitude of international texts and are disputed by no-one.

AMENDMENT 144Proposed amendment to Article: 8*Submitted by: Win GRIFFITHS, MPProposed text:

1. Everyone is equal before the law and is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.
2. Legal aid shall be provided in circumstances prescribed by member states.

Reasons:

1. The inclusion of the principle of equality before the law is a more appropriate place, I believe, than in Article One where it is linked with the dignity of the person. It is better to link it with the right in a fair trial.
2. I am not aware of a legal base making legal aid a fundamental right so if it is to be mentioned at all it should be in the context of the legislation of member states.

AMENDMENT 145Proposed amendment to Article: 8

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

The title to be changed to: "Right to access to justice"

The following text to be added to paragraph 1: "Judgment shall be pronounced publicly."

Reasons:

The proposed amendments conform more closely to the ECHR.

AMENDMENT 146

Proposed amendment to Article: 8.1 Right to a fair trial

Submitted by: Michael O'KENNEDY, TD, personal representative of the Irish Head of State/Government

Proposed text:

Article 8

1. In the determination of the civil and political rights and obligations of any person or of any criminal charge against any person, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.

Reasons:

Article 8.1 requires an introduction in order to identify in which area the right applies. It is therefore suggested that the introduction from the ECHR be restored.

AMENDMENT 147

Submitted by: Erling Olsen

Article 8:

A description of the areas covered should be added to paragraph 1.

Paragraph 1 should be reworded as follows: “In the determination of his or her civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him or her, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law”.

In paragraph 2 it should be added that legal aid is provided subject to the conditions laid down by national legislation or by the Rules of Procedure of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance.

Reasons:

Pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the ECHR, this provision covers only criminal offences and matters relating to civil rights and obligations. As regards the addition to paragraph 2, more detailed provisions concerning the right to a free trial are contained in national legislation and in the Rules of Procedure of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance. In its current form, this provision fails to specify inter alia that there must be reasonable grounds for conducting proceedings.

AMENDMENT 148Proposed amendment to Article: 8*Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSERProposed text (for the Article and the comment):*Article 8. Right to a fair trial

1. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.
2. Everyone is entitled to be advised and represented by a legal counsel in matters of law.
Legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is indispensable to ensure effective access to justice.

Reasons:This Article favours [...]In Community law [...] applies

The concept of a “court” is understood here in the broad sense as developed by the European Court for Human Rights in its case law on Article 6 of the ECHR: as an independent and impartial judicial body which decides on cases according to the law on the basis of a regulated procedure with appropriate guarantees. However, the mere fact of being termed a “court” is not sufficient.

The term “legal counsel” means that it is left to the national legal systems to regulate representation in and out of court under the law on professions.

The limitations have not been adopted [...]

Reasons:

The right to legal council is expressly provided for in some European constitutions (Netherlands, Portugal, Italy, Spain) and should therefore be included in the Draft.

The term “court” must be explained to take account of the wide range of judicial bodies in the Member States.

AMENDMENT 149

Proposed amendment to Article: 8

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text: Article 8. Right to a fair trial

1. In the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.
2. Everyone is entitled to make use of a legal counsel. Legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is indispensable to ensure effective access to justice.

Reasons: The heading should refer to the general concept of a “fair trial”. The right to an impartial tribunal is only one part of this, albeit an important one.

Unlike the Praesidium Draft, the proposed wording of paragraph 1 follows the rule in Article 6(1) of the ECHR that this fundamental right applies to “the determination of (his) civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge”. Right of access to a court for all actions – the basis for the statement of reasons in the Praesidium text – is already guaranteed in Article 7. The specific procedural guarantees, in particular the principle of a public trial, should in accordance with Article 6 of the ECHR refer to civil rights and obligations and/or criminal charges.

The proposed text avoids having to allow for numerous exceptional procedures (e.g. tax tribunals) via the “general limitation clause”. It makes it immediately clearer to citizens what their rights are. The wording should not create the impression that comprehensive and very far-reaching rights are being promised, which are then largely taken away by a single provision.

The first sentence of paragraph 2 contains a proposal for a new right entitling every person to make use of a legal counsel. In view of the complexity of legal provisions, this right is one of the essential requirements for holding a fair trial. It can also be seen as the logical prerequisite for the right to legal aid guaranteed under the second sentence of paragraph 2. This second sentence follows the Praesidium Draft word for word.

AMENDMENT 150

Proposed amendment to: Article 8

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Right to an impartial judge

Replace “prudencial” with “razonable” [reasonable] in the Spanish text, replace “tribunal” with “judicial authority” and replace “established” with “predetermined”. Amend the second sentence by adding: “unless the claim is manifestly untenable or unfounded”.

Reasons:

The word “razonable” is more correct in Spanish, and moreover is the word used in the ECHR. The term “judicial authority” is more correct in Spanish in that it covers both single court judges and collegiate bodies, which is what tribunals are in Spain. The phrase “predetermined by law” is better than “established”.

As regards free legal aid, the ECHR has agreed that under the Convention such aid may be refused if the claim is manifestly unfounded.

AMENDMENT 151

Proposed amendment to Article: 8. Right to an independent tribunal

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

“Article 8. Right to an independent tribunal.

1. “Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law”.
2. Legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is indispensable to ensure effective access to justice, and where there is a reasonable chance of success.
3. Special tribunals are inadmissible.”

Reasons:

The addition to paragraph 2, “ and where there is a reasonable chance of success” is intended to prevent legal aid being requested for actions which are clearly hopeless or querulous.

The proposed paragraph 3 is intended to exclude special tribunals which would thwart the legal protection of citizens.

AMENDMENT 152

Proposed amendment to Article: 8

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Substitute the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

"1. “Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable period of any criminal charge against him or her, or in determining his or her civil rights and obligations. Hearings shall be by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.

"2. “If it is a criminal charge, the accused shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law and has certain guaranteed rights to defend himself or herself.”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The rights in Article 8 are the rights guaranteed by Article 6 of the ECHR”

Reasons:

My amendment defines the right in terms of the relevant ECHR provision. The CONVENT 28 draft is not an accurate expression of the relevant obligations accepted by parties to the ECHR. I do not accept the implied additional general obligations in Article 8 (e.g. relating to hearings in the determinations of all disputes, whether or not about a civil right or obligation or a criminal charge, and legal aid). Accordingly they should not be included in the Charter. I also disagree (for the reasons given in relation to Article 5 above) that it is possible or acceptable to deal with limitations to rights such as these in a general horizontal article.

In any event the detailed provisions of Article 6 ECHR, the corresponding right in this case, contain many positive rights which are not picked up by the short form text, either in the Praesidium’s text or in mine. It is to attract those, as well as any limitations, that the Part B definition text is necessary. This point applies also to several other ECHR-based Articles.

AMENDMENT 153

Proposed amendment to Article: 8. Right to a fair trial

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text:

1. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.
2. To ensure effective access to justice, legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources.

Reasons:

The proposed text retains the principle of free legal aid for those in need. The stipulation that the aid must be “indispensable” to ensure effective access to justice has been left out in order to widen access to justice. The omission of this supplementary condition is in line with the case law of the European Court of Human Rights (see the note to this Article in CONVENT 13).

Proposals for Article 8(1)

AMENDMENT 154Proposed amendment to Article: 8(1)

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands government

Proposed text:

1. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. All or part of the trial may be held in camera under the conditions listed in Article 6(1) of the ECHR, but judgment shall be pronounced publicly.

Reasons:

The proposed text follows Article 6(1) of the ECHR more closely since it states explicitly that judgment must be pronounced publicly and also refers to the grounds on which the court may decide that all or part of the proceedings are to be held in camera. For the sake of brevity, reference is made to Article 6(1) of the ECHR.

AMENDMENT 155

Proposed amendment to Article: 8

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

In paragraph 1, replace “established” by “already established”.

Reasons:

The proposed amendment is designed to strengthen the right to a fair trial: by emphasising that the tribunal must already be established, it aims to avoid the possibility of ad hoc laws.

AMENDMENT 156

Proposed amendment to Article: 8

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

A new paragraph to be inserted between paragraphs 1 and 2:

2. Judgment shall be pronounced publicly. This right shall not be subject to any restrictions other than those permitted under Article 6(1) of the ECHR.

Reasons:

The text thus conforms more closely to the ECHR.

Proposals for Article 8(2)

AMENDMENT 157

Proposed amendment to Article: 8(2) Right to a fair trial

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

Delete paragraph 2

Reasons:

This provision is only binding for access to the CJEC, as the Union is not competent for regulating national provisions on legal aid. For the CJEC, the institution of legal aid is sufficiently embodied in its Rules of Procedure. Moreover, the intent of paragraph 2 is already contained in paragraph 1: it is inherent in the right to a fair trial.

The provision is also problematic from a budgetary perspective.

AMENDMENT 158

Proposed amendment to Article: 8(2)

Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANI

Proposed text ^{*}:

Legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is necessary to ensure effective access to justice.

Reasons:

“Necessary” is proposed instead of “indispensable”, as it is felt that the latter excessively restricts the substance of the right to legal aid.

* Proposed amendments are in bold

AMENDMENT 159

Proposed amendment to Article: 8

Submitted by: José BARROS MOURA and Maria Eduarda AZVEDO

Proposed text:

Concerns the term used for “legal aid” in the Portuguese version only.

AMENDMENT 160Proposed amendment to Article: 8

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

In paragraph 2, replace “Legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is indispensable” by “Those who lack sufficient resources shall be provided with the necessary legal aid”.

Reasons:

The proposed amendment is designed to strengthen the right to a fair trial.

AMENDMENT 161

Proposed amendment to Article: 8

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

1. Free legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is indispensable to ensure effective access to justice and their defence.
2. This also applies to witnesses and to victims of acts of criminal violence.

Reasons:

1. Legal aid must be free so as to ensure equality before the law for everyone.
2. With respect to paragraph 2, it would be desirable if – particularly in criminal proceedings – in addition to the rights of the accused, those of the witnesses or those of the victims of acts of criminal violence in general were provided for in an appropriate manner and if they were also guaranteed free, effective protection of their rights in proceedings. This is proposed in the new sentence 3.

AMENDMENT 162Proposed amendment to Article: 8

Submitted by: Prof. Jürgen MEYER/Pervenche BERES/ Jo LEINEN/Hans-Peter MARTIN /Ieke VAN DEN BURG

Proposed text:

Article 8 Right to a fair trial and legal counsel

1. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. Everyone is entitled in matters of law to be advised and represented by a lawyer.
2. Legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is indispensable to ensure effective access to justice.

Reasons:

Paragraph 1 sentence 1 follows the Praesidium's wording.

In sentence 2 the right to a legal counsel is supplemented. Although this right is not explicitly mentioned in the German Basic Law, the Federal Constitutional Court has derived such a right from the concept of the constitutional state (Constitutional Court 63, 266, 284).

This right is expressly provided for in the constitutions of the Netherlands (Art. 18), Italy (Art. 24), Portugal (Art. 20(2) and Art. 269(3) and Spain (Art. 17(3) and Art. 24(2)).

Paragraph 2 follows the Praesidium's wording.

Proposals for Article 9 as a whole

AMENDMENT 163Proposed amendment to Article: 9*Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEPProposed text:*Article 9. Presumption of innocence and rights (delete: 2 words) to defence

Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law, and shall have the right to a defence.

(Delete: paragraph 2)Statement of reasons

This Article is taken from Article 6(2) and (3) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.*
- 3. Everyone charged with a criminal offence has the following minimum rights:*
- (a) to be informed promptly, in a language which he understands and in detail, of the nature and cause of the accusation against him;*
 - (b) to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence;*
 - (c) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or, if he has not sufficient means to pay for legal assistance, to be given it free when the interests of justice so require;*
 - (d) to examine or have examined witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him;*

- (e) to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court."

Given the decision taken in favour of concise drafting, it was not thought necessary to include this Article in full, but in accordance with Article 6 of the TEU these provisions, which clarify the principles set out in the Article of the Charter, are applicable in Community law.

AMENDMENT 164

Proposed amendment to Article: 9. Presumption of innocence and rights of the defence

Submitted by: Michael O'KENNEDY, TD, personal representative of the Irish Head of State/Government

Proposed text:

Article 9

Everyone who has been charged with a criminal offence shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.

Everyone who has been charged with a criminal offence shall be guaranteed respect for that person's right to defence.

Reasons:

It is suggested that "with a criminal offence" be included as it conforms with the ECHR and it makes clear that the Article is about criminal offences only. The original formulation would cause unforeseen consequences if not amended.

AMENDMENT 165

Proposed amendment to Article: 9. Presumption of innocence and rights of the defence

Submitted by: Charlotte CEDERSCHIÖLD

Proposed text:

1. [In the Swedish text, the words "för ett brott" should be deleted and the word "hans" changed to "hans/hennes".]
2. Everyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed respect for his or her rights to defence.
[In the Swedish text, the words "för ett brott" should be deleted.]

Reasons:

The Swedish version, which includes the words "ett brott" ["a crime"], does not correspond to the French or English versions. The Swedish version should be changed so that it corresponds to the French and English versions; the words "ett brott" should therefore be deleted from this Article.

AMENDMENT 166Proposed amendment to Article: 9

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Now covered in Article 8. Therefore delete.

Reasons:

My version of Article 8 deals with the matters in Article 9. In any event, as it stands and without a clear definition in the Part B text defining these rights as the right in Article 6 ECHR, Article 9 would be much too imprecise and apt to create confusion and conflict.

Proposals for Article 9(1)

AMENDMENT 167

Proposed amendment to Article: 9(1)

Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANI

Proposed text ^{*}:

Everyone who has been charged with a criminal offence shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.

Reasons:

This addition, whereby the person must have been charged “with a criminal offence”, comes from Article 6(2) of the ECHR and makes clear that the presumption of innocence does not apply to “charges” in connection with investigations under administrative law.

* Proposed amendments are in bold

AMENDMENT 168

Proposed amendment to Article: 9

Submitted by: Win GRIFFITHS, MP

Proposed Text:

Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proven guilty according to the law and guaranteed respect for his/her rights of defence.

Delete 2

Reasons:

Brevity without loss of meaning.

Proposals for Article 9(2) and (3)

AMENDMENT 169Proposed amendment to Article: 9

Submitted by: Kathalijne BUITENWEG

Proposed text:

Paragraph 2 to be amended as follows:

2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence has the following minimum rights:

- (a) to be informed promptly, in a language which he understands and in detail, of the nature and cause of the accusation against him;
- (b) to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence;
- (c) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or, if he has not sufficient means to pay for legal assistance, to be given it free when the interests of justice so require;
- (d) to examine or have examined witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him;
- (e) to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court.

Reasons:

This amendment replaces paragraph 2 with the verbatim text of Article 6(3) of the ECHR. A list of the "rights of the defence" is best placed in a charter of fundamental rights.

AMENDMENT 170

Proposed amendment to Article: 9

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 6(2): Everyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed respect for his rights to defence pursuant to Article 6(2) and (3) of the ECHR.

Reasons:

The text thus conforms more closely to the ECHR.

AMENDMENT 171

Proposed amendment to Article: 9(2)

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

“Everyone who has been charged has the right to respect for his rights of defence”. (No change to English text.)

Reasons:

The non-gender specific wording “jeder angeklagten Person” is preferable to “jedem Angeklagten” which can only be masculine (translator’s note: this applies to the German only).

AMENDMENT 172

Proposed amendments to Article: 9. Presumption of innocence and rights of the defence

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed textU:

Proposal (9.2):

It is suggested to change "respects for his rights" to "the right".

Reasons:

Article 6 paragraph 3 of the ECHR provides important minimum standards for human rights protection in the field of criminal procedural law. It therefore seems insufficient to refer to those rights merely by means of a reference to Article 6 of the TEU. In any event it seems uncertain in which situations this Article is supposed to be applied: to what extent does Community law allow its institutions to charge or prosecute individual citizens?

Guaranteeing only "respect for his rights" seems very weak.

AMENDMENT 173Proposed amendment to Article: 9(2)

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands government

Proposed text:

2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence has the following minimum rights:
 - (a) to be informed promptly, in a language which he understands and in detail, of the nature and cause of the accusation against him;
 - (b) to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence;
 - (c) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing or, if he has not sufficient means to pay for legal assistance, to be given it free when the interests of justice so require;
 - (d) to examine or have examined witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him;
 - (e) to have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court.

Alternative:

2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence is entitled to respect for his rights to defence, as laid down in Article 6(3) of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Reasons:

Article 6(3) of the ECHR has been incorporated word for word. The only change is the use of the term "strafvervolging" [charged with a criminal offence] instead of "vervolging" [charged] in Dutch, for the sake of clarity. It is not sufficient here to refer to the ECHR, as the provision is concerned not with any limitations on rights but with the actual substance of those rights. Should this version not be desirable in the interests of keeping the Charter concise, the alternative, making clear the defence rights involved by reference to Article 6(3) of the ECHR, will suffice.

AMENDMENT 174

Proposed amendment to Article: 9(3)

Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈS

Proposed text:

Add:

3. Everyone who has been denied justice has the right to compensation.

Reasons:

Proposals for Article 10 as a whole

AMENDMENT 175

Proposed amendment to Article: 10 – No punishment without law

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Delete this Article.

Reasons:

The first sentence of paragraph 1 posits an excellent principle (no punishment without law) but which, as it says itself, stems from national or international law, and not from European law.

The continuation of the Article (after the first sentence) sets out simple procedures for applying the general principle and should have been deleted in any case for reasons of simplification, even if the first sentence had been retained.

AMENDMENT 176

Proposed amendment to Article: 10

Submitted by: Dr Peter Michael MOMBAUR, MEP

Proposed text:

Proposed text for the heading:

"No punishment without general legal rule"

Reasons:

See reasons given for Article 1(2).

[For the record SN 2888/00: The term "law" ("Gesetz") belongs to the Member States' legal domain. Its use elsewhere in the draft Charter should consequently also be checked.]

AMENDMENT 177Proposed amendment to Article: 10*Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈSProposed text:Title: Principle of legality

No one shall be held guilty of any offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute an offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the offence, the offence is abolished or a new law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be immediately applicable.

Reasons:

It is important to provide for the case where the offence no longer exists, as was the case with abortion, and in future the possible decriminalisation of certain drugs.

AMENDMENT 178

Proposed amendment to Article: 10. No punishment without law

Submitted by: Charlotte CEDERSCHIÖLD

Proposed text:

1. No one shall be held guilty of any offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute an offence ¹ under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of international law.

Reasons:

The translation into Swedish which includes "ett brott" does not correspond to the French and English versions. "Offence" in English means more than "brott" does in Swedish – "brott" should be "criminal offence" in English. The Swedish version should be amended so that it corresponds to the French and English texts and therefore "ett brott" should be deleted from the Article.

"Lagöverträdelse" is proposed as a translation instead, which is closer to "offence"/"infraction" respectively.

¹ Does not concern English text.

AMENDMENT 179Proposed amendment to Article: 10*Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSERProposed text:

Article 10. No punishment without law

1. *No one shall be held guilty of any offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute an offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be used as a basis when the penalty is determined.
2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of international law¹.

Reasons:

In its original wording the last sentence of paragraph 1 is misleading since it literally directs that the penalty should be applicable in any case.

In the German version the more common term "Völkerrecht" should be used in paragraph 2 instead of "internationales Recht".

¹ Does not concern English text.

AMENDMENT 180

Proposed amendment to Article: 10

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Substitute the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

Delete the last sentence of 10.1 and all of 10.2 so that the text reads:

“No one shall be held guilty of any offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute an offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the offence was committed”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 10 is the right guaranteed by Article 7 of the ECHR”

Reasons:

I have no objections of substance to the Praesidium’s proposed text, although I have previously suggested a text which might be shorter and easier to understand, namely “No one shall be punished except under the law.” My proposals for Part B ensure that Article 10 is understood within the meaning of ECHR Article 7. I have not included the reference made to the principle of retroactivity of a more lenient penal law. I confirm that the UK recognises that principle, but await confirmation that that is so in other Member States.

AMENDMENT 181

Proposed amendment to Article: 10. No punishment without law

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text:

1. No-one shall be held guilty of any offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute an offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of an offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of law.

Reasons:

The proposed text is intended to replace the term "general principles of international law" (CONVENT 28 version) with "general principles of (international) law". The latter term is broader in scope and is also more in keeping with the terminology used in public international law. The "general principles of (international) law" represent the fundamental rules of the various national legal systems (FRIEDMANN, W., "The uses of "General Principles" in the Development of International Law", in American Journal of International Law, 1963, pp. 279-299; DEGAN, V.D., "General Principles of Law – A Source of General International Law", in Finnish Yearbook of International Law, 1992, pp. 1-102; ELIAS, O. and LIM, C., "General Principles of Law", "Soft" Law and the Identification of International Law", in Netherlands Yearbook of International Law, 1997, pp. 3-50). As regards the origin of the "general principles of (international) law", legal theory divides them into three types (MOSLER, H., "General Principles of Law", in Encyclopedia of Public International Law, BERNHARD, R (ed.), Amsterdam, Elsevier, 1995, Vol.II, pp. 511-527): (1) the general principles of law which are recognised in national legal systems and which are relevant to international law; (2) the general principles of law which have come into being in international relations; (3) the general principles of law which apply in all kinds of legal systems, whether national or international.

Proposals for Article 10(1)

AMENDMENT 182

Proposed amendment to Article: 10

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 10. No punishment without law

No one shall be held guilty of any offence (delete: 7 words) which did not constitute an offence under (delete: 4 words) law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the offence was committed. If, subsequent to the (delete: 1 word) committing of the offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.

(Delete: paragraph 2)

Reasons:

This Article is intended to reflect Article 7 of the ECHR, and follows the traditional principle of the non-retroactivity of laws and criminal sanctions. There has been added the principle of the retroactivity of a more lenient penal law which exists in a number of Member States and which features in Article 15 of the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. Article 7 of the European Convention on Human Rights is worded as follows:

- "1. No one shall be held guilty of any criminal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a criminal offence under national or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the criminal offence was committed.*
- 2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of law recognised by civilised nations."*

In paragraph 2, the reference to "general principles of law recognised by civilised nations" has been replaced by the more modern reference to "general principles of international law"; this does not change the meaning of this paragraph, which refers to crimes against humanity in particular.

AMENDMENT 183

Proposed amendment to Article: 10

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

In paragraph 1, replace “under national or international law” with “under the law in force”.

Reasons:

The amendment to paragraph 1 is intended to prevent overlapping with paragraph 2.

AMENDMENT 184

Proposed amendment to Article: 10

Submitted by: François LONCLE

Proposed text:

Article 10

In the final sentence of paragraph 1, the word “lighter” should be replaced by “lesser”.

Reasons:

Editorial amendment in line with the terminology used in criminal law.

Proposals for Article 10(2)

AMENDMENT 185

Proposed amendments to Article: 10(2)

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text: regarding “Principle of legality in criminal cases”

Paragraph 2: should be deleted.

Reasons:

Paragraph 2 introduces an open-ended criminal offence, “any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of international law”, which is incompatible with the principle of legality in criminal cases. Vague, unspecific and open-ended references to “the general principles of international law” in order to classify forms of behaviour as offences are inadmissible. In criminal matters, which are strictly subject to a reservation in law, references to indefinite generic “principles” create major legal uncertainty.

This provision should be deleted or, at the very least, the term “general principles” should be removed.

AMENDMENT 186

Proposed amendments to Article: 10(2)

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment for any act or omission in connection with crimes against humanity which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of international law.

Reasons:

The inclusion of the reference to “crimes against humanity” more clearly defines the purpose of Article 10(2).

AMENEDMENT 187

Proposed amendments to Article: 10(2)

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

In paragraph 2, replace “of international law” with “of the international legal system”.

Reasons:

The amendment to paragraph 2 uses the expression “international legal system” to include evolving principles now established in the international community.

Proposals for Article 10a

AMENDMENT 188

Proposed amendments to Article: 10

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

Add the following after Article 10:

“Article 10a. right to equal humane treatment

1. Any punishment or penalty shall be proportionate to the seriousness of the offence and shall not exceed the limits of what is appropriate and necessary to the achievement of the aim sought.
2. Punishment may not consist of inhumane treatment and shall be directed towards the re-education of the convicted person.”

Reasons:

The principle enshrined in paragraph 1 has frequently been asserted in the decisions of the Court of Justice (see judgement in the Atalanta Case, 21/6/79).

Paragraph 2 establishes a civilised principle accepted in a number of European constitutions or legal systems.

Proposals for Article 11

AMENDMENT 189

Proposed amendments to Article: 11. Right not to be tried or punished twice

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text: Delete this Article.

Reasons:

This Article deals explicitly with criminal law, which comes within the Member States' jurisdiction. If it were to remain, it would need to be linked to specific European jurisdiction, which is not the case here.

It should be noted that the same criticism could probably be levelled at the previous Articles, although there is no express reference in them to criminal law.

AMENDMENT 190Proposed amendment to Article: 11*Submitted by: Erling OLSENProposed text:

The provision in Article 4(2) of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR on the reopening of a criminal case should be incorporated into Article 11, or be clearly evident from Part B.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 191Proposed amendment to Article: 11*Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEPProposed text:*Article 11. Right not to be tried or punished twice

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been (delete: 1 word) lawfully acquitted or convicted (delete: 5 words).

Statement of reasons

Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the European Convention of Human Rights reads as follows:

- "1. No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings under the jurisdiction of the same State for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law and penal procedure of that State.*
- 2. The provisions of the preceding paragraph shall not prevent the reopening of the case in accordance with the law and the penal procedure of the State concerned, if there is evidence of new or newly discovered facts, or if there has been a fundamental defect in the previous proceedings, which could affect the outcome of the case.*
- 3. No derogation from this Article shall be made under Article 15 of the Convention."*

Paragraph 2 of the Article in Protocol No 7 will be applicable by virtue of the horizontal clause relating to the Convention. The "non bis in idem" principle applies in Community law (see, among the many precedents, the judgment of 5 May 1996, Cases 18/65 and 35/65, Gutmann v Commission [1966] ECR 150 and a recent case, the decision of the Court of First Instance of 20 April 1999, Joined Cases T-305/94 and others, Limburgse Vinyl Maatschappij-NV v Commission, not yet published).

AMENDMENT 192

Proposed amendment to Article: 11

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law, in accordance with Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR.

Reasons:

This text fits in better with the ECHR and moreover leaves open the possibility of a case being reviewed (on the basis of new facts or circumstances).

AMENDMENT 193Proposed amendment to Article: 11*Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTESProposed text:

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law, due account being taken of the requirements of Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the European Convention on Human Rights.

Reasons:

The addition of a reference to Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR is necessary as the provision would otherwise be too imprecise.

AMENDMENT 194

Proposed amendments to Article: 11. Right not to be tried or punished twice

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed text:

The draft text needs to be complemented and include what is presently in paragraph 2 of Article 4 of Protocol 7 to the ECHR.

Reasons:

The draft roughly corresponds to paragraph 1 of Article 4 of Protocol 7 of the ECHR but leaves out paragraph 2. The explanation that the latter will be applicable by virtue of the horizontal clause is not sufficient. It needs to be reproduced, at least in part B.

If the Charter later becomes a legally binding text it would be acceptable only with an inclusion of paragraph 2 of Article 4 of Protocol 7 ECHR.

AMENDMENT 195Proposed amendment to Article: 11

Submitted by: Guy BRAIBANT, personal representative of the President of the French Republic and the French Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Add "and with the penal procedure of that State" to this Article after "in accordance with the law".

Reasons:

This addition is in line with Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR. It is essential in order to ensure that no court interprets this provision as prohibiting the application of both an administrative and a criminal penalty for one and the same offence.

AMENDMENT 196

Proposed amendment to Article: 11. Right not to be tried or sentenced twice for one and the same offence

Submitted by: Jordi SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

"No one shall be liable to be tried or sentenced again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law."

Reasons:

The term "sentenced" is more appropriate in law than "punished", which is a more general word, more often used outside the legal context. The amended title of the Article is clearer, since anybody can be tried and sentenced more than once for different offences.

AMENDMENT 197Proposed amendment to Article: 11*Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANIProposed text *:

“No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings within the same legal system for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in criminal proceedings in accordance with the law of that system.”

Reasons:

Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR, from which the present regulation draws inspiration, establishes the non bis in idem principle only for the jurisdiction of a single State. At present, international law allows one country to try for the same act a person who has already been tried and convicted in another country (e.g. in cases of international drug trafficking or counterfeiting of money). It is therefore proposed to specify that the prohibition of second trials applies only within a single "legal system". This expression is preferred to the word "State" used in Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR to allow extension of the regulation to Union bodies in the event, rather remote in fact, that in the future the Union assumes direct powers in criminal matters. It also needs to be specified that the final judgment that prevents a second trial must be a judgment "in criminal proceedings".

* The parts it is proposed to amend are indicated in bold.

AMENDMENT 198

Proposed amendment to Article: 11

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

Insert “, under the jurisdiction of the European Union or of one of its Member States,” between “for which” and “he has already been finally”.

Reasons:

This proposed qualification, which is also included in the ECHR, is indispensable.

AMENDMENT 199

Proposed amendment to Article: 11

Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈS

Proposed text:

Heading: Right not to be tried or convicted twice

Reasons:

The term “conviction” is more accurate.

AMENDMENT 200

Proposed amendment to Article: 11

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Right not to be tried or convicted twice in criminal proceedings for the same conduct

No one shall be liable to be tried or convicted again in criminal proceedings for conduct for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in criminal proceedings.

or alternatively:

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in criminal proceedings in accordance with the law.

Reasons:

The fact that this Article applies only to criminal proceedings needs to be made clearer, thus leaving open the possibility of both a criminal and a disciplinary penalty for the same conduct. Spain has not ratified Protocol No 7 to the ECHR. The problem which this principle raises is its extension to disciplinary matters, prohibiting the imposition of both a criminal and an administrative penalty for the same conduct in the case of the special constraints which apply, for instance, to civil servants or others having particularly close links with the administration (for example, an employee of the authorities may receive a custodial sentence for murder from a criminal court and may subsequently, as a consequence of the criminal conviction, be dismissed from the administration by an administrative authority in disciplinary proceedings. Besides this, the first wording is preferred in this case as it more precisely confines the scope of the preclusion of double jeopardy to two criminal penalties for the same conduct, rather than offence, although an alternative draft accommodating the above comments is also proposed.

The reservations expressed by Spain are shared by other States in the Union.

A qualification must be attached to the renewed assertion in the statement of reasons that “the “non bis in idem” principle applies in Community law (see, among the many precedents, the judgment of 5 May 1996, Cases 18/65 and 35/65, Gutmann v. Commission [1966] ECR 150 and a recent case, the decision of the Court of First Instance of 20 April 1999, Joined Cases T-305/94 and others, Limburgse Vinyl Maatschappij NV v. Commission, not yet published)”. At least in the case of the first decision, which it has been possible to consult, what it covers is a prohibition on double non-criminal disciplinary penalties (in the case in question, imposed by the Commission on a Community official) for the same conduct, a different matter from that considered here. In Spanish, the term [sentencia] “firme” (i.e. not open to any further appeal) is considered more technically correct than “definitiva” (i.e. not merely interlocutory) for “finally”.

AMENDMENT 201

Proposed amendment to Article: 11

Submitted by; Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Substitute the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

“No one shall be tried or punished twice for the same criminal offence”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 11 is the right guaranteed by Article 4 of Protocol 7 to the ECHR. It does not prevent the reopening of the case in accordance with the law if there is evidence of new or newly discovered facts, or if there has been a fundamental defect in the previous proceedings which could affect the outcome of the case”

Reasons:

The Praesidium draft differs from the corresponding ECHR right because it is not confined to retrial in the same state and because it may prevent cases being reopened in circumstances where ECHR Protocol 7 would permit that. I do not believe that ECJ case law or the constitutional traditions common to the member states justify the Praesidium wording. My version ensures that Article 11 is understood within the meaning of Article 4 of ECHR Protocol 7 and the case law. It also makes clear, in Part B, that there are very significant qualifications.

AMENDMENT 202

Proposed amendment to Article: 11

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

No one may be tried or convicted again for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law.

Reasons:

For reasons of legal exactitude, the phrase punished in criminal proceedings should be replaced by the word convicted.

AMENDMENT 203

Proposed amendment to Article: 11

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

After "acquitted or convicted", add "in criminal proceedings."

Reasons:

The double jeopardy principle relates solely to judgments in criminal cases (a disciplinary or administrative penalty is no obstacle to criminal proceedings for the same conduct).

AMENDMENT 204

Proposed amendment to Article: 11. Right not to be tried or punished twice

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text:

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings in a Member State of the European Union for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in a Member State of the European Union.

Reasons:

The existing version (CONVENT 28) implies that the jurisdiction of every other State in the world must be recognised. However, Article 4 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR limits such recognition to jurisdiction within a State. The text proposed here occupies an intermediate position and extends the recognition of judgments in criminal cases to Member States of the European Union. The preclusion of double jeopardy then applies within this single judicial area.

AMENDMENT 205Proposed amendment to Article: 11

Submitted by: Paul-Henri MEYERS, representative of the Luxembourg Government

Proposed text:

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings by a court of a State for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or pardoned in accordance with the law of that State or of another State.

Reasons:

The absolute wording of the text is out of line with the provisions of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, signed in Rome on 17 July 1998. In Article 20, the Statute expressly requires compliance with the double jeopardy principle (ne bis in idem). However, an exception to that principle is made in the same Article for instances where the aim of proceedings before another court was to shield a person from his criminal responsibility.

AMENDMENT 206

Proposed amendment to Article: 11

Submitted by: Simone BEISSEL

Proposed text:

“... finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law, subject to the provisions concerning the jurisdiction and organisation of the International Criminal Court”.

Reasons:

To avoid a conflict of texts.

Proposals for Article 12

AMENDMENT 207Proposed amendments to Article: 12

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed text:

Merge this text with the present draft Article 13 (paragraph 1) and make sure that the wording corresponds to Article 8 of the ECHR.

Reasons:

Draft Article 12 is said to be based on Article 8 of the ECHR. That Article, however, refers to respect for private and family life. It is difficult to separate the two concepts. A single Article covering both aspects would be preferable.

The words "honour and reputation" have been added. It is not entirely clear how these terms should be interpreted. Concern has been expressed that this addition might entail limitations on the freedom of expression.

Paragraph 2 of Article 8 of the ECHR has not been included in draft Article 12. Instead there is a separate draft horizontal Article dealing with limitations in general terms. That Article speaks of legitimate interests, a term found in the case-law of the European Court. Unlike Article 8 (and also Articles 9, 10 and 11) it does not specify which those interests are. Exceptions from a right should be defined as precisely as possible. It is therefore preferable to have a special paragraph in this Article dealing with exceptions, as in the ECHR.

AMENDMENT 208

Proposed amendment to Article: 12

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 12. Respect for private life

Everyone has the right to respect for his or her privacy, (delete: 5 words) home (delete: 6 words) and communications.

Reasons:

This Article is based on Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence.*

- 2. There shall be no interference by a public authority with the exercise of this right except such as is in accordance with the law and is necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security, public safety or the economic well-being of the country, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others."*

AMENDMENT 209

Proposed amendment to Article: 12

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

Add: No limitations on this right going beyond those possible under Article 8 of the ECHR shall be permitted.

Reasons:

This aligns the text more closely on the ECHR.

AMENDMENT 210

Proposed amendment to Article: 12

Submitted by: Win GRIFFITHS, MP

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to respect for his/her privacy, his/her home and correspondence.

Reasons:

This is closer to the ECHR Article 8. This issue of honour and reputation would be better considered in the preamble if inclusion is thought to be essential Strasbourg Court judgements have already determined, I believe, that correspondence covers all forms of modern communication such as e-mails.

AMENDMENT 211

Proposed amendments to Article: 12

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

Delete “his honour and his reputation” and replace “geheim” (“secrecy”) in the Dutch text by “vertrouwelijkheid” (“confidentiality”).

Reasons:

The right to respect for honour and reputation has no need of protection as a fundamental right. Protection is already guaranteed by both the civil and the criminal law remedies which are available.

The equivalent of “confidential correspondence and communications” would be more natural in Dutch than “secrecy of correspondence” or “secrecy of communications”.

AMENDMENT 212

Proposed amendments to Article: 12

Submitted by: Kathalijne BUITENWEG and Johannes VOGGENHUBER

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy (5 words deleted), his home and the confidentiality of his correspondence and communications.

Reasons:

The addition of a right to the protection of honour and reputation goes beyond Article 15(2) of the ECHR and threatens to undermine freedom of expression and freedom of the press.

AMENDMENT 213

Proposed amendments to Article: 12. Respect for privacy

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

"Article 12: Respect for privacy

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy, his personality (5 words deleted), his home and place of business and his communications, in particular the confidentiality of his correspondence and communication.
2. (new) Everyone has the right to determine for himself whether his personal data may be disclosed and how they may be used.

Reasons:

Re the heading and paragraph 1:

The concept of "private life" appears to be too narrow in view of the risks facing modern man. "Privacy" is, therefore, a more appropriate term.

Both home and place of business need to be protected.

The insertion of the concept of "communications" is intended to cover new media developments, e.g. Internet communications.

Re paragraph 2:

Paragraph 2 has been taken from Article 19 on data protection, which is to be deleted, and in terms of both content and systematic arrangement belongs here.

AMENDMENT 214

Proposed amendment to Article: 12

Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSER

Proposed text:

Article 12. Respect for private life

*Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy, his honour and his reputation, his home and his communications.

Statement of reasons:

This Article is based on [...].

The term "honour" has been added [...].

This fundamental right has also to be weighed against other fundamental rights in individual instances, in particular the right to freedom of speech or of the press.

Reasons:

The English term "communications" is better rendered in German by the far more comprehensive term "Kommunikation".

Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights, on which this Article draws, does not include the terms "honour" and "reputation". Their inclusion in draft Article 12 could create the impression here that, in the event of a conflict of fundamental rights with the right to freedom of expression, the scales are being tilted against freedom of speech. The balance between respect for private life and freedom of speech should remain unaltered.

AMENDMENT 215Proposed amendments to Article: 12

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

"Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy, his honour and his reputation; the right to the inviolability of the home and the confidentiality of communications, irrespective of the medium used, shall also be guaranteed ... The exercise of such rights may be limited by law for reasons of public policy and, where appropriate, subject to prior judicial authorisation."

Reasons:

The alternative version includes a reference to the limits on the exercise of this right. The non-compliance expressed in the previous amendments to the form in which rights and their limits are defined is thus repeated. The conviction that the limits on rights are part and parcel of their content and very definition must be added to all that has been previously stated. In some cases, as with the freedom of expression, the limit is established specifically in defence of other rights, such as the right to honour or privacy. In the case of those rights which apply also to private relationships, the idea that the statement of limits somehow deprives the right of any expressive force, when what it does is precisely the reverse, i.e. it guarantees such right, has to be resisted. The limitations are intended not so much for States as for the citizenry. In this case there has to be a reference to both the existence of limits on such rights (see Article 8 of the ECHR), and even the requirement that they be established by law, and their guarantee, with the requirement of limitation by judicial act.

AMENDMENT 216

Proposed amendments to Article: 12. Respect for private life

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

"Article 12: Respect for privacy

Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy, his honour and his reputation, his home and his communications, in particular the confidentiality of his correspondence and communications."

Reasons:

The notion of "private life" appears to be too narrow in view of the risks facing modern man. The term "privacy" is, therefore, proposed.

The adoption of the modern term "communications" – already originally provided for in CONVENT 13 – is designed to guarantee coverage of the entire Internet problem.

AMENDMENT 217Proposed amendments to Article: 12

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

"Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy (5 words deleted), his home and the confidentiality of his correspondence and communications."

Reasons:

The explicit protection of a person's "honour and reputation" involves the risk of huge restrictions on the right of free speech, particularly in the case of criticism levelled at people in public life and at state institutions. Reference may also be made to Article 1, which expressly protects human dignity.

AMENDMENT 218

Proposed amendments to Article: 12

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text:

"Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy, his honour and his reputation, his home and the confidentiality of his information and communications (secrecy of correspondence and communications)".

Reasons:

In order to give greater force to the idea, already tackled in the proposal of the Praesidium, that developments in means of communication be taken into account, we propose that a right to respect for the confidentiality of information and communications be fundamentally incorporated.

In the light of technical developments, it should be made clear at the outset that this Article extends protection to confidential information and communications, including if necessary the confidentiality of the sender or the recipient of such information or communications, irrespective of the means of communication selected. Such protection covers any information and communications intended by the sender not for general consumption but for a specific person or a limited, set number of persons, excluding third parties.

AMENDMENT 219

Proposed amendment to Article: 12

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

Replace the text of the Article with the following:

"Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy, his honour and his reputation, his home and for the freedom and confidentiality of his communications."

Reasons:

The rewording is intended to make the scope of the rule clearer.

AMENDMENT 220

Proposed amendment to Article: 12

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has a right to respect for his privacy, including his personal data, his home, his correspondence and other confidential communications.
2. The right referred to in paragraph 1 may be limited only in accordance with the conditions laid down in Article 8(2) of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Reasons:

It is preferable to drop Article 19 and include the right to protection of personal data in the general article on privacy. The proposed Article 19, which grants everyone the right to determine for himself whether his personal data may be disclosed and how they may be used, is too broad in view of (recent) legislation in force in the Member States on data protection. The basic assumption is that personal data may be processed, provided this is for justified purposes and that processing takes place in an appropriate manner, that there is sufficient transparency towards those concerned and that, where appropriate, they are given the opportunity to protest against the processing of their data. The same basic assumption is central to the EC Directive on data protection (Directive 95/46/EC), on which Member States' data protection legislation is based. The provision in the EU Charter need go no further than recognition of the right of every individual to protection of his personal data. Moreover, it is important that the limitation clause in Article 8(2) of the ECHR also applies to the handling of personal data.

It would be preferable to use the expression “vertrouwelijke communicatie” (“confidential communications”). This wording fits in better with language usage than “communicatiegeheim” (“confidentiality of .. communications”). Furthermore, “reputation” does not need separate protection, since it is already included in “privacy”. Singling out reputation for separate protection could also conflict with freedom of expression.

AMENDMENT 221

Proposed amendment to Article: 12

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Substitute the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

“Everyone has the right to respect for his or her private and family life, home and correspondence. These rights may be interfered with only in limited, specified circumstances.”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 12 is the right guaranteed by Article 8 of the ECHR”

Reasons:

The Praesidium draft includes references to “honour”, “reputation” and “communication” which are not found in the relevant ECHR right; and it separates family life (see Article 13). I do not believe that the additional references are common to the constitutional traditions of the member states, or supported by ECJ case law, and I am concerned that they could entail new rights of uncertain meaning and application for the EU institutions and for member states when acting on their behalf. My version restores the meaning of the corresponding ECHR right. As regards “communication”, I believe, subject to the views of the Council of Europe representative, that the European Court of Human Rights has developed and continues to develop the meaning of “correspondence” in the light of its general jurisprudence – as it did in the Malone case, for example.

AMENDMENT 222

Proposed amendments to Article: 12

Submitted by: Kathalijne BUITENWEG and Johannes VOGGENHUBER

Proposed text:

Add a new paragraph reading:

"2. Everyone has the right to protect the confidentiality of his communications by means of encryption."

Reasons:

European and national governments have been unable and/or unwilling to protect their citizens' communications against uncontrolled tapping. Keyword: Echelon. Citizens and businesses should thus have the right to protect the confidentiality of their (digital) communications by cryptographic means. Promotion of the use of encryption to the point where it becomes a fundamental digital right is the logical end consequence of the developments of recent years, with national governments in the EU having eased and scrapped restrictions on the use of cryptography.

Compare the European Commission standpoint: "The public needs access to technical means providing effective protection against the violation of communications confidentiality. Data keying is often the only effective and affordable means of satisfying this need." (from European Commission document entitled "Towards a European Framework for Digital Signatures and Encryption" - COM (97) 503, October 1997).

Compare also the EP Resolution of 16 September 1998 on transatlantic relations/Echelon system : "considers that the increasing importance of the Internet and worldwide telecommunications in general and in particular the Echelon System, and the risks of their being abused, require protective measures concerning economic information and effective encryption."

AMENDMENT 223

Proposed amendments to Article: 12

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, Member of the European Parliament, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

Replace Article 12 with the following:

- “1. Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy, his honour and his reputation.
2. The home shall be inviolable.
3. The confidentiality of correspondence shall be respected and the law shall organise protection of other means of communication.
4. This Article may only be departed from by the law and for reasons of public policy.”.

Reasons:

The proposed text wrongly covers situations which are different to the point of being contradictory. Thus, the confidentiality of correspondence remains the rule in the social life of today, while the general public wrongly believes that confidentiality is ensured in telecommunications.

It is important, therefore, to distinguish between the general principle (par. 1), the specific situation of the home (para. 2) and the confidentiality of communications (pars. 3 and 4).

The Charter must guarantee that principles may be departed from only by force of law, with the contradictory publicity which that entails. Furthermore, there can be legislation to that effect solely for reasons of public policy, far removed from the degrading rules and regulations established by authorities which are too often faceless and acting purely on budgetary grounds, as happens in Belgium (and elsewhere) in the treatment of welfare beneficiaries.

Proposals concerning the whole of Article 13

AMENDMENT 224

Proposed amendments to Article: 13

Submitted by: Peter ALTMAIER, Member of the Bundestag (German Parliament)

Proposed text;

Delete paragraph 1.

Paragraph 2 to become paragraph 1.

Paragraph 3 to become paragraph 2 and to read:

“Marriage and family shall enjoy respect and protection.”

Reasons:

Article 13 as it stands is unclear and repetitive. The proposed wording of paragraph 2 (new paragraph 2) dispenses with the need for paragraph 1. The inclusion in the protection prescribed in Article 13, alongside the family, of marriages entered into in accordance with the respective national provisions would also seem to be appropriate.

AMENDMENT 225Proposed amendment to Article: 13*Submitted by: José BARROS MOURA and Maria Eduarda AZEVEDOProposed text:

Article 13

1. ...
2. Everyone has the right to marry according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right.
3. Everyone has the right to found a family according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right.
4. Present paragraph 3.

AMENDMENT 226

Proposed amendment to Article: 13. Family life

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

- “1. The family, which brings up children, is the basic unit of society; it has the right to the protection of the public authorities and of society.
2. Everyone has a right to respect for his family life.
3. Men and women have the right to marry and to found a family, according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right.”

Reasons:

It should be remembered that the family is based on the union of a man and woman, who bring up any children. This wording is based on the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (Article 16(3)), which states that the family is the natural and fundamental element of society and has a right to the protection of society and of the State. The wording does not preclude the existence of other possible forms of union not resulting in the birth of children and ineligible, therefore, to claim the same protection from the public authorities as the family as such under this head.

The proposed amendment adds a new paragraph 1 defining the family and guaranteeing it the protection of the public authorities and of society (thereby making paragraph 3 of the basic text redundant).

AMENDMENT 227Proposed amendment to Article: 13*Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEPProposed text:Article 13. Family life(Delete: paragraph 1)

1 (ex: 2). Everyone has the right to marry, to form a partnership and to found a family (delete: 12 words).

2 (ex: 3). The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.

Reasons:

The first paragraph of this Article is based on Article 12(2) (delete: 8) of the European Convention on Human Rights (delete: 9 words), which reads as follows:

"Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and to found a family according to the national laws governing the exercising of this right."

The reference to partnerships refers to the contemporary practice of establishing households outside the definition of orthodox marriage, and is consistent with Article 13 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.

(Delete: 19 words) Paragraph 2 (delete: 3) applies to the Union when it adopts measures within its powers to take account of family protection needs. (Delete: 15 words)

AMENDMENT 228Proposed amendment to Article: 13

Submitted by: Prof. Dr Jürgen MEYER/Jo LEINEN/Hans-Peter MARTIN

Proposed text:

Article 13. Marriage and family

1. Everyone has the right to marry and to found a family, according to national laws and with the free and full consent of the intending spouses.
2. Long-term partnerships shall have the right to protection against discrimination.
3. Marriage and the family shall enjoy special protection. The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection. Single parents, families with numerous children and families with disabled members shall be entitled to special social assistance from the public authorities.

Reasons:

The proposed amendment repeats, in a slightly amended form, the proposed amendment I submitted on 28 March (CONTRIB. 60) and clarifies my original draft for discussion (submitted on 6 January; CONTRIB. 2).

Protection of marriage and of family life is an essential fundamental and human right which must be taken into account in the Charter of Fundamental Rights.

Paragraph 1 firstly guarantees the right to marry freely and to found a family. Both rights represent rights of protection against State intervention.

This right is embodied in Articles 8 and 12 of the ECHR, in Article 16 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, in Article 23(2) and (3) of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), in Article 6(1) of the (German) Basic Law and in numerous constitutions of the Member States.

The European Court of Justice has stated that the right to marry and the protection of the family already belongs to the fundamental rights recognised by Community law.¹ Even the European Court of Human Rights has repeatedly confirmed this principle.²

The restriction "according to national laws" is based on the identical provision in Article 12 of the ECHR. The aim is to avoid the Convention having to produce a Europe-wide definition of the term "marriage".

The statement "with the free and full consent of the intending spouses" takes over the corresponding wording of Article 23(3) of the ICCPR. This rule is also contained in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (Article 16(2)), which conveys the rule's general recognition and esteem.

Paragraph 2 takes account of a sociological change in society which must be covered by a modern Charter of Fundamental Rights. The number of unmarried persons living together in Germany has increased more than six-fold between 1978 and 1998. Similar trends are to be noted in all European countries. Even conservative parties are therefore taking these sociological facts into account to an increasing extent.³

¹ See Wetter, Irmgard: The Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Court of Justice. Frankfurt a.M. inter alia, 1998, pp. 168 et seq and the references to judgments of the European Court of Justice in the footnotes pp. 660 et seq.

² Frowein, Jochen Abr./Peukert, Wolfgang: European Convention on Human Rights, Strasbourg inter alia, 1996, pp. 421 et seq.

³ e.g. at the Small Party Congress of the German CDU, see Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung of 11.12.1999 "Small Party Congress discusses charity and family policy".

Even in new constitutions, for example in the Constitution of Brandenburg, the need for protection of long-term partnerships is recognised (Article 26(2)).

In addition, more and more Member States of the Union are also taking account of the rights of homosexuals by giving them the possibility of registering their partnership with the aim of preventing existing legal discrimination. While paragraph 2 is not intended to prompt any options in favour of a particular lifestyle, the ban on discrimination does, however, constitute a minimum requirement.

The second sentence of paragraph 3 takes over the wording adopted by the Praesidium. The third sentence of paragraph 3 places particular categories of families under the special protection of the Union. The protection of families with numerous children is embodied in the Constitutions of Greece (Article 21(2)), Italy (Article 31) and Poland (Article 71(1)). The Constitution of Brandenburg (Article 26(1)) also contains a protective rule concerning single parents and families with disabled members.

In accordance with the relevant case law of the European Court of Human Rights, Article 8 of the ECHR also protects single parents who come under general family protection.¹

Although the current proposal from the Convention (CONVENT 28) contains an explicit Article on the protection of children, it does seem appropriate at this point to place the sociological unit in which the majority of children live under special protection.

¹ Frowein, Jochen Abr./Peukert, Wolfgang: European Convention on Human Rights. Strasbourg, inter alia, 1996, p. 424.

AMENDMENT 229Proposed amendment to Article: 13*Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈSProposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his life with his partner and for his family life.
2. Everyone has the right to marry and to found a family (eleven words deleted).
3. The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.

Reasons:Account should be taken of situations outside marriage.

In the second paragraph the reference to national law should be deleted so that third-country nationals do not follow practices which are contrary to the principles of the Member States of the Union (polygamy, etc.).

AMENDMENT 230

Proposed amendment to Article: 13. Family life

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to respect for and protection of his married and family life.
2. Men and women have the right to marry and to found a family, according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right.
3. Delete.

Reasons:

Re paragraph 1

Protection of the family is covered by the amended paragraph 1, which means that paragraph 3 can be deleted.

Re paragraph 2

The wording takes over the ECHR wording to a large extent.

AMENDMENT 231

Proposed amendment to Article: 13. Family life

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

"Article 13. Family life

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his family life.
2. Everyone has the right to marry or to found a family according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right."

Reasons:

The use of the word "or" instead of "and" should make it clear in paragraph 2 that founding a family may also be possible and permissible irrespective of whether people are married.

Moreover, the German Länder are in favour, at least at present, of deleting paragraph 3, since its current wording would confer a comprehensive right to benefits.

AMENDMENT 232Proposed amendment to Article: 13

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his lifestyle.
2. Everyone has the right to chose his lifestyle freely and to found corresponding partnerships.
3. All lifestyles shall enjoy equal respect and legal, economic and social protection.

Reasons:

This proposed amendment embraces everyone's right to marry and have a family. However, it also takes account of social trends towards a variety of lifestyles which means that, in accordance with individual Member States' laws, an individual's right to choose his lifestyle and partnership is to be guaranteed.

AMENDMENT 234

Proposed amendment to Article: 13

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text:

- "1. Every individual has the right to respect for his family life.
2. Every individual has the right to marry and to found a family, according to the Member States' laws governing the exercise of this right. No one shall be compelled to marry.
3. The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection."

Reasons:

For reasons of clarity of terms it is proposed that "individual" be used, as only natural persons are meant.

The reference to the "Member States'" (instead of "national" in the draft) laws makes it clear that the Member States have jurisdiction over this matter.

The newly proposed second sentence of paragraph 2 is intended to make it clear that in particular even custom must not threaten the voluntary nature of marriage.

For the rest, the proposal takes over unchanged the draft text proposed by the Praesidium.

AMENDMENT 235

Proposed amendment to Article: 13

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Substitute the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

“Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and found a family according to national law governing the exercise of this right”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 13 is the right guaranteed by Article 12 of the ECHR”

Reasons:

The Praesidium formulation of the relevant ECHR right (in Article 13.2) is not identical with that accepted by parties to the ECHR, and fails to attract the case law. The accretion in 13.3 has no satisfactory legal base and is inappropriate. 13.1 is unnecessary if my proposal to restore it to Article 12 is followed (see above). My version of Article 13 ensures that the acceptable content of Article 13 is understood within the meaning of the relevant ECHR provision, and the case law.

AMENDMENT 236

Proposed amendment to Article: 13(1)

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands government

Proposed text:

(The change from “gezinsleven” to “familieleven” in the Dutch text does not affect the English version).

Reasons:

(Does not concern the English text).

Proposed amendment to Article: 13(3)

Proposed text:

Delete paragraph 3.

Reasons:

Paragraph 3 contains a vaguely-worded provision made redundant by the guarantee in paragraph 1.

AMENDMENT 237

Proposed amendments to Article: 13. Family life

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed text:

Merge paragraph 1 with Article 12.

Reasons:

Paragraph 1 is redundant as this right follows from other Articles (i.a. 3 and 12).

Paragraph 3 spells out an objective for public policy and is thus better placed in the preamble.

AMENDMENT 238

Proposed amendments to Article: 13

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

Replace Article 13 with the following:

1. Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and to found a family according to the procedures laid down by law.
2. The family shall enjoy, irrespective of its composition, legal, economic, social and fiscal protection.
3. Two persons, whether or not of the same sex, may enter into a long-term union the details of which are defined by law; the law shall also define the protection such a union is to enjoy.
4. Everyone has the right to respect for his family life.

Reasons:

Over the last half century, the situation described in this Article has evolved sufficiently for the wording of the Charter text to depart from the text of the European Convention in order to take account of that fact.

A single-parent family must, therefore, be protected in the same way as a traditional two-parent family.

Likewise, it is important to take account of changing habits regarding homosexuality.

Finally, measures applying to homosexual couples which have been recently introduced in several parts of Europe are proving useful in the case of couples whose homosexuality is a matter of fact, and not of love.

Experience also shows the value of including a fiscal chapter in family protection.

Proposals for Article 13(2)

AMENDMENT 239

Proposed amendments to Article: 13

Submitted by: Johannes VOGGENHUBER and Kathalijne BUITENWEG

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his family life.
2. Everyone has the right, under the laws governing the exercise of this right and by mutual consent, to marry or cohabit and to found a family."

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 240

Proposed amendments to Article: 13

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

Paragraph 2: delete.

Reasons:

Paragraph 2 is unrelated to any Union powers.

AMENDMENT 241

Proposed amendments to Article: 13. Family life

Submitted by: Jordi SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

“2. Everyone has the right to found a family according to the national and Community laws governing the exercise of this right.”.

Reasons:

The word “marry” has been deleted since the family may or may not be founded on the basis of marriage, depending on the laws. the words “and Community” have been added in order to allow for European Union competence.

AMENDMENT 242

Proposed amendments to Article: 13(2)

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

“Men and women have an equal legal right to marry and to found a family according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right.”

Reasons:

Wording in line with Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

AMENDMENT 243

Proposed amendment to Article: 13(2). Family life

Submitted by: Hubert HAENEL

Proposed text:

2. Men and women have the right to marry and to found a family, according to the national laws governing the exercising of this right.

Reasons:

Discussions within the Convention have made it clear that the article on family life should guarantee the possibility for men and women to marry and found a family as a fundamental right. That possibility is also guaranteed by Article 12 of the European Convention on Human Rights, and the proposed amendment accordingly follows the wording of that provision.

Proposed amendment to Article: 13(3). Family life

Proposed text:

3. Marriage and the family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.

Reasons:

Legislation should not regulate the different forms of couple, as that is a matter of personal choice and thus of individual freedom. However, it is only right that marriage should enjoy the same legal, economic and social protection as the family.

AMENDMENT 244

Proposed amendment to Article: 13(2) and (3)

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

2. Men and women have the right to marry and to found a family, according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right.

Reasons:

To make it clear that marriage is understood as being between persons of different sexes. The proposed text makes it possible to reconcile Article 12 of the European Convention on Human Rights with present circumstances.

Proposals for Article 13(3)

AMENDMENT 245

Proposed amendment to Article: 13

Submitted by: Gunnar JANSSON, Tuija BRAX and Paavo Nikula

Proposed text:

It is proposed that Article 13(3) (“The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection”) be deleted on the grounds of being superfluous.

AMENDMENT 246

Proposed amendment to Article: 13(2) and (3)

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

3. Marriage and the family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.

Reasons:

To make it clear that marriage is understood as being between persons of different sexes. The proposed text makes it possible to reconcile Article 12 of the European Convention on Human Rights with present circumstances.

AMENDMENT 247Proposed amendment to Article: 13*Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEPProposed text:

3. The family, as a natural and social unit, shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.

Reasons:

Paragraph 3 gives a more detailed definition of the position of the family. The family is described in similar terms in Article 16 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, Article 16 of the European Social Charter and Article 10 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.

AMENDMENT 248

Proposed amendment to Article: 13. Family life

Submitted by: Daniel TARCHYS

Proposed text:

Merge paragraph 1 with Article 12.

Move paragraph 3 to the preamble.

Reasons:

Paragraph 1 is redundant as this right follows from other articles (i.e. 3 and 12).

Paragraph 3 spells out an objective for public policy and is thus better placed in the preamble.

AMENDMENT 249

Proposed amendment to Article: 13

Submitted by: Erling OLSEN

Paragraph 3 should be deleted.

Reasons:

Paragraph 3 sets out an objective, not a right.

AMENDMENT 250Proposed amendment to Article: 13*Submitted by: Win GRIFFITHS, MPProposed text:

1 and 2 as written. Delete 3

Reasons:

The reasons for the existing text throw doubt on its (Article 3.3) place here and raise an issue of when it would be relevant for the European Union to regard it as a fundamental right. Further discussion is needed before a decision can be made on the appropriateness of its inclusion in the Charter.

AMENDMENT 251

Proposed amendment to Article: 13

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

Delete paragraph 3 of the text in CONVENT 28.

Reasons:

The current formulation refers to an obligation which does not belong in this part of the Charter.

Proposals for Article 14

AMENDMENT 252

Proposed amendment to Article: 14. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Submitted by: Georges Berthu, MEP

Proposed text:

Every human being has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. This right includes freedom to change his religion or belief and freedom to manifest his religion or belief in worship, teaching and observance.

Freedom to manifest one's religion or beliefs shall be subject only to such limitations as are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of public safety, for the protection of public order, health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of individuals.

Reasons:

This amendment incorporates the wording of Article 9 of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, which seems preferable.

- Paragraph 1: it is necessary to point out that freedom of thought, conscience and religion is not an abstract right, but has practical consequences and outward manifestations (worship, teaching, practice, etc.).
- Paragraph 2: same reasons as for Article 2 of the Charter (paragraph 1a). The presence of a final horizontal clause referring to possible limitations in general terms is not adequate in most cases. Where the need arises, details must be added to each article concerned.

AMENDMENT 253Proposed amendment to Article: 14*Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEPProposed text:*Article 14. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion*1 (new). Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion.*2 (new). No one is obliged to disclose thought, religion or belief.*Reasons:

This wording (delete: 1 words) is based on Article 9 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; this right includes freedom to change his religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.*
- 2. Freedom to manifest one's religion or beliefs shall be subject only to such limitations as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of public safety, for the protection of public order, health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others."*

The fact that the Charter does not incorporate the limitations set out in paragraph 2 does not deprive those restrictions of their effects under Union law, by virtue of the horizontal clause relating to the Convention. The Court of Justice of the European Communities endorsed religious freedom in the Prais Case (judgment of 27 October 1976, Case 130/75, ECR 1589). Given the decision in favour of concise drafting for the Charter, the implications of religious freedom have not been included, but this is not intended to deprive these provisions of their effect as they are only the implications of the general principle.

Paragraph 2 accords inter alia with the principle of non-discrimination established by Article 13 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.

AMENDMENT 254

Proposed amendment to Article: 14

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

Add two new paragraphs:

2. This right includes the right to change religion and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or in private, to manifest one's religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.
3. No limitations on this right are permissible other than those provided for in Article 9(2) of the ECHR.

Reasons:

These additions are essential if this right is to mean anything in practice. This text also corresponds more closely to the ECHR.

AMENDMENT 255

Proposed amendment to Article: 14

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

The text in CONVENT 28 should be deleted and replaced by the full text of Article 9(1) of the ECHR.

Reasons:

Article 9(1) of the ECHR contains a comprehensive statement of freedom of religion.

AMENDMENT 256Proposed amendment to Article: 14

Submitted by: Johannes VOGGENHUBER and Kathalijne BUITENWEG

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. No one may be compelled to participate in a religious or ideological act, or to take a religious oath. This right includes the freedom to manifest ones religion or belief either alone or in community with others and in public or private.
2. No one shall be obliged to disclose his religious or ideological views.
3. If a citizen of the Union is unable to fulfil any obligations imposed on him by a public authority because they conflict with his conscience, the community may, as far as it is able, substitute other obligations of equal value. This does not apply to taxes and similar charges.

Proposed text: Meyer; amendments by Voggenhuber in italics.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 257

Proposed amendment to Article: 14. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Submitted by: Professor Dr. Jürgen MEYER/Jo LEINEN/Hans-Peter MARTIN

Proposed text:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. No one may be compelled to participate in a religious or ideological act or to take a religious oath. Freedom of religion shall include the public and private, individual and communal manifestation of religion and the right of churches and religious communities to order and administer their affairs in accordance with the laws of the Member States.
2. No one shall be obliged to disclose his religious or ideological views.
3. If a citizen of the Union is unable to fulfil any obligations imposed on him by a public authority because they conflict with his conscience, the community may, as far as it is able, substitute other obligations of equal value. This does not apply to taxes and similar charges.

Reasons:

The proposed amendment repeats, in a slightly amended form, the proposed amendment I submitted on 28 March (Contrib. 60) and clarifies my original draft for discussion (submitted on 6 January; Contrib. 2).

The first sentence of paragraph 1 follows the Praesidium's proposal (Convent 28) and the identically worded first sentence of Article 9(1) of the ECHR.

The second sentence makes it clear that the rights mentioned constitute freedoms in the sense that no one may be compelled to take part in ideological, religious or ritual acts. There are comparable rules in the Constitutions of Belgium (Article 20), Denmark (§ 68), Finland (§ 9), Luxembourg (Article 20), Sweden (Chapter 2 § 2) and Germany (Article 4(1) of the Basic Law). The European Court of Human Rights has also acknowledged a negative freedom of religion in its interpretation of the first sentence of Article 9(1)¹ and has spoken of protection for atheists, agnostics, sceptics and indifferent persons.²

The third sentence of paragraph 1 incorporates a rule corresponding to Declaration no 11, which was adopted by the Intergovernmental Conference during the Amsterdam Summit.

Paragraph 2 is based on corresponding rules in the Constitutions of Portugal (Article 41(3)), Sweden (Chapter 2 § 2), Spain (Article 16(2)), Slovakia (Article 41(2)), Poland (Article 53(7)) and Brandenburg (Article 13(2)). Article 136 of the Weimar Constitution which, under Article 140 of the Basic Law, is an integral part of that Law, also contains the right not to express one's religious convictions. Such a right can also be deduced from Article 5(1) of the Basic Law.³

Paragraph 3 gives substance to freedom of conscience. Since as a result of the Common Foreign and Security Policy a common defence policy (Article 17(1) TEU), which also includes combat forces (Article 17(2) TEU), will in future fall within the Union's sphere of competence, observance of moral distress as a basic right must be incorporated in the Charter.

¹ See in: Frowein, Jochen Abr./Peukert, Wolfgang: European Convention on Human Rights. Strasbourg inter alia, 1996, p. 371.

² Ibid., p. 368.

³ Maunz/Dürig/Herzog et al: Basic Law Commentary. Munich, 1991, Volume 1, (instalments 1-29), Article 5, NO 40.

The right to conscientious objection as a possible, but not binding form of freedom of conscience, is recognised in the Constitutions of Germany (Article 4(3) of the Basic Law) and Portugal (Article 41(6)). Although the right to conscientious objection is not explicitly guaranteed in the ECHR (see Article 4(3)(b)), nevertheless Frowein/Peukert write in their ECHR comments on freedom of religion and conscience: "However, to expect that the State should take account of religion when determining obligations is an established right." ¹ To this extent the proposed wording would lead to affirmation of this right.

However, the restrictive wording "as far as it is able" and "this does not apply to taxes and similar charges" in paragraph 3 avoids a situation involving an arbitrary and excessive assertion of moral distress. The European Court of Human Rights has also consistently rejected corresponding attempts. ²

¹ Ibid., p. 378.

² Ibid., p. 376 et seq.

AMENDMENT 258

Proposed amendment to Article: 14. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

Article 14. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. Freedom of religion includes the manifestation of faith in public and private, individually and in community with others and the right of churches and religious communities to order and manage their affairs in accordance with the laws of the Member States.

Reasons:

Inherent in every religion is the shared belief of more than one person. Consequently, every religion feeds on joint observance. The current wording does not reflect that. On the other hand, freedom of thought and conscience are individual matters.

The European Union's action affects not only the individual in his exercise of his fundamental right to freedom of religion, but also religious bodies, in particular churches and established religious communities. The Commission on Human Rights has in principle granted churches and religious communities the automatic right to have recourse to Article 9 of the ECHR. The reference to national legislation in the second sentence is in line with subsidiarity and the diversity of circumstances in which national established churches find themselves. It also follows from the Declaration on the status of churches and non-confessional organisations attached to the Amsterdam Treaty.

If the right of churches could be reflected in a general right relating to legal persons, parts of the second sentence could still be revised.

AMENDMENT 259

Proposed amendment to Article: 14. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSER

Proposed text:

"Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. This right includes the freedom of the individual to change his religion or belief and the freedom, alone or in community with others and in public or private, to practise his religion or belief in worship, teaching, prayer and observance."

in eventu

"Everyone has the right to freedom of thought and conscience and, alone or in community with others, religion."

Reasons:

Article 9 of the European Convention on Human Rights, on which this Article is based, contains a right to freedom of religion which is not only individual, but also collective. Under the ECHR, churches and religious communities may therefore also refer to freedom of religion. On the other hand, the CJEC judgment in the Prais case, referred to in the reasons in support of Article 14 of the draft, concerned only the individual's right to freedom of religion and a collective right to freedom of religion cannot be derived therefrom. To guarantee a collective right as well, it therefore seems necessary to go back to the text of Article 9(1) of the European Convention on Human Rights.

With the second proposed wording, an attempt is made to enshrine this principle in concise terms.

AMENDMENT 260

Proposed amendment to Article: 14

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodriguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Addition of two paragraphs 2 and 3, reading as follows:

"2. The exercise of these rights shall be subject only to such limitations as are prescribed by law and are necessary and proportionate for the protection of public order, health and morals or for the protection of the rights and freedoms recognised in this Charter.

3. No one shall be compelled to make any statement about his ideology, religion or beliefs."

Reasons:

The limitations on this right, laid down in the second paragraph of Article 9 ECHR, which should be included in the Article, are omitted for the reasons already set out in previous amendments and which should be set out here too.

The addition of a new paragraph 3 aims to increase, by means of a general prohibition clause, the scope of this right to freedom, which is of fundamental importance for individual self-determination in a democratic society. This addition is particularly appropriate in view of the future enlargement of the European Union and the incorporation of new Member States with a complex social and religious structure and reality.

AMENDMENT 261

Proposed amendment to Article: 14. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion.
- 2. No one shall be compelled against his conscience to perform military service under arms."

Reasons:

It seems appropriate to enshrine the right of conscientious objection also in the Charter by means of the proposed paragraph 2. In addition, it should be pointed out here that the freedom of religion granted in paragraph 1 at the same time comprises the exercise of religion in community.

Shortening by any other means the rule set out in Article 9 of the European Convention on Human Rights, on which this Article is based, would not be acceptable.

AMENDMENT 262

Proposed amendment to Article: 14. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

"1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion.

2. Everyone has the right to refuse to do military service."

Reasons:

With reference to the horizontal Article H.1 (Scope of the Charter), the scope of Article 14(2) applies to military operations within the context of the EU crisis forces agreed upon at the Helsinki summit and currently being set up. It does not touch upon national law. The basic right to conscientious objection is a vital component of the freedom of conscience of the individual, constituting freedom from State pressure to kill.

AMENDMENT 263

Proposed amendment to Article: 14

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text:

"Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. This right includes the freedom of the individual to change his religion or belief and the freedom, alone or in community with others and in public or private, to practise his religion or belief in worship, teaching, prayer and observance."

Reasons:

The first sentence corresponds to the text of the draft proposed by the Praesidium. The first sentence reproduces word-for-word the relevant second sentence of Article 9(1) ECHR.

By taking over Article 9(1) ECHR in full, in the first place debate on potential differences between the Charter and the ECHR – for instance, with regard to the right to practice religion publicly – is avoided. Secondly, by describing the guaranteed right more precisely, it is immediately clear to the citizen what rights he can derive from Article 14. The Charter is thus made easier to understand, because the citizen does not first have to look up Article 9(1) ECHR.

AMENDMENT 264

Proposed amendment to Article: 14. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Submitted by: VITORINO, Commission representative on the Convention

Proposed text:

Add a second sentence:

“This right includes freedom to change his religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public and private, to manifest his religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.”

Reasons:

This addition, which takes over the wording of Article 9 of the ECHR, is particularly significant in that it enshrines the freedom to manifest religion or belief, as well as the collective dimension of the freedom of religion. These two aspects of religious freedom are of great importance in modern society, which is becoming increasingly multicultural. The addition is also justified by a desire to ensure consistency between Article 14 and Article 15 (Freedom of expression): in the latter, the second sentence of the corresponding Article of the ECHR, explaining the contents of the right (“This right shall include ...”), has been taken over. If the corresponding sentence on the subject of freedom of religion is not used this might give the impression of a weakening in the freedom of religion.

AMENDMENT 265

Proposed amendment to Article: 14

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. As regards religion, this right also includes public or private, individual or collective manifestations of religious communities.

Reasons:

It is necessary to supplement the right to freedom of religion by freedom of worship.

AMENDMENT 266

Proposed amendment to Article: 14

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce two-part text, as follows:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

Add: “Limitations can be placed on this right only in limited, specified circumstances”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 14 is the right guaranteed by Article 9 of the ECHR”

Reasons:

The limitations explicit in the relevant ECHR right are of fundamental importance. I do not believe they can be dealt with satisfactorily in a general horizontal article. They are integral to the right. My amendment also ensures that Article 14 is understood within the meaning of ECHR Article 9 and associated case law.

AMENDMENT 270

Proposed amendments to Article: 14. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed text:

Adapt current draft to the language of Article 9 ECHR.

Reasons:

Draft Article 14 is said to reproduce Article 9 of the ECHR but it fails to state what the right includes, nor does it contain a clause on limitations. It is difficult to see why draft Article 14 does not state the content of the right when draft Article 15 does so with respect to freedom of expression. As regards limitations, see my comments on draft Article 12. The complete text of Article 9 ECHR should be confirmed in a part B of the Charter.

AMENDMENT 271

Proposed amendment to Article: 14

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

Add the following paragraph:

"2. Freedom of individual and collective practice of religious belief shall be guaranteed."

Reasons:

The proposed paragraph guarantees the specific form of exercise of the religious freedom stipulated in the first paragraph: individually and collectively.

AMENDMENT 272

Proposed amendment to Article: 14

Submitted by: Dr Peter Michael MOMBAUR, MEP

Proposed text:

Proposed addition of a second sentence:

This right includes freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest a religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance.

Reasons:

This addition is taken from Article 9 of the ECHR. It is geared in the main to European culture and should not be seen as arising from the horizontal provisions.

AMENDMENT 273

Proposed amendment to Article: 14

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, MEP, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

Add the following to the proposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion, to the extent that thought, conscience and religion observe the principles of tolerance and democracy.

Reasons:

In an area as delicate and explosive as this, reference to the general limitation clause is not sufficient.

Proposals for Article 14a

AMENDMENT 274Proposed amendment to Article: 14

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

Insert the following after Article 14:

"Article 14a. Freedom of research.

1. There shall be freedom of research.
2. Everyone has the right to be able to benefit from the results of research."

Reasons:

The Article plugs a gap in the text proposed by the Praesidium, by asserting freedom of research as a fundamental right.

Proposals for Article 15

AMENDMENT 275

Proposed amendment to Article: 15 Freedom of expression

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of expression of his opinions and freedom to receive and impart information (...).

These rights shall be exercised within the framework of any moral duties and responsibilities which the law may prescribe in accordance with the European Convention on Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

Reasons:

The text of the basic Article has been shortened. A reference has been added to the limitations which already exist in the ECHR as the wording as it stands might give the false impression of conferring an absolute right.

AMENDMENT 276

Proposed amendment to Article: 15

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 15. Freedom of expression

1 (new). Everyone has the right to freedom of expression and to receive, hold and impart ideas and information. (Delete: 25 words)

2 (new). Expressions of cultural, national and regional diversity as well as plurality of opinion shall be respected.

Reasons:

This Article incorporates the principles of Article 10 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers. This article shall not prevent States from requiring the licensing of broadcasting, television or cinema enterprises.*
- 2. The exercise of these freedoms, since it carries with it duties and responsibilities, may be subject to such formalities, conditions, restrictions or penalties as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society, in the interests of national security, territorial integrity or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, for the protection of the reputation or rights of others, for preventing the disclosure of information received in confidence, or for maintaining the authority and impartiality of the judiciary."*

Paragraph 2 has not been included but it is applicable under Union law by virtue of the horizontal clause relating to the Convention. The Court of Justice has endorsed the principle of freedom of expression on several occasions, first and foremost in the ERT Judgment (judgment of 18 June 1991, Case C-260/89, ECR I-5485).

Paragraph 2 is intended to reflect Article 151 of the Treaty establishing the European Community and its Protocol on the System of Public Broadcasting in the Member States of the Treaty of Amsterdam.

AMENDMENT 277

Proposed amendment to Article: 15. FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

Submitted by: Jordi SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

“Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authorities and regardless of frontiers.”

Reasons:

No change in meaning but better Spanish syntax.

AMENDMENT 278Proposed amendment to Article: 15*Submitted by: Win GRIFFITHS, MPProposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinion and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers. This article shall not prevent states from requiring the licensing of broadcasting, television or cinema enterprises.

Reasons:

It is better to include the whole of the ECHR Article 10.1 for the avoidance of doubt on the licensing issue.

AMENDMENT 279

Proposed amendment to Article: 15

Submitted by: Johannes VOGGENHUBER and Kathalijne BUITENWEG

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.
2. Freedom of the press and reporting freedom shall be guaranteed. The bodies of the Union shall be under an obligation to provide the press with information.
3. Diversity of opinion shall be safeguarded.
3. Art, science, research and teaching shall be free of constraint.

(Basic text = Meyer, addition in italics = Voggenhuber)

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 280

Proposed amendment to Article: 15

Submitted by: Prof. Dr Jürgen MEYER/Jo LEINEN/Hans–Peter MARTIN/Ieke VAN DEN BURG

Proposed text:

Article 15. Freedom of expression

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.
2. Freedom of the press and broadcasting and reporting freedom shall be guaranteed. The bodies of the Union shall be under an obligation to provide the press and broadcasting services with information.
3. Art, science, research and teaching shall be free of constraint.
4. The powers of the Member States to ensure public broadcasting services shall not be affected.

Reasons:

This proposed amendment repeats, in a slightly altered form, the proposal I submitted on 28 March (Contribution 60) and clarifies my original discussion draft (submitted on 6 January; Contribution 2).

Paragraph 1 retains the wording proposed by the Praesidium.

Paragraph 2 adds a new right not hitherto covered. It is, however, an undoubted fact that press and broadcasting freedom is one of the most important rights in a democratic policy governed by the rule of law. Such freedom forms part of the lifeblood of democracy. That is the reason for its inclusion in nearly all the Constitutions of the Member States.

The obligation to provide information covered in the second sentence is guaranteed in the Federal Republic of Germany by straightforward laws in the individual Länder. Although no State obligation on the press to provide information can be derived from Article 5(1), second sentence, of the German Basic Law, Maunz/Dürig/Herzog conclude in their commentary on the Basic Law that any Government or administration which has demonstrably laid itself open to the charge of hostility to the press must inevitably expect to be asked whether its behaviour is prompted exclusively by a quite acceptable circumspection vis-à-vis the press or whether it rather constitutes a general aversion to publicity, which runs counter to the principle of democracy.¹ It is particularly important for the Union to respect this principle since only now can a spirit of openness be said to be emerging.

Paragraph 3 adds a new right to the Praesidium proposal which was included in the previous Presidency proposal (CONVENT 13) and supplemented at the time by the word “teaching” at my suggestion.

Since the right expressed in paragraph 3 is included in nearly all the Constitutions of the Member States and applicant countries, it is difficult to understand why this paragraph has been removed from the present Presidency proposal (CONVENT 28). This right is, for example, included in Article 5(3), first sentence, of the German Basic Law, Section 13(3) of the Finnish, Article 16(1) of the Greek, Article 33(1), first sentence, of the Italian, Article 42(1) of the Portuguese, Article 20(1) of the Spanish, Article 59 of the Slovenian, Article 73 of the Polish and Article 70G(1) of the Hungarian Constitutions. It is also included in the Constitutions of Brandenburg (Article 31(1)), Mecklenburg-Western Pomerania (Article 7(1)) and Saxony (Article 21).

Freedom of research and teaching is an undisputed human right, which is to be found inter alia in Article 15 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights.

¹ Maunz/Dürig/Herzog et al.: Grundgesetz Kommentar [Basic-Law Commentary]. Munich, 1991, Volume 1 (Parts 1-29), Article 5, No 138.

Paragraph 4 provides a permanent guarantee for public broadcasting. This paragraph is in line with Protocol 23 to the Amsterdam Treaty and is moreover included as a principle in individual Constitutions of the Member States (Article 38(5) Portugal) and in some of the Constitutions of the East German Länder (Article 19(4), Article 20(2)).

The whole of Article 15 is accompanied by a limitation clause in many Constitutions and Human Rights Agreements. Given the stage reached in the Convention's discussions, such a limitation is not yet being formulated here since we must first be clear on the rights being included before considering limitations. It can however already be said that there could be a general limitation clause based on Article 20(2) of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.²

² “Any advocacy of national, racial or religious hatred that constitutes incitement to discrimination, hostility or violence shall be prohibited by law”.

AMENDMENT 281Proposed amendment to Article: 15*Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈSProposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.

This freedom does not authorise racist or xenophobic propaganda. It does not prevent public authorities from putting in place licensing schemes for radio, television and cinema, or machinery to guarantee the pluralism of information.

Reasons:

Pluralism must be guaranteed if there is to be freedom of expression.

AMENDMENT 282

Proposed amendment to Article: 15 Freedom of expression

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

Article 15. Freedom of expression and information

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.
2. Freedom of the press, broadcasting, cinema and other public media is guaranteed.
3. Art, science, research and teaching shall be free of constraint.

Reasons:

Title:

Freedom of information should be mentioned in the title.

Paragraph 2:

The right formulated in par. 1 may be interpreted as including freedom of the press, broadcasting and cinema.

However, for the sake of clarity, it is important to mention media freedom specifically, on the understanding that this does not mean any new powers for the EU, but recognition of Member States' powers, and that the dual system of public/private broadcasting services will continue. Express mention of freedom of the media would not only serve to show that the lessons of Germany's past have been learnt, but would also be a gesture towards the applicant countries, which were likewise deprived of media freedom for a long time.

Paragraph 3:

Express safeguards for art, science, research and teaching should be incorporated.

AMENDMENT 283Proposed Amendment to Article: 15*Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSERProposed text:Article 15. Freedom of expression*

*Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers. This Article shall not prevent Member States from requiring the licensing of broadcasting, television or cinema enterprises.

Reasons:

The new sentence reproduces the 3rd sentence of Article 10(1) of the ECHR. The European Court of Human Rights has ruled that this sentence allows Contracting States to use licensing procedures to pursue goals relating specifically to broadcasting policy that are not included among the grounds for intervention listed in Article 10(2) of the ECHR, such as pluralism, objectivity, quality and balanced programming. During discussion of this draft Article it was argued, broadly speaking, that this sentence has no individual significance any more, not least owing to the "Television without frontiers Directive", which guarantees the freedom to broadcast across borders. However, it might be countered that the Directive covers only advertising, sponsorship, protection of young people and basic programme requirements (e.g. no violence), thus leaving areas in which there is no Community harmonisation. Member States' power to pursue specifically broadcasting-policy goals should not be minimised here. However, under no circumstances should these state licensing procedures call into question the core of this right to freedom of expression.

AMENDMENT 284Proposed amendment to Article: 15

Submitted by: Guy BRAIBANT, personal representative of the President of the Republic and of the French Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Add, at the end of the Article "it shall be exercised with due regard for the principles of financial transparency and political pluralism".

Reasons:

This addition is in keeping with proposals from a number of Convention members. It spells out the scope of the right to freedom of expression and brings it up to date.

AMENDMENT 285

Proposed amendment to Article: 15

Submitted by: José BARROS MOURA and Maria Eduarda AZEVEDO

Proposed text:

In Portuguese, “ideais” (ideals) should be replaced by “ideias” (ideas) (English unaffected).

AMENDMENT 286

Proposed amendment to Article: 15

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

Add the following new paragraph:

2. This right shall not be subject to any limitations beyond those possible under Article 10(2) of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Reasons:

The text would thus reflect the ECHR more closely.

AMENDMENT 287Proposed amendment to Article: 15*Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANIProposed text *:

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to seek, receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers.

2. Art, science and research shall be free of constraint.

Reasons: The proposal is to specify that freedom of expression includes freedom to seek information. Furthermore, it is deemed necessary to insert a second paragraph confirming the freedom of art, science and research which, moreover, was contained in Article 15 of working document CONVENT 13.

* Proposed amendments are in bold.

AMENDMENT 288

Proposed amendment to Article: 15

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Add a paragraph 2, reading as follows:

2. The exercise of these rights shall be limited by observance of those rights recognised in this Charter, those established by the laws implementing them, those deriving from public safety, and in particular, the right to a good name, privacy and protection of children and young people.

Reasons:

In this case, perhaps more clearly than in any other case, there is a need to refer expressly to the limits of these rights, in accordance with the wording of previous amendments concerning this question.

AMENDMENT 289

Proposed amendment to Article: 15. Freedom of expression

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

- “1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers. Freedom of the press and of broadcasting shall be guaranteed.
2. Art, science, research and teaching shall be free of constraint.”

Reasons:

Although, in some Member States, the right to freedom of expression does cover freedom of the press and of broadcasting, a corresponding passage should be inserted into the Charter in order to make it clear that these fundamental rights are protected throughout Europe. Press and radio/television serve the purposes of information by comprehensive and truthful reporting and by disseminating ideas. They contribute to education and entertainment and are both a medium and a factor in the free formation of opinions. They take account of cultural diversity in Europe and promote European integration.

Member States' right to guarantee the continuing existence and development of public broadcasting services remain unaffected.

In addition, the German Länder think it essential that the Charter should include specific safeguards for art, science, research and teaching. This is also broadly in line with previously submitted suggestions for Article 15 in CONVENT 13.

AMENDMENT 290Proposed amendment to Article: 15

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

The text of the Article should be replaced by the following:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of expression.*
- 2. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to seek, receive and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority, regardless of frontiers, and without conditioning resulting from large media conglomerates.*
- 3. The cultural and political pluralism of the mass media shall be guaranteed."*

Reasons:

Given the invasive power of modern mass media, the Article should be redrafted in terms which offer the citizen an effective guarantee against manipulation and conditioning.

AMENDMENT 291

Proposed amendment to Article: 15. Freedom of expression

Submitted by: Daniel TARCHYS

Proposed text:

Adapt the current draft to the language of Article 10 ECHR.

Reasons:

The draft purports to reiterate the principles of Article 10 ECHR. In fact the draft Article 11, para. 1 has omitted the last sentence of the ECHR, namely: “This article shall not prevent States from requiring the licensing of broadcasting, television or cinema enterprises”.

Draft Article 15 may create the impression that no limitations are permitted. It is important to reproduce the limitations in the ECHR here and not in a horizontal article (cf. comments under Art. 12).

AMENDMENT 292

Proposed amendment to Article: 15

Submitted by: Dr Peter Michael MOMBAUR, MEP

Proposed text:

Proposed text for a new title:

Freedom of expression and information

1. In the second sentence the term "interference by public authority" should be replaced by "ensorship".
2. The following two sentences should be added to the Article:

Everyone shall have the right to obtain information, without hindrance, from generally accessible sources. The freedom of dissemination of information shall be guaranteed.

Reasons:

The right to obtain information freely is the logical counterpart to freedom of expression and a basis for civic electoral choice.

The freedom of information logically also requires the dissemination of information to be protected as a fundamental right, not only by press, radio and film but by all possible technical media both present and future. This is why the general term "dissemination of information" should be used.

AMENDMENT 293Proposed amendment to Article: 15*Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTESProposed text:

The following new paragraph 2 should be added:

2. The right referred to in paragraph 1 may be limited only in accordance with the conditions laid down in Article 10(2) of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Reasons:

In view of the system proposed as regards limitations, the article should include a separate paragraph referring to Article 10(2) of the ECHR.

AMENDMENT 294

Proposed amendment to Article: 15

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Amend text to produce two-part text, as follows:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

Add to existing text: “Formalities, restrictions, conditions or penalties can be placed on this right only in limited, specified circumstances”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 15 is the right guaranteed by Article 10 of the ECHR”

Reasons:

My amendment would ensure that Article 15 is understood within the meaning of the relevant ECHR right and its case law. I am also proposing a reference to the limitations in Part A, for much the same reasons I offered in relation to Article 14. In both cases I think it important to reflect the different wording of the limitations in the individual ECHR right. This could not be achieved in a single horizontal article as is proposed by the Praesidium.

AMENDMENT 295

Proposed amendment to Article: 15

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEBOUSSE, MEP, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

1. The following should be added to the existing text after the phrase "interference by public authority":

... except in order to protect democracy, fundamental rights and the young.

2. The text as amended above becomes §1, with insertion of the following paragraphs:

. § 2: Freedom of expression implies the right to speak one's own language.

. § 3: Where one or more administrative languages have to be chosen for the sake of an efficiently functioning society, the choice must be made by law.

. §4 : Where an indigenous language is not an administrative language, it shall nevertheless remain a fundamental cultural feature contributing to Europe's rich cultural heritage.

. §5 : By this token, any indigenous language which is a regional language within the meaning of the European Charter of Regional or Minority Languages deserves respect, protection and aid. The detailed rules for implementing this principle shall be determined by law, whereby the requirements of efficiency must not be allowed to infringe fundamental rights and freedoms.

3. Insertion of a new Article 15a, reading as follows

The press, radio and television are part of freedom of expression. However, this freedom must take account of the essential need to protect the young, the general ban on any apology for violence and any statement of opinion capable of infringing human dignity. No other restriction may be formulated other than by law.

Reasons:

Re 1: In an area as difficult as this, giving rise to such strong emotions, it is no longer enough merely to refer to the general limitations clause.

Re 2: Problems in this regard are bad enough in the existing Member States, but it is well known that most of the applicants for enlargement have much more serious problems and many more of them too. The Convention cannot neglect the problem, either in principle or in practice.

Re 3 : With the press so essential in a democratic society, and with the growing social impact of television, it is necessary both to affirm a fundamental liberty and to define its limits.

Proposals for Article 16 as a whole

AMENDMENT 296

Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

Delete Article 16.

Reasons:

This Article has no bearing on the powers of the Union's institutions or bodies.

Moreover, the organisation and funding of schools are matters closely bound up with national identity.

AMENDMENT 297

Proposed amendments to Article: 16. Right to education.

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed text:

Delete the whole Article or align it with the ECHR (First Protocol Article 2)

Reasons:

Since the right to education can be assured only by Member States my first preference is to delete the draft Article.

If a revised text is nevertheless kept, I have the following suggestions: In draft paragraph 1 the link between the first and second sentence is weak. Vocational and continuing education are not compulsory.

Concerning draft paragraph 2: The establishment of schools is not limited under Swedish law but if a school seeks financial aid or the right to award degrees/certificates, certain conditions apply. Similar rules probably apply in other Member States. The present draft may be misinterpreted to imply changes in this respect.

Finally, concerning draft paragraph 3, I would suggest a closer alignment with the text of Article 2 of the first additional Protocol to the ECHR which has been ratified by most EU Member States, albeit with reservations/declarations. Attention should also be given to the right of adolescents to influence their own education.

AMENDMENT 298

Proposed amendment to Article: 16 - Right to education

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Deletion of this Article.

Reasons:

This provision would breach the current division of responsibilities between the Union and the Member States. Pursuant to Article 149 of the TEC, "the Community..." fully respects "the responsibility of the Member States for the content of teaching and the organisation of education systems".

AMENDMENT 299

Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 16. Right to education and training

- 1. Everyone has the right to education and the right of access to vocational and continuing training. These rights include the right to receive free compulsory education.
- 2. The (delete: 1 word) independence of educational establishments shall be (delete: 2 words) respected.
- 3. The right of parents to have their children (delete: 2 words) taught in accordance with their own religious and philosophical convictions shall be respected.

Statement of reasons

This Article is based on the common constitutional traditions of Member States and on Article 2 of the Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights, which reads as follows:

"No person shall be denied the right to education. In the exercise of any functions which it assumes in relation to education and to teaching, the State shall respect the right of parents to ensure such education and teaching in conformity with their own religious and philosophical convictions."

It was considered useful to add the principle of free compulsory education. As it is worded, it merely implies that as regards compulsory education, each child has the possibility of attending an establishment which offers free education. It does not require all establishments which provide education, in particular private ones, to be free of charge. (Delete: 16 words)

The competence of the European Union in education policy is established under Article 149 of the Treaty establishing the European Community, and in vocational training under Article 150. The Union must respect the practice of free compulsory education (delete: 9 words).

The principle of academic freedom is not included in the Charter, but it constitutes both a structural principle of academic organisation and the guarantee of the freedom of expression in this area. The Charter in no way infringes this principle.

AMENDMENT 300

Proposed amendment to Article: 16. Right to education

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

1. No person shall be denied the right to education (16 words deleted). This right includes the right to receive free compulsory education.
2. (new) There shall be equal access to state education facilities.
3. The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be respected.

Reasons:

Paragraph 1:

The wording has been taken from Article 2(1) of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR. The Union has neither the power nor the budgetary resources to grant a subjective right to education or a right of access to vocational and continuing training. Setting the state a goal of this type seems inappropriate, and would anyway belong in the field of social rights.

Re paragraph 2:

The current paragraph 2 is now covered by Article 15(3) (freedom of teaching).

The new wording of paragraph 2 makes clear that the most that can be guaranteed is equal access to state educational institutions, not any more far-reaching subjective right.

AMENDMENT 301

Proposal for amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈS

Proposed text:

Title : [change affecting French text only]

1. Everyone has the right to education [change affecting French text only] and the right of access to vocational and continuing training. These rights include the right to receive free compulsory education.
2. The founding of educational establishments shall be free of constraint.
3. The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be respected, unless these are prejudicial to the child's development or socialisation.
4. State education must respect the principle of secularism.

Reasons:

In the French text, the word "education" should be replaced by "instruction" in order to establish a right/claim requiring positive action by the State.

AMENDMENT 302

Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: Win GRIFFITHS, MP

Proposed text:

No person shall be denied the right to education. In the exercise of any functions which it assumes in relation to education and to teaching, the State shall respect the right of parents to ensure such education and teaching in conformity with their own religious and philosophical convictions.

Reasons:

I prefer the brevity of Article 2 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR.

AMENDMENT 303

Proposed amendment to Article: 16. Right to education

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

"Article 16. Right to education

1. Everyone has the right of access to existing educational establishments. This right includes the right to receive free compulsory education.
2. The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be respected."

Reasons:

The new wording of the first sentence of Article 16(1) makes clear that the duty on Member States to guarantee fair and equal access to educational institutions refers only to the capacity available. There is no question of any obligation to create new, additional capacity.

The objections to par. 2 are so serious as to require deletion. As currently worded, it would mean taking the founding of educational establishments out of all State control. However, this could not apply to private higher-education institutions, for example, where state authorisation will continue to be needed in order to guarantee that the education provided and the degrees awarded come up to minimum standards.

This makes the current paragraph 3 into paragraph 2. It is regarded as important that there must be no abuse of parental rights.

AMENDMENT 304

Proposed amendment to Article: 16. Right to education

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to education and the right of access to vocational and continuing training. These rights include the right to receive free compulsory education.
2. The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be respected.

Reasons:

To keep the text of the Charter as close as possible to the text of Article 2 of the First Protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights, the second paragraph of the version in CONVENT 28 ["2. The founding of educational establishments shall be free of constraint."] should be deleted.

AMENDMENT 305

Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: François LONCLE

Proposed text:

Article 16:

Word paragraph 1 of this Article as follows:

Everyone has the right to education. This right includes the right to receive free compulsory education.

Reasons:

The reference to vocational training belongs with economic and social rights.

II. Proposed text:

Delete paragraph 2 of this Article.

Reasons:

In the interests of readability, it seems preferable that this Article should concentrate on the child's right to education, without any interference from questions relating to the founding of educational establishments. In any case, the founding of such establishments is not an absolute right.

AMENDMENT 306Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

- “1. Every child has the right to free compulsory basic education within age limits set by national legislation.
2. There shall be freedom of choice of educational establishment.
3. The right of parents or legal guardians to have their children educated in accordance with their religious or philosophical convictions shall be respected.”

Reasons:

This form of words reflects individual Member States' educational systems more closely. Given the potential restrictions on persons residing unlawfully in a country, universal entitlement to education ceases above the compulsory school age. Regarding paragraph 2, it should be noted that freedom of choice does not imply any right to be admitted.

AMENDMENT 307

Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Substitute the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

“No one shall be denied the right to education”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 16 is the right guaranteed by Article 2 of the First Protocol to the ECHR, read with any reservation made in respect of it”

Reasons:

The Praesidium draft contains provisions not found in the relevant ECHR right. In my opinion these accretions are unnecessary and I am told that they would have potentially very significant financial and other implications for EU institutions and for the Member States when acting as their agents.

The UK maintains an important reservation to the ECHR right: “The principle affirmed in the second sentence of Article 2 ECHR is accepted by the UK only so far as it is compatible with the provision of efficient instruction and training, and the avoidance of unreasonable public expenditure.” Other Member States have similar reservations.

My version ensures that Article 16 is understood within the meaning of Article 2 to Protocol 1 of the ECHR, associated case law, and any national reservations. The latter consideration reflects the principles of subsidiarity and national diversity. These seem highly appropriate in this area. It also ensures that parents’ rights, as so understood, are covered.

Community competence on vocational training is limited to supporting and supplementing Member States’ action (Article 140 and 150 TEC).

AMENDMENT 308

Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSER

Proposed text (relates solely to the statement of reasons):

Article 16. Right to education

1. Everyone has the right to education ... [unchanged]

Statement of reasons

This Article is based [...]

It was considered useful [...]

The principle of free education relates only to the attendance of classes; any additional services (textbooks, accommodation, etc.) may be provided in return for payment. Moreover, this Article does not in any way provide a basis for entitlement to the payment of an educational grant or scholarship. The principle of academic freedom [...]

Reasons:

The addition of these two sentences to the statement of reasons for Article 16 clarifies that not all services connected with compulsory education have to be free of charge - only the provision of education itself.

AMENDMENT 309

Proposed amendment to Article: 16. Right to education

Submitted by: Ben FAYOT

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to education and the right to initial and continuing training. These rights include the right to receive compulsory education.
2. (to be deleted).
3. The right of parents to have their children educated in accordance with their philosophical convictions and in compliance with the laws of the country shall be respected.

Reasons:

Re 1. The first amendment is a matter of wording (dropping access to and adding initial).

Re 2. The Luxembourg Constitution does not proclaim freedom to dispense education. As it stands, the proposed text thus runs counter to our constitutional tradition and cannot be accepted.

Re 3. It would be useful to specify that this concerns the education of children in a general sense rather than teaching; thus and taught should be deleted.

This right should be respected but it is important to stress the significance of national laws in protecting children.

AMENDMENT 310Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, MEP, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:Replace as follows:

1. Everyone has the right to equal and free access to schools providing compulsory education, which means that the public authorities must ensure that such schools exist in sufficient number.
2. The right of parents and subsequently of children to a free choice of school shall be respected.
3. It follows that the founding of educational establishments shall be free of constraint.
4. The right of parents to have their children educated and taught in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be exercised while respecting the principle of tolerance and the principle of democracy, which include the setting out by the public authority of programmes leading to approved diplomas which may be recognised as equivalent throughout the European Union.
5. The existence and future development of the Union, on the one hand, and the interest of each child considered individually, on the other, are combined factors making necessary the systematic and progressive teaching of three languages which shall commence as soon as possible.

Reasons:

Re 1. Freedom of access to education and even more so the obligation to provide free education will remain mere wishful thinking unless someone takes care of the necessary expenditure.

Re 2. At a time when considerable pressure is being exercised for a return to separate education for girls and boys or to urge that each school of thought (and in practice every sect) be guaranteed respect for its beliefs, to the extent of undermining the child's right to health, it is essential that a distinction be made between the free choice of educational establishment and the necessary compliance with basic programmes.

Re 4. The requirements for the equivalence of diplomas also strengthens the need to guarantee the quality of such diplomas.

Re 5. Insofar as the diversity of languages should be considered a crucial component of the European cultural heritage, which includes endogenous languages, the multicultural reality of Europe requires an effort to bring people closer.

Benjamin FRANKLIN wrote a little over two centuries ago that knowing and understanding ourselves better was the price we pay for peace.

This reflection remains entirely relevant and in today's Europe finds a particularly fertile field of application.

AMENDMENT 311

Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: Simone BEISSEL

Proposed text:

The founding of educational establishments shall be subject to approval by the competent authority of the Member State on whose territory they are situated.

Reasons:

In order to avoid the setting up of establishments under the direction and/or management of sects or similar associations which represent a risk to the moral and psychological balance of young people.

Proposals for Article 16(1) and (1a)

AMENDMENT 312

Proposed amendment to Article: 16(1) and (2)

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

- 1. Everyone has the right to education. This right includes the right to receive free compulsory education.

Reasons:

The wording of the rule must be expressed positively in the Spanish version, as in the French version of the text. On the other hand, the reference to "vocational and continuing training" should be deleted since that is a social right, unlike the right to education. The fact that the right to education and to compulsory schooling includes the right to formal vocational training is a different matter since that is training which forms part of the educational system as an alternative to secondary education to minimum school-leaving age.

AMENDMENT 313Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: Guy BRAIBANT, personal representative of the President of the French Republic and of the French Prime Minister

Proposed text:

At the end of the first paragraph, add: "the neutrality of which is guaranteed".

Reasons:

It is essential to balance recognition of freedom to found educational establishments against assertion of the duty of neutrality of free and compulsory education.

AMENDMENT 314

Blank

AMENDMENT 315

Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: Ieke VAN DEN BURG

Proposed text:

Article 16(1):

Everyone has the right to education and the right of access to vocational training throughout his working life (instead of "and continuing training") etc.

Reasons:

This addition flows from the right proposed in Article X in CONVENT 18. The French and English versions speak of "vocational and continuing". In Dutch, following on from the wording used in the earlier text, this is better expressed by "gedurende het gehele beroepsleven".

AMENDMENT 316Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: RODOTA', MANZELLA and PACIOTTI

Proposed text:

After the first paragraph, add the following:

"1a. Education aims not only to diffuse knowledge, but also to foster understanding between different cultures".

Reasons:

This amendment is based on the fundamental requirement within the Union for coexistence and mutual understanding between different cultures.

Proposals for Article 16(2)

AMENDMENT 317

Proposed amendment to Article: 16(1) and (2)

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

2. The founding of educational establishments shall be free of constraint, whilst respecting democratic principles and complying with national law.

Reasons:

It seems advisable to assert respect for democratic principles in the exercise of the right to found educational establishments, and to refer to the legislation of each Member State.

AMENDMENT 318Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: Guy BRAIBANT, personal representative of the President of the French Republic and of the French Prime Minister

Proposed text:

At the beginning of the second paragraph, add: "within the scope of the laws regulating the question".

Reasons:

It is essential to balance recognition of freedom to found educational establishments against assertion of the duty of neutrality of free and compulsory education.

In the second paragraph, a reference to the scope of the law is necessary in the name of the principle of subsidiarity.

AMENDMENT 319

Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: Erling OLSEN

Proposed text:

Paragraph 2 should be deleted.

Reasons:

Paragraph 2 is not sufficiently precise to constitute a right. It could moreover lead to misunderstanding about the scope of paragraph 3.

AMENDMENT 320Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

Paragraph 2 should be replaced by: "The freedom to found educational establishments shall be guaranteed".

Reasons:

The wording "free of constraint" is too vague. The proposed wording makes it clear that this is an obligation on the authorities.

AMENDMENT 321

Proposed amendment to Article: 16(2)

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

The right to found educational establishments and to academic freedom shall be recognised.

Reasons:

Academic freedom is an essential element of educational freedom.

Proposals for Article 16(3)

AMENDMENT 322

Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: RODOTA', MANZELLA and PACIOTTI

Proposed text:

Replace paragraph 3 by the following:

"3. Parents have the right to educate and teach their children in accordance with their own convictions and respect for the persons of minors".

Reasons:

This is intended to take account of the rights of minors.

AMENDMENT 323

Proposed amendment to Article: 16

Submitted by: Gunnar JANSSON, Tuija BRAX and Paavo NIKULA

Proposed text:

Article 16. Right to education

3. The right of parents to have their children educated in accordance with their religious and philosophical convictions shall be respected. Children's views should be taken into account in accordance with their age and level of development.

Reasons:

The parents' right to decide their children's education and teaching is not absolute, but includes their obligation to take into account children's own views on any decisions taken concerning them, in accordance with the children's level of intellectual development. Article 16 in its proposed new form is most in line with Article 23 – relating to children's rights – of the Charter of Fundamental Rights and Articles 12 and 14 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child.

Proposals for Article 17

AMENDMENT 324

Proposed amendment to Article: 17. Freedom of assembly and association

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association (remainder deleted).

Reasons:

The explicit reference to political parties in a Charter intended to be applied to the European Institutions could mean the recognition of European political parties. This would amount to an amendment to the Treaties, which goes beyond the instructions given by the Cologne Council.

AMENDMENT 325

Proposed amendment to Article: 17

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 17: Freedom of assembly and association

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly (delete: 3 words) and association (delete: 2 words), including the right to form and to join trade unions, professional or voluntary organisations, (delete: 1 word) and political parties.

Statement of reasons

This Article is based on Article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights:

- "1. Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his interests.*
- 2. No restrictions shall be placed on the exercise of these rights other than such as are prescribed by law and are necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security or public safety, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others. This article shall not prevent the imposition of lawful restrictions on the exercise of these rights by members of the armed forces, of the police or of the administration of the State."*

The question of restrictions will be covered by the horizontal clause relating to the European Convention on Human Rights.

Title VIII of the Treaty establishing the European Community, as amended by the Treaty of Amsterdam, recognises the formal role of management and labour in the conduct of social policy, including the representation and collective defence of workers and employers. Moreover, the Economic and Social Committee has been officially comprised of representatives of the various categories of economic and social activity since its foundation in 1958 (Article 257).

AMENDMENT 326Proposed amendment to Article: 17. FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY AND ASSOCIATIONSubmitted by: Jordi SOLÉ TURAProposed text:

“Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association for civic or political purposes or in trade unions.”

Reasons:

This Article overlaps with Article 24 and gives rise to confusion. For example, Article 24 states that “Every citizen has the right to form a political party at the level of the Union ...”, whereas Article 17 recognises that “everyone” has this right, which may be interpreted as “everyone at any level”, extending beyond the Union and the citizens and countries constituting it. Furthermore, it makes no sense for the same concept – forming political parties – to be recognised in two Articles of the Convention.

AMENDMENT 327

Proposed amendment to Article: 17

Submitted by: Win GRIFFITHS, MP

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions.

Reasons:

It is not necessary to add political parties to the ECHR Article 11 text as political parties are a classic expression of the right to freedom of association and the issue of political parties organised at the European Union level is dealt with in Article 24.

AMENDMENT 328

Proposed amendment to Article: 17

Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈS

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly, (4 words deleted) cultural expression and association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions or political parties.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 329

Proposed amendment to Article: 17. Freedom of assembly and association

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions (next three words to be deleted) and coalitions.

Reasons:

Separate Article concerning political parties – see Article 24.

Article 34 also refers to employers and employees.

AMENDMENT 330Proposed amendment to Article: 17*Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSERProposed text:

Article 17. Freedom of assembly and association

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions [~~or political parties~~].

Reasons:

The right to form and to join political parties is already included in Article 24 of the draft, which did not yet exist when the present Article was being discussed. The reference to political parties in Article 17 is therefore unnecessary.

AMENDMENT 331

Proposed amendment to Articles: 17 and 24

Submitted by: Ben FAYOT

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right at both national and European level to form and to join trade unions or political parties. These political parties must respect the rights and freedoms guaranteed by this Charter.

Reasons:

It seems pointless to make a distinction between national level in Article 17 and European level in Article 24.

It also seems pedantic to make a distinction at European level between a citizen (having the right to form a party) and a simple resident (having the right to join one). Existing European parties do not in any case have individual membership but only party membership, i.e. parties of parties.

AMENDMENT 332Proposed amendment to Article:*Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEPProposed text:Add the following new paragraph:

2. This right shall not be subject to any limitations beyond those possible under Article 11(2) of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Reasons:

The article would thus reflect the ECHR more closely.

AMENDMENT 333

Proposed amendment to Article : 17 Freedom of assembly and association

Submitted by: Charlotte CEDERSCHIÖLD

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form, to join or not to join trade unions or political parties.

Reasons:

Even though the freedom to refrain from doing something is implicit in “freedom”, that negative freedom should be expressly included in order to avoid any misunderstanding.

AMENDMENT 334

Proposed amendment to Article: 17

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and demonstration without prejudice to the restrictions imposed to safeguard public order.
2. Everyone has the right to form and to join associations or trade unions, except where they pursue unlawful aims or use unlawful means. This right may be subject to restrictions for members of the armed forces, armed corps or civil service.

Reasons:

The extension of the right to form political parties in Spain to those not possessing Spanish nationality does not comply with the internal system of Spanish law as such persons do not have the right to vote or to stand as candidates. This rule contradicts Article 24, which limits this right, at the level of the Union, to "citizens" of its Member States.

On the other hand, the omission of the limits of this right requires that, in accordance with Article 11 of the ECHR, express provision be made therefor in the Charter.

AMENDMENT 335

Proposed amendment to Article: 17. Freedom of assembly and association

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

"17. Freedom of assembly and association

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and association with others, including the right to form and join trade unions. Associations must respect the rights and freedoms guaranteed by this Charter."

Reasons:

The current wording, granting the right to freedom of peaceful association but merely to freedom of association without mentioning that it should be "peaceful", could lead to misunderstandings. It is surely not intended that association should not be peaceful.

Furthermore, all provisions on political parties should be concentrated in Article 24. In addition, the right of parties to decide themselves on the admission of new members must remain unaffected. Any claim to admission should be rejected.

Finally, it would seem useful to incorporate an anti-abuse clause here too. Extremist associations can generate the same threats as extremist parties.

AMENDMENT 336

Proposed amendment to Article: 17

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce two-part text as follows:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

Delete “or political parties” and add “for the protection of his or her interests. These rights may be restricted only in limited, specified circumstances”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 17 is the right guaranteed by Article 11 of the ECHR”

Reasons:

The right to form and to be free to join political parties is contained within the relevant ECHR right. Referring to it in Article 17 may have the undesirable effect of casting doubt on other features of the ECHR right which are not specified in the Article itself. I am also concerned that CONVENT 28 drafting implies that the state should guarantee the right for everyone to join any political party. I consider that this could interfere with the ability of political parties to determine qualifications for entry. My version ensures that Article 17 is understood within the meaning of ECHR Article 11 and the case law. Consistent with my general approach I consider that specific reference to restrictions must be made in the proclamation of the right itself.

AMENDMENT 337

Proposed amendment to Article: 17

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association.

Reasons:

The proposal to delete the final clause referring to political parties is because it is also in Article 24.

AMENDMENT 338

Proposed amendment to Article: 17

Submitted by: RODOTA' and PACIOTTI

Proposed text:

Replace the text of the Article by the following:

"Everyone has the right to assemble peacefully, associate with others, form parties and trade unions and join them or not".

Reasons:

More precise and effective terms are used in this Article in order to assert a fundamental right which, in our view, renders Article 24 superfluous.

AMENDMENT 339

Proposed amendment to Article: 17

Submitted by: Ieke VAN DEN BURG

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions, political parties or non-governmental organisations. The European Union shall foster dialogue with social partners and non-governmental organisations.

Reasons:

The words "with others" should be included in the first part of the sentence (as in other language versions).

Non-governmental organisations have been added because of the increasingly important part they play in European policy-making.

The Social Dialogue with social partners and the Civil Dialogue with NGOs are an essential instrument of EU policy and should therefore be mentioned in the Charter.

AMENDMENT 340Proposed amendment to Article: 17

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to freedom of assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions or political parties. This right may be limited only in accordance with the conditions laid down in Article 11(2) of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Reasons:

As in the ECHR, it is preferable to specify for each right the conditions under which that right may be limited. The article has therefore been supplemented with a reference to the limitations listed in Article 11(2) of the ECHR. See also the reasons given for the amendment to Article 3.

AMENDMENT 341

Proposed amendment to Article: 17

Submitted by: José BARROS MOURA and Maria Eduarda AZEVEDO

Proposed text:

1. ... (identical to the form of words proposed for the article as a whole).
2. Any Union citizen residing in a Member State other than that of which he is a national shall enjoy the rights referred to in paragraph 1 under the same conditions as nationals of that other Member State.

AMENDMENT 342

Proposed amendment to Article: 17

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, MEP, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

In the second line of the text, insert "democratic" before "parties".

Reasons:

The Charter cannot encourage the formation of anti-democratic institutions.

Proposals for Article 18

AMENDMENT 343

Proposed amendment to Article: 18. Right of access to documents

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

Delete.

Reasons:

Access to documents is not traditionally a fundamental right.

Article 255(1) of the EC Treaty adequately covers access to documents.

AMENDMENT 344

Proposed amendment to Article: 18

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 18. Right of access to documents

Everyone (delete: 10 words) has a right of access to the documents of the institutions of the European Union and of subsidiary bodies and agencies established by the institutions and by the Treaty on European Union. (delete: 8 words)

Statement of reasons

This Article is based on Article 255 of the EC Treaty, but ends the anomaly whereby only the Commission, Council and Parliament are specified. The reference to the TEU is intended to include any bodies created under the second or third pillars. The conditions and limits described in the remainder of Article 255 are still extant, and, for the other institutions, agencies and bodies, where relevant codes of conduct exist they will be respected.

Article 1 of the Treaty on European Union, as amended by the Treaty of Amsterdam, says that "... decisions are taken as openly as possible ..".

AMENDMENT 345

Proposed amendment to Article: 18

Submitted by: Erling OLSEN

Proposed text:

The following new paragraph should be added: "This right shall be exercised subject to the conditions and limitations laid down in the EC Treaty".

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 346Proposed amendment to Article: 18

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

Replace the present text by: "Everyone has a right of access to documents and information from the institutions and other bodies of the Union in all areas for which the Union has competence. That right may be limited in accordance with the limitations applicable to it in Community law and Union law".

Reasons:

There is no justification for limiting the right of access to documents to citizens of the Union or persons residing in the Union or to specific institutions of the Union. The proposed amendment refers, moreover, to the possibility of limitations being applicable in Community law (Article 255 of the EC Treaty) and in Union law. Such limitations are to be laid down in Community law and Union law.

AMENDMENT 347Proposed amendment to Article: 18

Submitted by: Kathalijne BUITENWEG and Johannes VOGGENHUBER

Proposed text:

“Everyone has a right of access to the information held by the institutions and bodies of the European Union.”

Reasons:

The scope of the fundamental rights should not be restricted needlessly as regards the persons covered. This was rightly not done in the case of Article 27 (Relations with the administration). Persons outside the Union, too, may have an interest in access to the European Union’s information.

“Information” is preferable to “documents”, because it also includes items such as databases.

The force of Article 1 of the TEU, which states that decisions are to be taken as openly as possible and as closely as possible to the citizen, is not confined to the European Parliament, the Council and the Commission. In order to ensure that the other EU institutions and bodies also heed this principle, it would be desirable for the Charter to show some ambition and widen the right of access to information to cover all EU institutions and bodies. Thanks to the European Ombudsman’s efforts, most of those institutions and bodies already have a procedure for access to their information.

The proposed amendment improves the article’s readability.

(This amendment obviously also involves a change to Article 48, as set out in CHARTE 4316/00 CONVENT 34, which should be converted from a non-progression clause into a non-regression clause.)

AMENDMENT 348Proposed amendment to Article: 18

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Add at the end: “This right shall be exercised under the conditions laid down by Article 255 of the Treaty establishing the European Community”.

Reasons:

Without prejudice to any references made in the horizontal clause, there is a need to make express reference here to the Article of the Treaty establishing the European Community which regulates the right in question; that reference was also included in earlier drafts (see Article 14 in CONVENT 8).

AMENDMENT 349

Proposed amendment to Article: 18. Right of access to documents

Submitted by: VITORINO, Commission representative on the Convention

Proposed text:

"Every citizen of the Union or anyone residing in the Union has a right of access to the documents held by the European Parliament, the Council and the Commission."

Reasons:

This clarification is in line with the proposal for a Regulation forwarded by the Commission to the Council on 28 January 2000 on the basis of Article 255 of the EC Treaty.

AMENDMENT 350

Proposed amendment to Article: 18

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce two-part text as follows:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

Retain proposed text

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 18 is the right guaranteed by Article 255 of the Treaty establishing the European Community and shall be exercised in accordance with the conditions and subject to any limitations made under and in accordance with that Treaty provision”

Reasons:

I am happy with the Praesidium draft text so far as proclaiming the right is concerned. The proposed part B ensures that Article 18 is understood within the meaning of the relevant treaty provision. The conditions and limitations described in Article 255 cannot be covered appropriately by a horizontal clause, as proposed by the Praesidium.

AMENDMENT 351

Proposed amendment to Article: 18

Submitted by: RODOTA', MANZELLA and PACIOTTI

Proposed text:

Replace the text of the Article by the following:

"Everyone has a right of access to the documents of the European Institutions".

Reasons:

The right of access to documents has been confirmed at length, with reference to both the subject-matter covered and the Institutions involved, in the Community regulations and case law which preceded the Treaty of Amsterdam.

AMENDMENT 352

Proposed amendment to Article: 18

Submitted by: Peter ALTMAIER, Member of the German Parliament

Proposed text:

"Every citizen of the Union has a right of access to information available from the bodies and other Institutions of the European Union".

Reasons:

The possibility of asserting the right of access to information should not be confined to the European Parliament, the Council and the Commission. The obligation to allow access to information should rather apply to every department of all bodies of the European Union and all other EU Institutions, e.g. the European Environment Agency, the Committee of the Regions, etc.

The object of this right should be based on a comprehensive definition of information, which is not adequately provided by the term "document" given developments in information technology. This should rather be a right which covers information not only in written form but also in the form of pictures, sound, EDP, etc., i.e. in all conceivable types of information storage, in order to preclude any circumvention of the provision through use of a means of information storage that is not covered and also to allow for future technological developments.

A limitation on persons enjoying this right should only come into play where the need for information is no longer justified by the democratic basis of citizenship of the Union. If there were plans to make this a universal right applicable not only to citizens of the Union but also to all non-EU citizens residing or legal persons having their registered offices in a Member State of the European Union, such a solution would run counter to the justification of a right of access to information on the basis of democratic principles. Non-EU citizens should not therefore enjoy this right of access. Nor should legal persons unless they are involved in or monitoring the democratic process as a group of citizens of the Union, e.g. citizen's initiatives and the like.

AMENDMENT 353Proposed amendment to Article: 18

Submitted by: Mr Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

Everyone has a right of access to the documents and information of the institutions and other bodies of the Union in all areas falling within the competence of the Union. This right may be limited in accordance with the relevant restrictions applicable under Community law.

Reasons:

There is no reason to restrict the right of access to documents to Union citizens or persons residing in the Union, or in relation to certain Union institutions. The proposal further refers to the possibility of imposing restrictions applicable under Community law (see also Article 255 EC). Such restrictions need to be laid down in Community law.

AMENDMENT 354

Proposed amendment to Article: 18

Submitted by: José BARROS MOURA and Maria Eduarda AZEVEDO

Proposed text:

Every citizen of the Union or anyone residing in the Union has a right of access to the documents of the European Parliament, the Council and the Commission and of the Member States where implementing Community legislation.

AMENDMENT 355

Proposed amendment to Article: 18

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEBOUSSE, MEP, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

- Incorporate Article 18 (Right of access to documents) into Article 27 (Relations with the administration).
- Alternative amendment: convert Article 18 into Article 27a.

Reasons:

To improve the Charter's readability and bring together in the same section two articles both dealing with relations between citizens and the Union's bodies.

AMENDMENT 356

Proposed amendment to Article: 18

Submitted by: Simone BEISSEL

Proposed text:

“... a right of access to the official documents of the European Parliament, of the Council and of the Commission.”

Reasons:

There is a risk that the confidentiality of communications and of internal documents might be breached, thereby causing major damage to the proper conduct of the European Union’s affairs.

Proposals for Article 19

AMENDMENT 357

Proposed amendments to Article: 19. Data protection

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed text:

Rephrase this Article completely.

Reasons:

Personal data protection is a very sensitive field where the rights of the individual need to be balanced, i.a. against the freedom of expression, the need for transparency in public affairs and the need to protect public health and public order. The careful considerations contained in the Council of Europe's Convention on the protection of personal data and in national legislation is not adequately reflected in the draft Article.

Finally, the heading is too broad and should read "Personal data protection".

AMENDMENT 358Proposed amendment to Article: 19. Data protection

Submitted by: Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

Delete.

Reasons:

The text of this Article should be added to Article 12 as paragraph 2, on substantive and systematic grounds.

AMENDMENT 359Proposed amendment to Article: 19*Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEPProposed text:*Article 19. Data protection

Everyone has the right to determine the use and disclosure of (delete: 4 words) personal data (delete: 9 words).

Statement of reasons

Under Article 286 of the EC Treaty the Community Directives on data protection are applicable to the institutions and bodies. Those Directives are based on the Council of Europe Convention on the protection of personal data. It seems preferable to lay down a general rule rather than to include a detailed list of principles which will be subject to change in the light of technical advances. In any case, data protection is an aspect of respect for privacy.

AMENDMENT 360

Proposed amendment to Article: 19

Submitted by: Erling OLSEN

Proposed text:

The following words should be added to this provision: "subject to the conditions laid down in Community legal acts pursuant to Article 286 of the EC Treaty".

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 361

Proposed amendment to Article: 19. Data protection

Submitted by: Jordi SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

"Everyone has the right to have his personal data protected and to determine for himself whether they may be disclosed and how they may be used".

Reasons:

The first part of the sentence reverts to the original thrust of this Article and is added to the existing text, where the words "his personal data" are replaced by "they" in order not to repeat the phrase.

AMENDMENT 362

Proposed amendment to Article: 19

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

Add "... without prejudice to the powers of law-enforcement agencies to compile and use data in the cases provided for by law".

Reasons:

The right of everyone to determine for himself whether his personal data may be disclosed and how they may be used is not an absolute right.

AMENDMENT 363

Proposed amendment to Article: 19

Submitted by: Win GRIFFITSH, MP

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to determine for himself/herself whether his/her personal data may be disclosed and how they may be used except in circumstances prescribed by law in connection with established infringements of the law.

Reasons:

On its own the original text would appear to give convicted criminals the right to decide whether their personal data ought to be published in the public interest.

AMENDMENT 364Proposed amendment to Article: 19

Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANI, who wishes to endorse the amendment replacing Article 19 submitted by Professor RODOTA'

Proposed text:

(Text proposed by Professor Rodota':

1. Everyone has the right to respect for the confidentiality of personal data as part of their own identity.
2. Personal data may be collected only for legitimate purposes and subject to the principle of proportionality.
3. Everyone has the right to determine freely whether their personal data may be collected, used and transmitted, to be informed about the purposes and methods of processing, to have access to the information collected and to seek independent verification.
4. No one shall be subjected to checks by surveillance technologies which may be prejudicial to human dignity, rights or freedoms.)

AMENDMENT 365

Proposed amendment to Article: 19

Submitted by: Kathalijne BUITENWEG and Johannes VOGGENHUBER

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to determine for himself whether his personal data may be compiled and disclosed and how they may be used.

Reasons:

In order to ensure completeness.

AMENDMENT 366Proposed amendment to Article: 19

Submitted by: Johannes VOGGENHUBER and Kathalijne BUITENWEG

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to determine for himself whether his personal data may be disclosed and how they may be used.
2. Everyone has the right to know the data collected on him and, where appropriate, to request that corrections be made.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 367

Proposed amendment to Article: 19

Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈS

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to authorise the disclosure and use of data concerning himself.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 368

Proposed amendment to Article: 19. Data protection

Submitted by: Charlotte CEDERSCHIÖLD

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to determine for himself/herself whether his/her personal data may be disclosed and how they may be used, including proprietary information and business secrets.

Reasons:

The owner of the information should be able to decide whether to restrict its use, or to disclose it to third parties.

AMENDMENT 369Proposed amendment to Article: 19*Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSERProposed text:Article 19. Data protection*

*Everyone has the right to determine for himself whether his personal data may be disclosed and how they may be used, insofar as he has an interest therein which should be protected.

Reasons:

In the current version, the basic right to data protection seems to be worded in terms that are too absolute. It is also possible to conceive of situations in which the data subject should not have full freedom of decision-making. This manner of looking at such situations in relative terms is expressed by the second half of the sentence, which has also, for the past 20 years or so, formed part of the Austrian constitutional acquis (Section 1(1) of the Austrian Data Protection Act states that everyone is entitled to the confidentiality of the personal data concerning him, insofar as he has an interest therein that is worth protecting, particularly with regard to respect for his private and family life).

AMENDMENT 370Proposed amendment to Article: 19

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Every natural person shall have a right to protection for his personal data.

Reasons:

1. Entitlement to this right, which forms part of the right to privacy, refers to natural persons.
2. It is not admissible for the disclosure and use of personal data to be in all cases subject to the consent of the data subject. Even if that is generally the case, in cases where data are obtained by the public administration for the performance of its duties, the use of the data in its possession cannot be subject to the consent of the data subject. Examples are the computerised records for tax, police and judicial purposes, etc. Respect for privacy and data confidentiality are a separate issue.
3. It is therefore proposed to revert to the wording of the previous text (CONVENT 8, Article 15).

AMENDMENT 371

Proposed amendment to Article: 19. Data protection

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

"Article 19. Data protection

Everyone has the right to determine for himself whether his personal data may be collected or disclosed and how they may be used."

Reasons:

From the point of view of the German Länder, it is imperative that the citizen should be thoroughly protected as early as the data collection stage.

Furthermore, on terminological grounds the German term "personenbezogen" would be preferable.

AMENDMENT 372

Proposed amendment to Article: 19. Data protection

Submitted by: VITORINO, Commission representative on the Convention

Proposed text:

"Everyone has the right to determine for himself whether personal data concerning him may be collected and disclosed and how they may be used."

Reasons:

It is important to make clear that this provision applies from the time of collection of data by third parties. It should also be made clear that it applies to data concerning the person.

AMENDMENT 373Proposed amendment to Article: 19

Submitted by: RODOTA', MANZELLA and PACIOTTI

Proposed text:

Replace the text of the Article by the following:

- "1. Everyone has the right to respect fro the confidentiality of personal data as part of their own identity.
2. Personal data may be collected only for lawful purposes and in compliance with the principle of proportionality.
3. Everyone has the right to determine freely whether personal data may be collected, used and transmitted, to be informed about the purposes and methods of processing, to have access to the information collected and to seek independent verification.
4. No one shall be subjected to checks by surveillance technologies which may be prejudicial to human dignity, rights or freedoms."

Reasons:

In accordance with the criteria laid down in European Directives (in particular 95/46/EC), this proposal makes clearer the scope of the protection necessary to safeguard the fundamental right to confidentiality.

AMENDMENT 374

Proposed amendment to Article: 19. Data protection

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text:

Respect for the rights and freedoms laid down by this Charter, in particular the right to privacy, shall be guaranteed with regard to the processing, by whatever means, of any information concerning an identified or identifiable natural person. The information must be processed fairly and for specified purposes, and subject to the data subject's consent or to any other legitimate basis specified by law.

Reasons:

The alternative text proposed in the statement of reasons (CONVENT 8 version) is preferable. The text of the CONVENT 28 version is in any case too generally worded and does not allow for exceptions. The alternative text states the essence of the basic right and thus offers more effective protection of personal data.

AMENDMENT 375

Proposed amendment to Article: 19

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

Article 19 to be deleted.

Reasons:

See the amendment to Article 12, which regulates data protection as part of the protection of privacy.

AMENDMENT 376

Proposed amendment to Article: 19

Submitted by: José BARROS MOURA and Maria Eduarda AZEVEDO

Proposed text:

Everyone, including legal persons, has a right

AMENDMENT 377

Proposed amendment to Article: 19

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Substitute the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

“Every natural person has a right to protection for his or her personal data”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 19 is the right under Article 286 TEC and Community Directives on data protection and is subject to the conditions and limitations laid down in them”

Reasons:

I do not consider that the “general rule” proposed by the Praesidium is justified by the relevant treaty provisions or the ECHR or as a result of the common constitutional positions of the member states. My version ensures that Article 19 is understood within the meaning of the relevant Council of Europe provision and Community Directives. To the extent that this right is “an aspect of respect for privacy”, it is already covered by Article 12 above.

AMENDMENT 378

Proposed amendment to Article: 19

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEBOUSSE, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

The proposed text should be replaced by the following:

1. Everyone has the right to establish what data concerning him/her are held on any data file of which he/she is aware.
2. Everyone has the right to have errors in data concerning him/her rectified.
3. No personal data may be made public without the authorisation of the data subject.

Reasons:

With all due respect for the authors of the proposed Article, I feel that a provision of this type is pointless in an age when it is well known that personal data files (for example on people's buying, travelling, transport and reading habits, etc.) are bought and sold.

Furthermore, the proposed Article does not contain two rights whose usefulness seems beyond dispute, viz., the right to establish the existence of a data file and to rectification of any errors it may contain.

Lastly, the proposal that publication should be subject to authorisation seems more realistic than others, given the highly public nature of publication, if I may put it in those terms.

Proposals for Article 19a

AMENDMENT 379

Proposed amendment to Article: Insertion of a new Article after Article 19

Submitted by: Peter ALTMEIER, Member of the German Bundestag

Proposed text:

Article 20/Primacy of private action

"The European Union shall abide by the principle that private action must take precedence. In the areas within its competence, it shall take action only if and in so far as the objectives of the proposed action cannot be achieved, or cannot be sufficiently achieved, by private action.

Reasons:

The principle of the primacy of private action is a development of the general principle of subsidiarity and also of the principle of the protection of human dignity; the intention is that the scope for private action and enterprise should not be unduly restricted by European rules. It is also designed to prevent national efforts to expand the private sector through privatisation and deregulation from being frustrated at European level.

Proposals for Article 20

AMENDMENT 380

Proposed amendment to Article: 20. Right to property

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Every person has the right to own, use, dispose of and bequeath lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions, nor of a basic right of use, except in the public interest and in the cases and under the conditions provided for by the law, subject to fair and prior compensation.

Reasons:

The right to property normally comes under national law. However, as it may be affected or even truncated by many Community measures, its inclusion in the Charter is acceptable.

We would therefore propose three amendments to the basic article:

- an explicit reference to the right to bequeath appears necessary, to avoid the right being undermined by indirect measures at the time of death;
- the reminder that the withdrawal of the right of use is tantamount to the withdrawal of the right to property; this aspect seems particularly significant in relation to Community activities;
- the specification that compensation must be paid before the expropriation takes place (not just a promise of compensation).

AMENDMENT 381Proposed amendment to Article 20

Submitted by: Erling OLSEN

Proposed text:

The provision should be worded in accordance with Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR. The words “a prior guarantee of” should in any case be deleted.

Reasons:

The wording proposed by the Praesidium leaves its interpretation open to doubt in a not insignificant way (for example the words “prior guarantee of fair compensation”), and may also give rise to uncertainty as to the scope of the obligation. I therefore prefer the wording in the Additional Protocol. Moreover, the question of fair compensation in the case of deprivation of property is included in the Court of Human Rights’ evaluation of whether the deprivation may be seen as a proportionate action. Part B should refer to the practice of the Court of Human Rights in this area.

AMENDMENT 382

Proposed amendment to Article: 20. Right to property

Submitted by: Jordi SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

“Every person has the right to own, use and dispose of lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his property except in the public interest and in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law and subject to a fair compensation.”

Reasons:

The word “poseer” in the Spanish text is replaced by “propiedad” so as not to confuse the legal concepts of possession and ownership. At the end of the second sentence, the word “prior” is deleted because it imposes a constraint which not all EU Member States are in a position to accept. For instance, Article 33(3) of the Spanish Constitution refers to “compensation”, leaving it to the legislation to determine whether it is prior or subsequent.

AMENDMENT 383

Proposed amendment to Article: 20

Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANI

Proposed text * :

Every natural or legal person has the right to the enjoyment of his possessions, and to use and dispose of them within the limits and under the conditions laid down in national and Community law in accordance with the general interest. No one may be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law or Community law and subject to a prior guarantee of compensation commensurate with the presumed trade value of the possessions.

Reasons:

The right to property should be extended to legal persons and not be limited to individuals. The deletion of “lawfully acquired” is proposed (as it seems pleonastic, since the concept of property implies a lawful situation) as is the replacement of the expression “enjoyment of his possessions” used in Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR. This offers the advantage of covering every type of violation of the freedom enjoy one’s possessions.

It should also be noted that the wording proposed by the Presidency makes no mention of limitations to the right to property, taken into account in Article 1(2) of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR, which refers to the many cases where state intervention does not involve the loss of that right, but rather restricts the owner’s powers in such a way as substantially to reduce the enjoyment of the possessions. It is therefore proposed to refer to the power to use and dispose of the possessions, while making it clear that it may be restricted by law and by Community law only in accordance with the general interest.

Finally, the concept of “fair compensation” should be replaced by that of “compensation commensurate with the presumed trade value of the possessions”, an expression which, without obliging to a restitutio ad integrum, has the advantage of anchoring the compensation for the loss of property to an objective parameter.

* The proposed amendments are shown in boldface.

AMENDMENT 384Proposed amendment to Article: 20*Submitted by: Win GRIFFITHS, MPProposed text:

Every natural or legal person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his/her possessions. No one shall be deprived of his/her possession except in the public interest and subject to the conditions provided for by the law and by the general principles of international law.

Reasons:

I prefer to keep to Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR.

AMENDMENT 385

Proposed amendment to Article: 20

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

The present text should be deleted and replaced with the verbatim text of the ECHR.

Reasons:

Unnecessary departures from the ECHR should be avoided.

AMENDMENT 386

Proposed amendment to Article: 20

Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈS

Proposed text:

Every person has the right to own, use and dispose of lawfully acquired possessions. Use of these possessions must not conflict with the public interest. No one may be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law and subject to a prior guarantee of fair compensation.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 387

Proposed amendment to Article: 20. Right to property

Submitted by: Dr. Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

First sentence: Every person has the right to own, use, inherit and dispose of lawfully acquired possessions. Use of these possessions must not conflict with the public interest. No one may be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law and subject to a prior guarantee of fair compensation.

Reasons:

The incorporation of the law of succession in the guarantee laid down in the first sentence of the first paragraph serves to ensure that Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR is unanimously regarded as also protecting the entitlement of the heir testamentary or legal heir to universal succession.

AMENDMENT 388

Proposed amendment to Article: 20. Right to property

Submitted by: Charlotte CEDERSCHIÖLD

Proposed text:

Every person has the right to own, use and dispose of lawfully acquired possessions, including intellectual and industrial property. No one may be deprived of his/her possessions except in essential public interest and in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law and subject to a prior guarantee of fair compensation.

AMENDMENT 389

Proposed amendment to Article: 20

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

The right to property is guaranteed (or, alternatively, every person has the right to enjoy his possessions), in accordance with its (their) social function and the general interest. No one may be deprived of their property except in the public interest and in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law and in return for fair compensation.

Reasons:

The first sentence in Spanish is technically unsound as it confuses the right to property with the right to possession, two different concepts which are not interchangeable. The reference to “lawfully acquired” possessions raises problems of interpretation for countries where the statute of limitation exists. The cases where property is acquired by criminal means must be dealt with under the Criminal Codes.

On the other hand, it is essential, as is done in the ECHR, to mention the limitations to the right to property derived from its social function, since the absolute right of Roman Law (“ius utendi, fruendi et abutendi”) has now been replaced by a right to property defined by its social function and its subordination to the general interest or common good.

Finally, the requirement that the compensation be calculated or be paid prior to the occupation of the expropriated possession is not compatible with Article 33 of the Spanish Constitution. Such a wording would make the Spanish Constitution incompatible with the Charter, requiring a constitutional amendment. Furthermore, as became clear at the meetings of the Convention, the prior character of compensation for expropriation is not a principle common to all Member States according to their constitutional traditions.

The somewhat clumsy wording proposed in the Praesidium’s text to overcome this objection [“subject to a prior guarantee of fair compensation”] does nothing to change our minds about rejecting the text, since it still requires that fair compensation be guaranteed prior to the beginning of the expropriation proceedings, which comes down to the same thing in the end.

It is worth noting that the ECHR says nothing about the prior nature of compensation.

AMENDMENT 390

Proposed amendment to Article: 20. Right to property

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

“Article 20. Right to property

1. Possessions and the law of succession shall be respected. Substance and limits shall be determined in accordance with national law. Possessions that derive from serious infringements of tax liability or from criminal offences or which are to be used for such purposes shall not be protected.
2. Use of these possessions must not conflict with the public interest.
3. Expropriation or a similar measure is permissible only if it is in the public interest and subject to compensation and only in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law. In order to protect the person concerned, provisions governing the nature and the degree of compensation should be laid down in this Charter. The compensation must be fair.”

Reasons:

The incorporation of the law of succession in the guarantee laid down in the first sentence of the first paragraph serves to ensure that Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR is unanimously regarded as also protecting the entitlement of the heir testamentary or legal heir to universal succession, even if Article 1 of the Additional Protocol does not explicitly refer to the law of succession. The verbs “respect” and “guarantee” both ensure that the Charter contains a fundamental decision regarding property and the law of succession. However, it follows the wording of Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR, thus making the proposal more acceptable.

Paragraph 1, second sentence contains two statements. Firstly, the provision leaves it to the Member States to determine the substance and the limits of the law. Secondly, it states that substance and limits with regard to property and the law of succession shall be laid down by law.

Paragraph 1, sentence 3 contains a clarification and sends a signal a barrier at European level against drugs trafficking and other forms of organised crime. This addition to the text stems from the SPS parliamentary party's draft legislation of 4 February 1994 relating to Article 14 GG (BT-Drucks. 12/6784; see also Jürgen Meyer/Wolfgang Hetzer ZRP 1997, 13; and Jürgen Meyer in Article 10 of his discussion draft of 6 January 2000 which was submitted to the Convention – CHARTE 4102/00).

Paragraph 2 is the basis of the social cohesion demanded by all Convention members. As the Charter of Fundamental Rights contains no value judgement regarding the social state principle (which under Germany's Basic law forms the antithesis of the existing system of property ownership), the emphasis on social cohesion is of particular importance.

Paragraph 3 does not adopt the distinction between “deprived of his possessions” and “control the use of property” contained in Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR. Rather, it takes the terminology of the Basic Law and makes the qualitative assessment of a measure such as expropriation (subject to compensation) or the determination of substance and limits dependent on the way in which the law is applied. For the purposes of the ECHR, “deprived of his possessions” essentially means formal deprivation. This (and this alone) involves obligatory compensation. This is not without problems, since restriction of the rights of property owners that involves deprivation can also take place outside the framework of formal expropriation proceedings. Moreover, the term “deprivation of property” (as defined by the Federal Constitutional Court) extends only to loss of property as the severest form of expropriation. Below this threshold, however, further restrictions on the rights of property owners that involve deprivation are possible.

Paragraph 3, first sentence also mentions a measure similar to expropriation (“a similar measure”). Rather than follow the Praesidium's proposal and cause confusion by introducing a second expression (“aus Gründen des öffentlichen Interesses”), the provision follows on from paragraph 2 by repeating the phrase “in the public interest” (“zum Wohl der Allgemeinheit”)¹. The proposed text (“by law”) ensures that administrative as well as legal expropriation is permissible. This obviates the need to supplement the provision with the phrase “or pursuant to a law”.

Paragraph 3, second sentence should replace the text proposed by the Praesidium, which requires expropriation to be preceded by an undertaking to pay compensation. Admittedly, this proposal moderates the first version of the draft, which required prior compensation. However, it still falls short of practical needs. In many Member States it is possible to go to law to contest the amount at which compensation is fixed. Promises cannot be given here, least of all before expropriation. Paragraph 3, second sentence emphasises (as a point against) the protection of the individual because it compels national law to be clear about whether the seizure of property itself is an act which constitutes expropriation and what compensation (paid from the public purse) it considers fair.

¹ Not applicable in the English version

AMENDMENT 391

Proposed amendment to Article: 20

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Substitute the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

“Everyone is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his or her possessions. Public bodies may interfere with possessions or the way they are used only in specified, limited circumstances”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 20 is the right in Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR”.

Reasons:

I am not in favour of an approach which seeks to “update the wording of the Convention”. The Convention is a living document and kept up to date by the jurisprudence of the Strasbourg Court. I consider that unnecessary and likely to produce new and uncertain obligations, potentially inconsistent with the ECHR, for the EU institutions and Member States acting on their behalf. My version ensures that Article 20 is understood within the meaning of the relevant ECHR right and associated case law.

AMENDMENT 392

Proposed amendment to Article: 20

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

No one may be deprived of the property of lawfully acquired possessions, except in the public interest and in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law and in return for fair compensation.

Reasons:

To eliminate the confusion in the draft between property and possession.

To remove the reference to “prior” compensation.

AMENDMENT 393

Proposed amendment to Article : 20

Submitted by: Daniel TARCHYS

Proposed text:

Delete “prior”.

Reason:

There is no such provision in the national legislation of many Member States, including Sweden.

AMENDMENT 394Proposed amendment to Article : 20*Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLAProposed text:Replace Article 20 by the following :*

- “1. Every person has the right to own lawfully acquired possessions.
2. The right to property may be restricted by law in the general interest and in order to ensure the social function of property.
3. No one may be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law and subject to a prior guarantee of fair compensation, without prejudice to the exceptions laid down by criminal law.”

Reasons:

This text aligns the rules on the right to property on those in the Member States' Constitutions.

AMENDMENT 395

Proposed amendment to Article: 20. Right to property

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text:

Every natural or legal person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law and subject to a prior guarantee of fair compensation.

Reasons:

The first sentence takes over the text of the Additional Protocol to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms

AMENDMENT 396Proposed amendment to Article: 20

Submitted by: Paul-Henri MEYERS, representative of the Luxembourg Government

Proposed text:

Every person has the right to own, use and dispose of lawfully acquired possessions. No one may be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and in the cases and subject to the conditions provided for by law and subject to the prior granting of fair compensation.

Reasons:

The term "guarantee" leaves open the amount of compensation to be awarded in the case of expropriation. Replacing "guarantee" by "granting" makes it clear that the expropriated person must have a decision on the amount of the compensation and the deadline for its payment.

AMENDMENT 397

Proposed amendment to Article: 20

Submitted by: Ieke VAN DEN BURG

Proposed text:

Every person has the right to own, use and dispose of lawfully acquired possessions within the limitations that may be imposed by the authorities in the general interest, etc.

Reasons:

The second paragraph of Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedom states that an authority must also be able to enforce laws in the general interest which may limit the exercise of property rights. This is made clear in the statement of reasons but in the text the general interest is mentioned only in connection with possible expropriation. In (national and European) practice, legal conflicts arise more frequently in connection with this limitation of the exercise and utilisation of property rights.

It is therefore important to include that element explicitly in the text of Article 20.

AMENDMENT 398Proposed amendment to Article: 20*Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands GovernmentProposed text:

Every person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions. No one shall be deprived of his possessions except in the cases referred to in Article 1 of the First Protocol to the ECHR. The preceding provisions shall not in any way impair the right of the Union to enforce those provisions of Community law which are necessary within the Union to control the use of property in accordance with the general interest or to secure the payment of taxes or other contributions or penalties.

Reasons:

This Article is based on Article 1 of the First Protocol to the ECHR. It concerns a fundamental principle shared by all national constitutions. In order to avoid misunderstandings, it is advisable - partly in view of the case law of the European Court of Human Rights – to follow the wording of Article 1 of the First Protocol as closely as possible.

AMENDMENT 399

Proposed amendment to Article: 20

Submitted by: José BARROS MOURA and Maria Eduarda AZEVEDO

Proposed text:

Every person has the right to own, use and dispose of lawfully acquired possessions subject to the restrictions imposed by the general interest. No one may be (rest unchanged).

AMENDMENT 400

Proposed amendment to Article: 20

Submitted by: Simone BEISSEL

Proposed text:

delete "... subject to a prior guarantee of fair compensation" or possibly "provided for by law and subject to compensation".

Reasons:

In the current system, the prior guarantee of fair compensation would block all expiry procedures, and in any event for the expropriated party the compensation is never fair.

Proposals for Article 20a

AMENDMENT 401

Proposed amendment to Article: insertion of two new Articles after Article 20

Submitted by: Peter ALTMAYER, Member of the German Bundestag

Proposed text:

Article 21/ Prohibition on expulsion

“Every person is entitled to live peace, security and dignity in his place of residence, home and country. No one may be driven from his home by force or coercion, or compelled to flee. Displaced persons and refugees are entitled to return to their traditional homes.”

Article 22/ Rights of minorities

“The identity and the rights of minorities and their members, as well as linguistic and cultural diversity in the European Union, shall be respected and protected.”

Reasons:

The 20th century saw millions of people driven from their traditional homes by totalitarian regimes in Europe and other parts of the world. Even very recently, in the spring of 1999, the expulsion of several hundred thousand people from Kosovo led to NATO military intervention against the criminal regime of the Serbian dictator Milosevic. At the same time, the rights of minorities were and are repeatedly violated. Expulsion and contempt for minority rights are among the most serious and most common human rights violations in Europe. It would therefore seem essential for these rights to be expressly laid down in the Charter.

Proposals for Article 21

AMENDMENT 402Proposed amendment to Article: 21*Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QCProposed text:

Delete this article entirely

Reasons:

The Praesidium text shows the great difficulty of formulating the relevant provisions concerning this sensitive subject in an acceptable way. Protocol 4 to the ECHR has not been accepted by all the Member States. Moreover the text is confined to non-EC citizens, which is understandable but incompatible with the Refugee Convention. Article 63 TEC quotes the title of the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol; but it does not assert a right to asylum. Neither is it true to say that Article 63 incorporates the 1951 Convention into Community law; in fact it provides for new First Pillar legislation in accordance with the 1951 Convention. I consider that development of an acceptable text on asylum rights is beyond the reach of the Convention and that, in the time available, the matter should be reserved for separate consideration by the Member States.

AMENDMENT 403

Proposed amendment to Article: 21

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 21. Right to asylum and expulsion

1. Nationals of third countries shall have the right to asylum in the European Union when in justified fear of political persecution or inhumane punishment, and in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees.

2 (new). Asylum seekers shall have access to fair and efficient determination procedures, including reasoned decisions and the right to an appeal with suspensive effect.

3 (ex 2). Collective expulsion of (delete: 1 word) third country nationals is prohibited.

Reasons:

The right of asylum is a universal right under the terms of Article 14 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The text of paragraph 1 is based on Article 63 TEC which incorporates the Convention on Refugees into Community law.

Paragraph 2 of this Article is based on best practice within the Member States of the European Union, which itself is in the process of developing a common asylum policy according to the Treaty of Amsterdam.

Paragraph 3 is based on Article 4 of Protocol No 4 to the European Convention on Human Rights concerning collective expulsion. Its purpose is to guarantee that every decision is based on a specific examination and that no single measure can be taken to expel all persons with particular characteristics. (delete: 20 words) The provisions of Article 1 of Protocol No 7 to the ECHR concerning procedural safeguards in the event of expulsion have not been incorporated as most Member States have not signed or ratified that Protocol. In any event the Geneva Convention contains guarantees in that respect.

AMENDMENT 404Proposed amendment to Article: 21

Submitted by: Erling OLSEN

Proposed text:

The expression “nationals of third countries” must be changed to “everyone”. Moreover, it must be specified that there is a right to seek asylum “in any Member State of the European Union”.

Reasons:

Under the Geneva Convention on the legal status of refugees, everyone has the right to seek asylum. The comments on the article might refer to Protocol 29 on asylum for citizens in the Member States of the European Union.

AMENDMENT 404Proposed amendment to Article: 21*Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANI*Proposed text:Right to asylum and prohibition on collective expulsion

1. Everyone shall have the right to asylum in the European Union in accordance with the rules of international asylum law as laid down, in particular, in the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the Status of Refugees.
2. Collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited.

Reasons:

The first proposed amendment concerns the title of this Article: the use of “right” in connection with “expulsion” is infelicitous. Moreover, to prevent baseless discrimination, the right to asylum should – as laid down in Article 3 of the Geneva Convention relating to the Status of Refugees – cover everyone, including stateless persons, and not just “nationals of third countries”; this is also the position argued by Amnesty International in its submissions to the Convention.

Lastly, it should be made clear that the Geneva Convention, albeit central, is not the only international instrument for the protection of refugees. The proposed wording would mean that relevant future agreements would be automatically incorporated.

* Proposed amendments are in bold.

AMENDMENT 405Proposed amendment to Article: 21*Submitted by: Win GRIFFITHS, MPProposed Text:

1. Nationals of third countries shall have the right to seek asylum in the European Union in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees.
2. Collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited.

Reasons:

The right to asylum is not automatic but anyone does have the right to seek asylum.

AMENDMENT 406Proposed amendment to Article: 21

Submitted by: Johannes VOGGENHUBER and Kathalijne BUITENWEG

Proposed text:

1. Any person who has a justified fear of persecution shall have the right to asylum in the European Union pursuant to the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the Status of Refugees. Grounds for asylum specific to women shall be taken into consideration.
2. No one may be expelled to a State if there are valid reasons for assuming that the measures referred to in paragraph 1 are likely to be carried out.
3. Collective expulsions of aliens are not permitted.
4. Any person who applies for asylum shall be entitled to admittance, protection and support.
5. Any person who is granted asylum shall be entitled to reunion with their family.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 407Proposed amendment to Article: 21

Submitted by: Jürgen MEYER/Jo LEINEN/Hans-Peter MARTIN/Ieke VAN DEN BURG

Proposed amendment:

Article 21 Asylum and expulsion

1. Any person who faces political persecution or inhuman or degrading punishment or treatment shall have the right to asylum. Grounds for asylum specific to women shall be taken into consideration.
2. Collective expulsions of aliens are prohibited.

Reasons:

The amendment restates – in slightly amended form – the proposed amendment which I submitted on 29 March (Contrib. 76) and clarifies my original discussion draft (submitted on 6 January; Contrib. 2).

The fundamental right to asylum is also considered in the proposal of the Praesidium. This is expressly welcomed as the Union will in the future acquire powers in this area pursuant to Article 63 of the EC Treaty.

The right to asylum is laid down inter alia in Article 14 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, in the constitutions of the Federal Republic of Germany (Article 16a), France (the preamble to the 1946 constitution which is still in force), Italy (Article 10), Portugal (Article 33(6), Spain (Article 13(4), Slovakia (Article 53) and Poland (Article 56).

The inclusion in paragraph 1, second sentence of grounds for asylum specific to women is based on a realisation that is gaining in international acceptance, namely that women as a sociological group frequently face particular forms of persecution. In this connection the systematic rape of Muslim women during the armed conflict in former Yugoslavia, together with the fact that rape is regarded as a specific war crime by the UN, should be noted.

By incorporating such a clarification of persecution, the Union would be contributing towards the affirmation of a modern fundamental right that is already recognised in specific cases.¹ The wording proposed here is expressly welcomed by Amnesty International, PRO ASYL and Terre des Femmes.

Protection from expulsion as laid down in the amendment proposed previously (Contrib. 76) in the cases referred to in paragraph 1 has therefore been removed from this amendment because it has now been incorporated by the Praesidium in the second sentence of Article 4. This is expressly welcomed and is in keeping with the constitutions of many Member States (Finland, France, Greece, Italy, Portugal, Spain) and with Article 3 of the UN Convention against torture or other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and Article 33(1) of the Geneva Convention relating to the Status of Refugees.

Paragraph 2 incorporates the wording proposed by the Praesidium.

¹ Magdeburg Administrative Court on 20 July 1996, coalition agreement of the Green/SPD Federal Government of 20 October 1998.

AMENDMENT 408

Proposed amendment to Article: 21

Submitted by : Pervenche BERÈS

Proposed text:

Any person not resident in a Member State, or resident in a Member State the rights of which have been suspended in the Union, shall have the right to asylum in the European Union in accordance with international rules.

Reasons:

The right to asylum should be opened to stateless persons.

The reference to the Geneva Convention makes the wording cumbersome and makes the Charter dependent on the assessment of a text over which the Union has no control.

AMENDMENT 409

Proposed amendment to Article: 21. Right to asylum and expulsion

Submitted by : Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

1. (new) Politically persecuted persons who do not belong to the Union shall be protected in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees.
2. (new) No one may be expelled or extradited to a State where he would be in danger of being subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman treatment.
3. Collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited.

Reasons:

The Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 already offer sufficient international minimum standards for the treatment of refugees which are binding on Member States.

However, the Geneva Convention does not guarantee a right to asylum but only rights in the context of asylum. A reference to the Geneva Convention in a catalogue of fundamental rights might give the impression that Member States wanted to elevate the legal status of the Geneva Convention to the level of an individual fundamental right. This, however, is not the case.

Paragraph 2 is taken from former Article 4, second sentence.

AMENDMENT 410Proposed amendment to Article: 21*Submitted by: Heinrich NEISSERProposed text:

Article 21. The right to asylum and expulsion.

1. Everyone shall have the right to asylum in the European Union in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees.
2. Collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited.

Reasons:

In order not to fall below the level of protection of the Geneva Convention the right to asylum should basically be guaranteed to everyone and not only nationals of third countries. However, the acquis in accordance with the Protocol to the EC Treaty on asylum for nationals of the Member States of the EU (added by the Amsterdam Treaty) remains unchanged.

AMENDMENT 411Proposed amendment to Article: 21

Submitted by: Gunnar JANSSON, Tuija BRAX and Paavo NIKULA

Proposed text:Article 21. Right to asylum and expulsion

- 1. *Everyone shall have the right to asylum in the European Union in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees.
- 2. *Collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited. The expulsion order shall guarantee the right of the individual to present reasons against his expulsion before a court or any other independent body.

Statement of reasons:

The right to asylum should be guaranteed to anyone applying for asylum in the territory of the European Union, not only to nationals of third countries. This wording is taken from the Convention on the Status of Refugees, to which there is also a reference in the text of this Article.

The right of the individual to have an expulsion order examined before an impartial body is in line with Article 13 of the UN Covenant on Civil and Political Rights which has been ratified by all the Member States.

AMENDMENT 412

Proposed amendment to Article: 21. Right to asylum and expulsion

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

"Article 21. Right to asylum and expulsion

1. The protection of politically persecuted persons who do not belong to the Union shall be guaranteed in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to status of refugees.
2. Collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited.
3. No one may be expelled or extradited to a State where he would be in danger of being subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman treatment."

Reasons:

The wording proposed by the Presidency, i.e. "Nationals of third countries" makes no distinction at all between types of asylum seekers. It does not distinguish between politically persecuted persons and those seeking to enter for other reasons. Limiting the group of beneficiaries to politically persecuted persons takes account of the idea of the need for protection which lies at the heart of asylum.

The wording proposed by the Presidency i.e. "... shall have the right to asylum" suggests that the norm should be interpreted as an individual right under public law. Given Member States' heterogeneous legal position this concept appears to be too narrow. In view of the binding force of the Charter for EU bodies, it is important that a wording be found that also covers constitutions which merely provide for institutional guarantees relating to asylum. If an individual right were laid down EU bodies would be forced to act against those Member States whose constitution only provides for institutional guarantees. The wording proposed by the German Länder offers sufficient leeway here.

The ban on expulsion and extradition has been added to Article 21, which logically speaking is its rightful place, and not Article 4 as in CONVENT 28.

AMENDMENT 413Proposed amendment to Article: 21

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

Article 21. Right to asylum and expulsion.

1. Anyone who is politically persecuted or exposed to inhuman or degrading treatment shall have a right to asylum. Account shall be taken of grounds for asylum relating specifically to women.
2. No one may be expelled to a State if there are valid reasons to assume that the acts described in paragraph 1 are a threat after expulsion. This also applies in particular to conscientious objectors from third countries in which there is no right to refuse to serve in a war.
3. Collective expulsion of aliens, male or female, is prohibited.

Reasons:

This proposed amendment basically draws on Professor Meyer's proposed amendment of 24 March 2000. The addition of the right to protection from expulsion for conscientious objectors goes beyond that proposal. The reference in the Presidency's proposal to the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees belongs in the statement of reasons relating to Article 21. It must be ensured that the fundamental right to asylum is individually enforceable through legal action and that it does not degenerate into an act of mercy by the State.

AMENDMENT 414Proposed amendment to Article: 21

Submitted by: VITORINO, Commission representative at the Convention

Proposed text:

The article could be split into two separate articles, one to deal with the right to asylum and the other with expulsion (Article 21(2) is not altered in substance):

“Article 21. Right to asylum

The right to asylum is guaranteed in compliance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees and with other relevant treaties.

Article 21a. Expulsion

Collective expulsion is prohibited.”

Reasons:

1. Grouping asylum and the ban on expulsion in the same article is incompatible with the spirit of the conclusions of the Tampere European Council, which made a clear distinction between the problems of asylum and those of aliens' residence.
2. For a person who has the right of asylum, a neutral wording should be adopted, in compliance with the Treaties and in particular the Protocol on asylum for nationals of Member States of the European Union.

AMENDMENT 415Proposed amendment to Article: 21*Submitted by: François LONCLEProposed text:

Word paragraph 1 of this Article as follows:

“Persons covered by the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and by the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees shall be granted refugee status in the European Union, under the conditions laid down in those texts.”

Reasons:

This amendment is intended to remove two ambiguities in the present text:

- the first is the implication that the benefit of the Geneva Convention is limited to certain categories of persons, whereas in fact that text applies universally;
- the second is that this text mixes up the right of asylum, that is admission to the territory, which comes under the jurisdiction of each State, with refugee status, which is regulated by the Geneva Convention.

AMENDMENT 416

Proposed amendment to Article: 21. Right to asylum and expulsion

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text:

1. Everyone has the right to asylum in a Member State of the European Union in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees.
2. Collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited.

Reasons:

In accordance with the obligations of Member States under the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees, every application for asylum must be treated individually, whether made by a citizen of the Union or a person who is not a citizen of the Union. Hence the proposed extension ratione personae of the right to asylum.

In the absence of a genuine European right to asylum, it is technically more correct to speak of a right to asylum in accordance with the law of the EU Member States.

AMENDMENT 417

Proposed amendment to Article: 21(a) (new): Prohibition of expulsion

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

21(a) (new): Prohibition of expulsion

(New) The citizens of the European Union have a right to their home country. No one may by force of compulsion be expelled from his ancestral home, his place of residence or his country or be forced to flee. Displaced persons or refugees shall have the right to return to their ancestral home country.

Reasons:

In the 20th century millions of people were expelled by totalitarian regimes from their home countries in Europe and throughout the world. Only recently in the spring of 1999 the expulsion of several hundreds of thousands of people from Kosovo led to the military intervention by Nato against the criminal regime of Serbia's dictator Milosević.

The draft of Article 21(2) provides that the collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited. However, it is important that not only aliens, especially nationals from third countries, are protected by this right but also citizens of the European Union.

AMENDMENT 418

Proposed amendment to Article: 21b (new): Protection of minorities

Submitted by: Dr. Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

21b (new): Protection of minorities

(New) The identity and the rights of historically-rooted and long-established minorities and their members, as well as linguistic and cultural diversity in the European Union, shall be respected and protected.

Reasons:

The rights of minorities are continuously violated even today. Expulsion and disregard for minority rights are among the most serious and the most frequent human rights violations in Europe.

AMENDMENT 419

Proposed amendment to Article: 21

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, Member of the European Parliament, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

- Convert Article 21(2) into Article 4(3) in order to combine issues relating to expulsion.
- Change the title of Article 21 as it now concerns only the right of asylum.
- Replace the proposed version of Article 21 with the following text:
 1. The European Union shall grant the right of asylum to any third-country national whose life is threatened or who is exposed to inhuman or degrading treatment. However, persons enjoying this right shall undertake to observe and observe in practice both the principles of tolerance and democracy and the fundamental laws of the Union and its Member States.
 2. When the reasons for the application are reviewed, grounds relating specifically to women may be taken into account.
 3. Collective expulsions of refugees or other aliens or expulsions aimed specifically at one nationality or religious or ideological group are prohibited.

Reasons:

A Union of 400 million people cannot guarantee the right of asylum to a global population outside the Union of over 5 billion human beings without fundamentally impugning the well-being of its inhabitants.

Moreover, the right of asylum has from time immemorial been regarded primarily as a personal right (which justifies references to it as such both in this section and elsewhere in the Charter). If there is a desire to treat it as a collective right, it should be dealt with in the relevant section.

Furthermore, good reasons have been found for not quoting legal sources thus far in the Charter, and this rule should not be modified for this one Article.

Lastly, it must be emphasised that the right of asylum is not conceived of as simply involving residence but as an act of adherence to the fundamental values of the Union as reflected moreover in the Charter.

The other changes are aimed at improving the form and do not alter the substance.

Proposals for Article 21(1) and (1a)

AMENDMENT 420

Proposed amendment to Article: 21. Right to asylum and expulsion – Paragraph 1

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

1. Nationals of third countries shall have the right to asylum in the Member States of the European Union in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees.

Reasons:

Although there is a common asylum policy, it remains the fact that pursuant to Article 63 of the TEC it is the Member States which grant or refuse asylum to persecuted individuals. Article 21 should not present any ambiguity on this point.

AMENDMENT 421

Proposed amendment to Article: 21. Right to asylum and expulsion – Paragraph 1a

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Aliens may be expelled from the territory of Member States, subject to the guarantees recognised by international law, if they have entered that territory illegally, if they have violated the laws of that State, or if they endanger public order and public safety.

Reasons:

It would be bizarre for an Article entitled “Right to asylum and expulsion” to have a first paragraph defining the right to asylum without the following paragraph defining cases where expulsion is permitted.

AMENDMENT 422

Proposed amendment to Article: 21. Right to asylum and expulsion

Submitted by: Michael O'KENNEDY, TD, personal representative of the Irish Head of State/Government

Proposed text:

Article 21

1. Nationals of third countries shall have the right to seek and enjoy asylum in the European Union in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees.

Reasons:

It is suggested to include "seek and enjoy" as there is no right to "asylum" in international law. To "seek and enjoy" is in conformity with Article 14 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

AMENDMENT 423

Proposed amendment to Article: 21

Submitted by: E.M H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

In paragraph 1 the phrase “Nationals of third countries” should be replaced with “Any person”.

Reasons:

Stateless persons also have the right of asylum.

AMENDMENT 424

Proposed amendment to Article: 21(1)

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

“Nationals of third countries shall have the right to apply for asylum in the European Union.”

Add to Article 21(1) a reference to the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Reasons:

The internationally recognised right is to “apply for asylum”. The wording is incorrect and may be dangerously broad.

A reference needs to be made to the Community powers laid down in Articles 61 and following of the EC Treaty and Protocol No 29.

AMENDMENT 425

Proposed amendment to Article: 21(1)

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

Nationals of third countries shall have the right to apply for asylum in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees.

Reasons:

The right to asylum cannot be considered to be absolute. It is subject to compliance with established requirements.

AMENDMENT 426

Proposed amendment to Article: 21(1)

Submitted by: Peter ALTMAIER, Member of the German Bundestag

Proposed text:

“Persons from third countries who are persecuted on political grounds shall be granted asylum in the European Union pursuant to the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 11 January 1967 relating to the Status of Refugees”.

Reasons:

This wording should prevent Article 21(1) of the Charter being invoked as justification for individual rights of asylum that go beyond the legal provisions in force in the Member States of the European Union.

AMENDMENT 427Proposed amendment to Article: 21*Submitted by: François LONCLEProposed text:

Word paragraph 1 of this Article as follows:

"Persons covered by the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and by the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees shall be granted refugee status in the European Union, under the conditions laid down in those texts."

Reasons:

This proposed amendment is intended to remove two ambiguities in the present text:

- the first is the implication that the benefit of the Geneva Convention is limited to certain categories of persons, whereas in fact the text applies universally;
- the second is that this text confuses the right of asylum, i.e. permission to reside in sovereign territory, which falls within the jurisdiction of each individual State, with refugee status which is regulated by the Geneva Convention.

AMENDMENT 428

Proposed amendment to Article: 21(1)

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

1. The right to apply for asylum shall be guaranteed in the European Union, in accordance with the rules of the Geneva Convention of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol of 31 January 1967 relating to the status of refugees.

Reasons:

The proposed amendment to paragraph 1 is more in line with the obligations ensuing from the Geneva Convention.

AMENDMENT 429

Proposed amendment to Article: 21

Submitted by : RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

In paragraph 1 replace “Nationals of third countries shall have the right to asylum” with “Everyone shall have the right to asylum”.

Reasons:

The proposed wording for paragraph 1 includes stateless persons and all persons without citizenship.

Proposals for Article 21(2)

AMENDMENT 430

Proposed amendment to Article: 21. Right to asylum and expulsion – Paragraph 2

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Delete the paragraph (“Collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited”).

Reasons:

Paragraph 2 as presented here is deceptive because, although it is indeed based on Article 4 of Protocol No 4 to the European Convention on Human Rights, that Article is part of a legal instrument which provides for derogation, particularly “in time of war or other public emergency threatening the life of the nation” (Article 15 of ECHR).

In those circumstances, it is inappropriate to adopt a draft which could lead the non-specialist reader to believe that the collective expulsion of aliens is prohibited at all times and in all circumstances. The sentence should either be deleted or be qualified by the addition of “except in time of war or other public emergency, in accordance with international provisions in force”.

AMENDMENT 431

Proposed amendment to Article: 21(2)

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Delete the paragraph.

Reasons:

Paragraph 2 comes from Protocol No. 4, which has not been ratified by Spain. The problem arises from the term “collective expulsions”: at what stage is an expulsion deemed to be collective? Can this prohibition be applied to the expulsion of several separate individuals who illegally enter a State? In the case of Spain, it is worth keeping in mind the well-known events arising from the nature of its borders. Such problems are also shared by other Member States of the Union.

AMENDMENT 432

Proposed amendment to Article: 21(2)

Submitted by: Peter Michael MOMBAUR, MEP

Proposed text:

“Collective expulsion is prohibited”.

Reasons:

The right of protection also concerns minorities within the present or, where appropriate, future territorial extent of the European Union.

Proposals for Article 21(3)

AMENDMENT 433

Proposed amendment to Article : 21

Submitted by : RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text :

Add a new paragraph 3 as follows:

“3. No one may be expelled or extradited to a State where he would be in danger of being subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman treatment.”

Reasons :

Paragraph 3 incorporates the wording of Article 4, transferred here for reasons of logic.

Proposals for Article 22 as a whole

AMENDMENT 434

Proposed amendment to Article: 22

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 22. Equality and non-discrimination

- 1. Any discrimination based on sex, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, political opinion, association with a national, regional or cultural minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
- 2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.
- 3. The Union shall seek to eliminate inequalities and to promote equality between men and women in particular equality between the sexes shall be ensured when setting pay and other working conditions.

Reasons:

Paragraph 1 is based on the European Convention on Human Rights. The ECHR limits the application of the principle to guaranteed rights, but Community law goes further following the adoption of the Amsterdam Treaty. The list combines that in Article 13 of the Community Treaty with that in Article 14 of the ECHR. The principle of non-discrimination set out in paragraph 2 is enshrined in Article 12 of the EC Treaty. Protection of regional and cultural minorities is included in recognition of the diversity of the peoples of the European Union and of the need for solidarity between them. It also draws on the 1995 Council of Europe Framework Convention on the Protection of National Minorities.

Article 12 TEC: "Within the scope of application of this Treaty, and without prejudice to any special provisions contained therein, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

The Council, acting in accordance with the procedure referred to in Article 251, may adopt rules designed to prohibit such discrimination."

The wording of paragraph 3 is intended to authorise positive action as provided for in the Treaty.

AMENDMENT 435Proposed amendment to Article: 22*Submitted by: Win GRIFFITHS, MPProposed Text:

1. Any discrimination based on sex, nationality, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, political opinion, association with a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
2. Men and Women shall have the right to equal treatment, and in particular when setting pay and working conditions and measures or social protection.
3. Persons belonging to minorities shall have the right to maintain and develop their own language and culture.

Reasons:

Article 22.2 can be deleted as it is covered by the inclusion of "nationality" and "association with a national minority" in Article 22.1.

New Article 2 is expressed in a way more consistent with the language and approach of the Charter without losing any of the context of the existing 3.

New paragraph 3 states in an overt and positive fashion what is only implied in paragraph 1. The legal base is Article 151 of the Consolidated Version of the Treaty establishing the European Union.

AMENDMENT 436

Proposed amendment to Article: 22 – Equality and non-discrimination

Submitted by: Ben FAYOT

Proposed text:

General principle of equality between men and women in all areas

1. The unconditional and fundamental principle of the equality of the sexes in all areas shall be ensured by the Union.
2. Any discrimination on grounds of sex is prohibited.
3. Positive measures shall be implemented to put the principle of equality into effect.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 437Proposed amendment to Article: 22*Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈSProposed text:

Any arbitrary discrimination based on sex, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, political opinion, association with a national minority, property, birth, genetic characteristics, health, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.

Reasons:

The concept of “arbitrary discrimination” allows for the prospect of positive discrimination (or measures) aimed at restoring equality.

Genetic characteristics constitute a major discriminatory threat of the future: the Charter must ensure that they are kept confidential.

AMENDMENT 438

Proposed amendments to Article: 22 Equality and non-discrimination

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

- (1) Any discrimination based on sex, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, political opinion, association with a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.
- (2) Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.
- (3) The Union shall seek to eliminate unequal treatment (delete one word) and to promote equality between men and women. Equal treatment of (delete two words ¹) the sexes shall be ensured in particular when setting pay and other working conditions.

Reasons:

The wording chosen in paragraph 3 - “Inequalities” and “equality between the sexes” - was not entirely felicitous.

¹ Delete one word in the German version.

AMENDMENT 439Proposed amendment to Article: 22

Submitted by: Gunnar JANSSON, Tuija BRAX and Paavo NIKULA

Proposed text:Article 22. Equality and non-discrimination

- 1. Any discrimination based on sex, (...), colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, political opinion or association with an ethnic, religious or linguistic minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation or another personal reason shall be prohibited.
- 2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, any discrimination between nationals of the European Union on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

Reasons:

The reference to race may be deleted since it is in fact contained in other discrimination grounds. Furthermore, its deletion is consistent with current linguistic usage.

The reason for replacing “national minority” as grounds for discrimination with a more explanatory version is that the reference to different kinds of minority provides a more comprehensive picture of the kinds of minority which actually exist and of which factors are most often the reason for discrimination. The example of different kinds of minority also specifically underlines the importance of prohibiting discrimination aimed at minorities. The proposed amendment is in line with the wording of Article 27 of the UN Convention on Civil and Political Rights.

The list of grounds for discrimination should be left open so that it might also cover grounds for discrimination previously specified. In this case, the Article is also closest in line with Article 14 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

In paragraph 2 Union nationality is also worthy of mention in connection with discrimination based on nationality, since otherwise the Article would acquire a wider meaning in this connection than is intended.

AMENDMENT 440

Proposed amendment to Article: 22. Equality and non-discrimination

Submitted by: VITORINO, Commission representative on the Convention

Proposed text:

1. In paragraph 1 add "or other opinion" before "political opinion" and "genetic characteristics" after "birth".
2. Paragraph 2 should be amended as follows:

"Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and the Treaty of the European Union, and without prejudice to any special provisions contained therein, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited."
3. The second part of paragraph 3 should be deleted ("in particular equality between the sexes shall be ensured when setting ...").
4. The Commission representative proposes submitting an amendment inserting an Article on equality between men and women in social affairs (CONVENT 34).

Reasons:

1. The addition proposed for the first paragraph is necessary in order to take over a form of discrimination prohibited by Article 14 of the ECHR; the second addition takes account of the new bio-ethical challenges and is based on a suggestion by the European Ethics Committee.
2. The second paragraph takes over the first paragraph of Article 12 TEC. In order to avoid any legal uncertainty the wording must be identical to Article 12 TEC, with the sole exception of the principle of non-discrimination being henceforth explicitly extended to cover the scope of the TEU.
3. The current third paragraph is legally erroneous and contradictory: the first sentence enshrines the general principle of positive action in promoting de facto equality between men and women. The second sentence refers by way of example to equality in setting pay, which principle should however be interpreted in the strict sense and specifically does not allow for positive action in favour of women. Payment of a higher salary to women than to men for the same work would disregard the basic principle enshrined in Article 141(1) TEC. The second part of the paragraph as currently proposed thus provides a wrong example for the principle set out in the first part and should accordingly be deleted.

AMENDMENT 441

Proposed amendment to Article: 22

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Substitute the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

- 1. Discrimination between citizens of Member States of the European Union on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited*
- 2. The rights and freedoms in [ECHR-based rights] shall be secured without discrimination on any grounds such as sex, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.*

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

Paragraph 1 is the prohibition of discrimination on grounds of nationality in Article 12 of the Treaty establishing the European Community. The prohibition applies within the scope of application of, and without prejudice to special provisions contained in, that Treaty.

Paragraph 2 is the right in Article 14 of the ECHR

Reasons:

The Praesidium draft conflates the relevant ECHR provision (which applies only to the ECHR rights) with TEC Article 13 and TEC Article 12. TEC Article 13 is not a right. It is the basis on which the Council can take action. Such action is under current negotiation and it is not yet possible to determine the outcome with sufficient confidence to justify reference in the Charter at this time. I believe that much the same is true of the negotiations within the Council of Europe regarding the proposal to extend the right in Article 14 of the ECHR.

Article 14 of the ECHR says: “The enjoyment of rights and freedoms set forth in this Convention shall be secured without discrimination on any ground such as sex, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or status.” The Charter should not provide for a free-standing non-discrimination right but like the ECHR the article should be “parasitic” on other provisions.

AMENDMENT 442

Proposed amendment to Article: 22. Equality and non-discrimination

Submitted by: Charlotte CEDERSCHIÖLD

Proposed text:

1. Any discrimination shall be prohibited, for example discrimination based on sex, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, political opinion, association with a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation.
2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.
3. Delete

Reasons:

The grounds on which discrimination might be based should be presented as examples, so that any other discrimination which might arise is also covered. Listing particular grounds for discrimination equates to expressly permitting anything which is not specifically mentioned.

In CHARTE 4284/00 CONVENT 28, Article 22(3) states that the Union shall seek to “eliminate inequalities”. However, to eliminate inequalities would mean a demand for one hundred percent equal distribution of all available resources between the citizens of the Union. As the whole Charter has arisen in order to promote equality in various areas, this aim does not need to be repeated in Article 22(3). Every Article of the Charter constitutes an attempt to ensure equality in various areas.

Equality between the sexes is ensured by Article 22(1), which prohibits all discrimination, amongst other things on the grounds of sex.

The Charter should contain absolute rights and should therefore not also contain provisions defining aims of the type in Article 22(3). If two paragraphs of an Article lay down absolute rights but a third paragraph of the same Article contains relative rights, there is a risk of weakening the absolute rights in the same Article.

AMENDMENT 443

Proposed amendment to Article: 22

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text :

Delete Article.

Reasons:

Taken over into the proposed Article 1a.

AMENDMENT 444Proposed amendment to Article: 22

Submitted by : Rocco BUTTIGLIONE MEP, on the authority of the Chairman of the European Parliament delegation

Proposed text:

Article 22. Equality and non-discrimination

2. Any discrimination based on sex, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, political opinion, association with a national minority, property, birth, disability or age shall be prohibited.

2. Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community and of the Treaty on European Union, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.

3. The Union shall seek to eliminate inequalities and to promote equality between men and women in particular equality between the sexes shall be ensured when setting pay and other working conditions.

Reasons:

No change.

AMENDMENT 445

Proposed amendment to Article: 22(3)

Submitted by: Hanja MAIJ-WEGGEN

Proposed text:

The Union shall seek to eliminate inequalities and to promote the equal treatment of men and women.

The equal treatment of men and women shall in particular be ensured with regard to pay, social security, taxation, access to vocational training and other working conditions.

Reasons:

Re 1st paragraph: There are certain biological differences between men and women. The term "equal treatment" is therefore preferable to "equality".

Re 2nd paragraph: Numerous studies show that equal pay for the same work cannot be guaranteed or is undermined if there are differences between men and women in social security (contributions and benefits), taxation (breadwinner arrangements), access to vocational training and other working conditions. These should therefore all be specified in this Article.

AMENDMENT 446Proposed amendment to Article: 22

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

“1. The enjoyment of any right set forth by law shall be secured without discrimination. Any discrimination on grounds of sex, racial or ethnic origin, religion or belief, disability, age or sexual orientation, or on any grounds whatsoever, shall be prohibited.

2. Any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited in accordance with Article 12 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.

3. With a view to ensuring full equality within the Union, the principle of equal treatment shall not prevent measures from being maintained or adopted in order to prevent or compensate for disadvantages arising from the unequal position of persons of a particular sex, of a particular racial or ethnic origin, with a disability, or of a particular age or sexual orientation.”

Reasons:

To replace Article 1(2), paragraph 1 of this Article regarding the principle of equality is based on the wording of the draft twelfth Protocol to the ECHR.

The second sentence of paragraph 1 states that discrimination on “any grounds whatsoever” is prohibited. The non-discrimination grounds specifically given in that sentence are based on Article 13 of the EC Treaty.

As far as nationality is concerned, the prohibition of discrimination in paragraph 2 is confined to a reference to Article 12 of the EC Treaty.

Paragraph 3 lays the basis for positive action, and is based on Article 141(4) of the EC Treaty and the draft directives implementing Article 13 of the EC Treaty. In the light of Article 13 of the EC Treaty, it is not desirable to refer exclusively to difference in sex in paragraph 3. The wording of the draft text, containing “the promotion of equality between men and women”, was also considered to be less felicitous.

AMENDMENT 447Proposed amendment to Article: 22

Submitted by: Erling OLSEN

Proposed text:

Paragraph 1 should instead use the wording of Article 14 of the ECHR, which should apply as regards Articles coming from similar provisions in the ECHR.

Paragraph 2 should instead fully reflect the first paragraph of Article 12 of the EC Treaty: “Within the scope of application of the Treaty establishing the European Community, and without prejudice to any special provisions contained therein, any discrimination on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited”.

Paragraph 3 should be deleted.

Reasons:

Article 13 of the EC Treaty, on which the Praesidium’s current draft is based, does not issue any directly applicable prohibitions, but merely provides authority for the Council to take measures to combat discrimination based on certain criteria. Paragraph 3 expresses an aim, not a right.

Proposals for Article 22(1)

AMENDMENT 448

Article 22. Equality and non-discrimination

Proposal:

Rephrase paragraph 1 completely.

Reasons:

Paragraph 1.

The scope of this paragraph is far too wide.

An instrument with elaborate and precise provisions aimed at combating discrimination in those sectors of society where it is most frequent and serious might be more effective. Such provisions are now being negotiated in a Council working group within the EU.

Further, there is no mention in Article 22.1 of positive measures. In several areas where our governments, or the EU institutions, are involved in compensating for injustices or supporting underprivileged groups to improve their position in society, those negatively affected by such action may raise the issue of discrimination. An Article on this delicate matter must therefore be based on a thorough analysis of such problems.

Thirdly, the wide scope of the Article would not necessarily create problems if we had reason to believe that it would apply only in relations between the individual and public authorities, in other words in the classic human rights sense. But this is not clear, nor is it clear to what extent Member States will be held liable for conduct of individuals, such as landlords, restaurant owners, employers, etc. This is not to say that discriminatory behaviour on their part should not be met with sanctions and perhaps be criminalised. But States should not be held liable for human rights violations as a result of conduct of third parties.

Finally, in the explanation for the proposal, one gets the impression that after the entry into force of the Amsterdam Treaty, community law on ethnic discrimination has been widened to include a total ban on all ethnic discrimination in all the areas enumerated in the proposed Article. On the contrary, Article 13 in the Treaty has no direct effect as it only provides an opportunity for Member States to decide in unanimity on proposals in this area. In fact, draft Article 22.1 goes much further than the Commission's own proposal on a directive against ethnic discrimination now being negotiated in a Council working group.

AMENDMENT 449

Proposed amendment to Article: 21(1) and 22(3)

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

1. Everyone is equal before the law. All forms of discrimination shall be prohibited.

Reasons:

1. Developments in society make it impossible to establish an exhaustive list of types of discrimination. The proposed wording allows for such developments, respects the Community's legal framework and is consistent with Article 26 of the UN International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

AMENDMENT 450

Proposed amendment to Article: 22(2)

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

1. Any discrimination based on sex, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, political opinion, nationality, association with a national minority, property, birth, disability, age or sexual orientation shall be prohibited.

AMENDMENT 451

Proposed amendment to Article: 22

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, Personal Representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

In paragraph 2, insert the words “between citizens of the Union” between “any discrimination” and “on grounds of nationality”.

Reasons:

The wording of paragraph 2 is contradictory, since it is obvious that the Charter contains rights which apply to persons or to citizens of the Union. For certain rights there is a distinction between European citizens and citizens of third countries. In order to avoid the absurd situation where the Charter prohibits a discrimination that it has itself introduced, it is suggested that the expression “between citizens of the Union” be inserted in the clause prohibiting any discrimination on grounds of nationality. Furthermore, it should be noted that Article 12 of the EC Treaty applies in principle to the citizens of the fifteen Member States. The cases in which it applies to citizens of third countries are rare and are laid down explicitly.

AMENDMENT 452

Proposed amendment to Article: 22. Equality and non-discrimination

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

1. The Union shall combat any inequality of treatment between persons, subject to the conditions and powers laid down by the Treaties and with due regard for the constraints of the public good.

Reasons:

Article 22(1) and (2) of the Charter, in the wording proposed by the Praesidium, go much further than Article 13 of the EC Treaty:

- in matters of substance: new areas of non-discrimination are added to those in the Treaty. Some are self-evident (property, birth), some should be categorically rejected (nationality ¹) and others require extensive clarification at the very least (national minorities);
- in matters of procedure, the draft of Article 22 of the Charter would absolutely prohibit all discrimination, whereas Article 13 TEC is more cautious and promises only to “combat” discrimination and then only “within the limits of the powers conferred upon the Community” and after a unanimous decision by the Council. Those safeguards would completely disappear with the Charter.

Hence the preference in this amendment for more general wording, referring to the existing provisions in the Treaties.

¹ It should be pointed out that the current Article 12 TEC, which prohibits any discrimination within the Union on grounds of nationality, allows for exceptions, particularly for the public service.

AMENDMENT 453

Proposed amendment to Article: 22(1)

Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANI

Proposed text ^{*}:

Any discrimination based on sex, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, political opinion, association with a national minority, property, birth, disability, age, sexual orientation, or any other personal or social condition shall be prohibited.

Reasons:

The addition of the phrase "or any other personal or social condition" makes it clear that this list of prohibited grounds for discrimination is open; not exhaustive.

* Proposed amendments are in bold.

AMENDMENT 454Proposed amendment to Article: 22*Submitted by: Kathalijne BUITENWEGProposed text:

Amend paragraph 1:

1. Any discrimination on whatever grounds, such as sex, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, political opinion, association with a national minority, property, birth, disability, age, sexual orientation, marital or other status shall be prohibited.

Reasons:

The additions “on whatever grounds” and “or other status” ensure that the non-restrictive character of Article 14 of the ECHR is retained.

The addition “marital status” is in line with social trends, whereby the distinction between married and unmarried persons, particularly in the context of EU law, is losing its relevance.

AMENDMENT 455Proposed amendment to Article: 22

Submitted by: Johannes VOGGENHUBER and Kathalijne BUITENWEG

Proposed text:

Amend paragraph 1:

1. Any discrimination on any ground such as sex, race, colour or ethnic or social origin, language, religion or belief, political opinion, association with a national minority, property, birth, disability, age, sexual orientation or other status shall be prohibited.

Reasons:

The insertion of “on whatever ground” and “or other status” reflects the non-exhaustive character of Article 14 of the EHCR.

AMENDMENT 456

Proposed amendment to Article: 22. Equality and non-discrimination

Submitted by: Hubert HAENEL

Proposed text:

1. Everyone is equal before the law. Any discrimination shall be prohibited.

Reasons:

The text proposed in Article 22 lists a series of areas in which discrimination is prohibited.

A list of that kind is not conducive to a clear and concise text.

Moreover, as with any list, there is a serious risk of omissions.

It would therefore seem preferable to set out the principle of equality before the law in simpler terms and to prohibit any discrimination.

Proposals for Article 22(2)

AMENDMENT 457

Proposed amendment to Article: 22(2)

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

(2) Delete paragraph 2 altogether.

Reasons:

Paragraph 2 duplicates the scope of Article H.1.

AMENDMENT 458

Proposed amendment to Article: 22. Equality and non-discrimination

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

2. The Union shall seek to eliminate inequalities between men and women and to promote equality between them (rest deleted).

Reasons:

Article 22(1) and (2) of the Charter, in the wording proposed by the Praesidium, go much further than Article 13 of the EC Treaty:

- in matters of substance: new areas of non-discrimination are added to those in the Treaty. Some are self-evident (property, birth), some should be categorically rejected (nationality ¹) and others require extensive clarification at the very least (national minorities);
- in matters of procedure, the draft of Article 22 of the Charter would absolutely prohibit all discrimination, whereas Article 13 TEC is more cautious and promises only to “combat” discrimination and then only “within the limits of the powers conferred upon the Community” and after a unanimous decision by the Council. Those safeguards would completely disappear with the Charter.

Hence the preference in this amendment for more general wording, referring to the existing provisions in the Treaties.

¹ It should be pointed out that the current Article 12 TEC, which prohibits any discrimination within the Union on grounds of nationality, allows for exceptions, particularly for the public service.

AMENDMENT 459

Blank.

Proposals for Article 22(3)

AMENDMENT 460Proposed amendment to Article: 22

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, Personal Representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Delete the last part of paragraph 3 regarding equality between the sexes in the employment field.

Reasons:

We believe that the wording of the paragraph is not precise (what is meant by “setting pay”?) and above all that it belongs in social rights, and that the wording used should be the same as in the EC Treaty.

AMENDMENT 461

Proposed amendments to Article: 22. Equality and non-discrimination

Proposed text:

The topic dealt within paragraph 3 could be dealt with in the preambular text of the Charter.

Reasons:

Paragraph 3 is an objective and would be better placed in the preamble.

AMENDMENT 462

Proposed amendment to Article: 22(1) and (3)

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

3. (Last sentence). Equality between the sexes shall be ensured in the field of pay and other working conditions.

Reasons:

3. Technical improvement

AMENDMENT 463Proposed amendments to Article: 22

Submitted by: José BARROS MOURA and Maria Eduarda AZEVEDO

1.
2.
3. The Union shall seek to eliminate inequalities and to promote equalities between men and women. In particular equality between the sexes shall be ensured in access to employment, when setting pay and other working conditions and in social security.

AMENDMENT 464

Proposed amendment to Article: 22. EQUALITY AND NON-DISCRIMINATION

Submitted by: Jordi SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

- 3: “The primary objective of the Union shall be to eliminate inequalities and to promote equality between men and women. Equality between the sexes shall be ensured when setting pay and other working conditions.” (this phrase changed in Spanish only)

Reasons:

It is not sufficient to say that the Union “shall seek to eliminate inequalities”. Eliminating them must be a “primary objective”. The last phrase in Spanish is syntactically more specific than the one in the existing text.

AMENDMENT 465Proposed amendment to Article: 22

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

The first sentence of paragraph 3 should be deleted.

Reasons:

For a prescriptive provision, the first sentence of paragraph 3 is drafted in terms which are too broad.

AMENDMENT 466

Proposed amendment to Article: 22. Equality and non-discrimination

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

“Article 22. Equality and non-discrimination

(1)....

(2)....

(3) Men and women are equal. The Union shall seek to eliminate inequalities and to promote equality between men and women. Equality between the sexes shall be ensured in particular when setting pay and other working conditions.”

Reasons:

The fundamental point that men and women are equal ought to be explicitly stated at the beginning of paragraph 3, i.e. given prominence.

As for the rest, it is suggested that if no gender-neutral alternative can be found, the feminine form should be added in the wording of all Charter provisions.

AMENDMENT 467

Proposed amendment to Article: 22

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text:

Delete paragraph 3 in Article 22

Reasons:

Paragraph 3 should be divided into two separate articles and amplified (cf. proposed amendment 2 to Article 22).

AMENDMENT 468

Proposed amendment to Article: 22(3)

Submitted by: Dr Peter Michael MOMBAUR, MEP

Proposed text:

The word "inequalities" should be replaced by "unequal treatment".

Reasons:

The proposal refers to the EU's possibilities for action. It corresponds to the proposal made by the German Federal Government in CONTRIB 154 and to the proposal made by the German Federal States in CONTRIB 142.

AMENDMENT 469Proposed amendment to Article: 22

Submitted by: Simone BEISSEL

Proposed text:

3.(a) Delete “to eliminate inequalities and”.

3.(b) Delete “in particular equality between the sexes working conditions”.

Reasons:

3.(a) The wording should be positive.

3.(b) Pay and working conditions should be covered by the section on social rights.

Proposals for Article 22a and b

AMENDMENT 470

Proposed amendment 2 to Article: 22

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text: the following new Articles should be inserted after Article 22 (new):

“Article XX Equality between men and women

- (1) The Union shall seek to eliminate inequalities and to promote equality between men and women. In order to bring about real equality, positive discrimination measures shall be permitted.
- (2) Gender equality shall be ensured in particular when setting pay and other working conditions.

Article YY Equality of minorities

- (1) Persons who belong to linguistic or ethnic minorities shall be entitled collectively and publicly to use their own language and preserve their own culture.
- (2) The Union shall strive to eliminate inequalities or discrimination.”

Reasons:

In order to highlight the importance of individual rights, it is proposed that the general right to equality be enshrined in a separate Article in the same way as equality between men and women. In view of the vital importance of the right of minorities to equality, we also suggest that it be removed from the general ban on discrimination and dealt with in a separate Article.

The proposed Article XX on equality between men and women corresponds to the text of the draft proposed by the Praesidium. As a purely drafting proposal, we suggest that the duty of the Union to promote equality and the right to equal pay for the same work as provided for in the EC Treaty be covered in separate paragraphs.

The new second sentence of paragraph 1 of the proposed Article XX is intended to make it clear that measures involving “positive discrimination” are permissible in order to bring about real equality.

Article YY sets down in explicit terms a right which is particularly important if linguistic and ethnic minorities are to achieve equality; the right to use their own language and preserve their own culture. Paragraph 2 is intended to oblige the Union to eliminate inequalities or discrimination suffered by minorities.

Proposals for Article 23

AMENDMENT 471

Proposed amendment to Article: 23

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Delete this Article.

Reasons:

This Article has no clear basis in the ECHR, the Treaties, nor has it been shown to be in the constitutional traditions common to all the Member States. Accordingly, it should not be included in the Charter.

As drafted the Article could be read as stating that children had to be treated as equal to adults which would clearly be inappropriate. This concept is expressed in the Convention on the Rights of the Child in terms of non-discrimination. The second half of the proposed Article is vague. The concept of a child “influencing” matters “pertaining to their person” could be interpreted in a way that goes much further than the Convention. I also see problems with the term “maturity” since – in social care terms – children can be “mature” in some respects beyond their years.

AMENDMENT 472

Proposed amendment to Article: 23. Children's rights

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Delete this article.

Reasons:

Although the content of the article is worthy of interest, it does not appear to correspond to any existing European competence nor to be in the interests of the Charter as a whole, which runs the risk of becoming a list of the rights of many specific categories. If reference is made to children's rights, why not refer to the rights of the elderly or the sick, etc.

AMENDMENT 473Proposed amendment to Article: 23*Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEPProposed text:*Article 23. Children's rights*Children must be (delete: 7 words) allowed to influence matters pertaining to their person to a degree corresponding to their maturity*Reasons:

This Article is in response to various requests and is based on the Convention on the Rights of the Child.

AMENDMENT 474

Proposed amendment to Article: 23. Children's rights

Submitted by: VITORINO, Commission representative on the Convention

Proposed text:

"1. Children shall have the right to such protection and care as is necessary to their well-being. They must be allowed to express their views freely in all matters affecting them, their views being given due weight in accordance with their age and maturity.

2. In all actions concerning children, whether undertaken by public institutions or bodies or by private social welfare institutions, the best interest of the child shall be a primary consideration."

Reasons:

The present amendment is designed to add to the current draft two most fundamental principles of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, these being the right to protection and care, and the principle of the best interest of the children. The wording of the second sentence follows that of Article 12(1) of the Convention on the rights of the child.

AMENDMENT 475Proposed amendment to Article: 23

Submitted by: Erling OLSEN

Proposed text:

“Every child has, without any discrimination, the right to such measures of protection as are required by his status as a minor, on the part of his family, society and the State. The best interests of the child shall always be a primary consideration.”

Reasons:

The Praesidium’s text does not present childrens’ rights, as described in the heading of this Article, but rather expresses a political aim. One solution might be to use the main part of the wording in Article 24 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and refer in the statement of reasons to the full text and to the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child.

AMENDMENT 476Proposed amendment to Article: 23*Submitted by: Maria Pia VALETTO and Piero MELOGRANIProposed text *:

Children must be treated as equal individuals, they must be allowed to influence matters pertaining to their person to a degree corresponding to their maturity. When decisions on such matters are taken, the interests of the child must be the primary consideration.

Reasons:

The addition of the second sentence is intended to confirm the principle of the best interests of children, a principle established by a vast body of case-law of the Court of Human Rights on the custody of children.

* Proposed amendments are in bold.

AMENDMENT 477Proposed amendment to Article: 23*Submitted by: Win GRIFFITSH, MPProposed text:

All children in the European Union shall have the right for their interests to be respected by the institutions of the European Union.

Reasons:

Member States have committed themselves to the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child and although there are no specific references to children in the European Union treaties the Consolidated Version of the Treaty Establishing the European Union in Article 13 does clearly refer to age discrimination.

AMENDMENT 478

Proposed amendment to Article: 23. Children's rights

Submitted by: Michael O'KENNEDY, TD, personal representative of the Irish Head of State/Government

Proposed text:

Article 23

~~Children must be treated as equal individuals, they must be allowed to influence matters pertaining to their person to a degree corresponding to their maturity.~~

In all cases concerning children, whether undertaken by public or private social welfare institutions, courts of law, administrative authorities or legislative bodies, the best interests of the child shall be the primary consideration.

Reasons:

It is suggested that Article 23 be deleted and replaced with language from Article 3.1 of the UN Convention of the Rights of the Child.

The text as originally drafted appears to be drawn from Article 12.1 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, although it does not accurately reflect that provision which, moreover, is just one of several provisions setting out detailed rights. A single Article in the Charter should more appropriately reflect a general principle, particularly the predominance of the best interests of the child. The amended provision proposed does so with the language of Article 3.1 of the Convention.

AMENDMENT 479Proposed amendment to Article: 23

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

The Union shall respect the rights of the child in accordance with the provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child. More particularly, children should be guaranteed protection of their family environment and the care required for their welfare and should be given the opportunity to form their own views and have the right to express those views freely in all matters affecting them, the views of the child being given due weight in accordance with their age and evolving capacities.

Reasons:

This provision expresses more clearly the fact that children are equal individuals and brings it more expressly into line with the Convention on the Rights of the Child, and in particular Article 12 thereof. It also ties in with the right to family life as laid down in Article 13 of the draft Charter.

AMENDMENT 480

Proposed amendment to Article: 23

Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈS

Proposed text:

Children shall enjoy all the rights recognised in respect of persons. The exercise and protection of those rights shall take into account the age and the ability of the child.

Reasons:

The expression “equal individual” should be clarified.

AMENDMENT 481Proposed amendment to Article: 23

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Children shall enjoy the protection laid down in international agreements safeguarding their rights.

Reasons:

The wording of the provision is too detailed and raises many problems of interpretation yet does not set out a general principle of child protection.

AMENDMENT 482

Proposed amendment to Article: 23 Children's rights

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

“Article 23. Children's rights

1. Children must be treated as equal individuals; they must be allowed to influence matters pertaining to their person to a degree corresponding to their maturity.
2. Every child has the right to the protection and care of the community.”

Reasons:

Children - like mothers – are particularly in need of protection. The German Federal States therefore advocate that Article 23 be supplemented by the proposed provision on protection.

AMENDMENT 483

Proposed amendment to Article: 23

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text:

“Children must be treated as independent human beings; they must be allowed to influence matters pertaining to themselves person to a degree corresponding to their maturity.”

Reasons:

“Human beings”, rather than “persons”, should be used for natural persons.

AMENDMENT 484

Proposed amendment to Article: 23. Children's rights

Submitted by: Marie-Thérèse HERMANGE (Cornillet)

Proposed text:

- “1. In all actions concerning children, the best interests of the child shall be a primary consideration.
2. Every child who is capable of forming his or her own views has the right to express those views freely in all matters affecting the child, and to influence, depending on their degree of maturity, the issues affecting him or her personally.”

Reasons:

The International Convention on the Rights of the Child constitutes the universal reference and a minimum in terms of recognition of civil rights in respect of persons under 18 years of age.

This amendment therefore borrows heavily from Articles 2, 3, 6 and 12 of the International Convention on the Rights of the Child.

It emphasises the principle of the best interests of the child, which must apply to all the European Union's actions.

AMENDMENT 485Proposed amendment to Article: 23

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

Children must be treated as equal individuals, they must be allowed to influence matters pertaining to their person to a degree corresponding to their maturity, and their best interests must be safeguarded in all cases.

Children's right to adequate protection in a family environment shall be respected.

Reasons:

This wording is closer to the content of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, which is the essential point of reference.

AMENDMENT 486

Proposed amendment to Article: 23. Children's rights

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Proposed text:

Delete the current text and replace with the following:

In all actions concerning children the best interests of the child shall be a primary consideration and the rights of the child shall be respected and ensured without discrimination of any kind. The child shall be assured the right to express its views freely in all matters affecting the child, the views of the child being given due weight.

Reasons:

This text is inspired by the wording in the UN Convention for the Rights of the Child (CRC) (Article 2, 3 and 12).

AMENDMENT 487

Proposed amendment to Article: 23. Children's rights.

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

Replace the Article by the following:

- “1. Children must be treated as equal individuals, they must be allowed to express their views on matters pertaining to their person to a degree corresponding to their maturity.
- 2. Children must be protected against all threats to their intellectual development and their psychological and sexual integrity.”

Reasons:

In paragraph 1 “influence” has been replaced by “express their views on”, which is far more appropriate to the child’s stage of development.

Paragraph 2 addresses the matter of threats to children (including through the use of information technology) and imposes an obligation to protect them on the public authorities.

AMENDMENT 488

Proposed amendment to Article: 23 (addition)

Submitted by: Hanja MAIJ-WEGGEN

Proposed text:

Article 23. Children's rights

Children must be treated as equal individuals, they must be allowed to influence matters pertaining to their person to a degree corresponding to their maturity

The European Union shall ensure that all EU activities are fully compatible with the principle of the best interests of the child as expressed in the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child.

Reasons:

An explicit reference to the Convention on the Rights of the Child is desirable since this is the most comprehensive statement of children's rights and has almost universal ratification.

AMENDMENT 489Proposed amendment to Article: 23*Submitted by: François LONCLEProposed text:

Use the following wording for this Article:

“Children who are capable of forming their own views have the right to express those views freely in all matters affecting them. Their views shall be given due weight in accordance with the children’s age and maturity”.

Reasons:

Drafting amendment, inspired by the wording of Article 12(1) of the international Convention on the Rights of the Child.

AMENDMENT 490

Proposed amendment to Article: 23(1) - Children's rights

Submitted by: Hubert HAENEL

Proposed text:

Article 23: The rights of the child

1. A child must be treated as an equal individual, he/she must be allowed to influence matters pertaining to his/her person to a degree corresponding to his/her maturity, while taking his/her best interests into consideration.

Reasons:

As stated in the Convention on the Rights of the Child, in all decisions concerning a child, the child's best interests must be a primary consideration. Reference should be made to this consideration in the Charter of Fundamental Rights.

Moreover, as the Charter deals with the rights of "everyone" and not the rights of "all people", it seems preferable to deal here with the rights of "the child" and not "children's" rights

Proposed amendment to Article: 23 (inserting a paragraph 2) - Children's rights

Proposed text:

The child must not be separated from his/her parents against his/her wishes unless that separation is in his/her best interests.

Reasons:

As far as possible the child must be allowed to grow up in his/her family environment.

This should be stated in a provision based on the Convention on the Rights of the Child.

AMENDMENT 491

Proposed amendment to Article: 23. Children's rights

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text:

1. Every child has the right to respect for his or her moral, physical, mental and sexual integrity.
2. Children must be treated as equal individuals; they must be allowed to influence matters pertaining to their person to a degree corresponding to their maturity.

Reasons:

The proposed insertion (as a new paragraph 1) of the right of the child to respect for his or her moral, physical, mental and sexual integrity is based on the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child and on the Belgian Constitution. This provision, together with paragraph 2 (version in CONVENT 28), spells out the importance attached by the Member States of the European Union to children's rights.

AMENDMENT 492

Proposed amendment to Article: 23

Submitted by: Ieke VAN DEN BURG

Proposed text:

Addition: Children must be protected against harmful and exploitative forms of child labour

Reasons:

Children's rights should also include protection against harmful and exploitative forms of child labour. Reference may be made here to the broad consensus reached within the International Labour Organisation in 1999 on a new Convention against child labour (ILO Convention 182).

AMENDMENT 493Proposed amendment to Article: 23*Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands GovernmentProposed text:

The Union respects the rights of the child in accordance with the provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child. More particularly, children should be guaranteed the protection and care required for their welfare and should be given the opportunity to form their own views, have the right to express those views freely in all matters affecting the child, the views of the child being given due weight in accordance with his or her age and consistent with the evolving capacities of the child.

Reasons:

This provision expresses more clearly the fact that children are equal individuals and brings it more into line with the Convention on the Rights of the Child, and in particular Article 12 thereof.

AMENDMENT 494Proposed amendment to Article: 23

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, MEP, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

1. Turn Article 23 (Childrens' rights) into Article 13a, where it follows on naturally from family life.
2. Change the title, replacing "Childrens' rights" by "Rights of the child".

Reasons:

Amd 1: Improved structure for the Charter.

Amd 2: Sounds more natural.

Proposals for Article 23a

AMENDMENT 495

Proposed amendment to Article: 23a

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 23a. Principle of democracy

1. Everyone has the right to a democratic form of government
2. The Union and its institutions are founded on the principles of liberty, democracy, solidarity, respect for human rights and the rule of law, principles which are common to the Member States.

Reasons:

Democracy is the one unarguable foundation stone of the European Union and an essential precondition for both accession and continued membership. This Article is intended to underscore that, and is drawn from Articles 2 and 6 of the Treaty on European Union, as well as from the Preambles of the Treaties.

Article 6(1) says: "The Union is founded on the principles of liberty, democracy, respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, and the rule of law, principles which are common to the Member States."

Article 2 sets out the Union's objectives to include the "promotion of economic and social progress" and the "strengthening of economic and social cohesion".'

AMENDMENT 496

Proposed amendment to Article: 23a (new)

Submitted by: José BARROS MOURA and Maria Eduarda AZEVEDO

Proposed text:

1. The Union shall guarantee respect of the national and regional identities of Member States and of their cultural and linguistic diversity, including the right to address institutions and receive replies from them in one of the official languages of the Union.
2. The Union shall support minority languages.

NOTE: These proposals are made without prejudice to other aspects to be included as horizontal clauses, and of future suggestions for a better systematisation.

AMENDMENT 497Proposed amendment to Article: 23

Submitted by: RODOTA', MANZELLA and PACIOTTI

Proposed text:

Insert the following after Article 23:

“Article 23a Right to nationality

- 1. Everyone has the right to a nationality.
- 2. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality nor denied the right to change his nationality. “

Reasons:

This Article reproduces Article 15 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights; it is an important precondition for establishing citizens' rights.

Proposals for six new articles after Article 24

AMENDMENT 518

Proposed amendment to Article: 24 (new) Principle of democracy

Article 24(1) National identity

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

- 1. Every citizen has the right to respect for his national identity.
- 2. In exercising its powers, both internally and externally, the Union shall defend the national identities of its Member States.

Reasons:

Paragraph 1 takes up the principle already incorporated in Article 6(3) of the TEU, with different wording. This principle seems so important that it should not be lost in the overall text of the Treaty, but raised to the level of the Charter of Fundamental Rights.

Paragraph 2 is a reminder that the Member States created the Union in order jointly to defend their respective identities, not to abolish them.

AMENDMENT 519

Proposed amendment to Article 24 (new) Principle of democracy
Article 24(2) Democratic expression

Submitted by: Mr Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Citizens have the right to respect for their democratic expression at national level.

Reasons:

Respect for democratic expression at national level is so self-evident that the Treaties have not to date explicitly mentioned it. However, we have reached a stage in the development of the Union where the need for clarification is being felt.

This principle is so important that the right place for it to be included is in the Charter (without prejudice to the preamble, which should point out in particular that all public authority stems from the people).

AMENDMENT 520

Proposed amendment to Article: 24 (new) - Principle of democracy

Article 24(3) - Right of withdrawal

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

The citizens of each country decide freely on the accession of their State to the European Union. Similarly, they may democratically choose to withdraw.

Reasons:

The right to secede is not mentioned in the Treaty but, in a democratic context, it is implicit. The suggestion here is to make it explicit in the Charter.

AMENDMENT 521

Proposed amendment to Article: 24 (new) - Principle of democracy

Article 24(4) - Right to adopt safeguard measures

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

The citizens of Member countries have the fundamental right to adopt democratically national safeguard measures where compelling circumstances so require. In any event, these measures shall remain within the limits recognised by international law as permissible where the survival of the nation is threatened.

Reasons:

Here again, the right to national safeguard measures should be implicit. However, it is observed that it has been challenged by the Union's institutions in a number of recent cases, particularly those linked with public health. It should be noted here, at the formal level of the Charter, that , whatever form Community law takes in any particular field, no-one may remove a people's right to adopt the measures it deems essential to its survival.

AMENDMENT 522

Proposed amendment to Article: 24 (new) - Principle of democracy

Article 24(5) - States' right of organisation

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

The citizens of Member countries have the right to decide freely how their State shall be organised and in particular the limits and the operation of their public services.

Reasons:

Over recent years the Member countries and the institutions of the Union have become aware of certain undesirable effects of the principle of competition when applied indiscriminately to public services. To remove any ambiguity, the Charter provides the opportunity to note that the citizens of each Member country have the right to determine how their public services are to be organised.

AMENDMENT 523

Proposed amendment to Article: 24 (new) - Principle of democracy

Article 24(6) - Freedom of choice

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

The citizens of Member countries have the right to decide democratically not to take part in a particular form of cooperation at European level or to choose for themselves rules that are more protective than those of a cooperation arrangement in which they are taking part.

Reasons:

By explicitly recognising the democratic freedom of choice of the citizens of the Member countries, the Charter could demonstrate the possibility of a more flexible conception of the European institutions.

Proposals for Article 24

AMENDMENT 498

Proposed amendment to Article: 24

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

Article 24 should be deleted.

Reasons:

The added value of this Article is not clear, given that the right to freedom of association and political parties are both referred to in Article 17.

AMENDMENT 499

Proposed amendment for Article: 24. Political parties

Submitted by: Daniel TARCHYS

Proposal:

Delete

Reasons:

The rights guaranteed in draft Article 17 provide sufficient protection.

AMENDMENT 500

Proposed amendment to Article: 24(1)

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

Delete

Reasons:

Doubts about the suitability of such a declaration in the Community context.

AMENDMENT 501

Proposed amendment to Article: 24

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Delete this article

Reasons:

The fundamental right stated in this Article is entirely covered by the guarantee of freedom of assembly and association in Article 17. Political parties are a classic example of associations. The proposed accretions to the relevant ECHR rights in Article 24 have no clear basis in the Treaties or elsewhere. They raise serious technical and other difficulties which would affect other Member States and would need to be the subject of separate substantive consideration.

In any case, it is unclear why only Union citizens should be able to found a party. Under Article 17 and ECHR Article 11) anyone has that right. The limitations in Article 11 ECHR are important. All Member States restrict this freedom to exclude extremist parties e.g. those aiming to overthrow the constitution or who preach racism. The proposed Article appears to give an unqualified right.

AMENDMENT 502

Proposed amendment to Article: 24

Submitted by: Sylvia Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

Delete Article 24 and do not replace

Reasons:

Article 24 is a duplication of the freedom of association guaranteed in Article 7.

AMENDMENT 503Proposed amendment to Article: 24

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

Article 24 should be deleted.

Reasons:

The rights referred to in the first sentence are already covered by Article 17 (freedom of assembly and of association). With regard to the second sentence, it is unclear who ought to ascertain whether a political party is abiding by this obligation and what the consequences are if it does not.

AMENDMENT 504

Proposed amendment to Article: 24

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

Delete Article 24.

Reasons:

The content of this Article is already guaranteed in Article 17 of the Charter. Its inclusion is superfluous.

AMENDMENT 505

Proposed amendment to Article: 24. Political parties

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Delete this Article.

Reasons:

This Article probably adds nothing to what has already been said in the preceding Article 17 (Freedom of assembly and association). If it is admitted that it adds something, this can only be the idea of "European political parties", which goes beyond the current text of the Treaty (Article 191 TEC). In both cases the proposed text ought therefore to be deleted.

AMENDMENT 506Proposed amendment to Article: 24*Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK*Proposed text:*Reasons:

According to the text proposed by the Praesidium, "everyone" has the right to join a political party at the level of the Union. It is indicated in the statement of reasons that this right should only be open to "anyone living in a Member State". This limitation is not expressed in the text and that raises the question of whether it is intended or even useful.

AMENDMENT 507

Proposed amendment to Article: 24

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 24. Political parties

Every citizen has the right to form a political party at the level of the Union and everyone has the right to join such a party. These political parties must respect the rights and freedoms guaranteed by this Charter.

Reasons:

Every Union citizen is guaranteed the right to found a political party, and the right to join such a party is open to anyone living in a Member State. The possibility of limiting the exercise of these rights will derive from the horizontal article concerning limitations.

The existence of political parties at the EU level is recognised in Article 191 of the TEC.

AMENDMENT 508

Proposed amendment to Article: 24

Submitted by: Erling OLSEN

Proposed text:

The text should be reworded as follows: “Everyone has the right to form a political party and everyone has the right to join such a party”. The second sentence should be deleted.

Reasons:

Article 191 of the EC Treaty does not provide any basis for the Praesidium’s proposed Article. In its way, the right to form a political party and to join one is already covered by the Article on the freedom of association (Article 17) and so Article 24 could be deleted.

AMENDMENT 509Proposed amendment to Article: 24*Submitted by :: Piero MELOGRANIProposed text *:

Every citizen of the Union has the right to contribute to shaping the will of the European Institutions through political parties at Union level. The rules governing those parties shall respect the fundamental principles of democracy.

Reasons:

The text of CONVENT 28 merely confirms, at Union level, a right that Article 17 already generally recognises “everyone” as having. It should therefore be replaced by a text that clarifies the role of such parties at Union level.

The second sentence has been amended, so that it does not prevent a lawful, democratic party from supporting a programme that seeks to abolish or limit some of the rights guaranteed by the Charter.

* Proposed amendments are in bold

AMENDMENT 510

Proposed amendment to Article: 24. Political parties

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

“Every Union citizen has the right to form a political party at the level of the Union. The right of parties to decide on the admission of members shall be guaranteed (last sentence deleted).”

Reasons:

If someone wishes to join an existing party, this should be left to the discretion of the party itself. There should be no automatic entitlement to admission.

The second sentence obliges political parties to respect the Charter of Fundamental Rights. In terms of the system followed, there are a number of considerable objections to this.

First, parties are not State bodies and are therefore not among those to whom fundamental rights are addressed. This is presumably also the thinking behind the Charter (see Article 46).

Also, the provision envisaged is a matter of conventional constitutional law. The legal status of political parties is amongst the issues that may have to be settled in any EU constitution, not in a charter of fundamental rights.

The suggested provision would further seem inadequate. Any attempt at setting standards for the conduct of parties should first and foremost focus on the observance of specific objective legal principles, such as upholding the basic democratic system, not on individual rights. What would also be needed are appropriate penalties and procedures for enforcement; none of this is the task of a charter of fundamental rights.

Article 50 of the latest draft of the Charter, moreover, affords protection against abuse of their position.

AMENDMENT 511

Proposed amendment to Article: 24. Political parties

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

“Every citizen of the Union has the right...”

Reasons:

To make it clear that this right, like the other citizenship rights recognised in the Charter, is reserved for citizens of the European Union and is not available to citizens of other States. A citizen of the Union is defined in Article 17 of the EC Treaty as “every person holding the nationality of a Member State”. This is a logical consequence of the fact that the EU is a political entity formed by the political grouping of the fifteen States which constitute it.

AMENDMENT 512

Proposed amendment to Article: 24. Political parties

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

“Article 24. Political parties

Every citizen has the right also to form a political party at the level of the Union. The right of parties to decide on the admission of members shall be guaranteed. Political parties must respect the rights and freedoms guaranteed by this Charter.”

Reasons:

The word “also” makes it clear that the right to form a political party applies both at Member State and European Union level.

If someone wishes to join an existing party, this should be left to the discretion of the party itself. There should be no automatic entitlement to admission.

AMENDMENT 513

Proposed amendment to Article: 24

Submitted by: MANZANELLA

Proposed text:

Replace the text with the following:

- 1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to form, on the conditions laid down by the Treaties, political parties at the level of the Union, and every citizen of the Union has the right to join such parties in order to contribute, by democratic means, to building a genuine “European public area” and to the expression of the political will of its citizens .

- 2. Aliens resident in the Union may join Union-level parties on the conditions laid down in their statutes.”

Reasons:

In our proposal the purpose of forming political parties, which is the prerogative of citizens of the Union, is the creation of a “Union public area”. Aliens residing in the Union may join Union-level parties, which they are already entitled to do.

AMENDMENT 514

Proposed amendment to Article: 24

Submitted by: François LONCLE

Proposed text:

Article 24:

At the beginning of the first sentence, after "Every citizen" insert "of the European Union".

Reasons:

This amendment is intended to remove an ambiguity in the wording.

AMENDMENT 515

Proposed amendment to Article: 24

Submitted by: Dr Peter Michael MOMBAUR, MEP

Proposed text:

The word "citizen" should be replaced by "citizen of the Union".

Reasons:

For the same reasons as adduced for the proposed Article 24.

AMENDMENT 516

Proposed amendment to Article: 24. Political parties

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text:

Everyone has the right to form a political party at the level of the Union and everyone has the right to join such a party. These political parties must respect the rights and freedoms guaranteed by this Charter.

Reasons:

The aim of the proposed text is to grant "everyone" the right to form a political party, so that this provision is brought fully into line with Article 11 of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms – which operates as a minimum standard in drawing up the Charter – and with Article 17 (CONVENT 28 version), in which the right to form a political party is explicitly granted to "everyone".

AMENDMENT 517

Proposed amendment to Article: 24

Submitted by: José BARROS MOURA and Maria Eduarda AZEVEDO

Proposed text:

Every citizen of the Union has the right to form a political party at the level of the Union and everyone has the right to join such a party. These political parties must have a democratic internal structure and respect ... (no changes).

Proposals for Article 25 as a whole

AMENDMENT 524

Proposed amendment to Article: 25

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 25. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate for the European Parliament

- 1. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage by free and secret ballot.
- 2. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Reasons:

Paragraph 1 follows Article 190(1) TEC: "The representatives in the European Parliament of the peoples of the States brought together in the Community shall be elected by direct universal suffrage".

(Delete: 2 words) Paragraph 2 follows Article 19(2) of the TEC: "2. Without prejudice to Article 190(4) and to the provisions adopted for its implementation, every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he is not a national shall have the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State. This right shall be exercised subject to detailed arrangements adopted by the Council, acting unanimously on a proposal from the Commission and after consulting the European Parliament; these arrangements may provide for derogations where warranted by problems specific to a Member State".

A reference to the conditions laid down in the Treaty will be made in a horizontal article.

AMENDMENT 525

Proposed amendment to Articles: 25 and 26

Submitted by: Jürgen MEYER/Pervenche BERES/Jo LEINEN/Hans-Peter MARTIN/Ieke VAN DEN BURG

Proposed text:

Article 25 Right to vote and to stand as a candidate

- 1. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage by free and secret ballot.
- 2. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament and municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.
- 3. All citizens of third countries shall enjoy the rights referred to in paragraph 2 to the same extent if they have been legally resident in the territory of the Member States for five years.

Reasons:

Paragraph 1 takes over the Presidency's wording of Article 25(1) (Convention 28).

Paragraph 2 merges Article 25(2) and Article 26 since they are worded identically, the first referring to European elections and the second to municipal elections.

Drafting two separate Articles runs counter to the Convention's requirement that the Charter be as concise as possible. The rewording does not in any way affect the substance of the Presidency's proposal.

Paragraph 3 reflects my original discussion text (submitted on 6 January: Contrib. 2). The underlying idea is to afford the possibility of democratic participation, as expressed through elections, to citizens who are legally resident in a Member State but are not citizens of the Union or of that State. One of the most important principles of democracy is that those who share in the financing of communal life must have a right to have a say in matters and to participate in elections. The requirement of five years' legal residence in a Member State attaching to participation in elections indicates that the third-country nationals concerned have decided to shift their centre of interests to the State in question.

AMENDMENT 526

Proposed amendment to Article: 25

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Substitute the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

“Every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he or she is not a national has the right, subject to specified rules and arrangements, to vote and stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he or she resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The rights in Article 25 are the rights in Article 19(2) of the Treaty establishing the European Community. They shall be exercised in accordance with the detailed arrangements laid down under that Article”

Reasons:

To avoid any misunderstanding I am also proposing wording which is closer to the terms of TEC Article 19(2). My “B” text ensures that these rights will be understood within the meaning of the relevant Treaty provisions, including the conditions and ability to arrange for derogations. The reference in the proposed text to “specified rules and arrangements” picks up the requirement in Article 19 that the Member States agree specific rules for the exercise of these rights (which they have done). I disagree that such matters can effectively be dealt with in a single horizontal article. Finally I have omitted the reference to the manner of election for MEPs, which does not seem to fit here since it does not state a right.

AMENDMENT 527

Proposed amendment to Article: 25

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

In the Dutch title of Article 25, "stemrecht" must be replaced by "kiesrecht" (not applicable to the English version).

Reasons:

The Dutch title of the Article erroneously refers to "stemrecht" instead of "kiesrecht".

Proposals for Article 25(1)

AMENDMENT 528

Proposed amendment to Article: 25 - Right to vote and to stand as a candidate for the European Parliament

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

- 1. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct, equal universal suffrage by free and secret ballot.

Reasons:

Only an equal weighting of votes reflects the vote of the electors.

AMENDMENT 529

Proposed amendment to Article: 25(1)

Submitted by: Piero MELOGRANI

Proposed text ^{*}:

Members of the European Parliament shall be periodically elected by direct universal suffrage by free and secret ballot.

Reasons:

Adding the word “periodically” makes it clear, in accordance with the Treaty, that the European Parliament has to be elected at regular intervals.

* Amendments are given in bold.

AMENDMENT 530

Proposed amendment to Article: 25(1)

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text:

- 1. Members of the European Parliament shall be elected by direct universal suffrage by free, equal and secret ballot.

Reasons:

The “equal” right to vote, in the sense that each vote basically counts equally, is one of the fundamental voting rights recognised in a democratic society and should also apply in the case of elections to the European Parliament. The remainder of the text proposed by the Presidency is accepted.

AMENDMENT 531Proposed amendment to Article: 25

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

Replace paragraph 1 with the following:

“1. The citizens of the Union have the right to take part in the exercise of public authority at Union level through a representative assembly elected by direct universal suffrage by free and secret ballot.”

Reasons:

This alternative version of paragraph 1 makes as its subject the actual holders of the right, as in all the Articles of the Charter: in this case “the peoples of Europe” in their electoral manifestation. The wording comes from the case law of the Court of Justice (in particular the Roquette and Maizena judgment).

Proposals for Article 25(2)

AMENDMENT 532

Proposed amendment to Article: 25 – Right to vote and to stand as a candidate for the European Parliament

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

2. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate for the European Parliament in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Reasons:

This makes it clear that Article 25 applies only to European Parliament elections.

AMENDMENT 533

Proposed amendment to Article: 25. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate for the European Parliament

Submitted by: Ben FAYOT

Proposed text:

“2. Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State, subject to derogations where warranted by problems specific to a Member State.”

Reasons:

The Treaty (Article 19(1)) provides that the right to vote and the right to stand for election may be subject to derogations.

Reference needs to be made to that, otherwise the text will state an absolute right that is not put into perspective by the horizontal clauses.

AMENDMENT 534

Proposed amendment to Articles: 25 and 26

Submitted by: Johannes VOGGENHUBER/Kathalijne BUITENWEG

Proposed text:

For paragraph 2 (taken over from Prof. Meyer's proposal)

2. All nationals of third countries shall also enjoy these rights to the same extent if they have been legally resident for five years in the territory of the Union.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 535

Proposed amendment to Article: 25(2)

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

2. Every citizen of the Union "residing in a Member State of which he is not a national" has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate (rest unchanged).

Reasons:

Primarily to conform to the text of Article 19(2) of the EC Treaty which includes the proposed paragraph. The text of the Treaty should be transcribed literally as in CONVENT 17. If streamlining the text is preferred, an alternative is to copy Article 190(1) of the TEC which states "The representatives in the European Parliament of the people of the States brought together in the Community shall be elected by direct universal suffrage".

This amendment is very important, just after the discussions provoked by the judgment of the European Court of Human Rights (in the Matthews case) on the right of Gibraltarians to participate in the European elections.

And it is essential to mention this here, in the definition of the right to vote and to stand as a candidate for the European Parliament, irrespective of the fact that in the horizontal clauses general limitations are established to which the rights contained in the Charter may be subject.

AMENDMENT 536

Proposed amendment to Article: 25(2)

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

2. Every person resident in the EU* has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Reasons:

(Translator's note: proposal affects the German text only, removing the inherent gender differentiation).

This wording should also be taken up in future regulations, such as that on the extension of the electorate.

Proposals for Article 25(3)

AMENDMENT 537

Proposed amendment to Article: 25

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

Add a new paragraph:

3. Article 19(2) of the EC Treaty sets out the conditions under which this right may be exercised.

Reasons:

The content of the right is defined more precisely.

Proposals for Article 26

AMENDMENT 538

Proposed amendment to Article: 26

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

Add a new paragraph:

2. Article 19(1) of the EC Treaty sets out the conditions under which this right may be exercised.

Reasons:

The content of the right is defined more precisely.

AMENDMENT 539

Proposed amendment to Article: 26. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections

Submitted by: Ben FAYOT

Proposed text:

Every citizen of the Union has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State, subject to derogations where warranted by problems specific to a Member State.

Reasons:

Same as for Article 25.

AMENDMENT 540Proposed amendment to Article: 26

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he is not a national has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Reasons:

Ensuring conformity with Article 19(1) of the EC Treaty.

AMENDMENT 541

Proposed amendment to Article: 26

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

Every person with citizenship of the Union and every person resident in the EU has the right to vote and to stand as a candidate at municipal elections in the Member State in which he resides under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Reasons:

(Translator's note: Proposal affects the German text only, removing the inherent gender differentiation).

The wording should be taken up in future regulations, such as that on municipal voting rights for foreigners.

AMENDMENT 542

Proposed amendment to Article: 26

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Substitute the following two-part text:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

“Every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he or she is not a national has the right, subject to specified rules and arrangements, to vote and stand as a candidate in municipal elections in the Member State in which he or she resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State”

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The rights in Article 26 are the rights in Articles 19(1) of the Treaty establishing the European Community. They shall be exercised in accordance with the detailed arrangements laid down under that Article”

Reasons:

As with the previous Article, I am proposing wording which is closer to the terms of TEC Articles 19(1). My “B” text ensures that these rights will be understood within the meaning of the relevant Treaty provisions, including the conditions and ability to arrange for derogations. The reference in the proposed text to “specified rules and arrangements” picks up the requirement in Article 19 that the Member States agree specific rules for the exercise of these rights (which they have done).

AMENDMENT 543Proposed amendment to Article: 26

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text: (applies to Dutch text only)

In the Dutch title of the Article, “stemrecht” should be replaced by “kiesrecht” (does not apply to English text).

Reasons:

“Stemrecht” has been used wrongly in place of “kiesrecht” in the Dutch title of the Article.

AMENDMENT 544Proposed amendment to Article: 26*Submitted by: MANZELLAProposed text:

Replace the text of the Article with the following:

“Article 26. Right to vote and to stand as a candidate

Every citizen of the Union may also exercise his political rights outside the territory of the Member State of which he is a national, under the conditions and in accordance with the arrangements laid down in the Treaties.”

Article 25(2) would therefore be deleted.

Reasons:

The text combines in a single form of words the entitlement of European citizens to exercise active citizenship rights in Member States other than the one of which they are nationals.

Proposals for Article 26a

AMENDMENT 545

Proposed amendment to Article: 26 bis

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article 26 bis. Right to diplomatic protection

Every citizen of the Union shall be entitled to diplomatic and consular protection by any Member State in third countries.

Reasons:

This clause reflects the provisions of Article 20 of the TEC.

Proposals for the whole of Article 27

AMENDMENT 545a

Proposed amendment to Article: 27(2) and (3)

Submitted by: Roman HERZOG

Proposed text:

Article 27. Relations with the administration

1. Every person has the right to have his affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.

2. This includes the right of every person:
 - to be heard before any individual measure which would affect him adversely is taken in relation to him;
 - to see his file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy;
 - to receive from the administration reasons for administrative decisions taken against him;
 - to address the institutions and bodies of the Union in one of the official languages of the Union and to receive an answer in that language.

Reasons:

The proposed amendment is essentially a recasting intended to make the Article more readable. Without prejudice to any further revision of the text as a whole, this proposal for an amendment is being formally submitted since, at least in the third indent of paragraph 2, a restriction is introduced, which constitutes a substantive change.

Proposals for Article 27(1)

AMENDMENT 546

Proposed amendment to Article: 27(1)

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text:

1. "Without prejudice to Articles 7 and 8, every person has the right to have his affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union."

Reasons:

The addition of "without prejudice to Articles 7 and 8" is intended to indicate that the articles in question are also applicable without restriction with regard to the institutions of the European Union.

Since natural and legal persons are to be covered by this right, it is suggested that "jeder Person" be used in the German text. (This is already the case in the English text).

There is otherwise no change to the text of the Praesidium's draft.

AMENDMENT 547

Proposed amendment to Article: 27. Relations with the administration

Submitted by: VITORINO, Commission representative in the Convention

Proposed text:

Replace the words "the institutions and bodies of the Union" by the words "the administration".

Reasons:

The aim of this amendment is to give this article the same scope as the other articles in the Charter. Court of Justice case law already applies the general principles of administrative procedure, as laid down in Article 26, to the authorities of the Member States where they are acting within the scope of Community law (see the judgment in the Heylens case, 222/86, ECR 1987, 4097, on the duty to state reasons). This is a logical step insofar as national authorities are the main enforcers of Community law.

AMENDMENT 548

Proposed amendment to Article: 27(1)

Submitted by: Peter ALTMAIER, Member of the Bundestag

Proposed text:

"Every person who is affected by a measure under European law has the right to have his affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time."

Reasons:

Since most of Community law is transposed into national law by the bodies and institutions of the Member States, any limitation of the application of Article 27(1) to the institutions and bodies of the European Union would result in differing levels of protection depending on whether a measure under European law was implemented by European or national authorities.

AMENDMENT 549

Proposed amendment to Article: 27(1)

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia–Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

No change to the English text.

In the German text, “Jeder” is replaced by “Jede Person”.

Reasons:

The proposed wordings differ in using or avoiding gender-specific terms.

Proposals for Article 27(2)

AMENDMENT 550

Proposed amendment to Article: 27

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

Paragraph 2:

2nd indent should be modified as follows:

the right of every person to have access to his file (12 words deleted in Dutch), while respecting necessary confidentiality and secrecy.

3rd indent should be modified as follows:

the obligation of the institutions and bodies of the Union to give reasons for their decisions.

Reasons:

The amendment of the second indent broadens the meaning. The third indent has been amended because the Charter is addressed not to the Member States but to the institutions and bodies of the Union.

AMENDMENT 551

Proposed amendment to Article: 27. Relations with the administration

Submitted by: Jordi SOLÉ TURA

Proposed text:

Paragraph 2:

- the right of every person to be heard before any measure is taken which would affect him adversely;
- the right of every person to have access to his file, etc.

Reasons:

The words “in relation to him” are deleted because they are redundant if the measure affects him adversely. “Individual” is deleted because he may be adversely affected by a measure taken against one or more persons. In the second paragraph of the Spanish version “la” should be replaced by “le” (does not affect English text).

AMENDMENT 552

Proposed amendment to Article: 27(2). Relations with the administration

Submitted by: Charlotte CEDERSCHIÖLD

Proposed text:

This right includes:

- the right of every person to be heard before any individual measure which would affect him/her adversely is taken in relation to him/her;
- the right of every person to have access to his/her file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy;
- the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.

Reasons:

Reference should also be made to women's rights, as otherwise the article would constitute discrimination on grounds of sex.

AMENDMENT 553

Proposed amendment to Article: 27(2), second indent

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

- the right of every person to have access to his file

Reasons:

Grammatical correction of the Spanish version (does not affect English text).

AMENDMENT 554

Proposed amendmens to Article: 27. Relations with the administration

Submitted by: Daniel TARSchYS

Proposed text:

Redraft paragraph 2.

Reasons:

The scope of the first indent in paragraph 2 appears to be without limits and therefore problematic to accept in the present shape. The second indent is difficult to understand as it is not at all clear who is responsible for what. In the third indent, the word negative should be added to make clear that favourable decisions need not necessarily be explained.

AMENDMENT 555

Proposed amendment to Article: 27

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

Delete paragraph 2.

Reasons:

The reason for deleting paragraph 2 is the need for simplification in regard to aspects which are already dealt with elsewhere or which cannot definitely be placed in the category of fundamental rights.

Proposals for Article 27(3)

AMENDMENT 556Proposed amendments to Article: 27

Submitted by: Erling OLSEN

Proposed text:

Paragraph 3 could usefully be transferred to become the first paragraph.

Reasons:

Moving paragraph 3 to become the first paragraph would make it clearer for citizens that Article 27 applies to cases which come under EU law.

AMENDMENT 557

Proposed amendment to Article: 27(3)

Submitted by: Dr Peter Michael MOMBAUR, MEP

Proposed text:

"Every person" should be replaced by "Every citizen of the Union".

Reasons:

The proposed wording is in line with Article 21 TEC.

AMENDMENT 558

Proposed amendment to Article: 27

Submitted by: RODOTA', PACIOTTI and MANZELLA

Proposed text:

In paragraph 3, the word “may” should be replaced by “has the right to”.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 559

Proposed amendment to Article: 27(3)

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

In the German text, replace "Jeder" by "Jede Person"

Reasons:

The proposed versions differ in using or avoiding a gender-specific term.

Proposals for Article 28

AMENDMENT 560Proposed amendment to Article: 28*Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEKProposed text:

Instead of "natural and legal person", simply read "person".

Reasons:

In line with our proposal that the word "individual" should be used when referring to natural persons and "person" when referring to natural and legal persons, it is sufficient in Article 28 to speak of every "person".

AMENDMENT 561Proposed amendment to Article: 28

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:Article 28. Ombudsman

Every citizen and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration by the institutions and (delete: 1 word) agents of the Union, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Reasons:

The Article presents the principles which result from Articles 21 and 195 of the TEC.

Article 21:

"Every citizen of the Union may apply to the Ombudsman established in accordance with Article 195".

Article 195: "1. The European Parliament shall appoint an Ombudsman empowered to receive complaints from any citizen of the Union or any natural or legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State concerning instances of maladministration in the activities of the Community institutions or bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role. In accordance with his duties, the Ombudsman shall conduct inquiries for which he finds grounds, either on his own initiative or on the basis of complaints submitted to him direct or through a Member of the European Parliament, except where the alleged facts are or have been the subject of legal proceedings. Where the Ombudsman establishes an instance of maladministration, he shall refer the matter to the institution concerned, which shall have a period of three months in which to inform him of its views. The Ombudsman shall then forward a report to the European Parliament and the institution concerned. The person lodging the complaint shall be informed of the outcome of such inquiries.

The Ombudsman shall submit an annual report to the European Parliament on the outcome of his inquiries.

2. The Ombudsman shall be appointed after each election of the European Parliament for the duration of its term of office. The Ombudsman shall be eligible for reappointment. The Ombudsman may be dismissed by the Court of Justice at the request of the European Parliament if he no longer fulfils the conditions required for the performance of his duties or if he is guilty of serious misconduct.

3. The Ombudsman shall be completely independent in the performance of his duties. In the performance of those duties he shall neither seek nor take instructions from any body.

The Ombudsman may not, during his term of office, engage in any other occupation, whether gainful or not.

4. The European Parliament shall, after seeking an opinion from the Commission and with the approval of the Council acting by a qualified majority, lay down the regulations and general conditions governing the performance of the Ombudsman's duties."

A reference to the Treaty will be made in a horizontal clause.

AMENDMENT 562Proposed amendment to Article: 28

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (and also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

Replace "Every citizen and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State" by "Every person". "Judicial" should also be inserted before "bodies".

Reasons:

This Article contains the principles which arise from Articles 21 and 195 of the EC Treaty. There is no reason why this right should not apply to every person.

AMENDMENT 563

Proposed amendment to Article: 28

Submitted by: R. VAN DAM, MEP

Proposed text:

1. Every citizen and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of complaint concerning administration by the institutions and bodies of the Union, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.
2. Article 195 of the EC Treaty lays down the conditions governing the performance of the Ombudsman's duties.

Reasons:

With regard to paragraph 1, this amendment widens access to the Ombudsman in comparison with the original text. Paragraph 2 is intended to render the Article more explicit.

AMENDMENT 564

Proposed amendment to Article: 28

Submitted by: Kathalijne BUITENWEG

Proposed text:

Every person (18 words deleted) has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of administration by the institutions and bodies of the Union, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Reasons:

The personal scope of the fundamental rights must not be unnecessarily restricted. Article 27 (Relations with the administration) was correct in this respect.

The proposed modification renders the Article more readable.

(This amendment obviously also necessitates amendment of Article 48 in CHARTE 4316/00 CONVENT 34. That Article should become a provision to prevent regression instead of a provision to prevent progress.)

AMENDMENT 565

Proposed amendment to Article: 28. Ombudsman

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

Article 28. Ombudsman

"Every citizen and every person residing in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration by the institutions and bodies of the Union, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role."

Reasons:

It would seem that this is the first provision to include legal persons having their registered offices in Member States. Such explicit reference could lead to the converse conclusion that other fundamental rights are not applicable to legal persons. This must however be avoided. The best overall solution would be a specific horizontal provision for legal persons. That could read: "The rights and freedoms guaranteed by this Charter shall also apply to legal persons insofar as they are by their nature applicable to such persons".

AMENDMENT 566

Proposed amendment to Article: 28

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

“Article 28. Ombudsman/Ombudswoman”

In the German version, also replace “Jeder Unionsbürger” by “Jede Unionsbürgerin und jeder Unionsbürger” (i.e. specifically referring to both male and female citizens).

Reasons:

The proposed versions differ in using or avoiding gender-specific terms.

AMENDMENT 567

Proposed amendment to Article: 28

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

Every natural person residing in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union

Reasons:

In the proposed text the reference to legal persons is deleted as it is not appropriate in a Charter of Fundamental Human Rights.

AMENDMENT 568

Proposed amendment to Article: 28

Submitted by: Rocco BUTTIGLIONE, MEP, under the authority of the head of the European Parliament delegation

Proposed text:

Article 28. Ombudsman

Every citizen and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration by the institutions and bodies of the Union, with the exception of the European Parliament, the Court of Justice and Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role and the Court of Auditors.

Reasons:

Remain the same.

AMENDMENT 569

Proposed amendment to Article: 28. Ombudsman

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text:

Every citizen of the Union and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union cases of maladministration by the institutions and bodies of the Union, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.

Reasons:

First sentence: The insertion of the words "of the Union" in the first part of the sentence (after "every citizen") is more in line with the EU Treaty.

AMENDMENT 570Proposed amendment to Article: 28

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

The words “Every citizen and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State” should be replaced by “Everyone”.

Reasons:

This Article contains the principles derived from Articles 21 and 195 TEC. There is no reason why this right should not apply to everyone.

AMENDMENT 571Proposed amendment to Article: 28

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, MEP, alternate member of the Convention

Proposed text:

1. Add the following to the text of the proposed article:

The same right is granted to nationals of third countries who are established outside the Union and maintain relations of governance with the Union, its bodies or its official representatives.

2. Add the following to the text of the proposed article:

The Ombudsman shall draw up an annual report on the implementation of the Charter. The report shall be the subject of public debate at the European Parliament.

Reasons:

Re 1: It is in the interests of the citizens of the Union to verify how its bodies behave in their relations with the outside world.

Re 2: It is in the interests of both the governing bodies of the Union and its citizens that particular care be taken in supervising the application of the Charter.

Proposals for Article 29

AMENDMENT 572

Proposed amendment to Article: 29

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text:

Instead of "natural and legal person", simply read "person".

Reasons:

In line with our proposal that the word "individual" should be used when referring to natural persons and "person" when referring to natural and legal persons, it is sufficient in Article 29 to speak of every "person".

AMENDMENT 573Proposed amendments to Article: 29*Submitted by: Erling OLSENProposed text:

The words "on EU-related matters under the conditions and limitations laid down in Article 194 of the Treaty" should be added after "European Parliament".

Reasons:

Under Article 194 of the EC Treaty a petition can be addressed to the European Parliament on matters which come within the Community's fields of activity; that should be reflected in this provision.

AMENDMENT 574Proposed amendment to Article: 29

Submitted by: E.M.H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (and also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

The existing text should be replaced by the following:

Every person has the right to petition an institution or body of the Union.

Reasons:

This Article contains the principles which arise from Articles 21 and 194 of the EC Treaty. Every person must have this right (see Article 5 of the Netherlands Constitution). There is also no reason to limit the right to the European Parliament. Incidentally, a right to a reply cannot be inferred from the right of every person to petition.

AMENDMENT 575

Proposed amendment to Article: 29

Submitted by: Kathalijne BUITENWEG

Proposed text:

Every person (18 words deleted) has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Reasons:

The personal scope of the fundamental rights must not be unnecessarily restricted. Article 27 (Relations with the administration) was correct in this respect.

The proposed modification renders the Article more readable.

(This amendment obviously also necessitates amendment of Article 48 in CHARTE 4316/00 CONVENT 34. That Article should become a provision to prevent regression instead of a provision to prevent progress.)

AMENDMENT 576

Proposed amendment to Article: 29. Right to petition

Submitted by: Dr Ingo FRIEDRICH

Proposed text:

"Every citizen and every (delete three words) person residing (delete five words) in a Member State has the right to (delete rest) address a petition to the European Parliament on a matter which comes within the Union's fields of activity and which affects him/her directly."

Reasons:

A horizontal provision should be introduced on the applicability of rights to legal persons.

It should also be made clear, in accordance with Article 194 of the EC Treaty, that the right to petition only applies within the fields of activity of bodies of the European Union.

AMENDMENT 577

Proposed amendment to Article: 29. Right to petition

Submitted by: Jürgen GNAUCK, Minister for Federal and European Affairs of Thuringia

Proposed text:

“Article 29. Right to petition

Every citizen of the Union and anyone residing in a Member State has the right in matters which come within the Union's fields of activity and which affect him or her directly to address a petition to the European Parliament”.

Reasons:

Here too, one should initially avoid explicit reference to legal persons. As already indicated, there is therefore a need for a horizontal provision: "The rights and freedoms ensured by this Charter shall also apply to legal persons insofar as they are by their nature applicable to such persons".

It should, moreover, in accordance with Article 194 of the EC Treaty, be made clear that the right to petition only applies within the fields of activity of bodies of the European Union. This limitation of competence to deal with a matter could be achieved by inserting the text suggested by the German Länder.

AMENDMENT 578

Proposed amendment to Article: 29

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

In the German version, "Jeder Unionsbürger" should be replaced by "Jede Unionsbürgerin und jeder Unionsbürger".

Reasons:

The two proposed wordings differ in using or avoiding a gender-specific term.

AMENDMENT 579

Proposed amendment to Article: 29

Submitted by: Gabriel CISNEROS LABORDA

Proposed text:

Every natural person residing in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Reason:

In the proposed text the reference to legal persons is deleted as it is not appropriate in a Charter of Fundamental Human Rights.

AMENDMENT 580Proposed amendment to Article: 29

Submitted by: Rocco BUTTIGLIONE, MEP, under the authority of the head of the European Parliament delegation

Proposed text:

Article 29. Right to petition

Every citizen and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament and, accordingly, its Committee on Petitions.

The European Parliament, which elects the Ombudsman, shall, through the Committee on Petitions, exercise supervision of the role of the Ombudsman.

Reasons:

Remain the same.

AMENDMENT 581

Proposed amendment to Article: 29. Right to petition

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text:

Every citizen of the Union and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament.

Reasons:

First sentence: Insertion of the words "of the Union" in the first part of the sentence (after "every citizen") is more in line with the EU Treaty.

AMENDMENT 582

Proposed amendment to Article: 29

Submitted by: Frits KORTHALS ALTES, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

Every person has the right to petition an institution or body of the Union.

Reasons:

This Article contains the principles which arise from Articles 21 and 194 of the EC Treaty. Every person must have this right (see Article 5 of the Netherlands Constitution). There is also no reason to limit the right to the European Parliament. Incidentally, a right to a reply cannot be inferred from the right of every person to petition.

Proposed amendment to add a horizontal clause

Proposed text of a horizontal clause:

Insofar as this Charter contains rights corresponding to rights laid down in the European Convention on Human Rights, their meaning and scope are the same as the meaning and scope of the rights under the ECHR, unless this Charter provides greater protection.

Reasons:

This clause makes it clear that the rights in the Charter have the same meaning and scope as the provisions of the ECHR, as interpreted by the CDH, even if the formulation differs. In Article 5 of the ECHR, security is linked to the individual person. The Charter does not therefore explicitly cover a right to security in the general sense, as is expressed for example in Article 2 of the Treaty on European Union which states that one of the objectives of the Union is "to maintain and develop the Union as an area of freedom, security and justice ...". Clearly that Article leaves open the possibility of further protection under the Charter.

Proposals for Article 30

AMENDMENT 583Proposed amendment to Article: 30*Submitted by: Pervenche BERÈSProposed text:

Every citizen of the Union and every person legally resident in the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 584

Proposed amendment to Article: 30. Freedom of movement

Submitted by: EINEM/HOLOUBEK

Proposed text:

“Article 30. Freedom of movement

1. Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States. Every citizen of a third country shall have the same entitlement to this right if they have been legally resident for five years within the territory of the Member States.
2. Every citizen of the Union shall be free to leave and then return to the territory of the Member States”.

Reasons:

The existing text concerning this right should be extended or clarified in two respects: firstly, third-country nationals should also be given the right to freedom of movement after a specified period of legal residence. Secondly, it is moreover necessary here to draw the conclusions of experience in recent years when whole sections of populations have been repeatedly driven out of their homeland and subsequently prevented from returning there.

AMENDMENT 585

Proposed amendment to Article: 30. Freedom of movement

Submitted by: Georges BERTHU, MEP

Proposed text:

Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States, subject to national controls designed to preserve liberty and security of persons, in accordance with Article 6 of the Charter. Such controls must in all cases remain legitimate and proportionate.

Reasons:

Recent cases (Wijsenbeek) have shown that freedom of movement is sometimes interpreted, wrongly, as automatically signifying the complete abolition of all forms of control. In line with the very spirit of Article 6 of the Charter, it is important to signify that controls may be exercised.

AMENDMENT 586

Proposed amendment to Article: 30

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

BB. Article 30. Freedom of movement

Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States whether to live, work, seek work, study or undergo training.

Statement of reasons

This Article follows the principle set out in Article 18 of the TEC.

Article 18 TEC:

- "1. Every citizen of the Union shall have the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States, subject to the limitations and conditions laid down in this Treaty and by the measures adopted to give it effect.*
- 2. The Council may adopt provisions with a view to facilitating the exercise of the rights referred to in paragraph 1; save as otherwise provided in this Treaty, the Council shall act in accordance with the procedure referred to in Article 251. The Council shall act unanimously throughout this procedure."*

The Article also acts as a reference point for the citizen in drawing together all the rights of EU citizens with regard to freedom of movement. A reference to the Treaty will be made in a horizontal clause.

AMENDMENT 587

Proposed amendments to Article: 30

Submitted by: Erling OLSEN

Proposed text:

“Subject to the conditions and limitations laid down in the EC Treaty” should be added after “within the territory of the Member States”.

Reasons:

It is important to make clear that this provision does not vary from Article 18 of the EC Treaty. See Court of Justice judgment of 11 April 2000 in Case C-356/98 (Kaba), which indicates that a Member State's citizen's right to reside in the territory of another Member State is not absolute.

AMENDMENT 588Proposed amendment to Article: 30

Submitted by: E.M H. HIRSCH BALLIN and M. PATIJN (and also on behalf of G.J.W. VAN OVEN)

Proposed text:

"Every citizen of the Union" should be replaced by "Every person with a lawful residence permit".

Reasons:

The proposed wording is in line with the applicable regulations.

AMENDMENT 589

Proposed amendment to Article: 30

Submitted by: Johannes VOGGENHUBER and Kathalijne BUITENWEG

Proposed text:

"Everyone who has been accorded refugee status or enjoys permanent right of residence in a Member State has the right to move and settle freely within the Union".

Reasons:

AMENDMENT 590

Proposed amendment to Article: 30

Submitted by: Alvaro Rodríguez BEREIJO, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Add at the end of the sentence “in accordance with Article 18 of the Treaty establishing the European Community”.

Reasons:

In the text which defines the right, it is necessary to make an explicit reference to the Community Treaty in which this right is set out and limitations and conditions governing its exercise are established. This is without prejudice to the relevant horizontal clause which may be more detailed in setting out those limitations.

AMENDMENT 591

Proposed amendment to Article: 30

Submitted by: Dr Sylvia-Yvonne KAUFMANN

Proposed text:

Every citizen of the Union or anyone residing or having the right to reside in a Member State has the right to move (one word deleted), reside or settle freely within the territory of the Member States.

In the German version, also replace “Jeder Unionsbürger” by “Jede Unionsbürgerin und jeder Unionsbürger”.

Reasons:

1. In the German version, the two proposed wordings differ in using or avoiding a gender-specific term.
2. The Article should not refer solely to citizens.
3. The right to freedom of movement should not become no more than a right for citizens of the Union to travel freely, but should include the right for all persons living in the Member States to settle freely.

AMENDMENT 592

Blank.

AMENDMENT 593

Proposed amendment to Article: 30

Submitted by: Lord GOLDSMITH, QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce two-part text as follows:

For Part A, “Proclamation of Rights”

Retain existing text

For Part B, “Definition of Rights”:

“The right in Article 30 is the right provided for in Article 18(1) of the Treaty establishing the European Community and is subject to the limitations and conditions laid down in that Treaty and by the measures adopted to give it effect”

Reasons:

I am very happy with the Praesidium text for the Proclamation of this right. However, I believe that we must ensure in Part B that Article 30 is understood within the meaning of the relevant Treaty provisions. It also preserves the effect of provisions laid down under as well as in the Treaty.

AMENDMENT 594

Proposed amendments to Article: 30. Freedom of movement

Submitted by: Daniel TARSCHYS

Reasons:

The conditions linked to this right should be explained in a part B.

Proposals for new Articles

AMENDMENT 595

Proposed amendment to Article: insertion of a new Article

Submitted by: Jean-Maurice DEHOUSSE, Member of the European Parliament, Alternate Member of the Convention

Proposed text:

- Insert in the Charter a new Article 31, worded as follows:

Upon leaving the territory of the Union, all citizens of the Union shall be entitled to diplomatic and consular protection. Such protection shall be afforded them by any official representative of the Union or of any of its Member States.

Reasons:

There is no reason to omit from the Charter the protection provided by Article 20 EC (under the Treaty of Amsterdam).

AMENDMENT 596

Proposed amendment to Article: HH

Submitted by: Andrew DUFF, MEP

Proposed text:

Article HH. European Union citizenship

Any right, privilege or obligation pertaining to citizens of the European Union may be extended in whole or in part to any natural or legal person by decision of the Union, in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity and where the extension of the scope of such rights shall not limit in any way those of EU citizens.

Statement of reasons

A new horizontal clause is required so that the rights falling to EU citizens in the above Articles may be extended to other categories of person. An extension of the right to vote in elections to resident third country nationals would be one such example. The reference to subsidiarity is appropriate in order to allow for a variable treatment of some citizenship rights as between Member States, as already exists in some cases, such as the franchise.

This clause would also allow for the development of the practice of freedom of movement of persons within the area of freedom, security and justice as foreseen by the Treaty of Amsterdam.

AMENDMENT 597Proposed amendment to Article:

Proposal for a special Article on protection of minorities

Article xxx Rights of minorities

(to be inserted preferably after Article 17, before Article 21 or after Article 22)

Submitted by: Prof. Reinhard RACK, MEP

Proposed text:

1. Members of any national, ethnic, cultural, linguistic, religious or other minority have the right also to live their traditional distinctiveness collectively and in public, to assemble freely and peacefully with others and associate freely with others and to settle their own internal affairs.
2. The Union shall work to promote the tradition and cultivation of minority rights.

Reasons:

In addition to individual protection for minorities, in accordance with European traditions in the Member States, care should be taken to protect and promote the collective rights of minorities. The above proposal takes on board the main substance of a number of European legal texts already in existence or currently being drawn up. Among others, mention should be made of the framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities and the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages. The fact that the framing of collective minority rights is not without its political difficulties in individual Member States, if anything, brings out the need to include this right in the European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights.

AMENDMENT 598

Proposed amendment to Article: (new Article)

Submitted by: Johannes VOGGENHUBER

Proposed text:

Rights of minorities

1. Anyone belonging to a minority has the right to use their own language and pursue their own culture, collectively and in public, with other members of their group.
2. Members of groups in practice at a disadvantage are entitled to special support.

Reasons:

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Brussels, 5 June 2000 (06.06)
(OR. fr,es)

CHARTE 4332/00 ADD 1

CONVENT 35

ADDENDUM TO PRAESIDIUM NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Amendments submitted by members of the Convention regarding civil and political rights and citizens' rights
(Reference document: CHARTE 4284/00 CONVENT 28 (REV 1 in French only))

Delegations will find attached Amendment 545b submitted by Rodríguez Bereijo, representative of the Spanish Prime Minister.

Amendment 545b

Proposed amendment to Article: 27

Submitted by: Rodríguez Bereijo, personal representative of the Spanish Prime Minister

Proposed text:

Article 27. Relations with the administration

1. Every person has the right to have his affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union. Acts and provisions they adopt must respect the principle of legitimate expectations.
2. This right includes inter alia:
 - the right to legal security;
 - the right to have reasons for acts and provisions;
 - the right of the person concerned to have access to his file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of professional secrecy;
 - the right of the person concerned to be heard in all proceedings which affect him personally;
 - the right to legality and the right of defence in proceedings which are punitive or could have an adverse effect. In addition to the guarantees set out above, this right includes:
 - the right not to be the subject of administrative sanction without prior regulatory justification. Sanctions must be proportionate to the gravity of the offence committed;
 - the right to have no sanction imposed without proceedings in which the person concerned may be heard, knowledge of the offences with which he is charged, proof of guilt even if no more than failure to observe a rule, and reasons for the decision taken. Every person shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty and no one may be obliged to admit to the offence with which he is charged.

3. The institutions of the Union must make good any damage resulting from an illegal action wherever there is a causal relationship between the illegal action and the damage incurred, in accordance with the provisions of Article 288 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.
4. Every person may address the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of the Union and must have an answer in that language.

Reasons:

The proposed amendment is intended to list the main rights to which the Court of Justice of the European Community has declared that the individual is entitled in his relations with the Community administration. The scope of the rights laid down in paragraphs 1 and 2 must be limited to the public administration, with the exception of the Court of Justice in its judicial functions.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 7 June 2000 (13.06)CHARTE 4332/00 ADD 2*CONVENT 35*ADDENDUM
TO PRAESIDIUM NOTE

Subject: Draft Charter of fundamental rights of the European Union
– Amendments submitted by the members of the Convention regarding civil and political rights and citizens' rights
(Reference document: CHARTE 4284/00 CONVENT 28 (REV 1 in French only))

Delegations will find attached amendments from:

- | | |
|---|-----------------------|
| – Mr Hirsch Ballin, Mr Patijn, Mr Van Oven (Article 27) | Amendment 599 |
| – Messrs Korthals Altes and Patijn (Article 27) | Amendment 600 |
| – Lord Goldsmith, QC (Articles 27-29) | Amendment 601 |
| – Mr Jansson, Ms Brax, Mr Nikula (Article 27) | Amendment 602 |
| – Mr Jens-Peter Bonde (Article 18) | Amendment 603 |
| – Mr Jens-Peter Bonde (new Article on minority rights) | Amendment 604. |

AMENDMENT 599

Proposed amendment to Article: 27

Submitted by: E.M.H. Hirsch Ballin, M. Patijn (and also on behalf of G.J.W. van Oven)

Proposed text:

1. Every person has the right to have his affairs handled properly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.
2. This right includes:
 - the right of every person to be heard before any individual measure which would affect him adversely is taken in relation to him;
 - the right of every person to have access to his file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy;
 - the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.
3. In preparing a decision the institutions and bodies of the Union shall take account of the following provisions:
 - the necessary knowledge shall be gathered about the relevant facts and the interests to be considered;
 - the competence to take a decision shall not be used for a purpose other than that for which competence has been granted;
 - the adverse effects of a decision on one or more interested parties may not be disproportionate in relation to the aims sought by the decision.
4. Every person may address the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of the Union and must have an answer in that language.

Reasons:

It is suggested that the term "properly" be used in paragraph 1. This also includes the concepts of impartiality and fairness. In paragraph 2, a choice has been made to include a number of European principles of proper administration as (partly) developed in the case law of the Court of Justice. However, a number of general principles of proper administration, which are included in Netherlands administrative law, are missing. These include the principle of careful preparation, prohibition of the misuse of powers and the principle of proportionality. These principles have been added in paragraph 3.

AMENDMENT 600

Proposed amendment to Article: 27

Submitted by: Frits Korthals Altes, representative of the Netherlands Government

Proposed text:

1. Every person has the right to have his affairs handled properly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.
2. This right includes:
 - the right of every person to be heard before any individual measure which would affect him adversely is taken in relation to him;
 - the right of every person to have access to his file, while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy;
 - the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.
3. In preparing a decision, the institutions and bodies of the Union shall take into account the following provisions:
 - the necessary knowledge shall be gathered about the relevant facts and the interests to be considered;
 - the competence to take a decision shall not be used for a purpose other than that for which competence has been granted;
 - the adverse effects of a decision on one or more interested parties may not be disproportionate in relation to the aims sought by the decision.
4. Every person may address the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of the Union and must have an answer in that language.

Reasons:

It is suggested that the term "properly", which also embraces the concepts of impartiality and fairness, be used in paragraph 1.

In the second indent of paragraph 2, it is suggested that the Dutch text be brought more into line with the English text. More generally, we have decided to insert in paragraph 2 a number of European general principles of proper administration, as (partly) developed in the case-law of the Court of Justice. However, a number of general principles of proper administration which are included in Netherlands administrative law are missing. These include the principle of careful preparation, prohibition of the misuse of power and the proportionality principle. These principles have been added in paragraph 3.

AMENDMENT 601

Proposed amendment to Articles: 27-29

Submitted by: Lord Goldsmith QC

Proposed text:

Amend to produce two-part text as follows:

(i) Part A

1. Every person has the right in his or her dealings with the Institutions of the Union to be treated impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time.
2. In particular,
 - (a) every citizen of the Union and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right, in accordance with specified conditions and procedures, to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union, cases of maladministration by Union institutions and bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.
 - (b) every citizen of the Union and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament in accordance with specified conditions.
 - (c) every person may write to the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of the Union and have an answer in that language.

(ii) Part B

The rights set out in Article 27 are the rights guaranteed by Article 21 of the Treaty establishing the European Community read with Articles 195 and 194 TEC and as are contained in general principles of Community law.

— Reasons:

These provisions are, in my view, strengthened by bringing them together into a single Article.

The right given by the TEC contains certain limitations which the Article should acknowledge.

The drafting change to paragraph 1 is to give more precision to what would otherwise be a very wide obligation on the institutions. The drafting changes to CONVENT 28 Article 27(3) are to bring it into line with Article 21 TEC. Paragraph two of CONVENT 28 Article 27 has been deleted as it has no clear basis in the Treaties. The case law of the ECJ sets down related rights in specific situations, eg competition matters, rather than as general principles. An individual's right of access to his or her file is covered by the right of access to documents in Article 18.

The proposed text in CONVENT 28 Article 29 expands the right to petition the EP in categories which do not have it under the TEC. As with access to the Ombudsman, the right is not absolute and text therefore refers to conditions.

AMENDMENT 602

Proposed amendment to Article: 27

Submitted by: Gunnar Jansson, Tuija Brax and Paavo Nikula

Proposed text:

Article 27. Right to good governance

1. Every person has the right to have his affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time [].
2. This right includes the right of the person concerned
 - to be heard before a decision is taken about his rights or obligations
 - to obtain the documents relating to his case, taking account of justified confidentiality and secrecy regarding such documents
 - to obtain a well-founded decision regarding his or her case
3. Every person may address the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of the Union and must have an answer in that language

Reasons:

It is proposed that paragraph 1 of this Article be amended so as to highlight the fact that legal persons may also avail themselves of this right. In addition, it is necessary to remove the reference to the institutions of the Union so that the Article will also apply to national authorities when they implement Community legislation.

The changes to paragraph 2 of this Article are of a more technical nature. The proposed wording underlines the rights of the person concerned.

There are grounds for removing the link between this right and nationality in the third paragraph as the right to contact the bodies of the European Union should not only be the right of nationals of the Union.

AMENDMENT 603

Proposed amendment to Article: 18

Submitted by: MEP Jens-Peter Bonde

Proposed text:

Right of access to information

Every citizen of the Union and anyone residing in the Union shall have a right of access to the documents possessed by the institutions of the European Union. Everything is open unless there is a decision allowing a derogation from the general principle of openness in public law and administration. Deviations should be followed by a concrete reason which can be appealed to the European Ombudsman. Exceptions from the general rule and implementation of the rules of access to information can be adopted according to Article 255 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.

Reasons:

It is fundamental for the relationship between the individual and the institutions that the individual has access to all files. Exceptions from this rule should therefore be limited and wellfounded. Exceptions should be followed by a concrete reason and it should be possible to complain about a rejection.

AMENDMENT 604

I propose that the following "new" right is included in the Charter in the chapter concerning civil and political rights:

Submitted by: MEP Jens-Peter Bonde

Proposed text:

Minority rights

Persons belonging to [national] minorities have the right to the protection and promotion of their ethnic, cultural, linguistic and religious identity inter alia through effective participation in cultural, religious, social, economic and public life within the Union, as set out in the UN Declaration on the Rights of Persons belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities (1992), the OSCE Copenhagen Document (1990), the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities (1995) and the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages (1992) and other relevant standards.

Reasons:

The right to the protection and promotion of ethnic, cultural, linguistic and religious identity of national minorities is one of the basic human rights already guaranteed in Article 27 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, UN 1966. Almost all of the binding or non-binding international documents addressing the protection of minorities refer to their right to identity protection and promotion, such as Articles 1 and 2 of the UN Declaration on the Rights of Persons belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities (1992); paragraphs 32 and 33 of the OSCE Copenhagen Document (1990), Article 5 of the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities (1995) and the spirit enshrined in the preamble of the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages (1992).

The right to effective participation in cultural, religious, social, economic and public life is one of the most important rights of minorities in order to be able to use the generally recognised human rights and minority rights guaranteed in the different international human rights documents. (Article 2 of the UN Declaration on the Rights of Persons belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities (1992); paragraph 35 of the OSCE Copenhagen Document (1990), Article 15 of the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities (1995).

In order to meet the needs and aspirations of persons belonging to national minorities concerning their identity protection and promotion, as well as to manage ethnic, linguistic, religious and cultural diversity, it is necessary to actively involve national minorities in the decision taking on all levels in the cultural, social, economic and public life of the society. This way the protection and promotion of their rights set out in the different UN, OSCE, and Council of Europe binding and non-binding documents can be realised and implemented.

"as set out in the UN Declaration on the Rights of Persons belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities (1992), the OSCE Copenhagen Document (1990), the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities (1995) and the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages (1992)". The article would like to reinforce existing standards, without enlisting all the rights enshrined in the above documents. While the UN Declaration and the OSCE Copenhagen Document are soft law provisions, the Council of Europe Framework Convention and Language Charter are legally binding documents signed or ratified by most of the EU countries.

=====

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Fundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 27 June 2000 (30.06)

CHARTE 4332/00
ADD 3

CONVENT 35

ADDENDUM TO PRAESIDIUM NOTE

Subject: Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
- Amendments relating to civil and political rights and citizens' rights submitted by members of the Convention
(Reference documents: CHARTE 4284/00 CONVENT 28 (REV 1 for the French version only))

Delegations will find attached amendments from:

Mr Jean-Luc Dehaene (Article 27)

Amendment 605

Mr Win Griffith (Article 27)

Amendment 606

Proposed amendment to Article: 27. Relations with the administration

Submitted by: Jean-Luc DEHAENE, personal representative of the Belgian Government

Proposed text: Right to good governance

1. Every person has the right to have his affairs handled impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions and bodies of the Union.
2. This right includes:
 - the right of every person to be heard before any individual measure which would affect him adversely is taken in relation to him;
 - the right of every person to have access to his file,¹ while respecting the legitimate interests of confidentiality and of business secrecy;
 - the obligation of the administration to give reasons for its decisions.
3. Every person has the right to address the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of the Union and must have an answer in that language within a reasonable time.

Reasons

The purpose of the proposal is to replace the title of the provision (CONVENT 28 version ["Relations with the administration"]) with "Right to good governance". This concept conveys more clearly the substance of the fundamental right in question and, moreover, ties in with the concept of "good governance". The addition of "within a reasonable time" in paragraph 3 ties in with the same provision in paragraph 1.

Paragraph 3: "Every person has the right ..." is a legally clearer and stronger form of words than the version in CONVENT 28 ["Every person may"].

¹ Translator's footnote: The Dutch version, unlike the EN and F original texts, contains here a clause reading: "insofar as that is necessary in order to adduce evidence,".

Proposed amendment to Article: 27Submitted by: Win Griffiths MP

Proposed text: 1. Every person has the right to have his/her affairs handled impartially, openly and fairly and within a reasonable time by the institutions of the Union.

2. Every person may address the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of the Union and must have an answer in that language.

Reasons: Paragraph 2 of the original text can be deleted with the addition of "openly" to paragraph 1 and by the addition of an appropriate commentary in "Part B" of the Charter to take account of these more detailed issues.

The applicability of the Charter to bodies of the Union requires separate consideration.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 4 juin 2000 (04.06)
(OR. FR)*CHARTE 4333/00*CONVENT 36*NOTE DU PRESIDIUM

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne
 – Projet d'articles 1 à 30 (doc. CHARTE 4284/00 CONVENT 28)
 = Propositions d'amendements de compromis présentés par le Présidium

Article 1

Faire du paragraphe 2 un nouvel article 1bis.

S'appuie sur les amendements 5, 14, 15, 16.

Article 3

Nouvelle rédaction:

1. Toute personne a droit à son intégrité physique, génétique et mentale.
2. Dans le cadre de la médecine et de la biologie, les principes suivants doivent notamment être respectés:

- interdiction des pratiques eugéniques, notamment celle qui ont pour but la sélection et l'instrumentalisation des personnes
- consentement libre et éclairé du patient
- interdiction de faire du corps humain et de ses parties une source de profit
- interdiction du clonage reproductif des êtres humains.

s'appuie sur les amendements 49, 52, 54, 56, 59, 64, 67.

Article 4

Le Présidium suggère de déplacer le paragraphe 2 à l'article relatif au droit d'asile et de remplacer "serait menacé d'être" par "pourrait être".

Article 5

Nouvelle rédaction du paragraphe 2

2. Nul ne peut être astreint à accomplir un travail forcé ou obligatoire. Ne sont pas considérées comme travail forcé ou obligatoire les prestations personnelles qui, établies par la loi, sont exigées des citoyens pour des motifs civiques en cas d'urgence ou de calamité ainsi que le service militaire ou le travail exigé normalement d'une personne privée de liberté.

S'appuie sur les amendements 96, 100, 101, 102,104

Ajouter un paragraphe 3

3. La traite des être humains est interdite

S'appuie sur l'amendement 90

Article 8

Lire le paragraphe 1 comme suit

Toute personne a droit à ce que sa cause soit entendue équitablement, publiquement et dans un délai raisonnable, par un tribunal indépendant et impartial établi par la loi. Toute personne a la possibilité de se faire conseiller, défendre et représenter par un avocat.

Au paragraphe 2, au lieu de « serait indispensable », lire « serait nécessaire »

S'appuie sur les amendements 148, 149, 158, 162

Article 10

Lire le titre comme suit

« Principe de légalité et de proportionnalité des délits et des peines »

Au paragraphe 2, in fine, lire

« était criminelle d'après le droit international »

Ajouter un nouveau paragraphe 3

L'intensité des peines doit être proportionnelle à la gravité de l'infraction.

S'appuie sur les amendements 177, 179, 185, 187, 188

Article 11

Lire le titre comme suit

Droit à ne pas être jugé ou puni pénale deux fois pour un même délit

S'appuie sur l'amendement 199

Article 12

Lire le titre comme suit

Respect de la vie privée et familiale

Lire l'article comme suit

Toute personne a droit au respect de sa vie privée et de sa vie familiale, de son honneur et de sa réputation, de son domicile et du secret de sa correspondance et de ses communications.

S'appuie sur les amendements 207, 221

Article 13

Lire le titre comme suit

Droit de se marier et de fonder une famille

Supprimer le paragraphe 1

Le nouveau paragraphe 1 se lit ainsi

Le droit de se marier et le droit de fonder une famille sont garantis selon les lois nationales qui en régissent l'exercice

S'appuie sur l'amendement 243

Supprimer l'actuel paragraphe 2 qui sera inséré dans le droit sociaux

S'appuie sur l'amendement 251

Article 14

Lire l'article ainsi

Toute personne a droit à la liberté de pensée, de conscience et de religion ; ce droit implique la liberté de changer de religion ou de conviction, ainsi que la liberté de manifester sa religion ou sa conviction individuellement ou collectivement, en public ou en privé, par le culte, l'enseignement, les pratiques et l'accomplissement des rites.

S'appuie sur les amendements 252, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 263, 264, 265, 270, 271, 272

Article 15

Ajouter un paragraphe 2

La liberté de presse et d'information est garantie dans le respect de la transparence et du pluralisme

S'appuie sur les amendements 279, 280, 281, 282, 284, 290

Article 16

Lire le paragraphe 2 comme suit

La liberté de création des établissements d'enseignement est garantie, dans le respect des principes démocratiques, selon les règles nationales régissant l'exercice de ce droit

S'appuie sur les amendements 312, 318, 320

Article 17

Nouvelle rédaction

Toute personne a droit à la liberté de réunion pacifique et à la liberté d'association, notamment dans les domaines politique, syndical et civique

S'appuie sur les amendements 325, 326, 329, 330, 339

Article 19

Lire l'article comme suit

Toute personne a le droit de décider elle-même de la collecte, de l'utilisation et de la divulgation des données à caractère personnel la concernant

S'appuie sur les amendements 359, 365, 367, 369, 372

Article 20

Lire l'article comme suit

Toute personne a le droit de posséder des biens acquis légalement, de les utiliser, d'en disposer et de les léguer. Nul ne peut être privé de sa propriété si ce n'est pour cause d'utilité publique, dans des cas et conditions prévues par une loi et moyennant une juste indemnité

S'appuie sur les amendements 380, 381, 382, 387, 389, 393, 400

Article 21

Lire comme suit

Le droit d'asile est garanti, conformément au traité instituant la Communauté européenne et dans le respect des règles de la convention de Genève du 28 juillet 1951 et du protocole du 31 janvier 1967 relatifs au statut des réfugiés ainsi que des autres traités pertinents

S'appuie sur les amendements 404, 404 bis (M. Melograni), 410, 414, 415, 416, 428, 429

Article 21 bis

Nouvel article qui reprend une partie de l'article 4 et se lit comme suit

1. Les expulsions collectives sont interdites
2. Nul ne peut être expulsé, ni extradé vers un Etat où il pourrait être soumis à la peine de mort, à la torture ou à d'autres peines ou traitements inhumains ou dégradants

S'appuie sur les amendements 82, 409, 412, 414, 432, 433

Article 22

Lire l'article comme suit

1. Est interdite toute discrimination fondée notamment sur le sexe, la race, la couleur, les origines ethniques ou sociales, les caractéristiques génétiques, la langue, la religion ou les convictions, les opinions politiques ou toute autre opinion, l'appartenance à une minorité nationale, la fortune, la naissance, un handicap, l'âge ou l'orientation sexuelle.
2. Dans le domaine d'application du traité instituant la Communauté européenne et du traité sur l'Union européenne et sans préjudice des dispositions particulières desdits traités, toute discrimination fondée sur la nationalité est interdite.
3. L'Union cherche à éliminer les inégalités et cherche à promouvoir l'égalité de statut entre les femmes et les hommes. L'égalité des sexes est notamment assurée dans la fixation des rémunérations et des autres conditions de travail.

S'appuie sur les amendements 437, 439, 440, 442, 453, 454

Article 23

Lire l'article comme suit

1. Les enfants ont droit à la protection et au soin nécessaire à leur bien-être. Ils peuvent exprimer leur opinion librement sur les sujets qui les concernent, ces opinions étant prise en considération en fonction de leur âge et de leur maturité.
2. Dans tous les actes relatifs aux enfants, qu'ils soient accomplis par des institutions publiques ou privées de protection sociale, l'intérêt supérieur de l'enfant doit primer

S'appuie sur les amendements 474, 476, 478, 479, 484, 485, 486, 487, 489, 490, 491, 493

Article 24

Après « tout citoyen », ajouter « de l'Union »

S'appuie sur les amendements 510, 511, 514, 515

Article 25

Inverser les paragraphes 1 et 2

Au paragraphe 2, après « éligibilité », ajouter « au Parlement européen »

S'appuie sur l'amendement 532

Article 27

Changer le titre « droit à une bonne administration »

Débuter ainsi le paragraphe 3

« Toute personne a le droit de s'adresser... » s'appuie sur l'amendement 555 et sur l'amendement de M. Dehaene

Article 28

Ajouter « de l'Union » après « citoyen »

S'appuie sur les amendements 565 et 569

Article 29

Après « citoyen », ajouter « de l'Union »

S'appuie sur l'amendement 581

Article 29 bis

Nouvel article

Protection diplomatique et consulaire

Tout citoyen de l'Union bénéficie, sur le territoire d'un pays tiers où l'Etat membre dont il est ressortissant n'est pas représenté, de la protection de la part des autorités diplomatiques et consulaires de tout Etat membre, dans les mêmes conditions que les nationaux de cet Etat.

S'appuie sur l'amendement 545 et reproduit la première phrase de l'article 20 du traité CE

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 31 May 2000CHARTE 4344/00*CONTRIB 208*COVER NOTE

Subject : Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union

Please find hereafter a contribution of Lord Goldsmith Q.C, personal representative of the government of the United Kingdom. The contribution shows how an integrated two-part document would look (reference: CHARTE 4284/00 CONVENT 28). ¹

¹ This text has been submitted in English language only.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Article 1 Object and purpose

All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and are entitled to equal protection of the law. In recognition of this, the European Union Institutions respect, within the spheres of their competences, the fundamental rights set out below.

PROCLAMATION OF RIGHTS

(PART A)

Article 2 Right to Life

1. Everyone's right to life shall be protected by law
2. No one shall be condemned to the death penalty or executed.

Article 4 Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 5 Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.

Article 6 Right to liberty and security

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person and cannot be deprived of it save in limited specific cases and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.

Article 8 Right to a fair trial

1. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable period of any criminal charge against him or her, or in determining his or her civil rights and obligations. Hearings shall be by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.

2. If it is a criminal charge, the accused shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law and has certain guaranteed rights to defend himself or herself.

Article 10 No punishment without law

No one shall be held guilty of any offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute an offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the offence was committed.

Article 11 Right not to be tried or punished twice

No one shall be tried or punished twice for the same criminal offence.

Article 12 Respect for private life

Everyone has the right to respect for his or her private and family life, home and correspondence. These rights may be interfered with only in limited, specified circumstances.

Article 13 Family life

Men and women of marriageable age have the right to marry and found a family according to national law governing the exercise of this right.

Article 14 Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. Limitations can be placed on this right only in limited, specified circumstances.

Article 15 Freedom of expression

Everyone has the right to freedom of expression. This right shall include freedom to hold opinions and to received and impart information and ideas without interference by public authority and regardless of frontiers. Formalities, restrictions, conditions or penalties can be placed on this right only in limited, specified circumstances.

Article 16 Right to education

No one shall be denied the right to education.

Article 17 Freedom of assembly and association

Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of association with others, including the right to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his or her interests. These rights may be restricted only in limited, specified circumstances.

Article 18 Right of access to documents

Every citizens of the Union or anyone residing in the Union has a right of access to the documents of the European Parliament, of the Council and of the Commission.

Article 19 Data protection

Every natural person has a right to protection for his or her personal data.

Article 20 Right to Property

Everyone is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his or her possessions. Public bodies may interfere with possessions or the way they are used only in specified, limited circumstances.

Article 22 Non-discrimination

1. Discrimination between citizens of Member States of the European Union on grounds of nationality shall be prohibited.
2. The rights and freedoms in [ECHR-based rights] shall be secured without discrimination on any grounds such as sex, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status.

Article 25 Right to vote and stand as a candidate for the European Parliament

Every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he or she is not a national has the right, subject to specified rules and arrangements, to vote and stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament in the Member State in which he or she resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Article 26 Right to vote and stand as a candidate in municipal elections

Every citizen of the Union residing in a Member State of which he or she is not a national has the right, subject to specified rules and arrangements, to vote and stand as a candidate in municipal elections in the Member State in which he or she resides, under the same conditions as nationals of that State.

Article [27-29] Relations with the administration

1. Every person has the right in his or her dealings with the Institutions of the Union to be treated impartially, fairly and within a reasonable time.
2. In particular,
 - a) every citizen of the Union and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right, in accordance with specified conditions and procedures, to refer to the Ombudsman of the Union, cases of maladministration by Union institutions and bodies, with the exception of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance acting in their judicial role.
 - b) every citizen of the Union and every natural and legal person residing or having its registered office in a Member State has the right to petition the European Parliament in accordance with specified conditions.
 - c) every person may write to the institutions of the Union in one of the official languages of the Union and have an answer in that language.

Article 30 Freedom of Movement

Every citizen of the Union has the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States.

DEFINITION OF RIGHTS

(PART B)

Article 2 Right to Life

The rights in Article 2 are the rights guaranteed by Article 2 of the ECHR and Articles 1 – 4 of Protocol 6 to the ECHR.

Article 4 Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

The right in Article 4 is the right guaranteed by Article 3 of the ECHR.

Article 5 Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

The right in Article 5 is the right guaranteed by Article 4 of the ECHR.

Article 6 Right to liberty and security

The rights in Article 6 are the rights guaranteed by Article 5 of the ECHR.

Article 8 Right to a fair trial

The rights in Article 8 are the rights guaranteed by Article 6 of the ECHR.

Article 10 No punishment without law

The right in Article 10 is the right guaranteed by Article 7 of the ECHR.

Article 11 Right not to be tried or punished twice

The right in Article 11 is the right guaranteed by Article 4 of Protocol 7 to the ECHR. It does not prevent the reopening of the case in accordance with the law if there is evidence of new or newly discovered facts, or if there has been a fundamental defect in the previous proceedings which could affect the outcome of the case.

Article 12 Respect for private life

The right in Article 12 is the right guaranteed by Article 8 of the ECHR

Article 13 Family life

The right in Article 13 is the right guaranteed by Article 12 of the ECHR

Article 14 Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

The right in Article 14 is the right guaranteed by Article 9 of the ECHR

Article 15 Freedom of expression

The right in Article 15 is the right guaranteed by Article 10 of the ECHR.

Article 16 Right to education

The right in Article 16 is the right guaranteed by Article 2 of the First Protocol to the ECHR, read with any reservation made in respect of it.

Article 17 Freedom of assembly and association

The right in Article 17 is the right guaranteed by Article 11 of the ECHR.

Article 18 Right of access to documents

The right in Article 18 is the right guaranteed by Article 255 of the Treaty establishing the European Community and shall be exercised in accordance with the conditions and subject to any limitations made under and in accordance with that Treaty provision.

Article 19 Data protection

The right in Article 19 is the right under Article 286 TEC and Community Directives on data protection and is subject to the conditions and limitations laid down in them.

Article 20 Right to Property

The right in Article 20 is the right in Article 1 of the Additional Protocol to the ECHR.

Article 22 Non-discrimination

Paragraph 1 is the prohibition of discrimination on grounds of nationality in Article 12 of the Treaty establishing the European Community. The prohibition applies within the scope of application of, and without prejudice to special provisions contained in, that Treaty.

Paragraph 2 is the right in Article 14 of the ECHR.

Article 25 Right to vote and stand as a candidate for the European Parliament

The rights in Article 25 are the rights in Article 19(2) of the Treaty establishing the European Community. They shall be exercised in accordance with the detailed arrangements laid down under that Article.

Article 26 Right to vote and stand as a candidate in municipal elections

The rights in Article 26 are the rights in Articles 19(1) of the Treaty establishing the European Community. They shall be exercised in accordance with the detailed arrangements laid down under that Article.

Article [27-29] Relations with the administration

The rights set out in Article [27-29] are the rights guaranteed by Article 21 of the Treaty establishing the European Community read with Articles 195 and 194 TEC and as are contained in general principles of Community law.

Article 30 Freedom of Movement

The right in Article 30 is the right provided for in Article 18(1) of the Treaty establishing the European Community and is subject to the limitations and conditions laid down in that Treaty and by the measures adopted to give it effect.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPÉENNEfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Bruxelles, le 8 juin 2000CHARTE 4352/00*CONTRIB 216*NOTE DE TRANSMISSION

Objet : Projet de Charte des droits fondamentaux de l'Union européenne

Veillez trouver ci-joint des propositions d'amendement concernant les droits civils et politiques et droits des citoyens, soumises par le Comité des Régions. ¹

¹ Ce texte a été soumis en langue française uniquement.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNE

Proposition d'amendement à l'article : sur le principe de démocratie

Auteur : Comité des régions

Texte proposé :

3 - Les collectivités territoriales élues exercent les responsabilités publiques qui leur sont légalement conférées, selon le principe de l'autonomie.

Justificatif :

1. Il résulte de l'article 1er du TUE qui prévoit que dans l'Union "les décisions sont prises dans le plus grand respect du principe d'ouverture et le plus près possible des citoyens" et des traditions constitutionnelles communes aux Etats membres que les assemblées locales élues disposent de l'autonomie dans le cadre de leurs compétences.
2. Il est important qu'un texte émanant de l'Union rappelle cette liberté fondamentale du citoyen de pouvoir élire les assemblées locales qui exercent des responsabilités publiques, dans le cadre de la loi, sous leur propre responsabilité et au profit de leur population.
3. Les collectivités locales sont l'un des principaux fondements de tout régime démocratique.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNEProposition d'amendement à l'article : 22

Auteur : Comité des régions

Texte proposé : ajout

3. L'Union cherche à éliminer les inégalités et à promouvoir l'égalité entre les hommes et les femmes dans tous les domaines de la prise de décision.
(le reste sans changement)

Justificatif :

Dès lors qu'il s'agit de promouvoir l'égalité entre les hommes et les femmes, il semble important de préciser que cette intention doit se manifester dans le domaine le plus élevé, celui de la prise de décision, que celle-ci soit professionnelle ou politique.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNE

Proposition d'amendement à l'article : 22 - Egalité et non discrimination ou d'un nouvel article après l'article 22

Auteur : Comité des régions

Texte proposé :

Si amendement, nouveau paragraphe 3 : Les minorités ont droit au respect de leur religion, de leur langue et de leur culture.

Si nouvel article : Droit des minorités : Les minorités ont droit au respect de leur religion, de leur langue et de leur culture.

Justificatif :

Référence à l'article 27 du Pacte international relatif aux droits civils et politiques.

Les articles 12, 14,15 et 22 s'appliquent à des personnes et non à des groupes.

Le concept de minorité mérite d'être intégré à la Charte des droits fondamentaux.

Cette insertion s'avère indispensable dès lors que l'Union sera élargie à des Etats comportant des minorités importantes.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNEProposition d'amendement à l'article : 27 - Relations avec l'Administration

Auteur : Comité des régions

Texte proposé : nouveau paragraphe 3

3. L'action administrative est soumise au contrôle de légalité.

Justificatif :

Dès lors que le projet de Charte comporte un article sur les relations avec l'administration, il apparaît nécessaire de rappeler que l'action administrative est soumise au contrôle de légalité, ce qui constitue une garantie pour les administrés.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNE
Droit économiques et sociaux

Proposition d'amendement à l'article : Proposition d'un nouvel article après l'article 32

Auteur : Comité des régions

Texte proposé :

Les travailleurs ont droit à une formation professionnelle permanente.

Justificatif :

Les évolutions scientifiques et techniques modifient les qualifications requises par les entreprises. Il importe que les travailleurs puissent s'adapter ou se former aux nouveaux métiers.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNEProposition d'amendement à l'article :

Proposition d'amendement à l'article 46 - Champ d'application

Auteur : Comité des régions

Texte proposé : ajout & 1

... ainsi qu'aux Etats membres et aux collectivités territoriales exclusivement dans le champ d'application du droit de l'Union.

Justificatif :

Les collectivités territoriales peuvent avoir à mettre en oeuvre des réglementations communautaires. Il importe que dans cette hypothèse, leur action ne porte pas atteinte aux droits fondamentaux énoncés par la Charte.

PROJET DE CHARTE DES DROITS FONDAMENTAUX DE L'UNION EUROPEENNEProposition d'amendement à l'article :

Proposition d'un nouvel article après l'article 50 (actuel). Il s'agit de prévoir les modalités de recours en cas d'atteinte aux droits fondamentaux énoncés par la Charte.

Auteur : Comité des régions

Texte proposé :

Toute atteinte aux droits énoncés dans la présente Charte est susceptible de recours devant les juridictions appropriées nationales et européennes et si nécessaire avec une aide juridique et financière adaptée.

Justificatif :

Dès lors que la Charte énonce des droits, elle doit prévoir les modalités de recours en cas de non-respect de ces droits.

DRAFT CHARTER OF FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF THE EUROPEAN UNIONfundamental.rights@consilium.eu.int

Brussels, 14 June 2000 (16.06)
(OR. fr)*CHARTE 4360/00*CONVENT 37*PRAESIDIUM NOTE

Subject: Draft Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union
– Summary of amendments presented by the Praesidium
(Reference document: CHARTE 4284/00 CONVENT 28)

The purpose of this document, drawn up by the Secretariat at the request of the Convention, is to group the amendments to Articles 1 to 30 (CHARTE 4332/00) according to topic. This analysis does not cover drafting and linguistic amendments. These will be subject to specific examination. It will be noted that some of the Praesidium's compromise amendments are based on amendments not included in this analysis. This is because the Praesidium has already taken some linguistic or drafting amendments into account.

Article 1. Dignity of the human person

1. The dignity of the human person must be respected and protected.
2. Everyone is equal before the law.

Proposed amendments

Paragraph 1

- (1) adopt the wording: "the dignity of the human person is inviolable": Amendments 1 (Duff), 6 (Rodota, Paciotti, Manzella), 10 (Melograni), 11 (Voggenhuber)
- (2) move paragraph 1 to the preamble: Amendments 5 (Tarschys), 8 (Griffiths), 9 (Berthu)

Paragraph 2

- (1) adopt the wording: "All human beings are born free and equal in rights": Amendment 3 (Goldsmith) (which adds dignity)
- (2) change the position of paragraph 2: to a separate article, Amendments 16 (Berès), 22 (Manzella); with the principle of non-discrimination: Amendment 21 (Rodota, Paciotti, Manzella); with Article 8 (right to a fair trial) Amendment 14 (Griffiths)

Praesidium proposal: separate this article into two articles:

Make paragraph 2 into a new Article 1a.

On the basis of Amendments 5 (Tarschys), 14 (Griffiths), 15 (Korthals Altes), 16 (Berès).

Article 2. Right to life

1. Everyone has the right to life.
2. No one shall be condemned to the death penalty, or executed.

Proposed amendments

- (1) align with the European Convention: Amendments 26 (Dehaene), 31 (Van Dam), 33 (Tarschys), 36 (Einem/Holoubek), 37 (Goldsmith)
- (2) include the Convention's definitions: Amendment 26 (Dehaene), 36 (Einem/Holoubek), 38 (Berthu)
- (3) state that the right to life extends until its natural end, Amendments 28 (Haenel), 29 (Berthu), 30 (Cisneros), 31 (van Dam)
- (4) set out the exceptions to the prohibition of the death penalty: Amendment 42 (Bereijo)
- (5) prohibit limitations on prohibiting the death penalty: Amendment 43 (Einem/Holoubek)
- (6) insert here the prohibition of expulsions contained in Article 4: Amendment 44 (Korthals Altes)

Article 3. Right to respect for the integrity of the human person

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical and mental integrity.
2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - prohibition of eugenic practices;
 - respect for the informed consent of the patient;
 - prohibition of making the human body and its products a source of financial gain;
 - prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Proposed amendments

- (1) deletion: Amendment 45 (Goldsmith)

paragraph 1

- (1) add the reference to genetic integrity; Amendment 51 (Altmaier)
- (2) delete physical and mental: Amendment 71 (Tarschys)

paragraph 2

- (1) delete the paragraph: Amendments 57 (Griffiths), 58 (Olsen), 72 (Korthals Altes)
- (2) supplement the list: Amendments 50 (Dehousse), 60 (Hirsch Ballin, Patijn) (prohibition of hybrids), 62 (Melograni) (clarifying the concept of informed consent), 66 (Berthu) (idem), 70 (Cisneros) (all life is the result of the fusion of human gametes)

- (3) prohibit all forms of human cloning, not merely reproductive cloning: Amendments 61 (Van Dam), 63 (Kaufmann), 65 (Mombaur), 66 (Berthu), 68 (Friedrich)

Praesidium proposal: clarify the wording of paragraph 2:

New drafting:

1. Everyone has the right to respect for his physical, genetic and mental integrity.
2. In the fields of medicine and biology, the following principles must be respected in particular:
 - prohibition of eugenic practices, in particular those concerned with the selection and instrumentalisation of persons;
 - respect for the free and informed consent of the patient;
 - prohibition of making the human body and its parts a source of financial gain;
 - prohibition of the reproductive cloning of human beings.

Article 4. Prohibition of torture and inhuman treatment

No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.
No one may be expelled or extradited to a State where he would be in danger of being subjected to the death penalty, torture or other inhuman treatment.

Proposed amendments

- (1) delete the article: Amendment 74 (van Dam)
- (2) delete the second sentence: Amendments 73 (Berthu), 78 (Goldsmith), 87 (Bereijo)

- (3) move the second sentence: Amendments 77 (Friedrich), 88 (Gnauck), 90 (Rodota, Paciotti, Manzella)
- (4) redraft the second sentence to clarify the fact that expulsion and extradition are prohibited where there is a risk of inhuman or degrading treatment or of being subject to the death penalty: Amendments 79 (Melograni), 82 (Korthals Altes), 83 (Dehaene), 84 (Griffiths), 85 (Hirsch Ballin, Patijn)
- (5) delete the danger of being subjected to the death penalty as this comes under Article 2: Amendment 81 (Olsen)
- (6) stipulate that any restriction is prohibited: Amendment 91 (Einem/Holoubek)

Praesidium proposal: move the second sentence to Article 21, clarify the wording in line with the amendments in (4):

The Praesidium suggests moving the second paragraph to the article on the right of asylum and replacing "would be in danger of being" by "could be".

Article 5. Prohibition of slavery and forced labour

- 1. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
- 2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour.

Proposed amendments

- (1) delete the article: Amendment 93 (van Dam)
- (2) add the prohibition on trafficking in human beings: Amendment 95 (Gnauck)

- (3) take over Article 4 of the ECHR: Amendment 96 (Tarschys)
- (4) clarify the concept of forced labour: Amendments 98 (Olsen), 100 (Bereijo), 101 (Korthals Altes), 104 (Dehousse)
- (5) state that this right may not be restricted: Amendment 99 (Einem/Holoubek)

Praesidium proposal: clarify the definition of the right as requested in (3)

New drafting of paragraph 2

2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labour. The term "forced or compulsory labour" shall not include services required by law of citizens for civic reasons in case of an emergency or disaster and military service or the work ordinarily required of persons imprisoned.

Based on Amendments 96 (Tarschys), 100 (Bereijo), 101 (Korthals Altes), 102 (Berthu), 104 (Dehousse)

Add a paragraph 3

3. Trafficking in human beings is prohibited.

Based on Amendment 90 (Rodota, Paciotti, Manzella)

Article 6. Right to liberty and security

Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be deprived of his liberty save in cases prescribed by law and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law.

Proposed amendments

- (1) delete the second sentence: Amendments 105 (van Dam), 107 (Altmaier), 108 (Mombaur)
- (2) add a reference to the ECHR: Amendment 109 (Barros Mourra/Azevedo) or take over the text of the ECHR: Amendments 113 (Korthals Altes), 114 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 116 (Tarschys)
- (3) delete the reference to security: Amendments 111 (Friedrich), 112 (Gnauck), 118 (Melograni)
- (4) extend security to cover "of person and family": Amendment 122 (Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella) or add that society must find ways of ensuring security of persons and property: Amendment 123 (Dehousse)

Article 7. Right to an effective remedy

Everyone whose rights and freedoms are violated has the right to an effective remedy before a court.

Proposed amendments

- (1) add a reference to rights under this Charter: Amendment 124 (Goldsmith), 128 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 129 (Tarschys), 130 (Neisser) 131 (Bereijo), 132 (Olsen)
- (2) replace the reference to a court by one to a competent or independent authority or delete any reference to the authority in question: Amendments 124 (Goldsmith), 129 (Tarschys), 132 (Olsen), 134 (Melograni), 135 (O'Kennedy)
- (3) amend the title: Amendment 139 (Korthals Altes)

Article 8. Right to a fair trial

- 1. Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law.
- 2. Legal aid shall be provided to those who lack sufficient resources insofar as such aid is indispensable to ensure effective access to justice

Proposed amendments

- (1) re-examine: Amendment 142 (Tarschys)
- (2) delete: Amendment 143 (Berthu)
- (3) Align with the ECHR with a reference to disputes over civil rights or criminal charges: Amendments 146 (O'Kennedy), 147 (Olsen), 149 (Einem/Holoubek), 152 (Goldsmith)

- (4) refer to the ECHR: Amendment 154 (Korthals Altes)
- (5) delete paragraph 2: Amendment 157 (Friedrich)
- (6) clarify paragraph 2 by stating that aid must be necessary: Amendments 158 (Melograni), 160 (Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella)
- (7) add the right to a lawyer: Amendments 148 (Neisser), 162 (Meyer/Berès/Leinen/Martin/Van den Burg), 163 (Duff) (included under Article 9)

Praesidium proposal: accept the amendments in (6) and (7):

Paragraph 1 to read as follows:

Everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. Everyone shall have the possibility of being advised, defended and represented by a lawyer.

In paragraph 2, replace "is indispensable" by "is necessary".

Based on Amendments 148 (Neisser), 149 (Einem/Holoubek), 158 (Melograni), 162 (Meyer/Berès/Leinen/Martin/Van den Burg)

Article 9. Presumption of innocence and rights of the defence

- 1. Everyone who has been charged shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.
- 2. Everyone who has been charged shall be guaranteed respect for his rights to defence.

Proposed amendments

- (1) delete: Amendment 166 (Goldsmith)
- (2) stipulate that the text concerns criminal offences: Amendments 164 (O’Kennedy) and 167 (Melograni)
- (3) replace this text with that of the ECHR: Amendment 169 (Buitenweg) and 173 (Korthals Altes)
- (4) add a reference to the ECHR: Amendment 170 (van Dam)
- (5) add that the victim of denial of justice has a right to damages: Amendment 174 (Berès)

Article 10. No punishment without law

- 1. No one shall be held guilty of any offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute an offence under national law or international law at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the offence was committed. If, subsequent to the commission of the offence, the law provides for a lighter penalty, that penalty shall be applicable.
- 2. This Article shall not prejudice the trial and punishment of any person for any act or omission which, at the time when it was committed, was criminal according to the general principles of international law.

Proposed amendments

- (1) delete paragraph 2: Amendment 185 (Bereijo)
- (2) replace the reference to general principles of international law with different wording: Amendment 187 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella)

- (3) add a reference to penalty being in proportion to the seriousness of the offence: Amendment 188 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella)

Proposal from the Praesidium: accept (2) and (3):

Title to read as follows:

"Principle of legality and proportionality of offences and penalties"

The end of paragraph 2 to read as follows:

"was criminal according to international law"

add a new paragraph 3:

The severity of penalties shall be proportional to the gravity of the offence.

Based on Amendments 177 (Berès), 179 (Neisser), 185 (Bereijo), 187 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella) and 188 (idem)

Article 11. Right not to be tried or punished twice

No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again in criminal proceedings for an offence for which he has already been finally acquitted or convicted in accordance with the law.

Proposed amendments

- (1) delete: Amendment 189 (Berthu)
(2) copy the ECHR: Amendments 190 (Olsen) and 194 (Tarschys)

- (3) refer to the ECHR: Amendments 192 (van Dam) and 193 (Korthals Altes)
- (4) stipulate that this refers to criminal proceedings (Amendments 198 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 199 (Berès) and 203 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella) in the same State: Amendment 197 (Melograni)
- (5) include a proviso concerning the International Criminal Court: Amendment 206 (Beissel) and also Amendment 205 (Meyers)

Article 12. Respect for private life

Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy, his honour and his reputation, his home and the confidentiality of his correspondence and communications.

Proposed amendments

- (1) copy the ECHR: Amendment 207 (Tarschys)
- (2) refer to limits (ECHR): Amendments 209 (van Dam), 215 (Bereijo), 220 (Korthals Altes), 231 (Gnauck) and 233 (Kaufmann)
- (3) delete "honour and his reputation": Amendments 210 (Griffiths), 211 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 212 Buitenweg, Voggenhuber), 213 (Friedrich) and 217 (Kaufmann)
- (4) add data protection: Amendment 213 (Friedrich)
- (5) delete "correspondence": Amendment 214 (Neisser)
- (6) right to encryption of communications: Amendment 222 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber)

- (7) replace ‘private life’ with ‘privacy’: Amendments 213 (Friedrich) and 216 (Gnauck).

Proposal from the Praesidium: add reference to family life

The title to read as follows

Respect for private and family life

The article to read as follows

Everyone has the right to respect for his privacy, his family life, his honour and his reputation, his home and the confidentiality of his correspondence and communications.

Based on Amendments 207 (Tarschys) and 221 (Goldsmith).

Article 13. Family life

- 1. Everyone has the right to respect for his family life.
- 2. Everyone has the right to marry and to found a family, according to the national laws governing the exercise of this right.
- 3. The family shall enjoy legal, economic and social protection.

Proposed amendments

- (1) delete paragraph 1: Amendment 224 (Altmaier)

- (2) draw a distinction between the right to marry and the right to found a family: Amendment 225 (Barros Moura/Azevedo), refer to forming a partnership: Amendments 227 (Duff), 228 (Meyer/Leinen/Martin), 230 (Friedrich), 238 (Dehousse) and 239 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber)
- (3) copy the wording used in the ECHR (refer to only men and women having the right to marry): Amendments 226 (Berthu), 230 (Friedrich), 235 (Goldsmith), 238 (Dehousse), 243 (Haenel) and 244 (Cisneros)
- (4) mention living with a partner as distinct from family life: Amendments 229 (Berès) and 230 (Friedrich)
- (5) delete paragraph 3: Amendments 245 (Jansson/Brax/Nikula), 249 (Olsen), 250 (Griffiths) and 251 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn)

Proposal from the Praesidium: delete paragraph 1, move paragraph 3 into the section on social rights

The title to read as follows:

Right to marry and to found a family

Delete paragraph 1

The new paragraph 1 to read as follows

The right to marry and the right to found a family shall be guaranteed in accordance with the national laws governing the exercise of this right.

Based on Amendment 243 (Haenel)

Delete present paragraph 2, which will be inserted in social rights

Based on Amendment 251 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn).

Article 14 Freedom of thought, conscience and religion

Anyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion.

Proposed amendments

- (1) Many amendments aim to incorporate all or part of Article 9(1) of the ECHR on the freedom to change religion or beliefs and the freedom to manifest religion or beliefs alone or in community with others. Amendments 252 (Berthu), 254 (Van Dam), 255 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 256 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 257 (Meyer/Leinen/Martin), 258 (Friedrich), 259 (Neisser), 263 (Einem/Holoubek), 264 (Vitorino), 265 (Cisnros), 270 (Tarschys), 271 (Rodota/Paciotti/Manzella), 272 Mombaur).
- (2) Some amendments propose adding the right not to disclose one's religion or beliefs (Amendments 253 (Duff), 256 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 257 (Meyer/Leinen/Martin), 260 (Bereijo)).
- (3) Some amendments aim to affirm the right to conscientious objection (Amendments 256 (Buitenweg/Voggenhuber), 257 (Meyer/Leinen/Martin), 261 (Gnauck), 262 (Kaufmann)).
- (4) Some amendments aim to make clear in the Article itself the restrictions which may be applied to the exercise of this freedom with texts which repeat word for word, refer to, or are based on, the wording of Article 9(2) of the ECHR (Amendments 252 (Berthu), 254 (Van Dam), 260 (Bereijo), 261 (Gnauck), 266 (Goldsmith), and 270 (Tarschys)). One amendment makes observance of the principles of tolerance and democracy a restriction on freedom (Amendment 273 (Dehousse)).

Praesidium proposal

The Article should read as follows:

"Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. This right includes freedom to change his religion or belief and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or in private, to manifest his religion or belief, in worship, teaching, practice and observance."

Based on Amendments 252 (Berthu), 254 (van Dam), 255 (Hirsch Ballin/Patijn), 256 (Voggenhuber/Buitenweg), 257 (Meyer/Leinen/Martin), 258 (Friedrich), 259 (Neisser), 263 (Einem/Holoubek), 264 (Vitorino), 265 (Cisneros), 270 (Tarschys), 271 (Rodotà/Paciotti/Manzella), 272 (Mombaur).

